Introduction by the director of the al-Maehad al-Sadiqin (the Al-Sadiqin Institute).

In the name of Allah, the Most Beneficent, the Most Merciful.

Our research at Al Sadiqin necessitated a translation of the tafsir (commentaries) on the Holy Qur'an that allowed easy searching, comparison between similar ahadith and immediate reference to the original Arabic text for those not fluent in Arabic.

Al Sadiqin contributes to fulfilling this need by providing this publication.

The online form of this book makes for easy "copy and paste" of ahadith for use in research papers. In the printed form, it allows the reader who may not be fluent in Arabic to find references to the original Arabic text.

The Tafsir Al-Qur'an: A Complete English

Translation of Classical Qur'anic Commentaries Volume 1 presents a simple, but complete English translation of the major classical commentaries on the Qur'an, covering the first chapter, Sūrat l-Fātiḥah, and the first verses of Sūrat l-Baqarah. These tafsir works are foundational to Islamic scholarship, each offering a distinct methodology and historical perspective:

- Tafsir al-Tabari (923 CE) – One of the earliest and most comprehensive tafsirs, authored by Imam al-Tabari. It is based on tafsir bi'l-ma'thur (interpretation through transmitted reports) and includes extensive narrations from the Prophet (pbuh), the Sahabah, and early scholars.
- Tafsir al-Baghawi (1122 CE) – Written by Imam al-Baghawi, this tafsir is known for its conciseness and reliance on authentic hadith and narrations. It is widely used in Sunni circles as a balanced and straightforward commentary.
- Tafsir al-Qurtubi (1273 CE) – Authored by Imam al-Qurtubi, this tafsir is famous for its focus on fiqh (Islamic jurisprudence) and legal interpretations, making it essential for scholars studying Qur'anic law.
- Tafsir al-Baidawi (1286 CE) – A concise and refined commentary by Imam al-Baidawi, often studied in traditional madrasahs. It is particularly valuable for its linguistic analysis and summarization of earlier tafsirs like al-Zamakhshari's.
- Tafsir Ibn Kathir (1372 CE) – One of the most widely read tafsirs today, written by Ibn Kathir, emphasizing tafsir bi'l-ma'thur and the use of hadith and narrations from the Sahabah.

- Tafsir al-Jalalayn (1505 CE) – A brief yet highly regarded tafsir written by Jalal al-Din al-Mahalli and completed by Jalal al-Din al-Suyuti. It is a widely studied introductory tafsir, particularly in traditional Islamic education.
- Tafsir al-Suyuti (1505 CE) – Compiled by Imam al-Suyuti, this tafsir is a rich source of tafsir bi'l-ma'thur (narrative-based exegesis), incorporating extensive hadith and historical reports.
- Fath al-Qadir (1834 CE) – Written by Imam al-Shawkani, this tafsir combines tafsir bi'l-ma'thur with rational analysis and legal insights, making it a comprehensive and independent work.

This book serves as an essential resource for students, researchers, and general readers seeking a comprehensive understanding of the Qur'an through classical scholarship. As part of a 34-volume complete translation, this work aims to make these monumental Islamic commentaries accessible to English readers for the first time.

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:1

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Surat al-Fatihah 1:1

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: God, the Most High, whose name is sanctified, taught His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, by teaching him to mention His beautiful names before all his actions, and to describe Him with them before all his duties. He made what He taught him and taught him a way for all of His creation to follow, and a path for them to follow. With it, the beginnings of their speech, the issuance of their messages, their books, and their needs were opened, until the meaning of what appeared from the saying of the speaker: In the name of God, sufficed for what was hidden from his intention, which was omitted.

This is because the letter ba in Bismillah requires a verb that brings it about, and there is no apparent verb with it, so the hearer of the speaker Bismillah is relieved of his knowledge of the speaker's intention, without the speaker expressing his intention in speech. Since every speaker of it, when he begins a matter, has brought his speech with it either with it or before it without separation, which relieves his hearer of the need for an indication that witnesses to the reason for which he began his speech with it. So the hearer's independence from it from expressing what was omitted from it is similar to his independence when he hears a speaker who is asked: What did you eat today? He says: Food, without repeating the questioner's statement with his statement: Food, I ate, because of the indication that has become clear to him that this is its meaning, by the questioner's questioning of him about what he ate. So it is reasonable that when the speaker says: Bismillah Al-Rahman Al-Raheem and then begins reciting a surah, that following it with Bismillah Al-Rahman Al-Raheem with the recitation of the surah, indicates the meaning of his statement: Bismillah Al-Rahman Al-Raheem. It is understood that what he meant by that is: I recite in the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. Likewise, his saying: In the name of God when he stands up to stand or when he sits and all of his other actions, indicates the meaning of what he meant by his saying In the name of God, and that he meant by his saying In the name of God, I stand in the name of God, and I sit in the name of God. And likewise for all of his other actions.

What we said in interpreting that is the meaning of what Ibn Abbas said:

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated to us, he said: Abu Rawq narrated to us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, he said: The first thing that Gabriel revealed to Muhammad was: O Muhammad, say: I seek refuge in the All-Hearing, All-Knowing from Satan the accursed. Then he said: Say: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. He said: Gabriel said to him: Say in the name of God, O Muhammad. He said: Recite in remembrance of God, your Lord, and stand and sit in remembrance of God.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: If the interpretation of the saying In the name of God is what you have described, and the reason for the ba in In the name of God is what you have mentioned, then how is it said In the name of God in the sense of I read in the name of God, or I stand or sit in the name of God? And you know that every reader of the Book of God, his reading is with the help and guidance of God, and that every person standing or sitting or doing an action, his standing, sitting, and action are with God. Why, since that is the case, why did it not say In the name of God? For the saying of the speaker: I stand and sit in the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, or I read in the name of God is clearer in meaning to his listener than his saying In the name of God, since his saying I stand or sit in the name of God gives the listener the impression that his standing and sitting mean something other than God.

It was said to him, and God is the Grantor of success: What is meant by this meaning is not what you imagined in your mind. Rather, the meaning of his saying, In the name of God is: I begin by naming God and mentioning Him before everything, or I recite by naming God, or I stand and sit by naming God and mentioning Him. He does not mean by his saying, In the name of God: I stand with God, or I recite with God. So the saying of the speaker: I recite with God, or I stand or sit with God is more correct in this regard than his saying, In the name of God.

If he said: If the matter is as you described, then how is it said: In the name of God when you know that the name is a name, and that naming is a source from your saying I named?

It is said: The Arabs may use ambiguous sources for different names, such as saying: I honored so-and-so with honor.

The construction of the verbal noun is af'alta if it is preceded by af'al. Like their saying: I humiliated so-and-so, and I spoke to him. The construction of the verbal noun is fa'alta. An example of this is the saying of the poet:

I am more ungrateful after death has been turned away from me and after you have given me a hundred blessings.

He wants to give you. And from it the other saying:

If this stinginess is your nature, I have always had hope in you.

He wants: I hope you prolong my waiting. And from it is the saying of another:

O oppressor, your affliction is a man who greeted you with peace, oppressed

He means: to infect you. There are many examples of this meaning, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for whoever is guided to understand it.

If the matter is as we have described, that the Arabs often use the sources of verbs other than their verbs, and that their use of them as nouns is widespread, then it is clear that what we have said about the interpretation of the one who says In the name of God is correct, that its meaning when beginning an action or statement is: I begin by mentioning God before my action or statement. Likewise, the meaning of the one who says when beginning the recitation of the Qur'an: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, is: I read, beginning with mentioning God, or I begin my recitation with mentioning God. So he made the name the place of the naming, just as he made speech the place of speaking, and giving the place of giving.

And similar to what we said about the interpretation of that, the report was narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas:

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Amara told us:

Abu Rawq narrated on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Abdullah ibn Abbas, who said: The first thing that Gabriel came down to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was to say: O Muhammad, say: I seek refuge in the All-Hearing, All-Knowing from Satan the accursed. Then he said: Say: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. Ibn Abbas said: In the name of God means Gabriel says to him: O Muhammad, recite in remembrance of God, your Lord, and stand and sit in remembrance of God.

This interpretation by Ibn Abbas indicates the correctness of what we said, that what is meant by the speaker's words, opening his recitation:

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful: I recite by mentioning and mentioning God, and I begin the recitation by mentioning God with His beautiful names and sublime attributes. This clarifies the corruption of the statement of the one who claims that the meaning of that is: With God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, the beginning of everything, even though the servants were commanded to begin their affairs by mentioning God's name, not by reporting His greatness and attributes, like what they were commanded to do with mentioning God's name when slaughtering and hunting, and when eating and drinking, and all their actions. Likewise what they were commanded to do with mentioning Him when beginning the recitation of God's revelation, and issuing their letters and books.

There is no disagreement among all the scholars of the nation that if someone said, when slaughtering some of the livestock:

By God, and he did not say: In the name of God, that he is contradicting by leaving it. It was said: In the name of God is what is prescribed for him to say when slaughtering. And it is known from this that he did not mean by his saying In the name of God by God, as said by the one who claims that the name of God in God's saying: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful is God. Because if that were as he claimed, then it would be necessary for the one who says when slaughtering his sacrifice to be by God, saying what is prescribed for him to say over the sacrifice. And in the consensus of all that the one who says that has left what is prescribed for him to say over his sacrifice, since he did not say In the name of God, there is clear evidence of the corruption of what he claimed of the interpretation of the one who says: In the name of God, that he means by God, and that the name of God is God.

This is not the place to elaborate on the name: Is it the named, or something else, or is it an attribute of it? So we will prolong the book on it. Rather, this is a place to elaborate on the name attributed to God: Is it a name, or a source in the sense of naming?

If someone says: What do you say about the verse of Labid bin Rabi'ah?

Until the year, then peace be upon you both, and whoever cries for a full year has apologized

A prominent scholar of Arabic language interpreted it as meaning: Then peace be upon you both, and that the name of peace is peace?

It was said to him: If that were permissible and its interpretation was correct in the way he interpreted it, then it would be permissible to say: I saw the name Zayd, and I ate the name of the food, and I drank the name of the drink. And in the consensus of all the Arabs on the impossibility of that, there is what indicates the corruption of the interpretation of the one who interpreted the saying of Labid: Then the name of peace be upon you both, that he meant: Then peace be upon you both, and his claim that including the name in that and adding it to the peace is only permissible, since the name of the named is the same as the named.

Those who say what we have mentioned ask about what he said, and they are told: Do you consider it permissible in Arabic to say: I ate the name of honey, meaning by that: I ate the honey, just as it is permissible for you to say: the name of peace be upon you, and you mean: peace be upon you?

If they say: Yes! They have departed from the language of the Arabs, and have permitted in their language what all Arabs make mistakes in their language. And if they say: No, they will be asked about the difference between them, and they will not say anything about one of them without obligating the same thing about the other. So if someone says to us: What do you mean by what Labid said?

It was said to him: This has two possible meanings, both of which are different from what was said by the one whose statement we have mentioned.

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

One of them: that peace is one of the names of God, so it is possible that Labid meant by his saying: Then the name of peace be upon you both, then adhere to the name of God and His remembrance after that, and he called for my remembrance and weeping over me, in a way of enticement. So he raised the name, since he delayed the letter that comes with the meaning of enticement. The Arabs may do that, if they delay the enticement and bring forward the thing enticed by, even though they may put it in the accusative case while it is delayed. And from that is the saying of the poet:

Oh, you who pour my bucket, pour it out! I saw people praising you!

So he tempted with donak which is a later word, but its meaning is: here is my bucket. So is the saying of Labid:

To the year, then peace be upon you both

Meaning: May the name of peace be upon you, i.e. adhere to the remembrance of God and supplicate to my remembrance and sorrow, because whoever cries for a year over a dead person has apologized. This is one of its two aspects.

The other aspect of them: Then my naming of God upon you both, as a speaker says to something he sees and likes: The name of God upon you, seeking protection from evil with that, so it is as if he said: Then the name of God upon you both from evil, and it is as if the first aspect is more similar to the meanings of what Labid said.

It is said to whoever interprets this verse of Labid to mean: Then peace be upon you both, do you think what we said from these two interpretations is permissible, or one of them, or something other than what you said about it?

If he said: No! He demonstrated his knowledge of the various aspects of Arabic speech, and spared his opponent the need to debate him.

And if he says: Yes!

It was said to him: What is your proof that what you claimed of the interpretation is correct, rather than what you mentioned is possible in a way that requires us to accept it from you? There is no way to do that.

As for the report that:

Ismail bin Al-Fadl narrated to us, he said: Ibrahim bin Al-Ala bin Al-Dahhak narrated to us, and he was called Zubayriq, he said: Ismail bin Ayyash narrated to us, on the authority of Ismail bin Yahya, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of someone who narrated to him, on the authority of Ibn Masoud and Mis'ar bin Kadam, on the authority of Atiyyah, on the authority of Abu Sa'id, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Jesus, son of Mary, was handed over by his mother to the scribe to teach him, and the teacher said to him: Write Bismillah. Jesus said to him: What is Bismillah? The teacher said to him: I do not know! Jesus said: The Ba' is the Baha' of God, the Seen is His Shining, and the Meem is His Kingdom.

So I fear that it was a mistake by the narrator, and that he meant B S M, in the manner in which the beginner among the children in the book is taught the letters of Abu Jad, so he made a mistake in that and connected it, and said: Bismillah, because there is no meaning to this interpretation if it is recited In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, in the manner in which the reader recites in the Book of God, because its meaning is impossible from what is understood by all the Arabs and the people of their language, if its interpretation is carried on that.

The statement in the interpretation of God's saying: God.

Abu Jaafar said: As for the interpretation of the statement of God Almighty, God, it is in the meaning of what was narrated to us on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas: He is the one whom everything deifies and whom every creation worships.

This is because Abu Kurayb told us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said: Bishr bin Amara told us, he said: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, he said: God is the One with divinity and worship over all of His creation.

If someone were to say to us: Is there an origin for the verb fa`al and ya-yaf`ul from which this noun was formed?

It was said: As for hearing it from the Arabs, no, but as evidence.

If he said: What is the evidence that divinity is worship, that God is the worshipped, and that He has an origin in doing and doing?

It was said: There is no objection among the Arabs to the ruling based on the saying of the speaker describing a man with worship and seeking what is with God Almighty: So-and-so has become a god with health and there is no disagreement. And from that is the saying of Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj:

May God bless the singing girls who glorify and praise Him for His sake.

Meaning: From my worship and seeking of God through my work.

There is no doubt that deification is the active participle of the verb to deify alaha ya'lihu, and that the meaning of to deify when pronounced is: Abdullah. A source came from it indicating that the Arabs pronounced it as fa'ala yafala he does not utter it, without any addition.

This is what Sufyan bin Wakee' told us. He said: My father told us, on the authority of Nafi' bin Omar, on the authority of Amr bin Dinar, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: that he recited And He will leave you and your gods (al-A'raf 7:127). He said: Your worship. And it is said: He used to worship but not be worshipped.

Sufyan told us: Ibn Uyaynah told us, on the authority of Amr ibn Dinar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Amr ibn al-Hasan, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And he leaves you and your gods, he said: Pharaoh was only worshipped and not worshipped.

Abdullah and Mujahid used to read it as well.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Husayn bin Dawud told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: His statement, And leaves you and your gods, he said: And your worship.

There is no doubt that the goddess, as interpreted by Ibn Abbas and Mujahid, is a source of the saying of the speaker: God made so-and-so a god, just as it is said: He worshipped so-and-so with worship, and interpreted the dream with expression. Ibn Abbas and Mujahid have explained this saying: God is a servant, and the goddess is its source.

If he said: If it is permissible to say to someone who worships God: I worship him, according to the interpretation of the statement of Ibn Abbas and Mujahid, then how is it obligatory to say that, if the informant wants to report that God has fulfilled that for His servant?

It was said: As for the narration, there is no narration about it with us, but what is obligatory is based on what was reported from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who:

Ismail bin Al-Fadl narrated to us, Ibrahim bin Al-Ala' narrated to us, he said: Ismail bin Ayyash narrated to us, on the authority of Ismail bin Yahya, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of someone who narrated to him, on the authority of Ibn Masoud and Mis'ar bin Kadam, on the authority of Atiyyah Al-Awfi, on the authority of Abu Sa'id, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Jesus' mother entrusted him to the scribe to teach him, and the teacher said to him: Write God. Jesus said to him: Do you know what God is? God is the God of gods."

To say: God Almighty is the God of the servant, and the servant is his God. And that the saying of the speaker God is from the speech of the Arabs, and its origin is the god.

If he says: How can this be so, given the difference in their wording?

It was said: Just as it is permissible for his saying: But I, He is God, my Lord (al-Kahf 18:38) to be originally: But I, He is God, my Lord, as the poet said:

You throw me a curve, meaning you are guilty, and you blame me, but I will not blame you

He wants: But I do not say anything to you, so he deleted the hamza from ana, so the nun of ana and the nun of lakin met, which is silent, so it was assimilated into the nun of ana, so they became a double nun. Likewise, God, its origin is al-ilah, the hamza, which is the fa of the noun, was dropped, so the lam, which is the root of the noun, and the extra lam that entered with the extra alif met, which is silent, so it was assimilated into the other, which is the root of the noun, so they became in pronunciation one double lam, as we described from the statement of God, But He is

God, my Lord.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.

Abu Jaafar said: As for Al-Rahman, it is a verb from the root rahma, and Al-Raheem is a verb from it. The Arabs often build nouns from the root fa'il on the root fa'laan, as they say from ghadabah to be angry is ghadaban to be angry, from sakran to be drunk is sakran to be drunk, and from 'atah to be thirsty is 'tashan to be thirsty. Likewise, they say Al-Rahman from the root rahma to be kind, because the root fa'il from it is rahim to have mercy, and it was said Raheem to be kind, even if the root ayn of the root fa'il is kasra a broken vowel, because it is praiseworthy. It is the custom of the Arabs to build nouns if they contain praise or blame on the root fa'il, even if the root ayn of the root fa'il is kasra a broken vowel, or fatha a broken vowel, as they say from 'ilmah to know, alim to know, and from qadar to be able and qadeer to be able. This is not based on their verbs, because the construction is from the root fa'il to sakara and fa'il to be drunk is fa'il a fa'il. So if the Rahman and Al-Raheem were outside the construction of their verbs, their form would be Al-Raheem.

If someone says: If the Most Gracious and the Most Merciful are two names derived from mercy, then what is the reason for repeating that, when one of them conveys the meaning of the other?

It was said to him: The matter is not as you thought, but each word of them has a meaning that the other does not convey.

If he says: What is the meaning that each of them has, such that one of them does not convey the meaning of the other?

It was said: As for the Arabic aspect, there is no objection among those who have knowledge of the Arabic languages, that the saying of the speaker: The Most Gracious from the structures of the nouns from the verb yaf'ala is more deviant than his saying the Most Merciful. And there is no disagreement among them with that, that every noun that has a root in the verb yaf'ala and then is more deviant from its root from the verb yaf'ala is that the described by it is preferred over the described by the noun built on its root from the verb yaf'ala, if the naming by it is praiseworthy or blameworthy. This is what is in the saying of the speaker the Most Gracious, of adding meaning to his saying the Most Merciful in the language.

As for the effect and the report, there is a difference among the people of interpretation:

Al-Sari bin Yahya Al-Tamimi told me: Uthman bin Zafar told us: I heard Al-Arzami say: The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. He said: The Most Gracious to all creation, the Most Merciful. He said: To the believers.

Ismail bin Al-Fadl told us: Ibrahim bin Al-Ala told us: Ismail bin Ayyash told us, on the authority of Ismail bin Yahya, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of someone who told him, on the authority of Ibn Masoud and Mis'ar bin Kadam, on the authority of Atiya Al-Awfi, on the authority of Abu Saeed, meaning

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Jesus, son of Mary, said: The Most Gracious is the Most Gracious of the Hereafter and the world, and the Most Merciful is the Most Merciful of the Hereafter."

These two reports have informed us of the difference between calling God, may He be glorified and exalted, by His name, which is Most Gracious, and calling Him by the name, which is Most Merciful, and the difference in the meaning of the two words, even though they differ in the meaning of that difference. One of them indicates that this is in this world, and the other indicates that it is in the hereafter.

If he said: Which of these two interpretations do you think is more correct?

It was said: We have a way out for both of them in terms of validity, so there is no basis for the statement of someone: Which of them is more deserving of validity? That is because the meaning in calling God the Most Gracious, and not the meaning in calling Him the Most Merciful, is that by calling Him the Most Gracious He is described with the generality of mercy for all of His creation, and that by calling Him the Most Merciful He is described with the specificity of mercy for some of His creation, either in all situations, or in some situations. So there is no doubt, since that is the case, that specificity in describing Him as the Most Merciful does not change from its meaning, whether that is in this world or in the Hereafter, or in both of them. If what we have said is correct, and God, the Most High, has singled out His believing servants in this worldly life with His kindness to them in terms of His granting them success in obeying Him, believing in Him and His Messengers, following His commands, and avoiding His disobedience, which He has let down those who associate partners with Him, disbelieve, oppose what He has commanded, and commit His disobedience. And with that, He, the Most High, has made what He has prepared in the Hereafter in His gardens of eternal bliss and clear success for those who believe in Him, believe in His Messengers, and act in obedience to Him, sincerely, without those who associate partners with Him and disbelieve in Him, it is clear that God has singled out the believers from His mercy in this world and the Hereafter, along with what He has bestowed upon them and the disbelievers in this world of favor and kindness to all of them in terms of the expansion of provision, the harnessing of the clouds for rain, the bringing forth of plants from the earth, the health of bodies and minds, and all the other countless blessings that believers and disbelievers share.

Our Lord, may He be glorified, is the Most Merciful to all of His creation in this world and the Hereafter, and the Most Merciful to the believers in particular in this world and the Hereafter. As for that which He bestowed upon all of them in this world of His mercy, He was the Most Merciful to them with it. What we have mentioned is in addition to its counterparts, which none of His creation can count, as He, may He be glorified, said: And if you should count the favors of God, you could not enumerate them. (Ibrahim 14:34, al-Nahl 16:18). As for the Hereafter, that which He bestowed upon all of them in it of His mercy, He was the Most Merciful to them, in His equality between all of them, may He be glorified, in His justice and judgment, so He does not wrong any of them by the weight of an atom, and if there is a good deed, He multiplies it and gives from Himself a great reward, and every soul will be fully compensated for what it has earned. This is the meaning of His being universal in the Hereafter of all of them with His mercy, by which He was the Most Merciful in the Hereafter.

As for what He has given to the believers in this worldly life of His mercy, by which He was merciful to them in it, as the Most High said: And He is to the believers Most Merciful (al-Ahzab 33:43), then what we have described of His kindness to them in their religion, He has given it to them, not to those who have let Him down from among the disbelievers in Him. As for what He has given to them in the Hereafter, by which He was merciful to them, not to the disbelievers, then what we have described earlier of what He has prepared for them, not to others, of bliss and honor that hopes fall short of.

As for the other statement in its interpretation, it is as follows:

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, he said: Abu Rawq narrated to us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, he said: Ar-Rahman, the two verbs are from mercy, and it is from the speech of the Arabs. He said: Ar-Rahman, Ar-Raheem: the gentle and kind to whomever He loves to show mercy, and the distant and severe to whomever He loves to be harsh to. And so are all His names.

This interpretation by Ibn Abbas indicates that the One by whom our Lord is Most Gracious is the One by whom He is Most Merciful, even though His saying Most Gracious has a meaning that His saying Most Merciful does not. Because he made the meaning of Most Gracious to mean the Compassionate towards whomever is kind to him, and the meaning of Most Merciful to mean the Compassionate towards whomever is kind to him.

The statement that we narrated in the interpretation of that from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and which we mentioned from Al-Arzami, is more similar in its interpretation than this statement that we narrated from Ibn Abbas. Even if this statement is in agreement with its meaning, in that the Most Gracious has a meaning that the Most Merciful does not, and that the Most Merciful has an interpretation other than the interpretation of the Most Gracious.

The third interpretation of this is:

Imran bin Bakkar Al-Kila'i told me: Yahya bin Saleh told us: Abu Al-Azhar Nasr bin Amr Al-Lakhmi from the people of Palestine told us: I heard Ata Al-Khurasani say: The Most Gracious was, and when the Most Gracious was abbreviated from his name, the Most Gracious was the Most Merciful.

What Ataa intended, God willing, by saying this is that Ar-Rahman was one of the names of God that no one among His creation is called by. So when the liar Musaylimah called himself by it, which is his abbreviation of it, meaning he cut it out from His names for himself, God Almighty informed us that his name is Ar-Rahman Ar-Raheem in order to distinguish for His servants His name from the name of those who have been called by His names, since no one was called Ar-Rahman Ar-Raheem and these two names would be combined for Him, except for Him, Almighty. Rather, some of His creation are called either Ar-Raheem or Ar-Rahman. As for Ar-Rahman Ar-Raheem, they were never combined for anyone other than Him, and they are not combined for anyone other than Him. So it is as if the meaning of what Ataa said is that God Almighty distinguished, by repeating Ar-Raheem after Ar-Rahman, between His name and the name of others among His creation, whether their meanings differed or were the same.

What Ata' said about that is not corrupt in meaning. Rather, it is permissible that the Most High, may He be praised, singled Himself out by naming them both together, making them clear to His creation, so that His servants may know by mentioning them together that He is the one intended by mentioning them, not anyone else from His creation, with what is in the interpretation of each one of them of meaning that is not in the other of them.

Some fools have claimed that the Arabs did not know Ar-Rahman and that it was not in their language. Therefore, the polytheists said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And Ar-Rahman is not! Shall we prostrate to that which you command us? (al-Furqan 25:60) in denial of this name. As if it was impossible for him that the polytheists would deny what they knew to be true, or: no, and as if he did not recite from the Book of God the words of God: Those to whom We gave the Scripture know him meaning Muhammad as they know their own sons (al-Baqarah 2:146), and yet they were disbelievers in him and deniers of his prophethood! From this it is known that they were denying the truth of what had been proven true to them and their knowledge of it had become firmly established. And some of the ignorant pre-Islamic people recited:

Didn't that girl hit her hybrid? Didn't the Most Gracious, my Lord, punish her right hand?

Salamah bin Jandal Al-Saadi said:

You hastened against us, we hastened against you. And what the Most Gracious wills, He binds and releases.

Some of those whose knowledge of the interpretation of the people of interpretation is weak, and whose narration of the sayings of the predecessors of the people of interpretation is few, have also claimed that the Most Gracious is a metaphor for: the One with mercy, and the Most Merciful is a metaphor for: the Merciful. Then he said: They may estimate the two expressions from one expression but the meaning is one, and that is due to the breadth of speech in their view. He said: They have done the same and said: two regretful ones and a companion, then he cited as evidence the verse of Burj bin Mashair al-Ta'i:

And two regrets, the cup becomes sweeter, I was given to drink while the stars had sunk

He cited similar verses in Al-Nadim and Al-Nadman, and differentiated between the meaning of Ar-Rahman and Ar-Raheem in interpretation, as he said: Ar-Rahman is the possessor of mercy, and Ar-Raheem is the Merciful, even though he left out explaining the interpretation of their meanings, despite their correctness. Then he gave an example of that with the two words having one meaning, so he returned to what he had made with two meanings, and made it an example of what has one meaning with different words.

There is no doubt that the One with Mercy is the One who has been proven to have mercy, and it is true that it is an attribute of His, and that the Merciful is the One described as having mercy, or having shown mercy and that this has ended from Him, or is in Him. There is no indication in it then that mercy is an attribute of His, like the indication that it is an attribute of His, if He is described as the One with Mercy. So where is the meaning of the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful according to its interpretation, from the meaning of the two words that come estimated from one word with different words and the same meanings? But if the statement is not based on a reliable origin, then its defect is clearly evident.

And if someone were to say to us: Why did He place the name of God, which is God, before His name, which is the Most Gracious, and His name, which is the Most Gracious, before His name, which is the Most Merciful?

It was said: Because it is the custom of the Arabs, when they want to report on someone being reported, to present his name, then follow it with his attributes and descriptions. This is what is required in the ruling: that the name be presented before his description and description, so that the listener knows the information, from whom the information is being reported. If that is the case and God, the Most High, has names that He has forbidden His creation to call themselves by, and He has reserved them for Himself and not for them, such as God, "the Most Gracious," the Most Merciful, and the Creator, and names that He has permitted them to call each other by, such as: the Most Merciful, the All-Hearing, the All-Seeing, the Most Generous, and similar names, it is required to present His names that are specific to Him and not to all of His creation, so that the listener knows who is being praised and glorified, then follow that with His names that others have been called by, after the addressee or listener knows who is being praised and what follows from that of meanings. So God, the Most High, began with His name, which is God, because divinity does not belong to anyone other than Him, the Most High, in any way, neither in terms of being called by it, nor in terms of meaning. This is because we have explained that the meaning of God - may He be exalted - is the meaning of the worshipped, and there is no worshipped other than Him, may He be glorified and exalted, and that naming oneself with it has been forbidden by God - may He be glorified and exalted - even if the one who names himself with it intends what the one who names himself with it intends, namely, Saeed when he is miserable, and Hassan when he is ugly.

First, you see that God, the Most High, said in more than one verse in His Book: Is there a god with God? and the one who acknowledges Him was arrogant about that. And the Most High said about Himself specifically regarding God and the Most Merciful: "Say, 'Call upon God or call upon the Most Merciful. Whichever you call upon, He has the best names.'" (Al-Isra': 110). Then He repeated His name, which is the Most Merciful, since He had also forbidden His creation from calling Himself by it, even though there were some among His creation who might deserve to be called by some of its meanings. This is because it is permissible to describe many of those who are less than God among His creation with some of the attributes of mercy. And it is not permissible for anyone other than Him to deserve some of the divinity. Therefore, the Most Merciful came second to His name, which is God. As for His name, which is the Most Merciful, we mentioned that it is permissible to describe others with it. Mercy is one of His attributes, the Most High, so since the matter was as we described, it was in the place of the attributes of the names that are subordinate to them, after the names preceded them. This is the reason for presenting the name of God, which is God, before His name, which is the Most Gracious, and His name, which is the Most Gracious, before His name, which is the Most Merciful.

Al-Hasan al-Basri used to say about Al-Rahman as we said, that it is one of the names of God that He forbade His servants from naming themselves with.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Hammad bin Mas'adah told us, on the authority of Awf, on the authority of Al-Hasan, who said: The Most Gracious is a forbidden name.

Although the consensus of the nation prohibits all people from naming themselves with this name, there is no need to cite as evidence the validity of what we said in this regard the words of Al-Hasan and others.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Praise be to God, Who initiates praise of Himself before any praiser praises Him. I bear witness that there is no god but God alone, without partner, the Lord, the Eternal, the One, the Living, the Self-Sustaining, Who does not die, the Possessor of majesty and honor, and the Great Gifts, the Speaker of the Qur'an, the Creator of mankind, the One who bestowed faith upon him, and the One who sent His Messenger with the explanation, Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. What has not changed for mankind, and what has been new has not changed. He sent him with His clear Book, the difference between doubt and certainty, which the eloquent are unable to oppose, the wise are blamed for contradicting, and the articulate are silenced by its similarity, so that they cannot produce anything like it, even if they were to support each other. He made his examples as lessons for those who ponder them, and his commands as guidance for those who seek insight into them. He explained in it the obligations of the rulings, and differentiated between what is majestic and what is forbidden, and repeated in it sermons and stories for understanding, and gave examples in it, and narrated in it the unseen report, so God the Almighty said: We have neglected nothing in the Book. He addressed the guardians with it so they understood, and He explained to them in it His intention so they knew. So the Qur'an recited it as a whole, the hidden secret of God, and His stored knowledge preserved it, and the successors of His prophets and trustees, and they are His people, His chosen ones, His best and His chosen ones. "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God has people from among us. They said: O Messenger of God, who are they? He said: They are the people of the Qur'an, the people of God and His chosen ones." Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunan, and Abu Bakr al-Bazzar in his Musnad. So who is more deserving than the one who has learned the Book of God to be deterred by its prohibitions, and to remember what has been explained to him in it, and to fear God and be wary of Him, and to be aware of Him and be shy before Him. Indeed, he has carried the burdens of the Messengers, and he has become a witness on the Day of Resurrection against those of the religions who opposed him. God the Almighty said: And thus We have made you a just community that you will be witnesses over mankind. Indeed, the argument against those who knew it but neglected it is more emphatic than it is against those who fell short of it and were ignorant of it. And whoever was given the knowledge of the Qur'an but did not benefit from it, and was warned by its prohibitions but did not refrain, and committed ugly sins and shameful crimes, the Qur'an will be an argument against him and an opponent in his presence. "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'The Qur'an is an argument for you or against you.'" Narrated by Muslim. So it is obligatory upon whoever God has chosen to memorize His Book to recite it as it should be recited, ponder the truths of its expressions, understand its wonders, and discern its strangeness. God the Almighty said: This is a blessed Book which We have revealed to you, [O Muhammad], that they may ponder its verses. And God the Almighty said: Do they not then reflect upon the Qur'an, or are there locks upon their hearts? May God make us among those who take care of it as it should be taken care of, who contemplate it as it should be contemplated, who uphold its justice, who fulfill its conditions, and who do not seek guidance in anything other than it. May He guide us to its clear signs and its decisive and dazzling rulings, and gather for us through it the best of this world and the hereafter, for it is the people of piety and forgiveness. Then He entrusted to His Messenger the clarification of what was ambiguous in it, the interpretation of what was ambiguous in it, and the verification of what was possible in it, so that with the delivery of the message, he would have the appearance of being special to it and the status of being entrusted to it. God the Most High said, And We have sent down to you the message that you may make clear to the people what was sent down to them. Then He entrusted to the scholars after the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, the deduction of what he pointed out to the meanings of and indicated to its principles so that they may reach, through their own independent reasoning, the knowledge of what is intended, and thus be distinguished from others, and compete for the reward of their independent reasoning. God the Most High said, God will raise those who have believed among you and those who were given knowledge, by degrees. So the Book became the origin and the Sunnah became its clarification, and the scholars' deduction of it became clarification and explanation. So praise be to God who made our chests the vessels of His Book, and our ears the sources of the Sunnah of His Prophet, and our concerns devoted to learning them and searching for their meanings and their wonders, seeking thereby the pleasure of the Lord of the Worlds, and progressing through it to the knowledge of the religion and faith.

Since the Book of God is the guarantor of all the sciences of the Shariah, which is independent of the Sunnah and the obligation, and was revealed by the Trustworthy of Names to the Trustworthy of the Earth, I saw that I should occupy myself with it for the rest of my life, and exhaust my wealth in it, by writing a brief commentary on it, which includes points of interpretation and languages, grammar and readings, and a response to the people of deviation and misguidance, and many hadiths that bear witness to what we mention of the rulings and the revelation of the verses, gathering their meanings, and clarifying what is unclear from them, with the sayings of the predecessors and those who followed them from the successors. I taught it as a reminder for myself, and a reserve for my grave day, and a righteous deed after my death. God the Most High said: On that Day man will be informed of what he sent forth and left behind. And God the Most High said: A soul will know what it sent forth and left behind. And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When a person dies, his deeds come to an end except for three: ongoing charity, beneficial knowledge, or a righteous child who prays for him."

My condition in this book is to attribute the statements to their speakers, and the hadiths to their authors. It is said: It is a blessing of knowledge that a statement is attributed to its speaker. The hadith often comes in books of jurisprudence and interpretation in an ambiguous manner, and no one knows who narrated it except those who have read the books of hadith. Thus, the one who has no experience with that remains confused, not knowing the correct from the weak. Knowing that is a great science, so it is not acceptable from him to use it as evidence or to use it as evidence until he attributes it to those who narrated it from the eminent imams and the famous trustworthy scholars of Islam. We will point out some of that in this book, and God is the guide to what is right. I have ignored many stories of that, such as explaining the verses of the rulings, with questions that reveal their meaning and guide the student to their requirements. So I have included in every verse that includes a ruling or two or more, questions in which we explain what it contains of reasons for revelation, strange interpretation and ruling. If it does not include a ruling, I mention what it contains of interpretation and explanation, and so on until the end of the book.

I named it The Compendium of the Rulings of the Qur'an, and the Explanatory of What It Contains of the Sunnah and the Verses of the Criterion, may God make it sincere for His sake, and may He benefit me, my parents, and whoever He wants through it, by His grace, for He is the Hearer of supplications, the Near, the Responsive, Amen.

First: It is recommended for the reciter of the Qur'an to say after completing the Fatiha, after a pause on the letter nun and wa la dhaaleen: Ameen, to distinguish what is Qur'an from what is not Qur'an.

Second: It is established in the mothers from the hadith of Abu Hurairah, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'When the imam says 'Amen', then say 'Amen', for whoever says 'Amen' in conjunction with the angels' will have his previous sins forgiven.'" Our scholars, may God have mercy on them, said: So forgiveness of sins is based on four steps included in this hadith: The first: the imam saying 'Amen', the second: the one behind him saying 'Amen', the third: the angels saying 'Amen', and the fourth: the agreement of the 'Amen'. So it was said about the response, and it was said about the time, and it was said about the description of the sincerity of the supplication, because he, peace be upon him, said:

Call upon God while you are certain of the answer, and know that God does not answer the supplication of a heedless, distracted heart.

Third: Abu Dawud narrated on the authority of Abu Musabih al-Muqra'i who said: We used to sit with Abu Zuhair al-Numayri, who was one of the Companions, and he would narrate the best hadiths. If one of us supplicated, he would say: Conclude it with 'Ameen,' for 'Ameen' is like a stamp on a page. Abu Zuhair said: "Shall I not tell you about that? We went out with the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) one night, and we came upon a man who was insistent in asking, so the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) stopped and listened to him. The Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: 'It is obligatory if he concludes.' A man from the people said to him: 'With what does he conclude?' He said: 'Ameen,' for if he concludes with 'Ameen,' then he has made it obligatory. So the man who had asked the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) left, and the man came to him and said: 'Conclude, so-and-so, and be glad.'" Ibn Abd al-Barr said: Abu Zuhair al-Numayri's name is Yahya ibn Nufayr. He narrated on the authority of the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him):

Do not kill the locusts, for they are the greatest soldiers of God. Wahn ibn Munabbih said: Amen is four letters. God creates an angel from each letter who says: O God, forgive everyone who says Amen. And in the hadith:

Gabriel taught me, Ameen, when I finished the opening

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:1

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

chapter of the Book, and he said, It is like a seal on the Book. In another hadith:

Amen is the seal of the Lord of the Worlds. Al-Harawi said: Abu Bakr said: Its meaning is that it is God's seal on His servants, because He repels plagues and calamities from them. So it was the seal of the Book that protects it and prevents it from being corrupted and what is in it from being revealed. In another hadith:

Amen is a degree in Paradise. Abu Bakr said: It means that it is a letter by which the one who says it gains a degree in Paradise.

Fourth: The meaning of Amen according to most scholars is: O God, answer us. It is used in place of supplication. Some people said that it is one of the names of God. It was narrated on the authority of Ja'far ibn Muhammad, Mujahid, and Hilal ibn Yasaaf. It was narrated by Ibn Abbas on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, but it is not authentic. Ibn al-Arabi said: It was said that the meaning of Amen is: So be it. Al-Jawhari said: Al-Kalbi narrated on the authority of Abu Salih, "On the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: I asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, what is the meaning of Amen? He said: O Lord, do so." Muqatil said: It is a strength for supplication and a bringing down of blessings. Al-Tirmidhi said: Its meaning is: Do not disappoint our hope.

Fifth: There are two pronunciations for Amin: the long vowel is in the form of Fa'il Kayaseen and the short vowel is in the form of Yameen. The poet said about the long vowel:

Oh God, never take away her love from me. May God have mercy on the servant who says Amen.

Another said:

Amen, amen, I will not be satisfied with one until I give her two thousand amen

Another said in the palace:

He distanced himself from me, so when I asked him, Amen, God increased the distance between us.

The emphasis on the meem is wrong, Al-Jawhari said. It has been narrated from Al-Hasan and Jaafar Al-Sadiq to emphasize it, and it is the saying of Al-Hussein bin Al-Fadl, from am if he intends, meaning we are intending towards you, and from it is his saying nor am I safe from the Sacred House. Abu Nasr Abdul Rahim bin Abdul Karim Al-Qushayri narrated it. Al-Jawhari said: It is built on the fatha like ayn and kayfah because of the meeting of two quiescent letters. And you say from it: Aman so-and-so is safe amman.

Sixth: The scholars differed as to whether the imam should say it or whether he should recite it aloud. Al-Shafi'i and Malik, in the narration of the Medinans, held this view. The Kufians and some of the Medinans said: Do not recite it aloud. This is the view of al-Tabari, and Ibn Habib, one of our scholars, said the same. Ibn Bakir said: He has a choice. Ibn al-Qasim narrated from Malik that the imam does not say amen, but rather those behind him say it. This is the view of Ibn al-Qasim and the Egyptians among the companions of Malik. Their proof is the hadith of Abu Musa al-Ash'ari:

The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, addressed us and explained to us our Sunnah and taught us our prayer. He said: When you pray, straighten your rows, then let one of you lead you in prayer. When he says the takbir, say the takbir, and when he says, Not those who have incurred wrath, nor those who have gone astray, say amen, and God will answer you. He mentioned the hadith, narrated by Muslim.

And similar to it is the hadith of Sami on the authority of Abu Hurairah:

Malik narrated it. The first is authentic, based on the hadith of Wa'il ibn Hujr, who said: "When the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited 'nor of those who go astray,' he would say: 'Ameen', raising his voice." Narrated by Abu Dawud and al-Daraqutni, and he added: Abu Bakr said: This is a Sunnah that was unique to the people of Kufa. This is authentic, as is the one after it. Al-Bukhari entitled the chapter on the imam saying 'Ameen' out loud.

Ata' said: "Amen is a supplication. Amen was said by Ibn al-Zubayr and those behind him, until the mosque became abuzz." Al-Tirmidhi said: "More than one of the scholars from the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those who came after them say the same. They see that a man should raise his voice in the amen and not lower it. Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad, and Ishaq say the same. In Al-Muwatta' and the two Sahih, Ibn Shihab said:

The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say Amen. In Sunan Ibn Majah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah:

He said: The people left out Aameen, and when the Messenger of God (may God's prayers and peace be upon him) said: Not of those who incur wrath nor of those who go astray, he would say Aameen until the people in the first row heard it and the mosque would shake with it. As for the hadith of Abu Musa and Sami, their meaning is to identify the place where Aameen is said, which is when the imam says nor of those who go astray, so that their words are together, and they do not precede him by saying Aameen, for what we have mentioned, and God knows best. And because of his saying (peace be upon him):

"If the imam says 'Amen', then say 'Amen'." Ibn Nafi' said in the book of Ibn al-Harith: The follower should not say it unless he hears the imam say 'nor those who go astray'. If he is far away and cannot hear him, then he should not say it. Ibn Abdus said: He should carefully read the entire length of the recitation and say 'Amen'.

Seventh: The companions of Abu Hanifa said: Saying Ameen quietly is better than saying it aloud, because it is a supplication, and God Almighty said: Call upon your Lord humbly and secretly. They said: The evidence for this is what was narrated in the interpretation of God Almighty's saying: Your supplication has been answered. He said: Moses was supplicating and Aaron was saying Ameen, so God called them supplicants.

The answer is that concealing the supplication is better because of the hypocrisy it involves. As for what is related to congregational prayer, witnessing it is an outward manifestation of a clear symbol and a manifestation of a right that the servants are encouraged to manifest. The imam has encouraged the public recitation of the Fatiha, which includes the supplication and the amen at the end of it. So if the supplication is one in which it is recommended to recite it aloud, then the amen to the supplication is subordinate to it and takes its place, and this is clear.

Eighth: The word Amen was not used before us except for Moses and Aaron, peace be upon them. Al-Tirmidhi Al-Hakim mentioned in Nawader Al-Usul: Abdul-Warith bin Abdul-Samad told us, he said: My father told us, he said: Zurbi, the muezzin of the mosque of Hisham bin Hassan told us, he said: Anas bin Malik told us: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God has given my nation three things that He has not given to anyone before them: peace, which is the greeting of the people of Paradise, the ordering in rows like angels, and Amen, except for what was from Moses and Aaron." Abu Abdullah said: Its meaning is that Moses called down a curse on Pharaoh, and Aaron said Amen, so God, the Blessed and Exalted, said when He mentioned Moses' supplication in His revelation, Your supplication has been answered, and He did not mention Aaron's statement. Moses said, Our Lord, so Aaron said Amen, so He called him a supplicant in His revelation, since He made that a supplication from him. It has been said that Amen is specific to this nation, because it was narrated that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "The Jews have never envied you for anything as much as they have envied you for Salam and Amen." Narrated by Ibn Majah from the hadith of Hammad ibn Salamah from Suhayl ibn Abi Salih from his father from Aisha that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said..., the hadith. It was also narrated from the hadith of Ibn Abbas from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: The Jews have never envied you for anything as much as they have envied you for Amen, so say Amen often. Our scholars, may God have mercy on them, said: People of the Book envied us because the beginning of it is praise and thanks to God, then submission and humility to Him, then a supplication for us to be guided to the straight path, then a supplication against them along with our saying Amen.

Fath al-Qadir

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

The original meaning of Al-Fatihah is the first thing that is intended to be started with, then it was applied to the first of everything like speech, and the taa is for the transfer from descriptive to nominative, so this surah was called the Opening of the Book because it was started with, as it is the first thing that a writer writes from the Mushaf, and the first thing that the reciter recites from the Noble Book, even if it is not the first thing that was revealed from the Qur'an. This noble surah became famous by this name during the days of the Prophet. It was said that it was Meccan, and it was said that it was Medinan.

Al-Wahidi narrated in Asbab Al-Nuzul and Al-Tha'labi in his Tafsir on the authority of Ali, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Opening of the Book was revealed in Mecca from a treasure beneath the Throne. Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated in Al-Musannaf, Abu Nu'aym and Al-Bayhaqi, both of them in Dalā'il Al-Nubuwwah, and Al-Tha'labi and Al-Wahidi narrated from the hadith of Umar ibn Shurahbil that when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, complained to Khadijah about what he was experiencing at the beginning of the revelation, she went with him to Waraqa and told him. He said to him: When I am alone, I hear a call behind me: O Muhammad, O Muhammad, O Muhammad. So I run away on the ground. He said: Do not do that. When he comes to you, stay still until you hear what he says, then come back to me and tell me. When he was alone, he called him: O Muhammad, say: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, until he reached: And do not go astray. The hadith. Abu Nu'aym narrated in Al-Dala'il on the authority of a man from Banu Salamah who said: When the young men of Banu Salamah and the sons of Amr ibn Al-Jamuh embraced Islam, the wife of Amr said to him: Would you like to hear from your father what was narrated from him? So he asked him and he recited to him: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds. This was before the migration. Abu Bakr bin Al-Anbari narrated in Al-Musahib on the authority of Ubadah who said: The Opening of the Book was revealed in Mecca. This is the sum of what was used as evidence by those who said that it was revealed in Mecca.

Those who said that it was revealed in Medina cited what was included by Ibn Abi Shaybah in Al-Musannaf, Abu Saeed bin Al-A'rabi in his Mu'jam, and Al-Tabarani in Al-Awsat on the authority of Mujahid bin Abi Hurairah: Satan cried out when the Opening of the Book was revealed, and it was revealed in Medina.

Ibn Abi Shaybah in Al-Musannaf, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Abu Naim in Al-Hilya and others narrated through various chains of transmission on the authority of Mujahid who said: The Opening of the Book was revealed in Medina. It was said that it was revealed twice, once in Mecca and once in Medina, combining these narrations.

It is called: Umm al-Kitab. Al-Bukhari said at the beginning of the interpretation: It is called Umm al-Kitab because it is written in the copies of the Qur'an and is recited in prayer. Ibn al-Durais narrated in Fadha'il al-Quran on the authority of Ayoub on the authority of Muhammad ibn Sirin that he hated to say Umm al-Kitab and said: God the Almighty said: And with Him is the Mother of the Book, but he would say Fatihah al-Kitab. It is called al-Fatihah because it is used to begin the recitation, and the companions used to begin writing the Imam's Qur'an with it. Ibn Kathir said in his interpretation: It is correct to call it al-Sab' al-Mathani. They said: Because it is repeated in prayer and is recited in every rak'ah. Ahmad narrated from the hadith of Abu Hurayrah from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said about Umm al-Quran: It is the Mother of the Qur'an, it is the Seven Mathani, and it is the Great Qur'an. Ibn Jarir narrated in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Hurayrah from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: It is the Mother of the Qur'an, it is the Opening of the Book, and it is the Seven Mathani. Ibn Mardawayh narrated something similar in his interpretation and al-Darqutni narrated from his hadith, and he said: All of them are trustworthy. Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Ali, Ibn Abbas, and Abu Hurairah that they interpreted the Almighty's saying: seven oft-repeated verses as meaning Al-Fatihah.

Among its names, as narrated in Al-Kashaf, are Surat Al-Kanz, Al-Wafiyah, Surat Al-Hamd, and Surat Al-Salat. Al-Tha'labi narrated that Sufyan ibn 'Uyaynah used to call the Opening of the Book Al-Waqiyah. Al-Tha'labi also narrated on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn Yahya ibn Abi Katheer that someone asked him about reciting Al-Fatihah behind the Imam, so he said: Are you asking about Al-Kafiyah? The questioner said: What is Al-Kafiyah?! He said: Al-Fatihah. Don't you know that it is sufficient for anything else, but nothing else is sufficient for it? He also narrated on the authority of Al-Sha'bi that a man complained to him of pain in his side, so he said: Recite the foundations of the Qur'an. He said: What is the foundation of the Qur'an? He said: The Opening of the Book. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Al-Shu'ab on the authority of Anas on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Indeed, God has given me, among the blessings He has bestowed upon me, the Opening of the Book, and said: It is from the treasures of My Throne." Ishaq ibn Rahawayh narrated in his Musnad on the authority of 'Ali something similar with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Daraqutni mentioned twelve names for Al-Fatihah, which are seven verses, without dispute, as narrated by Ibn Katheer in his Tafseer. Al-Qurtubi said: The Ummah agreed that the Opening of the Book consists of seven verses, except for what was narrated from Husayn al-Ja'fi that it consists of six, which is anomalous. Otherwise, what was narrated from Amr ibn Ubayd that he made You alone we worship a verse, so according to him it is eight, which is anomalous. They only differed regarding the Basmalah, as will come, God willing. Abd ibn Humayd, Muhammad ibn Nasr in the Book of Prayer, and Ibn al-Anbari in Al-Masahif narrated on the authority of Muhammad ibn Sirin that Ubayy ibn Ka'b and Uthman ibn Affan used to write the Opening of the Book and the two Mu'awwidhat, but Ibn Mas'ud did not write any of them. Abd ibn Humayd narrated on the authority of Ibrahim, who said: Abdullah ibn Mas'ud did not write the Opening of the Book in the Mushaf, and he said: If I had written it, I would have written it at the beginning of everything.

There are hadiths about the merits of this surah, including what was narrated by Al-Bukhari, Ahmad, Abu Dawud and Al-Nasa'i from the hadith of Abu Sa'id bin Al-Mu'alla, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to him: 'I will teach you the greatest surah in the Qur'an before you leave the mosque.' He said: 'So he took my hand, and when he wanted to leave the mosque, I said: 'O Messenger of God, did you say that I would teach you the greatest surah in the Qur'an?' He said: 'Ya-Sin 36: "Al-Hamdu Lillah Rabb Al-'Alamin" is the seven oft-repeated verses and the great Qur'an that I have been given.' Ahmad and Al-Tirmidhi narrated, and authenticated it, from the hadith of Ubayy bin Ka'b that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to him: 'Would you like me to teach you a surah the like of which has not been revealed in the Torah, the Gospel, the Psalms or the Criterion?' Then he told him that it was Al-Fatihah.' Al-Nasa'i narrated it, and Ahmad narrated in Al-Musnad from the hadith of Abdullah bin Jabir, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to him: 'Shall I not tell you about the best surah in the Qur'an?' I said: 'Yes, O Messenger of God.' He said: 'Recite Al-Hamdu Lillah Rabb Al-'Alamin until you complete it.'" In its chain of transmission is Ibn Aqil, who was cited as evidence by the great imams, and the rest of its men are trustworthy. This Abdullah ibn Jabir is Al-Abdi as Ibn Al-Jawzi said, and it was said: Al-Ansari Al-Bayadhi as Ibn Asakir said. In the two Sahihis and others, on the authority of Abu Saeed, "The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said when they told him that a man had recited Surat Al-Fatihah over Sulaym: 'And he did not know that it was a ruqyah.'" The hadith. Muslim included in his Sahih, and al-Nasa'i included in his Sunan, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "While the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was with Gabriel, he heard a creaking sound above him. Gabriel raised his eyes to the sky and said: 'This is a door that has been opened in the sky that has never been opened before.' Then an angel came down from it and came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: 'Receive good tidings of two lights that have been given to you that no prophet before you was given: the Opening of the Book and the last verses of Surat al-Baqarah. You will not recite a letter from them without being given it.'" Muslim, al-Nasa'i, and al-Tirmidhi included in their Sahih form, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: Whoever prays a prayer in which he does not recite the Mother of the Qur'an, it is deficient three times and incomplete. Al-Bazzar narrated in his Musnad with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Anas who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When you lie on your side on the bed and recite the Opening of the Book, 'Say, He is God, the One,' then you are safe from everything except death. Al-Tabarani narrated in Al-Awsat with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Abu Zaid, who was a companion, who said: "I was with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in one of the streets of Madinah, and he heard a man praying at night and reciting the Opening of the Book. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood up and listened until he finished it, then he said: There is nothing like it in the Qur'an." Sa'id ibn Mansur narrated in his Sunan and Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The Opening of the Book is a cure for every illness. Abu Al-Shaykh narrated something similar from his hadith, and the hadith of Abu Hurayrah with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Darimi and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shu'ab Al-Iman with a chain of transmission whose men are trustworthy on the authority of Abd Al-Malik ibn Umair who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said regarding the Opening of the Book: It is a cure for every illness. Ahmad, Abu Dawud, An-Nasa'i, Ibn As-Sunni in 'Amal Al-Yawm Wa Al-Laylah, Ibn Jarir and Al-Hakim narrated, and authenticated it, on the authority of Kharijah ibn As-Salt At-Tamimi, on the authority of his uncle, "He came to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and then returned from him. He passed by some people and with them was a madman bound in iron. His family said: 'Do you have anything to treat this man? Your companion has come with something good.' He said: 'So I recited the Opening of the Book to him for three days, twice each day, in the morning and evening. I would collect my saliva and then spit, and he was cured. He gave me one hundred sheep. I came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and mentioned that to him. He said: 'Eat, for whoever eats a false incantation has eaten a true incantation.'" Al-Faryani narrated in his Tafsir on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Opening of the Book is a third of the Qur'an. Al-Tabarani narrated in Al-Awsat with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever recites the Mother of the Qur'an, 'Say, He is God, the One,' it is as if he recited a third of the Qur'an. Abd bin Hamid narrated in his Musnad with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Abbas who traced it back to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: The Opening of the Book is equal to two-thirds of the Qur'an. Al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it, Abu Dharr Al-Harawi in his Fadhail, and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Shu'ab on the authority of Anas who said: "The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was on a journey, and he stopped and a man from his companions walked beside him. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, turned to him and said: Shall I not tell you of the best of the Qur'an? So he recited to him, 'Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.'" Abu Nu'aym and Al-Daylami narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Darda' who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "The Opening of the Book is sufficient for what nothing else of the Qur'an is sufficient for. If the Opening of the Book were placed on one side of the scale and the Qur'an were placed on the other side, the Opening of the Book would be superior to the Qur'an seven times." Abu Ubaid narrated in his Fadhail on the authority of Al-Hasan, without a chain of transmission, that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever recites the Opening of the Book, it is as if he has recited the Torah, the Gospel, the Psalms, and the Criterion.

1- In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Scholars differed as to whether it is an independent verse at the beginning of each surah, written at the beginning of it, or is it part of a verse from the beginning of each surah, or is it like that in Al-Fatihah only and not in the others, or is it not a verse in all of them but was written for separation? The opinions and their evidence are explained in detail in the discussion on that. They agreed that it is part of a verse in Surat An-Naml. The reciters of Makkah and Kufa were certain that it is a verse from Al-Fatihah and from every surah. The reciters of Madinah, Basrah and Ash-Sham disagreed with them and did not consider it a verse from Al-Fatihah or from any other surah. They said: It was written for separation and to seek blessing. Abu Dawud narrated with a saheeh chain of narration on the authority of Ibn Abbas that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) did not know the separation of a surah until the words In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful were revealed to him. Al-Hakim narrated it in Al-Mustadrak. Ibn Khuzaymah included in his Sahih on the authority of Umm Salamah that "the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited the Basmalah at the beginning of Al-Fatihah in prayer and other verses." In its chain of transmission is Amr ibn Harun Al-Balkhi, who is weak. Al-Darqutni narrated something similar, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah.

Just as there was disagreement about proving it, there was disagreement about saying it aloud in prayer. An-Nasa'i in his Sunan, Ibn Khuzaymah and Ibn Hibban in their Sahih, and Al-Hakim in Al-Mustadrak narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, "He prayed and recited the Basmalah aloud in his recitation, and after he finished he said: 'My prayer is the most similar among you to that of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace.'" Ad-Daraqutni, Al-Khatib, Al-Bayhaqi, and others authenticated it. Abu Dawud and At-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to begin the prayer with 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.'" At-Tirmidhi said: Its chain of transmission is not that sound. Al-Hakim narrated it in Al-Mustadrak on the authority of Ibn Abbas with the wording: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to recite 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.'" Then he said: Its chain of transmission is sound. Al-Bukhari narrated in his Sahih on the authority of Anas that he was asked about the recitation of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said: His recitation was prolonged, then he recited 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful,' lengthening the 'In the name of God,' lengthening the 'Rahman,' and lengthening the 'Raheem.'" Ahmad included in Al-Musnad, Abu Dawud included in Al-Sunan, Ibn Khuzaymah included in his Sahih, and Al-Hakim included in his Mustadrak on the authority of Umm Salamah that she said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would interrupt his recitation of 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful,' 'Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, Master of the Day of Judgment.'" Al-Darqutni said: Its chain of transmission is authentic.

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Those who said that the Basmalah should not be recited aloud in prayer cited what is in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Aisha who said: "The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) used to begin the prayer with the Takbir and the recitation 'Al-Hamdulillah Rabb al-'Alamin' Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds." In the two Sahihis on the authority of Anas who said: "I prayed behind the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him), Abu Bakr, 'Umar and 'Uthman, and they used to begin with 'Al-Hamdulillah Rabb al-'Alamin' Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds." Muslim also said: They do not mention 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' at the beginning of the recitation or at the end. The scholars of Sunan narrated something similar on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn Mughaffal. This is what the four caliphs and a group of the companions agreed upon. Although the hadiths of omitting it are more authentic, affirmation is more likely since it is derived from a sahih chain of transmission, so taking it is more appropriate, especially since the interpretation of omitting it is possible. This requires affirmation of the intrinsic proof, meaning that it is part of the Qur'an, and the descriptive proof, meaning reciting it aloud when reciting the surahs that begin with it in prayer. To refine the research and talk about its aspects, in terms of evidence, response, tracking, and defense, and narration and knowledge, there is a place other than this. The object of the preposition ba is omitted, which is I read or I recite because it is appropriate for what the Basmalah was made its beginning. Whoever estimated it to be earlier intended to indicate by presenting it the concern for the verb, and whoever estimated it to be later intended to indicate by delaying it the specialization with what occurs within that of concern for the name and indicating that beginning with it is more important because the blessing was obtained through it. Thus, the preponderance of estimating the verb to be later in such a situation appears, and it is not contradicted by the Almighty's saying: Read in the name of your Lord who created because that situation is the situation of reading, so the matter with it was more important. As for the disagreement between the imams of grammar about whether the estimated is a noun or a verb, it is not related to much benefit. The preposition ba is for assistance or for companionship, and Al-Zamakhshari preferred the latter. The name is originally Samu', and its lam was deleted. Since it is one of the names whose beginnings are based on sukoon, they added a hamza to its beginning when they pronounced it so that it would not begin with a sukoon, which is the word that indicates the name. Whoever claims that the name is the name, as Abu Ubaidah, Sibawayh, Al-Baqillani, and Ibn Furak said, and Al-Razi narrated it from the Hashawiyah, Al-Karamiyyah, and Al-Ash'ariyyah, has made a clear mistake and said something that is not reasonable, with nothing coming from the Qur'an, the Sunnah, or the Arabic language that would require contradiction. Rather, it is necessary knowledge that the name, which is made up of separate sounds and composed letters, is not the name that is its meaning. The discussion is extensive in the science of theology. It has been proven in the two Sahihis from the hadith of Abu Hurairah: "God has ninety-nine names. Whoever counts them will enter Paradise." God the Almighty said: To God belong the best names, so invoke Him by them. God the Almighty said: "Say: Call upon God or call upon the Most Merciful. Whichever you invoke, to Him belong the best names." God is a name for the Necessary Being and has not been applied to anything else. Its origin is Ilah God, the hamza was deleted and replaced by the definite article, so it became obligatory. Before the deletion, the generic names of God were used for every true or false god, then it became predominant for the true god, like the star and the thunderbolt. Before the deletion, it was one of the predominant names, and after it, it was one of the specialized names. The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful: two names derived from mercy by way of exaggeration, and the Most Gracious is more exaggerated than the Most Merciful. In the words of Ibn Jarir, there is what is understood as a narration of agreement on this, and for this reason they said the Most Gracious of this world and the Hereafter and the Most Merciful of this world. It has been established that the increase in construction indicates an increase in meaning. Ibn al-Anbari and al-Zajaj said: The Most Gracious is Hebrew and the Most Merciful is Arabic, and others disagreed with them. The Most Gracious is one of the predominant attributes and has not been used for anyone other than God, the Almighty. As for the statement of Banu Hanifa about Musaylimah, the Most Gracious of Yamamah, it was said in al-Kashshaf: It is a chapter on their stubbornness in their disbelief. Abu Ali Al-Farsi said: Ar-Rahman is a general name for all types of mercy that is specific to God Almighty, while Ar-Raheem is only for the believers. God Almighty said: And He is to the believers Most Merciful. There are hadiths that have been narrated about its virtue, including what was narrated by Saeed bin Mansour in his Sunan and Ibn Khuzaymah.

In the Book of Basmalah and Al-Bayhaqi on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The devil stole from the people the greatest verse of the Qur'an: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. Al-Daraqutni narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Umar that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When Gabriel came to me with revelation, the first thing he would say to me was: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful." Ibn Abi Hatim narrated in his Tafsir and Al-Hakim in Al-Mustadrak, and Al-Bayhaqi authenticated it in Shu'ab Al-Iman on the authority of Ibn Abbas, "Uthman bin Affan asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, so he said: It is one of the names of God, and there is nothing between it and the greatest name of God except what is between the blackness of the eye and its whiteness in terms of closeness." Ibn Jarir, Ibn Adi in Al-Kamil, Ibn Mardawayh, Abu Nu'aym in Al-Hilya, Ibn Asakir in Tarikh Dimashq, and Al-Tha'labi narrated with a very weak chain of transmission on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Jesus, son of Mary, was given by his mother to be taught the Book, so the teacher said to him: Write, 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful.'" Jesus said to him: What is 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful?' The teacher said: I do not know. Jesus said to him: 'The Ba' is the Baha' of God, the Seen is His Shining, the Meem is His Kingdom, God is the God of gods, the Most Gracious is the Most Gracious of this world and the Hereafter, and the Most Merciful is the Most Merciful of the Hereafter.'" In its chain of transmission is Ismail bin Yahya, who is a liar. Ibn Al-Jawzi included this hadith in Al-Mawdoo'at. Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Tha'labi narrated on the authority of Jabir who said: When the verse In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful was revealed, the clouds fled to the east, the winds calmed down, the seas raged, the animals lowered their ears, the devils were stoned from the sky, and God swore by His glory and majesty that nothing will be named except that He will bless it. Abu Nu'aym and Al-Daylami narrated on the authority of Aisha who said: When the verse In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful was revealed, the mountains roared until the people of Makkah heard its roar, and they said: Muhammad has bewitched the mountains. So God sent smoke that cast a shadow over the people of Makkah, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever recites 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' with certainty, the mountains will glorify God with him, except that he cannot hear that from them. Al-Daylami narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Whoever recites 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful', God will write for him for each letter four thousand good deeds, erase four thousand bad deeds from him, and raise him four thousand degrees." Al-Khatib narrated in Al-Jami' on the authority of Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn Ali, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, is the key to every book. These hadiths should be researched and discussed in a manner that will become clear after research, God willing. The invocation of God's name has been prescribed in many places that the Lawgiver has made clear, including when performing ablution, when slaughtering, when eating, during sexual intercourse, and others.

It has three well-known names: Al-Fatihah, Umm Al-Qur'an, and Al-Sab' Al-Mathani.

It is called the Opening of the Book because God began the Qur'an with it. It is called the Mother of the Qur'an and the Mother of the Book because it is the origin of the Qur'an, from it the Qur'an begins. The mother of something is its origin. Mecca is called the mother of villages because it is the origin of the lands, the earth was spread out from beneath it. It is also said that it is an introduction and an imam for what follows it from the surahs, beginning with writing it in the Mushaf and reciting it in prayer. The Seven Mathani are seven verses according to the consensus of scholars. It is called Mathani because it is repeated in prayer, so it is recited in every rak'ah. Mujahid said that it is called Mathani because God the Almighty excepted it for this nation and saved it for them.

It is Meccan according to the majority opinion. Mujahid said: It is Medinan. It was also said: It was revealed twice, once in Mecca and once in Medina, and that is why it is called Mathani. The first is more correct, that it is Meccan, because God Almighty bestowed a blessing upon the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, by saying: And We have given you, [O Muhammad], seven of the oft-repeated verses 87 - Al-Hijr, meaning the opening of the Book, and Surat Al-Hijr is Meccan, so God did not bestow it upon him before its revelation.

Surah Al-Fatihah

1. In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. His saying: In the name of God, the letter ba is a tool that lowers what comes after it, such as: from and about, and the letter ba is deleted because the speech indicates it, its meaning is: I begin with the name of God, or say: in the name of God. And the alif was dropped from the name in order to make it light and frequently used, and the ba was lengthened. Al-Qatibi said so that the opening of the speech of the Book of God would be with a letter of great importance. Omar bin Abdul Aziz, may God have mercy on him, used to say to his scribes: Lengthen the ba and make the seen apparent and separate between them, and rotate the meem. To glorify the Book of God Almighty. And it was said: When they dropped the alif, they returned the length of the alif to the ba to be indicative of the dropping of the alif. Do you not see that when the alif was written in Read in the name of your Lord 1- Al-Alaq, the ba was returned to its form and the alif is not dropped if the name is added to someone other than God or with someone other than the ba.

The name is the thing named, its essence and its self. God Almighty said: Indeed, We give you good tidings of a boy whose name will be John 7- Maryam. He informed that his name was John, then He called the name and said: O John and said: You do not worship besides Him except names you have named 40- Yusuf. He meant the worshipped persons because they used to worship the things named. He said: Glorify the name of your Lord 1- Al-A'la, and Blessed be the name of your Lord 78- Ar-Rahman. Then the naming is also called a name, so its use in naming is more than the thing named. (If it is said: What is the meaning of naming from God to Himself? It is said that it is a teaching to the servants how to begin the recitation.)

They differed about its derivation. Al-Mubarrad said in the Basrans: It is derived from the word samw which means highness, so it is as if it rose above its meaning and appeared over it, and its meaning became beneath it. Tha'lab said in the Kufians: It is from wasm and sima which are alamah and it is as if it is alamah for its meaning. The first is more correct because it is a diminutive of sama and if it were from sima it would be a diminutive of al-wasem just as is said in wa'd and wa'id. It is said in its inflection smayt and if it were from wasm it would be said wasmt. The Almighty's statement: (God) Al-Khalil and a group said: It is a proper noun specific to God the Almighty and has no derivation like the proper nouns of the servants such as Zayd and Amr. A group said that it is derived, then they differed in its derivation. It was said: from ilaha ilaha meaning worship. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, read: And He leaves you and your gods 127- Al-A'raf, meaning your worship - meaning that He is deserving of worship and no one else. It was said that its origin is ilah. God Almighty said: "And there was no god with Him. Then each god would have taken what he created" 91- Al-Mu'minun. Al-Mubarrad said: It is from the saying of the Arabs I was distracted by someone meaning I was at peace with him. The poet said:

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

She was distracted by the many incidents.

It is as if people are comforted by him and reassured by his remembrance. It is said: I was distracted by him, meaning I was frightened by him. The poet said:

She was distracted by it and the camels stopped

It was said that the origin of the word God is Walaha, so the waw was replaced with a hamza, like wishah and washah. Its derivation is from wala because the servants turn to him, that is, they flee to him in times of hardship, and they resort to him in times of need, just as every child turns to his mother. It was also said that it is from wala, which is the loss of the mind due to the loss of someone dear to you.

His saying: The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: They are two delicate names, one of which is more delicate than the other.

They differed about them, some of them said: They have the same meaning like Nadman and Nadeem, and their meaning is the Merciful, and one was mentioned after the other to encourage the hearts of those who desire. Al-Mubarrad said: It is a blessing after a blessing, and a favor after a favor. Some of them differentiated between them and said: The Most Gracious means the general and the Most Merciful means the specific. So the Most Gracious means the Provider in this world, and He is general for all creation. And the Most Merciful means the Pardon in the Hereafter, and the Pardon in the Hereafter is specifically for the believers. Therefore, it was said in supplication: O Most Gracious of this world and Most Merciful of the Hereafter. So the Most Gracious is the One whose mercy reaches all creation in general, and the Most Merciful is the One whose mercy reaches them in particular. Therefore, other than God is called the Most Merciful, and other than God is called the Most Gracious. So the Most Gracious is general in meaning but specific in wording, and the Most Merciful is general in wording but specific in meaning, and mercy is God's will for good for its people. It was said that He leaves the punishment of those who deserve it and bestows good on those who do not deserve it, so according to the first, it is an attribute of the Self, and according to the second, it is an attribute of action.

They differed regarding the verse of the Bismillah. The reciters of Medina and Basra and the jurists of Kufa held that it is not part of the Opening of the Book, nor of any other Surah, and that it is used to begin with as a sign of good omen and blessing. The reciters of Mecca and Kufa and most of the jurists of Hijaz held that it is part of the Opening and not part of any other Surah, and that it was written for separation. A group held that it is part of the Opening and of every Surah except Surah At-Tawbah, which is the opinion of Ath-Thawri, Ibn Al-Mubarak and Al-Shafi'i, because it is written in the Mushaf in the script of the rest of the Qur'an.

They agreed that Al-Fatihah consists of seven verses. The first verse, according to those who consider it to be from Al-Fatihah, is In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, and the beginning of the last verse is The path of those who follow it. Those who do not consider it to be from Al-Fatihah say that its beginning is Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, and the beginning of the last verse is Not those who incur wrath. Those who consider it to be from Al-Fatihah and from the surahs argued that it was written in the Mushaf in the script of the Qur'an, and what Abdul Wahhab bin Muhammad Al-Kisa'i told us, I told Abu Muhammad Abdul Aziz bin Ahmad Al-Khalal, I told Abu Al-Abbas Muhammad bin Ya'qub Al-Asamm, I told Al-Rabi' bin Sulayman, I told Al-Shafi'i, I told Abdul Majeed, on the authority of Ibn Jurayh, he said: My father told me, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair he said: And We have given you seven of the oft-repeated verses and the great Qur'an 87- Al-Hijr. It is the Mother of the Qur'an. My father said: Saeed bin Jubair recited it to me until he finished it, then he said: (In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful) the seventh verse. Ibn Abbas said: So He saved it for you, and He did not bring it out for anyone before you.

Whoever did not include it as part of the Fatiha cited as evidence what Abu al-Hasan Muhammad ibn Muhammad al-Shirazi narrated to us, Zahir ibn Ahmad narrated to us, Abu Isa Ishaq al-Hashemi narrated to us, Abu Mus'ab narrated to us, on the authority of Malik, on the authority of Hamid al-Tawil, on the authority of Anas ibn Malik, may God be pleased with him, that he said: "I stood behind Abu Bakr al-Siddiq, Umar ibn al-Khattab, and Uthman ibn Affan, may God be pleased with them, and none of them would recite 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' when he began the prayer." Sa'id ibn Jubayr said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would not know the completion of a surah until 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' was revealed.

On the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, he said: We did not know the separation between the two surahs until In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. Al-Sha'bi said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to write in the beginning according to the Quraish script, In your name, O God, until the verse was revealed: And he said, 'Embark therein, in the name of God is its course.' 41 - Hud, so he wrote In the name of God, until the verse was revealed: Say, 'Call upon God, or call upon the Most Gracious.' 110 - Al-Isra, so he wrote In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, until the verse was revealed: Indeed, it is from Solomon, and indeed, it is in the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. 30 - An-Naml, so he wrote something similar.

It is called the Mother of the Qur'an because it is its opening and beginning, as if it is its origin and source, and that is why it is called the foundation. Or because it includes what is in it of praise for God the Almighty, worship of His commands and prohibitions and clarification of His promise and threat. Or on the whole of its meanings of theoretical rulings and practical rulings which are following the straight path and learning about the ranks of the happy and the stations of the wretched. And Surat Al-Kanz and Al-Wafiya and Al-Kafiya for that. And Surat Al-Hamd and Al-Shukr and supplication. And teaching the issue because it includes it and prayer because it is obligatory to recite it or recommended to do so. And Al-Shafiyyah is the cure because of his saying, peace and blessings be upon him: It is a cure for every disease. The seven oft-repeated is seven verses by consensus, except that some of them counted the basmalah without You have bestowed Your favor upon them, and some of them reversed it, and it was repeated in prayer, or in revelation if it is authentic that it was revealed in Mecca when prayer was made obligatory, and in Medina when the qiblah was changed, and it is authentic that it is Meccan because of the Almighty's saying: And We have given you seven of the oft-repeated verses, and it is Meccan by the text.

1- In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful from Al-Fatihah and from every surah. This is the view of the reciters of Mecca and Kufa and their jurists, Ibn Al-Mubarak, may God have mercy on him, and Al-Shafi'i. The reciters of Medina, Basra, Syria, Malik, Al-Awza'i, and Abu Hanifa, may God have mercy on him, disagreed with them. Abu Hanifa, may God have mercy on him, did not state anything about it, so he thought that it was not part of the surah according to him. Muhammad bin Al-Hasan was asked about it and he said: What is between the two covers is the speech of God Almighty. We have many hadiths, including what Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, narrated that the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "The Opening of the Book is seven verses, the first of which is 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' and the statement of Umm Salamah, may God be pleased with her: "The Messenger of God, peace and blessings be upon him, recited Al-Fatihah and counted 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful' and 'Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds'." Because of these two, there is a difference of opinion as to whether it is a verse on its own or what comes after it. The consensus is that what is between the two covers is the speech of God Almighty, and there is agreement to include it in the copies of the Qur'an, along with the ones that are so perfect in stripping the Qur'an that they do not even write Aameen. The preposition ba is related to something omitted, as an estimate: In the name of God I read because what follows it is read. Likewise, every agent implies what makes the naming its beginning, and that is more appropriate than implying it at all due to the lack of what matches it and indicates it. Or initial due to the additional implied meaning in it, and presenting the object here is more appropriate as in his saying: In the name of God is its flow and his saying You alone we worship because it is more important and indicates exclusivity, and it is more indicative of glorification and more in keeping with existence, for His name, glory be to Him, is presented before the reading, how could it not be, when He has made a tool for it, in that the action is not completed and is not considered in the Sharia unless it is issued with His name, glory be to Him, due to his saying, peace and blessings be upon him, Every important matter that is not begun with the name of God is incomplete. It was said that the preposition ba is for accompaniment.

The meaning is, Blessed by the name of God Almighty, read. This and what follows it to the end of the surah are said on the tongues of the servants so that they may know how to bless His name, praise Him for His blessings, and ask for His grace. It was broken, and it is the right of the single letters to be opened, because they are specific to the necessity of the letter of the accusative, just as the lam of command and the lam of addition were broken inside it on the apparent to separate them from the lam of the beginning. The name, according to our Basran companions, is one of the names whose ends were deleted due to frequent use, and its beginnings were made clear on the sukoon n and a subject was introduced with it, the hamzat al-wasl, because it is their custom to begin with a moving letter and stop on a silent letter. This is supported by its inflection on Asma', Asma', Sami', and Sami't, and the coming of Sami' as guidance is a language in which he said:

By God, your fish is a blessed name. May God give you preference over it.

The heart is far and not expelled, and its derivation is from the sublimity because it is the elevation of the named and a symbol for it. And from the attribute among the Kufians, and its origin is wasm, the waw was deleted and replaced by the hamzat al-wasl to reduce its defect. It was replied that the hamza was not known inside it as its beginning was deleted in their speech, and from its dialects are sammam and sam. He said:

In the name of He whose name is in every surah

If the name is intended to mean the word, then it is not the named, because it is composed of discontinuous, non-constant sounds, and it differs according to the nations and ages, and it is sometimes multiple and sometimes the same. The named is not like that, and if it is intended to mean the thing itself, then it is the named, but it is not famous in this meaning. And the

In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Almighty's saying: Blessed be the name of your Lord and Glorify the name of your Lord what is intended by it is the word, because just as His Essence, glory be to Him, and His attributes must be purified from deficiencies, the words created for them must be purified from obscenity and bad manners. Or the name is inserted into it, as in the saying of the poet:

Until the year, then peace be upon you both

And if what is meant by it is the attribute, as is the opinion of Sheikh Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari, the attribute is divided in his opinion into: what is the same as the named, what is other than it, and what is neither it nor other. He said in the name of God and did not say by God, because the blessing and assistance are in mentioning His name. Or to differentiate between an oath and an oath. The alif was not written as is the case in writing due to frequent use, and the ba was lengthened to replace it. God is originally a god, so the hamza was deleted and replaced by the alif and lam, and that is why it was said: O God, definitely, except that it is specific to the one worshipped in truth. The god originally refers to every worshipped thing, then it became prevalent for the one worshipped in truth. Its derivation is from the word 'ilah', 'iluhah' and 'ilwahah' meaning worship, and from it he became deified and istalah, and it was said from 'ilah' if he was perplexed because the minds are perplexed in knowing him. Or from 'ilahhat ila so-and-so' meaning it was tranquilized with him, because the hearts are reassured by mentioning him, and the souls are tranquilized by knowing him. Or from the word God if he is frightened by a matter that has befallen him, and the gods of other than Him are permitted, since the one seeking refuge seeks refuge in Him and He compels him in reality or in his claim. Or from the word God of the young camel if he is infatuated with his mother, since the servants are infatuated with supplicating to Him in times of hardship. Or from the word Wala if he is confused and his mind is floundering, and its origin was Wala then the Waw was changed to a Hamza because the Kasra is too heavy for it, as the Damma is too heavy in faces, so it was said Ilah like I'a and Ishaah, and the plural refers to it Ilah without Al-Walaha. And it was said that its origin is Laha the source of Laha which follows Laha if it conceals itself and rises because He, glory be to Him, is beloved beyond the perception of sight, and is elevated above everything and above what is not befitting of Him, and the saying of the poet attests to that:

Like an oath from Abu Rabah, witnessed by his elders

It was said that it is a name for its specific essence because it is described and not described by it, and because it must have a name that its attributes apply to it and nothing else is suitable for it, and because if it were a description, then saying: There is no god but God would not be monotheism like: There is no god but the Most Gracious, because it does not prevent partnership, and it is more apparent that it is a description in its origin, but when it prevailed over it to the point that it is not used for anything else and became like a name for it like: the Pleiades and the Thunderbolt, it followed its course in applying descriptions to it, and preventing description by it, and the possibility of partnership does not approach it, because its essence from what it is without consideration is a real matter or something else that is not rational for humans, so it cannot be indicated by a word, and because if it indicated its specific essence alone, then the apparent meaning of His saying, the Most High, the Most Great: And He is God in the heavens would not have conveyed a correct meaning, and because the meaning of derivation is that one of the two words shares the meaning and composition with the other, and it is obtained between it and the aforementioned origin, and it was said that its origin is Laha in Syriac, so it was Arabized by deleting the last alif, and inserting the lam into it, and emphasizing its Laha if what precedes it is open or joined in Sunnah, it was said absolutely, and deleting its alif is a mistake that spoils the prayer, and the explicit oath is not established by it, and it came for the necessity of poetry:

May God not bless Suhail if God does not bless men

The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful are two names that were built for exaggeration from mercy, like angry from angry, and all-knowing from know. Mercy in the language means softness of the heart and a turning that requires favor and kindness. From this comes mercy because it turns toward what is in it. The names of God Almighty are only taken in consideration of the ends which are actions without the principles which are reactions. The Most Gracious is more eloquent than The Most Merciful because the increase in the construction indicates an increase in meaning as in Qata'a and Qata'a and Kabar and Kabar. This is only taken sometimes in consideration of quantity, and other times in consideration of quality. According to the first, it was said: O Most Gracious of this world because it includes the believer and the disbeliever, and The Most Merciful of the Hereafter because it is specific to the believer. According to the second, it was said: O Most Gracious of this world and the Hereafter and The Most Merciful of this world, because all the blessings of the Hereafter are great, while the blessings of this world are great and insignificant. It was presented and analogy requires ascending from the lowest to the highest, because the mercy of this world is presented, and because it became like knowledge in that no one else is described with it because its meaning is the true benefactor who has reached the utmost in mercy, and this is not true of anyone else because whoever is other than Him is compensated by His kindness and His favor, intending by it a great reward or beautiful praise or a mixture, the softness of the nationality or the love of money from the heart. Then it is like the mediation in that because the essence of the blessings and their existence, and the ability to deliver them, and the caller The motive for it, and the ability to benefit from it, and the villages in which the benefit is obtained, and other than that of His creation that no one else is able to do. Or because when the Most Gracious indicated the great blessings and conveyed them, He mentioned the Most Merciful to include what came out of them, so it would be like a completion and a parallel to it. Or to preserve the heads of the verses.

It is more apparent that it is not declined, and that the prohibition of its being exclusive to God Almighty is that it should have a feminine form like fa'la or fa'lanah, as an addition to it, which is the most common in its category. Rather, the naming was made specific with these names so that the knower may know that the One who deserves to be aided in the complexities of affairs is the true worshipped One, who is the Master of all blessings, immediate and deferred, great and small, so he directs his evils to the side of holiness, and holds fast to the rope of success, and occupies his secret with His remembrance and preparation with Him, rather than anything else.

Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

Surat al-Fatihah 1:2

Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

A declarative sentence intended to praise God with its content that He is the Owner of all praise from creation or deserving of their praise, and God is the Knower of the One truly worshipped Lord of the Worlds, meaning the Owner of all creation from mankind, jinn, angels, beasts, and others, and each of them is called a Knower, it is said the Knower of mankind and the Knower of the jinn and so on, and it is more common in its plural with the letter Ya and the letter Noon for those with knowledge over others, and it is from the sign because it is a sign of its Creator

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of al-hamdu lillah is: sincere thanks to God, the Most High, without all that is worshipped besides Him, and without all that He created, for what He bestowed upon His servants of blessings that cannot be counted, and no one else can encompass their number except Him, in correcting the tools for His obedience, and enabling the limbs of the bodies of the blind to perform His duties, along with what He has spread for them in their worldly life of provision, and nourished them with it of the pleasures of life, without them deserving it from Him, and with what He has alerted them to and called them to, of the causes leading to eternal life in the abode of residence in permanent bliss. So to our Lord be praise for all of that, first and last.

And with what we mentioned of the interpretation of the saying of our Lord, may He be glorified and whose names are sanctified, Praise be to God, the report came from Ibn Abbas and others:

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us: Uthman ibn Saeed told us: Bishr ibn Ammarah told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad, may God bless them both: Say, O Muhammad, Praise be to God. Ibn Abbas said: Praise be to God means thanking God, submitting to God, acknowledging His blessings and guidance, and starting with Him, and other than that.

Saeed bin Omar Al-Sakuni told me: Baqiyah bin Al-Waleed told us: Isa bin Ibrahim told me, on the authority of Musa bin Abi Habib, on the authority of Al-Hakam bin Umair, who was a companion of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When you say 'Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds,' then you have thanked God, and He will give you more.

He said: It has been said that the saying of the speaker, Praise be to God, is praising God with His beautiful names and attributes, and his saying, Thanks be to God, is praising Him with His blessings and favors.

It was narrated on the authority of Ka'b al-Ahbar that he said: Praise be to God, praising God. The narration on his authority did not clarify which of the two meanings of praise we mentioned.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la Al-Sadfi told us: Ibn Wahb told us: Umar bin Muhammad told me, on the authority of Suhayl bin Abi Salih, on the authority of his father, who said: Al-Saluli told me, on the authority of Ka'b, who said: Whoever says Praise be to God, that is praising God.

Ali bin Al-Hasan Al-Kharraz told me: Muslim bin Abdul-Rahman Al-Jarmi told us: Muhammad bin Mus'ab Al-Qarqasani told us, on the authority of Mubarak bin Fadala, on the authority of Al-Hasan, on the authority of Al-Aswad bin Sari': The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "There is nothing more beloved to Him than praise, God Almighty, and for that reason He praised Himself and said: 'Praise be to God.'"

Abu Ja'far said: There is no objection among those who have knowledge of the Arabic language to the ruling on the saying of the speaker: Praise be to God, thanks for health. It has become clear, since it is correct according to all of them, that praise be to God may be said in place of thanks, and that thanks may be placed in place of praise. Because if that were not the case, it would not be permissible to say praise be to God in thanks, so the source of the speaker's saying Praise be to God would be: I thank, because if thanks were not in the meaning of praise, it would be wrong for something other than its meaning and wording to come from praise.

If someone were to say to us: What is the reason for including the definite article in al-Hamd? Why not say: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds?

It has been said that the inclusion of the definite article in the word al-hamd praise has a meaning that cannot be conveyed by the speaker saying al-hamd praise by omitting the definite article. This is because their inclusion in the word al-hamd indicates that its meaning is: all praise and complete thanks to God. If they were dropped from it, it would only indicate that the speaker praised God, not all praise. Since the meaning of the speaker saying al-hamd praise be to God or hamd God praise be to God is: I praise God with praise. The interpretation is not in the speaker saying al-hamd praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, reciting Surah Umm al-Qur'an: I praise God. Rather, the interpretation in that is what we described before, that all praise is for God in His divinity and His blessings upon His creation with the blessings He bestowed upon them, which are unmatched in religion and in this world, and in the immediate and the deferred.

Therefore, from the meaning, the readers and scholars of the nation continued to read the praise from

Al-Hamdulillah Rabb al-'Alamin without putting it in the accusative case, which leads to indicating that the meaning of what follows it is the same: I praise God with praise. If a reader read that in the accusative case, then in my opinion he would be distorting its meaning, and deserving of punishment for reading it in that way, if he intentionally read it in that way, while knowing his mistake and the corruption of his interpretation.

If someone were to say to us: What is the meaning of His saying, Praise be to God? God praised Himself, may He be glorified, and then He taught us so that we could say that as He said and described Himself? If that is the case, then what is the reason for His, may He be glorified, saying, You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help, when He, may He be glorified, is the One worshipped and not the One who worships? Or is that said by Gabriel or Muhammad, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace? It is invalid that that is the speech of God.

It was said: Rather, all of that is the speech of God, may He be glorified, but He, may He be glorified, praised Himself and commended Himself with what He deserves, then He taught that to His servants and imposed its recitation upon them, as a test and trial from Him, so He said to them: Say: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, and say: You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help. So His saying You alone do we worship is among what He, may He be glorified, taught them to say and to submit to Him in its meaning, and that is connected to His saying: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, and it is as if He said: Say this and this.

If he said: Where is his saying: Say, so that the interpretation of that is what you claimed?

It was said: We have previously demonstrated that it is the nature of the Arabs, if they know the place of a word, and do not doubt that their listener knows, by what they have shown of their speech, what they have deleted, the deletion of what is sufficient from the apparent of their speech, especially if that word that was deleted was a statement, or the interpretation of a statement, as the poet said:

I know that I will be a tomb if the weak walk, not the weak

The questioners asked, For whom did you dig? The informants said, A minister.

Abu Jaafar said: He meant by that, and the informants said to them: The dead is a minister, so he omitted the dead, since he had already mentioned in the speech what indicated that. And likewise the other said:

I saw your husband in the battlefield, carrying a sword and a spear.

It is known that the spear is not worn, and that he only meant: and carrying a spear, but since its meaning was known, he was satisfied with what had become apparent from his speech, without revealing what was omitted from it. And they may say to the traveler when they bid him farewell: A healthy companion, omitting walk and go out, since its meaning was known, even if he omitted mentioning it.

Likewise, what was omitted from the statement of God Almighty: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, when it was known by His statement, glory be to Him, You alone do we worship, what He intended by His statement: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, of the meaning of His command to His servants, the indication of what appeared in the statement made it unnecessary to reveal what was omitted.

We have narrated the report that we mentioned earlier as the beginning of the interpretation of God's statement: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and that he used to say: Gabriel said to Muhammad: Say, O Muhammad: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, and we explained that Gabriel only taught Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, what he was commanded to teach him. This report indicates the correctness of what we said in the interpretation of that.

The statement in the interpretation of God's saying: Lord

Abu Ja'far said: The explanation of the interpretation of the name of God, which is God, in In the name of God, has already been given, so we have no need to repeat it in this place.

As for the interpretation of his saying Lord, the word Lord in the speech of the Arabs has several meanings. The master who is obeyed among them is called Lord. An example of this is the saying of Labid bin Rabi'ah:

And one day I will destroy the Lord of Kinda and his son, and the Lord of Ma'ad, between Khabt and Arar.

It means Lord of Kinda: Master of Kinda. And from it is the saying of the Nabigha of Banu Dhihyan:

Hide to Al-Nu'man until you reach him, may you be sacrificed for me by the Lord of my path and my offspring.

The man who fixes something is called a riba, and from this is the saying of Al-Farazdaq bin Ghalib:

They were lazy fools who injected their seed into an uncultivated soil.

Meaning: in an untouched skin. It is said: So-and-so makes his work worse for so-and-so if he tries to fix it and maintain it. It is said that Alqamah ibn Abdah said:

I was a man to whom I entrusted my lute, and before you I was raised, and I was lost, lutes.

He means by his saying: I have entrusted you, that is, my rababah has reached you, so you have become the one who will take care of my affairs and fix them, when I left the rababah of other kings who were before you over me, so they neglected my affairs and left checking on them, and they are the rabab: the singular of them is rabb. The owner of something is called its rabbah. The meaning of rabbah may also be used in other ways, but it returns to some of these three ways.

Our Lord, may His praise be glorified, is the Master who has no equal, and there is no equal to His mastery. He is the One who reforms the affairs of His creation through the blessings He bestowed upon them, and the Owner to whom belongs creation and command.

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:2

Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

In a similar manner to what we said in the interpretation of the Most High's saying, Lord of the Worlds, the narration came from Ibn Abbas:

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman ibn Saeed told us: Bishr ibn Amara told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad: O Muhammad, say: Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds. Ibn Abbas said: He says: Say: Praise be to God, to whom belongs all creation, all the heavens and those in them, and all the earths and those in them and what is between them, of what He knows and of what He does not know. He says: Know, O Muhammad, that nothing is like this Lord of yours.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: the worlds.

Abu Jaafar said: The scholars is the plural of world, and world is a plural that has no singular form, like anam, "raht," jaysh, and similar names that are used as a collective that has no singular form.

The world is the name for the types of nations, and each type of them is a world, and the people of every century from each type of them are the world of that century and that time. So mankind is a world, and every people of a time from them is the world of that time. And the jinn are a world, and so are all the races of creation, each race from them is the world of its time. And for this reason it is plural and is said: worlds, and its singular is a plural, because the world of every time from that is the world of that time. And from that is the saying of al-Ajjaj:

Khandaf is the pinnacle of this world

So he made them the scholars of his time. This statement that we have made is the statement of Ibn Abbas and Saeed bin Jubair, and it is the meaning of the statement of most of the commentators.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Ammarah told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds. Praise be to God, to whom belongs all creation: the heavens and the earths and whoever is in them, and what is between them, of what He knows and what He does not know.

Muhammad bin Sinan al-Qazzaz told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Shabib, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Lord of the worlds: the jinn and mankind.

Ali bin Al-Hasan told me, he said: Muslim bin Abdul Rahman told us, he said: Muhammad bin Mus'ab told us, on the authority of Qais bin Al-Rabi', on the authority of Ata' bin Al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding a statement:

God Almighty is Lord of the Worlds. He said: Lord of the jinn and mankind.

Ahmad bin Ishaq bin Issa Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu

Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Qais told us, on the authority of Ata bin Al-Saib, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair: His statement: Lord of the worlds, he said: the jinn and mankind.

Ahmad bin Abdul Rahim Al-Barqi told me: Ibn Abi Maryam told me, on the authority of Ibn Lahī'ah, on the authority of Ata' bin Dinar, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, regarding his statement: Lord of the worlds, he said: The son of Adam, the jinn, and mankind, every nation.

Some of them are unique.

Muhammad bin Hamid told me, he said: Mihran told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Mujahid: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, he said: mankind and jinn.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us, he said: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Bishr bin Muadh Al-Aqdi told us: Yazid bin Zuraigh told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Lord of the worlds, he said: Every class is a world.

Ahmad bin Hazim Al-Ghafari told me, he said: Obaidullah bin Musa told us, on the authority of Abu Ja'far, on the authority of Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement: Lord of the worlds, he said: Mankind is a world, and the jinn is a world, and other than that there are eighteen thousand worlds, or fourteen thousand worlds, he is doubtful of the angels on the earth. And the earth has four corners, in each corner there are three thousand worlds, and five hundred worlds, He created them for His worship.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: Lord of the worlds, he said: mankind and the jinn.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

First: The Almighty's saying: Praise be to God. Abu Muhammad al-Ghani bin Saeed al-Hafiz narrated from the hadith of Abu Hurayrah and Abu Saeed al-Khudri on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "When the servant says 'Praise be to God,' He says: 'My servant has spoken the truth in praising Me.'" Muslim narrated from Anas bin Malik who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God is pleased with the servant who eats a meal and praises Him for it, or drinks a drink and praises Him for it. Al-Hasan said: There is no blessing but that praising God is better than it. Ibn Majah narrated from Anas bin Malik who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"God does not bestow a blessing upon a servant and he says: 'Praise be to God' except that what he has given him is better than what he has taken." In Nawad al-Usul, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, he said:

The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

If the entire world in its entirety were in the hand of a man from my nation and he said 'Praise be to God', then praise be to God would be better than that. Abu Abdullah said: "Its meaning to us is that he was given the world, then he was given this word after that until he uttered it, and this word was better than the entire world, because the world is fleeting and the word is eternal. It is one of the lasting good deeds. God the Most High said: 'But the lasting good deeds are better in the sight of your Lord for reward and better for hope.'" It was said in some narrations: What he was given would have been more than what he took. So the word became a gift from the servant, and the world is from God. This is in management. This is how it is in speech that this word is from the servant, and the world is from God, and both are originally from God, the world is from Him and the word is from Him. He gave him the world and enriched him, and He gave him the word and honored him with it in the hereafter. Ibn Majah narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, told them: A servant of God's servants said: O Lord, to You be praise as befits the majesty of Your face and the greatness of Your power. The two angels were overwhelmed and did not know how to write it down, so they ascended to heaven and said: O our Lord, Your servant said: O Lord, he has said: O Lord, to You be praise as befits the majesty of Your face and the greatness of Your power. God said to them: Write it down as My servant said it until he meets Me and I reward him for it.

Linguists said: The matter became difficult and hard, and the difficulties with emphasis on the letter Dād are the hardships. The woman and the sheep became difficult: if their child got stuck and its exit was not easy, also with emphasis on the letter Dād, so based on this it would be aḥḍalat al-mulakayn or aḥḍalat al-mulakayn without a ta'. And God knows best. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Malik al-Ash'ari who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Purity is half of faith, and 'Praise be to God' fills the scale, and 'Glory be to God' and 'Praise be to God' fill what is between the heavens and the earth, and he mentioned the hadith.

Second: The scholars differed as to which is better, the servant saying: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, or saying: There is no god but God? A group said: His saying: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds is better, because it includes monotheism, which is: There is no god but God. So in his saying there is monotheism and praise, and in his saying there is no god but God there is monotheism only. A group said: There is no god but God is better, because it repels disbelief and polytheism, and creation fights for it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

I was commanded to fight people until they say, 'There is no god but God.' This statement was chosen by Ibn Atiyyah, who said: The judge in this is the statement of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

"The best thing I and the prophets before me have said is: There is no god but God alone, with no partner or associate."

Third: Muslims agree that God is to be praised for all His blessings, and that among the blessings that God has bestowed is faith. This indicates that faith is His action and creation, and the evidence for that is His saying, Lord of the worlds. And the worlds are all of the creatures, and faith is among them, not as the Qadarites said that it was created for them, as will be explained.

Fourth: Praise in the speech of the Arabs means complete commendation, and the alif and lam are for the comprehensiveness of the type of praise, so He, glory be to Him, deserves all praise, as He has the best names and the highest attributes. The word praise has been collected in the collection of fewness in the saying of the poet:

And the most eloquent praise, I have dedicated to him my best sayings and my best praises.

Praise is the opposite of blame. You say: I praised the man, I praise him with praise, so he is praiseworthy and commendable. Praise is more eloquent than praise. Praise is more general than thanks. The commended is the one who has many praiseworthy qualities. The poet said:

To the noble, generous, and generous Muhammad

And thus the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was named. And the poet said:

So he split his name from his own to make him famous. So, the one with the honour is Mahmoud, and this is Muhammad.

Praise is the opposite of blame. A man became praiseworthy. I praised him and found him praiseworthy. You say: I came to such and such a place and praised it, meaning I found him praiseworthy and agreeable, and that is if you were pleased with his residence or his pasture. A man of hamdah - like hamza - praises things a lot and says more about them than they are. And the hamdah of fire - with a fat-ha - is the sound of its burning.

Fifth: Abu Jaafar al-Tabari and Abu al-Abbas al-Mubarrad believed that praise and thanks have the same meaning and are not acceptable. Abu Abd al-Rahman al-Sulami narrated it in his book Al-Haqaiq on the authority of Jaafar al-Sadiq and Ibn Ata'. Ibn Ata' said that it means thanks to God, since it is from Him the gratitude for His teaching us so that we praised Him. Al-Tabari provided evidence that they have the same meaning by saying: Praise be to God, thanks. Ibn Atiyyah said: It is in reality evidence against what he believed, because your saying thanks is only specific to praise, because it is for a blessing. Some scholars said: Thanks are more general than praise, because it is with the tongue, the limbs and the heart, while praise is only with the tongue in particular. It was said that praise is more general, because it contains the meaning of thanks and the meaning of praise, and it is more general than thanks, because praise is placed in place of thanks, and thanks is not placed in place of praise. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Praise be to God is the word of every grateful person, and that Adam, peace be upon him, said when he sneezed: Praise be to God. God said to Noah, peace be upon him: Say, 'Praise be to God, who has delivered us from the wrongdoing people.' And Abraham, peace be upon him, said: Praise be to God, who has given me, in my old age, Ishmael and Isaac. And He said in the story of David and Solomon: And they said, 'Praise be to God, who has favored us over many of His believing servants.' And He said to His Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him: Say, 'Praise be to God, who has not taken a son.' And the people of Paradise will say: Praise be to God, who has taken away our sorrow. Their call will be, Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds. It is the word of every grateful person.

I said: The correct view is that praise is commendation of the one being praised for his attributes without any prior good deed, and thanks is commendation of the one being thanked for the good deed he has been given. And on this basis our scholars said: Praise is more general than thanks, because praise is for commendation, for praise, and for thanks, and reward is specific to being a reward for someone who has done you a favor, so praise is more general in the verse because it is more than thanks. And praise is mentioned in the sense of satisfaction, it is said: I tested him and praised him, meaning I was satisfied with him. And from this is the saying of the Most High: A praiseworthy station. And he, peace be upon him, said:

I have made you wash your urethra meaning I am pleased with it for you. It is mentioned from Ja'far al-Sadiq in his saying, Praise be to God: Whoever praises Him with His attributes as He described Himself has praised Him, because praise came with a mim and a dal, so the ha' is from unity, the mim is from sovereignty, and the dal is from eternity, so whoever knows Him with unity, eternity, and sovereignty has known Him, and this is the reality of praise be to God. Shaiq bin Ibrahim said in his interpretation of praise be to God: It has three aspects, the first is that if God gives you something, you know who gave it to you. The second is that you are pleased with what He gave you. The third is that as long as His strength is in your body, you do not disobey Him, so these are the conditions of praise.

Sixth: God Almighty praised Himself, and opened His book with praise of Him, and He did not permit anyone else to do so. Rather, He forbade them from doing so in His book and on the tongue of His Prophet, peace be upon him, and He said: "So do not claim yourselves to be pure. He knows best who fears Him." And He, peace be upon him, said:

Throw dirt in the faces of flatterers. Narrated by Al-Muqaddad. This will be discussed in the chapter on women, God willing.

The meaning of praise is due to God, Lord of the Worlds. That is, praise preceded me for myself before anyone in the worlds praised me. My praise of myself for myself in eternity was not due to a cause, and my praise of creation is tainted with causes. Our scholars said: It is abhorrent for a creature who has not been given perfection to praise himself in order to bring benefits to himself and ward off harm from himself. It was said: When He, glory be to Him, knew the inability of His servants to praise Him, He praised Himself for Himself in eternity. So exhausting the burden of worship is the place of the inability to praise Him. Do you not see how the Master of Messengers showed the inability by saying:

I cannot count your praises. And they recited:

If we praise you for something good, then you are as we praise and above what we praise.

It was said: He praised Himself in eternity because He knew of the abundance of His blessings upon His servants and their inability to fulfill the duty of praising Him, so He praised Himself on their behalf, so that the blessing would be more enjoyable for them, since He removed from them the burden of the favor.

Seventh: The seven reciters and the majority of people agreed to raise the dal in Al-Hamdulillah. It was narrated from Sufyan ibn Uyaynah and Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj: Al-Hamdulillah with the dhal in the accusative, and this is based on the implication of a verb. It is said: Al-Hamdulillah with the nominative is a subject and predicate, and the way of the predicate is to give information, so what is the benefit in this? The answer is that Sibawayh said: If a man says Al-Hamdulillah with the nominative, then it has the same meaning as your saying: I praised God with praise, except that the one who raises Al-Hamdulillah informs that the praise is from Him and from all creation to God, and the one who places Al-Hamdulillah in the accusative informs that the praise is from Him alone to God. Other than Sibawayh said: He only speaks this to expose God's pardon and forgiveness and to glorify and extol Him, so it is contrary to the meaning of the predicate and has the meaning of a question. In the hadith:

Whoever is busy remembering Me instead of asking Me, I will give him the best of what I give to those who ask. It was said:

His praise and commendation of Himself is so that His servants may know that. So the meaning of this is: Say, Praise be to God.

Al-Tabari said: Praise be to God is a praise with which He commended Himself, and within it is a command to His servants to praise Him, so it is as if He said: Say praise be to God, and based on this comes the word say you. This is from the Arabs' deletion of what the apparent meaning of the speech indicates, as the poet said:

I know that I will be ashes if the weak walk, not the weak

The questioners said: For whom did you dig? The questioners said: Who is the minister?

Meaning: The one who is engraved has a minister, so it was deleted because the apparent meaning of the speech indicates it, and this is common. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abi Ubla. Praise be to God with the damma of the dal and lam, following the second with the first, and to make the word homogeneous, and the desire for homogeneity in the word is common in their speech, such as: I aju'uka, which is a slope from the mountain, with the damma of the dal and the jim. He said:

Hit your mom's legs hubble

By adding a damma to the noon because of adding a damma to the hamza. And in a reading by the people of Mecca, they added a damma to the ra' following the mim, and on that basis they said: Maqtalain by adding a damma to the qaf. And they said: li-mak, so they broke the hamza following the lam, and it was recited by Nu'man ibn Bashir:

Oh, mother, she is seeking in the air, and there is no one like him who is sought on earth.

The original: Woe to her mother, so the first lam was deleted and the damma of the hamza after the kasra was found too heavy, so it was moved to the lam and then the lam was followed by the mim. It was narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Abi Al-Hasan and Zaid bin Ali: Al-Hamdulillah with the kasra of the dal following the first with the second.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: Lord of the worlds, meaning their Owner, and whoever owns something is its Lord, so Lord is the Owner. And in the Sahih: Lord is one of the names of God Almighty, and it is not said of anything else except with an addition, and they said it in the pre-Islamic era for the king. Al-Harith bin Halza said:

He is the Lord and the supporter on the day of confusion and affliction

And the Lord: the master, and from it the Almighty's saying: Remember me with your Lord. And in the hadith:

That the slave woman should give birth to her mistress, meaning her mistress. We have explained this in the book At-Tadhkira. The lord is the reformer, the manager, the repairer, and the one who takes care of something. Al-Harawi and others said: It is said of someone who takes care of the reform and completion of something: He has taken care of it, he is its lord and master. From this the lords were named because they take care of the books. In the hadith:

Do you have a blessing that you can take care of? That is, that you can take care of it and fix it. And the Lord is the worshipped one, and from this the poet said:

The foxes urinate on his head. He who is urinated on by foxes is humiliated.

It is said in the form of plural: raabahu, raabbahu, and raabbatuhu, as narrated by An-Nahhas. In As-Sahah: And so-and-so raised his son, raabahu, and raabbahu and raabbahu have the same meaning, that is, he raised him. And marboof is the one who is educated.

Ninth: Some scholars said: This name is the greatest name of God, because of the frequency with which people call upon Him, and contemplate that in the Qur'an, as in the last part of Al Imran and Surat Ibrahim and others, and because this description gives a sense of the connection between the Lord and the one being served, along with what it includes of compassion, mercy, and need in every situation.

There is a difference of opinion about its derivation. It has been said that it is derived from tarbiyah, so God Almighty is the manager of His creation and their nurturer. Hence His Almighty saying, And your stepdaughters who are in your lap. So the wife's daughter was called a stepdaughter because of the husband's upbringing of her.

So, the fact that He is the manager of His creation and their nurturer is an attribute of action, and the fact that the Lord in the sense of owner and master is an attribute of the essence.

Tenth: Whenever the definite article is added to Lord, it is reserved for God Almighty, because it is for the covenant. If we delete it, it becomes shared between God and His servants. So it is said: God is the Lord of the servants, and Zayd is the Lord of the house. So God, glory be to Him, is the Lord of lords. He owns the owner and the owned, and He is the Creator and Provider of that. Every lord other than Him is neither a creator nor a provider. Every owned thing is owned after it did not exist, and that was taken from his hand. He only owns something and not something else. The description of God Almighty is contrary to these meanings. This is the difference between the description of the Creator and the created things.

Eleventh: The Almighty's saying: of the worlds. The people of interpretation differed greatly regarding of the worlds. Qatada said: The worlds is the plural of world, which is every existing thing other than God Almighty, and it does not have a singular form like group and people. It was said: The people of every age are worlds, as Al-Husayn ibn Al-Fadl said, based on the Almighty's saying: Do you approach the males from among the worlds? meaning from among the people. Al-Ajjaj said:

I will remove the head of this world

Jarir bin Al-Khatfi said:

The wilderness is fair to him, and he is poisonous, and the scholars sacrifice their children for him.

Ibn Abbas said: The scholars are the jinn and mankind. The evidence for this is the Almighty's statement: That he may be a warner to the worlds, and he was not a warner to the animals. Al-Farra' and Abu Ubaidah said: The scholar refers to those who have reason, and they are four nations: mankind, jinn, angels, and devils. And the animals are not called scholars, because this plural is only the plural of those who have reason.

Al-A'sha said

I have never heard of such people in our world.

Zaid bin Aslam said: They are the mercenaries, and similarly Abu Amr bin Al-Ala said: They are the spiritual ones. It is the meaning of Ibn Abbas's statement as well: Every living thing that moves on the face of the earth. Wahb bin Munabbih said: God Almighty has eighteen thousand worlds, and this world is one of them. Abu Saeed Al-Khudri said: God has forty thousand worlds, and this world from east to west is one world. Muqatil said: The worlds are eighty thousand worlds, forty thousand worlds on land, and forty thousand worlds in the sea. Al-Rabi bin Anas narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aliyah who said: The jinn are one world, and mankind is one world, and He divided the earth into four corners, in each corner one thousand five hundred worlds, which He created for His worship.

I said: The first statement is the most correct of these statements, because it includes every created and existing thing. Its evidence is the saying of God Almighty: "Pharaoh said: 'And what is the Lord of the worlds?' He said: 'The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them.'" Then it is taken from knowledge and sign, because it indicates its Creator. This is what Az-Zajaj said: The world is everything that God created in this world and the hereafter. Al-Khalil said: Knowledge, sign and teacher: what indicates something, so the world indicates that it has a Creator and Manager, and this is clear. It was mentioned that a man said in the presence of Al-Junayd: Praise be to God, so he said to him: Complete it as God said, say: Lord of the worlds, so the man said: Who are the worlds that you should be mentioned with the Truth? He said: Say, my brother? For if the created is paired with the eternal, no trace of it remains.

Twelfth: It is permissible to use the nominative and accusative forms of Lord. The accusative is used to express praise, and the nominative is used to express separation, meaning He is the Lord of the Worlds.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The seven readers have a damma on the dal in his statement Al-Hamdulillah which is a subject and predicate. It was narrated on the authority of Sufyan ibn Uyaynah and Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj that they said Al-Hamdulillah in the accusative case, which is an implied verb. Ibn Abi Ubaidah read Al-Hamdulillah with a damma on the dal and the lam, following the first and second. It has supporting evidence, but it is anomalous. It was narrated on the authority of al-Hasan and Zayd ibn Ali Al-Hamdulillah with a kasra on the dal, following the first and second.

Abu Ja'far ibn Jarir said: The meaning of al-Hamdulillah is to thank God sincerely, without all that is worshipped besides Him, and without everything that He created from His creation, with what He bestowed upon His servants of blessings that cannot be counted and whose number cannot be encompassed by anyone other than Him, in correcting the tools for His obedience and enabling the limbs of the bodies of those charged with the duties to perform His obligations, along with what He has spread for them in their worldly life of provision, and nourished them with the pleasures of life without them deserving it, and with what He has alerted them to and called them to of the causes leading to eternal life in the abode of permanent bliss, so to our Lord be praise for all of that, first and last. Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: Praise be to God is a praise with which He has praised Himself, and within it is a command to His servants to praise Him, as if He said: Say, Praise be to God. He said: It has been said that the saying of the speaker, Praise be to God, is praise of Him by His beautiful names and sublime attributes, and his saying, Thanks be to God, is praise of Him by His blessings and favors. Then he began to refute that, with the gist of it that all those who know the Arabic language place both praise and thanks in place of the other. Al-Salami transmitted this doctrine that they are the same from Ja'far al-Sadiq and Ibn Ata' from the Sufis. Ibn Abbas said, Praise be to God, is the word of every thankful person. Al-Qurtubi cited Ibn Jarir as evidence for the validity of the saying of the speaker, Praise be to God, as thanks. What Ibn Jarir claimed is questionable, because it is well-known among many of the later scholars that praise is verbal praise of the one who is praised by his necessary and transitive attributes, and thanks are only for transitive ones and are with the heart, tongue, and limbs, as the poet said:

Three things have benefited you from me: my hands, my tongue, and my hidden conscience.

But they differed as to which of the two is more general, praise or thanks, according to two opinions. The truth is that there is a generality and a specificity between them. Praise is more general than thanks in terms of what they apply to, because it applies to intransitive and transitive attributes. You say, I praised him for his chivalry and I praised him for his generosity, which is more specific, because it can only be done by words. Thanks is more general in terms of what they apply to, because it can be done by words, actions, and intention, as mentioned above. It is more specific because it can only be done by transitive attributes. You do not say, I thanked him for his chivalry, and you say, I thanked him for his generosity and kindness to me. This is the gist of what some of the later scholars have explained, and God knows best.

Abu Nasr Ismail bin Hammad Al-Jawhari said: Praise is the opposite of blame. You say, I praised the man, and he praises him with praise and commendation, so he is praiseworthy and praised. Praise is more expressive than praise, but praise is more general than thanks. He said about thanks: it is to commend the doer of good for what he has done of kindness. It is said, I thanked him and I thanked him, and with the lam it is more eloquent. As for praise, it is more general than praise because it is for the living, the dead, and also for inanimate objects, just as food, a place, and the like are praised, and it comes before and after the kindness. It is also more general for transitive and intransitive attributes.

Mentioning the sayings of the predecessors about praise

Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abu Mu'ammir al-Qat'i told us, Hafs told us, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, who said: Umar, may God be pleased with him, said: We have learned Subhan God and La ilaha illa God, but what is al-hamdulillah? Ali said: It is a word that God is pleased with for Himself. Other than Abu Muammar narrated it on the authority of Hafs, who said: Umar said to Ali - and his companions were with him -: There is no god but God, Subhan God, and God is Great, we have learned them, but what is al-hamdulillah? Ali said: A word that God Almighty loves for Himself and is pleased with for Himself and loves to be said. Ali bin Zaid bin Jadaan said on the authority of Yusuf bin Mahran: Ibn Abbas said: Praise be to God is a word of thanks. And when the servant says praise be to God, He says: My servant thanked me. Narrated by Ibn Abi Hatim. He and Ibn Jarir also narrated from the hadith of Bishr bin Ammarah on the authority of Abu Rawq on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Praise be to God is thanking God, it is humility before Him and acknowledging His blessings and guidance and initiating it and other than that. Kaab Al-Ahbar said: Praise be to God is the praise of God, and Ad-Dahhak said: Praise be to God is the cloak of the Most Merciful. A hadith similar to that has been narrated.

Ibn Jarir said: Saeed bin Amr Al-Sakuni told us, Baqiyah bin Al-Waleed told us, Isa bin Ibrahim told me, on the authority of Musa bin Abi Habib, on the authority of Al-Hakam bin Umair, who was a companion of the Prophet, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When you say, Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, then you have thanked God, and He will give you more. Imam Ahmad bin Hanbal narrated: Ruh told us, Aouf told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, on the authority of Al-Aswad bin Sari', who said: I said, O Messenger of God, shall I not ask you for praise with which I have praised my Lord, the Blessed and Exalted? He said: Indeed, your Lord loves praise. Al-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Ali bin Hajar, on the authority of Ibn Ulayyyah, on the authority of Yunus bin Ubayd, on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Aswad bin Sari', with it. Abu Isa Al-Hafiz Al-Tirmidhi, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah narrated from the hadith of Musa bin Ibrahim bin Katheer from Talha bin Kharash from Jabir bin Abdullah who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The best remembrance is 'There is no god but God', and the best supplication is 'Praise be to God'. Al-Tirmidhi said: It is hasan gharib. Ibn Majah narrated from Anas bin Malik, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God does not bestow a blessing upon a servant and he says: 'Praise be to God' except that what he gives is better than what he takes." Al-Qurtubi said in his interpretation and in Nawader Al-Usul on the authority of Anas from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "If the entire world were in the hand of a man from my nation and he said: 'Praise be to God', then praise be to God would be better than that." Al-Qurtubi and others said: That is, his inspiration to praise God would be a greater blessing for him than the blessings of this world because the reward of praising God does not perish and the pleasures of this world do not last. God, the Most High, said: "Wealth and children are the adornment of the life of this world. But the righteous deeds that endure are better in the sight of your Lord for reward and better for hope." And in Sunan Ibn Majah on the authority of Ibn Umar that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, told them that One of God's servants said: O Lord, to You be praise as befits the majesty of Your countenance and the greatness of Your power. The two angels were unable to write it down, so they ascended to God and said: O our Lord, a servant has said something and we do not know how to write it down. God, who knows best what His servant said, said: What did My servant say? They said: "O Lord, he said: 'To You be praise, O Lord, as befits the majesty of Your countenance and the greatness of Your power.'" God said to them, Write it as My servant said it until he meets Me, and I will reward him for it. Al-Qurtubi narrated from a group that they said that the servant's saying, Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, is better than his saying, There is no god but God, because Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, includes monotheism along with praise. Others said, There is no god but God, is better because it distinguishes between faith and disbelief, and people will fight for it until they say, There is no god but God, as is proven in the agreed-upon hadith. In another hadith, it says, The best thing that I and the prophets before me have said is, 'There is no god but God, alone, with no partner or associate.' It was previously reported from Jabir, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, The best remembrance is, 'There is no god but God,' and the best supplication is, 'Praise be to God.' At-Tirmidhi classed it as hasan, and the alif and lam in al-Hamd are used to include all types and kinds of praise for God, the Most High, as is stated in the hadith, O God, all praise is Yours, all dominion is Yours, all good is in Your hand, and all matters return to You.

The Lord is the owner who controls and in the language it is used to mean the master and the one who controls for the sake of reform and all of that is correct with regard to God and the Lord is not used for anyone other than God but rather as an addition you say: Lord of the house, Lord of so-and-so, as for the Lord it is only said for God the Almighty, and it has been said that it is the greatest name. The worlds are the plural of world and it is every existing thing other than God the Almighty, and the world is a plural that does not have a singular from its word, and the worlds are the types of creatures in the heavens and on land and in the sea and every century and generation of them is also called a world. Bishr bin Ammar said on the authority of Abu Rawq on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, Praise be to God to whom belongs all creation, the heavens and the earth and what is in them and what is between them of what we know and what we do not know. And in the narration of Saeed bin Jubair and Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Lord of the jinn and mankind, and Saeed bin Jubair, Mujahid and Ibn Jurayj said the same and it was narrated on the authority of Ali something similar. Ibn Abi Hatim said with his chain of transmission that it is not reliable, and Al-Qurtubi provided evidence for this statement by the words of God the Almighty: that he may be to the worlds a warner, and they are the jinn and mankind. Al-Farra and Abu Ubaid said: The world is that which has reason, and they are humans, jinn, angels and devils, and animals are not called worlds. On the authority of Zaid bin Aslam and Abu Muhaisin, the world is everything that has a fluttering soul.

Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

Qatada said: The Lord of the worlds is every kind of world. Al-Hafiz Ibn Asakir said in the biography of Marwan bin Muhammad, who was one of the caliphs of the Umayyads and was known as Al-Ja'd and nicknamed Al-Himyar, that he said: God created seventeen thousand worlds, the inhabitants of the heavens and the inhabitants of the earth, one world, and the rest of them are known only to God Almighty.

Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the Almighty's statement: Lord of the worlds, he said that mankind is one world and other than that there are eighteen thousand or fourteen thousand worlds - he doubts - the angels are on the earth and the earth has four corners, in each corner there are three thousand worlds and five hundred worlds that God created for His worship. Narrated by Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim. This is a strange statement that needs a sound proof like it. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us: Hisham bin Khalid told us: Al-Walid bin Muslim told us: Al-Furat told us, meaning Ibn Al-Walid, on the authority of Mu'tab bin Sami' on his Musnad: Muhammad bin Al-Himyari, regarding the words of God Almighty: Lord of the Worlds, he said: The worlds are a thousand nations, six hundred in the sea and four hundred on land. The same was narrated on the authority of Sa'id bin Al-Musayyab. Something similar to this was narrated with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, as Al-Hafiz Abu Ya'la Ahmad bin Ali bin Al-Muthanna said in his Musnad: Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna told us: Ubayd bin Waqid Al-Qaysi Abu Abbad told us: Muhammad bin Isa bin Kaysan told us: Muhammad bin Al-Munkadir told us, on the authority of Jabir bin Abdullah, who said: The locusts decreased in one of the years of 'Umar's rule, so he asked about it but was not told anything, so he was upset by that, so he sent a rider to go to Yemen, another to Syria, and another to Iraq to ask whether any locusts had been seen or not. He said: The rider who was from Yemen came to him with a handful of locusts, so he threw them in front of him. When he saw them, he said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: God created a thousand nations. : "Six hundred in the sea and four hundred on land, so the first thing to perish from these nations will be locusts. When they perish, they will follow one another like a system whose thread is cut." Muhammad ibn Isa, who is al-Hilali, is weak. Al-Baghawi narrated on the authority of Saeed ibn al-Musayyab that he said to God, One thousand worlds, six hundred in the sea and four hundred on land. Wahb ibn Munabbih said, "God has eighteen thousand worlds. The world is one of them." Muqatil said, The worlds are eighty thousand. Ka'b al-Ahbar said, No one knows the number of worlds except God Almighty. Al-Baghawi transmitted it. Al-Qurtubi narrated on the authority of Abu Saeed al-Khudri that he said, "God has forty thousand worlds. The world, from its east to its west, is one world." Al-Zajaj said, The world is everything that God created in this world and the hereafter. Al-Qurtubi said, This is correct, that it includes all worlds, as in His statement, 'Pharaoh said, "And what is the Lord of the worlds?" He said, 'The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them, if you are certain." The world is derived from the word mark I said because it is a word that indicates the existence of its Creator and Maker and His Oneness, as Ibn al-Mu'tazz said:

How strange it is that God is disobeyed, or how the denier denies Him.

And in everything there is a sign that indicates that He is One.

Fath al-Qadir

2- Praise be to God Praise: is the verbal praise of a voluntary good, and with the restriction of choice it differs from praise, as it is for a good even if the praised one is not of his choice, such as praising a man for his beauty, strength and courage. The author of Al-Kashshaf said: They are brothers, and praise is more specific than thanks in its source and more general in its relation. The source of praise is the tongue only, and its relation is the blessing and other things. The source of thanks is the tongue, the soul and the limbs, and its relation is the blessing. It was said: The source of praise is like the source of thanks, because every praise with the tongue that is not from the bottom of the heart with the agreement of the limbs is not praise but mockery and derision. It was answered that considering the agreement of the heart and the limbs in praise does not necessitate that it be its source but rather a condition - and there is a difference between the condition and the part and its definition to include the individuals of praise and that it is specific to the Lord, glory be to Him, in the sense that praising someone other than Him is not taken into account, because the one who bestows blessings is God, the Almighty, or that His praise is the perfect individual, so the restriction is a claim. The author of Al-Kashshaf preferred that the definition here is the definition of the genus, not the exhaustiveness, and what we mentioned is correct. It was mentioned in the hadith: All praise is due to God and it is raised by the beginning and its predicate is the circumstance, which is God. Its origin is the accusative case as a source by implying its verb like all the sources that the Arabs place, but it was changed to the nominative case in order to indicate the permanence and stability derived from nominal sentences without the occurrence and renewal that verbal sentences indicate, and the lam that enters the noble name is the lam of specificity. Ibn Jarir said: Praise is praise with which He praised Himself, and within it is a command to His servants to praise Him, so it is as if He said: Say praise be to God, then he preferred the union of praise and thanks, providing evidence for that with what is summed up: that all those who know the Arabic language place both praise and thanks in place of the other. Ibn Kathir said: There is a consideration in it because it is well-known among many of the later scholars that praise is verbal praise of the Praised One with His necessary and transitive attributes. And thanks are only for transitive and are with the heart, tongue, and limbs. It is clear that the reference in such a case is to the meaning of praise in the Arabic language, not to what a group of later scholars said, because that does not refute Ibn Jarir, nor does it constitute evidence. This is if there is no legal truth to praise, because if it is proven, it must be presented. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Umar said: We have learned Subhan God and La ilaha illa God, but what is praise be to God? Ali said: A word that he was pleased with for its negation. Ibn Abi Hatim also narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Praise be to God is a word of thanks, and when the servant says praise be to God, he says: My servant thanked me. He and Ibn Jarir also narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Praise be to God is thanking God, seeking His help, acknowledging His blessings, guidance, initiating, and other things. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Hakam bin Umair, who was a companion, that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When you say praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, then you have thanked God, and He will increase you. Abdul Razzaq narrated in Al-Musannaf, Al-Hakim Al-Tirmidhi in Nawader Al-Usul, Al-Khattabi in Al-Gharib, Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Adab, and Al-Daylami in Musnad Al-Firdaws on the authority of Abdullah bin Amr bin Al-Aas on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Praise is the head of gratitude. A servant does not thank God without praising Him." Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Abdul Rahman Al-Habli who said: Prayer is gratitude, fasting and every good thing you do is gratitude, and the best gratitude is praise. Al-Tabarani narrated in Al-Awsat on the authority of a weak Sayyid on the authority of Al-Nawwas bin Sam'an who said: "The she-camel of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was stolen, so he said: 'If God returns it to me, I will thank my Lord.' So it was returned, and when he saw it, he said: 'Praise be to God.' They waited to see if the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, had fasted or prayed, but they thought that he had forgotten. They said: 'O Messenger of God, I had said: 'If God returns it to me, I will thank my Lord.' He said: 'Didn't I say praise be to God?'"

There are hadiths that have been narrated about the virtue of praise. Among them: What was narrated by Ahmad, An-Nasa'i, Al-Hakim, who authenticated it, and Al-Bukhari in Al-Adab Al-Mufrad on the authority of Al-Aswad bin Sari' who said: I said, O Messenger of God, should I not ask you for praises with which I have praised my Lord, the Blessed and Exalted? He said: Indeed, your Lord loves praise. Al-Tirmidhi narrated and authenticated it, as did An-Nasa'i, Ibn Majah, Ibn Hibban, and Al-Bayhaqi on the authority of Jabir who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The best remembrance is 'There is no god but God,' and the best supplication is 'Praise be to God.' Ibn Majah and Al-Bayhaqi narrated with a good chain of transmission on the authority of Anas who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God does not bestow a blessing upon a servant and he says, 'Praise be to God,' except that what he gives is better than what he takes. Al-Hakim Al-Tirmidhi narrated in Nawader Al-Usul and Al-Qurtubi in his Tafsir on the authority of Anas that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: If the entire world in its entirety were in the hand of a man from my nation and he said, 'Praise be to God,' then praise would be better than that. Al-Qurtubi said: Its meaning is that his inspiration to praise would have been a greater blessing upon him than the blessings of this world, because the reward for praise does not perish, and the pleasures of this world do not last. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shu'ab al-Iman on the authority of Jabir that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: There is no servant who is blessed with a blessing except that praise is better than it. Abd al-Razzaq narrated something similar in al-Musannaf on the authority of al-Hasan, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Muslim, al-Nasa'i and Ahmad narrated on the authority of Abu Malik al-Ash'ari that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Purity is half of faith, and praise be to God fills the scale. Sa'id ibn Mansur, Ahmad, al-Tirmidhi who authenticated it and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of a man from Banu Sulaym that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Glory be to God is half of the scale, and praise be to God fills the scale, and God is Greater fills what is between the heavens and the earth, and purity is half of faith, and fasting is half of patience." Al-Hakim Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Omar that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Tasbih is half the scale, and Al-Hamdulillah fills it, and there is no god but God. There is no veil for it before God until it reaches Him." Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Anas that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Deliberateness is from God, and haste is from Satan. There is nothing that has more excuses than God, and there is nothing more beloved to God than Al-Hamdulillah." Ibn Shaheen narrated in Al-Sunnah and Al-Daylami on the authority of Abaan bin Anas that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Monotheism is the price of Paradise, and Al-Hamdulillah is the price of every blessing, and Paradise will be divided according to their deeds. The people of Sunan, Ibn Hibban and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Every important matter that is not begun with Al-Hamdulillah is cut off. Ibn Majah narrated in his Sunan on the authority of Ibn Umar, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, told them that one of God's servants said: 'O Lord, to You be praise as befits the majesty of Your countenance and the greatness of Your power.' The two angels did not know how to write it down, so they ascended to the heavens and said: 'O our Lord, a servant has said something and we do not know how to write it down.' God, who knows best what His servant said, said: 'What did My servant say?' They said: 'O Lord, he said: 'To You be praise as befits the majesty of Your countenance and the greatness of Your power.' God said to them: 'Write it down as My servant said it until he meets Me and I reward him for it.'" Muslim narrated on the authority of Anas that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God is pleased with a servant who eats a meal and praises Him for it, or drinks a drink and praises Him for it.

Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

Lord of the Worlds He said in As-Sahah: The Lord is one of the names of God the Most High, and it is not said for anything else except with an addition. They said it in the pre-Islamic era for the king. He said in Al-Kashshaf: The Lord is the owner. And from this is the saying of Safwan to Abu Sufyan: For a man from Quraysh to raise me is dearer to me than for a man from Hawazin to raise me, then he mentioned something similar to what As-Sahah said. Al-Qurtubi said in his interpretation: And the Lord is the master, and from this is the saying of God the Most High: Remember me to your Lord and in the hadith: That the female slave should give birth to her Lord, and the Lord: the reformer, the manager, the healer, and the one who stands up. He said: And the Lord is the one who is worshipped. And from this is the saying of the poet:

The foxes urinate on his head. He who is urinated on by foxes is disgraced.

The word worlds is the plural of world, which is everything that exists except God, as stated by Qatada. It was also said that the people of every age are worlds, as stated by Al-Husayn ibn Al-Fadl. Ibn Abbas said that worlds are the jinn and mankind. Al-Farra' and Abu Ubayd said that worlds are those who have reason, and they are four nations: mankind, jinn, angels, and devils. Animals are not called worlds, because this plural is only the plural of what has reason. Al-Qurtubi narrated these statements in his interpretation and mentioned their evidence. He said: The first statement is the most correct of these statements because it includes every created and existing thing. Its evidence is the statement of God, the Most High: Pharaoh said, 'And what is the Lord of the worlds?' He said, 'The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them.' It is taken from knowledge and sign because it indicates its Creator, as stated by Al-Zajjaj. He said: The world is everything that God created in this world and the hereafter. End quote. Based on this, its plural is in this form that is specific to rational beings, giving priority to rational beings over others. Al-Kashshaf said: This is permissible because of the descriptive meaning in it, which is indicating the meaning of knowledge. Al-Faryabi, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and Al-Hakim have narrated what was mentioned above from Ibn Abbas, and he authenticated it. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated it from Mujahid. Ibn Jarir narrated it from Saeed bin Jubayr. Ibn Jubayr and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God Almighty: Lord of the worlds, he said: God of all creation: all the heavens and those in them, and all the earths and those in them and between them, of what He knows and of what He does not know.

His saying: 2. Praise be to God is a statement as if it is informing that the one who deserves praise is God Almighty and in it is teaching the creation to appreciate it. Say praise be to God. Praise can mean thanking for the blessing, and it can mean praising Him for the praiseworthy qualities in Him. It is said, I praised so-and-so for the blessing he bestowed upon me and I praised him for his knowledge and courage, and thanks can only be for a blessing, so praise is more general than thanks, since it is not said, I thanked so-and-so for his knowledge, for every praiser is grateful, but not every grateful person is grateful. It was said: Praise is with the tongue in words, and thanks are with the limbs in action. God the Almighty said, And say, 'Praise be to God, who has not taken a son' 11 - Al-Isra' and He said, Work, O family of David, in gratitude 123 - Saba'.

His saying, To God, the lam in it is for entitlement, just as it is said, The house belongs to Zaid.

His saying, Lord of the worlds. Lord means owner, just as one says to the owner of a house: Lord of the house. It is also said: Lord of something if he owns it. It also means nurturing and repairing. It is said: So-and-so lords the estate, he nurtures it if he completes it and repairs it, so he is Lord like medicine and righteousness. So God Almighty is the owner of the worlds and their nurturer. It is not said of a creature that he is Lord in the definite form, but rather it is said Lord of such-and-such in the genitive case, because the definite article is for generalization and he does not own everything.

The word worlds is the plural of world, and it has no singular form. They differed about the worlds. Ibn Abbas said: They are the jinn and mankind because they are the ones charged with addressing God. God the Almighty said: That he may be to the worlds a warner 1 - Al-Furqan. Qatada, Mujahid, and Al-Hasan said: They are all creatures. God the Almighty said: "Pharaoh said: And what is the Lord of the worlds? He said: The Lord of the heavens and the earth and what is between them" 23-24 Ash-Shu'ara. Its derivation is from knowledge and sign. They were called by this name because the effect of creation is evident in them. Abu Ubaid said: They are four nations: angels, humans, jinn, and devils. It is derived from knowledge. Animals are not called worlds because they do not reason. They differed about their number. Saeed bin Al-Musayyab said: God has one thousand worlds, six hundred in the sea and four hundred on land. Muqatil bin Hayyan said: God has eighty thousand worlds, forty thousand in the sea and forty thousand on land. Wahb said: God has eighteen thousand worlds. The world is one of them, and the civilization in ruins is like a tent in the desert. Kaab al-Ahbar said: No one can count the number of the worlds except God. God Almighty said: And none knows the soldiers of your Lord except Him 31 - Al-Muddaththir.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

2- Praise be to God Praise: is the praise of the optional beauty of a blessing or other, and praise: is the praise of the beauty absolutely. You say I praised Zaid for his knowledge and generosity, and you do not say I praised him for his beauty, but I commended him. It was said that they are brothers, and gratitude: is the response to the blessing in word, deed, and belief. He said:

Three things have benefited you from me: my hands, my tongue, and my hidden conscience.

It is more general than them in one respect, and more specific in another. Since praise is one of the branches of gratitude, it is more widespread for the blessing, and more indicative of its status due to the concealment of belief, and the manners of the limbs are not possible, so he made the head of gratitude and the mainstay of it, so he, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, said: Praise is the head of gratitude, and he who does not praise Him does not thank God.

Blame is the opposite of praise, and ingratitude is the opposite of gratitude. It is raised by the beginning and its predicate is for God, and its origin is the accusative, and it has been read with it, but it was changed to the nominative to indicate the generality of praise and its constancy for Him without its renewal or occurrence. It is one of the sources that are accusative with implied verbs that are hardly used with them, and the definition in it is for the genus and its meaning: indicating what everyone knows that praise is? Or for exhaustion, since praise in reality is all for Him, since there is no good except that He is its Giver with or without a middle, as God Almighty said: And whatever blessing you have is from God and in it is an indication that He is the Living, Able, Willing, and Knowing. Since praise is not deserved except by he who is like this. And Al-Hamdulillah was read by following the dal and the lam and vice versa, lowering them from the point of view that they are used together in the position of one word.

Lord of the Worlds The Lord is originally a source meaning nurture: which is bringing something to its perfection little by little, then it was described with it for exaggeration like fasting and justice. It was said: It is an attribute of his Lord, He nurtures it, so He is Lord, like you say sleep, sleep, so He is sleep, then the owner was called by it because He preserves what He owns and nurtures it. It is not applied to anyone other than Him except in a restricted way like His saying: Return to your Lord. The world is the name of what is known by it, like the seal and the mold, it is predominant in what the Creator Almighty is, and it is everything other than Him of substances and accidents, because of their possibility and their need for an effect that is necessary for its essence, it indicates its existence, and it was only pluralized to include what is under it of different kinds, and the rational ones among them were predominant, so they pluralized it with the ya and the nun like all their descriptions. It was said: It is a name given to those with knowledge from the angels and the two heavy ones, and it was applied to others by way of implication. It was said: He meant by it people here, for each one of them is a scholar in that he includes the counterparts of what is in the greater world of substances and accidents, which the Creator knows as he knows what He created in the greater world. Therefore, He equated looking into them, and the Most High said: And in yourselves, then will you not see? And Lord of the worlds was read in the accusative case as praise, or calling, or the verb indicated by praise, and in it is evidence that the possibilities, just as they are in need of the originator when they come into being, are in need of the sustainer when they remain.

The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Meaning the Merciful, which is the desire for good for his people

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The explanation of the interpretation of His statement, The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, has already been given in the interpretation of In the Name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, so that makes it unnecessary to repeat it in this place.

We do not need to explain the reason for repeating this in this place, since we do not see that In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful from the opening of the Book is a verse. Thus, we have a question for someone who asks: What is the reason for repeating this in this place, and God Almighty has already described Himself with it in His saying In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, despite the proximity of one of the two verses to the other, and its proximity to its companion? Rather, this is an argument for us against the error of the claim of those who claim that In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful from the opening of the Book is a verse. For if that were the case, then that would be repeating a verse with one meaning and one word twice without a separation between them. And there are no two adjacent verses repeated with one word and one meaning, without a separation between them from speech whose meaning contradicts their meaning. Rather, a verse is repeated in its entirety in a single surah, with chapters separating between them, and words that are interrupted with something other than the meaning of the repeated verses or other than their wording, and there is no separation between the statement of God Almighty whose name is the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful from In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, and the statement of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful from Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

If he said: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds is a break from that.

It was said: A group of the people of interpretation denied this, and said: This is from the delayed meaning of precedence, and it is: Praise be to God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, Lord of the Worlds, Master of the Day of Judgment. And they cited as evidence for the validity of what they claimed from that his saying, Master of the Day of Judgment, and they said: His saying, Master of the Day of Judgment, is an instruction from God to His servant, to describe

Him as the King in the reading of those who read king and as the King in the reading of those who read owner. They said: What is more deserving of being adjacent to His description of kingship or sovereignty is what is similar to that description, and that is His saying, Lord of the Worlds, which is report of His dominion over all kinds of creation, and that being adjacent to His description of greatness and divinity is what has a similar meaning of praise for Him, and that is His saying, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. So they claimed that this is evidence for them that His saying, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, means precedence before Lord of the Worlds, even though it is apparently delayed. They said: Similar to that is the presentation which means delay, and the delay which means presentation in the speech of the Arabs is more widespread, and in their logic more numerous, than can be counted. Among that is the saying of Jarir ibn Atiyah:

Fantasy has wandered, where are you? Come back to visit me in peace, peace Meaning: The imagination wandered around for a while, where is it from you? And as the Most High said in His Book: Praise be to God, who has sent down to His servant the Book and has not made therein any crookedness, [its being] straight (al-Kahf 18:1), meaning: Praise be to God, who has sent down to His servant the Book and has not made therein any crookedness, and the like. In that is evidence to support the statement of those who deny that In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful is a verse from the opening of the Book.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Thirteenth: The Almighty's saying The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful He described Himself after Lord of the Worlds as The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, because since His description as Lord of the Worlds is a form of intimidation, He coupled it with God the Most Gracious, because it includes encouragement, to combine in His attributes fear of Him and desire for Him, so it is more helpful in obeying Him and finding security, as He said, Inform My servants that I am the Forgiving, the Most Merciful * and that My punishment is the painful punishment. And He said, The Forgiver of sin, the Acceptor of repentance, the Severe in punishment, the Possessor of bounty. And in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: If the believer knew what punishment is with God, no one would hope for His Paradise, and if the disbeliever knew what mercy is with God, no one would despair of His Paradise. The meanings of these two names have already been mentioned, so there is no point in repeating them.

And the Almighty's saying: The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful We have already discussed this in the Basmalah, which makes it unnecessary to repeat it. Al-Qurtubi said: He described Himself as the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful after saying Lord of the Worlds, so that it would be a case of linking encouragement after intimidation, as the Almighty said: Inform My servants that I am the Forgiving, the Most Merciful, and that My punishment is the painful punishment. And the Almighty's saying: Indeed, your Lord is swift in penalty, and indeed, He is Forgiving and Merciful. He said: So the Lord in it is intimidation, and the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful is encouragement. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "If the believer knew what punishment is with God, no one would hope for His Paradise. If the disbeliever knew what mercy is with God, no one would despair of His mercy."

Fath al-Qadir

3- The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful Its interpretation has been presented. Al-Qurtubi said: He described Himself, the Most High, after the Lord of the Worlds, as the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, because since His description as the Lord of the Worlds is a form of intimidation, He linked it with the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, because it includes encouragement, so that His attributes combine intimidation of Him and desire for Him, and thus it is more helpful in obeying Him and more preventive, as the Most High said: Inform My servants that it is I who am the Forgiving, the Most Merciful * and that My punishment is the painful punishment. And He said: The Forgiver of sin, the Acceptor of repentance, the Severe in punishment. And in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: If the believer knew what punishment is with God, no one would hope for His Paradise, and if the disbeliever knew what mercy is with God, no one would despair of His Paradise. End quote. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding his statement: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, he said: What He described of His creation, and in His statement the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, he said: He praised Himself.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

3. The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful

Tafsir al-Baidawi

3- The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful He repeated it to explain what we will mention.

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:4

Owner of the Day of Judgment

Surat al-Fatihah 1:4

Owner of the Day of Judgment

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

King of the Day of Judgment) meaning the recompense, which is the Day of Resurrection. It was specifically mentioned because there is no apparent kingship in it for anyone except God Almighty, as evidenced by {To whom belongs the kingdom today? To God belongs it}. And whoever reads {Malik}, its meaning is the owner of the entire matter on the Day of Resurrection, or He is always described as such {like the Forgiver of sin}, so it is correct that it occurs as an attribute of knowledge.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The reciters differ in their recitation of Malik Yawm ad-Din. Some of them recite it as Malik Yawm ad-Din, some of them recite it as Malik Yawm ad-Din, and some of them recite it as Malik Yawm ad-Din with the kaf in the accusative case. We have exhaustively narrated the narration from those who narrated it in the Book of Recitations, and they informed us of the recitation we chose in it, and the reason for the correctness of the recitation we chose in it. So we disliked repeating that in this place, since what we intended, in this book of ours, was to explain the aspects of interpretation of the Qur'an, not the aspects of its recitation.

There is no disagreement among all those who know the Arabic language that the word king is derived from king, and that owner is taken from king. The interpretation of the reading of those who read it as owner of the Day of Judgment is that the kingdom on the Day of Judgment belongs to God alone, without all of His creation, who were before that in this world tyrannical kings who disputed with Him the kingdom and defended Him from being the only ones with pride, greatness, authority, and tyranny. So they were certain of meeting God on the Day of Judgment that they were the small and humiliated ones, and that He, without them and without others, has the kingdom and pride, honor, and splendor, as He, the Most High, and His names are sanctified, said in His revelation: "On the Day when they will appear, nothing of them will be hidden from God. To whom belongs the kingdom this Day? To God, the One, the Prevailing." (Ghafir 40:16) So God, the Most High, informed us that He will be the only one with the kingdom on that Day, without the kings of this world, who on the Day of Judgment will have become humiliated and lowly, and their world in the Hereafter will have become loss.

As for the interpretation of the reading of those who read Master of the Day of Judgment, it is:

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, saying: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, on the authority of Bishr bin Ammarah, who said: Abu Rawq narrated to us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas: Master of the Day of Judgment, meaning that no one will have a ruling with Him on that day like their ruling in this world. Then He said: They will not speak except for one whom the Most Merciful permits and who says what is right (An-Naba': 38). And He said: And all voices will be hushed before the Most Merciful (Ta-Ha 20:108). And He said: And they will not intercede except for him with whom He is pleased (Al-Anbiya': 28).

Abu Ja'far said: The first of the two interpretations of the verse, and the most correct of the two readings in my opinion, is the first interpretation, which is the reading of those who read king in the sense of kingship. Because in acknowledging His uniqueness in kingship, there is an affirmation of His uniqueness in kingship, and the virtue of kingship being greater than the owner, since it is known that there is no king except that He is the owner, and the owner may not be a king.

And then, God, the Most High, informed His servants in the verse before His saying, Master of the Day of Judgment, that He is the Master of all the worlds, their Master, their Reformer, the Overseer of them, and the Most Merciful to them in this world and the Hereafter, by His saying, Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful. And since He, the Most High, had informed them of His dominion over them in this way by His saying, Lord of the Worlds, then it is more appropriate for His attributes, the Most High, to follow that, unless His saying, Lord of the Worlds, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, implies, despite the closeness of the connection and proximity between the two verses, since His wisdom is a wisdom that is not like any other wisdom. And in repeating His description, the Most High, as Master of the Day of Judgment, there was a repeat of what had already been described of Him in His saying, Lord of the Worlds, despite the closeness of the two verses and the proximity of the two attributes. And in repeating that, there was a repetition of different words with the same meanings, which do not provide the listener with what was repeated of it with any benefit that he needed. What He, the Most High, did not contain of His attributes before His saying, Master of the Day of Judgment, is the meaning in His saying, Master of the Day of Judgment, which is His description as the King.

So it is clear that the first of the two readings is correct, and the most deserving of the two interpretations of the Book, is the reading of the one who reads it Master of the Day of Judgment, meaning that the king is devoted to Him on the Day of Judgment, without the reading of the one who reads it Master of the Day of Judgment, which means that He has the power to judge between them and to decide, uniquely and without the rest of His creation.

If someone thinks that His saying, Lord of the Worlds, is report about His ownership of them in this world but not in the Hereafter, then it is necessary to connect that with the report about Himself, that He is the One who owns them in the Hereafter in the same way that He owns them in this world with His saying, Owner of the Day of Judgment, then he has neglected and made a mistaken assumption.

For if it were permissible for someone to think that the meaning of His saying, Lord of the worlds, is limited to reporting the Lordship of the world of this world, not the world of the Hereafter, with no indication that this means that way in the apparent meaning of the revelation, or in a report from the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, transmitted by it, or by an argument found in reason, then it would be permissible for another to think that it is limited to the world of the time in which His saying, Lord of the worlds, was revealed, not to mention all that happens after it in the new times of the worlds. For it is correct, based on what we have presented of the explanation, that the world of each time is not the world of the time after it.

Whoever is ignorant of the truth of this, based on what we have presented, is foolish. For in the words of God, the Most High: And We had certainly given the Children of Israel the Scripture and wisdom and prophethood, and provided for them of the good things and preferred them over the worlds (al-Jathiyah 45:160), there is clear evidence that the world of every age is not the world of the time before it, nor the world of the time after it, since God, the Most High, preferred the nation of our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, over all other nations that have passed away, and He informed them of that in His words: You are the best nation produced for mankind (Al-Imran: 110). So it is known from this that the Children of Israel in the time of our Prophet were not the best of the worlds, despite their denial of him, may God bless him and grant him peace. Rather, the best of the worlds in that age and after it until the Day of Judgment were those who believed in him and followed his path, not those other nations who denied and strayed from his path.

Since it is clear that the interpretation of an interpreter is corrupt, if he interprets his statement, Lord of the worlds, to mean that God is the Lord of the worlds of the time of our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and not the worlds of all other times besides him, then it is clear that the statement of the one who claims that its interpretation is: Lord of the world of this world and not the world of the Hereafter, and that Owner of the Day of Judgment deserves to be connected to it so that it is known that in the Hereafter he is of their kingdom and lordship like what he was in this world.

The one who claims this is asked about the difference between him and someone like him who is arbitrary in interpreting his statement, Lord of the worlds. He is arbitrary and says: He only meant by that that He is the Lord of the worlds of the time of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, not the worlds of any other time before him or after him, like the one who said this statement claimed: He meant by it the worlds of this world not the worlds of the Hereafter, from origin or implication. So he will not say anything about one of them without imposing the same on the other.

As for the one who claims that the interpretation of His statement, Owner of the Day of Judgment, is that He is the One who owns the establishment of the Day of Judgment, then what the one who said this statement before it has obliged us to do is necessary for him. Since the establishment of the Resurrection is nothing but the return of the creation that has perished to the forms they were in before their destruction, in the abode in which He has prepared for them what He has prepared. And they are the knowledgeable ones about whom the Most High has informed us that He is their Lord in His statement, Lord of the worlds.

As for the interpretation of that in the reading of the one who read Master of the Day of Judgment, he meant: O Master of the Day of Judgment, so he made it accusative with the intention of calling and supplication, as the Most High said: Joseph, turn away from this (Yusuf 12:29) with the interpretation: O Joseph, turn away from this, and as the poet of Banu Asad said, and it is poetry, as it is said, pre-Islamic:

If you have accused me of lying about it, I will find a similar calf.

He wants: Oh part, and as the other said:

You lied, by the House of God, do not marry her, Bani Shab, her horns are stubborn and milking

He means: O son of a young man who has horned it. What made him mislead in reading that by putting the kaf in the accusative case of Malik in the meaning that I described his confusion in interpreting his saying: You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help in his interpretation, with the genitive and genitive case of Malik of the Day of Judgment. So he thought that the meaning of that would not be correct after putting the genitive case of Malik of the Day of Judgment so that You alone we worship would be addressed to him. It is as if he meant: O Master of the Day of Judgment, You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. And if the interpretation of the beginning of the surah had been known, and that Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds was a command from God to His servant, it would have been said as we mentioned before from the report on the authority of Ibn Abbas: that Gabriel said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, on the authority of God, the Most High: Say, O Muhammad, Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, Master of the Day of Judgment, and also say, O Muhammad: You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help. And it was understood from the Arabs that it is their custom, when they narrate or command the narration of report that follows the statement, to address and then inform about an absent person, and to inform about an absent person and then return to addressing, because in narrating by speech there is a meaning for the absent and the addressed, like their saying to the man: I said to your brother: If you had stood up, I would have stood up, and I said to your brother: If he had stood up, I would have stood up, to make it easy for him to get out of what he found difficult to direct by drawing Master of the Day of Judgment.

And from the likes of Master of the Day of Judgment in

the genitive case, then returning it to the address with You alone we worship, as we mentioned before the verse from the poetry of Abu Kabir al-Hudhali:

Oh, how I long for you, Khalid's grandmother, and the whiteness of your face for the dusty ground

Then he returned to the speech, saying, By the whiteness of your face, after the report about Khalid had passed in the sense of report about the absent.

And from it is the saying of Labid bin Rabi'ah:

She began to complain to me, crying, and she carried you for seven years after seventy.

So he returned to addressing himself, and the report about him had been presented in the manner of report about the absent.

And from this is the saying of God, which is the most truthful statement and the most firm proof: Until, when you were in the ships and they sailed with them by a good wind (Yunus 10:22). So He addressed and then returned to reporting on the absent, and did not say: and they sailed with you. The evidence from poetry and the speech of the Arabs on this is more than can be counted, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for whoever is guided to understand it.

Reading Malik Yawm ad-Din is forbidden and not permissible, due to the consensus of all the scholars of the nation and reciters to reject reading it with this word.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: The Day of Judgment.

Abu Jaafar said: The religion in this context is interpreted as the reckoning and reward for deeds, as Ka'b ibn Ju'ayl said:

If they throw at us, we throw at them and approach them as they lend us

As the other said:

Know and be certain that your kingdom will perish, and know that you will be judged for what you do.

Meaning: You will be rewarded for what you do.

And from that is the saying of God Almighty: Nol Rather, you deny the Recompense. Meaning: the recompense. And indeed, over you are keepers. (al-Infitar 82:9, 115) They keep track of the deeds that you do. And the Almighty's saying: Why then, if you were not to be judged? (al-Waqi'ah 56:86) Meaning, you were not rewarded for your deeds nor held accountable.

Religion has meanings in the speech of the Arabs other than the meaning of accountability and recompense, and we will mention them in their places, God willing.

And with what we said in the interpretation of his saying the Day of Judgment, the traces came from the predecessors of the commentators, with the correction of the evidence of their interpretation that they interpreted in that.

Abu Kuraib Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us: Uthman ibn Saeed told us: Bishr ibn 'Amara told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn 'Abbas: The Day of Judgment, he said: The Day of Judgment for the creation, which is the Day of Resurrection. He will judge them by their deeds, if good, then good, and if evil, then evil, except for those whom He pardons, for the matter is His. Then He said: Is not His the creation and the command? (al-A'raf 7:54).

Musa bin Harun Al-Hamadani told me: Amr bin Hammad Al-Qannad told us: Asbat bin Nasr Al-Hamadani told us, on the authority of Ismail bin Abdul Rahman Al-Suddi, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Master of the Day of Judgment, meaning the Day of Reckoning.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement, Owner of the Day of Judgment, he said: The day on which God will judge His servants according to their deeds.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, Master of the Day of Judgment. He said: The day when people will be judged.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Fourteenth: The Almighty's saying: Master of the Day of Judgment. Muhammad bin al-Sumaiqa' read it with the accusative case of Malik, and there are four languages for it: Malik, Malik, Malik - shortened from Malik - and Malik. The poet said:

And days were long for us, in which we disobeyed the King when he judged us.

Another said:

Be content with what the King has divided, for He has divided the creatures among us in a way that is evident.

Creatures: the natures that man was created with. It was narrated on the authority of Nafi' that the kasra in malak is pronounced with a long vowel, so it is read maliki in the language of those who prolong the vowel marks, and it is a language of the Arabs mentioned by Al-Mahdawi and others.

Fifteenth: Scholars differed as to which is more eloquent: king or owner? Both readings were narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Abu Bakr and Umar. They were mentioned by Al-Tirmidhi, and it was said: King is more general and more eloquent than owner, because every king is a owner, but not every king is a king, and because the king's command is effective over the owner in his kingdom, so that he does not act except according to the king's management, as stated by Abu Ubaidah and Al-Mubarrad. It was said: Owner is more eloquent, because he is the owner of people and others, so the owner is more eloquent in his action and greater, because the laws of the Sharia are implemented to him, and then he has more ownership.

Abu Ali said: Abu Bakr bin Al-Sarraj narrated on the authority of some of those who chose to read with Malik that God the Almighty described Himself as the Owner of everything by saying: Lord of the worlds. There is no benefit in the reading of those who read Malik because it is repetition. Abu Ali said: There is no proof in this, because in the revelation there are things in this form. The general comes first and then the specific is mentioned, such as His saying: He is God, the Creator, the Maker, the Fashioner. The Creator is general. And the Fashioner is mentioned because it draws attention to the creation and the existence of wisdom. And as God the Almighty said: And of the Hereafter they are certain after His saying: Those who believe in the unseen. And the unseen includes the Hereafter and other things, but it was mentioned because of its greatness, and to draw attention to the obligation of believing in it, and to refute the disbelievers who deny it. And as He said: The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, so He mentioned the Most Gracious, which is general, and He mentioned the Most Merciful after it, to make the believers specific to Him in His saying: And He is to the believers Most Merciful. Abu Hatim said: Malik is more eloquent in praising the Creator than Malik, and Malik is more eloquent in praising the created beings than Malik. The difference between them is that the owner of the created beings may not be a king, but if God is the owner, then He is a king. Judge Abu Bakr Ibn Al-Arabi chose this statement and mentioned three aspects. The first: You add it to the specific and the general, so you say: Malik of the house, the land, and the garment, just as you say: Malik Al-Muluk. The second: It is applied to the owner of the little and the much, and if you contemplate these two statements, you will find them to be one. The third: You say: Malik Al-Mulk, and you do not say: Malik Al-Mulk. Ibn Al-Hisar said: This is because what is meant by Malik is to indicate the king - with a kasra on the meem, and it does not include the king - with a damma on the meem - and Malik includes both matters, so it is more deserving of exaggeration. It also includes perfection, and for this reason he deserved the kingship over those below him. Do you not see the saying of the Most High: Indeed, God chose him over you and increased him abundantly in knowledge and body. And for this reason he, peace be upon him, said:

The Imamate is in Quraysh and Quraysh is the best of the Arab tribes, and the Arabs are better and more noble than the Persians. It includes power and choice, and that is a necessary matter in a king. If he is not able and chosen and his rule and command are not enforced, his enemy will subdue him, others will overcome him, and his subjects will despise him. It includes violence, command and prohibition, promise and threat. Do you not see the words of Solomon, peace be upon him: Why do I not see the hoopoe, or is he among the absent? * I will surely punish him with a severe punishment. And other amazing matters and noble meanings that are not found in a king.

I said: Some of them argued that Malik is more eloquent because it contains an extra letter, so the one who recites it has ten good deeds more than the one who recites it Malik. I said: This is looking at the wording, not the meaning, and the recitation has been proven by Malik, and it contains a meaning that is not in Malik, as we have explained, and God knows best.

Sixteenth: It is not permissible for anyone to be called by this name or to be called by it except God Almighty. Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"God will seize the earth on the Day of Resurrection and fold up the heavens with His right hand, then He will say, 'I am the King. Where are the kings of the earth?'" And also on his authority, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said:

The most abject name before God is a man who is called King of Kings - Muslim added - There is no king except God, the Almighty and Majestic. Sufyan said: Like Shah Shah. Ahmad ibn Hanbal said: I asked Abu Amr al-Shaibani about Akhnaa, and he said: The lowest. And it was narrated from him that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The most hateful and wicked man before God on the Day of Resurrection is a man who is called King of Kings, there is no king except God, the Exalted. Ibn al-Hisar said: Likewise Master of the Day of Judgment and Master of the Kingdom. There should be no disagreement that this is forbidden for all creatures, just as the King of Kings is forbidden, but as for the description of Malik and Malak, they are:

Seventeenth: It is permissible to describe with them those who are characterized by their concept. God Almighty said: Indeed, God has sent you Talut as a king. And the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

People from my nation were shown to me as warriors in the cause of God, riding the waves of this sea, kings on thrones or like kings on thrones.

Eighteenth: If someone were to say: How did He say: Master of the Day of Judgment while the Day of Judgment has not yet existed, then how can He describe Himself as the King of what He has not created? It would be said to him: Know that Malik is an active participle from the verb to possess, and the active participle in the speech of the Arabs may be added to what comes after it and it has the meaning of a future action, and that would be, according to them, a sound, reasonable and correct statement, like your saying: This is the one who will hit Zaid tomorrow, meaning he will hit Zaid. Likewise: This is the pilgrim to the House of God next year, meaning he will perform the Hajj next year. Do you not see that the action may be attributed to him even though he has not done it yet, but rather it is intended to mean the future? Likewise, His Almighty's saying: Master of the Day of Judgment is interpreted as meaning the future, meaning he will own the Day of Judgment or on the Day of Judgment when it is present.

A second aspect: That the interpretation of the owner is related to the ability, meaning that he is able on the Day of Judgment, or on the Day of Judgment and its creation, because the owner of a thing is the one who disposes of the thing and is able to do it, and God Almighty is the owner of all things and disposes of them according to His will, nothing of them is forbidden to Him.

The first face is yesterday in Arabic and it is implemented in its path, said Abu Al-Qasim Al-Zajaji.

A third aspect: It is said: Why did He single out the Day of Judgment when He is the Master of the Day of Judgment and other things? It is said to him: Because in this world they were disputing over the kingdom, like Pharaoh, Nimrod, and others, and on that day no one will dispute His kingdom, and they will all submit to Him, as the Most High said: Whose is the kingdom this day? So all of creation answered: To God, the One, the Prevailing. Therefore He said: Master of the Day of Judgment, meaning on that day there will be no master, judge, or rewarder other than Him, glory be to Him, there is no god but Him.

Nineteenth: If God Almighty is described as a king, then that is one of the attributes of His essence, and if He is described as a master, then that is one of the attributes of His action.

The twentieth: The day: is the time from sunrise to sunset, so it was borrowed for what is between the beginning of the Resurrection and the time when the people of the two abodes will settle in them. The day may also be used to refer to an hour of it, as God Almighty said: Today I have perfected for you your religion. The plural of day is days, and its root is ayyawam, which was assimilated. Sometimes they express intensity with the word day, and it is said: a day ayyawm, just as it is said: a night of nights. The rajaz poet said:

Yes, brother of the fight on the right day

It is inverted from it. The waw was delayed and the mim was brought forward, then the waw was changed to a ya' when it became a terminal, just as they said: adla, so the plural is dalu.

Eleventh: Religion: The reward for deeds and the reckoning for them. This is what Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, Ibn Jurayj, Qatada and others said. It was narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and this is indicated by the words of God Almighty: On that Day God will pay them their due recompense in full, meaning their reckoning. He also said: This Day every soul will be recompensed for what it earned, and This Day you will be recompensed for what you used to do, and he said: Will we indeed be recompensed? meaning rewarded and held accountable. Labid said:

You will reap what you sow one day, but a young man will be judged one day as a creditor.

Another said:

If they throw at us, we throw at them and approach them as they lend us

Another said:

And declare with certainty that your kingdom is fleeting, and know that as you judge, you will be judged.

The linguists said: I rewarded him for his actions, a debt with the letter dāl open and a debt with the letter dāl closed. From this comes the word dayyān in the description of the Almighty Lord, meaning the rewarder. In the hadith:

The bag is from the word dan which means he held himself accountable. It was also said: the judiciary. It was also narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and from it is the saying of Tarafa:

By your life, the Temple load on its grandfather was not a war for your religion from Egypt

The meanings of these three are close. Religion also means obedience, and from this is the saying of Amr ibn Kulthum:

And we have long, proud days in which we disobeyed the king and refused to obey him.

So, it is a common word, which is:

Twenty-second: Tha'lab said: A man obeys, disobeys, is honored, is humiliated, and is subjugated. It is one of the opposites. Religion is used to refer to habit and condition, as he said:

Like you from Umm Al-Huwairith before her

Al-Muthaqab said, mentioning his camel:

She says, if I protect her from my wrath, is this his religion and my religion forever?

Religion is the king's biography. Zuhair said:

If you settled in the atmosphere of Bani Asad in the religion of Amr and Fadak came between us

He wanted to be in the place of Amr's obedience. And religion: disease, according to Al-Laythani. And he recited:

Oh, your heart is from Salma and we have a religion

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Some readers read Malik Yawm ad-Din and others read Malik and both are correct and mutawatir in the seven, and it is said Malik with a kasra on the lam and with a sukoon, and it is also said Malik and Nafi' made the kasra on the kaf full and read Maliki Yawm ad-Din and both readings are preferred by those who prefer them in terms of meaning and both are correct and good, and al-Zamakhshari preferred Malik because it is the reading of the people of the two sanctuaries and because of his saying: To whom belongs the kingdom today and his saying: His saying is the truth and to Him belongs the kingdom and it was narrated from Abu Hanifa that he read: Malik Yawm ad-Din as a verb, subject and object and this is very strange and irregular and Abu Bakr bin Abi Dawud narrated something strange about that where he said: Abu Abd al-Rahman al-Azdi told us, Abd al-Wahhab bin Adi bin al-Fadl told us on the authority of Abu al-Mutarriif on the authority of Ibn Shihab that it reached him that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and Abu Bakr, Umar, Uthman, Muawiyah and his son Yazid bin Muawiyah used to read Maliki Yawm ad-Din Ibn Shihab said and the first to innovate Malik was Marwan I said Marwan had knowledge of the authenticity of what he read that Ibn Shihab did not see, and God knows best. It has been narrated through multiple chains of transmission, mentioned by Ibn Mardawayh, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to recite it Malik Yawm ad-Din. Malik is derived from kingship, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, it is We who inherit the earth and whoever is on it, and to Us they will be returned. And He said: Say, 'I seek refuge in the Lord of mankind * the King of mankind.' And Malik is derived from kingship, as God the Almighty said: Whose is the kingdom this day? To God, the One, the Prevailing. And He said: His word is the truth, and His is the kingdom. And He said: "Kingship on that Day will be the truth for the Most Gracious. And it will be a hard Day for the disbelievers." And specifying kingship for the Day of Judgment does not negate it from what is besides it, because the report has been presented that He is the Lord of the worlds, and this is general in this world and the Hereafter. Rather, it was added to the Day of Judgment because no one will claim anything there, and no one will speak except with His permission, as God the Almighty said: "The Day the Spirit and the angels will stand in rows. They will not speak except he whom the Most Gracious permits and he will say what is right." And God the Almighty said: And the voices will be hushed before the Most Gracious, and you will not hear except a whisper. And God the Almighty said: "The Day He comes, no soul will speak except by His permission. Then among them will be wretched and happy." Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Malik The Day of Judgment means that no one will have a judgment with Him on that day like their kingship in this world. He said: And the Day of Judgment is the Day of Reckoning for the creation, and it is the Day of Resurrection. He will judge them by their deeds, if good, then good, and if evil, then evil, except for those whom He pardons. And others of the Companions, Followers, and Salaf said the same, and it is apparent. Ibn Jarir narrated from some of them that he went to the interpretation of the Owner of the Day of Judgment that he is the One who is able to establish it, then he began to weaken it. It is apparent that there is no contradiction between this statement and what came before it, and that each of those who said this statement and what came before it acknowledges the correctness of the other statement and does not deny it. However, the context is more indicative of the first meaning than this, as God Almighty said: The sovereignty on that Day will belong to the Most Merciful, and it will be a difficult Day for the disbelievers. And the second statement is similar to God Almighty's statement: And the Day He will say, 'Be,' and it will be. And God knows best. The King in reality is God, the Almighty, the Majestic. God the Almighty said: "He is God, other than whom there is no god, the King, the Holy, the Peaceful." In the two Sahihs on the authority of Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, The most abhorrent name before God is a man who calls himself the King of Kings, while there is no King except God. In both of them, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: "God will seize the earth and roll up the heavens with His right hand, then He will say: I am the King. Where are the kings of the earth? Where are the tyrants? Where are the arrogant?" And in the Noble Qur'an: Whose is the kingdom today? It belongs to God, the One, the Prevailing. As for calling someone other than Him a king in this world, it is by way of metaphor, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, God has sent to you Saul as a king "And there was a king after them" When He appointed among you prophets and made you kings. In the two Sahihs: The likeness of kings on thrones.

Religion is recompense and accountability, as God Almighty said: On that Day, God will pay them their due debt in full. And He said: Are we really to be held accountable? That is, rewarded and held accountable. And in the hadith: The intelligent person is he who judges himself and works for the afterlife. That is, he holds himself accountable, as Omar, may God be pleased with him, said: "Hold yourselves to account before you are held accountable, weigh yourselves before you are weighed, and prepare for the greatest presentation before the One from whom your deeds are not hidden. "On that Day you will be exposed, nothing of you will be hidden."

Fath al-Qadir

Then he mentioned the rest of Al-Fatihah 4- Master of the Day of Judgment Malak, Malik, and Malak were read with a sukoon on the lam and Malak in the verb form. Scholars differed as to which is more eloquent, Malak or Malik? It was said: Malak is more general and eloquent than Malik, because every king is a king, but not every king is a king, and because the king's command is effective over the owner in his kingdom so that he does not turn away except from the king's management, said Abu Ubaid and Al-Mubarrad and preferred by Al-Zamakhshari. It was said: Malik is more eloquent because he is the owner of people and others, so the owner is more eloquent in his actions and greater. Abu Hatim said: Malik is more eloquent in praising the Creator than Malak. And Malak is more eloquent in praising the creatures than Malik, because the owner of the creatures may not be a king, and if God is a owner, then He is a king. Judge Abu Bakr bin Al-Arabi chose this. The truth is that each of the two descriptions has a special type that the other does not have. The owner has the power to do what the king cannot do in terms of dealing with what he owns, such as selling, gifting, emancipating, and the like. The king has the power to do what the owner cannot do in terms of dealing with managing the property, protecting it, and looking after the interests of the subjects. The owner is stronger than the king in some matters, and the king is stronger than the owner in some matters. The difference between the two descriptions with respect to the Lord Almighty is that the king is an attribute of His essence, and the owner is an attribute of His action. The Day of Judgment: The Day of Recompense from the Lord Almighty to His servants, as He said: "And what will make you know what is the Day of Judgment? Then what will make you know what is the Day of Judgment? The Day when no soul will possess anything for another, and the command, that Day, will belong to God." This addition to the circumstance is by way of expansion, like their saying: O thief of the people of the house tonight. And the Day of Judgment, even if it is delayed, the active participle and what is similar to it may be added to the future, like your saying: This one will hit Zaid tomorrow.

Owner of the Day of Judgment

Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Umm Salamah that "the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to recite 'king' without an alif." Ibn al-Anbari narrated something similar on the authority of Anas. Ahmad and al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Anas as well: "The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Abu Bakr, Umar and Uthman used to recite Malik with an alif." Saeed ibn Mansur narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Umar, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. Waki' also narrated something similar in his Tafsir, Abd ibn Humayd and Abu Dawud on the authority of al-Zuhri, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abd al-Razzaq also narrated it in his Tafsir, Abd ibn Humayd and Abu Dawud on the authority of Ibn al-Musayyab, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. This has been narrated through many chains of transmission, so it is more reliable than the first. Al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it on the authority of Abu Hurayrah: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to recite Malik the Day of Judgment." At-Tabarani narrated it in al-Kabeer likewise on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Ibn Jarir and al-Hakim narrated it and authenticated it on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions that they interpreted the Day of Judgment as the Day of Reckoning. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it likewise on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Abdul Razzaq, Abdul Bin Hamid, and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada, who said: The Day of Judgment is the day on which God will judge His servants according to their deeds.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

4. His saying Master of the Day of Judgment Asim, Al-Kisa'i and Ya'qub read: Master and the others read: King. Some people said: Their meaning is one, like Farheen and Farheen, and Hadheereen and Hadheereen and their meaning is the Lord. It is said: The owner and king is the one who is able to create things from nothingness to existence and no one is able to do that except God. Abu Ubaidah said: Malik is more comprehensive and broader because it is said: The owner of the slave, the bird and the beasts, and it is not said: The king of these things. Because he does not own something except that he owns it, and he may own something without owning it. Some people said: King is more appropriate because every king is a king, but not every king is a king, and because it is more consistent with the rest of the Qur'an, such as the Almighty's saying: So exalted is God, the True King (Ta-Ha: 114), The Holy King (al-Hashr 59:23). Mujahid said: Religion is the reckoning. God the Almighty said: That is the right religion (al-Tawbah 9:36), meaning the straight reckoning. And King of mankind Surat An-Nas, Ibn Abbas, Muqatil, and As-Suddi said: King of the Day of Judgment is the Judge of the Day of Judgment. Qatada said: Religion is the recompense. It applies to recompense in both good and evil. It is said: As you judge, you will be judged.

Muhammad bin Kaab Al-Qurazi said: A king on a day when nothing will be of any use except religion. Yaman bin Rabab said: Religion is subjugation. It is said: I subdued him and he became humiliated. It is also said: Religion is obedience, meaning the day of obedience. The Day of Judgment was specifically mentioned, even though He is the Owner of all days, because on that day all possessions will vanish, and there will be no possession or command except His. God Almighty said: The sovereignty on that Day belongs to the Most Gracious 26 - Al-Furqan and He said: Whose sovereignty is this Day? To God, the One, the Prevailing 16 - Ghafir and He said: And the command on that Day belongs to God 19 - Al-Infitar. Abu Amr read: (The Most Merciful is the Owner) by assimilating the meem into the meem. Likewise, he assimilates every two letters of the same type or one place of articulation or two places of articulation close to each other, whether the letter is silent or moving, except if the first letter is doubled or tanween or defective or open or the letter taa' before it is silent and not like two, then he does not assimilate them. The assimilation of the moving letter occurs in the major assimilation. Hamza agreed with him in assimilation of the moving letter in his saying: The house of a group 81 - An-Nisa, And those who scatter in rows * And those who drive away with a rebuke * And those who recite the remembrance 1-3 As-Saffat, And those who scatter scattered 1- Adh-Dhariyat He assimilated the ta' with the letters that follow it. Al-Kisa'i and Hamza agreed with him in the small assimilation, which is the assimilation of a consonant with a moving letter except for the ra' with the lam and the dal with the jim. Likewise, Hamza does not assimilate - according to the narration of Khallad and Khalaf - the dal with the seen, sad, and zay. There is no assimilation for the rest of the reciters except in a few letters.

4- Master of the Day of Judgment is the reading of Asim, Al-Kisa'i and Ya'qub, and it is supported by the Almighty's saying: The Day when no soul will possess anything for another, and the command that Day will belong to God. The rest read king. This is the preferred reading because it is the reading of the people of the Two Holy Mosques and because of the Almighty's saying: Whose is the kingdom today? And because of the glorification. The owner is the one who disposes of the owned objects as he wishes from the kingdom. The king is the one who disposes of the command and prohibition of those commanded from the kingdom. It was read with the lightening and king with the word of the work. And Malik in the accusative for praise or the state, and Malik in the nominative with the tanween and added as the predicate of a deleted subject, and Malik added with the nominative and accusative. And the Day of Judgment and from it As you judge, you will be judged and the verse of enthusiasm:

There is nothing left but aggression, approach them as they approach

The active participle is added to the circumstance, making it act as a direct object, as in their saying: O thief of the house tonight, and its meaning is: the king of affairs on the Day of Judgment, in the manner of And they called out to the companions of Paradise. Its beginning is on this day, in the manner of continuity, so that the addition is real and prepared for its occurrence as an attribute of knowledge. It was said: The religion is the Sharia, and it was said: obedience. The meaning is the Day of Recompense for Religion, and the specification of the Day with the addition: either to magnify it, or to make Him the only One who has authority over it, and to apply these descriptions to God the Most High, that He is the Creator of the worlds, their Lord, bestowing upon them all blessings, apparent and hidden, immediate and deferred, and the Owner of their affairs on the Day of Reward and Punishment, to indicate that He is the One who is worthy of praise, no one is more deserving of it than Him, rather no one truly deserves it except Him, for the ruling being based on the description indicates its causality for him, and to indicate through the concept that whoever is not described by those descriptions does not deserve to be praised, let alone worshipped, so it is evidence for what comes after it. The first description is to clarify what necessitates praise, which is creation and nurturing. The second and third are to indicate that He is generous with that and has chosen it, and it does not issue from Him for an obligation in itself or an obligation upon Him as a matter of previous deeds so that He deserves praise by it. The fourth is to realize the exclusivity, for it is something in which no one can be partnered in any way, and to include the promise for those who praise and the threat for those who turn away.

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:5

You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help.

Surat al-Fatihah 1:5

You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help) meaning we single you out for worship, whether it is monotheism or other things, and we ask for help in worship and other things.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: The interpretation of his saying, You alone do we worship is: To You, O God, we humble ourselves, submit, and submit, in acknowledgment of Your Lordship, O our Lord, and not to anyone else.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Amara told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Say, O Muhammad, You alone we worship. You alone we make one, fear, and hope in, O our Lord, and none other than You.

This is from the statement of Ibn Abbas with the meaning of what we have said. Rather, we chose to explain its interpretation as meaning we are humble, submissive and submissive, without explaining it as meaning we hope and fear, even though hope and fear do not occur except with humiliation because servitude, according to all Arabs, is originally humiliation, and they call the easy path that has been trodden by feet and made easy by travelers: paved. And from that is the statement of Tarafa bin al-Abd:

I compete with the saved ones, and I follow one job after another above the temple of Moor.

Meaning by Al-Mawr: the road. And by Al-Ma'bad: the tamed and trampled. From this, the camel that is tamed for riding for needs is called: Ma'bad. From this, the slave is called a slave because of his humility to his master. The evidence for this from the poetry and speech of the Arabs is more than can be counted, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for whoever is guided to understand it, God willing.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And You alone we seek help.

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of his saying, And You alone we seek for help is: And You alone, our Lord, we seek for help in our worship of You and our obedience to You in all our affairs, and no one else but You, since whoever disbelieves in You seeks help in his affairs from his idols whom he worships, instead of You, and we seek help from You in all our affairs, sincerely worshipping You.

Like what Abu Kuraib told us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said: Bishr bin Amara told us, he said: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas: And You alone we seek for help, he said: You alone we seek for help in obeying You and in all our affairs.

If someone were to say: What is the meaning of God's command to His servants to ask Him for help in obeying Him? Or is it permissible, since He has commanded them to obey Him, that He does not help them in this? Or does a person say to his Lord: We seek Your help in obeying You, except that He is also responsible for what He says? And that is obedience. So what is the point of a servant asking his Lord for what He has given him?

It was said: The interpretation of that is not in the way you have gone to, but rather the one who calls upon his Lord from the believers to help him in obeying Him, is calling upon Him to help him in what remains of his life in what He has charged him with of obedience to Him, not what has been completed and passed of his righteous deeds in what has passed of his life. And it is permissible for the servant to ask his Lord for that, because God giving his servant that while enabling his limbs to perform what He has charged him with of obedience to Him, and has imposed upon him of His obligations, is a favor from Him, may He be glorified, and a favor from Him to him, and a kindness from Him to him in him. And in His not spitting on some of His servants with success while His servant is busy with disobeying Him and turning away from His love, nor in His extending His favor to some of them, while the servant exhausts himself in loving Him and hastens to obey Him, there is no corruption in management, nor injustice in judgment, so it is permissible for an ignorant person to ignore the position of God's judgment in His matter to his servant by asking him to help him in obeying Him.

In the command of God, the Most High, to His servants to say: You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help, meaning their asking Him for help in worship, is the clearest evidence of the corruption of the statement of those who say that it is delegated from the people of predestination, who consider it impossible for God to command any of His servants to do something, or to charge him with an obligatory task, except after giving him help in doing it or leaving it. If what they said about that was as they said, then the desire to ask God for help in obeying Him would be invalidated. Since according to their statement, with the existence of the command, prohibition, and obligation, it is a right that is obligatory upon God for the servant to give him help in it, whether his servant asks Him for that or leaves off asking for that. Rather, leaving Him off from giving that to him, according to them, is injustice. If the matter in that was as they said, then the one who says: You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help, would only be asking his Lord not to be unjust.

The consensus of all Muslims on the correctness of the statement of the one who says: O God, we seek Your help, and their error in the statement of the one who says: O God, do not bring evil upon us, is clear evidence of the error of what those whose statement you described said. For their interpretation of the statement of the one who says: O God, we seek Your help, O God, do not abandon our help, which You abandoned, is injustice from You.

If someone were to say: How is it that it was said: You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help, and the report about worship was presented, and the issue of assistance in it was delayed after it? Worship is only through assistance, so the issue of assistance was more deserving of being presented before the one being assisted in the work and worship through it.

It was said: Since it is known that there is no way for the servant to worship except with the help of God, the Most High, and it is impossible for the servant to be a worshipper except that he is assisted in worship, and for him to be assisted in it except that he is the doer of it, it is the same to give precedence to what he gave before the other. It is the same as if you say to a man when he fulfills your need and he is kind to you in fulfilling it: You fulfilled my need and you were kind to me, so you give precedence to mentioning his fulfilling your need, or you say: You were kind to me and I fulfilled my need, so you give precedence to mentioning the kindness before mentioning the fulfillment of the need. Because there is no one who fulfills your need except that he is kind to you, and no one who is kind to you except that he is fulfilling your need. Likewise it is the same for someone to say: O God, we worship You, so help us in worshipping You, and to say: O God, help us in worshipping You, for we worship You.

Abu Jaafar said: Some of the heedless people thought that this was from the word al-muqaddam which means al-tadda', as Imru' al-Qais said:

Even if what I seek for the minimum living is enough for me, and I do not ask for a little money

He means by this: A little money is enough for me and I did not ask for much. This is from the meaning of precedence and postponement, and from the similarity of the verse of Imru' al-Qais with isolated. Because a little money may be enough for him and he asks for much, the existence of what is enough for him does not require him to abandon asking for much. So it is like the worship that with its existence there is assistance for it, and with the existence of assistance for it there is its existence, so mentioning one of them indicates the other, so it is balanced in the correctness of the speech to present what was presented from them before its companion, that it be placed in its degree and arranged in its rank.

If he said: What is the reason for repeating You with His saying: We seek help, and this was mentioned before We worship, and why was it not said: You we worship and seek help, since the one being reported as the one being worshipped is the one being reported as the one being sought for help?

It was said to him: The kaf that is with iya is the kaf that was connected to the verb, I mean in his saying na'budu, if it was delayed after the verb. It is a metaphor for the name of the addressee that is accusative with the verb, so it is often with iya advanced, since

If the names were isolated by themselves, they would not be in the speech of the Arabs on one letter.

Since the Kaf in Iyyaka! is a metaphor for the name of the addressee, which would have been a Kaf alone connected Indeed, if it comes after the verb, then it was better to repeat it with every verb it was connected to, so it was said: O God, we worship You, seek Your aid, praise You, and thank You. This was more eloquent in the speech of the Arabs than to say: O God, we worship You, seek Your aid, and praise! It was also the case that if a pronoun of the name of the addressee was presented before the verb connected to iya, it was more eloquent to repeat it with every verb. Just as it was eloquent in speech to repeat it with every verb if it came after the verb connected to it, because leaving it out was permissible.

And he who did not look carefully thought that repeating Iyyaka with We seek help after it preceded it in His saying Iyyaka

We worship, meaning the words of Adi bin Zaid Al-Abbadi:

And He made the sun a place of refuge, between which there is no concealment, and He has separated the day from the night.

As Asha Hamdan says:

Between the trees and Qais, he is lavish, generous, to his father and to his newborn.

This is due to the ignorance of its speaker, because the word you is repeated with every action, as we described earlier.

From the cause, and that is not a clear ruling, because it is not - since it requires two - except a repetition if it is repeated, since it is not unique to one. And if it is unique to one of the two names, in the case of requiring two, the speech would be as if it were impossible. That is because if a speaker said: Why! The sun separated the day, it would be a contradiction from the speech, because the speech is lacking from what is needed for it, from its completion that is required by the two.

If the speaker said: O God, You alone we worship, that would be a complete statement. Thus it is known that the need of every

The word You alone we worship was similar to You alone we worship and that it is correct to be with it.

9 Beware, since each word of it is a sentence that is a predicate and a subject, and we have explained the ruling on the contradiction of that with a clear ruling, in what is in agreement between them that which we have described his statement.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Twenty-third: The Almighty's saying: You alone do we

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:5

You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help.

worship returns from the third person to the second person in the second person, because from the beginning of the surah to here it is report about God Almighty and praise of Him, like His saying: And their Lord will give them a pure drink. Then He said: Indeed, this was a reward for you. And the opposite is: Until, when you were in the ships and they sailed with them, as will come. And we worship means we obey, and worship is obedience and humility. And a paved path is if it is easy for those who follow it, as Al-Harawi said. And the one charged with it utters an acknowledgment of the Lordship and the realization of His worship of God Almighty, since all people worship other than Him, such as idols and other things. And You alone do we seek help means we seek help, support and success.

Al-Salami said in his Haqiq: I heard Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Shadhan say: I heard Abu Hafs Al-Farghani say: Whoever recites You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help is absolved of the report and predestination.

Twenty-fourth: If it is said: Why did the object come before the verb? It is said: It came first out of interest, and it is the custom of the Arabs to come first. It is said that an Arab insulted another, so the insulted person ignored him, so the insulter said to him: I mean you. The other person said to him: Ignore you, so they brought first the important thing. Also, so that the mention of the servant and worship does not precede the one worshipped, so it is not permissible to say: We worship You and seek Your help, nor we worship You and seek Your help, so the verb is brought first before the implied object, but rather it follows the wording of the Qur'an. Al-Ajjaj said:

I call upon you, so accept my supplication, forgive my sins, and increase my prayers.

It is narrated: And fruit. As for the poet's saying:

To you until I reached you

It is anomalous and cannot be used as a standard. Waraq, with a kasra on the ra', is from dirhams, and with a fatha on it, it is money. The name was repeated so that it would not be thought that it is You we worship and that we seek other than You.

Twenty-fifth: The majority of reciters and scholars stress the Ya' of Iyyaka in both places. Amr ibn Fa'id read: Iyyaka with a kasra over the hamza and a light Ya', because he disliked doubling the Ya' due to its heaviness and the Kasra being before it. This is a desirable reading, because the meaning becomes: Your sun we worship or your light, and Iyyat al-Shams with a kasra over the hamza means its light, and it may be opened. He said:

The sun made it rain on him, but his gums were sore that he did not smear them with kohl.

If you drop the ha', it is extended. It is said: Al-iyāh is for the sun, like halā is for the moon, which is the circle around it. Al-Fadl Al-Raqashi read:

Iyyak with the hamza open is a well-known language. Abu Al-Suwar Al-Ghanawi read: Hayyak in both places, and it is a language. He said:

In you and the matter that if its resources expand, its sources will become narrow for you

Twenty-sixth: And You alone we seek help.

Attaching one sentence to another. Yahya ibn Waththab and Al-A'mash read: ناستاعين with a kasra on the noon, which is the language of Tamim, Asad, Qais and Rabi'ah, to indicate that it is from ista'an, so the noon was broken like the alif of connection. The root of ناستاعون ناستاعين, the vowel of the waw was changed to the 'ayn so it became a ya', and the infinitive is ista'anah, and the root is ista'wan, the vowel of the waw was changed to the 'ayn so it became an alif. Two quiescent letters do not meet, so the second alif was deleted because it is extra, and it was said the first because the second is for the meaning, and the ha' was kept instead.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The seven and the majority read it with emphasis on the ya' of 'Iyyaka', and 'Amr ibn Fayed read it with emphasis on the ya' with kasra, which is an anomalous reading that is rejected because 'Iyyaka' is the light of the sun. Some of them read 'Iyyaka' with an open hamza and emphasis on the ya', and some of them read 'Hayyaka' with a ha' instead of a hamza, as the poet said:

So, go ahead and do something that, if its resources expand, its sources will become narrow for you.

We use the opening of the letter nun at the beginning of the word in the reading of everyone except Yahya bin Waththab and Al-A'mash, as they both closed it. This is the language of Banu Asad, Rabi'ah, and Banu Tamim. In the language, worship comes from humiliation. It is said, a paved road and a paved camel, meaning tamed. In Islamic law, it is an expression that combines the perfection of love, submission, and fear. The object, which is You, was presented and repeated for emphasis and limitation, meaning we worship none but You and we rely only on You. This is the perfection of obedience, and the whole religion goes back to these two meanings. This is as some of the predecessors said: Al-Fatihah is the secret of the Qur'an, and its secret is this word: You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. The first is disavowal of polytheism, and the second is disavowal of power, strength, and delegation to God Almighty. This meaning is found in more than one verse in the Qur'an, as God Almighty said: "So worship Him and put your trust in Him. And your Lord is not unaware of what you do." "Say: He is the Most Gracious. We have believed in Him, and upon Him we rely." "Lord of the East and the West. There is no god but He, so take Him as Disposer of affairs." Likewise this noble verse: You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. The speech changed from the third person to the direct person with the letter kaf of address, and this is appropriate because when he praised God, it was as if he drew near and was present before God Almighty.

For this reason, he said: You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. In this is evidence that the beginning of the surah is report from God Almighty praising His noble self with His beautiful attributes and guidance for His servants that They praise Him for that, and for this reason the prayer of one who does not say that and is able to do so is not valid, as came in the two Sahihs on the authority of Ubadah ibn al-Samit, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: There is no prayer for one who does not recite the Opening of the Book. And in Sahih Muslim on the authority of al-Ala' ibn Abd al-Rahman, the freed slave of al-Harqah, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, "God the Most High says: I have divided the prayer between Me and My servant into two halves, so half of it is for Me and half of it is for My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for. When the servant says, 'Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds,' God says: My servant has praised Me. When he says, 'Master of the Day of Judgment,' God says: My servant has glorified Me. When he says, 'You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help,' God says: This is between Me and My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for. When he says, 'Guide us to the straight path * The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have evoked [Your] anger or of those who have gone astray,' He says: This is for My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for." And Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, You alone do we worship means that we make You One, fear You, and hope in You, O God. Our Lord, there is none but You. And You alone do we ask for help to obey You and in all our affairs. Qatada said: You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help He orders you to devote your worship to Him and to seek His help in your affairs. He only mentioned You alone do we worship before You alone do we ask for help because worshipping Him is the intended purpose and seeking help is a means to it. Concern and firmness mean presenting what is most important first, and God knows best. If it is said: What is the meaning of the letter nun in the Almighty's statement: You alone do we worship and You alone do we ask for help? If it is for the plural, then the motive is one, and if it is for glorification, then it is not appropriate for this situation? It was answered that what is meant by that is to inform about the type of worshippers and the one praying is an individual among them, especially if he is in a group or their imam, so he informed about himself and his believing brothers in the worship for which they were created and he interceded for them with goodness. Some of them said that it is permissible for it to be for glorification as if the servant has it. It was said that if you are inside worship, then you are noble and your position is broad, so say You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. And if you are outside worship, then do not say We or We did even if you were among a hundred thousand or a thousand thousand because everyone needs God Almighty and is poor in Him. Some of them said You alone we worship is more gentle in humility than You alone our servant because in the second there is glorification of himself from making himself alone worthy of the worship of God Almighty, whom no one can worship as He should be worshipped nor praise Him as befits Him. And worship is a great station in which the servant is honored because of his relation to the side of God Almighty, as some of them said:

Do not call me except by the name of Abdha, for it is the most honorable of my names.

God called His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, His servant in the most honorable of his stations, saying: Praise be to God, who sent down the Book to His servant "And when the servant of God stood up to call upon Him," Glory be to Him who took His servant by night. So He called him a servant when it was sent down to him and when he stood up to call upon Him and took him by night, and He guided him to perform worship at times when his chest is constricted by the denial of the opponents, as He says: "And We certainly know that your breast is constrained by what they say. So glorify the praises of your Lord and be among those who prostrate. And worship your Lord until there comes to you the certainty." Al-Razi narrated in his interpretation from some of them that the station of servitude is more honorable than the station of messengership because worship issues from creation to the Truth and the message is from the Truth to creation. He said: And because God takes care of the interests of His servant and the Messenger takes care of the interests of his nation, this statement is wrong and the guidance is also weak and has no basis, and Al-Razi did not address it by weakening or rejecting it. Some Sufis said that worship is either to obtain reward or to ward off punishment. They said: This is not futile because its purpose is to obtain its purpose. Or to be honored by the duties of God Almighty, and this is also weak in their view. Rather, the highest is to worship God for His sacred essence described as perfect. They said, For this reason, the one praying says, 'I pray to God.' If it were to obtain reward and ward off punishment, the prayer would be invalid. Others responded to them and said, "Worship being for God Almighty does not contradict seeking reward with it or warding off punishment, as that Bedouin said, 'As for me, I do not like your humming or Muadh's humming, I only ask God for Paradise and seek refuge in Him from the Fire.' So the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, 'We hum around it.'"

Fath al-Qadir

5- You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help The reading of the seven and others is with emphasis on the Ya, and Amr bin Fayed read it with a light Ya with a Kasra, and Al-Fadl and Al-Raqashi read it with a Fatha on the Hamza, and Abu Al-Suwar Al-Ghanawi read Hayyak in both places, and it is a well-known language. The separate pronoun is Iya and what follows it from Kaf, Ha and Ya are letters to indicate address, absence and speaking, and they have no place in grammar as the majority have gone to, and its presentation before the verb is for the purpose of exclusivity, and it was said: for attention, and the correct view is that it is for both of them and there is no conflict between the requirements. The meaning is: We single you out for worship and single you out for help, we do not worship anyone other than you nor do we ask for help from him, and worship is the utmost goal of submission and humility. Ibn Kathir said: In the Shariah, it is an expression of what combines the perfection of love, submission and fear, and the shift from absence to address is intended to attract attention, because when speech is transferred from one style to another, it is better to soften the listener's energy and more awakening for him, as established in the science of semantics. The use of the letter nun in the two verbs is intended to inform the caller about himself and his kind of servants. It was said that since the situation was great, one person could not do it alone, belittling and belittling himself. The use of the letter nun is intended to be humble, not to glorify the self. Worship was presented before seeking help because the first is a means to the second, and presenting means is a reason for achieving demands, and seeking help is used in generalization. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, You alone we worship: meaning we unify and fear, O our Lord, and none other than You, and You alone we seek help in obeying You and in all our affairs. Ibn Kathir narrated on the authority of Qatadah that he said regarding You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help: He orders you to devote worship to Him and to seek His help in your affairs. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Al-Mu'alla bin Abd Al-Rahman, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: "God Almighty says: I have divided the prayer between Me and My servant into two halves, one half for Me and the other half for My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for. When the servant says, 'Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds,' He says: My servant has praised Me. And when he says, 'The Most Gracious, the Most Merciful,' He says: My servant has extolled Me. When he says, 'Master of the Day of Judgment,' He says: My servant has glorified Me. When he says, 'You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help,' He says: This is between Me and My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for. When he says, 'Guide us to the straight path, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have evoked [Your] anger or of those who have gone astray,' He says: This is for My servant, and My servant shall have what he asks for." Abu al-Qasim al-Baghawi and al-Bawardi together narrated in Ma'rifat al-Sahaba, and al-Tabarani in al-Awsat, and Abu Na'im in al-Dala'il on the authority of Anas ibn Malik on the authority of Abu Talha, who said: "We were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, on a raid, and he encountered the enemy, and I heard him say: 'O Master of the Day of Judgment, You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help.' He said: 'I saw men being struck down, and the angels were harming them from before them and behind them.'"

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:5

You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

5. His saying: You alone do we worship. (You alone) is a pronoun word that is specifically added to the pronoun and is used before the verb. So it is said: You alone I mean, and You alone I ask. It is not used after except separately. So it is said: I meant none but You.

His saying: We worship means we make You One and obey You submissively. Worship is obedience with humility and submission. The servant is called a servant because of his humility and submission. It is said: a paved path, meaning a smooth one.

And You alone we seek for help. We ask You for help in our worship and in all our affairs. If it is said: Why did He mention worship before seeking help, and seeking help comes before worship? This is why it is necessary to make the ability come before the action. And we, praise be to God, make success and seeking help with the action, so there is no difference between bringing it forward and delaying it. It is said: Seeking help is a type of worship, so it is as if He mentioned the entirety of worship first, then mentioned its details.

5- You alone we worship and You alone we ask for help. Then, when the Truthful One was mentioned with praise, and was described with great attributes that distinguish Him from all other entities, and knowledge was related to a specific known thing, He was addressed with that, that is: O He whose status is this, we single You out for worship and help, so that it would be more indicative of the specialization, and to advance from proof to the visible and move from the absent to the witnessed, so it is as if the known has become visible and the intelligible has become witnessed and the absent has become present. He built the beginning of the speech on what are the principles of the state of the knower of remembrance and contemplation of His names and consideration of His favors and reasoning with His works on the greatness of His status and the dazzling of His power, then He followed it with what is the ultimate goal of his affair, which is that he wades into the abyss of attainment and becomes one of the people of witnessing, so he sees Him clearly and communes with Him verbally.

O God, make us among those who reach the eye and not the listeners of the effect. It is the custom of the Arabs to be creative in speech and to switch from one style to another to soften it and energize the listener, so he switches from addressing to absent, and from absent to speaking and vice versa, as in the saying of the Most High: Until, when you were in the ships and they sailed with them and His saying: And God is He who sends the winds, and they stir up the clouds, and We drive them and the saying of Imru' al-Qais:

Your night is long with kohl, and your friend sleeps, but you do not sleep

And he spent the night, and he had a night of blindness and sore eyes

This is from a report that came to me and I heard it from Abu Al-Aswad.

Iya is a separate accusative pronoun, and what follows it of ya, kaf, and ha are letters added to indicate speaking, addressing, and absenting, and they have no syntactic position, like ta in anta and kaf in ara'aytuk. Al-Khalil said: Iya is an object of it, and he provided evidence with what he narrated from some Arabs: If a man reaches sixty, then Iya and Iya" are the young women, but this is anomalous and cannot be relied upon. It was said: They are the pronouns, and "Iya is a mainstay, because when it is separated from the factors, it is difficult to pronounce it alone, so Iya" is added to it to make it stand alone. It was said: The pronoun is the whole. "Iyyak was read with a fatha on the ha and Iyyak" with a ha' changed to it.

Worship: the ultimate level of submission and humility. From this comes the word paved road, meaning easy, and the word thawb means a garment of worship, if it is extremely impudent. Therefore, it is only used in submission to God Almighty.

And seeking assistance: asking for help, which is either necessary or non-necessary. Necessary is that without which the action cannot be done, such as the ability of the doer and his imagination, and the availability of a tool and material with which to do it. When he has gathered them, the man is described as having the ability and it is valid for him to be tasked with the action. Non-necessary is obtaining what makes the action easy and simple, such as a mount for a journey for someone who is able to walk, or brings the doer close to the action and urges him to do it. This category does not depend on the validity of the task. What is meant is asking for help in all important matters, or in performing acts of worship. The hidden pronoun in the two actions is for the reader and those with him from the memorizers and those present for the congregational prayer, or for him and for all the monotheists. He included His worship in the folds of their worship and mixed His need with their need so that it might be accepted with its blessing and answered. For this reason, the group was legislated and the object was presented for the sake of glorification and attention to it and to indicate exclusivity. For this reason, Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: Its meaning is that we worship You and we do not worship anyone other than You. And presenting what is presented in existence and drawing attention to the fact that the worshipper should look at the worshipped One first and foremost, and from Him to worship, not from the perspective that it is worship that came from Him, but from the perspective that it is a noble relation to Him and a noble connection between him and the Truth. For the knower only has the right to reach Him if he is absorbed in observing the side of the Holy and is absent from what is other than Him, until he does not observe himself or any of his states except from the perspective that it is observing Him and related to Him. For this reason, He preferred what God narrated about His Beloved when He said: Do not be sad, God is with us, over what He narrated about His interlocutor when He said: Indeed, with me is my Lord; He will guide me. And He repeated the pronoun to emphasize that He is the One sought for help and no one else, and worship was presented before seeking help so that the heads of the verses would be consistent. It is known that presenting the means before the request for need is more appropriate. I say: When the speaker attributed worship to himself, this suggested arrogance and pride on what he issues, so he followed it with his saying: And You we seek for help to indicate that worship is also something that is not completed or established except with His help and guidance. It was said: The waw is for the state and the meaning is we worship You seeking help from You. And it was read with a kasra on the nun in both of them, and this is the language of Banu Tamim, as they break the letters of the present tense except for the ya' if what follows it is not dhammah.

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:6
Guide us to the straight path.

Surat al-Fatihah 1:6

Guide us to the straight path.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Guide us to the straight path) i.e. guide us to it

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of his saying, Guide us to the straight path, in this context, according to us, is: grant us success in remaining steadfast on it, as was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas:

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Amara told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Say, O Muhammad, guide us to the straight path. He said: Inspire us with the guiding path.

And His inspiring him with that is His granting him success, as we have said in its interpretation. Its meaning is similar to the meaning of His saying, You alone we ask for help, in that it is the servant's asking his Lord for help to remain steadfast in acting in obedience to Him, and to attain the truth and correctness in what He has commanded him to do and what He has forbidden him to do, in what will come of his life, not in what has passed of his deeds, and what has been accomplished in what has preceded of his life. Like His saying, You alone we ask for help, it is His asking his Lord for help to perform what He has charged him with in obedience, in what remains of his life.

The meaning of the words was: O God, we worship You alone, with no partner for You, devoting our worship to You alone, without any gods or idols besides You. So help us to worship You, and guide us to the path and method that You guided those whom You bestowed favor upon from among Your prophets and the people of Your obedience.

If someone says: How did you find guidance in the speech of the Arabs in the sense of success?

It was said to him: That is more in her speech and more evident than to count the number of evidences that came from them in that regard.

This is what the poet said:

Do not deprive me, may God guide you, of my question, and do not let me be like someone who has been lost due to travel.

He means: May God grant you success in fulfilling my need. And from this is the saying of another:

Do not rush me, O King, for every situation has its own words.

It is known that he only meant: May God guide you to the truth in my matter.

And from this is the saying of God, the Most High: And God does not guide the wrongdoing people (Al Imran 3:86) in more than one verse of His revelation. It is known from this that He did not mean that He does not explain to the wrongdoers what is obligatory upon them from His obligations. How can that be its meaning, when He has made the explanation general to all of His creation who are accountable? Rather, He, the Most High, the Most Great, meant that He does not guide them, nor does He open their hearts to the truth and faith.

Some of them claimed that the interpretation of his saying guide us is: increase our guidance.

This statement is not without one of two things: Either the speaker thought that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, ordered him to ask his Lord for more clarification, or for more assistance and success.

If he thought that he was ordered to ask for more clarification, then that is baseless. Because God, the Most High, does not charge a servant with an obligation of His obligations except after explaining it to him and establishing proof against him with it. If that meant asking for clarification, then he would have been ordered to call upon his Lord to explain to him what He has imposed upon him, and that is a supplication that is not true, because He does not impose an obligation except by explaining it to the one who imposed it upon him. Or he would have been ordered to call upon his Lord to impose upon him the obligations that He has not imposed. In the corruption of the reason for the servant asking his Lord for that, there is what clarifies that the meaning of Guide us to the straight path is not the meaning of: Explain to us Your obligations and Your limits.

Or he may have thought that he was ordered to ask his Lord for more help and success. If that is the case, then his asking for that increase will not be without being a question for more help for what he has done in the past, or for what will happen. And in the servant's increasing need for help for what has been completed of his work, what is known is that the meaning of asking for that increase is only his asking for more for what will happen of his work. Since that is the case, the matter becomes what we have described and said about it: that it is the servant's asking his Lord for success in performing what he has been charged with of his obligations, in what will come of his life.

As for the validity of this, the statement of the people of predestination is corrupt, claiming that everyone who is commanded to do something or is charged with a duty has been given assistance in doing it, such that his need for his Lord has been removed in that duty. Because if the matter were as they said, the meaning of the statement of God Almighty would be invalidated: "You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help. Guide us to the straight path." As for the validity of this, as we have explained, their statement is corrupt.

Some of them claimed that the meaning of his saying, Guide us to the straight path is: Guide us to the path of Paradise in the Hereafter, i.e., bring us to it and proceed with us to it, as the Most High said: Then guide them to the path of Hellfire (al-Saffat 37:23), i.e., bring them into the Fire, as a woman is guided to her husband, meaning by that that she enters him, and as a gift is given to a man, and as the leg guides the foot, similar to the saying of Tarafa ibn al-Abd:

The torrents played with it after me and it ran in the splendor of its rain

A boy has a mind that lives with it, where his leg guides his foot.

Any resources are returned to it.

In the statement of God, the Most High, You alone do we worship, and You alone do we ask for help, there is evidence of the error of this interpretation, despite the evidence of the commentators' proof of its error. This is because all the commentators from the Companions and the Followers agree that the meaning of the path in this place is not the meaning that the one who said this statement interpreted, and that His statement, You alone do we ask for help, is a question from the servant to his Lord for help in his worship. Likewise, His statement, Guide us, is a question of steadfastness on guidance for the rest of his life.

The Arabs say: I showed someone the way, I showed him the way, I showed him the way, I showed him the way, if I directed him to it and made him straight to it. The Qur'an mentions all of this: God Almighty said: And they said, 'Praise be to God, who has guided us to this' (al-A'raf 7:43), and He said in another place: He chose him and guided him to a straight path (al-Nahl 16:121), and He said: Guide us to the straight path.

All of this is apparent in her logic and is present in her speech, including the poet's saying:

I ask forgiveness of God for a sin that I cannot count, Lord of the servants, to Him belongs the face and the work.

He means: I ask God's forgiveness for my sin, as God Almighty said: And ask forgiveness for your sin (Ghafir 40:55).

And from it is the saying of the genius of Banu Dhubyān:

The coquettish donkey hunts us with its presence before sleep, and the barking hyena

He means: He hunts for us. This is common in their poetry and speech, and what we have mentioned is sufficient.

Abu Jaafar said: The nation of interpreters has unanimously agreed that the straight path is the clear path that has no crookedness. This is also the case in the language of all Arabs, including the saying of Jarir ibn Atiyah al-Khatfi:

The Commander of the Faithful is on a straight path

when the sources are crooked

He means: on the path of truth. And from this is the saying of the Hudhali Abu Dhu'ayb:

We trampled their land with horses until we left it narrower than the path

And from it the saying of the rajaz poet:

He turned away from the straight path

The evidence for this is too numerous to count, and what we have mentioned is sufficient to avoid what we have omitted.

Then the Arabs borrowed the path and used it in every saying and action described as straight or crooked, so they described the straight as straight and the crooked as crooked.

What I think is more appropriate in interpreting this verse, I mean: Guide us to the straight path, is that it means: Guide us to remain steadfast in what You have approved of and guided those of Your servants upon whom You have bestowed favor, in word and deed, and that is the straight path. Because whoever is guided to what God has guided those of the prophets, the truthful, and the martyrs upon whom God has bestowed favor, has been guided to Islam, to believe in the messengers, to adhere to the Book, to act according to what God has commanded, to refrain from what He has forbidden, and to follow the path of the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him), and the path of Abu Bakr, Umar, Uthman, and Ali, and every righteous servant of God, and all of that is from the straight path.

The translators of the Qur'an differed regarding the meaning of the straight path. The meanings of all of them include what we have chosen as an interpretation of it.

Among what she said about this is what was narrated on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talib, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said, and mentioned the Qur'an, and said: It is the straight path.

Musa bin Abdul Rahman Al-Masruqi told us that: Hussain Al-Ja'fi told us, on the authority of Hamza Al-Zayyat, on the authority of Abu Al-Mukhtar Al-Ta'i, on the authority of my nephew Al-Harith, on the authority of Al-Harith, on the authority of Ali, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace.

And it was narrated on the authority of Ismail bin Abi Karima, who said: Muhammad bin Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Sinan, on the authority of Amr bin Marra, on the authority of Abu Al-Bukhtari, on the authority of Al-Harith, on the authority of Ali, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, the same.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Hamza Al-Zayyat told us, on the authority of Abu Al-Mukhtar Al-Ta'i, on the authority of the nephew of Al-Harith Al-A'war, on the authority of Al-Harith, on the authority of Ali, who said: The straight path is the Book of God, may He be exalted.

Guide us to the straight path.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Sufyan told us, and Muhammad bin Hamid Al-Razi told us: Mihran told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Mansur, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, who said: Abdullah said: The straight path is the Book of God.

Mahmoud bin Khaddash al-Talaqani told me: Hamid bin Abdul Rahman al-Ru'asi told us: Ali and al-Hasan, the sons of Salih, both told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Muhammad bin Aqil, on the authority of Jabir bin Abdullah: Guide us to the straight path. He said: Islam. He said: It is wider than what is between the heavens and the earth.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Amara told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad: Say, O Muhammad, Guide us to the straight path. He said: Inspire us with the guiding path, which is the religion of God, which has no crookedness.

Musa bin Sahl al-Razi told us: Yahya bin Awf told us, on the authority of al-Furat bin al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Maimun bin Mihran, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Guide us to the straight path, he said: That is Islam.

Mahmoud bin Khidash told me: Muhammad bin Rabia Al-Kalabi told us, on the authority of Ismail Al-Azraq, on the authority of Abu Omar Al-Bazzar, on the authority of Ibn Al-Hanafiyyah, regarding his statement, Guide us to the straight path, he said: It is the religion of God, which He does not accept from His servants other than it.

Musa bin Harun Al-Hamadani told me: Amr bin Talha Al-Qannad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Guide us to the straight path. He said: It is Islam.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ibn Abbas said regarding His statement: Guide us to the straight path, he said: the road.

Abdullah bin Katheer Abu Sudayf Al-Amili told us: Hashim bin Al-Qasim told us: Hamza bin Al-Mughirah told us, on the authority of Asim, on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, regarding his statement: Guide us to the straight path, he said: He is the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his two companions after him, Abu Bakr and Umar. He said: So I mentioned that to Al-Hasan, and he said: Abu Al-Aaliyah spoke the truth and gave sincere advice.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: Guide us to the straight path, he said: Islam.

Al-Muthanna told us: Abu Salih told us: Muawiyah bin Salih told me that Abd al-Rahman bin Jubair told him, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Nawas bin Sam'an al-Ansari, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: God has set forth an example of a straight path, and the path is Islam.

Al-Muthanna told us: Adam Al-Asqalani told us: Al-Layth told us, on the authority of Muawiyah bin Salih, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Jubayr bin Nafeer, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Nawas bin Sam'an Al-Ansari, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, similarly.

Abu Ja'far said: God described him as being upright because it is correct and there is no error in it. Some fools have claimed that God called him upright because he led his family to Paradise. This is an interpretation that is contrary to the interpretation of all the commentators, and the consensus of all of them on the contrary is sufficient evidence of his error.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Twenty-seventh: The Almighty's saying: Guide us to the straight path.

Guide us is a supplication and a desire from the one who is raised to the Lord, and the meaning is: Guide us to the straight path and show us to it, and show us the path of your guidance that leads to your intimacy and closeness. Some scholars said: So God, the Almighty, the Majestic, made the greatness of the supplication and its entirety subject to this Surah, half of it contains a collection of praise, and half of it contains a collection of needs, and He made this supplication in this Surah better than the one that the supplicant supplicates with because these words were spoken by the Lord of the Worlds, so you supplicate with a supplication that is His words that He spoke, and in the hadith:

Nothing is more honorable to God than supplication. It was said that the meaning is: Guide us by using the Sunnah in performing your obligations. It was also said that the origin of it is inclination, and from it is the saying of God the Almighty: Indeed, we have been guided to You, meaning we have inclined. And peace be upon him, he went out during his illness, swaying between two people, meaning swaying. And from it is the gift, because it inclines from one king to another. And from it is the gift for the animal that is driven to the sanctuary, so the meaning is inclined with our hearts to the truth. Al-Fudayl ibn Iyad said: The straight path is the path of Hajj, and this is specific, and the general is more appropriate. Muhammad ibn al-Hanafiyyah said about the saying of God the Almighty: Guide us to the straight path, it is the religion of God that He does not accept from His servants other than it. Asim al-Ahwal said on the authority of Abu al-Aliyah: The straight path is the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his two companions after him. Asim said, then he was killed for al-Hasan: Abu al-Aliyah says: The straight path is the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his two companions. He said: He was truthful and sincere.

Twenty-eighth: The root of the word Sirat in Arabic is road. Amer bin Tufail said:

We filled their land with horses until we left them more humiliated than the path.

Jarir said:

The Commander of the Faithful is on a straight path if the sources are crooked

Another said:

He turned away from the clear path

Al-Naqqash narrated: Sirat is the road in the language of the Romans. Ibn Atiyah said: This is very weak. It was read: Sirat with a s from istirat meaning to swallow, as if the road is swallowing whoever takes it. It was read between z and s and it was read with a z of pure z and the original s is s. Salamah narrated from Al-Farra' who said: Ziraat with a pure z is the language of Udhra, Kalb and Banu Al-Qain. He said: And these say for "more truthful: Azdaq. They also said: Al-Azd and Al-Assad, and lasqat bih and lasqat bih. Sirat is in the accusative case as the second object, because the verb from guidance is transitive to the second object with a preposition. God Almighty said: So guide them to the path of Hellfire. And without a preposition as in this verse. Straight is an attribute of the path, which is free of crookedness or deviation. From this is the saying of God Almighty: And this is My path, which is straight, so follow it. Its original form is mustaqim. The vowel was transferred to the qaf, and the waw was changed to a ya' because of the kasra of what preceded it.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The majority read it with the letter Sad, and it was read as Sirat, and it was read with the letter Zay. Al-Farra' said: It is the language of Banu Udhra and Banu Kalb. When the praise of the person being asked, may He be blessed and exalted, came before, it was appropriate to follow it with a question, as He said: Then half of it is for Me and half of it is for My servant, and for My servant is what he asks. This is the most perfect state of the questioner, that he praises his person being asked, then asks for his need and the need of his believing brothers by saying: Guide us to the straight path, because it is more successful for the need and more effective for the answer. For this reason, God guided to it because it is the most perfect. The question may be by informing about the state of the questioner and his need, as Moses, peace be upon him, said: My Lord, indeed I am, for whatever good You send down to me, in need. It was preceded by a description of the person being asked, as in the saying of Dhul-Nun: "There is no god but You, glory be to You. Indeed, I was among the wrongdoers." It may be by simply praising the person being asked, as in the saying of the poet:

Should I mention my need or is your modesty enough for me? Modesty is your nature.

If someone praises you one day, it is enough for him to be praised.

Guidance here means direction and success.

Guidance itself is transitive, as here: Guide us to the straight path, which includes the meaning of inspire us, "guide us," provide us, or give us. "And We showed him the two ways," meaning We showed him good and evil. It is transitive with to, as in the Almighty's statement: He chose him and guided him to a straight path, "So guide them to the path of Hellfire," meaning guidance and indication. Likewise, His statement: And indeed, you guide to a straight path. It is transitive with the preposition to, as in the statement of the people of Paradise: Praise be to God who has guided us to this, meaning He has guided us to this and made us worthy of it.

As for the straight path, Imam Abu Jaafar bin Jarir said: The nation of interpreters has unanimously agreed that the straight path is the clear path that has no crookedness in it, and this is in the language of the Arabs. Among this is what Jarir bin Atiyah Al-Khatfi said:

The Commander of the Faithful is on a straight path when the sources are crooked

He said: The evidence for this is too numerous to count. He said: Then the Arabs borrow the path and use it in every saying and action and description of straightness or crookedness, so they describe the straight with its straightness and the crooked with its crookedness. Then the expressions of the commentators of the predecessors and successors differed in the interpretation of the path, even though its result goes back to one thing, which is following God and the Messenger. It was narrated that it is the Book of God. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Al-Hasan bin Arfa told us, Yahya bin Yaman told me, on the authority of Hamza Al-Zayyat, on the authority of Saeed, who is the son of Al-Mukhtar Al-Ta'i, on the authority of the nephew of Al-Harith Al-A'war, on the authority of Al-Harith Al-A'war, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talib, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The straight path is the Book of God. Ibn Jarir narrated it in the same way from the hadith of Hamza bin Habib Al-Zayyat, and it was mentioned before in the virtues of the Qur'an in what Ahmad and Al-Tirmidhi narrated from the narration of Al-Harith Al-A'war from Ali, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And it is the strong rope of God, and it is the wise remembrance, and it is the straight path. It was narrated with a chain of transmission traceable back to Ali, may God be pleased with him, and it is more similar, and God knows best. Al-Thawri said, on the authority of Mansur, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, on the authority of Abdullah, who said: The straight path is the Book of God. It was said that it is Islam. Al-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Gabriel said to Muhammad, peace be upon them both: Say, O Muhammad, guide us to the straight path. He said: He inspired us with the guiding path, which is the religion of God, in which there is no crookedness. Maymun bin Mahran said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: Guide us to the straight path, that is, Islam. Ismail bin Abdul Rahman Al-Suddi Al-Kabir said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Guide us to the straight path, that is, Islam, which is wider than what is between the heavens and the earth. Ibn Al-Hanafiyyah said on the words of God the Almighty: Guide us to the straight path, that is, it is the religion of God, which He does not accept from His servants other than it. Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: Guide us to the straight path, that is, Islam. In this hadith narrated by Imam Ahmad in his Musnad, where he said: Al-Hasan bin Suwar Abu Al-Ala' told us, Laith, meaning Ibn Saad, told us, on the authority of Muawiyah bin Salih, that Abdul Rahman bin Jubayr bin Nufayr told him on the authority of his father on the authority of Al-Nawwas bin Sam'an on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "God has set forth an example: a straight path and on my sides a mountain." The path is two walls with open doors, and over the doors are lowered curtains. At the door of the path is a caller who says, O people, enter the path all together and do not deviate from it. A caller calls from above the path. When a person wants to open one of those doors, he says, Woe to you, do not open it, for if you open it, you will enter it. So the path is Islam, and the two walls are the limits of God and the open doors are the prohibitions of God. That caller at the head of the path is the Book of God, and the caller from above the path is the preacher of God in the heart of every Muslim." This is how Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated it from the hadith of Al-Layth ibn Sa'd with it. Al-Tirmidhi and Al-Nasa'i narrated it together on the authority of Ali ibn Hajar on the authority of Baqiyyah on the authority of Bujayr ibn Sa'd on the authority of Khalid ibn Ma'dan on the authority of Jubayr ibn Nufayr on the authority of Al-Nawwas ibn Sam'an with it. It is a good and sound chain of transmission, and God knows best. Mujahid said: Guide us to the straight path. He said: The truth. This is more comprehensive and there is no contradiction between it and what came before. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated from the hadith of Abu al-Nadr Hashim bin al-Qasim, Hamza bin al-Mughira told us, on the authority of Asim al-Ahwal, on the authority of Abu al-A'li, Guide us to the straight path. He said: It is the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his two companions after him. Asim said: We mentioned that to al-Hasan, and he said: Abu al-A'li spoke the truth and gave sincere advice. All of these sayings are correct and they are interconnected. Whoever follows Islam has followed the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and followed the example of those who came after him, Abu Bakr and Umar, and he has followed the truth. Whoever follows the truth has followed Islam, and whoever follows Islam has followed the Qur'an, which is the Book of God, His strong rope and His straight path. All of them are correct and confirm each other, and praise be to God. At-Tabarani said: Muhammad bin al-Fadl al-Saqti told us: Ibrahim bin Mahdi al-Masisi told us: Yahya bin Zakariya bin Abi Za'idah told us, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, on the authority of Abdullah, who said: The straight path upon which the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, left us. That is why Imam Abu Ja'far ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: "What I think is most deserving of the interpretation of this verse, I mean 'Guide us to the straight path', is that it means that we are guided to remain steadfast in what You have chosen and guided those of Your servants upon whom You have bestowed favor, in word and deed. That is the straight path, because whoever is guided to what those upon whom God has bestowed favors have been guided to, from among the prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous, has been guided to Islam, to believe in the messengers, to adhere to the Book, to act according to what God has commanded him to do, to refrain from what He has forbidden him from, and to follow the path of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the path of the four caliphs, and every righteous servant. All of that is from the straight path."

If it is said How can a believer ask for guidance at all times, whether in prayer or otherwise, while he is described as such? Is this a matter of obtaining the inevitable or not?

The answer is no, and if he did not need to ask for guidance day and night, God would not have guided him to that. The servant is in need of God at every hour and in every situation to establish him on guidance, to be steadfast in it, to gain insight, to increase it, and to continue on it. The servant does not possess any benefit or harm for himself except what God wills. So God guided him to ask Him at every time to provide him with assistance, steadfastness, and success. Happy is he whom God guides to ask, for He has guaranteed to answer the supplicant when he calls upon Him, especially the one in need, who is in need of Him at night and during the day. God the Almighty said: O you who have believed, believe in God and His Messenger and the Book which He sent down upon His Messenger and the Book which He sent down before (al-Baqarah 2:17). He commanded those who believed to believe, but that is not a matter of obtaining the inevitable, because what is meant is steadfastness, continuity, and persistence in the actions that help with that, and God knows best. God Almighty said, commanding His believing servants to say: "Our Lord, let not our hearts deviate after You have guided us and grant us from Yourself mercy. Indeed, You are the Bestower." Abu Bakr, may God be pleased with him, used to recite this verse in the third rak'ah of the Maghrib prayer after the Fatiha, secretly. So the meaning of God Almighty's saying, Guide us to the straight path, is to continue with us on it and do not deviate us to anything else.

Fath al-Qadir

6- Guide us to the straight path The majority read it with a sad, and they read sirat with a seen, and zarat with a zay, and guidance may not be able to do it by itself as here, and as in His statement: And We guided him to the two paths and it may be transitive with ila as in His statement: He chose him and guided him to a straight path "So guide them to the path of Hell And indeed you guide to a straight path" and it may be transitive with lam as in His statement: "Praise be to God who guided us to this Indeed this Qur'an guides to that which is most upright" Al-Zamakhshari said: Its origin is that it is transitive with lam or with ila, and it is guidance or success or inspiration or indication. Many of the later scholars differentiated between the meaning of the transitive by itself and the intransitive, so they said: The meaning of the first is indication, and the second is conveying. Asking for guidance from the guided one means asking for more, as in the Almighty's saying: And those who are guided - We will increase them in guidance 1:170. And those who strive for Us - We will surely guide them to Our ways 1:170. The path is the road. Ibn Jarir said: The entire nation of interpreters agreed that the straight path is the clear path with no crookedness in it, and it is like that in the language of all Arabs. He said: Then the Arabs borrow the path and use it to describe the straight path with its straightness and the crooked with its crookedness. Al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it and Al-Dhahabi commented on it on the authority of Abu Hurairah, "that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, read 'Guide us to the straight path' with a 'sad'." Saeed bin Mansour, Abd bin Hamid and Al-Bukhari in his history narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he read the path with a 'sin'. Ibn Al-Anbari narrated on the authority of Ibn Kathir that he used to read the path with a 'sin'. He also narrated on the authority of Hamza that he used to read the 'zarar' with a 'z'. Al-Farra' said: It is a language for 'Udhra, Kalb and Banu Qayn. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Guide us to the straight path meaning: Inspire us with your true religion. Ibn Jarir and Ibn al-Mundhir narrated something similar on his authority. Wakee', Abd ibn Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it on the authority of Jabir ibn Abdullah that he said: It is the religion of Islam and it is wider than what is between the heaven and the earth. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions narrated something similar as well. Ahmad, Al-Tirmidhi, who authenticated it, Al-Nasa'i, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Abu Al-Shaykh, Al-Hakim, who authenticated it, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman narrated on the authority of Al-Nawwas bin Sam'an on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "God has set forth an example of a straight path, and on both sides of the path are two walls in which there are open doors, and over the doors are lowered curtains, and at the door of the path is a caller saying: O people, enter the path all together and do not separate, and a caller calls from above the path, and when a person wants to open one of those doors, he says: Woe to you, do not open it, for if you open it, you will enter it." So the path is Islam, the two walls are the limits of God, the open doors are the prohibitions of God, and that caller at the head of the path is the Book of God, and the caller from above is the preacher of God Almighty in the heart of every Muslim. Ibn Kathir said after narrating it: Its chain of transmission is good and sound. And Wakee', Abd ibn

Humayd, Ibn al-Mundhir, Abu Bakr al-Anbari, al-Hakim who authenticated it, and al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab al-Iman narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud that he said: It is the Book of God. And Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn 'Adi, and Ibn 'Asakir narrated on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah that he said: It is the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) and his two companions after him. And al-Hakim narrated on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas something similar. And al-Qurtubi narrated on the authority of al-Fudayl ibn 'Iyad that he said: The straight path is the path of Hajj. He said: This is specific, but the general is more appropriate. And all that has been narrated in the interpretation of this verse, except for what has been narrated on the authority of al-Fudayl, some of it is true of others, for whoever follows Islam, the Quran, or the Prophet has followed the truth. Ibn Jarir mentioned something similar to this, saying: And what I think is most deserving of the interpretation of this verse, as a helper, is that you guide us to steadfastness in what you are pleased with, and guide those of your servants upon whom you have bestowed favor in word and deed. And that is the straight path, because whoever is guided to it from among those upon whom God has bestowed favor from among the prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous has been guided to Islam and to believing in the messengers, and to adhere to the Book, and to act in accordance with what God has commanded him to do and to refrain from what He has forbidden him from, and to follow the path of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the path of the four caliphs and every righteous servant, and all of that is from the straight path. End quote.

6. His saying "Guide us to the straight path" Guide us, guide us. Ali and Ubayy bin Ka'b said: Make us steadfast, as it is said to the Qa'im: Stand up until I return to you, meaning remain on what you are on. This supplication from the believers, despite their being on guidance, means steadfastness and means asking for more guidance, because the kindnesses and guidance from God the Most High are endless, according to the doctrine of the people of the Sunnah. (The path) and a path with a seen, narrated by Uways from Ya'qub, and it is the original, it was called a path because it guides the wayfarers, and it is read with a zay, and Hamza read it with a sham on the zay, and all of them are correct languages, and the choice is the sad, according to most readers, to agree with the Qur'an.

The straight path, Ibn Abbas and Jabir, may God be pleased with them, said: It is Islam, and this is the opinion of Muqatil. Ibn Masoud, may God be pleased with him, said: It is the Qur'an. It was narrated on the authority of Ali, may God be pleased with him, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: The straight path is the Book of God. Saeed bin Jubair, may God be pleased with him, said: The path to Paradise. Sahl bin Abdullah said: The path of the Sunnah and the community. Bakr bin Abdullah Al-Muzani said: The path of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. [Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Hasan said: The Messenger of God, his family and his two companions.] Its root in the language is the clear path.

6- "Guide us to the straight path" is a statement of the required assistance, as if he said: How can I help you? They said "Guide us." Or singling out what is the greatest purpose. Guidance is a gentle indication, and therefore it is used for good. The Almighty's saying: "So guide them to the path of Hellfire" is intended as a mockery. And from it is guidance and the guides of the wild animals for their introductions, and the verb from it is guidance, and its origin is to be transitive with lam, or to it is treated as a choice in the Almighty's saying: "And Moses chose his people." And the guidance of God Almighty is diverse in types that cannot be counted, as the Almighty said: "And if you should count the favors of God, you could not enumerate them." But it is limited to arranged types:

First: The abundance of powers by which a person is able to find his way to his interests, such as mental power, inner senses, and outer feelings.

The second: establishing the evidence that distinguishes between truth and falsehood, righteousness and corruption, and he referred to this when he said: And We guided him to the two ways and he said: As for Thamud, We guided them, but they preferred blindness to guidance.

Third: Guidance by sending messengers and revealing books, and this is what He meant by His saying: And We made them leaders guiding by Our command and His saying: Indeed, this Qur'an guides to that which is most upright.

Fourth: That He reveals the secrets of their hearts and shows them things as they are through revelation, inspiration, and true dreams. This is a category that is only attained by the prophets and saints, and He meant it by His statement: Those are the ones whom God has guided, so follow their guidance. And His statement: And those who strive for Us - We will surely guide them to Our ways. So what is requested is either an increase in what they have been given of guidance, or steadfastness in it, or attaining the ranks that are based on it. So when the one who knows God and has connected to Him says it, he means by it: Guide us to the path of walking in You so that You may erase from us the darkness of our conditions, and remove the veils of our bodies, so that we may be illuminated by the light of Your holiness and see You by Your light. The command and the supplication share the same wording and meaning, and they differ in their superiority and inferiority, and it was said: in their rank.

As-Sirat: from the verb sarat al-ta'am, meaning to swallow food, as if he is swallowing a passerby. That is why it is called luqman because he swallows it. As-Sirat is from changing the letter seen to a sad to match the letter ta' in emphasis. The letter sad may also be pronounced with a zay sound to be closer to the word it is replaced from. Ibn Kathir recited it with the narration of Qanbal from him, and Ruways from Ya'qub with the original, and Hamza with the ishmām, and the rest with the sad, which is the language of Quraysh. It is proven in Al-Imam and its plural is sirt like katab, and it is like the road in masculine and feminine.

The straight path means the level path, and what is meant by it is the path of truth. It was said that it is the religion of Islam.

Surat al-Fatihah 1:7

The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred Your wrath, nor of those who have gone astray.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And it is replaced with: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor with guidance and it is replaced with those connected to it not those upon whom You are angry and they are the Jews nor other than those astray and they are the Christians, and the point of the replacement is to indicate that those who are guided are not Jews or Christians and God knows best what is correct and to Him is the return and the destination, and may God's prayers and peace be upon our master Muhammad and his family and companions and peace be upon them abundantly always and forever, and God is sufficient for us and He is the best Disposer of affairs, and there is no power and no strength except with God, the Most High, the Almighty. [And from Sheikh Mahmoud Al-Rankousi, a more beautiful interpretation was mentioned in the summary of Ibn Kathir's interpretation, meaning that those upon whom You are angry are those who knew the truth and opposed it, as for those astray, they were not guided to the truth at all. Dar Al-Hadith]

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

And His statement, The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, is an explanation of the straight path, meaning that the path is when every path of truth is a straight path. So it was said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Say, O Muhammad: Guide us, O our Lord, to the straight path, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor through Your obedience and worship, from Your angels, Your prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous. This is similar to what our Lord, may He be glorified and exalted, said in His revelation: "And if they had done what they were instructed to do, it would have been better for them and a firmer position. And then We would have given them from Ourselves a great reward. And We would have guided them to a straight path. And whoever obeys God and the Messenger - those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor of the prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous." (An-Nisa': 66-69).

Abu Ja'far said: What Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his nation were commanded to ask of their Lord for guidance to the straight path is guidance to the path that God Almighty described. That path is the path of those whom God described in His revelation, and He promised whoever follows it and remains steadfast in it, obedient to God and His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, that He will lead him to their destinations, and God does not fail to fulfill His promise.

In a similar manner to what we said about that, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas and others:

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us: Uthman ibn Saeed told us: Bishr ibn Ammarah told us: Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor means: the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor through Your obedience and worship of the angels, prophets, truthful ones, martyrs, and righteous ones, who obeyed You and worshipped You.

Ahmad bin Hazim Al-Ghafari told me: Ubaidullah bin Musa told us, on the authority of Abu Jaafar, on the authority of Rabi': The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, he said: the prophets.

Al-Qasim told me, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ibn Abbas said: You have bestowed favor upon them, he said: the believers.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Waki' said: You have bestowed favor upon them, the Muslims.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid said regarding God's statement, The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, he said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those with him.

Abu Ja'far said: In this verse is clear evidence that the obedience of God, may He be glorified, is not attained by the obedient except by God's blessing upon them and His granting them success in it. Do they not hear Him say: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, and He attributes all that they did of guidance, obedience, and worship to being a blessing from Him upon them?

If someone were to say: Where is the rest of this report? You know that when someone says to another: I have bestowed a favor upon you, it implies a report of what He has bestowed upon him. So where is that report in His statement: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor? And what is that favor that He has bestowed upon them?

It was said to him: We have already explained in the past of this book of ours the Arabs' contention in their speech with some of the others, if the apparent part indicates the hidden part and is sufficient from it. So his saying, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, is from that. Because God, the Most High, commanded His servants to ask Him for help and to ask Him for guidance to the straight path, since His saying, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, which is an explanation of the straight path and a replacement for it, was known that the favor that God bestowed upon those whom He commanded us to ask Him for guidance to their path, is the straight path and the straight path, the interpretation of which we have already explained. So the apparent meaning of what appeared from that, with the proximity of the two words, suffices without repeating it.

As the genius of Banu Dhubyan said:

Surat Al-Fatihah 1:7

The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred Your wrath, nor of those who have gone astray.

As if you were one of the camels of Bani Aqish, rattling behind his feet with a shan

He means: As if you are from the camels of Aqish, a camel that rattles behind its legs with a bag, so he was satisfied with what appeared from the mention of the camels indicating what was omitted, from showing what was omitted.

As Al-Farazdaq bin Ghalib said:

You see their necks hanging on it when iron rusts on truffles.

He means: those who wear it, so he omitted they, since the apparent meaning of his statement their burdens was indicating it. The evidence for that in the poetry and speech of the Arabs is more than can be counted. So it is the same in his statement, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

Twenty-ninth: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor.

Sirat instead of the first, instead of one thing for another, like when you say: Zaid your father came to me. Its meaning is: Adam is our guide, because a person may be guided to the path and then cut off from it. It was said: It is another sirat, and its meaning is knowledge of God Almighty and understanding of Him, as Jaafar bin Muhammad said. The language of the Qur'an is alladhina in the nominative, accusative and genitive cases, and Hudhayl says: al-ladhun in the nominative case, and some of the Arabs say: al-ladhi, and some of them say: al-ladhi, and it will come.

There are ten languages for upon them in which it is generally read: upon them with a damma on the ha' and a sukoon on the meem. Upon them with a kasra on the ha' and a sukoon on the meem. Upon them with a kasra on the ha' and a sukoon on the meem. Upon them with a kasra on the ha' and a damma on the meem and an additional waw after the damma. Upon them with a damma These six versions are transmitted from the imams of the reciters. There are four versions transmitted from the Arabs but not from the reciters: Upon them with a damma on the ha' and a kasra on the meem and an additional ya' after the meem, as reported by Al-Akhfash Al-Basri from the Arabs. Upon them with a damma on the ha' and a kasra on the meem without an additional ya'. Upon them with a kasra on the ha' and a damma on the meem without an additional waw. Upon them with a kasra on the ha' and a damma on the meem and no ya' after the meem. All of them are correct, as stated by Ibn Al-Anbari.

Al-Muwaffiyah Al-Thalathiniyah: Umar ibn Al-Khattab and Ibn Al-Zubayr, may God be pleased with them, recited: The path of those whom You have bestowed favor upon. People differed about who You have bestowed favor upon. The majority of commentators said: He meant the path of the prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous. They derived that from the Almighty's saying: "And whoever obeys God and the Messenger - those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor of the prophets, the truthful, the martyrs, and the righteous. And excellent are those as companions." So the verse requires that these are on a straight path, which is what is required in the verse of Al-Hamd. All that has been said goes back to this. There is no point in enumerating the statements, and God is the source of help.

Thirty-first: In this verse there is a response to the Qadarites, Mu'tazilites and Imamites, because they believe that the will of man is sufficient for his actions to emanate from him, whether they are obedience or disobedience, because man, in their view, is the creator of his actions, so he is in need of his Lord for them to emanate from him. God Almighty has belied them in this verse when they asked Him for guidance to the straight path. If the matter was up to them and the choice was in their hand without their Lord, they would not have asked Him for guidance, nor would they have repeated the question in every prayer. Likewise, they would have supplicated to Him to ward off harm, which contradicts guidance when they said: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred wrath or of those who have gone astray. Just as they asked Him to guide them, they asked Him not to lead them astray, and likewise they supplicate and say: Our Lord, let not our hearts deviate after You have guided us verse.

Twenty-second: Not those who have incurred wrath nor those who have gone astray.

There is a difference of opinion about who those who incur wrath and those who have gone astray are. The majority say that those who incur wrath are the Jews, and those who have gone astray are the Christians:

This was explained by the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the hadith of Adi bin Hatim and the story of his conversion to Islam.

Narrated by Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi in his Musnad and al-Tirmidhi in his Jami'. This interpretation is also supported by the words of God, the Most High, about the Jews: And they incurred the wrath of God and And the wrath of God was upon them and He said about the Christians: They had gone astray before and led many astray and strayed from the right path. It was said: Those who incur wrath are the polytheists. And those who are astray are the hypocrites. It was also said: Those who incur wrath are those who omit the obligation of this surah in prayer and those who are astray from the blessing of reciting it. This was narrated by al-Salami in his Haqaiq and al-Mawardi in his Tafsir, but it is nothing. Al-Mawardi said: This is a rejected interpretation, because that which the narrations contradict and the reports are in conflict and there is widespread disagreement, it is not permissible to apply this ruling to it. It was said: Those who incur wrath are those who follow innovations and those who are astray from the path of guidance.

I said: This is good, and the interpretation of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is more appropriate, higher and better. And upon them is in the nominative case, because the meaning is that he was angry with them. Anger in the language means severity. An angry man means one with a severe disposition. The angry is the malicious snake because of its severity. And anger is the shield made of camel skin, some of which is folded over the other, and it was named thus because of its severity. The meaning of anger in the attribute of God Almighty is the will of punishment, so it is an attribute of the Essence, and the will of God Almighty is one of the attributes of His Essence, or the punishment itself, and from it the hadith:

Twenty-third: Nor of those who have gone astray.

Going astray in the speech of the Arabs means departing from the path of righteousness and the way of truth. From this, it is said: The milk went astray in the water, meaning it disappeared. From this it is said: Should we then go astray in the earth? meaning we will disappear with death and become dust. He said:

Didn't you ask and the houses told you about the misguided neighborhood, where they went?

Adh-Dhaldhalah: a smooth stone that is swept away by water in the valley. Likewise, Ghadhbah: a rock in the mountain that is of a different color. He said:

Or anger in a plateau that is not forbidden

Thirty-fourth: Omar bin Al-Khattab and Ubayy bin Kaab read ghayr al-maghdhuhu alayhim and ghayr al-dhaleen. It was narrated from them that the accusative and genitive letters are in the ra'. The genitive is in apposition to those who are or to the ha' and mim in 'alayhim, or an attribute of those who are and those who are definite. Definite nouns are not described by indefinite nouns nor are indefinite nouns described by definite nouns, except that those whose intention is not intended are general. So the statement is like your saying: I order someone like you, so I honor him. Or because ghayr is definite because it is between two things with no middle ground between them, as you say: the living is not the dead, the still is not the moving, and the standing is not the sitting. There are two opinions: the first is from Al-Farisi, and the second is from Al-Zamakhshari. The accusative in the ra' is in two ways: in the state of those who are or from the ha' and mim in 'alayhim, as if you said: You bestowed favor upon them, not those who are angry. Or as an exception, as if you said: except those who are angry. The accusative is permissible with 'I mean', and it was narrated from Al-Khalil.

Thirty-fifth: La in His statement, nor those who have gone astray. There is a difference of opinion regarding it. It was said that it is redundant, as stated by al-Tabari. And from this is the statement of God Almighty, What prevented you from prostrating? It was said that it is an emphasis that was added so that it would not be thought that those who have gone astray are conjoined with those who, as narrated by Makki and al-Mahdawi. The Kufians said that la means other, and it is the reading of Umar and Abi, and it has been mentioned previously.

Thirty-sixth: The root of ad-Dhaleen is ad-Dhallee. The vowel of the first lam was deleted, then the lam was assimilated into the lam, so two quiescent letters met for the duration of the assimilated alif and lam. Ayoub as-Sakhtiyani read: nor as-Dhaleen with a non-extended hamza, as if he fled from the meeting of two quiescent letters, which is a dialect. Abu Yad narrated that he heard Amr ibn Ubayd reading: Then on that Day no human being or jinn will be asked about his sin. So I thought it was a mistake until I heard from the Arabs da'bah wa sha'bah. Or al-Fath said: And many say on this dialect:

If the high places turn red with the idiot

We have finished interpreting Surat Al-Fatihah, praise and thanks be to God.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The hadith has been presented regarding when the servant says Guide us to the straight path to the end, that God says this to My servant, and My servant shall have what he asked for. The Almighty's saying: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor is an explanation of the straight path, and it is a substitute for it according to grammarians. It is also possible that it is an explanatory apposition, and God knows best. And those upon whom God has bestowed favor are mentioned in Surat An-Nisa' where God the Almighty said: "And whoever obeys God and the Messenger - those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor of the prophets, the steadfast affirmers of truth, the martyrs and the righteous. And excellent are those as companions. That is the bounty from God, and sufficient is God as Knower." Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor through Your obedience and worship, of Your angels, prophets, the steadfast affirmers of truth, the martyrs and the righteous. This is similar to what our Lord the Almighty said: And whoever obeys God and the Messenger - those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor 4: 10. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas, The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor. He said, They are the prophets. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, They are the believers. Mujahid said the same. Waki' said, They are the Muslims. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, "They are the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those with him." The interpretation mentioned above on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, is more general and comprehensive, and God knows best.

God the Almighty said: Not of those who have incurred wrath nor of those who have gone astray. The majority of scholars read ghayr in the accusative case as a description. Al-Zamakhshari said: It was also read in the accusative case as a state, which is the reading of the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) and Umar ibn al-Khattab. It was narrated from Ibn Kathir that the pronoun in upon them is the agent you have bestowed favor. The meaning is: Guide us to the straight path, the path of those upon whom you have bestowed favor, those whose description and description have come before, and they are the people of guidance, righteousness, and obedience to God and His Messengers, and compliance with His commands and abandonment of His prohibitions and deterrents. Not the path of those who have incurred wrath, and they are those whose will has become corrupt, so they knew the truth and turned away from it. Nor the path of those who have gone astray, and they are those who have lost knowledge, so they are wandering in misguidance and are not guided to the truth. The statement was emphasized with /a to indicate that there are two corrupt paths, which are the path of the Jews and Christians. Some grammarians have claimed that ghayr here is an exception, so on this basis it is discontinuous because they are excluded from those upon whom you have bestowed favor and are not among them. What we have mentioned is more appropriate because of the poet's saying:

As if you were one of the camels of Bani Aqish, clattering at his feet with a camel

That is, as if you were a camel from the camels of Banu Aqish, so he omitted the described and was satisfied with the adjective. And thus, not those who incur wrath means, to the path of those who incur wrath, All-Knowing. He was satisfied with the complement to it without mentioning the complement. The context of the speech indicated this, which is the Most High's saying: Guide us to the straight path, the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor. Then the Most High said: not those who incur wrath. And among them is he who claimed that not in the Most High's saying nor those who have gone astray is redundant and that the meaning of the speech, according to him, is not those who incur wrath and those who have gone astray. And he cited as evidence the verse of al-Ajjaj:

In a well, there is no houri, nor did he feel anything

That is, in the well of Hour, and what we have presented is correct, and for this reason Abu al-Qasim ibn Salam narrated in the book of the virtues of the Qur'an on the authority of Abu Mu'awiyah on the authority of al-A'mash on the authority of Ibrahim on the authority of al-Aswad on the authority of Umar ibn al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, that he used to recite not those who have incurred wrath and this chain of transmission is correct, and it was also narrated on the authority of Ubayy ibn Ka'b that he recited likewise, and it is understood that it was issued by them in the manner of interpretation, so it indicates what we said that it was only brought to emphasize the negation so that it would not be thought that it is conjoined with those upon whom You have bestowed favor, and to differentiate between the two methods so that each one would avoid it, for the method of the people of faith includes knowledge of the truth and acting upon it, and the Jews have lost the action and the Christians have lost the knowledge, and for this reason the Jews are angry and the Christians are misguided, because whoever knows and leaves deserves wrath, unlike whoever does not know, and the Christians, since they intended something but were not guided to its path because they did not approach the matter from its proper perspective, which is following the truth, they went astray, and each of the Jews and Christians is astray and incurs wrath, but the most specific description of the Jews is wrath as God Almighty said about them whom God has cursed and with whom He is angry. The most specific description of the Christians is misguidance, as God Almighty said about them: They have gone astray before, and have led many astray, and have strayed from the right path. This is how the hadiths and narrations came, and this is clear and evident in what Imam Ahmad said: Muhammad ibn Ja'far told us, Shu'bah told us, I heard Samak ibn Harb say, I heard 'Ibad ibn Hubaysh narrating on the authority of 'Adi ibn Hatim, who said, "The horses of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came and took my aunt and some people. When they brought them to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, they lined up for him. She said, "O Messenger of God, the visitor has gone far away and the children have been cut off, and I am an old woman with no service. So who can I do for you from God?" He said, Who is your visitor? She said, 'Adi ibn Hatim. He said, The one who fled from God and His Messenger. She said, Who can I do for Ali? When he returned, there was a man beside him, do you think he was Ali? He said: Ask him for a lamb. So I asked him and he gave orders for it. He said: She came to me and said: You have done something that your father did not do. So-and-so came to him and had intercourse with him, and so-and-so came to him and had intercourse with him. So I went to him and there was a woman and two children with him. He mentioned their closeness to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. He said: I knew that he was not the king of Khosrau or Caesar. He said: O Adi, what do I hate? That it is said, 'There is no god but God.' Is there a god but God? What do I hate is that it is said, 'God is greater.' Is there anything greater than God Almighty?" He said: So I converted to Islam, and I saw his face beaming with joy and he said: Indeed, those who have incurred wrath are the Jews and those who have gone astray are the Christians. He mentioned the hadith and At-Tirmidhi narrated it from the hadith of Samak ibn Harb, and he said: It is good and strange and we do not know it except from his hadith. I said Hammad bin Salamah narrated it from Mari bin Qatari from Adi bin Hatim who said: I asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about the Almighty's saying: Not those who have incurred wrath, he said: They are the Jews, nor those who have gone astray, he said: The Christians are those who have gone astray. And Sufyan bin Uyaynah narrated it in this way from Ismail bin Abi Khalid from Al-Sha'bi from Adi bin Hatim with it. This hadith of Adi has been narrated through many chains of transmission and it has many wordings that would take too long to mention. And Abd Al-Razzaq said: And Muammar informed us from Badil Al-Uqayli who informed me from Abdullah bin Shaiq that he informed him from someone who heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, while he was in Wadi Al-Qura on his horse and a man from Banu Al-Qain asked him and said: O Messenger of God, who are these? He said: Those who incur wrath and he pointed to the Jews and those who have gone astray are the Christians. Al-Jariry, Urwah and Khalid Al-Hadha' narrated it on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaqiq, but they sent it and did not mention who heard it from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. It was mentioned in Urwah's narration that Abdullah bin Amr was named, and God knows best. Ibn Mardawayh narrated from the hadith of Ibrahim bin Tahman on the authority of Badil bin Maysarah on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaqiq on the authority of Abu Dharr, who said: I asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about those who incur wrath. He said: The Jews. I said: The astray. He said: The Christians. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Those who incur wrath are not the Jews, nor those who have gone astray are the Christians. Al-Dahhak and Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Those who incur wrath are not the Jews, nor those who have gone astray are the Christians. Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam and more than one said the same. Ibn Abi Hatim said: I do not know of any difference among the commentators on this, and the evidence for what these imams said is that the Jews are those who incur wrath. And the Christians are astray, the previous hadith, and the Almighty's saying in His address to the Children of Israel in Surat al-Baqarah 2: "How evil is that for which they have sold themselves - that they should disbelieve in what God has revealed, out of envy that God should send down of His bounty upon whomever He wills of His servants. So they incurred wrath upon wrath, and for the disbelievers is a humiliating punishment." And He said in al-Ma'idah 5: "Say, 'Shall I inform you of those who are worse than that as a reward from God? Those whom God has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs and worshipped false gods. Those are worse in position and further astray from the straight path.'" And the Almighty said: "Those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus, the son of Mary. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressors. They did not forbid one another from the evil they were doing. Evil was that which they were doing." And in the biography, on the authority of Zayd ibn Amr ibn Nufayl, that when he and a group of his companions went out to Ash-Sham seeking the true religion, the Jews said to him: You will not be able to enter with us until you take your share of God's wrath. So he said: I flee from God's wrath.' And the Christians said to him: You will not be able to enter with us until you take your share of God's wrath. God was angry, so he said, I cannot do it. So he continued in his natural state and avoided the worship of idols and the religion of the polytheists, and he did not enter with any of the Jews or Christians. As for his companions, they converted to Christianity and entered the religion of Christianity because they found it closer to the religion of the Jews at that time, and among them was Waraqa ibn Nawfal until God guided him through His Prophet when He sent him. He believed in what he found of the revelation, may God be pleased with him.

Question The correct view of the scholars is that it is permissible to fail to pronounce the letters between Ḍād and Ḍā' because their points of articulation are close together. This is because we pronounce Ḍād from the tip of the tongue and the upper incisors. Because both letters are voiced letters, soft letters, and closed letters, for all of this reason it is permissible to use one in place of the other for someone who does not distinguish between that. And God knows best. As for the hadith, I am more eloquent than he who pronounces "Ḍād, there is no basis for it, and God knows best.

Chapter This noble Surah, which is seven verses, includes praising, glorifying and commending God by mentioning His beautiful names that entail His supreme attributes, and mentioning the Resurrection, which is the Day of Judgment, and guiding His servants to lead Him, supplicate to Him, and disavow their power and strength to sincerely worship Him and unify Him in divinity, Blessed and Exalted be He, and to declare Him free from having a partner, equal or similar, and to asking Him for guidance to the straight path, which is the upright religion, and to establish them on it until He decrees for them that they may pass the physical path on the Day of Resurrection, which will lead them to the Gardens of Bliss in the company of the Prophets, the Truthful, and the righteous martyrs. It includes encouragement to do good deeds so that they will be with their people on the Day of Resurrection, and warning against the paths of falsehood lest they be gathered with those who follow them on the Day of Resurrection, who are those who have incurred wrath and are astray. How beautiful is the attribution of the blessing to Him in His Almighty's saying, The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred wrath, and the omission of the subject in wrath in His Almighty's saying, not of those who have incurred wrath, even though it was He is the one who actually does it, as God Almighty said: Have you not considered those who took as allies a people with whom God has become angry? And also attributing misguidance to the one who committed it, even though he is the one who led them astray with his power, as the Most High said: He whom God guides is the one who is guided, and he whom He leads astray - you will find for him no protector to guide him. And He said: He whom God leads astray - there is no guide for him, and He leaves them in their transgression to wander blindly. And other verses indicating that He, the Most High, is the One Who guides and leads astray, not as the Qadarites and those who follow them say, that the servants are the ones who choose that and do it and argue for their innovation with ambiguous verses from the Qur'an and leave what is in it that is explicit in refuting them. This is the state of the people of misguidance and error, and it was mentioned in the authentic hadith: If you see those who follow that which is ambiguous in it, then those are the ones whom God has named, so beware of them. He means in His statement, the Most High: But as for those in whose hearts is deviation, they follow that which is ambiguous in it, seeking discord and seeking an interpretation thereof. So, praise be to God, there is no valid argument for an innovator in the Qur'an, because the Qur'an came to separate the truth from falsehood, differentiating between guidance and misguidance, and there is no contradiction or difference in it because it is from It is from God, the All-Wise, the Praiseworthy.

Chapter It is recommended for the one who recites Al-Fatihah to say after it, Ameen, like Ya Seen. It is also said Ameen in short form, meaning, O God, respond. The evidence for the recommendation of saying Ameen is what Imam Ahmad, Abu Dawud, and Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Wa'il ibn Hujr, who said: I heard the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, recite, Not those who are angry with you, nor those who are astray, and he said, Ameen, raising his voice. According to Abu Dawud, he raised his voice. Al-Tirmidhi said: This is a good hadith. It was narrated on the authority of Ali, Ibn Mas'ud, and others. Abu Hurairah said: When the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited, Not those who are angry with you, nor those who are astray, he would say, Ameen, so that those in the first row next to him would hear him. Narrated by Abu Dawud and Ibn Majah, who added, The mosque would shake with it. Al-Darqutni said: This is a good chain of transmission. On the authority of Bilal, he said: O Messenger of God, do not precede me in saying Aameen. Narrated by Abu Dawud. Abu Nasr Al-Qushayri narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan and Ja'far Al-Sadiq that they stressed the meem in Aameen, like in Aameen Al-Bayt Al-Haram. Our companions and others said: This is recommended for someone who is not in prayer, and it is emphasized for the one praying, whether he is praying alone, an imam, or a follower, and in all circumstances, based on what came in the two Sahihs on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When the imam says Aameen, then say Aameen, for whoever says Aameen at the same time as the angels say Aameen, his previous sins will be forgiven. And in Muslim, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: If one of you says Aameen in prayer and the angels in heaven say Aameen, and one of them coincides with the other, his previous sins will be forgiven. It was said that it means whoever says Aameen at the same time as the angels say Aameen, and it was said in response, and it was said in description of sincerity. In Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Musa, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: If he says - meaning the imam - 'nor of those who have gone astray,' then say Aameen, God will answer you. And Juwaybir said on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas said: I said: O Messenger of God, what is the meaning of Amen? He said: O Lord, do it. Al-Jawhari said: The meaning of Amen is thus, so be it. At-Tirmidhi said: It means do not disappoint our hope. The majority said: It means, O God, answer us. Al-Qurtubi narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Ja'far al-Sadiq, and Hilal ibn Yasaf that Amen is one of the names of God Almighty. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, but it is not authentic. This was stated by Abu Bakr ibn al-Arabi al-Maliki. The companions of Malik said: The imam does not say Amen and the one being led in prayer does not say Amen because Malik narrated from Sumayy from Abu Salih from Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: And when he says - meaning the imam - "nor those who go astray, then say Amen, the hadith. They also used as evidence the hadith of Abu Musa in Muslim that he said Amen when he recited not those who have evoked [Your] anger nor those who have gone astray. We have already mentioned in the agreed upon hadith When the imam says "Amen, then say Amen, and that he, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say Amen when he recited not those who have evoked [Your] anger nor those who have gone astray. Our companions differed about the one being led in prayer saying Amen out loud. The gist of the difference is that if the imam forgets to say Amen, the one being led in prayer says Amen, according to one opinion. If the imam says Amen out loud, then the new opinion is that the one being led in prayer does not say Amen, and this is the view of Abu Hanifa and a narration from Malik because it is a dhikr, so it is not said out loud like the other dhikrs of prayer. The old opinion is that it is said out loud, and this is the view of Imam Ahmad ibn Hanbal and the other narration from Malik because of what was mentioned, until the mosque shakes. We have another third opinion that if the mosque is small. The follower does not recite aloud because they hear the imam's recitation, and if he is old, he recites aloud so that the amen can reach those in the corners of the mosque. And God knows best. Imam Ahmad narrated in his Musnad on the authority of Aisha, may God be pleased with her, that the Jews were mentioned in the presence of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said, "They will never envy us for anything as much as they envy us for the Friday prayer to which God has guided us and from which they have strayed, and for the Qiblah to which God has guided us and from which they have strayed, and for our saying 'Ameen' behind the Imam." Ibn Majah narrated it and its wording is, "The Jews have never envied you for anything as much as they envied you for the greeting of peace and the 'Ameen'." And he narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, The Jews have never envied you for anything as much as they envied you for saying 'Ameen', so say 'Ameen' often. And in its chain of transmission is Talha ibn 'Amr, who is weak. Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, Ameen is the seal of the Lord of the Worlds over His believing servants. And on the authority of Anas, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, "I have been given 'Ameen' in prayer and when supplicating, and no one before me was given it except Moses. Moses used to supplicate and Aaron used to say 'Ameen', so conclude your supplication with 'Ameen', for God will answer you." I said And from here it was taken away. Some of them are in the evidence of this noble verse, which is the saying of God the Almighty: "And Moses said, 'Our Lord, indeed You have given Pharaoh and his chiefs splendor and wealth in the life of this world, [saying], 'Our Lord, that they may mislead [others] from Your way. Our Lord, obliterate their wealth and harden their hearts so that they will not believe until they see the painful punishment.'" He said, Indeed, your prayer has been answered, so be upright and do not follow the way of those who do not know. So the supplication was mentioned on the authority of Moses alone, and from the context of the speech is what indicates that Aaron said Amen and was thus descended from the status of one who supplicated, according to the saying of God the Almighty: Indeed, your prayer has been answered. So this indicates that whoever says Amen to a supplication is as if he said it. For this reason he said: Whoever says that the one being led in prayer does not recite, because his saying Amen to the recitation of Al-Fatihah is like his reciting it. For this reason it came in the hadith: Whoever has an imam, the imam's recitation is his recitation. Narrated by Ahmad in his Musnad. And Bilal used to say, Do not precede me in saying "Ameen," O Messenger of God. So this view indicates that the one being led in prayer does not have to recite in the loud recitation, and God knows best." For this reason Ibn Mardawayh said: Ahmad ibn al-Hasan told us, Abdullah ibn Muhammad ibn Salam told us, Ishaq ibn Ibrahim told us, Jarir told us, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Ibn Abi Salim, on the authority of Ka'b, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "If the imam says, 'Not of those who incur wrath, nor of those who go astray,' and he says, 'Ameen,' and the 'Ameen of the people of the earth coincides with the 'Ameen of the people of the heavens,' God will forgive the servant his previous sins. The example of one who does not say 'Ameen' is like that of a man who went on a military expedition with a people, and they drew lots and their lots came out, but his lot did not. He said, 'Why did my lot not come out?' It was said, 'You did not say 'Ameen.'"

7- The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred Your wrath, nor of those who have gone astray. The path is in the accusative case as a substitute for the first, and its benefit is to emphasize what it contains of duality and repetition, and it is permissible for it to be an explanatory apposition, and its benefit is to clarify, and those upon whom God has bestowed favor are those mentioned in Surat An-Nisa where He said: "And whoever obeys God and the Messenger - those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor of the prophets, the steadfast affirmers of truth, the martyrs, and the righteous. And excellent are those as companions. That is the bounty of God, and sufficient is God as Knower." And the favor was made general to include all favors, and not of those who have incurred Your wrath is a substitute for those upon whom You have bestowed favor, meaning that they combined the two favors, the favor of faith and safety from that, and it is correct to make it an attribute of knowledge, even though other is not known in comparison to the definite nouns because of the ambiguity in it, because here it is not ambiguous due to the well-known difference between the two genders. Anger in the language, Al-Qurtubi said: It is severity, and an angry man: meaning a man of strong character, and the angry: the malicious snake due to its severity. He said: The meaning of anger in the description of God: is the will to punish, so it is an attribute of his essence, or the punishment itself, and from it the hadith: Indeed, charity extinguishes the wrath of the Lord, so it is an attribute of his action. He said in Al-Kashshaf: It is the will to take revenge on the disobedient and to inflict punishment on them, and to do to them what a king does when he is angry with those under his hand, and the difference between the first upon them and the second upon them is that the first is in the accusative case as the object, and the second is in the nominative case as a representative of the subject. And in his saying nor those who have gone astray, it is an emphasis on the negation understood from other, and error in Lisan Al-Arab, Al-Qurtubi said: It is to go astray from the path of intention and the path of truth, and from it the milk went astray in the water: meaning it disappeared, and from it Shall we then go astray in the earth meaning we disappeared by death and became dust. Waki', Abu Sa'id, Sa'id bin Mansur, 'Abd bin Humaid and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of 'Umar bin Al-Khattab that he used to recite: The path of those whom You have bestowed favor upon, not of those who have evoked [Your] anger, nor of those who are righteous. Abu 'Ubaid and 'Abd bin Humaid narrated that 'Abdullah bin Al-Zubayr recited likewise. Al-Anbari narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan that he used to recite to them with a kasra on the ha' and the mim and with the addition of the ya'. Ibn Al-Anbari narrated on the authority of Al-A'waj that he used to recite to them with a damma on the ha' and the mim and with the addition of the waw. He also narrated on the authority of Ibn Kathir that he used to recite to them with a kasra on the ha' and a damma on the mim and with the addition of the waw. He also narrated on the authority of Abu Ishaq that he used to recite to them with a damma on the ha' and the mim but without the addition of the waw. Ibn Abi Dawud narrated on the authority of 'Ikrimah and Al-Aswad that they used to recite like 'Umar's previous recitation. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, meaning: the path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor from the angels, prophets, truthful ones, martyrs, and righteous people who obeyed You and worshipped You. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that they are the believers. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Ar-Rabi bin Anas regarding his statement: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, he said: the prophets. Not of those who have incurred Your wrath, he said: the Jews. Nor of those who have gone astray, he said: the Christians. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Mujahid something similar. He also narrated on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair something similar. Abd al-Razzaq, Ahmad in his Musnad, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, al-Baghawi, Ibn al-Mundhir, and Abu al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaiq who said: "I was informed by someone who heard the

Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) while he was in Wadi al-Qura on his horse, and a man from Banu al-Qain asked him, saying: Who are those who have incurred Your wrath, O Messenger of God? He said: The Jews. He said: Who are those who have gone astray? He said: The Christians.” It was narrated by Ibn Mardawayh on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaiq on the authority of Abu Dharr who said: I asked the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and he mentioned it. It was narrated by Wakee’, Abd bin Humayd and Ibn Jarir on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaiq who said: “The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was besieging the people of Wadi al-Qura and a man said to him” and so on, but he did not mention who heard the Prophet as in the first narration. It was narrated by Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Shu’ab on the authority of Abdullah bin Shaiq on the authority of a man from Banu Al-Qayn on the authority of his cousin who said: “I came to the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him)” and he mentioned it. It was narrated by Sufyan bin Uyaynah in his Tafsir and Saeed bin Mansour on the authority of Ismail bin Abi Khalid that the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: Those who have incurred wrath are the Jews, and those who have gone astray are the Christians. It was narrated by Ahmad, Abd bin Humayd and Al-Tirmidhi and Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Hibban in his Sahih authenticated it on the authority of Adi bin Hatim who said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: Those who have incurred wrath are the Jews, and those who have gone astray are the Christians. Ahmad, Abu Dawud, Ibn Hibban, Al-Hakim who authenticated it, and Al-Tabarani narrated on the authority of Al-Shuraiddi who said: “The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) passed by me while I was sitting like this, with my left hand behind my back and leaning on the buttocks of my hands. He said: ‘Do you sit like those who have incurred wrath?’ Ibn Kathir said after mentioning the hadith of ‘Adi bin Hatim: This hadith of ‘Adi has been narrated through many chains of narration, and it has many wordings that would take too long to mention. End quote. The conclusion is that this prophetic interpretation is definitive, and it is what the imams of interpretation from the early generations agreed upon. Ibn Abi Hatim said: I do not know of any disagreement among the commentators in interpreting those who have incurred wrath as the Jews, and those who have gone astray as the Christians. This prophetic interpretation is supported by verses from the Qur’an. God the Most High said in His address to the Children of Israel in Surat al-Baqarah 2: ‘How evil is that for which they have sold themselves - that they should disbelieve in what God has revealed, out of envy that God should send down of His bounty upon whomever He wills of His servants. So they incurred wrath upon wrath, and for the disbelievers is a humiliating punishment.’” And he said in Al-Ma’idah 5: “Say: Shall I inform you of those who are worse than that as a reward from God? Those whom God has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs and who worshipped false gods.

Those are worse in position and further astray from the right path.” And in the biography, on the authority of Zayd ibn Amr ibn Nufayl, that when he and a group of his companions went out to the Levant seeking the true religion, the Jews said: You will not be able to enter with us until you take your share of God’s wrath. So he said: I flee from God’s wrath. And the Christians said to him: You will not be able to enter with us until you take your share of God’s wrath. So he said: I cannot do it. So he continued in his natural state and avoided worshipping idols.

[Benefit in the legitimacy of saying Amen after reciting Al-Fatihah] Know that the authentic, explicit, and proven Sunnah has indicated this. Among that is what was narrated by Ahmad, Abu Dawud, and Al-Tirmidhi on the authority of Wa’il ibn Hujr, who said: “I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recite ‘not those who are angry with you nor those who are astray’ and he said, ‘Ameen’, raising his voice.” Abu Dawud also narrated it: raising his voice. Al-Tirmidhi classified it as hasan. It was also narrated by Al-Nasa’i, Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ibn Majah, and Al-Hakim, who classified it as hasan. In a version of his hadith, he, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: He said, ‘My Lord, forgive me, Ameen.’ It was narrated by Al-Tabarani and Al-Bayhaqi. In a version, he said: Ameen three times. It was narrated by Al-Tabarani. Wakee’ and Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated on the authority of Abu Maysarah, who said: “When Gabriel recited to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, Al-Fatihah, and he reached ‘not those who are astray,’ he said: ‘Say Ameen.’ He said, ‘Ameen.’” Ibn Majah narrated on the authority of Ali, who said: “I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say, ‘Ameen.’” Muslim, Abu Dawud, An-Nasa’i and Ibn Majah narrated on the authority of Abu Musa that he said: The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: When the Imam recites ‘not those who have incurred wrath nor those who have gone astray’ then say ‘Ameen, God loves you.’ Al-Bukhari, Muslim, the Sunan scholars, Ahmad, Ibn Abi Shaybah and others narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: When the Imam recites ‘Ameen’ then say ‘Ameen,’ for whoever’s ‘Ameen’ coincides with the ‘Ameen’ of the angels, his previous sins will be forgiven. Ahmad, Ibn Majah and Al-Bayhaqi narrated with a chain of transmission that As-Suyuti said is authentic on the authority of Aishah that the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: “The Jews have never envied you for anything as much as they have envied you for the greeting of peace and the ‘Ameen.’” Ibn ‘Adi narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that he said: The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: “The Jews are an envious people. They envied you for three things: spreading peace, straightening the rows, and saying ‘Ameen.’” At-Tabarani narrated something similar in Al-Awsat on the authority of Mu’adh. Ibn Majah narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: The Jews have not envied you for anything as much as they have envied you for Amen, so say Amen often. The weakness of this hadith is that its chain of transmission includes Talha ibn Amr, who is weak. Al-Daylami narrated on the authority of Anas who said: The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: "Whoever recites 'In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful', then recites the Opening of the Book, then says 'Amen,' there will not remain an angel close to God in the heavens who will not ask forgiveness for him." Abu Dawud narrated on the authority of Bilal that he said: O Messenger of God, do not precede me in saying 'Amen.' The meaning of Amen is: Respond. Al-Qurtubi said in his Tafsir: The meaning of Amen according to most scholars is: God respond to us. It is used in place of supplication. Al-Sahah says that the meaning of Amen is: So be it. Juwaybir narrated in his Tafsir on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: "I said: O Messenger of God, what is the meaning of Amen?" He said: O Lord, do so. Al-Kalbi narrated something similar on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Waki' and Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated in Al-Musannaf on the authority of Hilal bin Yasaaf and Mujahid, who said: Amin is one of the names of God. Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated something similar on the authority of Hakim bin Jubayr. Al-Tirmidhi said: Its meaning is do not disappoint our hopes. There are two dialects for it: the long vowel is on the pattern of Fa'il Kayyasin, and the short vowel is on the pattern of Yamin. The poet said about the long vowel:

Oh God, never take away her love from me. May God have mercy on the servant who says Amen.

Another said:

Amen, amen, I will not be satisfied with one until I give her two thousand amen

Al-Jawhari said: The emphasis on the meem is a mistake. It was narrated from Al-Hasan, Ja'far Al-Sadiq, and Al-Hussein bin Fadl that the emphasis is from am if he intends: meaning we are intending to come to you. Al-Qurtubi narrated that. Al-Jawhari said: It is built on the fatha like ayna and kayfa because of the meeting of two quiescent letters, and you say from it: Amen so-and-so amen. The scholars differed about whether to pronounce it aloud, and whether the imam should say it or not? This is explained in its proper places.

7. His statement, The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, meaning, You have bestowed upon them guidance and success. Ikrimah said: You have bestowed upon them steadfastness in faith and righteousness, and they are the prophets, peace be upon them. It was said: They are all those whom God has made steadfast in faith from the prophets and believers whom God mentioned in His statement, Then those will be with those upon whom God has bestowed favor of the prophets 69 - An-Nisa the verse. Ibn Abbas said: They are the people of Moses and Jesus, peace be upon them, before they changed their religion. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd said: They are the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those with him. Abu al-Aaliyah said: They are the family of the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, Abu Bakr and Umar, may God be pleased with them, and his household. Shahr ibn Hawshab said: They are the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his household.

Hamzah read: upon them, their children, and to them with a damma on the ha's. Ya'qub added a damma to every ha' preceded by a silent ya' in dual and plural, except for his saying: between their hands and their feet 12 - Al-Mumtahanah. The others read with a kasra on them. Whoever added a damma to the ha' returned it to the original because it is damma when singular. Whoever broken it replaced it with a silent ya' and the kasra is the sister of the ya'. Ibn Kathir and Abu Ja'far added a damma to every plural meem that is full in connection if it is not met by a silent letter, but if it is met by a silent letter, then it is not full. Nafi' gives a choice. Warsh added a damma when it is a qata' alif. If it is met by an alif of connection - and before the ha' there is a kasra or a silent ya' - Hamzah and Al-Kisa'i added a damma to the ha' and the meem, and Abu Amr added a damma to them, and so did Ya'qub if what preceded it was kasra. The others read with a damma on the meem and a kasra on the ha' in all of them because of the ya' or because of the kasra of what preceded it and a damma on the meem according to the original.

The Almighty's saying, Not the path of those with whom You are angry, means not the path of those with whom You are angry. Anger is the desire to take revenge on the disobedient, and the wrath of God Almighty does not reach the disobedient believers, but rather it reaches the disbelievers.

Nor those who have gone astray means those who have not gone astray from guidance. The root of misguidance is destruction and disappearance. It is said: The water went astray in the milk if it perished and disappeared. Ghair here means no, and nor means other, and therefore it is permissible to connect it, just as it is said: So-and-so is neither good nor comprehensive. If other means except, then it is not permissible to connect it with la, and it is not permissible to say: With me, there is none but Abdullah and Zaid.

Omar bin Al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, read: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor, not of those who have incurred wrath or of those who have gone astray. It was said: "Those who have incurred wrath are the Jews and those who have gone astray are the Christians, because God, the Most High, ruled that the Jews would be subject to wrath, saying: "He whom God has cursed and with whom He is angry" Al-Ma'idah 5:60, and He ruled that the Christians would be astray, saying: And do not follow the inclinations of a people who had gone astray before Al-Ma'idah 5:77. Sahl bin Abdullah said: Not of those who have incurred wrath without innovation, nor of those who have gone astray from the Sunnah.

The Sunnah for the reciter to say after finishing reciting Al-Fatihah is to say Ameen with a pause separated from Al-Fatihah. It is shortened, and it is permissible according to grammarians to pronounce it long or shortened. Its meaning is: O God, hear and respond. Ibn Abbas and Qatada said: Its meaning is thus. Mujahid said: It is one of the names of God the Most High. It was said: It is the seal of supplication. It was said: It is the seal of God upon His servants, with which He repels calamities from them, like the seal of the Book, preventing it from corruption and the appearance of what is in it.

Imam Abu Ali al-Husayn ibn Muhammad al-Qadi and Abu Hamid Ahmad ibn Abdullah al-Salihi told us: I told Abu Bakr Ahmad ibn al-Hasan al-Hayri, I told Abu Ali Muhammad ibn Ahmad ibn Muhammad ibn Maqal al-Maydani, I told Muhammad ibn Yahya, I told Abd al-Razzaq, I told Muammar, on the authority of al-Zuhri, on the authority of Ibn al-Musayyab, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When the imam says - not those who incur wrath nor those who have gone astray - then say amen, for the angels say amen and the imam says amen, so whoever's amen coincides with the amen of the angels, his previous sins will be forgiven." Sahih.

7- The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor is a substitute for the first substitute for the whole, and it is in the ruling of repeating the agent in that it is the intended meaning of the proportion, and its benefit is to emphasize and specify that the path of the Muslims is the one witnessed to be straight in the most emphatic and eloquent way because it was made like an explanation and clarification for it, so it is as if it is clear and there is no ambiguity in it that the straight path is the path of the believers. It was said: Those upon whom You have bestowed favor are the prophets, and it was said: the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions, and it was said: the companions of Moses and Jesus, may God bless them and grant them peace, before the distortion and abrogation. It was read: The path of those upon whom You have bestowed favor and favor is: the delivery of the favor and it is originally the state that a person enjoys, so it was used for what he enjoys from the favor, which is gentleness, and the favors of God, even if they are countless as He said: And if you were to count the favors of God, you could not enumerate them, they are limited to two types: worldly and otherworldly.

The first: It is divided into two parts: innate and acquired. Innate is divided into two parts: spiritual, such as the breathing of the soul into it and its illumination by the mind and the powers that follow it, such as understanding, thought, and speech; and physical, such as the creation of the body and the powers present in it and the states that arise from it, such as health and the perfection of the limbs.

Acquired is the purification of the soul from vices and its adornment with noble morals and virtuous qualities, and the adornment of the body with natural forms and desirable ornaments and the attainment of prestige and money.

The second: That He forgives him for what he has neglected, is pleased with him and he is pleased with him, and places him in the highest of the highest with the angels brought near forever and ever. What is meant is the final part and what will be a connection to attaining it in the afterlife, for everything other than that is shared by the believer and the disbeliever.

Not those who have incurred wrath nor those who have gone astray is a substitute for those meaning that those who have been blessed are those who have been saved from wrath and misguidance. Or it is a description of it that is explained or restricted in the sense that they have combined the absolute blessing, which is the blessing of faith, with safety from wrath and misguidance. This is only correct with one of two interpretations: treating the relative pronoun as an indefinite noun since it does not mean something familiar, like the local in His statement:

And his saying: I pass by a man like you and he honors me. Or it was made indefinite by addition because it was added to what has one opposite, which is those who bestow favors upon them, so the movement must be determined without stillness.

And from Ibn Kathir, he made it accusative in the state of the genitive pronoun and the agent I bestowed or by implying I mean or by the exception that he interpreted blessings as including both tribes, and anger: the turmoil of the soul wanting revenge, so if it is attributed to God Almighty, it is intended to mean the end and the purpose as mentioned, and upon them is in the nominative case because it is a substitute for the subject unlike the first, and there is no addition to emphasize what is in other of the meaning of negation, so it is as if he said: Neither those who incur wrath nor those who go astray, and for this reason it is permissible that I am Zaid not a striker, just as it is permissible that I am Zaid not a striker, even if it is forbidden that I am Zaid like a striker, and it is read nor those who go astray and error: deviating from the straight path intentionally or by mistake, and it has a wide presentation and the difference between its lowest and its farthest is great. It was said: those who incur wrath are the Jews, because God the Almighty said about them: He whom God has cursed and become angry with. And those who have gone astray are the Christians, because God the Almighty said: They have gone astray before and led many astray. It was narrated with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him). It is more likely to be said: those who incur wrath are the disobedient and those who are astray and ignorant of God, because the blessing is upon those who are guided to combine knowledge of the truth for its own sake and goodness in acting upon it, and the opposite of that is the one who is impaired in one of his rational and working faculties. And the one who neglects action is a sinner who incurs wrath, because God the Almighty said about the deliberate murderer: And the wrath of God is upon him. And the one who neglects reason is an ignorant and misguided person, because God the Almighty said about the murderer who does not intend to kill, And God has become angry with him. And the one who neglects reason is an ignorant and misguided person, because God the Almighty said: So what is there after the truth except error? And it was read: And not astray with a hamza, according to the dialect of those who are serious in escaping from the meeting of Ameen - the name of the verb which is istajaba. And on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: I asked the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) about its meaning, so he said: "Do it, built on the fat-ha like 'ayn' for the meeting of two quiescent letters, and the lengthening of its alif and its shortening came. He said:

May God have mercy on the servant who says Amen

He said: Amen, may God increase the distance between us.

It is not from the Qur'an according to the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him), but it is recommended to conclude the surah with it, based on his statement, "Gabriel taught me 'Ameen' when I finished reciting Al-Fatihah, and he said, 'It is like the seal of a book.'" Concerning its meaning is the statement of Ali may God be pleased with him: Ameen is the seal of the Lord of the Worlds, with which He sealed the supplication of His servant. The imam says it and recites it aloud in the prayers performed aloud, based on the report narrated from Wa'il ibn Hujr that when he (peace and blessings of God be upon him) recited 'And do not go astray', he would say 'Ameen' and raise his voice with it.

On the authority of Abu Hanifa, may God be pleased with him, that he does not say it, and what is well-known about him is that he conceals it, as narrated by Abdullah bin Mughaffal and Anas, and the follower says Aameen with him, based on the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When the imam says 'nor of those who go astray', then say Aameen, for the angels say Aameen, so whoever's Aameen coincides with the Aameen of the angels, his previous sins will be forgiven. On the authority of Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to my father, Shall I not tell you of a surah the like of which has not been revealed in the Torah, the Gospel, or the Qur'an? I said, Yes, O Messenger of God. He said, The Opening of the Book, it is the seven oft-repeated verses and the great Qur'an which I have been given.

On the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, he said: "While the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was sitting, an angel came to him and said: 'Rejoice in the two lights that you have been given that no prophet before you was given: the Opening of the Book and the last verses of Surat Al-Baqarah. You will not recite a letter from them without being given it.'"

On the authority of Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God will send a punishment upon a people that is inevitable and decreed, and one of their children will read in the book: 'Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds,' and God Almighty will hear him and thus lift the punishment from them for forty years."

Al-Faryabi and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Four verses from the beginning of Surat Al-Baqarah were revealed about the believers, two verses about the disbelievers, and thirteen verses about the hypocrites. K. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad Ibn Abi Ikrimah, on the authority of Saeed Ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding His statement: Those who disbelieved, the two verses, were revealed about the Jews of Medina. K. And he narrated on the authority of Al-Rabi' Ibn Anas, who said: "Two verses were revealed about the battle of the confederates: 'Those who disbelieved, it is all the same for them,' until His statement: 'And for them is a great punishment.'"

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: The translators of the Qur'an differed in their interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Alif, Lam, Meem. Some of them said: It is one of the names of the Qur'an. Those who said that mentioned:

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: It is one of the names of the Qur'an.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim Al-Amili told me: Abu Hudhayfah Musa bin Masoud told us: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem is one of the names of the Qur'an.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem is one of the names of the Qur'an.

Some of them said: They are opening verses with which God opens the Qur'an. Those who said that mentioned:

Harun bin Idris Al-Asamm Al-Kufi told me: Abd Al-Rahman bin Muhammad Al-Maharbi told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem are the opening verses with which God opens the Qur'an.

Ahmad bin Hazim Al-Ghafari told us: Abu Naim told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem are opening letters.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Yahya bin Adam, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem, "Alif, Lam, Sad," and Sad are the opening letters with which God began.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, like the hadith of Harun bin Idris.

Others said: It is the name of the Surah. Those who said that mentioned:

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Abdullah bin Wahb told us: I asked Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam about the words of God: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book," and "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is a revelation," and "Alif, Lam, Meem. That," so he said: My father said: They are only the names of the surahs.

Some of them said: It is the greatest name of God. Those who said that were mentioned:

Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna told us: Abd Al-Rahman bin Mahdi told us: Shu'bah told us: I asked Al-Suddi about Ha Mim, "Ta-Sin-Mim," and Alif-Lam-Meem, and he said: Ibn Abbas said: They are the greatest name of God.

Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna told us: Abu Al-Nu'man told us: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Ismail Al-Suddi, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, who said: Abdullah said: Then he mentioned something similar.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ubaidullah bin Musa, on the authority of Ismail, on the authority of Al-Sha'bi, who said: The opening verses of the surahs are among the names of God.

Some of them said: It is an oath that God swears by, and it is one of His names. Those who said that mentioned:

Yahya bin Othman bin Saleh Al-Sahmi told me: Abdullah bin Saleh told us: Muawiyah bin Saleh told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is an oath by which God swore, and it is one of the names of God.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told us: Ibn Ulayyah told us: Khalid Al-Hadha' told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: Alif, Lam, Meem is an oath.

Some of them said: It is letters separated from nouns and verbs, each letter of which has a meaning other than the meaning of the other letter. Those who said that mentioned:

Abu Kuraib told us, he said: Waki' told us, and Sufyan bin Waki' told us, he said: My father told us, on the authority of Sharik, on the authority of Ata' bin Al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Abu Al-Dhaha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Alif, Lam, Meem. He said: I am God, and I know best.

It was narrated on the authority of Abu Ubaid, who said: Abu Al-Yaqzan narrated to us, on the authority of Ata' bin Al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, who said: His statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: I, God, know best.

Musa bin Harun Al-Hamadani told me: Amr bin Hammad Al-Qannad told us: Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Ismail Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Alif, Lam, Meem. He said: As for Alif, Lam, Meem, it is a letter derived from the letters of the spelling of the names of God, may His praise be exalted.

Muhammad bin Muammar told us: Abbas bin Ziyad al-Bahili told us: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Abu Bishr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, "Ha, Meem," and Nun, he said: It is a disconnected noun. Some of them said that they are letters of the alphabet that were placed. Those who said that were mentioned:

It was narrated on the authority of Mansur bin Abi Nuwairah, who said: Abu Saeed Al-Mu'addab narrated to us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The opening letters of all the surahs, Qaf, "Sad," Ha Meem, "Ta Seem," Alif Lam Ra, and others, are a fabricated spelling. Some of them said: They are letters, each of which contains various different meanings. Those who said that were mentioned:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim Al-Tabari told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar Al-Razi, who said: My father told me, on the authority of Al-Rabi bin Anas, regarding the statement of God, the Most High: Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: These letters, from the twenty-nine letters, are spoken by all tongues. There is not a letter among them that is not a key to one of His names. There is not a letter among them that is not in His favors and trials, and there is not a letter among them that is not in the duration of a people and their appointed times. And Jesus, son of Mary, said: And it is strange that they speak about His names and live in His provision, so how can they deny? He said: The Alif is the key to His name: God, the Lam is the key to His name: Latif, and the Mim is the key to His name: Majeed. The Alif is the favors of God, the Lam is His kindness, and the Mim is His glory. The Alif is a year, the Lam is thirty years, and the Mim is forty years.

Ibn Hamid told us: Hakam told us, on the authority of Abu Ja'far, on the authority of al-Rabi', something similar.

Some of them said: They are letters from the abjad calculation. We disliked mentioning the one who narrated that from him, since the one who narrated it was someone whose narration and transmission are not reliable. The narration has already passed with a similar statement from Al-Rabi' bin Anas.

Some of them said: Every book has a secret, and the secret of the Qur'an is its openings.

As for the Arabists, they differed about the meaning of that. Some of them said: They are letters from the alphabetical letters, and mentioning what was mentioned of them at the beginnings of the surahs is sufficient without mentioning the rest of them, which is the completion of the twenty-eight letters, just as the informant is sufficient without mentioning the rest of the letters that are the completion of the twenty-eight letters from the one who informed him that there are twenty-eight letters in the alphabet by mentioning A B T Th, without mentioning the rest of its letters that are the completion of the twenty-eight. He said: And for that reason, that book was raised, because the meaning of the speech is: Alif, Lam, and Meem are from the separate letters, that is the book that I have revealed to you all together, there is no doubt about it.

If someone says: A B T Th has become like a noun in the letters of the alphabet, just as Al-Hamd was the name of the opening chapter of the Book.

It was said to him: Since it was permissible for the speaker to say: My son is in Tā Dah, and it was known from his saying that if he said it that he wanted to report about his son that he is in the disconnected letters, it was known from that that A B T Th does not have a name, even if that is more effective in mentioning than the rest of them.

He said: The difference between mentioning the letters of the alphabet in the openings of the surahs was that they were mentioned at their beginnings differently, and they were mentioned when they were mentioned at their beginnings, which are A B T Th, together, in order to separate the report about them if what was mentioned of them differently was intended to indicate connected speech and if what was mentioned of them together was intended to indicate the separate letters specifically. And they cited as evidence for the permissibility of the statement of the speaker: My son in T Z and the like, from the report about it that it is in the letters of the alphabet, and that from what he said in the statement it takes the place of his statement: My son in A B T Th in the rajaz of some of the rajaz poets of Banu Asad:

When I saw her matter in Hatti and I joked about her lying and flattery

I took from her the horns of the Shamat, and she did not leave me with her and her giving

Even the head is covered with blood

He claimed that he meant by that the report about the woman that she was in Abu Jad, so he made his statement: When I saw her matter in Hatti the place of his report about her that she was in Abu Jad, since that was from his statement, indicating to his listener what his statement: When I saw her matter in Abu Jad indicates to him.

Others said: Rather, it was started at the beginning of the surahs to open the ears of the polytheists to listening to it, as they advised each other to turn away from the Qur'an, until when they listened to it, the composition of it would be recited to them.

Some of them said: The letters that open the chapters are letters with which God opens His speech.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:1

Alif, Lam, Meem

If it is said: Is there anything in the Qur'an that has no meaning?

It was said: The meaning of this is that he began with it to indicate that the surah before it had ended, and that he had begun another, so he made this a sign of the end of what was between them. This is in the speech of the Arabs, when a man among them recites poetry and says:

But, a town whose people are not human

He says:

No, it did not stir up sorrows and grief

But it is not from the verse and is not considered in its meter, but it is used to interrupt a sentence and start another.

Abu Jaafar said: Each of the statements made by those whose statement we have described in this regard has a known basis.

As for those who said: Alif, Lam, Meem is one of the names of the Qur'an, there are two aspects to their statement:

One of them: That they meant that Alif, Lam, Meem is the name of the Qur'an, just as Al-Furqan is its name. If the meaning of the one who said that was like that, then the interpretation of his saying "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book," would be in the sense of an oath. It is as if he said: And the Qur'an, this Book, there is no doubt about it.

The other of them: That they meant that it is one of the names of the surah by which it is known, just as all other things are known by their names which have signs by which they are known. So the listener understands from the speaker saying: I read today Al-Mas and Nun, meaning the surahs that he read from the surahs of the Qur'an, just as he understands from him if he says: I met today Amr and Zaid, and they are aware of Zaid and Amr from what he met from the people.

If the meaning of this is unclear to someone, he should say: How can this be so, when there are a group of surahs similar to alif, lam, Ra and alif, lam-Ra in the Qur'an? Names are only indicators if they distinguish between people, but if they are not distinguishing, then they are not indicators.

It was said: Even though the names have become, due to the fact that many people share one of them, not distinctive except by other meanings with it, such as adding the relation of the one named to it or its description or attribute, in a way that differentiates it from other forms of it, they were originally placed for distinction, without a doubt. Then, when there is a need for the meanings that differentiate between those named by them. So it is the same with the names of the surahs. Every name, according to the one who said this article, was made an indication of the surah named by it. So when the one named by it shares it with other surahs of the Qur'an, the one reporting about a surah from it needed to add to its name the one named by it, what differentiates the listener between reporting about it and others, from a description and attribute or other than that. So the one reporting about himself says that he recited Surat Al-Baqarah, if he calls it by its name, which is Alif, Lam, Meem: I read Alif, Lam, Meem, Al-Baqarah. And in Al Imran 3: I read Alif, Lam, Meem, Al Imran, and "Alif, Lam, Meem. That is the Book."

And And, Alif, Lam, Meem, God, there is no god but He, the Ever-Living, the Self-Sustaining." It is as if he wanted to tell about two men, each of whose names was Amr, except that one of them was Tamimi and the other Azdi, then he would have to say to the one he wanted to tell about them: I met Amr al-Tamimi and Amr al-Azdi, since there is no difference between them and others who share their names, except their lineage as well. And so it is with the statement of the one who interpreted the disconnected letters as names of the surahs.

As for those who said: These are openings with which God Almighty begins His speech, they directed that to something similar to the meaning that we narrated from the one from whom we narrated that from the people of Arabic, that he said: These are evidence of the end of a surah and the beginning of another, and a sign of the interruption of what is between them, just as you made rather at the beginning of a poem an indication of the beginning in it, and the end of another before it. Just as we mentioned about the Arabs when they wanted to begin reciting a poem they said:

Rather, what stirred up sorrows and grief has been grief-stricken.

But it is not from the verse nor is it included in its meter, but it is used to indicate the end of one speech and the beginning of another.

As for those who said: These are disconnected letters, some of which are from the names of God Almighty, and some of which are from His attributes, and each letter of that has a meaning other than the meaning of the other letter, then they interpreted that in a manner similar to the saying of the poet:

We said to her: Stand for us. She said: Stand, don't think that we forgot to move.

He meant by his saying: Qālā Qāf, she said: I have stopped. So she indicated by the pronunciation of the Qāf from Waqfā, her intention from the completion of the word that she stopped. So they diverted his saying alif, lam, dhamma and what is similar to that, to something like this meaning. Some of them said: The alif is the alif of ana, and the lam is the lam of God, and the mim is the mim of 'alam, and each letter of them indicates a complete word. They said: So the sum of these disconnected letters, if it appears with each letter of them, is the completion of the letters of the word, ana, God knows best. They said: And likewise all that is at the beginning of the chapters of the Qur'an from that, so on this meaning and this interpretation, they said: And it is widespread and apparent in the speech of the Arabs that the speaker among them removes letters from the word, if what remains indicates what was deleted from it, and adds to it what is not from it, if the addition does not confuse its meaning to its listener, like their removal of the tha' in the reduction of the tarkhīm from Harith, so they say: Ya Har, and from Malik the kaf, so they say: Ya Mal, and what is similar to that, and like the saying of their rajaz poet:

What is wrong with the oppressor? How can he not save his skin if he does not?

As if he wanted to say: If he does such and such, he was satisfied with the letter ya from yafala, and as another of them said:

Good is good, and evil is bad.

He wants: evil.

I only want evil for you

He wants: unless you wish, so he was satisfied with the ta' and the fa' in both words, from the rest of their letters, and what is similar to that from the evidence that the book would be too long to include.

And as Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Ibn Ulayyah told us, on the authority of Ayoub and Ibn Awn, on the authority of Muhammad, he said: When Yazid bin Muawiyah died, Abda said to me: I do not see it except as a trial, so flee from your estate and join your family. I said: What do you command me? He said: I would prefer for you to say Ayoub and Ibn Awn, with his hand under his right cheek, describing lying down until you see a matter that you recognize.

Abu Jaafar said: He meant by ta "tadtaja", so he sufficed with the ta of tadtaja'. And as the other said in the addition to the speech, in the manner that I described:

I say, when you fell on the hill, oh my camel, you have not traveled far

He wants: all of it, and as the other said:

My appearance and your appearance are different, so stick to the shortcomings and lower your gaze

So he added a letter Dhad, but it is not in the word.

They said: Likewise, what is missing from the completion of the letters of each of these words that we mentioned is the completion of the letters Alif Lam Meem and its counterparts is similar to what is missing from the speech that we narrated from the Arabs in their poetry and speech.

As for those who said: Every letter of alif-lam-meem and its counterparts indicates various meanings, such as what we mentioned from al-Rabi' ibn Anas, they directed that to the same as the one who directed it to him who said: It is with the interpretation of God knows best, in that every letter of it is some of the letters of a complete word, and its indication of its completion suffices without mentioning its completion, even though they disagreed with him regarding every letter of that: Is it from the word that the proponents of the first opinion claimed it was from, or from another? They said: Rather, the alif of alif-lam-meem is from various words, and it indicates the meanings of all of that and its completion. They said: And each letter of that was isolated, and it was limited by it to the completion of the letters of the word, because if all the letters of the word were made clear, the word that appears, some of which have some of these disconnected letters, would only indicate one meaning, not two meanings or more than that. They said: Since there is no indication in that, if he showed all of them, except for their meaning which is one meaning, and God, the Most High, wanted to indicate with each letter of them many meanings for one thing, it is not permissible except to single out the letter indicating those meanings, so that those addressed by it know that God, the Most High, did not intend to intend one meaning and indicate one thing with what He addressed them with, and that He only intended to indicate many things with it. They said: So the Alif in Alif, Meem requires many meanings, including the completion of the name of the Lord which is God, and the completion of the name of God's blessings which are God's favors, and the indication that the life span of a people is one year, since the Alif in the abjad calculation is one. And the Lam requires the completion of the name of God which is Latif, and the completion of the name of His grace which is Latif, and the indication that the life span of a people is thirty years. And the Mim requires the completion of the name of God which is Majestic, and the completion of the name of His greatness which is Majestic, and the indication that the life span of a people is forty years. The meaning of the speech in the interpretation of those who say the first statement is that God, may He be glorified, began His speech by describing Himself as the All-Knowing from whom nothing is hidden, and He made that a method for His servants to follow at the beginning of their sermons, letters, and affairs, and a test from Him for them so that they may deserve great reward in the abode of recompense, just as He began with Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, and Praise be to God, who created the heavens and the earth, (al-An'am 6:1), and similar surahs whose openings He made praise of Himself, and just as He made the openings of some of them glorifying and venerating Himself with praise, just as He, may He be glorified, said: Glory be to Him who took His servant by night (Al-Isra': 1), and similar surahs of the Qur'an, some of which He made the openings of praising Himself, some of which He made the openings of glorifying Himself, and some of which He made the openings of glorifying and sanctifying Him. Likewise, He made the keys to the other chapters, which begin with some letters of the alphabet, praises of Himself, sometimes with knowledge, sometimes with justice and fairness, and sometimes with favor and kindness, in brief and concise terms, then the matters are summarized after that.

According to this interpretation, the alif, lam, and mim in the places of the nominative case must be raised by each other, without his saying that book, and that book would be a predicate of the subject separated from the meaning of that, lam, meem. Likewise, that in the interpretation of the saying of the one who says this second saying, is raised by each other, even if its meaning is contrary to the meaning of the saying of the ones who say the first saying.

As for those who said: They are letters from the letters of the abjad calculation without any meanings that contradict that, they said: We do not know of any meaning for the disconnected letters that can be understood other than the abjad calculation, and other than the spelling of the saying of the speaker: Alif, Lam, Meem. They said: It is not permissible for God, the Most High, to address His servants except in a way that they understand and comprehend. Since that is the case and His saying Alif, Lam, Meem does not have a rationale for it to be directed to, except one of the two aspects that we mentioned, then one of its aspects is invalid, which is that it is intended by it to spell Alif, Lam, Meem. It is correct and proven that it is intended by it to mean the second aspect, which is the abjad calculation, because the saying of the speaker: Alif, Lam, Meem cannot be followed by the speech That is the Book, because the meaning of the speech is impossible and goes beyond reason, if Alif, Lam, Meem * That is the Book follows.

Alif, Lam, Meem

They also argued for their statement with the following:

Muhammad ibn Humayd al-Razi narrated to us: Salamah ibn al-Fadl narrated to us: Muhammad ibn Ishaq narrated to me: al-Kalbi narrated to me, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Jabir ibn Abdullah ibn Ri'ab, who said: "Abu Yasir ibn Akhtab passed by the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, while he was reciting the opening verse of Surat al-Baqarah 2: 'Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt.' So he came to his brother Huyayy ibn Akhtab from the Jews and said: 'By God, you know that I heard Muhammad reciting in what God, the Almighty, revealed to him: 'Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book.' They said: 'Did you hear it?' He said: 'Yes!' So Huyayy ibn Akhtab walked with those men from the Jews to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they said: 'O Muhammad, was it not mentioned to us that you recite in what was revealed to you: 'Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book.' The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Yes.' They said: 'Did Gabriel bring you this from God?' He said: 'Yes.' They said: 'God, the Almighty, has sent prophets before you, and we do not know of any prophet among them who explained it.'" His reign was prolonged and his nation did not eat except you! So Huyayy ibn Akhtab said, and he turned to those who were with him and said to them: The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, and the Mim is forty, so that is seventy-one years. Will you enter the religion of a Prophet whose reign and nation did not eat except for seventy-one years? He said: Then he turned to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: O Muhammad, is there anything else with this? He said: Yes. He said: What? He said: Alif-Lam-Ra. He said: This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, the Mim is forty, and the Sad is ninety, so that is one hundred and sixty-one years. Is there anything else with this, O Muhammad? He said: Yes. He said: What? He said: Alif-Lam-Ra. He said: This, by God, is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, and the Ra is two hundred, so that is two hundred and thirty-one years. He said: Is there anything else with this, O Muhammad? He said: Yes, al-mar, he said: By God, this is heavier and longer, the alif is one, the lam is thirty, the mim is forty, and the ra is two hundred, so this is two hundred and seventy-one years. Then he said: Your matter has become confusing to us, O Muhammad, to the point that we do not know whether you have been given a little or a lot? Then they got up from him. Abu Yasir said to his brother Huyayy ibn Akhtab, and to the rabbis who were with him: How do you know? Perhaps he has gathered all of this for Muhammad, seventy-one, sixty-one and one hundred, two hundred and thirty-one, two hundred and seventy-one, so that is seven hundred and thirty-four years! They said: His matter has become confusing to us! And they claim that these verses were revealed about them: "It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book. In it are verses that are precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others unspecific." (Al-Imran: 7)

They said: This report clearly states the correctness of what we said about this interpretation, and the corruption of what our opponents said about it. The correct statement in my opinion about the interpretation of the keys to the surahs, which are the letters of the alphabet, is that God, the Most High, made them separate letters and did not connect some of them to others, making them like all other speech with connected letters, because He, the Most High, intended by His wording to indicate with each letter many meanings, not just one meaning, as Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas said. Even though Ar-Rabi' limited it to three meanings, without what exceeded them.

The correct interpretation of this, in my opinion, is that each letter of it contains what al-Rabi' said, and what all other commentators have said about it, except for what I mentioned from the statement of those I mentioned from the people of Arabic: that he directed the interpretation of this to that it is letters of the alphabet. It is sufficient to mention what he mentioned from it in the keys of the surahs, to mention the rest of the twenty-eight letters of the alphabet, by interpreting: that these letters, that book, are collected, there is no doubt about it, for it is a false and corrupt statement, because it departs from the statements of all the companions and followers and those who came after them from the dissenters from the people of interpretation and exegesis. So it is sufficient to indicate his error, the testimony of the argument against him by the error, with the invalidation of the one who said that, the statement we have narrated from him, when he turned to explaining the raising of that book by saying once that each one of them is raised by its companion, and another time that it is raised by the one who returns from what he mentioned in his saying there is no doubt about it, and once by his saying guidance for the righteous. This is an omission from him because of his saying: Alif, Lam, Meem is the subject of that book, and a departure from the statement he claimed in the interpretation of "Alif, Lam, Meem. That book," and that the interpretation of that is: these letters are that book.

If someone says to us: How can one letter be comprehensive in indicating many different meanings?

It was said: Just as it is permissible for a single word to include many different meanings, such as their saying for a group of al-Nas 114: a nation, and for a certain period of time: a nation, and for a man who is devout and obedient to God: a nation, and for religion and faith: a groan. And like their saying for retribution and retaliation: religion, and for authority and obedience: religion, and for humility: religion, and for accountability: religion, and in many similar things that would take too long to list, which are from speech in one word, and it includes many meanings. And likewise the saying of God, may He be glorified and exalted: Alif, Lam, Meem, and Alif, Lam, Meem, and what is similar to that from the letters of the alphabet that are the openings of the beginnings of the surahs, each letter of which indicates various meanings, including all of them from the names of God, the Almighty and Majestic, and His attributes, as the commentators said from the sayings we mentioned from them. And they are, with that, the openings of the surahs, as was said by those who said that. And the fact that these are from the letters of the names of God, may He be glorified and exalted, does not prevent them from being openings for the surahs. Because God, may He be glorified and praised, has opened many chapters of the Qur'an with praise and commendation of Himself, and many of them with glorification and magnification of Him, so it is not impossible that some of them begin with an oath by Him.

The ones whose beginnings begin with the letters of the alphabet, one of the meanings of their beginnings is that they are the openings of the chapters of the Qur'an that are opened with them. They are among what is sworn by, because one of their meanings is that they are letters of the names and attributes of God, the Most High, as we have explained previously, and there is no doubt in the correctness of the meaning of swearing by God, His names and attributes. They are among the letters of the abjad system. They are the symbols and names of the chapters that begin with them. This contains the meanings of all that we have described, of what we have explained, from its aspects. Because if God, the Most High, had intended by that, or something from it, to indicate one meaning that it could bear, without all other meanings, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would have made that clear to them without any difficulty. Since God, the Most High, had only revealed His Book to His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, to explain to them what they differed about. And in his, may God bless him and grant him peace, not explaining that, that some of its interpretations were intended by it and not others, is the clearest evidence that it was intended by it. All of its aspects that it is possible for. It was not impossible in the mind that any of them could be interpreted and meant, just as it was not impossible for many meanings of a single word to come together in a single utterance in a single statement.

Whoever rejects what we have said about this, will be asked about the difference between this and the rest of the letters that come with one pronunciation, while including many different meanings, such as nation and religion and similar nouns and verbs. He will not say a statement about one of these without obligating the other to say the same.

Likewise, everyone who interprets something of that in a way other than the other ways we have described asks about the proof for his claim, from the way that must be accepted. Then he opposes it with the statement of his opponent in that, and asks the difference between him and him: from the origin, or from what the origin indicates. So he will not say a statement except that he will impose the same in the other.

As for the grammarians who claimed that this is similar to the saying of the poet:

Rather, what stirred up sorrows and grief has been grief-stricken.

And that it has no meaning, but rather it is an addition to the speech, the meaning of which is to be discarded. He made a mistake in many ways:

One of them: He described God Almighty as having addressed the Arabs in a language other than theirs, and other than the language of any human being. Since the Arabs, even though they used to begin the beginnings of their poetry with bal, it is known that they did not begin any of their speech with alif-lam-meem, "alif-lam-ra," or alif-sam-meem, meaning beginning it with bal. Since that was not part of their beginning, and God Almighty only addressed them with what He addressed them from the Qur'an, with what they knew of their languages and used among themselves of their speech, in every verse, there is no doubt that the path of what we have described of the letters of the alphabet, with which the beginnings of the surahs are opened, which are their openings, is the path of the rest of the Qur'an, in that He did not deviate with them from their languages, which they knew and used among themselves in their speech. Because if that was changed from their language and logic, it would be outside the meaning of clarification with which God the Almighty described the Qur'an, as He the Almighty said: The Trustworthy Spirit has brought it down upon your heart, that you may be among the warners, in a clear Arabic tongue (Ash-Shu'ara': 193-195). How can it be clear what no one in the world can comprehend or understand, in the words of the one who said this statement, and is not known in the logic of any of the created beings, in his words? And in God's statement that he is a clear Arabic, there is what belies this statement, and indicates that the Arabs were knowledgeable about him, and he is clear about it. So that is one of the aspects of his error.

The second aspect of his error in that: by attributing to God, may He be glorified, that he addressed his servants with something that has no benefit to them and no meaning, from speech in which it is the same to address it or not to address it. That is to attribute the futility that is denied in the words of all monotheists about God to God, may He be glorified.

The third aspect of his error: that ba/in the speech of the Arabs has the meaning of its interpretation and meaning, and that they include it in their speech in order to return to a statement that has already been completed, like their saying: Your brother did not come to me, but your father, and I did not see Omar, but Abdullah, and similar statements, as A'sha of Banu Tha'labah said:

Alif, Lam, Meem

And I will drink eight, eight, thirteen, two, and four.

He continued his speech until he said:

In the sitting, and the goodness of his arms is like a balloon hitting me with a finger

Then he said:

Rather, count this, in another poem, and mention a young man of generous nature, the most wonderful.

It is as if he said: Leave this and take up another verse. Rather, it only comes in the speech of the Arabs in this manner of speech. As for opening their speech with a beginning with the meaning of length and deletion, without indicating a meaning, this is something that we do not know of anyone who has claimed from the people of knowledge of the language of the Arabs and their logic, except for the one whose statement I mentioned. So this would be a principle by which the letters of the alphabet, which are the openings of the chapters of the Qur'an that were opened with them, could be likened if they were similar to it, so how is it that it is far from resembling it?

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God." The people of interpretation differed regarding the letters at the beginning of the surahs. Amir Al-Sha'bi, Sufyan Al-Thawri, and a group of hadith scholars said: They are the secret of God in the Quran, and God has a secret in every book of His. They are among the ambiguous verses that God alone has knowledge of, and it is not necessary to speak about them, but we believe in them and read them as they came. This statement was narrated on the authority of Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq and Ali bin Abi Talib, may God be pleased with them. Abu Al-Layth Al-Samarqandi mentioned on the authority of Omar, Othman, and Ibn Mas'ud that they said: The disconnected letters are among the hidden that cannot be explained. Abu Hatim said: We did not find the disconnected letters in the Quran except at the beginning of the surahs, and we do not know what God, the Almighty, intended by them.

I said: And from this meaning is what Abu Bakr al-Anbari mentioned: Al-Hasan bin al-Habbab told us, Abu Bakr bin Abi Talib told us, Abu al-Mundhir al-Wasiti told us, on the authority of Malik bin Mughul, on the authority of Saeed bin Masruq, on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Khathim, who said: Indeed, God the Most High revealed this Qur'an and kept to Himself the knowledge of whatever He willed, and He informed you of whatever He willed. As for what He kept to Himself, you will not attain it, so do not ask about it. As for what He informed you of, it is what you will ask about and be informed of. You do not know all of the Qur'an, nor do you act on all of what you know. Abu Bakr said: This clarifies that the meanings of letters from the Qur'an were concealed from the entire world, as a test and examination from God the Almighty. So whoever believes in them will be rewarded and happy, and whoever disbelieves and doubts will be sinful and far away. Abu Yusuf bin Yaqub al-Qadi told us, Muhammad bin Abi Bakr told us, Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of Amara, on the authority of Harith bin Dhahir, on the authority of Abdullah, who said: No believer has faith better than faith in the unseen. Then he recited: Those who believe in the unseen.

I said: This is the statement about the ambiguous and its ruling, and it is correct according to what will be explained in Al Imran, God willing. A large group of scholars said: Rather, we must speak about it, and seek the benefits that lie beneath it, and the meanings that derive from it, and they differed on that with many statements. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas and Ali also: The disconnected letters in the Qur'an are the greatest name of God, except that we do not know how it is composed of them. Qatrib, Al-Farra' and others said: It is an indication of the letters of the alphabet, which God informed the Arabs of when He challenged them with the Qur'an that it is composed of letters that are the basis of their speech, so that their inability to do so would be more effective in the argument against them, since it did not depart from their speech. Qatrib said: They used to be averse when listening to the Qur'an, but when they heard Alif, Lam, Meem, and Meem, they found this wording strange, so when they listened to him, may God bless him and grant him peace, he turned to them with the disconnected Qur'an to establish it in their ears and establish the argument against them. Some people said: It was narrated that when the polytheists turned away from listening to the Qur'an in Mecca and said: Do not listen to this Qur'an and speak noisily during it, it was revealed so that they would find it strange and open their ears to it so that they would listen to the Qur'an after that, and the proof would be obligatory upon them. A group said: They are letters indicating names from which they were taken and the rest of them were deleted, like the saying of Ibn Abbas and others: The Alif is from God, the Lam is from Gabriel, and the Meem is from Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. It was said: The Alif is the key to His name God, the Lam is the key to Hear, the Subtle, and the Meem is the key to His name Majeed. Abu Ad-Dhaha narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding His statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: I am God, most knowing, Alif, Lam, I am God, most seeing, Alif, Lam, Meem, I am God, most excellent. So the Alif conveys the meaning of I, the Lam conveys the name of God, and the Meem conveys the meaning of I know. Az-Zajaj chose this statement and said: I believe that each letter of them conveys a meaning, and the Arabs spoke with the disconnected letters in order to organize them and place them instead of the words from which the letters are, like His statement:

I told her to stop and she said stop

He wanted: She said I stopped: And Zuhair said:

I do good things, and if I do evil things, I do not want evil unless you wish it.

He wanted: And if it is evil, then it is evil. He wanted: Unless you will.

Another said:

Call them all together, they said all of them, they are thousands

He wanted: Why don't you ride? They said: Why don't you ride? And in the hadith:

Whoever helps in killing a Muslim with half a word, Shaiq said: "It is to say in 'kill': 'Aq', as the Prophet, peace be upon him, said:

"Kafy bi-sif sha" means: healer.

Zayd ibn Aslam said: They are names of the Surahs. Al-Kalbi said: They are oaths that God the Almighty swore by for their honor and excellence, and they are among His names, also on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Some scholars rejected this statement and said: It is not correct for it to be an oath because the oath is based on letters such as: in, qad, qad, and ma, and none of these letters are found here, so it is not permissible for it to be an oath. The answer is to say: The subject of the oath is the statement of God the Almighty: "There is no doubt about it." So if a person swore and said: By God, this is the Book, there is no doubt about it, then the statement would be correct, and la would be the answer to the oath. So it is proven that the statement of Al-Kalbi and what was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas is correct.

If it is said: What is the wisdom behind the oath from God the Almighty, when people at that time were of two types: those who believed and those who disbelieved. The one who believed believed without an oath, and the one who disbelieved did not believe with an oath? It is said to him: The Qur'an was revealed in the language of the Arabs, and when one of the Arabs wanted to confirm his words, he would swear by his words, and God the Almighty wanted to confirm the argument against them, so He swore that the Qur'an was from Him. Some of them said: Alif, Lam, Meem, meaning I have sent down to you this book from the Preserved Tablet. Qatada said about His statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, Qal is one of the names of the Qur'an. It was narrated on the authority of Muhammad bin Ali al-Tirmidhi that he said: God the Almighty deposited all of what is in that surah of rulings and stories in the letters that He mentioned at the beginning of the surah of rulings and stories in the letters that He mentioned at the beginning of the surah, and no one knows that except a prophet or a saint, then He explained that throughout the surah so that people would understand. Other statements were said, and God knows best.

Stopping on these letters is sukoon because they are deficient, unless you inform about them or connect them, in which case you parse them. There is a difference of opinion: Does it have a place in parsing? It was said: No, because they are not proper nouns, nor present tense verbs, but rather they are like spelling letters, so they are narrated. This is the school of thought of Al-Khalil and Sibawayh. Whoever says that they are the names of the surahs, their place is in the nominative case, as they are with the predicate of an implied subject, i.e. this is Surat Al-Baqarah. Or it is in the nominative case as a subject and the predicate is that, as you say: Zayd is that man. Ibn Kaysan the grammarian said: Al-Mam is in the accusative case, as you say: Read Al-Mam or Upon you is Al-Mam. It was said: In the genitive case with an oath, based on the statement of Ibn Abbas: It is an oath by God.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The commentators differed regarding the disconnected letters at the beginning of the surahs. Some of them said that they are among the things that God has kept to Himself, so they attributed their knowledge to God and did not explain them. Al-Qurtubi narrated this in his commentary on the authority of Abu Bakr, Umar, Uthman, Ali, and Ibn Masoud, may God be pleased with them all. It was also said by Aamer Al-Shaabi, Sufyan Al-Thawri, and Al-Rabi' bin Khaitham, and Abu Hatim bin Hibban chose it. Some of them explained them, and these differed regarding their meaning. Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said that they are only the names of the surahs. The scholar Abu Al-Qasim Mahmoud bin Umar Al-Zamakhshari said in his commentary, and the majority agree on this, and he narrated from Sibawayh that he stated this explicitly. This is supported by what was reported in the two Sahihis on the authority of Abu Hurairah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to recite in the dawn prayer on Friday Alif-Lam-Meem The Prostration and Has there come upon man? Sufyan Al-Thawri said on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh on the authority of Mujahid that he said: Alif-Lam-Meem, Ha-Mim, Alif-Lam-Sad, and Sad. The openings with which God opened the Qur'an, and this is what others said on the authority of Mujahid. Mujahid said in the narration of Abu Hudhayfah Musa ibn Mas'ud on the authority of Shibl on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh on his authority that he said: Alif, Lam, Meem is one of the names of the Qur'an. This is what Qatada and Zayd ibn Aslam said, and perhaps this goes back to the meaning of the statement of Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam that it is one of the names of the surah, because every surah is called the Qur'an, so it is unlikely that Alif, Lam, Meem is a name for the entire Qur'an, because what comes to the mind of the listener who says: I read Alif, Lam, Meem is that this refers to Surat al-A'raf, not to the entire Qur'an, and God knows best.

It was said that it is one of the names of God the Most High. Al-Sha'bi said: The openings of the surahs are among the names of God the Most High. Salim bin Abdullah and Ismail bin Abdul Rahman Al-Suddi Al-Kabir said the same. Shu'bah said on the authority of Al-Suddi: It reached me that Ibn Abbas said: Alif, Lam, Meem is one of the greatest names of God. This is how Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it on the authority of Shu'bah. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Bandar on the authority of Ibn Mahdi on the authority of Shu'bah who said: I asked Al-Suddi about Ha Mim, Ta, Seen, and Alif, Lam, Meem. Ibn Abbas said: It is the greatest name of God. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna narrated to us, Abu Al-Nu'man narrated to us, Shu'bah narrated to us on the authority of Isra'il Al-Suddi on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani who said: Abdullah said and he mentioned something similar. He narrated something similar on the authority of Ali and Ibn Abbas. Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: It is an oath by which God swore and it is one of the names of God the Most High. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Ulayyah on the authority of Khalid Al-Hadha' on the authority of Ikrimah who said: Alif, Lam, Meem is an oath. They also narrated from the hadith of Sharik bin Abdullah, on the authority of Ata bin Al-Saib, on the authority of Abu Al-Dhaha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: I am God, and I know best, and Saeed bin Jubair said the same, and Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik.

On the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: As for Alif, Lam, Meem, they are letters that begin with the letters of spelling the names of God Almighty. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, regarding the words of God Almighty, Alif, Lam, Meem, he said: These three letters are among the twenty-nine letters that all tongues have spoken about. There is no letter among them that is not a key to one of His names, and there is no letter among them that is not from His favors and trials. There is no letter among them that is not in the duration of peoples and their appointed times. Jesus, son of Mary, peace be upon him, said: And he was amazed. He said: I am amazed that they pronounce His names and live in His provision, so how can they disbelieve in Him? The Alif is the key to the name of God, the Lam is the key to His name Latif, and the Mim is the key to His name Majeed. So the Alif is the favors of God, the Lam is the kindness of God, and the Mim is the glory of God. The Alif is years, the Lam is thirty years, and the Mim is forty years.

This is the wording of Ibn Abi Hatim. And something similar was narrated by Ibn Jarir. Then he began to explain each of these statements and reconcile them, and that there is no contradiction between each one of them and the other, and that combining them is possible, as they are names of the surahs and from the names of God the Most High, with which the surahs begin, so each letter of them indicates one of His names and one of His attributes, just as He began many surahs with praising Him, glorifying Him, and magnifying Him. He said, "There is no objection to the letter of them indicating one of the names of God, one of His attributes, a period, and other things, as mentioned by Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, because a single word is used for many meanings, such as the word nation, which is used to mean religion, as in His Almighty's saying, "Indeed, we found our fathers following a nation," and it is used to mean the man who obeys God, as in His Almighty's saying, Indeed, Abraham was a nation obedient to God, inclining toward truth, and he was not of those who associate others with God, and it is used to mean the group, as in His Almighty's saying, He found upon him a nation of people who watered, and His Almighty's saying, And We had certainly sent among every nation a messenger, and it is used to mean a time of time, as in His Almighty's saying, And the one of them who was saved said, and remembered after a time. That is, after a while, according to the more correct of the two opinions. He said, So it is the same with this.

This is the gist of his speech, but it is not as Abu Al-Aaliyah mentioned, for Abu Al-Aaliyah claimed that the letter indicated both this and that, and the word ummah and similar words that are common to reform only indicated in the Qur'an in every place a single meaning indicated by the context of the speech. As for carrying it on all its meanings if possible, this is a matter of disagreement among the scholars of Usul, and this is not the place to discuss it, and God knows best. Then the word ummah indicates each of its meanings in the context of the speech by the indication of the situation. As for the indication of a single letter to a name that can indicate another name without one of them being more deserving than the other in estimation or implication by situation or otherwise, this is something that cannot be understood except by stopping, and the issue is disputed and there is no consensus on it to rule by it. And what they cited of evidence for the correctness of applying a single letter to the rest of the word, for in the context there is what indicates what was deleted, unlike this, as the poet said:

We said, "Stop for us. She said, Qaf." Don't think that we forgot to stop.

It means I stood up and the other said:

Why is the oppressed so high? How can he not save his skin if he does not?

Ibn Jarir said: It is as if he wanted to say: If he does such and such, he was satisfied with the letter ya from yafala. The other said:

I do good things, and if I do evil things, I do not want evil unless you wish it.

He says, And if it is evil, then it is evil, and I do not want evil unless you will. He was satisfied with the fa and ta of the two words instead of the rest of them, but this is apparent from the context of the speech, and God knows best.

Al-Qurtubi said: In the hadith: Whoever helps in killing a Muslim with half a word. The hadith said: Sufyan said: It is to say in kill Qaf. Khasif said on the authority of Mujahid that he said: The opening letters of all the surahs Qaf, Sad, Ha Meem, Ta Seem, Alif, Ra and others are fabricated spellings. Some of the Arabists said: They are letters from the alphabet. Mentioning what is mentioned of them at the beginnings of the surahs is sufficient to mention the rest of them, which complete the twenty-eight letters, just as someone says: My son writes in A B T Th meaning in the twenty-eight letters of the alphabet, so mentioning some of them is sufficient to mention all of them. This was narrated by Ibn Jarir.

I said: The total number of letters mentioned at the beginning of the surahs, after deleting the repeated ones, is fourteen letters, and they are: A L M S R K H Y

A T S H Q N - which are collected in your saying: نَسْ حَكِيم قَطْ هَسْ شَعْ رَبْ سَرْ. They are half the number of letters, and the ones mentioned are more honorable than the ones omitted. Explaining that is from the art of morphology: Al-Zamakhshari said: These fourteen letters include various types of letters, meaning the voiceless and the voiced, the weak and the strong, the closed and the open, the high and the low, and the letters of qalqalah. He listed them in detail, then said: Glory be to He whose wisdom is precise in everything. These enumerated types are abundant with those mentioned among them. You have learned that most of a thing and its bulk are considered as its whole. From here, some of them noted a statement in this regard and said: There is no doubt that these letters were not revealed by God Almighty in vain or for nothing. And whoever among the ignorant people said that in the Qur'an there is that which is an act of worship that has no meaning at all has made a great mistake. It is necessary that it has a meaning in itself. If something is confirmed to us about it from the infallible one, we say it. Otherwise, we stop where we stopped and say, "We believe in it. All of it is from our Lord." The scholars did not agree on a specific thing about it, but rather they differed. So whoever finds some of the statements with evidence, he must follow it. Otherwise, he should stop until this matter becomes clear.

The other point in the wisdom that required the inclusion of these letters at the beginning of the surahs is what they are, regardless of their meanings in themselves. Some of them said that they were only mentioned so that the beginnings of the surahs would be known by them, as narrated by Ibn Jarir. This is weak because the separation is achieved without them in what they were not mentioned in and in what the Basmalah was mentioned in recitation and writing. Others said that it was begun with them so that the ears of the polytheists would be opened to listening to it, since they advised each other to turn away from the Qur'an, until when they listened to it, the author recited it to them. Ibn Jarir also narrated this, and it is weak because if it were so, it would be in all the surahs, not in some of them, but in most of them. It is also not so, so it is not appropriate to begin with them at the beginning of speaking to them, whether it is the opening of a surah or otherwise. Then this surah and the one following it, I mean Al-Baqarah and Al-Imran, are Medinan and are not addressed to the polytheists, so what they mentioned is refuted by these aspects. Others said: Rather, these letters were mentioned at the beginning of the surahs in which it was mentioned, as a statement of the miraculous nature of the Qur'an and that creation is incapable of opposing it with anything like it, even though it is composed of these separate letters with which they communicate. This school of thought was narrated by al-Razi in his interpretation on the authority of al-Mubarrad and a group of scholars. Al-Qurtubi narrated something similar to this on the authority of al-Farra' and Qutrub. Al-Zamakhshari established it in his Kashshaf and supported it with the most complete support. The Sheikh, the Imam, the scholar Abu al-Abbas Ibn Taymiyyah and our Sheikh, the hafiz and mujtahid Abu al-A'aj al-Mizzi went with it, and he narrated it to me on the authority of Ibn Taymiyyah.

Al-Zamakhshari said: Not all of them were mentioned together at the beginning of the Qur'an, but they were repeated to be more eloquent in the challenge and rebuke, as many stories were repeated, and the challenge was repeated explicitly in places. He said: And it came from one letter, like His saying: S.N.Q. and two letters like Ha Mim and three like Alif, Lam, Meem and five like Ka Ha Ya Ain Sad "Ha Mim * Ain Sin Qaf." Because their speech styles are like this, some words are on one letter, two letters, three letters, four letters, and five letters, no more than that. I said For this reason, every surah that begins with letters must mention in it the victory of the Qur'an and the statement of its miraculousness and greatness. This is known by induction, and it is the case in twenty-nine surahs. For this reason, the Almighty says: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt." "Alif, Lam, Meem. God - there is no god but He, the Ever-Living, the Sustainer of [all] existence. He has sent down to you the Book with the truth, confirming what was before it." "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is a Book revealed to you, so let there not be in your breast any difficulty therefrom." "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is a Book We have revealed to you that you may bring mankind out of darkness into the light by permission of their Lord." "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is a revelation." The Book, there is no doubt about it, is from the Lord of the worlds. "Ha Meem. It is a revelation from the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful." "Ha Meem. Ain Sin Qaf. Thus is revealed to you and to those before you by God, the Exalted in Might, the Wise." And other verses indicate the correctness of what these people have said for those who look closely, and God knows best.

As for the one who claims that it indicates knowledge of the duration and that the times of incidents, tribulations and great battles can be extracted from that, he has claimed what is not his and has flown in the wrong direction. A weak hadith has been reported regarding that, and it is more indicative of the invalidity of this approach than adhering to it as being authentic. It is what Muhammad ibn Ishaq ibn Yasar, the author of Al-Maghazi, narrated: Al-Kalbi told me on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas on the authority of Jabir ibn Abdullah ibn Riab, who said: Abu Yasir ibn Akhtab passed by some Jewish men while the Messenger of God was reciting the opening verse of Surat Al-Baqarah, "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt." So he came to his brother Huyayy ibn Akhtab with some Jewish men and said: By God, you know that I heard Muhammad reciting in what God Almighty revealed to him, "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt." He said: Did you hear it? He said: Yes. So Huyayy ibn Akhtab walked with those men of the Jews to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they said: O Muhammad, did he not mention that you recite in what God revealed to you, "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book"? The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Yes. They said: Gabriel brought you this from God? He said, "Yes. They said, God sent prophets before you, and we do not know of any prophet who explained to them the duration of his reign and the life span of his nation except you. Then Huyayy ibn Akhtab stood up and turned to those who were with him and said to them, The Alif is one, the

Alif, Lam, Meem

Lam is thirty, and the Mim is forty, so that is seventy-one years. Will you enter the religion of a prophet whose reign and the life span of his nation are only seventy-one years?" Then he turned to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said, "O Muhammad, is there anything else with this? He said, Yes. He said, What is that? He said, Alif-S. He said, This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, and the Mim is forty, and the Sad is seventy, so that is one hundred and thirty-one years. Is there anything else with this, O Muhammad? He said, Yes. He said, What is that? He said, Alif-Ra. He said, "This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, and the Ra is two hundred, so that is two hundred and thirty-one years." So is there anything else with this, O Muhammad?" He said: Yes. He said: What did Al-Marr say? He said: This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, the Mim is forty, and the Ra is two hundred. This is two hundred and seventy-one. Then he said: Your matter has become confusing to us, O Muhammad, to the point that we do not know whether you have been given a little or a lot. Then he said: Get up from him. Then Abu Yasir said to his brother Huyayy ibn Akhtab and those rabbis who were with him: How do you know? Perhaps he has gathered all of this for Muhammad: seventy-one, thirty-one, one hundred, thirty-one, two hundred, two hundred and seventy-one. That is seven hundred and four years? They said: His matter has become confusing to us. They claim that these verses were revealed about them: "It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book. In it are verses that are precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others that are unspecific." This hadith is based on Muhammad ibn al-Sa'ib al-Kalbi, who is one of those who cannot be relied upon for what he narrated alone. Then the requirement of this approach, if it is correct, is to calculate what each letter of the fourteen letters that we mentioned has, and that amounts to a large sum. And if it is calculated with repetition, then it is more complete and greater, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

Al-Qurtubi said in his interpretation of Surat al-Baqarah 2: It is a Medinan surah that was revealed at various times. It was said that it was the first surah to be revealed in Medina, except for the verse: "And fear a Day when you will be returned to God", for it is the last verse to be revealed from the sky, and it was revealed on the Day of Sacrifice during the Farewell Pilgrimage in Mina. The verses on usury are also among the last to be revealed from the Qur'an. End quote. Abu Al-Durais narrated in his Fad'hail, Abu Ja'far Al-Nahas in Al-Nasikh wal-Mansukh, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi in Dal'il Al-Nubuwwah, through various chains of transmission, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Surat Al-Baqarah was revealed in Medina. Ibn Mardawayh narrated something similar on the authority of Abdullah bin Al-Zubayr. Abu Dawud narrated in Al-Nasikh wal-Mansukh on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: The first surah to be revealed in Medina was Surat Al-Baqarah.

There are hadiths about its merits, including what was narrated by Muslim, Al-Tirmidhi, Ahmad, Al-Bukhari in his history, and Muhammad ibn Nasr on the authority of Al-Nawwas ibn Sam'an, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: The Qur'an and its people who used to act upon it in the world will be brought, preceded by Surat Al-Baqarah and Al-Imran. He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, gave three examples for them that I have not forgotten since. He said: They are like two clouds, or like two shadows, or like two black canopies, or like two flocks of white birds pleading on behalf of their companion. Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ahmad, Al-Darimi, Muhammad ibn Nasr, and Al-Hakim narrated, and he authenticated it, on the authority of Buraydah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Learn Surat Al-Baqarah, for taking it is a blessing and abandoning it is a cause of regret, and the sorcerers cannot do it. Then he was silent for a while, then he said: Learn Surat Al-Baqarah and Al-Imran, for they are the two lights that will shade their companion on the Day of Resurrection like two clouds, or like two shadows, or like two flocks of white birds." Ibn Kathir said: Its chain of transmission is good according to the conditions of Muslim. Abu Ubaid, Ahmad, Humayd ibn Zanjawayh, Muslim, al-Tabarani, al-Hakim and al-Bayhaqi narrated something similar from the hadith of Abu Umaamah, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. Al-Tabarani and Abu Dharr al-Harawi also narrated something similar with a weak chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Al-Bazzar also narrated something similar in his Sunan with a saheeh chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Abu Hurayrah. Muslim, al-Tirmidhi and Ahmad narrated something similar from Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: Do not make your homes into graves, for Satan flees from a house in which Surat al-Baqarah is recited. Abu Ubaid narrated something similar with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Anas. Ibn Adi narrated something similar in al-Kamil and Ibn Asakir narrated something similar in his history traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Abu al-Darda'. Al-Tabarani narrated something similar with a weak chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mughaffal. Al-Nasa'i, al-Tabarani and al-Bayhaqi narrated something similar with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud. Its chain of transmission is weak. Ad-Darimi, Al-Bayhaqi and Al-Hakim narrated it and authenticated it from his hadith in a similar manner. Abu Ya'la, Ibn Hibban, At-Tabarani and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Sahl ibn Sa'd As-Sa'idi who said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "Everything has a peak, and the peak of the Qur'an is Surat Al-Baqarah. Whoever recites it in his house during the day, Satan will not enter it for three days, and whoever recites it in his house at night, Satan will not enter it for three nights." Ahmad, Muhammad ibn Nasr and At-Tabarani narrated with a saheeh chain of transmission on the authority of Mu'qil ibn Yasar that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "Al-Baqarah is the peak of the Qur'an and its pinnacle. Eighty angels descended with each verse of it, and 'God, there is no god but He, the Ever-Living, the Self-Sustaining' was extracted from beneath the Throne and connected to it." Al-Baghawi narrated in his Mu'jam As-Sahaabah and Ibn 'Asakir in his history on the authority of Rabia Al-Jarsi who said: "The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was asked: Which Qur'an is best? He said: The Surah in which the cow is mentioned. It was said: Which cow is best? He said: Ayat Al-Kursi and the last verses of Surat Al-Baqarah were revealed from beneath the Throne." Abu Ubaid, Ahmad, Al-Bukhari in his Sahih, Muslim and Al-Nasa'i narrated on the authority of Asid bin Hudhair, who said: "While he was reciting Surat Al-Baqarah at night and his horse was tied up next to him, the horse started to tremble, so he was silent and then calmed down. Then he recited: 'Then the horse started to tremble,' so he was silent and then calmed down. Then he recited: 'Then the horse started to tremble,' so he was silent and then calmed down. He turned to his son Yahya, who was close to it and was afraid that it would strike him. When he took him, he raised his head to the sky and saw something like a canopy in which were things like lamps ascending to the sky so that he could not see them. When morning came, he told the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about that, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Do you know what that was?' He said: 'No, O Messenger of God.' He said: 'Those were the angels who came near to your voice. If you had recited, people would have seen them in the morning and they would not have hidden from them.' " There are different wordings for this hadith. Al-Tirmidhi narrated, and al-Nasa'i, Ibn Majah, Ibn Hibban and al-Hakim authenticated it, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, sent out an expedition and asked each man to recite the Qur'an" meaning what he had memorized of the Qur'an. "Then he came to a man who was the youngest among them and said: 'What do you have with you, so-and-so?' He said: 'I have such-and-such and Surat al-Baqarah.' He said: 'Do you have Surat al-Baqarah with you?' He said: 'Yes.' He said: 'Go, for you are their leader.' " Al-Bayhaqi narrated in al-Dala'il on the authority of Uthman ibn Abi al-'As, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, appointed me as a leader when I was the youngest of the people who had come to him from Thaqeef, and that was because I had memorized Surat al-Baqarah. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in al-Shu'ab with a saheeh isnad on the authority of al-Salsal ibn al-Daihams that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Recite Surat al-Baqarah in your homes and do not turn them into graves. He said: Whoever recites Surat al-Baqarah at night will be crowned with a crown in Paradise. Abu Ubaid narrated on the authority of Ibad bin Ibad on the authority of Jarir bin Hazim on the authority of his uncle Jarir bin Yazid that the elders of the people of Medina narrated on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that it was said to him: Did you not see Thabit bin Qais bin Shammas? His house was still shining with lamps last night. He said: Perhaps he recited Surat Al-Baqarah. Thabit was asked and he said: I recited Surat Al-Baqarah. Ibn Kathir said: This is a good chain of transmission, except that there is some ambiguity in it and it is mursal.

The Imams of Hadith have narrated many Hadiths and extensive reports from the Companions about its virtues. Among its virtues are those specific to Ayat al-Kursi, those specific to the last verses of this Surah, some of which have been mentioned previously, and those specific to its virtues and the virtues of Al-Imran. Some of which have also been mentioned previously, and those specific to the virtues of the seven long verses, as Abu Ubaid narrated on the authority of Wathilah ibn al-Asqa' on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: I was given the seven in place of the Torah, and I was given the hundred in place of the Gospel, and I was given the Mathani in place of the Psalms, and I was given preference with the Mufassal. In its chain of transmission is Saeed ibn Bashir, who is weak. He narrated it with another chain of transmission on the authority of Saeed ibn Abi Hilal. He also narrated on the authority of Aisha on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Whoever takes the seven is better. Ahmad narrated it on her authority in al-Musnad with the wording that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever takes the first seven of the Qur'an is better. Abu Ubaid narrated on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair regarding the Almighty's statement: And We have given you seven of the oft-repeated verses, he said: They are the seven long ones: Al-Baqarah, Al-Imran, An-Nisa, Al-Ma'idah, Al-An'am, Al-A'raf, and Yunus. This is what Mujahid, Makhul, Atiyah bin Qais, Abu Muhammad Al-Qari, Shaddad bin Abdullah, and Yahya bin Al-Harith Al-Dhamari said.

There is evidence that it is disliked for someone to say Surat Al-Baqarah, nor Surat Al-Imran, nor Surat An-Nisa, nor the entire Qur'an. Ibn Ad-Durais, At-Tabarani in Al-Awsat, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Bayhaqi in Ash-Shu'ab narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Anas that he said: The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: "Do not say Surat Al-Baqarah, nor Surat Al-Imran, nor Surat An-Nisa, nor the entire Qur'an. Rather, say the surah in which Al-Baqarah is mentioned, and the surah in which Al-Imran is mentioned, and the entire Qur'an." Ibn Kathir said: This is a strange hadith that cannot be traced back to the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him). In its chain of transmission is Yahya ibn Maymun Al-Khawass, who is a weak narrator and cannot be relied upon. Al-Bayhaqi narrated with a sound chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Umar that he said: Do not say Surat Al-Baqarah, but say the surah in which Al-Baqarah is mentioned. A group of the Companions have narrated otherwise. It is proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud that he threw the pebbles at the Jamarat from the valley, with the Ka'bah on his left and Mina on his right, then he said: This is the station of the one upon whom Surat Al-Baqarah was revealed. Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ahmad, Muslim, the Sunan scholars and al-Hakim, who authenticated it, narrated on the authority of Hudhayfah, who said: "I prayed with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, one night in Ramadan, and he began with al-Baqarah. I said: 'He should pray with it in one rak'ah. Then he began with al-Nisa' and recited it, then he began with Al-Imran and recited it slowly." The hadith. Ahmad, Ibn al-Durais and al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Aishah, who said: "I used to stand with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, at night, and he would recite al-Baqarah, Al-Imran and al-Nisa'." Abu Dawud, al-Tirmidhi in al-Shama'il, al-Nasa'i and al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Awf ibn Malik al-Ashja'i, who said: "I stood with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, one night, and he stood and recited Surat al-Baqarah. He would not pass by a verse of mercy without pausing." The hadith.

1- "Alif, Lam, Meem" Al-Qurtubi said in his interpretation: The people of interpretation differed regarding the letters at the beginning of the surahs. Al-Sha'bi, Sufyan Al-Thawri, and a group of the hadith scholars said: They are the secret of God in the Quran, and God has a secret in every book of His books. They are among the ambiguous things that God alone has knowledge of, and we do not like to speak about them, but we believe in them and extend them as they came. This statement was narrated on the authority of Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq and Ali bin Abi Talib. He said: Abu Al-Layth Al-Samarqandi mentioned on the authority of Omar, Othman, and Ibn Masoud that they said: The disconnected letters are among the hidden that are not explained. Abu Hatim said: We did not find the letters in the Quran except at the beginning of the surahs, and we do not know what God Almighty intended. He said: A large group of scholars said: Rather, we like to speak about them and seek the benefits that lie beneath them and the meanings that derive from them. They differed on that with many statements. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Ali also that the disconnected letters in the Quran are the Greatest Name of God, except that we do not know how it was composed from them. Qatrib, Al-Farra and others said: It is a reference to the letters of the alphabet, which God informed the Arabs of when He challenged them with the Qur'an, that it is composed of letters that are the basis of their speech, so that their inability to do so would be more effective in the argument against them, since it did not depart from their speech. Qatrib said: They used to be averse when listening to the Qur'an, but when Alif, Lam, Meem, Sad was revealed, they found this wording strange. When they listened to him, the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) turned to them with the composed Qur'an to establish it in their ears and establish the argument against them. Some people said: It was narrated that when the polytheists turned away from the Qur'an in Mecca, And those who disbelieved said, 'Do not listen to this Qur'an and speak noisily during it,' so He revealed it, and they found it strange, so they opened their ears and heard the Qur'an after it, and the argument became binding on them. A group said: They are letters indicating names from which some were taken and the rest was deleted, like the saying of Ibn Abbas and others: Alif is from God, Lam is from Gabriel, and Meem is from Muhammad. Al-Zajaj agreed with this and said: I think that each letter of it conveys a meaning. The Arabs spoke with disconnected letters, as in his saying: I said to her, 'Stop,' and she said, 'Qaf,' meaning, I stopped. In the hadith, Whoever helps in killing a Muslim with half a word, Shaiq said: It is to say in kill Qaf, as the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The sword is sufficient as a healer, meaning a witness, and in another version, as a witness. Zayd ibn Aslam said: They are names of the surahs. Al-Kalbi said: They are sections that God has sworn by for their honor and excellence, and they are among His names.

Among the most precise things that theologians have highlighted regarding the meanings of these letters is what al-Zamakhshari mentioned in al-Kashshaf, for he said: Know that if you contemplate what God Almighty has mentioned in the openings of these names, you will find that they are half the names of the letters of the alphabet, fourteen alike: they are alif, lam, mim, sad, ra, kaf, ha, ya, ain, ta, sin, ha, qaf, and nun in twenty-nine surahs, the number of letters of the alphabet. Then if you look at these fourteen, you will find that they include half the types of letters. The explanation for this is that among the unvoiced letters, half are Šād, kaf, ha', sin, and ha'; among the voiced letters, half are alif, lam, meem, ra', 'ayn, ta', qaf, ya', and nun; among the strong letters, half are alif, kaf, ta', and nun; among the soft letters, half are lam, meem, ra', sad, ha', 'ayn, sin, ha', ya', and nun; among the muṭabqā, half are Šād and ta'; among the open letters, half are alif, lam, meem, ra', kaf, ha', 'ayn, sin, ha', qaf, ya', and nun; among the emphatic letters, half are qaf, sad, and ta'; among the low letters, half are alif, lam, meem, ra', kaf, ha', ta', 'ayn, sin, ha', and nun; and among the qalqalah letters, half are qaf and ta'. Then if you settle on the words and their combinations, you will see that the letters that God has omitted mentioning from these enumerated types are treasured with those mentioned from them. So glory be to Him whose wisdom is precise in everything, and you have known that most of a thing and its bulk are placed in the position of its whole, and it is the same as the subtle revelation and its abbreviations. So it is as if God, the Exalted, enumerated for the Arabs the words from which the combinations of their speech are made, indicating what I mentioned of rebuking them and obligating the argument to them. And what indicates that He intentionally mentioned from the letters of the alphabet those that occur most frequently in the combinations of words is that the alif and lam, since they occur frequently in them, came in most of these openings repeated, and they are the openings of Surat Al-Baqarah, Al-Imran, Ar-Rum, Al-Ankabut, Luqman, As-Sajdah, Al-A'raf, Ar-Ra'd, Yunus, Ibrahim, Hud, Yusuf, and Al-Hijr. I say: This scrutiny does not bring any significant benefit, and its explanation is that if what is meant by it is to obligate the argument and rebuke as he said: This is easy by saying to them: This Qur'an is from the letters that you speak with, it is not from letters different from them, so this would be a rebuke and an obligation that everyone who is with them understands without riddles, obfuscation, and separating these letters into the openings of twenty-nine surahs, because this, with what it contains of prolongation that its listener cannot complete except by hearing all of these openings, is also something that none of the listeners understands or comprehends anything of it, let alone it being a rebuke to him and an obligation of the argument whoever it may be, because that is a matter beyond comprehension. It is based on it and the listener did not understand this, nor did the scholars mention about any individual from the people of ignorance who were updated with the Qur'an that his understanding reached some of this, let alone all of it. Then the fact that these letters include half of all the letters that the Arabic language is composed of, and that half includes halves of those types of letters that are described by those descriptions is a matter that is of no benefit to the ignorant or the Muslim, the one who accepts or denies, the Muslim or the opponent, and it is not correct that it be an aim of the Lord, the Most High, who revealed His Book to guide to His laws and to be guided by it. Even if this is a strange craft and a strange point, it is not something that is characterized by eloquence or rhetoric so that it would be useful that it is eloquent or articulate speech, because these letters that occur in the openings are not of the same type as the speech of the Arabs so that it is characterized by these two descriptions, and the most that is there is that it is of the same type as the letters of their speech and that has no bearing on what was mentioned. Also, if we assume that they are words composed by estimating something before or after them, it is not correct to describe them as such, because they are obfuscations that are not understood by the listener unless the one who wants to explain them comes with what the one who wants to explain riddles and obfuscation comes with, and that is not from eloquence and rhetoric in word or in origin, but rather from their opposite and the opposite of their writing - and if you know this, then know that whoever speaks about explaining the meanings of these letters, asserting that this is what God Almighty wanted, has made the worst mistake and has committed the greatest excess in his understanding and claim, because if his interpretation of them with what he explained them with is related to the language of the Arabs and their sciences, then it is a pure lie, because the Arabs did not speak anything like that, and if the listener heard it from them, it would be considered gibberish to him, and that does not contradict the fact that they may limit themselves to letters or letters of the word that they want to pronounce, because they did not do that except after it was preceded by what indicates it and conveys its meaning, such that it is not confused for his listener, as was mentioned above. And of this type is what they do with leniency, and where are these openings that occur at the beginning of the surahs in relation to this? And if it is established for you that it is not possible to benefit from what they claim from the language of the Arabs and its sciences, then there remains only one of two matters: the first is interpretation by mere opinion, which has been forbidden and threatened, and the people of knowledge are the most deserving of avoiding it, turning away from it, and turning away from its path, and they are more pious to God Almighty than to make the Book of God Almighty a plaything for them to play with and to place the foolishness of their views and the superstitions of their thoughts upon it. The second interpretation is based on the authority of the Lawgiver. This is the clear path and the straight way, indeed the main road beyond which everything else is ruined and the prosperous path beyond which everything else is non-existent. So whoever finds something of this is not obligated to say it with all his heart and speak according to what his knowledge has reached. And whoever does not know anything of this, let him say, I do not know, or God knows best of what he means. It has been proven that it is forbidden to seek to understand the ambiguous and to try to stand on its knowledge, even though it is Arabic words and understandable structures. And God has made following that the action of those in whose hearts is deviation. So how about what we are dealing with? It should be said about it that it is ambiguous of the ambiguous, assuming that there is a way to understanding it and that the speech of the Arabs has an influence on it. So how about it when it is outside of that in any case? And see how the Jews understood when they heard Alif Laam Meem. When they did not find it in the language of the Arabs, they understood that the letters mentioned were a symbol for what they agreed upon as the number that they assign to it, as Ibn Ishaq, Al-Bukhari in his history, and Ibn Jarir narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ibn Abbas on the authority of Jabir bin Abdullah who said: Abu Yasir bin Akhtab passed by the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, with some Jewish men while he was reciting the opening verse of Surat al-Baqarah 2: "Alif Laam Meem. This is the Book; there is no doubt." So he came to his brother Huyayy bin Akhtab with some Jewish men and said: You know, by God, that I heard Muhammad reciting in what was revealed to him, "Alif Laam Meem. This is the Book." He said: Did you hear it? He said: Yes. So Huyayy walked with those men to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they said: O Muhammad, did you not remember that you recite in what was revealed to you, "Alif Laam Meem. This is the Book?" He said: Yes. They said: Did Gabriel bring you this from God? He said: Yes. They said: God sent prophets before you, and we do not know of any prophet among them who explained the duration of his kingdom and the life span of his nation except you. Huyayy ibn Akhtab said: He turned to those who had with him the Alif-1, the Lam-30, and the Mim-40, so that is seventy-one years. Will you enter the religion of a prophet whose reign and life span are only seventy-one years? Then he turned to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: O Muhammad, is there anything else with this? He said: Yes. He said: What is that? He said: Alif-Lam-Meem-Sad. He said: This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, the Mim is forty, and the Sad is ninety. This is one hundred and sixty-one years. Is there anything else with this, O Muhammad? He said: Yes. He said: What is that? He said: Alif-Lam-Ra. He said: This is heavier and longer. The Alif is one, the Lam is thirty, and the Ra is two hundred. This is two hundred and thirty-one years. Is there anything else with this? He said: Yes, -the- He said: This is heavier and longer, the alif is one, the lam is thirty, the mim is forty, and the ra is two hundred, so this is seventy-one years and two hundred, then he said: Your matter has become confusing to us, O Muhammad, until we do not know whether you have been given a little or a lot, then they stood up, and Abu Yasir said to his brother Huyayy and those with him from the rabbis: How do you know? Perhaps he has gathered all of this for Muhammad, seventy-one, sixty-one, one hundred, thirty-one, two hundred, seventy-one, two hundred, so that is seven hundred and thirty-four years, so they said: His matter has become confusing to us, so they claim that these verses were revealed about them - "It is He who has sent down to you, [O Muhammad], the Book. In it are verses that are precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others that are unspecific" - so look at what their understandings have reached regarding this matter that is specific to them in terms of the number of letters, even though it is not from the language of the Arabs at all, and consider which place is more deserving of clarification from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, than this place, for these cursed ones have made what they understood when they heard "Alif, Lam, Meem. That is the Book" of that number a requirement To discourage people from answering him and entering into his law. If that had a rational meaning and an understandable implication, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would have rejected what they initially thought so that what they brought would not be affected by the doubts they brought to those with them.

If you say: Is there anything proven from the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) regarding these openings that is suitable to adhere to? I say: I do not know that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) spoke about any of their meanings, rather the most that has been proven from him is merely the number of their letters. Al-Bukhari narrated in his history, and Al-Tirmidhi who authenticated it, and Al-Hakim who authenticated it, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, who said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "Whoever recites a letter from the Book of God will receive a good deed for it, and a good deed is worth ten times its like. I do not say that Alif-Lam-Meem is a letter, but Alif-Lam-Meem is a letter." And there are chains of transmission on the authority of Ibn Masoud. Ibn Abi Shaybah and Al-Bazzar narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Awf bin Malik, and Al-Ashja'i narrated something similar to it, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him). If you say: Is there anything of this narrated from the Companions with a chain of transmission connected to its speaker, or is it only what Al-Qurtubi mentioned above on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Ali? I say: Ibn Jarir and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in the Book of Names and Attributes on the authority of Ibn Masoud that he said: Alif-Lam-Meem is a letter derived from the letters of the name of God. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, "Alif-Lam-Meem," and Nun, he said: It is a disconnected noun. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in the Book of Names on the authority of Ibn Abbas also regarding his statement: Alif, Lam, Meem, "Alif-Lam-Me ...Majid," Majid, "Majid." "Amim- He said in the interpretation of one of these openings a statement that is authentically attributed to him. I said: No, for what we have presented, unless it is known that he said that based on knowledge that he took from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. If you say: This is something in which there is no room for ijtihad and no input from the Arabic language, so why does it not have the ruling of being elevated? I said: Putting this in the position of being elevated, even if a group of the scholars of the principles of jurisprudence and others say so, it is not something that the hearts of the fair-minded are happy with, especially if it is in a situation like this, which is the interpretation of the words of God, the Most High, because it is entering into the greatest danger with no correct proof except their mere saying that it is extremely far-fetched for a companion to say his own opinion in something in which there is no room for ijtihad, and this mere exclusion is not a justification for falling into the danger of the severe threat. However, some of the Companions may have interpreted some of the ambiguous verses, as you often find in their interpretations that have been transmitted from them, and made these opening verses part of the ambiguous verses. Then there is another obstacle, which is that what has been transmitted from the Companions in this matter is different and contradictory. If we act according to what one of them said without the other, it would be an arbitrary act that has no basis, and if we act according to all of them, it would be acting according to what is different and contradictory and is not permissible. Then there is another obstacle besides this obstacle, which is that if something they said was taken from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would have agreed upon it and not differed like everything else that is taken from him. So when they differed about this, we know that it was not taken from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then if they had something from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about this, they would not have left off narrating it from him and attributing it to him, especially when they differed and their statements were confused in such speech in which there is no room or input for the Arabic language. What I see for myself and for everyone who loves safety and follows the example of the predecessors of the nation is not to speak about anything like that, while acknowledging that in its revelation there is wisdom from God Almighty that our minds cannot reach nor our understandings can be guided to. And if you have reached safety in your path, then do not go beyond it. And we will come to it when interpreting the words of God Almighty: "Some of it are verses that are precise - they are the foundation of the Book - and others that are unspecific," a long-tailed statement, and the realization that it is accepted by sound minds and sound intellects.

1. "In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful * Alif, Laam, Meem." Al-Sha'bi and a group said: Alif, Laam, Meem and the rest of the letters of the alphabet at the beginning of the surahs are among the ambiguous ones that God has kept knowledge of to Himself, and they are the secret of the Qur'an. So we believe in their outward appearance and leave knowledge of them to God. The benefit of mentioning them is to seek belief in them. Abu Bakr Al-Siddiq said: In every book there is a secret, and the secret of God in the Qur'an is the beginnings of the surahs. Ali said: Every book has a cream, and the cream of this book is the letters of spelling. Dawud bin Abi Hind said: I used to ask Al-Sha'bi about the openings of the surahs, and he said: O Dawud, every book has a secret, and the secret of the Qur'an is the openings of the surahs, so leave them and ask about what is other than that. A group said that their meanings are known, so it was said: Each letter of them is a key to one of His names, as Ibn Abbas said in Kaf Ha Ya Ain Sad: The kaf is from Kafi, the ha is from Hadi, the ya is from Hakim, the 'ayn is from Aleem, and the sad is from Sadiq. It was said in Al-Mas: I am God, the Truthful King. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said in Al-Mas: Alif is the key to His name God, Lam is the key to His name Al-Lateef, and Mim is the key to His name Al-Majeed.

Muhammad ibn Ka'b said: The Alif is God's blessings, the Lam is His kindness, and the Meem is His dominion. Sa'id ibn Jubayr narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: The meaning of Alif Lam Meem is: God knows best. The meaning of Alif Lam Meem is: God knows best and is most excellent. The meaning of Alif Lam Ra is: God sees. The meaning of Alif Lam Ra is: God knows best and sees. Al-Zajaj said: This is good, because the Arabs mention a letter from a word that they mean, like their saying: I told her: Come to us. She said: Qaf.

That is: I stopped, and on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, he said: They are the names of God the Most High disjointed, if people knew how to compose them, they would know the greatest name of God. Don't you see that you say Alif, Lam, Ra, and Nun, so it becomes Ar-Rahman, and so are the rest of them except that we are not able to connect them, and Qatada said: These letters are the names of the Qur'an. Mujahid and Ibn Zayd said: They are the names of the surahs, and its al-Sharh 94: If the speaker says: I have read Alif, Lam, Meem, the listener will know that he has read the surah that begins with Alif, Lam, Meem. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, that they are oaths, and Al-Akhfash said: God only swore by these letters for their honor and excellence because they are the beginnings of His revealed books, and the foundations of His beautiful names.

1- "Alif, Lam, Meem" and all the words that are spelled with it are names of their meanings, the letters from which words are composed, because they are included in the definition of the name, and what is specific to it of definiteness, indefiniteness, plural, diminutive, and the like is subject to them, and Al-Khalil and Abu Ali stated this explicitly. And what

Ibn Masoud, may God be pleased with him, narrated that he, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "Whoever recites a letter from the Book of God will have a good deed, and a good deed is worth ten times its like. I do not say that Alif, Lam, Meem is a letter, but rather Alif is a letter, Lam is a letter, and Mim is a letter." What is meant by it is not the meaning that is agreed upon, because specifying it with it is known again, rather the linguistic meaning, and perhaps he called it by the name of its meaning. Since its names are single letters and they are compound, they were started with them so that their performance with the name would be the first thing that strikes the ear, and the hamza was borrowed in place of the alif because it is difficult to begin with it, and unless the factors follow it, it is stopped and devoid of inflection due to the loss of its reason and requirement, but it is receptive to it and exposed to it if it does not suit the structure of the original, and for this reason it was said: S and Q are grouped in them between the quiescents and are not treated as Ayn and Hala'i. Then, since its names are the element of speech and its simple means from which it is composed. The words of the oppressed from which they organize their speech, so if it was from other than God, they would not have been unable to produce anything close to it, despite their pretense and the strength of their eloquence, and the first thing that strikes the ears would be independent with a kind of miracle, for the pronunciation of the names of the letters is specific to those who write and step, but from the illiterate who has not mixed with the book, then he is prepared, strange, and extraordinary like writing and recitation, especially since he took into account in that what the eloquent literature that excels in its art is unable to do, which is that he mentioned the openings of fourteen names that are half the names of the letters of the dictionary, if he did not count the letter alif at the beginning in twenty-nine surahs with their number if he counted the original alif including half of its types, so he mentioned from the unvoiced ones which are what weakens the reliance on its place of articulation and collects it sattashhatu khafusuf half of it is ha', kaf, ha', sad, seen, and kaf, and from the remaining voiced ones half of it collects it lan yaqta' amr. Of the eight severe cases collected in ajdat tabakak, four are collected in aqta'aka. And of the soft remnants, ten are collected by five of them on Nasra, and of the muttaqa which are sad, dad, ta and dha, half of them, and of the open remnants, half of them, and of the qalqalah which are: letters that shake when they are pronounced and they are collected qad tabaj half of them less because of their shortness, and of the two soft ones is the ya because it is less heavy, and of the musta'liyyah which are: those with which the sound rises in the upper palate, and they are seven qaf, sad, ta, kha, kha, ghayn, dad and dha, half of them less, and of the low remnants, half of them, and of the substitute letters which are eleven according to what Sibawayh mentioned, and Ibn Jinni chose it and they are collected ahad tawayt from them are the six common and famous which Ahtamin collects, and some of them added seven more which are the lam in asilal and the sad and zay in sirat and zarat and the fa in ajdaf and the 'ayn in a'an and the tha in thorough al-dalu and the ba in bismak until they became eighteen and Nine of them are mentioned, the six mentioned, and the letters lam, sad, and ayn. And what is assimilated into its like but not into similar letters, and they are fifteen: hamza, ha, ayn, sad, ta, meem, ya, kha, ghayn, dad, fa, dha, shin, zay, and waw, half of which is less. And what is assimilated into them, and they are the remaining thirteen, half of which is more: ha, qaf, ra, seen, lam, and nun, because of the lightness and eloquence in idgham. And of the four that are not assimilated into similar letters and their similar letters are supported in them, and they are: meem, zay, seen, and fa, half of which is less.

Since the smooth letters that are relied upon by the tongue, which are collected in rab manfal, and the guttural letters which are ha, kha, ain, ghayn, ha and hamza, occur frequently in speech, he mentioned two-thirds of them. Since the structures of the augmented letters do not exceed seven, he mentioned seven letters from the ten augmented letters that are collected in al-yawm tansahu as a reminder of that. If you examine the words and their combinations, you will find the omitted letters of each type abundant in the aforementioned. Then he mentioned them as single, dual, triple, quadruple and quintuple letters, indicating that the challenged letter is composed of their words whose origins are single words, and composed of two letters or more up to five. He mentioned three single letters in three surahs because they exist in the three sections: the noun, the verb and the letter, and four dual letters because they occur in the letter without deletion kabal, and in the verb with the deletion of the weight like qal. And in the noun without deletion, such as man, and with it, kadam in nine surahs, because it occurs in each of the three sections in three ways: in the nouns min, "idh," and dhu, and in the verbs qal, "ba," and khafa. And in the letters min, "in," and madh, according to the language of those who tried it. And three trilateral letters, because they occur in the three sections in thirteen surahs, to indicate that the origins of the structures used are thirteen, ten of them for nouns, and three for verbs, and two quadrilateral letters and a quintilateral letter, to indicate that each of them has an origin, such as ja'far and safarjal, and an appendix, such as qardad and jahanfal. Perhaps they were distributed among the surahs and were not returned as a whole at the beginning of the Qur'an for this benefit, with what is in it of repeating the challenge and repeating the warning and exaggerating it.

The meaning is that this challenged is composed of the same type as these letters. Or composed of them, and so it was said: They are names of the surahs, and the majority agree on this. They were named with them to indicate that they are words with a known composition. If they were not a revelation from God Almighty, their ability would not have been lost without opposing them. The evidence for this is that if they were not understood, addressing them would have been like addressing them with a neglected word or speaking with a Negro with an Arab, and the entire Qur'an would not have been clarification and guidance. And since it would not have been possible to challenge with it, even if they were understood, then either the surahs that they begin with are intended as their titles, or something else. The second is invalid because, either what is intended is what they were established for in the language of the Arabs, and it is clear that this is not the case, or something else, and it is invalid because the Qur'an was revealed in their language, as God Almighty says: In a clear Arabic tongue, so it cannot be interpreted as referring to something that is not in their language. It is not said: Why is it not permissible for it to be an addition for emphasis? And to indicate the interruption of speech and the resumption of its end? As Qatrib said, or an indication of words that are from them and are limited to them as the poet limited himself in his saying:

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, who said: The Alif is the blessings of God, the Lam is His word, and the Meem is His kingdom. It was narrated on his authority that the Ruh and Nun are combined as the Most Gracious. It was narrated on his authority that the meaning of the Alif is: God knows best, and so on in all the openings. It was narrated on his authority that the Alif is from God, the Lam is from Gabriel, and the Meem is from Muhammad, meaning: the Qur'an was revealed from God through the tongue of Gabriel to Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon them both, or for the support of peoples and terms according to the abjad calculation, as Abu Al-Aaliyah said, adhering to what was narrated:

"When the Jews came to him, peace and blessings be upon him, he recited to them "Alif, Lam, Meem" from Surat Al-Baqarah. They calculated it and said: How can we enter into a religion that lasts seventy-one years? The Messenger of God, peace and blessings be upon him, smiled and they said: Did he change it? He said: Alif, Lam, Ra, and Alif. They said: You have mixed it up for us and we do not know which one to take." His reciting it to them in this order and confirming their deduction is evidence of that. Although this indication is not Arabic, it is well-known among the people, so the Arabs include it in Arabic letters such as Al-Mishkat, Al-Sijil, and Al-Qistas, or it is an indication of the extended letters by which one swears because of their honor, since they are the simplest of the names of God Almighty and the material of His address.

This and the saying that they are the names of the surahs excludes what is not in the language of the Arabs, because naming with three names or more is disliked by them and leads to the union of the named, and requires the part to be delayed from the whole in that the name is delayed from the named in rank, because we say: These words were not known to be added to alert and indicate the interruption and resumption is required for them and others in that they are the openings of the surahs, and that does not require that there is no meaning in their scope and they were not used to abbreviate specific words in their language, as for poetry it is anomalous, and as for the saying of Ibn Abbas, it is a warning that these letters are the source of names and the beginnings of speech and an example with good examples, do you not see that he counted each letter from different words not an explanation, and a specification with these meanings without others since there is no specification in word and meaning nor in the calculation of the letters so it is included in the inflected words, and the hadith has no evidence in it, because it is possible that he, peace and blessings be upon him, smiled in amazement at their ignorance, and made it an oath by it, even if it is not impossible, but it requires the implication of things for which there is no evidence, and naming with three names is only it is forbidden if you combine and make one name in the manner of Baalbek, but if you scatter the names of numbers, then no, and let alone Sibawayh's equality between naming a sentence and a verse of poetry and a group of names of letters of the alphabet, and the named is the whole of the surah and the name is its part, so there is no union, and it is presented in itself and postponed in consideration of its being a name, so there is no role for the difference of the two sides. The first aspect is closer to the truth and more in accordance with the nature of revelation and safer from the necessity of transmission and the occurrence of sharing in names from one creator, because it returns with the refutation of what is intended by the science, and it was said: They are the names of the Qur'an and for this reason he informed about them with the Book and the Qur'an.

It was said: They are names of God Almighty, and it was explained that Ali, may God be pleased with him, used to say: O Kaha Ya Ain Sad, and O Ha Mim Ain Sad, and perhaps he meant O their home.

It was said: Alif: from the back of the throat and it is the beginning of the exits, and Lam: from the tip of the tongue and it is its middle, and Meem: from the lip and it is its last. He combined them as an indication that the servant's first, middle and last words should be the remembrance of God Almighty.

It was said: It is a secret that God has kept to Himself in His knowledge. Something similar to it has been narrated from the four caliphs and other companions. Perhaps they meant that they were secrets between God Almighty and His Messenger and symbols that were not intended to be understood by anyone other than Him, since the discourse is far from being beneficial. If you make them the names of God Almighty, or the Qur'an, or the surahs, they will have a share of parsing, either nominative as a subject, or predicate, or accusative by estimating the verb of the oath in the manner of God, I will do it in the accusative or otherwise as mentioned, or genitive by implying the letter of the oath, and parsing is possible verbally and narration in what was singular or parallel to a singular like Ha Mim, then it is like Habil, and narration is only in what is other than that, and we will return to you to mention it in detail, God Almighty willing. If you keep them with their meanings, then if you estimate the composition of these letters, it will be in the realm of nominative as a subject or predicate as mentioned, and if you make them what you swear by, then every word of them will be accusative or genitive according to the two languages in God, I will do it, and it will be an oath sentence with the verb estimated for it, and if you make them parts of words or sounds placed in the position of letters of warning, then they will not have a place in parsing like the initiating sentences and the counted singulars, and the complete stop is stopped on them if they are estimated so that they do not need what comes after them, and none of them is a verse according to anyone other than the Kufians. As for them, Alif, Lam, Meem is in its proper places, and Alif, Lam, Meem, "Kaf, Ha, Ya, Ain, Sad," Ta, Ha, "Ta, Seen," Ya, Seen, "Ha, Meem," and Ain, Qaf are two verses, and the rest are not verses. This is a revelation in which there is no room for analogy.

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:2

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

That) meaning this Book that Muhammad reads there is no doubt no doubt about it that it is from God, and the negative sentence is the predicate of its subject that and the reference to it is for emphasis guidance is a second predicate meaning a guide for the righteous those who turn to righteousness by obeying the commands and avoiding the prohibitions in order to protect themselves from the Fire thereby.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Most commentators said: The interpretation of God Almighty's saying that is the Book is: this Book.

Who said that?

Harun bin Idris al-Asamm al-Kufi told me: Abd al-Rahman bin Muhammad al-Maharbi told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: That book he said: It is this book.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Ibn Ulayyah told us: Khalid Al-Hadha' told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: That book: this book.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Al-Hakam bin Dhahir told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, regarding his statement, That is the Book, he said: This Book.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: That Book: This Book. He said: Ibn Abbas said: That Book: This Book.

If someone says: How can that mean this and this is undoubtedly a reference to something present and visible, and that is a reference to something absent that is neither present nor visible?

It was said: This is permissible, because everything that is decided, by the proximity of its decision to the report, even if it becomes in the meaning of something other than the present, is as present to the one being addressed. This is like a man telling another man a story, and the listener says: By God, that is as you said, and by God, this is as you said, and by God, it is as you mentioned. So he tells about it once in the meaning of the absent, since it had been decided and gone, and once in the meaning of the present, because his answer is close to the speech of the one informing him, as if it had not been cancelled. Likewise, that in His statement that is the Book because when He, glory be to Him, brought before that Book "alif, lam, mim," which we mentioned its use in its various meanings as we described, He said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: O Muhammad, this that I mentioned and explained to you is the Book. Therefore, it is good to put that in place of this, because it refers to the report of what is included in His statement alif, lam, mim of meanings, after the report about it is completed by alif, lam, mim. So, due to the proximity of the report about it to its completion, it became like the present that is referred to, so it was reported about by that because of its completion, and the fate of the report about it is like the report about the absent, and the commentators translated it as meaning this, due to the proximity of the report about it to its completion, so it was like the witnessed that is referred to by this, similar to what we described of the speech that is current among people in their conversations, and as the Most High said: "And remember Ishmael and Elisha and Dhu al-Kifl, and each was among the best. This is a mention" (Sad: 48-49). So this is what is in that if he meant this by it.

It may be possible that His Most High's statement, That Book, refers to the surahs that were revealed before Surat Al-Baqarah in Mecca and Medina. It is as if He, Most High, said to His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: O Muhammad, know that what is included in the surahs of the Book that I have revealed to you is the Book about which there is no doubt. Then the commentators translated it to mean that the meaning of that is this Book, since those surahs that were revealed before Surat Al-Baqarah were part of this entire Book of Ours that God, the Almighty, revealed to our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

The first interpretation was more appropriate than what the commentators said, because that is the clearest meaning of what they said about that.

Some have directed the meaning of that to something similar to the meaning of the verse of Khafaf bin Nadbah Al-Salami:

If my horse has been hit in the heart, then I will deliberately attack Malik's eye

I say to him, while the spear is flying over his back: Look lightly, I am that one.

As if he meant: I contemplate that. So he claimed that that book means this, its counterpart. He made it clear that it is a light particle of his name in the sense of reporting on someone absent, and it is reporting on itself. So he made it clear that that means reporting on someone absent, and the meaning in it is referring to the present and visible.

The first statement is more appropriate for interpreting the book, due to the reasons we mentioned.

Some of them said: That Book, meaning the Torah and the Gospel. If the interpretation of that is directed in this way, then there is no burden on the one who interprets it in this way, because that would then be reporting something unseen in a correct manner.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: There is no doubt about it.

The interpretation of his saying: There is no doubt about it is: There is no doubt about it. Like:

Harun bin Idris al-Asamm told me: Abd al-Rahman al-Maharbi told us on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: There is no doubt about it, he said: There is no doubt about it.

Salam bin Salem Al-Khuza'i told me: Khalaf bin Yasin Al-Kufi told us, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Abi Rawad, on the authority of Ata', There is no doubt about it: he said: There is no doubt about it.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told me: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Al-Hakam bin Dhahir told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, who said: There is no doubt about it, there is no doubt about it.

Musa bin Harun al-Hamadani told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: There is no doubt about it, there is no doubt about it.

Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: There is no doubt about it, he said: There is no doubt about it.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ibn Abbas said: There is no doubt about it, meaning: There is no doubt about it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: There is no doubt about it, meaning: There is no doubt about it.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: His statement, There is no doubt about it, means: There is no doubt about it.

It is a source of the saying: The thing made me suspicious. And from that is the saying of Sa'idah bin Juwayyah al-Hudhali:

They said: We left the neighborhood and they were besieged there. There is no doubt that there was a meat seller there.

It is narrated: They besieged and they besieged, and the fat-ha is more common, and the kasra is permissible. What he means by his saying they besieged him is: they surrounded him. What he means by his saying there is no doubt is: there is no suspicion about it. And by his saying that there was a dead man, he means a dead man. It is said: he was killed, if he was killed.

The letter ha in fih refers back to the book, as if he said: There is no doubt in that book that it is from God, a guidance for the righteous.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Guidance.

Ahmad bin Hazim Al-Ghafari told me, he said: Abu Naim told us, he said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Bayan, on the authority of Al-Sha'bi, guidance he said: guidance from misguidance.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Ismail al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Guidance for the righteous, meaning: Light for the righteous.

Guidance in this context is a source of your saying: I guided someone to the path, if I showed him to it, directed him to it, and made it clear to him. I guide him with guidance and direction.

If someone were to say to us: Is the Book of God a light only for the righteous, and a guidance only for the believers?

It was said: This is as our Lord, the Almighty, described it. If it were a light for the non-pious, and guidance for the non-believers, God, the Almighty, would not have singled out the pious as having guidance for them, but rather it would have included all those who were warned. But it is guidance for the pious, and a cure for what is in the hearts of the believers, and a deafening sound in the ears of the disbelievers, and a blinding to the eyes of the deniers, and a conclusive argument from God against the disbelievers. So the one who believes in it is guided, and the one who disbelieves in it is proven.

His saying guidance has many possible meanings.

One of them: That it is in the accusative case, meaning that it is cut off from the Book, because it is indefinite and the Book is definite. So the interpretation then is: Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book, a guide for the righteous. And that is raised by alif, Lam, Meem, and alif, Lam, Meem is by it. And the Book is an attribute of that.

It may be possible that it is an accusative, based on the separation from the mention of the book in in it, and then the meaning of that would be: the one in whom there is no doubt is a guide.

It may also be possible that it is an accusative in these two ways, I mean in the way of cutting off the ha' that

In in it, and from the Book, on the condition that alif, lam, mim is a complete statement, as Ibn Abbas said that its meaning is: I am God, the Most High. Then that Book is a new subject, so the Book is then raised by that, and that by the Book, and guidance is definitely from the Book, and on the condition that that is raised by the ha' referring back to it in in it, and the Book is an attribute of it and guidance is definitely from the ha' in in it. If guidance is placed in the place of raising, it is not permissible for that Book to be anything but a new subject, and alif, lam, mim is a complete statement sufficient on its own, except from one aspect, which is that guidance is then raised in the sense of praise, as God the Almighty said: "Alif, Lam, Meem. These are the verses of the Wise Book, a guidance and a mercy for the doers of good" (Luqman 31:1-3) in the reading of the one who read mercy. In the nominative case, in praise of the verses.

The raising of guidance is then permissible in three ways: The first is what we mentioned, that it is a renewed praise. The second: that it is made the raising of that, and the book is an attribute of that. The third: that it is made dependent on the position of there is no doubt in it, and that book is raised by the pronoun in in it. So it is as God Almighty said: And this is a blessed Book which We have sent down (al-An'am 6:92).

Some of the early Kufians in knowledge of Arabic claimed that alif-lam-meem is the subject of that book meaning: these letters are from the letters of the alphabet, that book which I promised you to reveal to you. Then he contradicted that by saying so he quickly demolished it, and he destroyed what he built, so he claimed that the nominative case in guidance has two aspects, and the accusative case has two aspects. One of the aspects of the nominative case is that al-Kitab is an attribute of that and guidance is in the nominative case as the predicate of that. It is as if you said: That is guidance without a doubt. He said: If you make there is no doubt in it its predicate, you also raise guidance by making it dependent on the position of there is no doubt in it, as God the Most High said: And this is a blessed Book which We have revealed, as if He said: And this is a Book of guidance with such and such description. He said: As for one of the two ways of putting it in the accusative case, it is to make the book the predicate of that, and put guidance in the accusative case for certainty, because guidance is an indefinite noun connected to a definite noun, and its predicate is complete, so you put it in the accusative case, because an indefinite noun cannot be evidence of a definite noun. And if you wish, you can put guidance in the accusative case for certainty from the ha' in in it, as if you said: There is no doubt about him as a guide.

Abu Ja'far said: So he abandoned the original principle which he had based on alif, lam, mim and that it is raised by that book, and threw it behind his back. What would have been necessary for him according to the original principle which he had based on is that he would not allow the raising of guidance in any case except from one aspect, and that is from the beginning, since it was praise. As for the aspect of the report of that, or the aspect of following the position of there is no doubt about it, then what would have been necessary for him according to his statement is that it is a mistake. That is because if alif, lam, mim is raised by that book, then there is no doubt that guidance is not permissible then to be the report of that, in the sense of raising it, or following the position of there is no doubt about it, because its position then is accusative, due to the completion of the report before it, and its interruption by its contradiction of it.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: For the righteous.

Sufyan ibn Wakee' told us: My father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding his statement: For the righteous, he said: They avoided what was forbidden to them, and performed what was required of them.

Muhammad bin Hamid told us: Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: For the righteous, meaning those who fear God Almighty's punishment for abandoning what they know of guidance, and hope for His mercy by believing in what He has brought.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Guidance for the righteous, he said: They are the believers.

Abu Kuraib told us: Abu Bakr bin Ayyash told us: Al-A'mash asked me about the righteous. He said: So I answered him, and he said to me: Ask Al-Kalbi about it. So I asked him, and he said: Those who avoid major sins. He said: So I went back to Al-A'mash, and he said: We see that it is like that. And he did not deny it.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim al-Tabari told me: Ishaq bin al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman bin Abdullah, who said: Umar Abu Hafs told us, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Aruba, on the authority of Qatada: A guidance for the righteous. They are those whom He described and described, so He confirmed their description, saying: Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend from what We have provided for them.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: For the righteous he said: For the believers who avoid associating partners with Me and act in obedience to Me.

The first interpretation of the statement of God, the Most High, A guidance for the righteous, is the interpretation of the description of the people as those who feared God, the Most High, in doing what He forbade them from doing, so they avoided His disobedience, and feared Him in what He commanded them to do of His obligations, so they obeyed Him in performing them. This is because God, the Most High, described them with piety, and did not limit their piety to some of what they were worthy of from them and not others. No one among the people has the right to limit the meaning of that to describing them with one aspect of piety to God, the Most High, and not another, except with an argument that must be accepted. Because if that was a characteristic of the people, if it were limited to a specific aspect of piety and not the general aspect of it, God, the Most High, would not have left it clear to His servants: either in His Book or on the tongue of His Messenger, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, since there was no evidence in the mind that it was impossible to describe them with general piety.

Thus, it has become clear that the statement of the one who claims that the interpretation of this is: those who feared polytheism and were innocent of hypocrisy is false. Because it could be that way, and he is a sinner who does not deserve to be among the righteous, unless the one who says this statement means hypocrisy: committing the indecencies that God, the Most High, has forbidden, and neglecting the obligations that He has imposed upon him. For a group of scholars used to call whoever did that a hypocrite. So even if he disagreed in calling whoever was like that by this name, he would be correct in interpreting God's statement, the Most High, for the righteous.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: That is the Book. It was said: The meaning is this Book. And that may be used to refer to something present, and if it is a subject, then it refers to something absent, as the Almighty said in describing Himself, the Majestic and Exalted: That is the Knower of the unseen and the witnessed, the Exalted in Might, the Merciful. And from this is the saying of Khafaf bin Nudbah:

I tell him, while the spear frames his back,
Contemplate lightly that I am that.

That is, I am this. So that is a reference to the Qur'an, the subject of this, its sum Maryam 19: Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book, there is no doubt about it. This is the saying of Abu Ubaidah, Ikrimah, and others, and from it is the saying of God Almighty: And that was Our argument which We gave to Abraham "These are the verses of God which We recite to you in truth" meaning this, but when it ended it became as if it had become distant, so it was said that. And in Bukhari, Muammar said: That Book is this Qur'an. A guidance for the righteous is clarification and indication, like His saying: That is the judgment of God; He judges between you this is the judgment of God.

I said: This has come with the same meaning, and from it is his saying, peace be upon him, in the hadith of Umm Haram:

They ride the waves of this sea meaning that sea, and God knows best. It was said: It is in its place, referring to an absent person.

There are ten different opinions about that unseen thing. It was said that it is the book that I wrote for the creatures regarding happiness and misery, the term of life and provision, there is no doubt about it, meaning it cannot be changed. It was also said that it is the book that I wrote for myself in eternity:

My mercy precedes My wrath. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

When God decreed creation, He wrote in His book about Himself, and it is placed with Him, 'My mercy prevails over My wrath,' in a previous narration. It was said that God Almighty had promised His Prophet, peace be upon him, that He would send down to him a book that water would not erase, so He referred to that promise as in Sahih Muslim from the hadith of Iyad bin Hamar al-Majashi'i that the Messenger of God, peace be upon him, said:

"God looked at the people of the earth and hated them, Arabs and non-Arabs alike, except for a remnant of the People of the Book. He said, 'I have only sent you to test you and to test you. I have sent down to you a Book that cannot be washed away by water. You will recite it while asleep and while awake.'" The hadith. It was said that the reference is to what was sent down of the Qur'an in Mecca. It was said that when God, the Blessed and Exalted, sent down to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in Mecca: Indeed, We will cast upon you a weighty word, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, continued to look forward to fulfilling this promise from his Lord, the Almighty and Majestic. So when He sent down to him in Medina, "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt," it had the meaning of this Qur'an that I sent down to you in Medina and the Gospel: Alif, Lam, Meem is the name of the Qur'an, and the meaning is this Qur'an, that book that is explained in the Torah and the Gospel, meaning that the Torah and the Gospel bear witness to its authenticity and it includes what is in them and adds to them what is not in them. It was said: That book is a reference to both the Torah and the Gospel, and the meaning is: Alif, Lam, Meem. Those two books or like those two books, meaning this Qur'an includes what is in those two books, so He expressed both with evidence from the Qur'an, God the Most High said: She is a cow neither old nor young, but between that. That is, between that old and the young, and it will come. It was said: That is a reference to the Preserved Tablet. Al-Kisa'i said: That is a reference to the Qur'an that is in the heaven and has not yet been revealed. It was said: God the Most High had promised the People of the Book that He would send down a book to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, so the reference is to that promise. Al-Mubarrad said: The meaning is this Qur'an, that is the book that you used to seek victory with against those who disbelieved. It was said: To the letters of the alphabet, according to the one who said: Alif, Lam, Meem are the letters from which He informed you of the system.

The word book is derived from the verb to write which means to gather, and from it comes before: battalion for its gathering. And the horses are written, so they become battalions. And the mule wrote: if it gathered the lips of its womb with a ring or a secret, he said:

Do not trust a woman who has been brought to you on your camel, and write it down with chains.

And the scribe with a damma on the kaf: the bead, and the plural is katab. And katab: the beads. Dhu al-Rumma said:

The fur of the room, its holes are broken, and its books are scattered among it.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:2

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

The book: is the writer's handwriting of the letters of the alphabet, grouped or scattered, and it is called a book even if it is written. What the poet said:

I hope to return with a book that is stuck together like glue

The book is the duty, the rule and the destiny. Al-Ja'di said:

My cousin, the Book of God has expelled me from you. Did God prevent what they did?

The Almighty's saying: There is no doubt is a general negation, and that is why doubt was placed in the accusative case. Doubt has three meanings:

One of them: doubt. Abdullah bin Al-Zubayri said:

There is no doubt about the truth, O Umayma. Doubt is what the ignorant says.

The second: the accusation. Jamil said:

Buthaina said, Oh Jamil, you have made me suspicious. I said, Both of us, oh Buthaina, are suspicious.

The third: need. He said:

We eliminated all doubt from Tihama and Khaybar, then we gathered the swords

The Book of God, the Most High, is without doubt or suspicion. The meaning is that it is true in itself and that it was revealed by God, and is one of His attributes. It is not created nor new, even if doubts occur to the disbelievers. It was said that it is report and its meaning is prohibition, i.e. do not doubt, and the speech is complete as if he said that truly. And you say: This matter made me suspicious if it caused you doubt and fear. And arab: became suspicious, so he is suspicious. And his matter made me suspicious. And the vicissitudes of time: its changes.

The Almighty's saying: Therein is guidance for the righteous. It contains six issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: in it fihi The ha' in fihi is in the accusative case with fi, and there are five ways of saying it, the best of which is: fihi huda. And after it is fihi huda with a damma on the ha' without a waw, which is the reading of az-Zuhri and Salam Abi al-Mundhir. And after it is fihi huda with a proof of the ya', which is the reading of Ibn Kathir. And fihi huda with a waw is permissible. And fihi huda assimilated is permissible, and huda is raised as the subject and the predicate is fihi. And huda in the speech of the Arabs means guidance and clarification, meaning in it is revelation for the people of knowledge and guidance and increased clarification and guidance.

The second guidance is two types: guidance of indication, which is what the messengers and their followers are able to do. God the Almighty said: And for every people is a guide. He also said: And indeed, you guide to a straight path. So He established for them guidance, which means indication, calling, and warning. He, the Almighty, is the only One with guidance, which means support and success. He said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Indeed, you do not guide whom you love. So guidance, according to this, comes with the meaning of creating faith in the heart, and from this is His Almighty saying: Those are upon guidance from their Lord and His saying: And He guides whom He wills. Guidance is direction, and its meaning goes back to the meaning of guidance no matter how you act. Abu Al-Ma'ali said: Guidance may come and what is meant by it is guiding the believers to the paths of Paradise and the roads leading to it, from this is His Almighty saying in describing the mujahideen: "He will not let their deeds go astray. He will guide them." And from this is His Almighty saying: So guide them to the path of Hellfire, meaning lead them to it.

The third: guidance is a feminine noun. Al-Farra' said: Some of Banu Asad feminize guidance and say: This is a good guidance. Al-Lahyani said: It is masculine, and it was not declined because it is shortened and the alif is not moved, and it is transitive with or without a letter, and this has been mentioned in Al-Fatihah. You say: I guided him to the road and to the road, and the house and to the house, meaning I made him know. The first is the language of the people of Hijaz, and the second was narrated by Al-Akhfash. In the Qur'an: Guide us to the straight path and Praise be to God who guided us to this. It was said: Guidance is a name for the day, because people are guided in it for their livelihoods and all their needs, and from this is the saying of Ibn Muqbil:

Until guidance was revealed and the desert attacked, they were humbled in the darkness or prayed

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: For the righteous. God Almighty singled out the righteous, even though it is guidance for all of creation, as an honor to them, because they believed and confirmed what was in it. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Rawq that he said: Guidance for the righteous, meaning an honor for them, meaning that He only added it to them out of reverence for them, an honor for them, and a clarification of their excellence. The root of for the righteous is for the righteous with two light ya's. The kasra was deleted from the first ya' because of its heaviness, then the ya' was deleted because of the meeting of two quiescent letters, and the waw was replaced with a ta' according to their origin in the meeting of the waw and the ta', and the ta' was assimilated into the ta', so it became for the righteous.

Fifth: Piety. It is said that its root in the language is little speech, as narrated by Ibn Faris. I said: And from it is the hadith:

The pious is the one who restrains and the God-fearing is above the believer and the obedient, and he is the one who protects himself from the punishment of God Almighty through his good deeds and sincere supplication. It is taken from avoiding the disliked by making it a barrier between you and it, as Al-Nabigha said:

The half fell and she did not want to drop it, so she took it and held it with her hand.

Another said:

She threw a mask to protect herself from the sun and protected herself with the best of two things: a hand and a wrist.

Abu Muhammad Abdul Ghani Al-Hafiz narrated from the hadith of Saeed bin Zarbi Abi Ubaidah from Asim bin Bahdalah from Zar bin Hubaish from Ibn Masoud who said: He said one day to his nephew: O my nephew, do you see how many people there are? He said: Yes. He said: There is no good in them except for the repentant or the pious. Then he said: O my nephew, do you see how many people there are? I said: Yes. He said: There is no good in them except for the knowledgeable or the student. Abu Yazid Al-Bistami said: The pious is he who when he speaks, speaks for God, and when he acts, he acts for God. Abu Sulayman Al-Darani said: The pious are those from whose hearts God has removed the love of desires. It was said: The pious is he who avoids polytheism and is innocent of hypocrisy. Ibn Atiyyah said: This is corrupt, because he may be like that while he is a sinner. Omar bin Al-Khattab may God be pleased with him asked Abi about piety, and he said: Did you take a path with thorns? He said: Yes. He said: So what did you do in it? He said: I rolled up my sleeves and was cautious. He said: That is piety. Ibn Al-Mu'tazz took this meaning and composed it:

Leave sins, big and small, that is piety

And I make pliers over the ground of thorns, warning what he sees

Do not underestimate the small, for mountains are made of pebbles.

Sixth: Piety contains all goodness, and it is God's commandment to the first and the last, and it is the best thing that a person can benefit from, as Abu al-Darda' said when it was said to him: Your companions recite poetry, but nothing has been memorized from you. He said:

Man wants to get what he desires, but God refuses except what he wants.

One says, My benefit, my wealth, and the fear of God are the best things I have gained.

Ibn Majah narrated in his Sunan on the authority of Abu Umamah on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he used to say: "The believer does not gain anything better after fearing God than a righteous wife. If he orders her, she obeys him. If he looks at her, she pleases him. If he swears her to do something, she fulfills it. If he is away from her, she is sincere in her dealings with him and his wealth."

The root of taqwa is: waqwa, with the weight fa'la, so the waw was changed to a ta' from waqituhu aqiya, meaning I protected him. A pious man means fearful, its root is waqā, and similarly taqāh was originally waqāh, just as they said: jijaha and turath, and the root is wajh and ward.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Ibn Jurayj said: Ibn Abbas said: That book, meaning this book. Mujahid, Ikrimah, Saeed bin Jubayr, As-Suddi, Muqatil bin Hayyan, Zaid bin Aslam, and Ibn Jurayj said the same, that it means this. The Arabs contrast between the two demonstrative pronouns, so they use each in place of the other. This is well-known in their speech. Al-Bukhari narrated it on the authority of Muammar bin Al-Muthanna on the authority of Abu Ubaidah. Al-Zamakhshari said: This is an allusion to Alif, Lam, Meem, just as God the Almighty said: Neither a woman who is obliged nor a virgin, between that. And God the Almighty said: That is the judgment of God, He judges between you. And He said: That is God, and similar examples of what is indicated by what was mentioned above. And God knows best. Some of the commentators, as narrated by Al-Qurtubi and others, said that this is an allusion to the Qur'an that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) was promised to be revealed to him, or the Torah or the Gospel, or something similar, according to ten opinions. Many have weakened this view, and God knows best.

The Book is the Qur'an. Whoever says that what is meant by this Book is a reference to the Torah and the Gospel, as Ibn Jarir and others have narrated, has gone far from the right path, has gone too far in argument, and has assumed what he has no knowledge of. Doubt is suspicion. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, There is no doubt in it. Abu al-Darda', Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, Abu Malik, Nafi', the client of Ibn Umar, Ata', Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Muqatil ibn Hayyan, al-Suddi, Qatadah, and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid said: Ibn Abi Hatim said: I do not know of any disagreement on this. Doubt is sometimes used to mean suspicion. Jamil said:

Buthaina said, Oh Jamil, you have made me suspicious. I said, Both of us, oh Buthaina, are suspicious.

It is also used in need, as some of them said:

We eliminated all doubt from Tihama and Khaybar, then we gathered the swords

The meaning of the speech here is that this book is the Qur'an, there is no doubt that it was sent down from God, as God Almighty said in the al-Sajdah 32: "Alif, Lam, Meem. The revelation of the Book, about which there is no doubt, is from the Lord of the worlds." Some of them said that this is report and its meaning is prohibition, i.e. do not doubt it. Some of the reciters stop at the Almighty's saying There is no doubt and begin with the Almighty's saying There is guidance in it for those who fear God. Stopping at the Almighty's saying There is no doubt in it is more appropriate for the verse that we mentioned, and because the Almighty's saying guidance becomes an attribute of the Qur'an, and that is more eloquent than there being guidance in it. Guidance, in terms of Arabic, can be raised as an adjective or accusative as a state.

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

Guidance is specifically for the righteous, as He said: "Say: It is, for those who believe, a guide and a cure. But those who do not believe - in their ears is deafness, and it is blindness for them. They are called from a distant place." And We send down of the Qur'an that which is a healing and a mercy for the believers, but it does not increase the wrongdoers except in loss. And other verses that indicate that the believers are specifically benefited by the Qur'an because it is in itself guidance, but only the righteous attain it, as the Almighty said: O mankind, there has come to you instruction from your Lord and a healing for what is in the breasts and guidance and mercy for the believers. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra: Al-Hamdani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, Guidance for the righteous means a light for the righteous. Abu Rawq said on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Guidance for the righteous, he said: They are the believers who avoid associating partners with Me and act in obedience to Me. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: On the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, For the righteous he said: Those who fear God's punishment for abandoning what they know of guidance and hope for His mercy for believing in what He brought. Sufyan Ath-Thawri said on the authority of a man on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri, regarding the words of God, the Most High, for the righteous, he said: Fear what God has forbidden them and fulfill what He has enjoined upon them. Abu Bakr bin Ayyash said: Al-A'mash asked me about the righteous, so I answered him and he said to me: Ask Al-Kalbi about it, so I asked him and he said: Those who avoid major sins. I went back to Al-A'mash and he said: He sees it as such and did not deny it. Qatada said that the righteous are those whom God described in His saying: Those who believe in the unseen and establish prayer and the verse after it. Ibn Jarir's choice is that the verse includes all of that, and it is as he said. At-Tirmidhi and Ibn Majah narrated on the authority of Abu Uqayl on the authority of Abdullah bin Yazid on the authority of Rabia bin Yazid and Atiya bin Qais on the authority of Atiya Al-Sa'di, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: A servant will not attain the status of being among the righteous until he abandons that which is permissible out of fear of that which is permissible. Then At-Tirmidhi said: It is good and strange. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abdullah bin Imran told us on the authority of Ishaq bin Sulayman, meaning Al-Razi, on the authority of Al-Mughirah bin Muslim on the authority of Maymun Abu Hamza, who said: I was sitting with Abu Wa'il when a man called Abu Afif, one of the companions of Muadh, entered upon us. Shuqaiq bin Salamah said to him: O Abu Afif, will you not tell us about Muadh bin Jabal? He said: Yes, I heard him say: The people will be detained on the Day of Resurrection in one place, and a caller will call out: Where are the righteous?

They will stand in the protection of the Most Merciful, God will not hide from them nor conceal Himself. I said: Who are the righteous? He said: A people who feared polytheism and idol worship and were sincere in worshipping God, so they will pass to Paradise. Guidance is used to mean what is established in the heart of faith, and no one can create this in the hearts of the servants except God, the Almighty. God the Almighty said: Indeed, you do not guide whom you like and He said: It is not upon you to guide them and He said: He whom God sends astray, there is no guide for him and He said: He whom God guides is the guided one, and he whom He sends astray, you will find no protector to guide him and other verses. It is used to mean clarifying the truth, explaining it, indicating it and guiding. God the Almighty said: And indeed, you guide to a straight path and He said: You are only a warner, and for every people is a guide and He said: As for Thamud, We guided them, but they preferred blindness to guidance and He said: And We guided him to the two ways according to the interpretation of those who said that what is meant by them is good and evil, which is the most likely, and God knows best. The origin of piety is avoiding what is disliked, because its origin and strength come from protection. An-Nabigha said:

The half fell and she did not want to drop it, so she took it and held it with her hand.

The other said:

So I found a mask to protect me from the sun, and I protected myself with the best two things, a hand and a wrist.

It was said that Omar bin Al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, asked Abi bin Kaab about piety, and he said to him, Did you not take a path full of thorns? He said, Yes. He said, Then what did you do? He said, I rolled up my sleeves and worked hard. He said, That is piety. Ibn Al-Mu'tazz took this meaning and said:

Leave sins, big and small, that is piety

And make pliers over the thorny ground, warning of what he sees.

Do not underestimate the small, for mountains are made of pebbles.

Abu Dardaa recited one day:

Man wants to get what he wants, but God refuses except what he wants.

One says, My benefit, my wealth, and the fear of God are the best things I have gained.

In Sunan Ibn Majah, on the authority of Abu Umamah, may God be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "A man does not gain anything better after fearing God than a righteous wife. If he looks at her, she pleases him, if he orders her, she obeys him, if he swears her an oath, she fulfills it, and if he is away from her, she advises him with regard to herself and his wealth."

Fath al-Qadir

The reference in his saying that is to the book mentioned after it. Ibn Jarir said: Ibn Abbas said: 2- That book this book, and Mujahid, Ikrimah, Saeed bin Jubayr, As-Suddi, Muqatil, Zaid bin Aslam, and Ibn Jurayj said the same, and Al-Bukhari narrated it from Abu Ubaidah. The Arabs sometimes use the reference to the distant absent person instead of the reference to the near present person, as Khafaf said:

I tell him, while the spear frames his back, Consider lightly that I am that.

That is, I am this, and from this is the saying of God Almighty: He is the Knower of the unseen and the witnessed, the Exalted in Might, the Merciful and That is Our argument which We gave to Abraham "These are the verses of God which We recite to you" That is the judgment of God; He judges between you and it was said that the reference is to something unseen, and there is disagreement about that unseen, so it was said: It is the book that was written for the creation regarding happiness and misery, the term and provision There is no doubt about it meaning it cannot be changed, and it was said: That is the book that God wrote for Himself in eternity that His mercy preceded His wrath, as in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Hurayrah who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When God decreed creation, He wrote in a book upon Himself which is placed with Him: My mercy prevails over My wrath." And in another narration: It preceded. It was said: It refers to what was revealed in Mecca, and it was said: To what is in the Torah and the Gospel, and it was said: It refers to His statement before it Alif, Lam, Meem, and Al-Zamakhshari preferred it. There was disagreement about that until ten statements were completed according to what Al-Qurtubi narrated, and the most preferred of them is what we mentioned earlier. The demonstrative pronoun is the subject, and the Book is its description, and the predicate is there is no doubt in it. Whoever permits beginning with Alif, Lam, Meem made that a second subject, and its predicate is the Book or it is its description, and the predicate is there is no doubt in it and the sentence is the predicate of the subject. It is permissible for the subject to be understood and its predicate is Alif, Lam, Meem and what follows it. Doubt is a source, and it is the anxiety and turmoil of the soul, and it was said that doubt is suspicion. Ibn Abi Hatim said: I do not know of any disagreement about this. Doubt may be used in suspicion and need, as Al-Qurtubi narrated. The meaning of this general negation is that the book is not a source of doubt because its meaning is so clear that it serves as proof, as it should not be doubted in any way. Stopping at la ribe is the well-known. It has been narrated from Nafi' and Asim to stop at la ribe. It was said in Al-Kashshaf: The one who stops must intend a piece of report, and similar to it is the saying of God the Almighty: They said, 'No harm.' And the saying of the Arabs: No problem, which is common in the language of the people of Hijaz. The meaning is: No doubt in it, guidance. And guidance is a source. Al-Zamakhshari said: It is the guidance that leads to the goal, as evidenced by the occurrence of misguidance in its opposite. And its place is in the nominative case as a subject, and its report is the circumstance mentioned before it, as mentioned previously. Al-Qurtubi said: Guidance is of two types: guidance by indication, which is what the Messengers and their followers are able to attain. God the Almighty said: And for every people is a guide and He said: And indeed, you guide to a straight path. So He established for them guidance, which means indication, calling, and warning. And He, the Almighty, is unique in providing guidance, which means support and success. So He said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Indeed, you do not guide whom you love. So guidance, according to this, comes with the meaning of creating faith in the heart, and from it is His statement, the Almighty: Those are upon guidance from their Lord and His statement: But God guides whom He wills. End quote. And the righteous are those for whom piety has been established. Ibn Faris said: Its origin in the language is the lack of speech. And it was said in Al-Kashshaf: Al-Muttaqi in the language is an active participle from their saying waqaah he protected him, and waqaah protection means protection, and from it is a waqaah horse. And this animal protects itself from its den: if it becomes bald from the roughness of the ground and the softness of the hoof, so it protects its hoof from the slightest thing that would hurt it. In the Shariah: He who protects himself from engaging in what deserves punishment, whether by doing or leaving it. End quote. Ibn Jarir and Al-Hakim narrated, and authenticated it, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, that the Book: the Qur'an, there is no doubt about it: there is no doubt about it. Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: there is no doubt about it, he said: there is no doubt about it. Ahmad narrated in Az-Zuhd and Abu Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Darda', he said: Doubt is suspicion. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah, similarly, and so did Ibn Jarir on the authority of Mujahid. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud, regarding his statement: guidance for the righteous, he said: light for the righteous, and they are the believers. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: guidance for the righteous, meaning those who fear God's punishment for abandoning what they know of guidance and hope for His mercy in believing in what came from it. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Muadh bin Jabal that he was asked: Who are the righteous? He said: A people who fear polytheism and idol worship and are sincere in worshipping God. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that a man said to him: What is piety? He said: Did you find a path with thorns? He said: Yes. He said: What did you do? He said: If you see thorns, you turn away from them, or pass over them, or stop short of them. He said: That is piety. Ahmad narrated in Az-Zuhd on the authority of Abu Ad-Darda' who said: The perfection of piety is for the servant to fear God to the point that he fears Him by an atom's weight when he abandons some of what he sees as lawful for fear that it will be a veil between him and what is unlawful. Something similar to what Abu Ad-Darda' said has been narrated on the authority of a group of the Tabi'un. Ahmad, Abd bin Hamid, Al-Bukhari in his history, Al-Tirmidhi who authenticated it, Ibn Majah, Ibn Abi Hatim, Al-Hakim who authenticated it, and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Sha'b narrated on the authority of Atiyyah Al-Sa'di who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: A servant will not attain the status of being among the righteous until he abandons that which is permissible out of caution for that which is permissible. So, it is obligatory to adhere to what this hadith indicates, and this is a legal meaning for the righteous that is more specific than the meaning that we presented from the author of Al-Kashshaf, who claimed that it is the legal meaning.

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

2. The Almighty's saying: That Book meaning this Book, which is the Qur'an. It was said: This is implied in it, meaning this is that Book. Al-Farra' said: God had promised His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that He would send down to him a Book that water would not erase, nor would it wear out from frequent repetition. So when He sent down the Qur'an, He said: This that is the Book that I promised you that I would send down to you in the Torah and the Gospel and on the tongues of the Prophets before you. "And this" is for approximation, and that is for distancing. Ibn Kaysan said: God the Almighty sent down before Surat Al-Baqarah surahs that the polytheists denied, then He sent down Surat Al-Baqarah and said: That Book meaning the surahs that preceded Al-Baqarah, there is no doubt about it.

The word book is a verbal noun meaning something written, just as it is said of a creature that it was created, and this dirham was struck by so-and-so, meaning it was struck by him. The root of books is to join and gather, and soldiers are called battalions because of their gathering, and the book was called a book because it gathered one letter to another.

The Almighty's saying: There is no doubt about it means there is no doubt that it is from God the Almighty and that it is the truth and the honesty. It was said that it is a piece of report with the meaning of a prohibition, meaning do not doubt it, like the Almighty's saying: There is no obscenity nor wickedness 197-Al-Baqarah, meaning do not engage in obscenity nor wickedness. Ibn Kathir read it with the pronunciation in the connection, and likewise every pronoun ha' preceded by a sukoon, he pronounces it with the pronunciation in the connection unless it is followed by a sukoon. Then if the sukoon before the ha' is a ya', he pronounces it with the kasra as a ya', and if it is not a ya', he pronounces it with the damma as a waw. Hafs agreed with him in his saying: Therein is humiliation 69-Al-Furqan (and he pronounces it with the pronunciation).

God the Almighty said: Guidance for the righteous. Abu Ja'far, Ibn Kathir, Hamza, and Al-Kisa'i assimilate the nasalization with the letter Lam and Ra'. Hamza and Al-Kisa'i added with the letter Ya', and Hamza added with the letter Waw. The others do not assimilate it. Abu Ja'far conceals the Nun and Tanween with the letter Kha' and Ghayn. Guidance for the righteous means it is guidance, meaning right guidance and clarification for the people of piety. It was said that it is an accusative in the state, meaning a guide, meaning there is no doubt in His guidance for the righteous. Guidance is that by which a person is guided, for the righteous, meaning the believers. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: The righteous is the one who avoids polytheism, major sins, and indecencies. It is taken from piety. Its origin is the barrier between two things. From this it is said that he protected himself with his shield, meaning he made it a barrier between himself and what he intends.

In the hadith: ((When the battle became intense, we would seek protection with the Messenger of God (peace be upon him))) meaning, when the war became intense, we would make him a barrier between us and the enemy. It is as if the pious person makes obeying God's commands and avoiding what He has forbidden a barrier between him and the punishment. Omar bin Al-Khattab may God be pleased with him said to Kaab Al-Ahbar: Tell me about piety. He said: Did you take a path with thorns? He said: Yes. He said: What did you do in it? He said: I was cautious and rolled up my sleeves. Kaab said: That is piety. Shahr bin Hawshab said: The pious person is the one who leaves what is permissible in order to be cautious of what is permissible. Omar bin Abdul Aziz said: Piety is leaving what God has forbidden and performing what God has made obligatory. Whatever God provides after that is better than better. It was said that it is following the example of the Prophet (peace be upon him). In the hadith: ((The sum of piety is in the words of God the Almighty: Indeed, God commands justice and doing good (90-An-Nahl) verse)) Ibn Omar said: Piety is that you do not see yourself as better than anyone. And singling out the pious for mention is an honor for them or because they are the pious with guidance.

2- That is the Book That is a reference to Alif, Lam, Meem if it is first written by the author of these letters or is explained by the Surah or the Qur'an, then when it is spoken and completed, or is transmitted from the sender to the recipient, it becomes distant and is referred to by it to the distant and reminds it, whenever Alif, Lam, Meem is intended to remind the Book, then it is its report or description which is it, or to the Book, then it is its description and what is intended by it is the Book whose revelation is promised in the manner of the Most High's saying: Indeed, We will cast upon you a weighty word. Or in the previous books, and it is a source by which the passive participle is named for emphasis.

It was said that fa'al means the passive participle, like clothing. Then the phrase was applied to the poem before it was written because it is something that is written. The origin of the word kutub is the plural, and from it comes the word katiba.

"There is no doubt about it" means that it is so clear and its proof is so brilliant that no rational person, after proper consideration, would doubt that it is a revelation that has reached the level of a miracle. It is not that no one has doubts about it. Do you not see the words of God Almighty: And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant. He did not remove doubt from them, but rather showed them the path that would make it easy for them, which is that they should strive to oppose one of His stars and exert their utmost effort in it until, if they are unable to do so, they will realize that there is no room for doubt or entry for suspicion in it.

It was said: Its meaning is that there is no doubt in it for the righteous. And guidance is a state of the genitive pronoun, and the factor in it is the circumstance that is an attribute of the negation. And doubt in the original is raabani if suspicion occurs in you, which is the anxiety and turmoil of the soul. It is called doubt because it disturbs the soul and removes tranquility. And in the hadith: Leave that which makes you doubt for that which does not make you doubt, for doubt is suspicion and honesty is tranquility, and from it is the uncertainty of time due to its misfortunes.

Guidance for the righteous guides them to the truth. Guidance is originally a source like secret and piety, and its meaning is indication.

It was said: The evidence that leads to the goal because it was made the opposite of misguidance in the Almighty's saying: Towards guidance or in manifest error and because it is said guided except for those who are guided to the desired goal. And it is specific to the righteous because they are the ones guided by it and benefit from its text, even though its evidence is general for every observer, whether Muslim or disbeliever. In this regard, the Almighty said: A guidance for mankind. Or because contemplating it does not benefit except those who have refined the mind and used it to manage the verses and consider the miracles, and recognize the prophecies, because it is like good food for maintaining health, as it does not bring benefit unless health is obtained, and this is what He referred to in His saying, the Almighty: And We send down of the Qur'an that which is a healing and a mercy to the believers, but it does not increase the wrongdoers except in loss. The vague and ambiguous content in it does not detract from its being guidance because it is separated from an explanation that specifies what is intended by it. And the righteous is an active participle from their saying He protected him, so he protected himself. And protection means excessive protection. In Islamic law, it is the name of someone who protects himself from what will harm him in the afterlife, and it has three levels:

First: Avoiding eternal punishment by disavowing polytheism, and based on this, God Almighty says: And He bound them to the word of piety.

Second: Avoiding everything that is sinful, whether done or omitted, even minor sins according to some people. This is known as piety in Islamic law, and it is the meaning of the Almighty's saying: And if only the people of the cities had believed and feared God.

Third: That he should abstain from what distracts his heart from the truth and devote himself to it with its evils, which is the true piety required by the Almighty's saying: O you who have believed, fear God as He should be feared. His saying: A guidance for the righteous has been interpreted here in three ways.

Know that the verse has several possible interpretations: that alif, lam, mim is the subject as a name for the Qur'an or the surah, or it is understood as the author of it, and that is its predicate, even though it is more specific than the author in general. The basic principle is that the more specific is not interpreted as the more knowledgeable, because what is meant by it is the author who is complete in his composition, reaching the highest degrees of eloquence and levels of rhetoric, and the book is a description of that.

And that alif, lam, mim is its predicate, a deleted subject, and that is a second predicate. Or a substitute, and the Book is its description, and no doubt in the famous opinion is built because it includes the meaning of from in the accusative case, as it is the name of la the negator of the genus, which works like in, because it requires it and is necessary for nouns as it is necessary. And in the reading of Abu Al-Shathaa, it is raised by la which means there is no and fi is its predicate, and it was not presented as he presented the statement of God Almighty: there is no threat in it because he did not intend to specify the negation of doubt with it from among all the books as he intended there, or its description, and for the righteous is its predicate. And guidance is accusative in the state, or the predicate is deleted as in la, a pronoun. Therefore, he stopped at no doubt, on the basis that fi is the predicate of guidance, which was presented before it because of its indefiniteness, and the estimate is: there is no doubt in it, in it is guidance, and that it is the subject and the Book is its predicate in the meaning: that it is the complete book that deserves to be called a book, or its description and what follows it is its predicate, and the sentence is the predicate of alif, lam, mim.

The first is to say that they are coherent sentences, the subsequent ones deciding the previous ones, and therefore the conjunction did not enter between them. So alif, lam, mim, is a sentence that indicates that the one being challenged is the author of the same type as what they compose their speech from, and that the Book is a second sentence that decides the aspect of the challenge, and there is no doubt in it, is a third sentence that testifies to its perfection, as the described Book is the ultimate in perfection, since there is no perfection higher than that of truth and certainty. And guidance for the righteous, as it is estimated to be the subject of a fourth sentence that confirms that it is a truth that is not doubted, that it is guidance for the righteous, or the previous one entails the subsequent one, as the evidence entails the meaning, and its explanation is that when he first drew attention to the miracle of the challenged one in that it is of the same type as their speech and they were unable to oppose it, he concluded from it that it is the book that has reached the level of perfection and this necessitated that doubt not cling to its edges since there is nothing less than what is subject to doubt and suspicion, and what was like that was inevitably guidance for the righteous, and in each one of them there is a point of eloquence, so in the first there is the deletion and symbolization of the intended with the reason, and in the second there is the magnificence of the expression, and in the third there is the delay of the circumstance out of caution against the ambiguity of falsehood, and in the fourth there is the deletion and description with the source for exaggeration and bringing it indefinite for glorification and specifying guidance for the righteous considering the goal of naming the one who reaches piety as a righteous person, in brevity and glorification of his status.

This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:3

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Those who believe believe in the unseen in what is hidden from them of resurrection, Paradise and Hell and establish prayer that is, perform it with its due rights and from what We have provided them We have given them they spend in obedience to God

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Muhammad bin Hamid al-Razi told us: Salamah bin al-Fadi told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Those who believe, he said: They are truthful.

Yahya bin Othman bin Saleh Al-Sahmi told me: Abu Saleh told us: Muawiyah bin Saleh told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They believe means they are truthful.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': They believe means they fear.

Muhammad bin Abdul-A'la Al-San'ani told us: Muhammad bin Thawr told us, on the authority of Muammar, who said: Al-Zuhri said: Faith is action.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Ala bin Al-Musayyab bin Rafi', on the authority of Abu Ishaq, on the authority of Abu Al-Ahwas, on the authority of Abdullah, who said: Faith is belief.

The meaning of faith among the Arabs is: belief. The one who believes in something in word is called a believer, and the one who believes in his word in action is called a believer. From this is the saying of God, the Most High: And you will not believe us, even if we were truthful (Yusuf 12:17), meaning: And you will not believe us in our words. Fear of God may be included in the meaning of faith, which is believing in words with deeds. Faith is a word that includes acknowledgment of God, His Books, and His Messengers, and believing in acknowledgment with deeds. Since this is the case, what is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse, and more similar to the description of the people, is that they are described as believing in the unseen in word, belief, and action, since God, the Most High, did not limit them from the meaning of faith to one meaning rather than another, but rather He described them in general with it, without specifying any of its meanings that excluded it from their description by report or reason.

The statement on the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: by the unseen.

Muhammad bin Hamid al-Razi told us: Salamah bin al-Fadi told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: by the unseen, he said: by what came from Him, meaning: from God, may His praise be exalted.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, by the unseen: as for the unseen, it is what is hidden from the servants of the matter of Paradise and the matter of Hell, and what God, the Blessed and Exalted, mentioned in the Qur'an. Their belief in that, meaning the believers among the Arabs, did not come from a book or knowledge that they had.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Asim, on the authority of Zur, who said: The unseen is the Qur'an.

Bishr bin Muadh Al-Aqdi told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Arubah, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement, Those who believe in the unseen, he said: They believed in Paradise and Hell, and the resurrection after death, and the Day of Resurrection, and all of this is unseen.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Those who believe in the unseen: they believe in God, His angels, His messengers, the Last Day, His Paradise, His Hell, and the meeting with Him, and they believe in life after death. All of this is unseen.

The root of the word ghayb is: everything that is absent from you. It is derived from the saying: So-and-so is absent.

The people of interpretation differed regarding the people about whom God Almighty revealed these two verses from the beginning of this surah, and regarding their description and the attributes with which He described them, such as their belief in the unseen, and the rest of the meanings that the two verses contained of their attributes other than Him.

Some of them said: They are the believing Arabs in particular, not the other believing People of the Book.

They proved the correctness of their statement and the truth of their interpretation by the verse that follows these two verses, which is the statement of God the Almighty: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you. They said: The Arabs did not have a book before the book that God the Almighty revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, that they believed in, acknowledged, and acted upon. Rather, the book for the People of the Two Books was other than it. They said: So when God the Almighty related the story of those who believe in what was revealed to Muhammad and what was revealed before him, after relating the story of those who believe in the unseen, we knew that each type of them is different from the other type, and that those who believe in the unseen are a type different from the type who believe in the two books, one of which was revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the other of which was revealed to those who came before the Messenger of God.

They said: Since that is the case, what we said is correct, that the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Those who believe in the unseen, is only those who believe in what is hidden from them of Paradise and Hell, reward and punishment and resurrection, and belief in God and His angels and His books and His messengers, and everything that the Arabs did not believe in during their ignorance, which God Almighty has made obligatory for His servants to believe in and not others.

Who said that?

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: As for those who believe in the unseen, they are the believers from among the Arabs, and establish prayer and spend from what We have provided for them. As for the unseen, it is what is hidden from the servants of the matter of Paradise and Hell, and what God mentioned in the Qur'an. Their belief in that was not based on a book or knowledge that they had. And those who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain. These are the believers from among the People of the Book.

Some of them said: Rather, these four verses were revealed specifically for the believers among the People of the Book. Because of their belief in the Qur'an when God, the Most High, informed them in it about the unseen things that they used to hide among themselves and keep secret. So they knew when God, the Most High, revealed that to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in His revelation, that it was from God, the Most High, the Almighty. So they believed in the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they believed in the Qur'an and what it contained of information about the unseen things that they had no knowledge of, because they had established with them the proof that God, the Most High, provided them with in His Book, of informing them about what they used to conceal from their hearts, that all of that was from God.

Some of them said: Rather, the four verses from the beginning of this Surah were revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, describing all believers who are like that, from the Arabs and the non-Arabs, the People of the Book and others. But this is only a description of a group of people, and the one who believes in what God revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what was revealed before him, is the one who believes in the unseen.

They said: God described them as having faith in what was revealed to Muhammad and what was revealed to those before him, after His description of them as having faith in the unseen was fulfilled, because His description of them as having faith in the unseen meant that they believe in Paradise, Hell, Resurrection, and all the other matters that God, may His praise be exalted, has commanded them to believe in, which they have not seen and which have not yet come of what is to come, without informing them that they believe in what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the messengers before him and the books brought.

They said: Since the meaning of the Most High's statement: And those who believe in what was revealed to you and what was revealed before you is not found in His statement: Those who believe in the unseen, the need for the servants to know their description of that was similar to their need to know the description with which they were described of their belief in the unseen, so that they may know what pleases God from the actions of His servants and what He loves from their descriptions, so that they may be, if their Lord guides them to it, believers.

Who said that?

Muhammad bin Amr bin Al-Abbas Al-Bahili told me: Abu Asim Al-Dahhak bin Mukhallad told us: Isa bin Maimun Al-Makki told us: Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh told us, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Four verses of Surat Al-Baqarah describe the believers, two verses describe the disbelievers, and thirteen describe the hypocrites.

Sufyan bin Wakee' told us: My father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Musa bin Masoud told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, who said: Four verses from the opening of this Surah, meaning Surat Al-Baqarah, are about those who believe, and two verses are about the leaders of the confederates.

The first of the two statements, in my opinion, is more correct and more similar to the interpretation of the Book, and it is the first statement, which is: that those whom God Almighty described as having faith in the unseen, and in what He, the Most High, described them with in the first two verses, are not those whom He described as having faith in what was revealed to Muhammad and what was revealed to the messengers before him, because of the reasons I mentioned before for those who said that.

What also indicates the correctness of this statement is that it is a genus after describing the believers with the two attributes that He described, and after classifying each type of them as He classified the disbelievers into two types: He made one of them imprinted on his heart, sealed upon him, and hopeless of his return, and the other a hypocrite, showing off by showing faith on the outside, while concealing hypocrisy inwardly. So He made the disbelievers into two types, just as He made the believers into two types at the beginning of the surah. Then He made known to His servants the description of each type of them and their attributes, and what He has prepared for each group of them of reward or punishment, and He condemned those among them who are condemned, and He thanked the efforts of those among them who are obedient.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And they establish.

And its establishment: performing it within its limits and obligations, and the duty in it is according to what was imposed upon them. Just as it is said: The people established their market, if they did not neglect buying and selling in it, and as the poet said:

We held a market for the Iraqis, so they were proud and all of them returned.

And as Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and they establish prayer, he said: those who establish prayer with its obligatory duties.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And they establish prayer. He said: Establishing prayer is the completion of bowing and prostration, recitation and humility, and devotion to it in it.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Prayer.

Yahya bin Abi Talib told me, he said: Yazid told us, he said: Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, regarding his statement: Those who establish prayer: meaning the obligatory prayer.

As for prayer, in the speech of the Arabs it means supplication, as Al-A'sha said:

She has a guard who never leaves her home, and if she is slaughtered, he prays over her and offers Zamzam.

Meaning: He prayed for her, and like what Al-A'sha also said:

The wind met her in her cloak, prayed on her cloak, and was drawn

I believe that the obligatory prayer is called prayer because the one praying exposes himself to the success of his request for reward from God through his work, along with what he asks his Lord for of his needs. The supplicant exposes himself through his supplication to his Lord to the success of his needs and his request.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And from what We have provided them they spend.

The commentators differed in their interpretation of this. Some of them said:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And from what We have provided them they spend, he said: They give zakat, hoping for reward from it.

Al-Muthanna told me: Abdullah bin Saleh told us, on the authority of Muawiyah, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And from what We have provided for them they spend, he said: The zakat on their wealth.

Yahya bin Abi Talib told me, he said: Yazid told us, he said: Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, And from what We have provided for them they spend, he said: The expenditures were acts of worship by which they drew closer to God according to their means and effort, until the obligatory charity was revealed: seven verses in Surat Bara'ah, in which charity is mentioned, they are the confirmed and abrogating verses.

Some of them said:

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and from what We have provided for them they spend: refers to a man's spending on his family. This was before zakat was revealed.

The first interpretation of the verse and the one most deserving of the description of the people is that they were paying all that was required of them from their wealth, whether it was zakat or spending on those who were obligated to spend on them, from family and children and others, whose expenses are obligatory upon them due to kinship, ownership, or other things. Because God, the Most High, described them comprehensively when He described them as spending from what He provided for them, so He praised them for that from their description. So it was known that since He did not specify their praise and description with a type of spending for which its owner is praised without a type by report or otherwise, they were described with all the meanings of spending for which its owner is praised from the good things that their Lord provided for them from their wealth and properties, and that is the lawful part of it that is not similar to the unlawful.

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend from what We have provided them.

It contains twenty-six issues:

The first: His saying: those is in the accusative case as an attribute of the righteous, and the nominative case is permissible for the purpose of separation, meaning they are the ones, and the accusative case is permissible for praise. They believe is they confirm. And belief in the language means belief, and in the revelation: And you are not a believer in us meaning a believer, and it is transitive with the prepositions Ba and Lam, as He said: And do not believe except him who follows your religion "So he did not believe in Moses." And Hajjaj bin Hajjaj al-Ahwal - and he is nicknamed Sack of Honey - narrated that he heard Qatadah say: O son of Adam, if you do not want to do good except with energy, then your soul is inclined towards boredom, lethargy, and boredom, but the believer is the one who is patient, and the believer is the one who is pious, and the believer is the one who is strict, and the believers are those who are stubborn towards God night and day, and by God, the believer does not cease to say: Our Lord, our Lord, in secret and in public, until He answers them in secret and in public.

The second: The Almighty's saying: By the unseen. The unseen in the speech of the Arabs is: everything that is hidden from you. It is from the words with the letter yaa. It is said from it: the sun set, it sets. The absence is well-known. The woman is absent, so she is absent if her husband is absent from her. We fell into absence and ghaybah, meaning a depression in the earth. The ghaybah is the thicket, which is a group of trees in which one disappears. The reassured part of the earth is called the unseen, because it is hidden from sight.

Third: The commentators differed in the interpretation of the unseen here. A group said: The unseen in this verse is God, the Most High. Ibn al-Arabi weakened this. Others said: It is fate and destiny. Others said: It is the Qur'an and what is in it of the unseen. Others said: The unseen is everything that the Messenger, peace be upon him, informed us of that the minds cannot be guided to, such as the signs of the Hour, the torment of the grave, the gathering and the resurrection, the path and the scale, Paradise and Hell. Ibn Atiyyah said: These statements do not contradict each other, rather the unseen applies to all of them.

I said: This is the legitimate faith referred to in the hadith of Gabriel, peace be upon him, when he said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Tell me about faith. He said: That you believe in God,

His angels, His books, His messengers, and the Last Day, and believe in destiny, both its good and its bad. He said: You have spoken the truth. And he mentioned the hadith. Abdullah bin Masoud said: No believer has faith better than faith in the unseen. Then he recited: Those who believe in the unseen.

I said: In the revelation: And we were not absent, and He said: Those who fear their Lord in secret. So He, glory be to Him, is absent from sight, not visible in this world, not absent by sight and reasoning, so they believe that they have a Lord who is able to reward for deeds, so they fear Him in their secrets and in their solitude in which they are absent from people, because they know that He sees them, and on this the verses agree and do not contradict, praise be to God. And it was said: in secret, meaning in their consciences and hearts, unlike the hypocrites, and this is a good statement. And the poet said:

We believe in the unseen, and our people used to pray to idols before Muhammad.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: And they establish prayer is connected to one sentence after another. Establishing prayer is performing it with its pillars, Sunnahs, and forms at its appointed times, as will be explained. It is said: The thing stood meaning it lasted and remained, and it is not from standing on a man, but rather it is from your saying: The truth stood meaning it appeared and remained, as in the saying of the poet:

The war started against us

And when it is said, You have come, they do not leave until the horses have set up a stabbing market.

It was said: They establish and perpetuate, and to establish it means to perpetuate it, and Omar referred to this meaning by saying: Whoever preserves it and protects it has preserved his religion, and whoever wastes it is more wasteful of everything else.

Fifth: Establishing the prayer is well-known, and it is a Sunnah according to the majority of scholars, and that the one who abandons it does not have to repeat it. According to Al-Awza'i, Ata', Mujahid, and Ibn Abi Laila, it is obligatory, and the one who abandons it must repeat it. This is what the people of the apparent meaning said, and it was narrated from Malik, and Ibn Al-Arabi chose it. He said: Because in the hadith of the Bedouin:

And he commanded him to stand, just as he commanded him to say Allahu Akbar, face the Kaaba, and perform ablution.

He said: As for you now that you have come to know the hadith, it is necessary for you to say one of the two narrations of Malik that agrees with the hadith, which is that the residence is obligatory. Ibn Abd al-Barr said about his saying, may God bless him and grant him peace:

And its prohibition is the takbir is evidence that the one who did not enter into the ihram did not enter into the prayer. So whatever was before the ihram, its ruling is that the prayer does not have to be repeated unless they agree on something, in which case it is accepted according to the consensus, such as purification, the direction of the qiblah, the time, and so on. Some of our scholars said: Whoever leaves it intentionally must repeat the prayer, but that is not because it is obligatory, because if that were the case, its forgetfulness and its intentional action would be the same. Rather that is due to taking the Sunnah lightly, and God knows best.

Sixth: The scholars differed as to whether someone who hears the call to prayer should hurry up or not. The majority of scholars were of the view that he should not hurry up even if he fears missing the rak'ah, based on the saying of the Prophet, peace be upon him:

"When the prayer is called, do not come running, but come walking and in a calm manner. So pray whatever you catch up with, and make up whatever you miss."

Narrated by Abu Hurairah, narrated by Muslim. It was also narrated by him that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"If one is called to prayer, one should not rush to it, but walk with calmness and dignity. Pray what you have caught up with and make up what has passed you." This is a clear text. As for the meaning, if one hurries, he will be dazzled and his entry into the prayer, its recitation, and its humility will be disturbed. A group of the early Muslims, including Ibn Umar and Ibn Mas'ud, with some differences from him, said that if one fears missing it, he should hurry. Ishaq said: He should hurry if he fears missing the rak'ah, and something similar was narrated from Malik. He said: There is no problem for someone who is on a horse to move the horse, and some of them interpreted it as a difference between someone walking and someone riding, because someone riding is unlikely to be dazzled as someone is dazzled.

I said: It is better to use the Sunnah of the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) in every situation. So he walks as the hadith says, and he should be calm and dignified, because he is in prayer and it is impossible for his (peace and blessings of God be upon him) report to be contrary to what he reported. Just as the one who enters into prayer must be calm and dignified, so too the one who walks, so that he may imitate him and obtain his reward. What indicates the correctness of this is what we have mentioned from the Sunnah, and what al-Darimi included in his Musnad. He said: Muhammad ibn Yusuf told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ajan, on the authority of al-Maqburi, on the authority of Ka'b ibn Ujrah, who said that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said:

If you perform ablution and go to the mosque, do not interlock your fingers, for you are in prayer. In this hadith, which is authentic, the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) forbade anything less than hastening and made it like the one praying. These Sunnahs clarify the meaning of the words of God the Almighty: So hasten to the remembrance of God, and that what is meant by it is not hurrying on foot, but rather it means work and action. This is how Malik interpreted it. And this is the correct view, and God knows best.

Seventh: The scholars differed in the interpretation of his saying, peace be upon him: And whatever you have missed, complete and his saying: And make up what has preceded you. Do they have the same meaning or not? It was said: They have the same meaning and that making up may be used to mean completion. God the Almighty said: So when you have completed the prayer and He said: So when you have completed your rites. It was said: Their meanings are different and this is the correct one, and this difference results in a difference of opinion regarding what the one who enters realizes, is it the beginning of his prayer or the end of it? A group of Malik's companions - including Ibn al-Qasim - went with the first, but he makes up what he missed with al-Hamd and a surah, so he is a builder in actions and a judge in words. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: This is the well-known opinion of the school. Ibn Khuwayz Mandad said: This is what our companions are on, and it is the opinion of al-Awza'i, al-Shafi'i, Muhammad ibn al-Hasan, Ahmad ibn Hanbal, al-Tabari, and Dawud ibn Ali. Ashhab narrated, and he is the one mentioned by Ibn Abd al-Hakam, on the authority of Malik, and Isa narrated it on the authority of Ibn al-Qasim on the authority of Malik: That what he catches up with is the last of his prayer, and that he is the judge in actions and words, and this is the opinion of the Kufians. Judge Abu Muhammad Abd al-Wahhab said: And it is the well-known opinion of Malik. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: Whoever considers what he catches up with the first of his prayer, I think that they took into consideration the ihram, because it is only at the beginning of the prayer, and the testimony of faith and the tasleem are only at the end of it, so from here they said: That what he catches up with is the first of his prayer, with what was reported in that from the Sunnah in his saying: Then complete it, and completion is the last.

Others argued with his saying: Then make it up, and what he makes up is the missed prayer, except that the narration of the one who narrated: Then complete it is more, and it is not correct according to the saying of the one who said: Whatever catches up with the beginning of his prayer is valid, except what was said by Abdul Aziz bin Abi Salamah Al-Majshun, Al-Muzani, Ishaq, and Dawud, that he recites with the imam Al-Hamd and a surah if he catches up with that with him, and if he stands up to make it up, he recites Al-Hamd alone, so these people are valid according to their principle, their saying and their actions, may God be pleased with them.

Eighth: The Iqama prevents one from starting a voluntary prayer. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When the Iqama is given for prayer, there is no prayer except the obligatory one. Narrated by Muslim and others. But if one starts a voluntary prayer, he should not interrupt it, because God, the Most High, says: And do not invalidate your deeds, especially if he has prayed one rak'ah of it. It was said: He should interrupt it, because of the general meaning of the hadith on that. And God knows best.

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

Ninth: The scholars differed concerning someone who entered the mosque and did not perform the two rak'ahs of Fajr, then the prayer was called. Malik said: He should enter with the imam and not perform them. If he did not enter the mosque, and he does not fear missing a rak'ah, then he should perform them outside the mosque, and he should not perform them in any of the courtyards of the mosque - where Friday prayers are performed - that are attached to the mosque. If he fears that he will miss the first rak'ah, then he should enter and pray with him, then he should pray them when the sun rises if he likes. Praying them when the sun rises is more beloved to me and is better than not praying them. Abu Hanifah and his companions said: If he fears that he will miss the two rak'ahs and will not catch up with the imam before he rises from bowing in the second, then he should enter with him. If he hopes that he will catch up with a rak'ah, then he should pray the two rak'ahs of Fajr outside the mosque, then he should enter with the imam. Al-Awza'i said the same, except that it is permissible for him to bow them in the mosque as long as he does not fear missing the last rak'ah. Al-Thawri said: If he fears missing a rak'ah, then he should enter with them and not pray them, otherwise he should pray them even if he has entered the mosque. Al-Hasan ibn Hayy, and it is said Ibn Hayyan, said: If the resident begins the Iqama, then there is no voluntary prayer except the two Rak'ahs of Fajr. Al-Shafi'i said: Whoever enters the mosque after the Iqama has been established for prayer, he should enter with the Imam and not perform them outside the mosque or inside it. Al-Tabari said the same, and Ahmad ibn Hanbal said the same, and it was narrated from Malik, and it is the correct view in this regard, because the Prophet (peace be upon him) said: When the Iqama has been established for prayer, then there is no prayer except the obligatory one. The two Rak'ahs of Fajr are either Sunnah, or Virtue, or Desirable, and the evidence in the event of a dispute is the evidence of the Sunnah. Among the evidence for the famous opinion of Malik and Abu Hanifa is what was narrated from Ibn Umar that he came while the Imam was praying Fajr prayer, so he prayed them in Hafsa's room, then he prayed with the Imam. Among the evidence for Al-Thawri and Al-Awza'i is what was narrated from Abdullah ibn Mas'ud that he entered the mosque after the Iqama had been established for prayer, so he prayed the two Rak'ahs of Fajr towards a pillar in the mosque, then he entered the prayer in the presence of Hudhayfah and Abu Musa may God be pleased with them. They said: If it is permissible for him to be occupied with the voluntary prayer instead of the obligatory prayer outside the mosque, then it is permissible for him to do so in the mosque. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Malik bin Buhaynah who said: "The dawn prayer was called and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, saw a man praying while the muezzin was calling the prayer, so he said: Are you praying the dawn prayer with four rak'ahs?" This is a denunciation from him, may God bless him and grant him peace, of the man praying the two rak'ahs of dawn in the mosque while the imam was praying. It can also be used as evidence that if the two rak'ahs of dawn are performed in that situation, they are valid, because he, may God bless him and grant him peace, did not interrupt his prayer even though he was able to do so, and God knows best.

Tenth: The root of prayer in the language is supplication, taken from the word salā which means to pray, and from it is the word qawwa (peace be upon him):

"If one of you is invited to a meal, let him accept. If he is breaking his fast, let him eat, and if he is fasting, let him pray." Some scholars said that what is meant is the well-known prayer, so he prays two rak'ahs and leaves. The first is more famous and is the view of most scholars.

When Asma gave birth to Abdullah bin Al-Zubayr, she sent him to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Asma said: Then he stroked him and prayed over him, meaning he supplicated for him. God Almighty said: And pray for them, meaning supplicate for them.

Al-A'sha said:

My daughter says as I approach my departure: O Lord, spare my father from descriptions and pain.

You should do as you prayed, so sleep deeply, for there is someone lying on one's side.

Al-A'sha also said:

The wind met her in her cloak, prayed on her cloak, and was drawn

The man was drawn: he grew up and prayed, as stated in As-Sahih. Some people said: It is taken from As-Sala, which is a vein in the middle of the back and separates at the tailbone, enveloping it. From this, the praying person took the lead in racing horses, because he comes in the arena and his head is at the prayer of the one who is ahead, so the prayer was derived from it, either because it came second for faith and was likened to the praying horse, or because the one who kneels has his prayer doubled. As-Sala: the place where the tail is inserted in the horse, and both are As-Salawan. As-Sala: the one who follows the one who is ahead, because his head is at the prayer. Ali, may God be pleased with him, said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, outran Abu Bakr and a third of Umar. It was said that it is taken from Adherence, and from this he prayed with fire if he adhered to it, and from it he prayed with a blazing fire. Al-Harith ibn Abbad said:

I was not from its gardens, God knows, and I am its sea today

Any adherence to its heat, and it is as if the meaning in this is the adherence of the servants to the limit that God Almighty has commanded. It was said: It is taken from salayt al-ud bi-an-nar if you straightened it and softened it with salaa. And salaa: salaa al-nar with a kasra on the sad and extended, and if you open the sad it is shortened, so you say salaa al-nar, so it is as if the one praying straightens himself by suffering in it and softens and is humble. Al-Kharzanji said:

Do not rush your matter and continue it, for your stick is not like the one who continues it.

Prayer: supplication. Prayer: mercy, and from it:

O God, bless Muhammad, the hadith. Prayer means worship, and from it the Almighty's saying: And their prayer at the House was not the verse, meaning their worship. Prayer means voluntary prayer, and from it the Almighty's saying: And enjoin prayer upon your family. Prayer means glorification, and from it the Almighty's saying: Had he not been of those who glorify God meaning of those who pray. And from it the word glorify Him in the forenoon. It has been said in the interpretation of We glorify Your praise: we pray. Prayer means reading, and from it the Almighty's saying: And do not be loud in your prayer so it is a common word. Prayer is a house in which one prays, Ibn Faris said. It has been said that prayer is a proper noun that is given for this act of worship, for God the Almighty has not left a time without a law, and no law has left a prayer, narrated by Abu Nasr al-Qushayri.

I said: According to this statement, it has no derivation, and according to the majority, it is:

Eleventh: The two fundamentalists differed as to whether they should remain in their original linguistic and initial established form, as well as faith, zakat, fasting, and pilgrimage, and the Shari'ah only disposes of the conditions and rulings, or whether that addition from the Shari'ah makes them established as the initial establishment by the Shari'ah. Here they differ, and the first is more correct, because the Shari'ah was established in Arabic, and the Qur'an was revealed in it in clear Arabic, but the Arabs have control over the names, just as the word dabbah was established for everything that creeps, then custom limited it to beasts, so the custom of the Shari'ah has control over the names, and God knows best.

Twelfth: There is a difference of opinion about what is meant by prayer here. Some say it means the obligatory prayers. Others say it means the obligatory and voluntary prayers together, which is correct, because the wording is general and the pious person performs both.

Thirteenth: Prayer is a cause of provision. God Almighty said: And enjoin prayer upon your family [Surah Taha], as will be explained in Taha, God willing. And it is a cure for stomach pain and other ailments. Ibn Majah narrated, "On the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was having intercourse, so I was having intercourse, so I prayed, then I sat down. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, turned to me and said: I have a sore throat. I said: Yes, O Messenger of God. He said: Get up and pray, for in prayer there is healing." In another narration: I have a sore throat means in Persian you have a sore throat.

And peace and blessings be upon him, if something worried him, he would resort to prayer.

Fourteenth: Prayer is not valid except with certain conditions and obligations. Among its conditions is purity, and its rulings will be explained in Surat An-Nisa and Surat Al-Ma'idah. Covering the private parts will be discussed in Al-A'raf, God willing.

As for its obligatory parts: facing the qiblah, making the intention, saying the opening takbir and standing for it, reciting the opening chapter of the Qur'an and standing for it, bowing and being at ease in it, raising the head from bowing and being straight in it, prostrating and being at ease in it, raising the head from prostration, sitting between the two prostrations and being at ease in it, and the second prostration and being at ease in it. The basis for this sentence is the hadith of Abu Hurayrah about the man whom the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, taught when he failed to do it, so he said to him:

If you stand up to pray, perform ablution thoroughly, then face the qiblah, then say Allahu Akbar, then recite whatever you can of the Qur'an, then bow until you are at ease in bowing, then rise until you are standing straight, then prostrate until you are at ease in prostration, then rise until you are at ease in sitting, then do this throughout your prayer. Narrated by Muslim.

And similar to it is the hadith of Rifa'ah ibn Rafi', narrated by Al-Darqutni and others. Our scholars said: So his statement, may God bless him and grant him peace, explained the pillars of prayer, and he was silent about the iqama, raising the hands, the limit of recitation, the takbir of transitions, the tasbih in bowing and prostration, the middle sitting, the tashahhud, the final sitting, and the salutation. As for the iqama and specifying the Fatimah, we have already discussed them. As for raising the hands, it is not obligatory according to the group of scholars and most of the jurists, due to the hadith of Abu Hurayrah and the hadith of Rifa'ah ibn Rafi'. Dawud and some of his companions said that it is obligatory when saying the takbir of ihram. Some of his companions said: Raising the hands when starting ihram, bowing, and rising from bowing is obligatory, and whoever does not raise his hands, his prayer is invalid. This is the statement of Al-Hamidi and a narration from Al-Awza'i. They used as evidence his statement, may God bless him and grant him peace:

Pray as you have seen me praying. Narrated by Al-Bukhari. They said: It is obligatory for us to do as we have seen him do, because he is the one who conveys God's will. As for the takbir other than the takbir of ihram, it is recommended according to the majority of scholars due to the hadith mentioned. Ibn Qasim, the companion of Malik, used to say: Whoever omits the takbir in prayer, or forgets one or two takbirs, he should also prostrate for forgetfulness. If he does not do so, there is nothing wrong with him. It was narrated from him that there is no forgetfulness in one takbir for whoever forgets it. This indicates that the greatness of the takbir and its entirety are obligatory in his view, and that a small amount of it is overlooked. Asbagh ibn al-Faraj and Abdullah ibn Abdul-Hakam said: There is nothing wrong with someone who does not say the takbir in prayer from beginning to end if he says the takbir of ihram. If he omits it out of forgetfulness, he should prostrate for forgetfulness. If he does not prostrate, there is nothing wrong with him. No one should intentionally leave out the takbir, because it is a sunnah of the prayer. If he does so, he has done wrong and there is nothing wrong with him and his prayer is valid.

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

I said: This is correct, and it is what the group of jurists of the regions from the Shafi'is and Kufians and the group of the people of hadith and the Malikis are upon, except for those who follow the school of thought of Ibn al-Qasim. Al-Bukhari, may God have mercy on him, entitled Chapter on completing the takbir in bowing and prostration and he cited the hadith of Mutraf ibn Abdullah who said:

I prayed behind Ali ibn Abi Talib, along with Imran ibn Husayn. When he prostrated, he would say Allahu Akbar, and when he raised his head, he would say Allahu Akbar, and when he rose from the two rak'ahs, he would say Allahu Akbar. When he finished the prayer, Imran ibn Husayn took the hand and said: "This reminded me of the prayer of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace," or he said: "He prayed with us the prayer of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace." And the hadith of Ikrimah, who said:

I saw a man at the Maqam, saying Allahu Akbar with every lowering and raising, and when he stood up and when he lay down. I informed Ibn Abbas, who said: "Isn't that the prayer of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace? May your mother be cursed!" Al-Bukhari, may God have mercy on him, indicated to me through this chapter that the takbir was not practiced by them. Abu Ishaq al-Sabi'i narrated on the authority of Yazid ibn Abi Maryam on the authority of Abu Musa al-Ash'ari, who said: "Ali led us in prayer on the Day of the Camel, a prayer that reminded us of the prayer of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. He used to say "Allahu Akbar" with every lowering and raising, standing and sitting. Abu Musa said: We either forgot it or left it out intentionally.

I said: Do you think they repeated the prayer? How can it be said that someone who left out the takbir has invalidated his prayer? If that were the case, there would be no difference between the Sunnah and the obligatory. If the individual parts of something are not obligatory, then all of it is not obligatory. And God is the Grantor of success.

Fifteenth: As for glorifying God during bowing and prostration, it is not obligatory according to the majority, based on the aforementioned hadith. Ishaq bin Rahawayh made it obligatory, and whoever leaves it out must repeat the prayer, based on the saying of the Prophet, peace be upon him:

As for bowing, glorify the Lord in it, and as for prostration, strive in supplication, for it is likely that your supplication will be answered.

Sixteenth: As for sitting and the Tashahhud, the scholars differed on that. Malik and his companions said: The first sitting and the Tashahhud have two Sunnahs. A group of scholars made the first sitting obligatory and said: It is special from among the other obligatory prayers in that prostration can take its place, like the Arayya of Muzabanah, and the Qirad of Ijarah, and like standing after the Ihram for one who finds the Imam bowing. They argued that if it were a Sunnah, the one who intentionally omitted it would not invalidate his prayer, just as it is not invalidated by omitting the Sunnahs of prayer. Those who did not make it obligatory argued that if it were one of the obligatory prayers, the one who forgot about it would return to it until he performs it, just as if he omitted a prostration or a Rak'ah, and he should observe in it what is observed in bowing and prostration of loyalty and rank, then he should prostrate for his forgetfulness as one who omitted a Rak'ah or a prostration and performed them. In the hadith of Abdullah ibn Buhaynah:

"The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood up after two rak'ahs and forgot to recite the tashahhud, so the people behind him glorified God so that he would sit down, so he remained standing and they stood up. When he finished his prayer, he performed two prostrations of forgetfulness before the salutation." If sitting was obligatory, forgetfulness and forgetfulness would not have nullified it, because the obligatory parts of prayer are equally neglected by forgetfulness and intentionally, except for the one who is following the imam.

They differed on the ruling on the last sitting in prayer and the purpose of that. They are:

Seventeenth: On five sayings:

One of them: Sitting is obligatory, the Tashahhud is obligatory, and the Salam is obligatory. Among those who said this are Al-Shafi'i and Ahmad ibn Hanbal in one narration, and Abu Mus'ab narrated it in his Mukhtasar on the authority of Malik and the people of Madinah, and Dawud said the same. Al-Shafi'i said: Whoever omits the first Tashahhud and the prayers upon the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, does not have to repeat it, and he has to perform two prostrations of forgetfulness for omitting it. If he omits the final Tashahhud, forgetfully or intentionally, he must repeat it. They argued that the statement of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the prayer is obligatory, because the origin of its obligation is general and needs to be stated, except for what is excluded by evidence. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Pray as you have seen me pray.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Those who believe in the unseen, Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Ala' bin Al-Musayyab bin Rafi' on the authority of Abu Ishaq on the authority of Abu Al-Ahwas on the authority of Abdullah, who said: Faith is belief. Ali bin Abi Talha and others said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, that they believe and believe. Muammar said on the authority of Al-Zuhri: Faith is action. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas that they believe and fear.

Ibn Jarir said: It is better that they be described as having faith in the unseen in word, deed and belief. Fear of God may be included in the meaning of faith, which is the confirmation of words with deeds. Faith is a comprehensive word for acknowledging God, His Books and His Messengers, and confirming acknowledgment with deeds. I said As for faith in the language, it is used to mean pure belief, and it may be used in the Qur'an to mean that, as God the Almighty said: He believes in God and believes in the believers, and as the brothers of Joseph said to their father: But you would not believe us, even if we were truthful. Likewise, if it is used in conjunction with deeds, as God the Almighty said: Except those who believe and do righteous deeds. But if it is used absolutely, then the required religious faith is nothing but belief, words and deeds. This is what most of the imams have said, and it has been narrated by Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad ibn Hanbal, Abu Ubaidah and more than one others unanimously: that faith is words and deeds, and it increases and decreases. Many narrations and hadiths have been reported about it, and we have discussed them individually at the beginning of the commentary on Al-Bukhari. Praise and thanks be to God. Some of them interpreted it as fear, as in the saying of God the Almighty: Indeed, those who fear their Lord unseen and His saying: Whoever fears the Most Merciful unseen and comes with a heart turned in repentance. Fear is the essence of faith and knowledge, as God the Almighty said: Only those fear God, from among His servants, who have knowledge. Some of them said that they believe in the unseen as they believe in the testimony, and they are not like what God the Almighty said about al-Munafiqun 63: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with their evil ones, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking.' And He said: When the hypocrites come to you, they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of God.' And God knows that you are His Messenger, and God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars. Based on this, His saying in the unseen is a state, meaning in the state of their being unseen from the people.

As for the unseen intended here, the expressions of the predecessors differed regarding it, and they are all correct and go back to the fact that all are intended. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah regarding the Almighty's statement: They believe in the unseen, he said: And they believe in God, His angels, His books, His messengers, the Last Day, His Paradise, His Hell, and the meeting with Him, and they believe in life after death and in the resurrection. So this is all unseen. And this is what Qatada bin Di'amah said, and Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, as for the unseen, it is that which is hidden from the servants of the matter of Paradise and the matter of Hell and what is mentioned in the Qur'an. Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, with the unseen, he said with what came from Him - meaning from God Almighty - and Sufyan Al-Thawri said on the authority of Asim on Zur, he said: The unseen is the Qur'an. And Ata bin Abi Rabah said: Whoever believes in God has believed in the unseen. And Ismail bin Abi Khalid said: They believe in the unseen, he said: The unseen of Islam. And Zaid bin Aslam said: Those who believe in the unseen, he said: In destiny. So all of these are close in meaning because all of what was mentioned is from the unseen in which belief is obligatory.

Saeed bin Mansour said: Abu Muawiyah told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Ammarah bin Umair, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Yazid, who said: We were sitting with Abdullah bin Masoud, and we mentioned the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what they had done before us. Abdullah said: The matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was clear to whoever saw him, and by Him besides Whom there is no god, no one has ever believed with a faith better than faith in the unseen. Then he recited: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God. Who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend from what We have provided them. And who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain [in faith]. Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who will be the successful." And this is how Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Hakim narrated it through various chains of narration on the authority of Al-A'mash. Al-Hakim said: It is authentic according to the criteria of Al-Bukhari and Muslim, but they did not include it. Concerning the meaning of this hadith narrated by Ahmad, Abu al-Mughira told us, al-Awza'i told us, Asad ibn Abd al-Rahman told me, on the authority of Khalid ibn Darik, on the authority of Ibn Muhairiz, who said: I said to Abu Jumah, tell us a hadith that you heard from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. He said: Yes, I will tell you a good hadith: We had lunch with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and with us was Abu Ubaidah ibn al-Jarrah. He said: O Messenger of God, is there anyone better than us? We submitted to Islam with you and fought jihad with you. He said: Yes, there are people after you who will believe in me without having seen me. Another chain of transmission is that Abu Bakr ibn Mardawayh said in his interpretation: Abdullah ibn Ja'far told us, Ismail told us, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, Abdullah ibn Salih told us, Mu'awiyah ibn Salih told us, on the authority of Salih ibn Jubayr, who said: Abu Juma'ah al-Ansari, the companion of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to us in Jerusalem to pray there, and with us that day was Raja' ibn Haywah, may God be pleased with him. When he turned away, we went out to see him off, and when he wanted to leave, he said: You have a reward and it is a right that I tell you of a hadith that I heard from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. We said: Bring it, may God have mercy on you. He said: We were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and with us was Mu'adh ibn Jabal, the tenth of ten. We said: O Messenger of God, are there people who have a greater reward than you? We believe in God and follow you. He said: "What prevents you from that while the Messenger of God is among you, bringing you revelation from heaven? Rather, there will be people after you to whom a book will come from between two covers, who will believe in it and act according to what is in it. They will have a greater reward than you, twice over.” Then he narrated it from the hadith of Damrah ibn Rabi’ah, on the authority of Marzuq ibn Nafi’, on the authority of Salih ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Abu Jumah, in a similar manner. This hadith indicates working with the found, which the people of hadith differed about, as I stated at the beginning of the explanation of al-Bukhari, because he praised them for that and mentioned that they have a greater reward from this aspect, not absolutely. Likewise, the other hadith narrated by al-Hasan ibn Arfa al-Abdi, who told us Ismail ibn Ayyash al-Himsi, on the authority of al-Mughira ibn Qays al-Tamimi, on the authority of Amr ibn Shu’ayb, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Which creation has the most amazing faith to you? They said: The angels. He said: Why do they not believe while they are with their Lord? They said: Then the prophets? He said: Why do they not believe while the revelation is being sent down to them? They said: And we? He said: Why do you not believe while I am among you? He said: “The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: “Indeed, the creation has the most amazing faith to me is a people who will come after you and will find scrolls in which there is a book, and they will believe in what is in it.” Abu Hatim al-Razi said: al-Mughira ibn Qays al-Basri is a fabricator of hadith. I said However, Abu Ya’la narrated in his Musnad, Ibn Mardawayh in his Tafsir, and al-Hakim in his Mustadrak from the hadith of Muhammad ibn Humayd - and it is weak - on the authority of Zayd ibn Aslam narrated on the authority of his father on the authority of Umar on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, with something similar or similar to it. Al-Hakim said: Its chain of transmission is authentic, but they did not include it. It was narrated something similar on the authority of Anas bin Malik, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and God knows best. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father narrated to us, Abdullah bin Muhammad al-Musnad narrated to us, Ishaq bin Idris narrated to us, Ibrahim bin Ja’far bin Mahmud bin Salamah al-Ansari narrated to me, Ja’far bin Mahmud narrated to me on the authority of his grandmother Nuwaylah bint Aslam, who said: I prayed the noon or afternoon prayer in the mosque of Bani Haritha, and we faced the mosque of Iliya and prayed two prostrations. Then someone came to us to tell us that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, had faced the Sacred House, so the women moved to the place of the men and the men to the place of the women, so we prayed the two remaining prostrations while facing the Sacred House. Ibrahim said: Men from Bani Haritha narrated to me that when that reached the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: Those are people who believe in the unseen. This is a strange hadith from this source.

And they establish prayer and spend from what We have provided them.

Ibn Abbas said: And they establish prayer, meaning they establish prayer with its obligatory parts.

Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas:

Establishing prayer means completing bowing, prostration, recitation, humility, and devotion to it.

Qatada said: Establishing prayer means preserving its times, ablution, bowing, and prostration. Muqatil ibn Hayyan said: Establishing it means preserving its times, performing ablution properly, completing bowing, prostration, reciting the Qur’an, the testimony of faith, and sending blessings upon the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. This is establishing it.

Ali bin Abi Talha and others said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And from what We have provided them they spend, meaning the zakat of their wealth. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, And from what We have provided them they spend, meaning the man’s spending on his family. This was before zakat was revealed. Juwaybir said on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, “Spending was an offering by which they drew closer to God according to their means and effort until the obligatory charity was revealed, seven verses in Surat Bara’ah in which charity is mentioned. They are the abrogating and confirming verses. Qatada said, “And from what We have provided them they spend,” so spend from what God has given you. This wealth is a loan and a deposit with you, O son of Adam, and you are about to part with it.

Ibn Jarir chose that the verse is general in zakat and expenditures, as he said: The most appropriate and most deserving interpretation of the description of the people is that they should pay all that is necessary for them from their wealth - zakat, whether that is or expenditure for those whose expenditure is necessary for them from family or children and others whose expenditure is obligatory for them due to kinship, ownership, and other than that, because God Almighty described them and praised them for that, and both spending and zakat are praised and praised for it. I said God Almighty often links prayer with spending from wealth, as prayer is the right of God and His worship, and it includes His oneness, praising Him, glorifying Him, supplicating to Him, praying to Him, and relying on Him, and spending is doing good to the creatures by benefiting them, and the people most deserving of that are relatives, family, and slaves, then foreigners, so both the obligatory expenditures and the obligatory zakat are included in the statement of God Almighty: And from what We have provided for them they spend. For this reason, it was proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of Ibn Umar, may God be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: “Islam is built on five: the testimony that there is no god but God and that Muhammad is the Messenger of God.”

The Messenger of God, the establishment of prayer, the giving of zakat, the fasting of Ramadan, and the pilgrimage to the House. There are many hadiths on this. The origin of prayer in the speech of the Arabs is supplication. Al-A'sha said:

She has a guard who never leaves her home, and if she is slaughtered, he prays over her and offers Zamzam water.

He also said:

The wind met her in her cloak, prayed on her cloak, and was drawn

Ibn Jarir recited them as evidence for that, and the other, who is also Al-A'sha, said:

My daughter says as she is about to depart: O Lord, spare my father from ailments and pain.

You should do as you prayed, then go to sleep, for there is someone lying on one's side.

He says, You have to make supplications like the ones you made for me. This is clear. Then, the word prayer was used in the Shari'ah to refer to bowing, prostrating, and specific actions at specific times with their known conditions, characteristics, and well-known types. Ibn Jarir said, "I think that prayer is called prayer because the one who prays exposes himself to the success of his request for reward from God with His knowledge, along with what he asks his Lord for of his needs." It was said that it is derived from the two prayers when they move in prayer during bowing and prostration, and they are two veins that extend from the back until they surround the coccyx, and from this the one who follows the one who precedes in the horse race is called the one who prays, and there is a view on this. It was said that it is derived from sala, which means to stick to something, from the Almighty's saying, None shall pray it, meaning none shall adhere to it and remain in it, except the most wretched. It was said that it is derived from the sticking of wood in the fire so that it stands straight, just as the one who prays straightens its crookedness with prayer, Indeed, prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing, and the remembrance of God is greater. Its derivation from supplication is more correct and more famous, and God knows best.

As for zakat, we will discuss it in its proper place, God willing.

3- Those who believe in the unseen is a description of the pious and revealer. Faith in language means: belief, and in Islamic law it means what will come. The unseen in the speech of the Arabs means: everything that is hidden from you. Al-Qurtubi said: The commentators differed in the interpretation of the unseen here. A group said: The unseen in this verse is God, the Most High, and Ibn Al-Arabi weakened it. Others said: Fate and destiny. Others said: The Qur'an and what is in it of the unseen. Others said: The unseen is everything that the Messenger informed us of that the minds cannot find guidance to, such as the signs of the Hour, the torment of the grave, the gathering and the resurrection, the path and the scale, Paradise and Hell. Ibn Atiyyah said: These statements do not contradict each other, rather the unseen applies to all of them. He said: This is the legal faith referred to in the hadith of Gabriel when he said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: So tell me about faith? He said: To believe in God, His angels, His books, His messengers, and the Last Day, and to believe in destiny, both good and bad. He said: You have spoken the truth." End quote. This hadith is authentic in Sahih with the wording: That you believe in God, His angels, His books, His messengers, and in destiny, both good and bad. Ibn Abi Hatim, al-Tabarani, Ibn Mandah, and Abu Nu'aym, both of whom narrated in Ma'rifat al-Sahaba, on the authority of Tuwaylah bint Aslam, who said: "I prayed the noon or afternoon prayer in the mosque of Bani Haritha, and we faced the mosque of Ilya and prayed two prostrations. Then someone came to us to tell us that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, had faced the House, so the men moved to the place of the women and the women to the place of the men. We prayed the remaining two prostrations while facing the Sacred House, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was informed and said: 'Those are people who believe in the unseen.'" Al-Bazzar, Abu Ya'la and Al-Hakim narrated, and authenticated it, on the authority of Umar ibn Al-Khattab, who said: I was sitting with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said: "Tell me who have the best faith among the people?" They said: O Messenger of God, the angels. He said: They are like that, and they have the right to do so. What prevents them, since God has given them the status that He has given them?" They said: O Messenger of God, the prophets whom God has honored with His message and prophethood. He said: They are like that, and they have the right to do so. What prevents them, since God has given them the status that He has given them? They said: O Messenger of God, the martyrs who were martyred with the prophets? He said: They are like that, and what prevents them, since God has honored them with martyrdom. They said: Who, O Messenger of God? He said: People in the loins of men who will come after me, who will believe in me even though they have not seen me, and who will believe in me even though they have not seen me. They will find a hanging paper and act according to what is in it. These are the people with the best faith." Its chain of transmission includes Muhammad ibn Abi Hamid, but it is weak. Al-Hasan bin Arafat narrated in his famous party and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Dala'il on the authority of Amr bin Shu'aib on the authority of his father on the authority of his grandfather, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, and he mentioned something similar to the first hadith, and in its chain of transmission is Al-Mughira bin Qais Al-Basri, who is a fabricator of hadith. Al-Tabarani narrated something similar to it on the authority of Ibn Abbas, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, and Al-Isma'ili narrated something similar to it on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, and Al-Bazzar narrated something similar to it on the authority of Anas, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, and Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated in his Musnad on the authority of Awf ibn

Malik, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I wish I had met my brothers. They said: O Messenger of God, are we not your brothers? He said: "Yes, but there will come people after you who will believe in me as you believe, confirm me as you confirm, and support me as you support. I wish I had met my brothers." Ibn Asakir narrated something similar to it in his Forty Seven Hadiths on the authority of Anas, and in its chain of transmission is Abu Hudbah, who is a liar, and he added to it: "Then the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited: 'Those who believe in the unseen and establish prayer' the verse." Ahmad, Al-Darimi, Al-Baroudi, Ibn Qani' together in his Dictionary of Companions, Al-Bukhari in his History, Al-Tabarani and Al-Hakim narrated on the authority of Abu Juma'ah Al-Ansari who said: "I said: O Messenger of God, are there people who have a greater reward than us because we believe in you and follow you? He said: What prevents you from doing that while the Messenger of God is among you, bringing you revelation from the heavens? Rather, there will be people who will come after you, to whom the Book of God will come between two covers, and they will believe in me and act according to what is in it. They will have a greater reward than you." Ahmad, Ibn Abi Shaybah and Al-Hakim narrated on the authority of Abu Abd Al-Rahman Al-Juhani who said: "While we were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, two riders came out. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Two Kindis or two Madhhijis.' Until they came, there were two men from Madhhij. One of them approached to pledge allegiance to him. When he took his hand, he said: 'O Messenger of God, what do you think of someone who came to you and believed in you and followed you, and what will happen to him?' He said: 'Blessed is he.' So he stroked his arm and left. Then the other came and took his hand to pledge allegiance to him. He said: 'O Messenger of God, what do you think of someone who believed in you and followed you, and did not see you?' He said: 'Blessed is he.' Then he stroked his arm and left." At-Tayalisi, Ahmad, Al-Bukhari in his history, At-Tabarani and Al-Hakim narrated on the authority of Abu Umamah Al-Bahili who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Blessed is he who saw me and believed in me, and blessed is he who believed in me but did not see me, seven times.'" Ahmad and Ibn Hibban narrated on the authority of Abu Saeed that a man said: O Messenger of God, blessed is he who saw you and believed in you? He said: Blessed is he who saw me and believed in me, and blessed, then blessed, then blessed is he who believed in me without seeing me. Al-Tayalisi and Abd ibn Humayd narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Umar. Ahmad, Abu Ya'la and Al-Tabarani narrated on the authority of Anas something similar to the hadith of Abu Umamah Al-Bahili mentioned above. Sufyan ibn Uyaynah, Sa'id ibn Mansur and Ahmad ibn Mani' in his Musnad, Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Adh-Dhabari and Al-Hakim narrated - and authenticated it - on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud that he said: By the One other than Whom there is no god, no one has believed better than faith in the unseen. Then he recited: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt" until His saying: the successful ones. The followers have different opinions, and the most correct is what was mentioned above, that the legal faith applies to all of what was mentioned here. Ibn Jarir said: It is better for you to be described as having faith in the unseen in word, belief and action. He said: Fear of God is included in the meaning of faith, which is confirming words with deeds. Faith is a comprehensive word that includes acknowledging God, His books, and His messengers, and confirming the acknowledgment with action. Ibn Kathir said: The required religious faith is nothing but belief, word, and action. This is what most imams have said. In fact, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad ibn Hanbal, Abu Ubaid, and others have unanimously stated that faith is word and action, and it increases and decreases. Many verses have been reported on this matter. End quote.

And they establish prayer and spend from what We have provided them.

It is connected to they believe. Iqama originally means permanence and stability. It is said: The thing stood up meaning it lasted and was established. It is not from standing up for a man, but rather it is from your saying the truth stood up meaning it appeared and was established. The poet said:

The war started against us

Another said:

If it is said, "Stay," do not leave until the horses have stopped at the market of stabbing.

Establishing prayer is performing it with its pillars, Sunnahs, and forms at its appointed times. The root of prayer in the language is: supplication from the verb salatu to pray if he supplicates. This was mentioned by al-Jawhari and others. Some people said: It is taken from as-sala, which is a vein in the middle of the back that splits at the tailbone. From this, the praying person takes the lead in racing horses, because he comes in the ring and his head is at the tailbone of the one who is ahead, so the word prayer was derived from it because it is second to faith, so it was likened to the praying horse. Or because the one who kneels bends his as-sala, and as-sala is the place where the tail of the horse is inserted, and the two are two as-salawan, and the praying person follows the one who is ahead because his head is at his as-sala. Al-Qurtubi mentioned this in his interpretation. The second meaning was mentioned in al-Kashshaf, this linguistic meaning. As for the legal meaning, it is this prayer that has the pillars and remembrances. Scholars differed as to whether it is kept on its linguistic root or was initially established by a legal establishment. It was said: the first, but the law came with additions that are the conditions and fixed obligations in it. Some people said: the second. According to the majority of scholars, provision is what is suitable for benefiting from, whether lawful or unlawful, contrary to the Mu'tazila. They said: What is unlawful is not provision, and there is a place for discussing this issue elsewhere. Spending: taking money out of one's hand, and in bringing the word "partial" here there is a secret point, which is guidance to abandon extravagance. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Ishaq narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, "They establish prayer," he said: the five daily prayers. "And from what We have provided them they spend," he said: the zakat of their wealth. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah that establishing prayer means maintaining its times, ablution, bowing and prostration. "And from what We have provided them they spend," he said: they spent in the obligations of God that He has imposed upon them in His obedience and in His path. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr and others like him. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud regarding his statement, "And from what We have provided them they spend," he said: it is a man's spending on his family. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ad-Dahhak who said: "Spending was an act of worship by which they drew closer to God, the Almighty, according to their means and effort, until the obligatory charity was revealed in Surat Bara'ah. They are the clear abrogators." Ibn Jarir chose the view that the verse is general in terms of zakat and spending, which is the truth without differentiating between spending on relatives and others, obligatory charity and voluntary charity. The lack of explicit mention of any of the types to which the term spending applies gives the most complete indication of the generality.

3. The Almighty's saying: Those who believe is in the place of those who are lowered as an attribute of the righteous. They believe: they believe [Abu Amr and Warsh leave out the hamza, and the others leave it out, and they also leave out every silent hamza that is the fa of the verb such as believe and believers except for a few letters].

The reality of faith is belief in the heart. God Almighty said, And you will not believe us 17-Yusuf [meaning you will not believe us]. In the Sharia, it is belief in the heart, acknowledgment with the tongue, and action with the limbs. So acknowledgment and action were called faith, for a reason of appropriateness, because it is one of His laws.

Islam: is submission and obedience. All faith is Islam, but not all Islam is faith if it is not accompanied by belief. God Almighty said: The desert Arabs say, 'We have believed.' Say, 'You have not believed; but say, 'We have submitted.'" (al-Hujurat 49:14) This is because a man may be submissive on the outside but not believing on the inside. He may be believing on the inside but not obedient on the outside.

The answer of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, differed from them when Gabriel, peace be upon him, asked him, and it is what Abu Tahir Muhammad ibn Ali ibn Muhammad ibn Ali ibn Muhammad ibn Buwayh al-Zarrad al-Bukhari told us: I am Abu al-Qasim Ali ibn Ahmad al-Khuza'i, I am Abu Saeed al-Haytham ibn Kulayb al-Shashi, I am Abu Ahmad Isa / ibn Ahmad al-Asqalani, I am Yazid ibn Harun, I am Kahams ibn al-Hasan, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Buraidah, on the authority of Yahya ibn

Ya'mar, who said: The first one to speak about predestination, meaning in Basra, was Ma'bad al-Juhani. So Humayd ibn Abd al-Rahman and I went out intending to go to Mecca, and we said: If we meet one of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, we will ask him about what these people are saying. So we met Abdullah ibn Umar, may God be pleased with them both, and my companion and I surrounded him, one of us on his right and the other on his left. I knew that he would entrust the speech to me, so I said: O Abu Abd al-Rahman, there have appeared before us people who seek this knowledge and claim that there is no predestination, but rather the matter is a nose. He said: So if you meet those people, tell them that I am innocent of them in any way. Until he believes in destiny, both good and bad. Then he said:

Omar ibn al-Khattab narrated: "While we were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, a man with very white clothes and very black hair approached, and no trace of travel was visible on him, and none of us recognized him. He approached and sat in front of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, [his knee touching his knee] and said: O Muhammad, tell me about Islam. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: You testify that there is no god but God and that Muhammad is the Messenger of God, and you establish prayer, and pay zakat, and fast Ramadan, and perform Hajj to the House if you are able to do so. He said: You have spoken the truth. We were amazed at his question and his confirmation. Then he said: What is faith? He said: To believe in God alone, His angels, His books, His Messenger, and in the resurrection after death, in Paradise and Hell, and in destiny, both good and bad. He said: You have spoken the truth. Then he said: What is ihsan? He said: To worship God as if you see Him, for if you do not see Him, He sees you. He said: You have spoken the truth. Then he said: Then tell me about the Hour. He said: The one who is asked about it knows no better about it than the one who asks. He said: You have spoken the truth. He said: Then tell me about its signs. He said: That the slave girl will give birth to her mistress, and that you will see Barefoot, naked, destitute shepherds of sheep competing in building tall mud bricks. He said: You have spoken the truth. Then he left. After a third time, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to me: O Umar, do you know who the man was? I said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: That was Gabriel, who came to teach you the affairs of your religion. He did not come to me in any form except that I recognized him in it, except in this form of his.

The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, made Islam in this hadith a name for the apparent actions, and faith a name for the hidden belief. This is not because actions are not part of faith, nor is belief in the heart part of Islam. Rather, this is a detail of a whole that is all one thing, and its sum is religion. Therefore, he said, "That is Gabriel, who came to you to teach you the matter of your religion."

The evidence that actions are part of faith is what Ahmad ibn Abdullah al-Salihi told us, on the authority of Abu al-Qasim Ibrahim ibn Muhammad ibn Ali ibn

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

al-Shah, on the authority of Abu Ahmad ibn Muhammad ibn Quraysh ibn Sulayman, on the authority of Bishr ibn Musa, on the authority of Khalaf ibn al-Walid, on the authority of Jarir al-Razi, on the authority of Sahl ibn Abi Salih, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Dinar, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Faith has seventy-odd branches, the best of which is the statement, 'There is no god but God,' and the least of which is removing something harmful from the road, and modesty is a branch of faith.

It was said: Faith is taken from security, so the believer was called a believer because he secures himself from God's punishment, and God Almighty is a believer because He secures the servants from His punishment.

God the Almighty said: By the unseen: The unseen is a verbal noun that is used in place of the noun, so the unseen is called ghaib [just as the just is called just and the visitor is called falsehood. The unseen is that which is hidden from the eyes. Ibn Abbas said: The unseen here is everything that you are commanded to believe in regarding what is hidden from your sight, such as the angels, resurrection, Paradise, Hell, the path, and the balance. It was said that the unseen here is God the Almighty, and it was said: the Qur'an. Al-Hasan said: by the Hereafter. Zur ibn Hubaish and Ibn Jurayj said: by revelation. Similar to it is Does He have knowledge of the unseen? An-Najm 35. Ibn Kaysan said: by destiny. Abd al-Rahman ibn Yazid said: We were with Abdullah ibn Masoud and we mentioned the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, [and what they preceded us in], so Abdullah said: The matter of Muhammad was clear to whoever saw him, and by Him besides Whom there is no god, no one has ever believed with a faith better than faith in the unseen. Then he recited: "Alif, Lam, Meem. That is the Book" until His saying: the successful ones. Abu Ja'far, Abu 'Amr and Warsh read Ya' manun without the hamza, and so did Abu Ja'far without every silent hamza except in anba' hum, anba' hum and nabi' na. Abu 'Amr leaves them all out unless it is a sign of the jussive mood, such as nabi' hum, anba' hum and tas' uhum, waan nasha', nasa' uha and the like, or it is a departure from one language to another, such as mu' saddah and ru' yan. Warsh leaves out every silent hamza that was the fa' of a verb, except tu' wa and tu' wihu, and he does not leave out the 'ayn of a verb except ru' ya and its chapter, except what is in the pattern fa' l, such as dhi' b.

The Almighty says: And they establish prayer meaning they maintain it and preserve it at its appointed times, with its limits, pillars and forms. It is said: he performed the matter, and he established the matter if he performed it, giving it its rights. What is meant by it are the five daily prayers, mentioned with the word one, like the Almighty's saying: So God sent the prophets as bringers of good tidings and warners, and sent down with them the Book in truth 213-Al-Baqarah, meaning the books.

Prayer in the language: supplication. God Almighty said: And pray for them 103-Tawbah meaning pray for them. In the Sharia, it is the name for specific actions such as standing, bowing, prostrating, sitting, supplication and praise. It was said in the Almighty's saying: Indeed, God and His angels send blessings on the Prophet 56-Al-Ahzab the verse that the prayer from God in this verse is mercy, from the angels it is seeking forgiveness, and from the believers it is supplication.

God the Almighty said: And from that which We have provided for them i.e. We gave them. Provision is the name for everything that is beneficial, even children and slaves. Its root in the language is luck and portion. They spend means they give in charity. Qatada said: They spend in the way of God and in His obedience. The root of spending is: taking out from the hand and ownership, and from it is the market's hypocrisy, because the merchandise is taken out of the hand in it, and from it: the animal died if it lost its soul. So this verse is about the believers from the polytheists of the Arabs.

3- "Those who believe in the unseen" is either connected to the pious as a genitive attribute restricting it if piety is interpreted as leaving what is dependent on it, arranging adornment as purification, and depiction as polishing. Or it is explained if it is interpreted as including doing good deeds and leaving bad deeds, as it includes what is the origin of deeds and the basis of good deeds, such as faith, prayer, and charity, as they are the mothers of psychological deeds and physical and financial worship that follow all other acts of obedience and avoiding sins in most cases. Do you not see the saying of God the Almighty: "Indeed, prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing." And his saying, peace and blessings be upon him: "Prayer is the pillar of religion, and zakat is the bridge to Islam." Or it is intended to praise what the pious include. And specifying belief in the unseen, establishing prayer, and giving zakat by mentioning it is a demonstration of its superiority over all other things that fall under the name of piety. Or it is an accusative praise, or a nominative with the estimation of I mean or they are the ones. Or it is separated from it and raised by the beginning and its predicate is those who are on guidance, so the stop at the righteous is complete.

Faith in the language is a form of belief, taken from security, as if the one who believes is secure from the one who believes in denial and opposition, and its transitivity with the letter ya is because it includes the meaning of recognition, and it may be used to mean trust, in that the one who trusts in something becomes secure from it, and from it I am secure that I will find companions, and both meanings are good in they believe in the unseen.

As for the Sharia: it is belief in what is known by necessity to be from the religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, such as monotheism, prophethood, resurrection, and reward, and the sum of three matters: belief in the truth, acknowledging it, and acting in accordance with it, according to the majority of the hadith scholars, the Mu'tazila, and the Khawarij. Whoever fails in belief alone is a hypocrite, whoever fails in acknowledgment is a disbeliever, whoever fails in action is a sinner according to consensus, and a disbeliever according to the Khawarij, and outside of faith but not included in disbelief according to the Mu'tazila. What indicates that it is belief alone is that God Almighty added faith to the heart, saying: Those are the ones in whose hearts He has decreed faith, "and whose heart is at rest with faith," and their hearts have not yet believed, "and faith has not yet entered your hearts," and He connected righteous action to it in countless places and linked it to sins, saying God Almighty: And if two parties among the believers should fight, "O you who have believed, prescribed for you is legal retribution for those murdered," Those who believed and did not mix their belief with injustice, despite the small amount of change in it, it is closer to the original and is the intended meaning in the verse, since the one transitive with the letter ya' is belief according to consensus. Then there is a difference of opinion as to whether mere belief in the heart is sufficient because it is the intended meaning, or whether it is necessary to add acknowledgment to it for the one who is able to do it. Perhaps the truth is the second because the Almighty has condemned the obstinate more than the ignorant and negligent person, and the one who prevents it is to make the condemnation for denial, not for the lack of acknowledgment for the one who is able to do it.

The unseen is a source, and it is described for exaggeration, like the testimony in the Almighty's saying: Knower of the unseen and the witnessed. The Arabs call the peaceful part of the earth and the desert that follows the whole, the unseen, or a light fa'il like qayla, and what is meant by it is the hidden that the senses do not perceive nor the intuition of the mind requires, and it is of two types: a type for which there is no evidence, which is what is meant by the Almighty's saying: And with Him are the keys of the unseen, none knows them except Him. And a type that is in the accusative case and has evidence, such as the Creator and His attributes and the Last Day and its conditions, which is what is meant by it in this verse. This is if you make it a connection to faith and place it in the position of the direct object. If you make it a state, assuming that they are entangled in the unseen, then it has the meaning of absence and concealment. The meaning is that they believe while absent from you, not like the hypocrites who, when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe, but when they are alone with their evil ones, they say, Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking. Or about the believer in Him, as it was narrated that Ibn Masoud, may God be pleased with him, said: By Him besides Whom there is no god, no one has believed better than he who believes in the unseen. Then he recited this verse. It was said that what is meant by the unseen is the heart because it is concealed, and the meaning is that they believe with their hearts, not like those who say with their mouths what is not in their hearts. So the ba' on the first is for transitivity. On the second is for accompaniment. And on the third is for instrument.

And they establish prayer meaning they correct its pillars and protect it from deviation in its actions. From aqama the stick if they straighten it or they are constant in it. From qamat the market if it is flourishing and aqamatuha if you make it flourishing. He said:

Ghazal set up a market for the Iraqi people for a whole year

If it is preserved, it is like a hypocrite who is desired, and if it is lost, it is like a sluggish one who is desired. Or they roll up their sleeves to perform it without slackness or hesitation, from their saying, He performed the matter and established it if he was serious about it and was patient, and its opposite is He sat down from the matter and retired. Or they perform it.

The performance is expressed by the residence because it includes standing, just as it is expressed by supplication, bowing, prostration, and glorification. The first is clearer because it is more famous and closer to the truth and more beneficial, because it includes a warning that the one who deserves praise is the one who observes its apparent boundaries of the obligatory and recommended acts, and its inner rights of humility and turning his heart to God the Most High, not for those who pray * who are heedless of their prayer. Therefore, the prayer is mentioned in the context of praise and those who establish it, and in the context of blame, woe to those who pray. Prayer is an action of the one who prays if he supplicates, like the zakat of the one who purifies. They are written with the waw in the emphatic form, and the action designated by it is only called so because it includes supplication.

It was said: The origin of the word salā is the movement of the two prayers because the one praying does it in his bowing and prostration. The fact that this word is well-known in the second meaning, while it is not well-known in the first, does not detract from its transmission from him. Rather, the supplicant was called a praying person because of his reverence for the one who bows and prostrates.

"And from what We have provided them, they spend." Provision in the language means luck. God Almighty said: "And you make your provision that you deny." The custom has made it specific to the animal to benefit from it and enable it to do so. As for the Mu'tazila, when they considered it impossible for God Almighty to enable the forbidden because He prevented benefiting from it and ordered to deter from it, they said: The forbidden is not provision. Do you not see that God Almighty attributed provision here to Himself as an indication that they spend the absolutely lawful? Spending the forbidden does not necessitate praise, and the polytheists were blamed for forbidding some of what God Almighty provided them with by His saying: "Say, 'Have you seen what God has sent down to you of provision, then you made of it lawful and unlawful?'" Our companions made the attribution for glorification and incitement to spending, and the blame for forbidding what was not forbidden. And the specificity of what We provided them with the lawful is due to the context. They held fast to the comprehensiveness of provision for him, based on the words of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) in the hadith of Amr ibn Qurra: God has provided you with something good, so you chose what God has forbidden you from His provision instead of what God has made lawful for you from His lawful provision. And that if it were not provision, the one who is nourished by it throughout his life would not be provided for, and this is not the case, based on the words of God the Most High: And there is no creature on earth but that upon God is its provision. And spending and implementing something are two brothers, and if you study the words, you will find that everything that has a nun in its first letter and a fa in its second letter indicates the meaning of going and exiting, and what is apparent from this spending is spending money in the way of good, whether obligatory or voluntary. Whoever interprets it as zakat mentioned its best types and its origin, or he specified it for it because it is linked to what is its brother. And the object is presented to emphasize it and to preserve the beginnings of the verses, and the partitive min is introduced to it to prevent the person obligated from the forbidden extravagance. It is possible that it means spending from all the apparent and hidden blessings that God has given them, and this is supported by his saying, peace and blessings be upon him: Knowledge that is not spoken about is like a treasure from which no one spends. This is what was agreed upon by those who said: And from what We have given them of the lights of knowledge they overflow.

Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided them.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:4

And those who believe in what was revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And those who believe in what was revealed to you (i.e. the Qur'an) and what was revealed before you (i.e. the Torah, the Gospel, and others) and of the Hereafter they are certain (i.e. they know).

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

The explanation of those described by this description has already been given, and what kinds of people they are. However, we will mention what was narrated in this regard from someone who narrated in his interpretation the saying:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And those who believe in what has been revealed to you and what was revealed before you: meaning they believe in what you have brought from God, the Almighty and Majestic, and what was brought by the messengers before you. They do not differentiate between them, nor do they deny what they brought to them from their Lord.

Musa bin Harun told us: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, And those who believe in what was revealed to you and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain: These are the believers from the People of the Book.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And of the Hereafter they are certain.

Abu Ja'far said: As for the Hereafter, it is an attribute of the abode, as God the Most High said: And indeed, the home of the Hereafter - that is the life, if they only knew (Al-Ankabut: 64). It was described thus because it becomes the Hereafter of the first that came before it, just as you say to a man: I have bestowed favors upon you time and time again, but you did not thank Me for the first or the last. Rather, it became the Hereafter of the first, so that the first comes before it. Likewise, the Hereafter was called the Hereafter because the first home came before it, so that what follows it became the Hereafter. It may be possible that it was called the Hereafter because it came after creation, just as this world was called the Hereafter because it is close to creation.

As for what God Almighty described the believers with in what He revealed to His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what He revealed to the messengers before him, of their certainty in the matter of the Hereafter, it is their certainty in what the polytheists denied: of resurrection, revival, reward, punishment, reckoning, the scale, and other things that God has prepared for His creation on the Day of Resurrection, such as:

Muhammad ibn Hamid narrated to us, he said: Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And of the Hereafter they are certain: meaning, in the resurrection, the Day of Judgment, Paradise, Hell, the reckoning, and the scales, meaning, not these who claim that they believed in what came before you, and disbelieve in what came to you from your Lord.

This interpretation by Ibn Abbas has stated that the Surah from the beginning, even though the verses at the beginning describe the believers, is an allusion from God Almighty to the condemnation of the disbelievers of the People of the Book, who claimed that they believed in what the Messengers of God Almighty who were before Muhammad, may God's prayers and peace be upon them and him, brought, while they denied Muhammad, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, and denied what he brought of revelation, and they claimed with their denial that they were guided, and that no one will enter Paradise except those who were Jews or Christians. God Almighty refuted that of their claim by saying: "Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God. Who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided for them. And who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain [in faith]." And He, the Most High, informed His servants: This book is guidance for the people of faith in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought, who believe in what was revealed to him and to those before him of His messengers of clear proofs and guidance in particular, not for those who denied Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and claimed that they believe in the messengers before Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in the books he brought. Then He, the Most High, confirmed the matter of the believers from among the Arabs and the People of the Book who believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what was revealed to him and to those before him of the messengers, by His saying: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful. So He informed that they are the people of guidance and success in particular, not others, and that others are the people of misguidance and loss.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:4

And those who believe in what was revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And those who believe in what was revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain.

It was said: What is meant are the believers among the People of the Book, such as Abdullah bin Salam, and it was revealed about him, and the first was revealed about the believers of the Arabs. It was said: Both verses are about the believers, and based on that, the parsing of those is in the accusative case as a conjunction, and it is correct for it to be in the nominative case as a resumption, meaning they are those. And whoever made it into two categories, the parsing of those is in the nominative case as a subject, and its predicate is those upon guidance, and it is possible for it to be in the accusative case as a conjunction.

God the Almighty said: In what has been revealed to you meaning the Qur'an and what was revealed before you meaning the previous books, unlike what the Jews and Christians did according to what God told us about them in His statement: And when it is said to them, 'Believe in what God has revealed,' they say, 'We believe in what was revealed to us' the verse. It is said that when this verse was revealed: Those who believe in the unseen the Jews and Christians said: We believe in the unseen. Then when He said: And establish prayer they said: We establish prayer. Then when He said: And from what We have provided them they spend they said: We spend and give in charity. Then when He said: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you and what was revealed before you they were repelled by that. In a hadith, Abu Dharr said: I said: O Messenger of God, how many books has God revealed? He said: One hundred and four books. God revealed fifty pages to Seth, thirty pages to Enoch, ten pages to Abraham, and He revealed ten pages to Moses before the Torah, and He revealed the Torah, the Gospel, the Psalms, and the Criterion. The hadith was narrated by Muhammad bin Al-Hussein Al-Ajurri and Abu Hatim Al-Basti.

Here is a question: If someone were to say: How can one believe in all of them while their rulings contradict each other? He would be told two answers: The first is that one must believe that all of them were revealed from God, which is the opinion of those who omit worshipping the previous laws. The second is that one must believe in what was not abrogated, which is the opinion of those who require adherence to the previous laws, as will be explained, God willing.

God the Almighty said: And of the Hereafter they are certain. That is, of the Resurrection and the Resurrection they are knowledgeable. Certainty is knowledge without doubt. It is said from it: يَقِنتُ الْمَرَّ with a kasra يَقِنتُ certainty, and ayqannat certainty, istiqaannat certainty, and yaqannat certainty all mean the same thing, and I am certain of it. The ya' becomes a waw in your saying muwqeen certain because of the damma before it. If you make it diminutive, you return it to the original and say mayyaqeen certain. The diminutive returns things to their origins, and so does the plural. They may express certainty as conjecture, and from this is the saying of our scholars about a meaningless oath, which is that someone swears by God about a matter that he is certain of, then it becomes clear to him that it is otherwise, so there is nothing wrong with him. The poet said:

I think I am crazy and I am sure that I will be redeemed by someone I will not risk

He says: The lion smells my camel, thinking that I can ransom myself with it, and I bathe myself and leave it to him and do not rush into danger by fighting him. As for the thought in the sense of certainty, it is mentioned in the revelation and it is found frequently in poetry, and it will come. The hereafter is derived from the word delay because it is delayed from us and we are delayed from it, just as the world is difficult because of its closeness, as will come.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Ibn Abbas said: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you and what was revealed before you, meaning they believe in what you have brought from God and what was brought by the messengers before you. They do not differentiate between them nor do they deny what they brought to them from their Lord. And of the Hereafter they are certain, meaning in the resurrection, the Day of Judgment, Paradise, Hell, the reckoning and the balance. And it was called the Hereafter because it is after this world. And the commentators differed about those described here. Are they those described by what was mentioned previously in the Almighty's saying: Those who believe in the unseen, establish prayer, and spend out of what We have provided for them. And who are they? There are three sayings narrated by Ibn Jarir. One of them is that the first described ones are the second described ones, and they are every believer, the believers of the Arabs and the believers of the People of the Book and others. This was said by Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas and Qatadah. The second is that they are one and the same, and they are the believers of the People of the Book. According to these two, the waw is a conjunction with the attributes, as God Almighty said: Glorify the name of your Lord, the Most High, Who created and proportioned, Who determined and guided, Who brought forth pasture, Then made it dark stubble. And as the poet said:

To the venerable king, the son of the hero, and the lion of the battalion in the crowded place

The attributes are connected to each other and the described is one. The third is that the described first are the believers of the Arabs and the described secondly by His saying: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain for the believers of the People of the Book. Al-Suddi transmitted it in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions. Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, chose it and he cites as evidence for what he said the saying of God Almighty: And indeed, among the People of the Book are those who believe in God and what has been revealed to you and what was revealed to them, humbly submissive to God 1:17 and the saying of God Almighty: "Those to whom We gave the Scripture before it believe in it. And when it is recited to them, they say, 'We believe in it. Indeed, it is the truth from our Lord. Indeed, we were Muslims before it.' Those will be given their reward twice for what they were patient and repel evil with good, and from what We have provided them they spend" 1:17. And what was established in the two Sahihs from the hadith of Al-Sha'bi on the authority of Abu Burdah on the authority of Abu Musa that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Three will be given their reward twice: a man from the People of the Book who believed in me, a slave who fulfilled the right of God and the right of his masters, and a man who disciplined his female slave and did well." As for Ibn Jarir, he did not cite as evidence for the correctness of what he said except for the occasion, which is that God described the believers and the disbelievers at the beginning of this Surah, so just as He classified the disbelievers into two types: disbeliever and hypocrite, Arab and People of the Book I said and the apparent statement of Mujahid in what was narrated by al-Thawri from a man from Mujahid and narrated by more than one from Ibn Abi Nujayh from Mujahid that he said: Four verses from the beginning of Surah al-Baqarah describe the believers and two verses describe the disbelievers and thirteen about the hypocrites. So these four verses are general for every believer who is described by them, from Arabs and non-Arabs and People of the Book, from humans and jinn. And one of these characteristics is not correct without the other, rather each one necessitates the other and is a condition with it. So belief in the unseen and establishing prayer and zakat is not correct except with belief in what the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought and what the Messengers before him brought, may God's prayers and peace be upon them all, and certainty in the Hereafter, just as this is not correct except with that, and God has commanded the believers to do that as He said: O you who have believed. Believe in God and His Messenger and the Book which He sent down to His Messenger and the Book which He sent down before" verse. And God the Almighty said: "And do not argue with the People of the Scripture except in a way that is best, except for those who commit injustice among them, and say, "We believe in that which has been revealed to us and revealed to you. And our God and your God is One" verse. And God the Almighty said: O you who have been given the Scripture, believe in that which We have sent down confirming that which is with you verse. And God the Almighty said: Say, O People of the Scripture, you are upon nothing until you uphold the Torah and the Gospel and what has been sent down to you from your Lord verse. And God the Almighty informed about all the believers with that, saying: "The Messenger has believed in what was sent down to him from his Lord, and [so have] the believers.

All of them have believed in God and His angels and His Books and His Messengers. We make no distinction between any of His Messengers" verse. And God the Almighty said: And those who have believed in God and His Messengers and made no distinction between any of them verse. And other verses indicating the entire matter of the believers in believing in God and His Messengers and His Books, but the believers among the People of the Scripture have a special feature, and that is that they believe in what is in their hands in detail, so if they enter Islam and believe in it in detail, they will have a double reward for that, while others only obtain He has faith in what was mentioned above in general, as stated in the Sahih: If the People of the Book tell you, do not deny them nor believe them, but say, 'We believe in that which was revealed to us and revealed to you.' However, the faith of many Arabs in the Islam with which Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was sent may be more complete, perfect, general and comprehensive than the faith of those among them who entered Islam. So, even if they obtained two rewards from that perspective, others obtain from belief what exceeds the reward of the two rewards that they obtained, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

4- And those who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain [in faith]. It was said that they are the believers among the People of the Book, for they combined belief in what God revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what He revealed to those before him, and it was revealed about them. Ibn Jarir preferred this view, and Al-Suddi narrated it in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, and some of the Companions. Ibn Jarir cited as evidence for it the words of God the Almighty: And indeed, among the People of the Book are those who believe in God and in what has been revealed to you and what was revealed to them. And the words of God the Almighty: "Those to whom We gave the Scripture before it believe in it. And when it is recited to them, they say, "We believe in it. Indeed, it is the truth from our Lord. Indeed, we were Muslims before it." Those will be given their reward twice. " The first verse was revealed about the believers among the Arabs. It was said that both verses are about the believers in general. Therefore, this sentence is connected to the first sentence, describing the righteous after a description, and it is permissible for it to be in the nominative case as a resumption, and it is permissible for it to be connected to the righteous after a description, and it is permissible for it to be in the nominative case as a resumption, and it is permissible for it to be connected to the righteous, so the meaning would be: guidance for the righteous and for those who believe in what has been revealed to you. What is meant by what was revealed to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is the Qur'an, and what was revealed before it is the previous books. And certainty is the certainty of knowledge with the absence of doubt and suspicion about it, as stated in Al-Kashshaf, and what is meant is that they are certain of the resurrection and the revival and all matters of the afterlife without doubt.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:4

And those who believe in what was revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you, and of the Hereafter they are certain.

And the afterlife is the feminine of the other, which is the opposite of the first, and it is a description of the abode as in the Almighty's saying: "That is the home of the Hereafter. We assign it to those who do not desire exaltation upon the earth or corruption." And in presenting the adverb with the construction of the verb on the aforementioned pronoun, there is an indication of limitation, and that what is other than this matter, which is the foundation and head of faith, is not worthy of certainty in it and certainty of its occurrence. The past tense was used even though only some of it had been revealed at that time, not all of it, in order to give precedence to what was present over what had not been, or to indicate that it had already occurred, as if it were in the position of the one who was revealed before it was revealed. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you, [O Muhammad], and what was revealed before you meaning they believe in what you have brought from God and what the messengers before you brought, they do not differentiate between them, and they do not deny what came to them from their Lord. And of the Hereafter they are certain belief in the resurrection, the Day of Judgment, Paradise, Hell, the reckoning, and the balance: meaning these are not those who claim that they have believed in what came before you and disbelieve in what came from your Lord. Abd ibn Hamid narrated something similar on the authority of Qatada.

The truth is that this verse is like the one before it about the believers. The mere mention of belief in what was revealed to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what was revealed to those before him does not necessitate making that a description of the believers among the People of the Book. There is nothing that requires contradiction to this, nor does the Qur'anic structure require that. Praise has been established for those believers who combine both matters in more than one verse. Among these is the saying of God Almighty: O you who have believed, believe in God and His Messenger and the Book which He sent down to His Messenger and the Book which He sent down before and His saying: And say, 'We believe in that which was revealed to us and revealed to you' and His saying: "The Messenger has believed in what was revealed to him from his Lord, and [so have] the believers. All of them have believed in God and His angels and His books and His messengers. We make no distinction between any of His messengers" and He said: And those who believe in God and His messengers and do not make distinction between any of them.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

4. The Almighty said: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you meaning the Qur'an and what was revealed before you of the Torah, the Gospel, and all the other books revealed to the prophets, peace and blessings be upon them. Abu Ja'far, Ibn Kathir, Qalun and Abu 'Amr, the people of Basra, and Ya'qub leave out every period that comes between every two words. The others lengthen it. This verse is about the believers from the People of the Book.

The Almighty's saying, And of the Hereafter means of the Hereafter. This world is called this world because it is close to the Hereafter, and the Hereafter is called the Hereafter because it is delayed and comes after this world. They are certain means they are certain that it will happen, from iqan which means knowledge. It was said: iqan and yaqeen are knowledge based on inference. Therefore, God is not called the One who has certainty nor is His knowledge based on inference, since His knowledge is not based on inference.

4- And those who believe in what has been revealed to you, and what was revealed before you are the believers among the People of the Book, such as Abdullah bin Salam, may God be pleased with him, and his likes, connected to those who believe in the unseen, included with them in the group of the righteous, as they are included in the general category, as those are meant who believed without polytheism and denial, and those are their counterparts, so the two verses were a detail of the righteous, which is the saying of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both. Or on the righteous, as if he said guidance for the righteous from polytheism, and those who believed from the people of religions. It is possible that the first ones are meant specifically, and the middle of the conjunction is as it was in his saying:

To the venerable king, the son of the hero, and the lion of the battalion in the crowded place

And he said:

Oh, the longing for the forelock of Al-Harith, the one who shouts, the one who wins, and the one who returns

Meaning that they are the ones who combine faith in what the mind can comprehend as a whole, faith in what it confirms of physical and financial worship, and faith in what cannot be reached through hearing. The relative pronoun was repeated to draw attention to the difference between the two tribes and the divergence of the two paths. Or a group of them, who are the believers among the People of the Book. He mentioned them as special from the whole, like mentioning Gabriel and Michael after the angels, to magnify their status and encourage others like them.

Revelation is the transfer of something from above to below, and meanings are only attached to it by the mediation of its attachment to the entities that carry it. Perhaps the revelation of the divine books to the messengers is that the angel receives it from God

Almighty in a spiritual reception, or he preserves it from the Preserved Tablet and brings it down and conveys it to the messenger. What is meant by what has been revealed to you is the entire Qur'an and the entire Shari'ah. It is expressed in the past tense, even though some of it is expected, in order to give precedence to what exists over what does not exist. Or by bringing what is expected down to the status of what is real. Similar to this is the statement of God Almighty: Indeed, we have heard a Book revealed after Moses. The jinn did not hear all of it, and the entire Book was not revealed at that time. And what was revealed before you is the Torah, the Gospel, and all the previous books, and belief in them as a whole is an individual obligation, and belief in the first without the second in detail, in that we are obligated to follow its details, is an obligation, but it is a communal obligation, because making it obligatory on everyone would cause hardship and ruin one's livelihood.

And of the Hereafter they are certain. That is, they are certain with a pause that removes what they had of the fact that none will enter Paradise except those who are Jews or Christians, and that the Fire will not touch them except for a few days, and their disagreement about the pleasures of Paradise: is it of the same kind as the pleasures of this world or not? And in its vortex and its interruption, and in presenting the connection and building they are certain on they as a form of training for those other than them from the People of the Book, and that their belief in the matter of the Hereafter is not in accordance with nor does it come from certainty. And certainty: is the perfection of knowledge by negating doubt and suspicion from it by observation and deduction, and therefore the knowledge of the Creator is not described by it, nor the necessary sciences. And the Hereafter is the feminine of the other, and the description of the abode is based on the saying of the Most High: That is the home of the Hereafter. So it was prevalent like the world, and from Nafi' that he lightened it by deleting the hamza and throwing its movement on the lam, and it was read they are certain by changing the waw to a hamza to add a damma to what precedes it, making it like the damma in faces and timed and its counterpart:

The love of the two fires for Moses and Ja'dah when the fuel lit them

Surat al-Baqarah 2:5

Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Those) described as mentioned are on guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful ones the winners of Paradise and the survivors of Hellfire.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

The people of interpretation differed about whom God Almighty meant when He said: Those are upon guidance from their Lord.

Some of them said: He meant by that the people of the two previous attributes, I mean: the believers in the unseen from among the Arabs, and the believers in what was revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to the messengers before him. And all of them were described as being on His guidance, and that they are the successful ones.

Mention of those who said that from the people of interpretation:

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, as for those who believe in the unseen, they are the believers from among the Arabs, and those who believe in what has been revealed to you, the believers from among the People of the Book. Then he gathered the two groups and said: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful.

Some of them said: Rather, he meant by that the pious who believe in the unseen, and they are those who believe in what was revealed to Muhammad, and in what was revealed to the messengers before him.

Others said: Rather, he meant by that those who believe in what was revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what was revealed to those before him, and they are the believers among the People of the Book who believed in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought, and they were believers before in all the prophets and books.

According to this other interpretation, it is possible that those who believe in what was revealed to you is in the accusative case and in the nominative case.

As for the nominative case, it comes from two aspects:

One of them is due to the conjunction with what is in they believe in the unseen of the mention of those who, and the second is that it is the predicate of a subject, or those are on guidance from their Lord, is its nominative case.

As for the genitive case, it is in apposition to al-muttaqeen, and if it is in apposition to alladhina, then two meanings are applicable to it: One: That it and the first alladhina are from the description of the pious. This is according to the interpretation of those who saw that the four verses after alif, lam, meem were revealed about one category of believers. The second view: That the second alladhina is in apposition in the syntax to al-muttaqeen in the sense of genitive case, and they are in meaning a category other than the first category. This is according to the school of thought of those who saw that those about whom the first two verses were revealed from the believers after His statement alif, lam, meem, are not those about whom the last two verses were revealed that follow the first two.

It may be possible that the second alladhina is raised in this way with the meaning of resuming, since it was the subject of a verse and the end of a story. It may also be permissible to raise it with the intention of resuming, since it was the subject of a verse, even though it is a description of the righteous.

So, the nominative case is valid in four ways, and the genitive case is valid in two ways.

The first interpretation I have of his statement, Those are upon guidance from their Lord, is what I mentioned from the statement of Ibn Masoud and Ibn Abbas, and that those is a reference to the two groups, I mean: the righteous, and those who believe in what was revealed to you, and that those is raised by the pronoun referring to them in his statement, upon guidance from their Lord, and that the second those is conjoined with what preceded the statement, as we have explained.

We saw that this is the most appropriate interpretation of the verse, because God, the Most High, described both groups with their praiseworthy description, then praised them. God, the Most High, would not single out one group for praise, even though they were equal in the attributes for which they deserved praise. Just as it is not permissible in His justice for them to be equal in the reward for their deeds, so He singles out one group for reward and not the other, and deprives the other of the reward for his deeds. So too is the way of praising one group for deeds, because praise is one of the types of reward.

As for the meaning of his saying, Those are on guidance from their Lord, the meaning of that is: that they are on light from their Lord, proof, rectitude, and rightness, by God's guidance and success for them. Like:

Ibn Hamid told me, Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas,

Those are on guidance from their Lord: meaning, on light from their Lord, and steadfastness in what came to them.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And those are the successful ones.

The interpretation of His statement: And those are the successful ones means that those are the successful ones who attain what they sought from God Almighty through their deeds and their faith in God, His books, and His messengers, of winning reward, eternal life in Paradise, and salvation from what God Almighty has prepared for His enemies of punishment. Likewise:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us: Ibn Ishaq told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And those are the successful ones, meaning those who attained what they sought and were saved from the evil from which they fled.

And among the indications that one of the meanings of success is the students' awareness of need, is the saying of Labid bin Rabi'ah:

Be reasonable, if you are not reasonable, and indeed he who is reasonable will succeed.

It means he got what he needed and achieved something good. From this, the rajaz poet said:

I lost a mother who gave birth to winds that brought him joy and happiness

You think that you have given birth to a more successful woman, but that does not increase her success.

Meaning: good and close to her need. Success is a noun derived from the expression: So-and-so succeeded, he succeeds, success, and success. Success also means survival, and from it is the saying of Labid:

We solve all the problems of the country, all of them were solved before us, and we hope for success after Ad and Himyar

He wants: to stay, and from it also the saying of Ubaid:

Succeed in whatever you wish, for the weak may be able to achieve it, and the intelligent may be deceived.

He wants: Live and stay as you wish, and so does the saying of the genius of Banu Dhubyān:

Every young man will have peoples, even if he is rich or successful.

Any success needs it and survival.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful. An-Nahhas said that the people of Najd say: a-lak, and some of them say: a-la-lk, and the kaf is for addressing.

Al-Kisa'i said: Whoever says thaliq, its singular is that, and whoever says thaliq, its singular is that, and a-la-lk is like thaliq, and Ibn al-Sikkit recited:

My people were not young men, and who can preach to the lost except the Alaka?

And perhaps they said: Those are not rational people. The poet said:

Blame the houses after the house of Al-Lawa and life after those days

God Almighty said: Indeed, the hearing, the sight and the heart - about all those one will be questioned. Our scholars said: God Almighty's statement: from their Lord is a response to the Qadarites who say: They create their faith and their guidance. God is exalted above what they say! If it were as they said, He would have said: from themselves. We have already discussed this and the guidance, so there is no point in repeating it.

And those are the successful ones. "They" may be a second subject and its predicate is the successful ones, and the second and its predicate is the predicate of the first. It is also possible that they is redundant - the Basrans call it a separator and the Kufians call it a pillar - and the successful ones is the predicate of those.

The root of the word falah in the language is slit and cut. The poet said:

Iron sharpens iron

Any interesting, and from it the plowing of the land is to split it for burning, said Abu Ubaid. And for this reason the farmer was called a farmer. And it is said of the one whose lower lip was split that he succeeded, and he is between plowing, so it is as if the successful one has overcome difficulties until he achieved what he wanted. And it may be used in victory and survival, and it is also its origin in the language, and from it the man's saying to his wife: Prosper in your matter, meaning, Prosper in your matter, and the poet said:

If he was alive and aware of the farmer, the spears would have caught up with him.

Al-Adbat bin Qurai' Al-Sa'di said about the ignorant people of pre-Islamic times:

Every worry has its time, but neither evening nor morning brings success.

He says: There is no permanence with the repetition of night and day. Another said:

We solve all the problems of the country before us, and we hope for success after Ad and Himyar

Any survival. Ubaid said:

Succeed in whatever you wish, for it may be achieved by weakness, or it may deceive the intelligent.

That is, stay with whatever you want of wisdom and foolishness, for the fool may be provided for and the wise may be deprived. So the meaning of and those are the successful ones is the winners of Paradise and those who remain in it. Ibn Abi Ishaq said: The successful ones are those who attained what they sought and escaped from the evil from which they fled, and the meaning is the same. And the word falah is used for suhoor, and from it is the hadith:

Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful.

“Until we almost missed the success with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. I said: What is success? He said: Suhoor.” Narrated by Abu Dawud. So it seems that the meaning of the hadith is that the suhoor is the basis for the continuation of the fast, which is why he called it success. And success with emphasis on the lam is the muleteer, as the poet said:

She has a pound to measure oil in and a farmer to drive a donkey for her.

Then success in custom: achieving what is desired, and escaping what is feared.

Question: If someone asks, how did Hamza read: upon them, to them, and their children, but did not read from their Lord, “in them,” nor in them, “nor in their gardens,”? The answer is that upon them, to them, and their children has a ya’ that was changed from an alif, and the original form is upon them, their children, and in them, so the ha’ was left with a damma, and that is not the case in in them, “nor in their Lord,” nor in their gardens, and Al-Kisa’i agreed with him regarding upon them, humiliation and love of desires, based on what is known from their reading.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: Those meaning those who are characterized by what was mentioned above of belief in the unseen, establishing prayer, spending from what God has provided for them, belief in what was revealed to the Messenger and the Messengers before him, and certainty in the Hereafter, which entails preparing for it through righteous deeds and abandoning forbidden things. They are upon guidance meaning upon light, clarification, and insight from God the Almighty. And those are the successful meaning in this world and the Hereafter. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Those are upon guidance from their Lord meaning upon light from their Lord and steadfastness in what He brought them. And those are the successful meaning those who attained what they sought and were saved from the evil from which they fled. Ibn Jarir said: As for the meaning of God the Almighty’s statement: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, the meaning of that is that they are upon light from their Lord and proof, steadfastness, and correctness through His guidance and success for them. The interpretation of God the Almighty’s statement: And those are the successful means The successful ones who attain what they sought from God through their deeds and their faith in God, His Books and His Messengers of winning the reward, and eternal life in Paradise, and salvation from what God has prepared for His enemies of punishment.

Ibn Jarir narrated a statement from some of them that he returned the demonstrative pronoun in the words of God the Almighty: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful ones to the believers among the People of the Book described by the words of God the Almighty: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you verse, based on the previous disagreement. Based on this, it is permissible for the words of God the Almighty: And those who believe in what has been revealed to you to be disconnected from what preceded it and for it to be raised as a subject and its predicate is Those are the successful ones. He chose that it refers to all of the aforementioned believers among the Arabs and the People of the Book, based on what Al-Suddi narrated on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on people from the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. As for those who believe in the unseen, they are the believers among the Arabs, and those who believe in what was revealed to you and what was revealed before you are the believers among the People of the Book. Then he gathered the two groups and said: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and it is those who are the successful. It was previously mentioned that this is a description of the believers in general, and the reference is to them, and God knows best.

It was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi’ bin Anas and Qatadah, may God have mercy on them. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Yahya bin Uthman bin Salih Al-Masry told us, my father told us, Ibn Lahi’ah told us, Ubayd God bin Al-Mughira told me, on the authority of Abu Al-Haitham, whose name is Sulayman bin Abdullah, on the authority of Abdullah bin Amr, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: It was said to him, O Messenger of God, we read from the Qur’an and we hope, and we read from the Qur’an and we almost despair, or something like that. He said: Shall I not tell you about the people of Paradise and the people of Hell? They said: Yes, O Messenger of God. He said: “Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God” - to His saying - the successful ones - these are the people of Paradise. They said: We hope to be these. Then he said: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them - to His saying - tremendous - these are the people of Hell. They said: We are not them, O Messenger of God. He said: Yes.”

Fath al-Qadir

This is a new statement that is a rhetorical resumption, as if it was said: What is the condition of those who combine piety, belief in the unseen, performing the obligatory duties, and belief in what was revealed to the Messenger of God (may God’s prayers and peace be upon him) and the prophets before him (may God’s prayers and peace be upon them), so it was said: 5- Those are on guidance. This could be report about those who believe in the unseen, etc., and thus it would be connected to what came before it. It was said in Al-Kashshaf: The meaning of superiority in His statement: on guidance is an example of their ability to attain guidance, their stability upon it, and their adherence to it. Their condition was likened to the condition of someone who ascended something and rode it, and the like: he is on the truth and on falsehood. They have made this clear in His statement: He made misguidance a mount, rode ignorance, and sat on the passion. End. The scholars have spoken at length about this in a way that there is no room for here, and the disagreement on this is well-known between Al-Muhaqqiq, Al-Sa'd, and Al-Muhaqqiq Al-Sharif. And those who came after them differed in preferring the more correct of the two opinions, and I have compiled a treatise on this and named it [The Lofty Mountain in Preferring What Al-Saad Said Over What Al-Sharif Said], so whoever wants to clarify the situation and bring together the parts of the speech in full can refer to it. Ibn Jarir said: The meaning of those are on guidance from their Lord is on light from their Lord and proof and rectitude and rightness through God's guidance and success for them, the successful means the successful ones who remember what they sought from God through their deeds and their faith in God, His Books and His Messengers. This is the meaning of his words. The root of success in the language is: splitting and cutting, Abu Ubaid said: It is said that the one whose lip was split has succeeded, and from this the farmer was called a farmer because he split the earth by plowing, so it is as if the successful one has cut through the difficulties until he achieved what he wanted. Al-Qurtubi said: It may be used to mean victory and survival, and this is also its root in the language, so the meaning of those are the successful ones is the victorious ones in Paradise and the survivors. Al-Kashshaf said: Al-Muflih is the one who wins the goal, as if he is the one for whom the paths of victory have been opened and not closed to him. Al-Falah has been used for Suhoor, and from this is the hadith narrated by Abu Dawud: "Until we almost missed Suhoor with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace." I said: What is Falah? He said: Suhoor. So it is as if the meaning of the hadith is that Suhoor is the suhoor that keeps the fast going, and that is why it was called Falah. And in the repetition of the demonstrative pronoun there is an indication that both guidance and Falah are independent in that they are distinguished by it from others, such that if one of them were isolated it would be sufficient to distinguish it on its own. The benefit of the separating pronoun is to indicate that the subject is specific to the predicate and not others. Al-Suddi narrated on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the Companions that those who believe in the unseen are the believers from the Arabs, who believe in what was revealed to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what was revealed to those before him: they, and the believers from the People of the Book. Then he gathered the two groups and said: Those are upon guidance from their Lord, and those are the successful ones. We have already indicated this and what is more correct than it, as it is transmitted on the authority of Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Qatadah. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from the hadith of Abdullah bin Amr on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "It was said: O Messenger of God, we read from the Qur'an and we hope, and we read and we almost despair, or something like that. So he said: Shall I not tell you about the people of Paradise and the people of Hell? They said: Yes, O Messenger of God. He said: 'Alif, Lam, Meem. This is the Book about which there is no doubt, a guidance for those conscious of God' until His saying: 'the successful'. These are the people of Paradise. They said: We hope to be these. Then He said: 'Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them' until His saying: 'Great'. These are the people of Hell. They said: Are we not them, O Messenger of God? He said: Yes."

There are hadiths about the merits of these noble verses, including what was narrated by Abdullah bin Ahmad in Zawa'id al-Musnad, al-Hakim and al-Bayhaqi on the authority of Abi bin Ka'b, who said: "I was with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when a Bedouin came and said: O Prophet of God, I have a brother who is suffering from an illness. He said: What is his illness? He said: He has an affliction. He said: Bring him to me. So he placed him in front of him, and the Prophet treated him with the Opening of the Book and four verses from the beginning of Surat al-Baqarah, and these two verses: "And your God is one God," and the Throne Verse, and three verses from the end of Surat al-Baqarah, and a verse from Al-Imran 3: God bears witness that there is no god but He, and a verse from al-A'raf 7: Indeed, your Lord is God, and the end of Surat al-Mu'minin 23: So exalted is God, the True King, and a verse from Surat al-Jinn 72: And exalted is He, the Lord of our Lord, and ten verses from the beginning of Surat al-Saffat, and three verses from the end of Surat al-Hashr, and Qul Huwa Allahu Ahad and the two Mu'awwidhat. Then the man stood up as if he had never complained." Ibn As-Sunni narrated something similar in his book Amal Al-Yawm wa Al-Laylah, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Abi Ya'la, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Abu, likewise. Ad-Darimi and Ibn Ad-Durais narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, who said: Whoever recites four verses from the beginning of Surat Al-Baqarah, Ayat Al-Kursi, two verses after Ayat Al-Kursi, and three from the end of Surat Al-Baqarah, no devil will come near him or his family that day, nor will anything he dislikes in his family or his wealth. And do not recite it over a madman except that he will recover. Ad-Darimi, Ibn Al-Mundhir, and At-Tabarani narrated on his authority that he said: Whoever recites ten verses from Surat Al-Baqarah at night, no devil will enter that house that night until morning: four from the beginning, Ayat Al-Kursi, two verses after it, and three at the end of it, the first of which is To God belongs whatever is in the heavens. Sa'id bin Mansour, Ad-Darimi, and Al-Bayhaqi narrated something similar on the authority of Al-Mughira bin Subay', who was one of the companions of Abdullah bin Mas'ud. Al-Tabarani and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When one of you dies, do not detain him, but hasten with him to his grave, and let the opening of Surat Al-Baqarah be recited at his head and the end of Surat Al-Baqarah at his feet. Other than this has been reported regarding this.

5. The Almighty's saying: Those meaning the people of this attribute. Those is a word that means a metaphor for a group, such as: they, and the Kaf is for addressing as in the letter of that on guidance meaning right guidance, clarity and insight from their Lord, and those are the successful ones meaning the survivors / and the winners won Paradise and were saved from the Fire, and the success can mean remaining, meaning remaining in eternal bliss. The origin of success is cutting and splitting, and from it the farmer was called a farmer because he splits the earth. In the proverb: Iron splits with iron, meaning he splits, so they are cut off for good in this world and the hereafter.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

5- Those are upon guidance from their Lord The sentence is in the nominative case if one of the relative pronouns is separated from the righteous as a predicate for it, so it is as if when it was said guidance for the righteous it was said why are they singled out for that? So answer by saying: those who believe in the unseen to the end of the verses. Otherwise, it is a resumption that has no place, so it is as if it is the result of the rulings and attributes. Or the answer to a questioner who said: Why are those described with these attributes singled out for guidance? And similar to it is: You did well to your old friend Zayd with kindness, for the demonstrative pronoun here is like repeating the described with its mentioned attributes, and it is more eloquent than starting anew by repeating the name alone because it contains a clarification of the requirement and its summary, for the ruling on the description is an indication that it is the cause of it. The meaning of superiority in upon guidance is to represent their ability to attain guidance and their stability upon it as a state of someone who ascended something and rode it. They have made this clear in their saying: He rode ignorance and went astray and sat on the back of desire. This can only be achieved by exhausting one's thoughts and continuing to look at the arguments that have been set up and persevering in holding oneself accountable in one's actions. And guidance is denied for the great. So it is as if what is meant by it is a type whose nature cannot be exaggerated and whose power cannot be measured. Similar to it is the saying of al-Hudhali:

No, by my father, the bird that flies at noon on Khalid has landed on meat.

He emphasized his glorification by saying that God Almighty is his giver and guide, and the letter nun was assimilated into the letter ra with or without nasalization.

And those are the successful ones. The demonstrative pronoun is repeated in it, indicating that their being described by those attributes requires each of the two effects, even if it is sufficient to distinguish them from others. The conjunction is in the middle because the meaning of the two sentences here is different, unlike his statement, "Those are like livestock, rather, they are more astray. Those are the heedless ones." The recording of heedlessness and the likening to animals are one thing, so the second sentence was established for the first, so the conjunction does not fit. And they are: separating the predicate from the attribute, confirming the relation and indicating the specificity of the subject, or a subject and the successful ones are its predicate and the sentence is the predicate of those. And the successful one with the ha and the jim: the one who wins what is desired, as if he is the one for whom the faces of victory have opened. This structure and what shares it in the fa and the ayn, such as falaq, filadh, and falai, indicate the split. The opening and the Arabization of the successful ones are to indicate that the righteous are the people who you have heard are the successful ones in the hereafter. Or to indicate what everyone knows about the reality of the successful ones and their characteristics.

Warning: Consider how God Almighty has alerted to the specialization of the righteous in attaining what not everyone attains from various aspects, and the construction of the speech on the demonstrative pronoun for the purpose of explanation with brevity and repetition and the definition of the report and the middle of the chapter, to show their status and encourage following in their footsteps. The Wahhabis have clung to it regarding the immorality of the wicked among the people of the Qiblah in torment, and it has been responded that what is meant by the successful are those who are complete in success, and it is necessary for the one who is not of their description to not be complete in success, not for him to be completely unsuccessful.

Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Indeed, those who disbelieve such as Abu Jahl, Abu Lahab, and others like them (it is all the same to them whether you warn them) by realizing the two hamzas and replacing the second with an alif and making it easy and inserting an alif between the easy and the other and leaving it out or you do not warn them - they will not believe because God knows that about them, so do not hope for their belief, and warning is information with fear.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

The interpreters differed as to who this verse refers to, and to whom it was revealed. Ibn Abbas used to say, as follows:

Muhammad bin Hamid narrated to us, he said: Salamah bin Al-Fadl narrated to us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Those who disbelieve, meaning in what was revealed to you from your Lord, even if they say, We have believed in what came to us before you.

Ibn Abbas believed that this verse was revealed about the Jews who were in the vicinity of Medina during the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as a rebuke to them for their denial of the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their disbelief in him, despite their knowledge of him and their understanding that he was the Messenger of God to them and to all people.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The beginning of Surat Al-Baqarah, up to one hundred verses, was revealed about men whom he named by their names and lineages from the Jewish rabbis, from the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj. We disliked lengthening the book by mentioning their names.

Another interpretation of this was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, which is:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim narrated to us, he said: Abdullah bin Saleh narrated to us, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was keen for all people to believe and follow him in guidance, so God, may He be glorified and exalted, informed him that no one believes except he for whom God has predestined happiness in the first remembrance, and no one goes astray except he for whom God has predestined misery in the first remembrance.

Others said: It was narrated to me on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas, who said: There are two verses in the Leaders of the Confederates: "Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe. God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment." He said: They are those whom God mentioned in this verse: Have you not seen those who exchanged the favor of God for disbelief and settled their people in the home of destruction? Hell, they will burn in it, and wretched is the settlement. (Ibrahim 14:28-29). He said: They are those who were killed on the day of Badr.

The first of these interpretations of the verse is the interpretation of Ibn Abbas, which was mentioned by Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair on his authority. Although each of the statements made by those we mentioned has its own opinion on this matter.

As for the doctrine of those who interpreted what Al-Rabi' bin Anas said in this regard, it is that when God, the Most High, mentioned that some of the disbelievers would not believe, and that warning would not benefit them, then there were some of the disbelievers whom God benefited from the warning of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, to them, due to their belief in God and in the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from God after the revelation of this Surah, it is not permissible for the verse to have been revealed except for a specific group of disbelievers. Since that was the case and the leaders of the parties were undoubtedly among those whom God, the Most High, did not benefit from the warning of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, until God, the Most High, killed them at the hands of the believers on the day of Badr, it is known that they are among those whom God, the Most High, meant by this verse.

As for our reason for choosing the interpretation we chose in this regard, it is that the statement of God, the Most High, Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe, follows God's statement about the believers among the People of the Book, and follows His description and description of them and His praise of them for their belief in Him, His Books and His Messengers. So the first thing, according to God's wisdom, is to follow that statement about their disbelievers and their descriptions, and to condemn their causes and conditions, and to show their reviling and disavowal of them. Because their believers and their polytheists, even though their conditions differ due to the difference in their religions, the same race unites them all in that they are the Children of Israel.

Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

God, the Most High, used the beginning of this Surah as evidence for His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, against the polytheists among the Jewish rabbis of the Children of Israel, who, despite their knowledge of his prophethood, denied his prophethood by revealing to his Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, what their rabbis had kept secret and concealed, so that the greatness of the Jews would be ignorant of it and their rabbis would learn it so that they would know that the One who informed them of that knowledge was the One who sent down the Book to Moses. Since that was one of the matters that neither Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, nor his people nor his clan knew nor recognized before the revelation of the Criterion to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they could claim that there was confusion in his matter, peace be upon him, that he was a prophet, and that what he brought was from God. How can one claim that there is ambiguity in the truthfulness of an illiterate person who grew up among illiterate people who neither wrote nor read nor calculated? It is said that he read books and learned, or calculated and then a star arose among scribes who were readers and writers who had studied books and were leaders of nations, informing them of their hidden faults, their protected knowledge, their concealed report, and the secrets of their affairs that were unknown to those of their scribes who were below them. The matter of one who is like this is not problematic, and his truthfulness is clear.

What indicates the correctness of what we said, that those whom God the Most High meant by His saying: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe, are the Jewish rabbis who were killed in disbelief and died in it, is God the Most High's retaliation of their story, and His reminding them of the covenants and agreements He took from them in the matter of Muhammad, peace be upon him, after He the Most High's retaliation of what He took from the matter of the hypocrites, and His objection between that with what He objected with from the report about Satan and Adam in His saying: O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you (al-Baqarah 2:40 and following), and His argument for His Prophet against them, with what He argued with them in it after their denial of his prophethood. So since the report was first about the believers of the People of the Book, and last about their polytheists, it is more appropriate that it be in the middle about them. Since some of the speech is subordinate to others, unless they receive a clear indication that some of it has deviated from its meanings, then it is known that it has departed from it.

As for the meaning of disbelief in His statement, Those who disbelieved, it is denial. That is because the Jewish rabbis of Medina denied the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and concealed him from the people and concealed his matter, even though they knew him as they knew their own sons.

The root of the word kafir among the Arabs is to cover something. That is why they called the night kafir because its darkness covers what it wears, as the poet said:

Then they remembered a heavy burden, after she had cast her right hand on an infidel.

Labid bin Rabi'ah said:

On a night when the stars are covered in clouds

Meaning, he covered it up. Likewise, the Jewish rabbis covered up the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and concealed it from the people, despite their knowledge of his prophethood and the existence of his description in their books. So God Almighty said about them: Indeed, those who conceal what We have sent down of clear proofs and guidance after We made it clear for the people in the Scripture - those are cursed by God and cursed by those who curse (al-Baqarah 2:159). They are the ones about whom God Almighty revealed: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

The interpretation of equal is: moderate. It is taken from equality, like when you say: These two matters are equal to me, and they are equal to me, meaning they are equal to me. From this is the saying of God, the Most High: Then throw to them on equal terms (al-Anfal 8:58), meaning: inform them and warn them of the war, until your knowledge and their knowledge of what each group of them is doing is equal to the other group. Likewise, His saying equal to them is: moderate to them, meaning the two matters were from you to them, warning or not warning because they do not believe, and their hearts and hearing have been sealed. From this is the saying of Abdullah bin Qais Al-Ruqayyat:

The white-skinned woman feeds me towards Ibn Jaafar, whether it is day or night.

He means by that: It is moderate in its walking, day and night, because there is no slackening in it. And from this is the saying of another:

And a night in which a person says of its darkness, The eyes are both healthy and blind.

Because the healthy person can only see weakly due to its darkness.

As for his statement: Whether you warn them or do not warn them, they will not believe, the speech appears to be a question, and it is a predicate, because it is in the position of any, just as you say: We do not care whether you stay or sit, and you are the informant, not the questioner, because that is in the position of any. That is because its meaning, when you say that, is: We do not care which of these two things happened from you. Likewise, it is in his statement: It is the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them, since the meaning of the speech is: It is the same to them, which of these two things happened from you to them. It is good in its place with whether you did it or did not do it.

Some of the grammarians of Basra claimed that the interrogative particle was used with sawa'a and was not an interrogative, because when the interrogator asks someone else, saying: Is Zayd with you or Amr? he is asking his companion to ascertain which of them he has. So neither of them has more right to the interrogative than the other. So since his statement: It is the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them means equality, this resembles an interrogative, since it resembles it in equality. We have explained the correctness in that.

So the interpretation of the statement is: moderate, O Muhammad, with those who denied your prophethood from the Jewish rabbis of Medina after they knew about it, and concealed the statement of your command to the people that you are My messenger to My creation, and I took a covenant and a pledge from them not to conceal that, and to make it clear to the people, and to inform them that they find your description in their books, whether you warned them or not, then they do not believe, and they do not return to the truth, and they do not believe in you and what you brought them as:

Muhammad ibn Humayd told us: Salamah ibn al-Fadi told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: It is the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe. That is, they have disbelieved in the knowledge they have of the Reminder, and they have denied the covenant that was taken from them to You. They have disbelieved in what came to You, and in what they have of what others brought them. So how can they hear a warning and a caution from You, when they have disbelieved in the knowledge they have of You?

God Almighty says: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

When he mentioned the believers and their conditions, he mentioned the disbelievers and their fate. Disbelief is the opposite of faith, which is what is meant in the verse. It may also mean ingratitude for blessings and kindness, as in his saying, peace be upon him, about women in the hadith of the eclipse:

"I saw the Fire, and I have never seen a sight more horrible than today. I saw that most of its inhabitants were women. It was said: Why, O Messenger of God? He said: Because of their disbelief. It was said: Are they disbelievers in God? He said: They are ungrateful to their husbands and ungrateful for kindness. If you were to do good to one of them for your entire life and then she saw something wrong with you, she would say: I have never seen any good from you." Narrated by Al-Bukhari and others.

The root of the word kufr in Arabic is: concealment and covering, and from this the poet said:

On a night when the stars are covered in clouds

That is, to cover it. And from this the night was called Kafir, because it covers everything with its blackness. The poet said:

Then she remembered the heavy burden and the heavy burden after she had cast her oath against an infidel.

Intelligence with the letter dhal pronounced with a damma and a long vowel: a name for the sun, and from it the saying of another:

It came before dawn, and the son of intelligence is hidden in Kafr

That is, at night: The unbeliever also: the sea and the great river. The unbeliever: the farmer, and the plural is unbelievers. God Almighty said: Like a rain whose growth pleases the unbelievers, meaning the farmers because they cover the grain. And the ash of Makfur: the wind blew the dust on it. The unbeliever of the land: that which is far from people, hardly descends upon it and no one passes by it, and whoever settles in those places are the people of the unbelievers. And it is said that the unbelievers: the villages.

The Almighty's saying: It is all the same to them means that it is the same to them whether they warn or leave it off, i.e. it is all the same to them. The question was used for the sake of equality, and similar to it is the Almighty's saying: It is all the same to us whether you preach or are not among the preachers. And the poet said:

And a night in which people say, because of its darkness, that both healthy and blind eyes are equal.

The Almighty says: Did you warn them? Warning means notification and informing, and it is almost never used except in a frightening situation that requires time to take precautions. If time does not allow time to take precautions, then it is notification and not a warning. The poet said:

I warned Amr while he was still in the morning, but Amr disobeyed.

The Banu Fulan tribe vowed to do this if they feared it among themselves.

Scholars differed in the interpretation of this verse. Some said: It is general but its meaning is specific to those upon whom the word of punishment has been decreed, and it was previously known to God that they would die in disbelief. God wanted to teach that there are people in this state without specifying anyone. Ibn Abbas and Al-Kalbi said: It was revealed about the leaders of the Jews, including Huyayy ibn Akhtab and Ka'b ibn Al-Ashraf and their peers. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas said: It was revealed about those leaders of the confederates who were killed on the day of Badr. The first is more correct, because whoever specifies someone is only giving an example to someone whose unseen was revealed by his death in disbelief, and that is included in the verse.

Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

The Almighty's saying: They do not believe is in the nominative case as the predicate of inna meaning that those who disbelieved do not believe. It was said: The predicate of inna is sawa and what follows it takes the place of the relative clause, as stated by Ibn Kaysan. Muhammad ibn Yazid said: sawa is in the nominative case as the subject, Did you warn them or did you not warn them is the predicate, and the sentence is the predicate of inna. An-Nahhas said: That is, they were confused and the warning did not benefit them at all. The reciters differed in the recitation of did you warn them. The people of Madinah, Abu Amr, Al-A'mash, and Abdullah ibn Abi Ishaq recited: I warned them with emphasis on the first and ease of the second, and Al-Khalil and Sibawayh chose it, and it is the language of Quraysh and Sa'd ibn Bakr, and the poet said about it:

O gazelle, between the mountains and the valleys, are you the mother of Umm Salem?

Spell you a thousand and one. And another said:

I looked up and recognized him, so I said to him, You are Zaid Al-Aranib.

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Muhaisin that he read: Did you warn them or did you not warn them with a hamza and no alif after it. So it was deleted because of the meeting of two hamzas, or because am indicates a question, as the poet said:

Do you leave the neighborhood or innovate? What's wrong with waiting?

He wanted: Atarooh, so he was satisfied with Umm from Alif. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abi Ishaq that he read A'nthirhum and he made the two hamzas true and inserted an Alif between them so that they would not be combined. Abu Hatim said: It is permissible to insert an Alif between them and lighten the second one, and Abu Amr and Nafi' do that a lot. Hamzah, Asim and Al-Kisa'i read with the two hamzas true: A'nthirhum and this is the choice of Abu Ubaid, but that is far-fetched according to Al-Khalil. Sibawayh said: It resembles in heaviness Dhannuwa. Al-Akhfash said: It is permissible to lighten the first of the two hamzas, but that is bad, because they only lighten it after it is heavy, and after one is obtained. Abu Hatim said: It is permissible to lighten both hamzas. So these are seven aspects of readings, and an eighth aspect is permissible other than the Qur'an, because it is contrary to the majority. Al-Akhfash Saeed said: The hamza is replaced by a ha'. You say: Ha-Anthirhum, just as you say: Ha-Yak and Iyyak. Al-Akhfash said regarding the Almighty's statement: Here you are, it is actually A-An-Tum.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: Those who disbelieved meaning they covered up the truth and concealed it, and God

Almighty has decreed that for them, it is the same for them whether you warn them or not, for they do not believe in what you have brought them. As God the Almighty said: Indeed, those against whom the word of your Lord has come into effect will not believe, even if every sign came to them until they see the painful punishment. And God the Almighty said regarding the obstinate People of the Book: And if you brought to those who were given the Scripture every sign, they would not follow your direction verse, meaning that whoever God has decreed misery for will have no one to make him happy, and whoever He has led astray will have no one to guide him. So do not let yourself grieve over them and convey the message to them. Whoever responds to you will have the greater portion, and whoever turns away, do not grieve over them and do not worry about that. For upon you is only the conveyance, and upon Us is the reckoning. "You are only a warner, and God is Disposer of affairs." And Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe. He said that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was keen for all people to believe and follow him in guidance, so God the Almighty informed him that no one believes except for whom God has decreed happiness in the first remembrance, and no one goes astray except for whom God has decreed misery in the first remembrance. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'id ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: Indeed, those who disbelieve meaning in what was revealed to you, even if they say, We have believed in what came to us before you, "it is all the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe" meaning that they have disbelieved in what they have of Your remembrance and denied what was taken from them of the covenant. They have disbelieved in what came to you and in what they have of what was brought to them by others besides you. So how can they listen to a warning and a caution from you when they have disbelieved in what they have of Your knowledge? Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah that he said: These two verses were revealed about the leaders of the confederates, and they are the ones about whom God said: Have you not seen those who exchanged the favor of God for disbelief and settled their people in the home of destruction * Hell, which they will burn? The meaning that we mentioned first, which is narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas in the narration of 'Ali ibn Abi Talhah, is more apparent, and it is interpreted by the rest of the verses that are in its meaning, and God knows best.

Ibn Abi Hatim mentioned a hadith here and said: My father told us, Yahya bin Othman bin Saleh Al-Masry told us, Ibn Lahi'ah told us, Abdullah bin Al-Mughira told me, on the authority of Abu Al-Haitham, on the authority of Abdullah bin Amr, who said: It was said, O Messenger of God, We recite from the Qur'an and we hope, and we recite and we almost despair, so he said: Shall I not tell you? Then he said: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe. These are the people of the Fire. They said, We are not among them, O Messenger of God. He said, Yes. And the Almighty's statement, They will not believe is in its place in terms of grammar as a sentence confirming the one before it, It is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them, meaning they are disbelievers in both cases, so this is why He confirmed that with His statement, They will not believe. It is possible that they will not believe is a predicate because its meaning is that those who disbelieve will not believe, and His statement, It is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them is an interjectional sentence, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

The Almighty mentioned the evil group after finishing mentioning the good group, cutting this statement off from the first statement, and addressing it with what indicates that the nature of the disbelievers is that warning them is not beneficial, and that what is required of them in terms of faith is not due to them, and that the existence of that is like its absence. 6- And sawaa is a noun meaning istiwa, and it is described with it as it is described with the sources, and the hamza and the am are abstract for the meaning of istiwa, and what is originally intended by them is the question, and it is correct to begin with the verb and to inform about it by saying: sawaa, abandoning the aspect of the word for the aspect of the meaning, as if he said: warning and its absence are the same, like their saying: Hearing about Al-Mu'aydi is better than seeing him: meaning hearing about him. The origin of disbelief in the language is: covering and concealment, the poet said:

On a night when the stars are covered in clouds

That is, to cover it, and from this the infidel is called an infidel because he covers with his disbelief what he should have of faith. And warning: informing and notifying.

Al-Qurtubi said: The scholars differed in the interpretation of this verse. It was said: It is general but its meaning is specific to those who have been warned against and God knew beforehand that they would die in disbelief. God wanted to inform people that there are those among them who are in this state without specifying anyone. Ibn Abbas and Al-Kalbi said: It was revealed about the leaders of the Jews, Huyayy ibn Akhtab and Ka'b ibn Al-Ashraf and their peers. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas said: It was revealed about those leaders of the confederates who were killed on the day of Badr. The first is more correct, because whoever specifies someone is like someone who has revealed the unseen by dying in disbelief. His statement: They do not believe is the predicate of a deleted subject: meaning they do not believe. It is a new sentence because it is the answer to an implied question as if it was said: What will happen to those whose state is the same with or without warning? It was said: They do not believe: meaning they do not believe. Al-Kashshaf said: It is a sentence confirming the first sentence, or a predicate because the sentence before it is an interjection. The first is what we have mentioned, because the intended meaning is to inform about the lack of consideration for their warning, and that it is of no use at all, but rather is like nothingness. So this sentence is the predicate of because, and what follows it of lack of faith is caused by it, not that it is the intended meaning. Al-Zamakhshari and Al-Qurtubi said something similar. Ibn Kaysan said: The predicate of 'in' is the same, and what follows it takes the place of the relative clause. Muhammad bin Yazid Al-Mubarrad said: The same is raised by the subject, and its predicate is 'whether you warned them or not,' and the sentence is the predicate of 'in.' And the seal is the source of I sealed something, and its meaning is: to cover something and to make sure of it so that nothing enters it. From this comes the seal of the book and the door and the like so that what is in it cannot be reached and nothing else can be placed in it. And the veil: the cover, and from it the veil of the lamp, and what is meant by the seal and the veil here are the spiritual, not the sensory: that is, since their hearts were not aware of what reached them, and the ears were not conveying what came to them of the clear signs to the mind in an understandable way, and the eyes were not guided to contemplate His creations and the wonders of His manufactures, they were made like things sealed with a sensory seal, and secured with a real security, and covered with a cover that is perceived metaphorically or figuratively, and the Sunnis used the attribution of the seal to God as evidence against the Mu'tazila, and they tried to refute this argument with something like what the author of Al-Kashshaf mentioned, and the discussion of something like this is established in its places.

6. His statement, Indeed, those who disbelieved means the polytheists of the Arabs. Al-Kalbi said: He means the Jews. Disbelief is denial and its origin is from disbelief which means covering and from it the night was called a disbeliever because it covers things with its darkness and the farmer was called a disbeliever because he covers the seed with dirt and the disbeliever covers the truth with his denial.

And disbelief is of four types: disbelief of denial, disbelief of rejection, disbelief of stubbornness, and disbelief of hypocrisy. Disbelief of denial is: not knowing God at all and not acknowledging Him. Disbelief of rejection is: knowing God Almighty in one's heart but not acknowledging Him with one's tongue, like the disbelief of Iblis and the disbelief of the Jews. God Almighty said: But when there came to them that which they recognized, they disbelieved in it 89-Al-Baqarah. Disbelief of stubbornness is: knowing God in one's heart and acknowledging Him with one's tongue but not believing in Him, like the disbelief of Abu Talib when he said:

I have learned that the religion of Muhammad is the best religion of mankind.

If it weren't for blame or fear of insult, you would have found me to be lenient and clear about that.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:6

Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe.

As for the disbelief of hypocrisy: it is that he acknowledges it with his tongue but does not believe it in his heart, and all of these types are the same in that whoever meets God Almighty with one of them will not be forgiven.

His saying, It is the same for them means: it is equal to them. Have you warned them? You have frightened them and cautioned them. Warning is informing with intimidation and warning. Every warner is a teacher, but not every teacher is a warner. Ibn Amir, Asim, Hamza, and Al-Kisa'i emphasized the two hamzas in Have you warned them? Likewise, every two hamzas that occur at the beginning of the word. The others soften the second one. Am is a letter of conjunction for interrogation. Lam is a letter of jussive that only follows the verb because jussive is specific to verbs. You warn them, they will not believe. This verse is about people upon whom misery was decreed in the foreknowledge of God. Then He mentioned the reason for their abandonment of faith, saying:

6- Indeed, those who disbelieved when he mentioned the specificity of worship, and the essence of the saints with their qualities that qualified them for guidance and success, he followed them with their opposites, the stubborn rebels, for whom guidance does not benefit and for whom signs and warnings do not avail, and he did not connect their story to the story of the believers as he connected in the saying of the Most High, Indeed, the righteous will be in pleasure  And indeed, the wicked will be in Hellfire because of their difference in purpose, as the first was brought to mention the Book and explain its matter and the other was brought to explain their rebellion and their preoccupation with misguidance, and in is one of the letters that resemble the verb in the number of letters and construction on the fat-ha and the necessity of the nouns and giving their meanings, and the transitive especially in its entering into two nouns. Therefore, it informed its subsidiary work which is the accusative of the first part and the nominative of the second as an indication that it is a branch in the work and entered into it.

The Kufians said: The report before its entry was raised by the report, and after it remained requiring the raising, a case for istiṣḥāb, so the letter does not raise it. It was answered that the report requiring the raising is conditional on the separation of it from it in good, and it was removed by its entry, so the works of the letter are determined. Its benefit is to confirm the proportion and its realization, and therefore the oath is received by it and the answers are issued by it, and it is mentioned in the context of doubt, such as the Almighty's saying: "And they ask you about Dhul-Qarnayn. Say: I will recite to you about him a report. Indeed, We established him in the land." And Moses said, O Pharaoh, indeed I am a messenger from the Lord of the worlds. Al-Mubarrad said: (Your saying: Abdullah is standing, is report about his standing, and that Abdullah is standing, is an answer to someone asking about his standing, and that Abdullah is standing, is an answer to someone denying his standing). The definition of the relative pronoun: either for the covenant, and what is meant by it are specific people such as Abu Lahab, Abu Jahl, Al-Walid bin Al-Mughira, and the Jewish rabbis, or for the type, including those who were determined to disbelieve, and others, so he singled out those who were not determined to do what was attributed to them. And disbelief in the language: concealing a blessing, and its origin is disbelief with the fat-ha, which is concealment, and from it the farmer and the night are called disbelievers, and the one who covers the fruit is called camphor. In the Sharia: denying what is known by necessity that the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, came with, and wearing clothes, tightening the belt, and the like are considered disbelief because they indicate denial, for whoever believes in the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, does not dare to do it outwardly, but it is disbelief in and of itself.

The Mu'tazila argued that what came in the Qur'an in the past tense was evidence of its occurrence, as it called for the precedence of what was reported about. It was answered that it is required by the suspension and its occurrence does not necessitate the occurrence of speech as in knowledge.

It is the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them is the predicate of in and sawa is a noun meaning equality, it is described by it as it is described by the sources. God Almighty said: Come to a word that is equitable between us and you is raised by it as a subject, as if it was said: Those who disbelieve are equal to you warning them or not, or that it is the predicate of what comes after it meaning: Your warning them or not is the same for them. And by the verb it is only forbidden to be reported if it is intended to complete what it was established for. However, if it is made general and intended by it is the word, or the absolute event implied by it in the broad sense, then it is like the noun in the addition and the attribution to it as in God Almighty's saying: And when it is said to them, 'Believe' and His saying: The Day when the truthful will benefit from their truthfulness and their saying: Hearing about Al-Mu'aydi is better than seeing him.

The reason for changing here from the infinitive to the verb is because it gives the impression of renewal and the goodness of the hamza entering, and the mother is on it to confirm the meaning of istiwa and emphasize it, as they were stripped of the meaning of interrogation just because of istiwa, just as the letters of address were stripped of the request just because of specificity in their saying: O God, forgive us, O group.

Warning: Intimidation is intended to frighten from the punishment of God. It was limited to it without good report because it is more effective in the heart and has a greater impact on the soul, in terms of repelling harm being more important than bringing benefit. If it does not benefit them, then good report of no benefit is more appropriate. It was read A'anzarhum with the two hamzas fully pronounced and the second one lightened between them, and its being changed to an alif, which is a mistake because the moving letter is not changed, and because it leads to the two quiescent letters being brought together in a way other than its limit. It was read with an alif between them, fully pronounced, and with its being mediated and the second one being mediated between them, and with the deletion of the interrogative, and with its deletion and its movement being cast on the quiescent letter before it.

They do not believe is an explanatory sentence for the generality of what came before it in what is the equality, so it has no place or a confirming state, or a substitute for it, or the report of in and the sentence before it is an interruption with what is the reason for the ruling.

The verse is one of the arguments that were used to permit imposing an unbearable obligation, for He, the Most High, informed about them that they would not believe and ordered them to believe. If they had believed, His statement would have been turned into a lie. Their belief included belief that they would not believe, so opposites would come together. The truth is that imposing an obligation that is enjoyable in itself, even if it is permissible rationally, since rulings do not require a purpose, especially compliance, is not a reality based on induction. And informing about the occurrence or non-occurrence of something does not negate the ability to do it, like His, the Most High, informing about what he or the servant does by his own choice. The benefit of warning after knowing that it will not succeed is to impose the argument, and the Messenger possessing the virtue of conveying, and for this reason He said, It is the same for them, and He did not say, It is the same for you, whether you call upon them or are silent. And in the verse there is information about the unseen as it is, because the relative pronoun refers to specific individuals, so it is one of the miracles.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:7

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:7

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

God has set a seal upon their hearts) He has imprinted them and secured them so that no good can enter them and upon their hearing that is, its places so that they do not benefit from what they hear of the truth and over their vision is a covering a cover so that they do not see the truth and for them is a great punishment strong and permanent

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: The root of the word khatam is imprint. The word khatam means stamp. It is said: I sealed the book, meaning I printed it.

If someone says to us: How can hearts be sealed, when the seal is only placed on vessels, containers, and foreskins?

It was said: The hearts of the servants are vessels for the knowledge that has been deposited in them, and containers for the knowledge of matters that has been placed in them. So the meaning of sealing them and the ears by which the audibles are perceived, and by which knowledge of the truths of the report about the unseen is reached, is similar to the meaning of sealing all the vessels and containers.

If he said: Is there a description for that that describes it to us so that we can understand it? Is it like a seal that is known when it appears to the eyes, or is it something else?

It was said: The people of interpretation differed about the description of that, and we will tell about its description after we mentioned their statement: Isa bin Othman bin Isa Al-Ramli told me, he said: Yahya bin Isa told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, he said: Mujahid showed us his hand and said: They used to think that the heart is in something like this, meaning the palm, so if the servant commits a sin, he closes it and says with his little finger like this, then if he sins again, he closes it and says with another finger, then if he sins again, he closes it and says with another finger like this, until he closes all his fingers, he said: Then he seals it with a seal. Mujahid said: And they used to think that it is the rust.

Abu Kuraib told us: Waki' told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The heart is like the palm of the hand. If a person commits a sin, he closes a finger until he closes all of his fingers. Our companions used to think that it was the rancidity.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me: Ibn Jurayj told us: Mujahid said: I was informed that sins surround the heart from all sides until they meet upon it. Their meeting upon it is the nature, and the nature is the seal. Ibn Jurayj said: The seal is the seal upon the heart and the hearing.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Abdullah bin Katheer told me, that he heard Mujahid say: The rust is easier than nature, and nature is easier than the locks, and the locks are the most severe of all of them.

Some of them said: The meaning of his saying, God has set a seal upon their hearts, is that God, may He be glorified, informs us of their arrogance and their turning away from listening to the truth to which they were called, just as it is said: So-and-so is deaf to this speech, if he refuses to hear it and raises himself above understanding it out of arrogance.

Abu Jaafar said: The truth in this, in my opinion, is what is authenticated with its counterpart from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, which is what:

Muhammad ibn Bashir narrated to us: Safwan ibn Isa narrated to us: Ibn Ajlan narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Qa'qa', on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When a believer commits a sin, a black spot appears on his heart. If he repents, desists, and seeks forgiveness, it polishes his heart. If he increases, it increases until it closes his heart. This is the rust that God, may He be glorified, said: 'No! Rather, that which they were earning has covered their hearts.' " (al-Muttaffin 83:14). So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, informed us that when sins continue to affect hearts, they close them. When they close them, then the seal comes from God, the Almighty, and the stamp, so that faith has no way to reach them, and disbelief has no escape from them. This is the stamp. The seal that God, the Blessed and Exalted, mentioned in His statement: 'God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing,' is similar to the stamp and seal on what the eyes perceive of vessels and containers, which cannot be reached except by removing that from them and then untying them. Likewise, faith does not reach the hearts of those whom God has described as having sealed their hearts, except after He has broken His seal and loosened His bond from them.

It is said to those who say the second statement, who claim that the meaning of His Most High's statement, God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, is that He described them as being arrogant and turning away from what they were called to of acknowledging the truth out of arrogance: Tell us about the arrogance of those whom God Most High described with this characteristic, and their turning away from acknowledging what they were called to of faith and all the meanings attached to it, is it an action from them, or an action from God Most High to them?

If they claim that this was their action, and this is what they say, it will be said to them: God Almighty has informed us that He is the One who has sealed their hearts and their hearing. How can it be possible that the disbeliever's turning away from faith and his arrogance in acknowledging it, which is his action according to you, be a seal from God upon his heart and his hearing, and His seal upon his heart and his hearing, the action of God Almighty and not the action of the disbeliever?

If they claim that it is permissible for this to be so because his arrogance and turning away were due to God's seal on his heart and hearing, and since the seal was the cause of that, it is permissible to name its cause by it, they abandon their statement and make it obligatory that the seal from God on the hearts and hearings of the unbelievers has a meaning other than the unbelief of the unbeliever, and other than his arrogance and turning away from accepting faith and acknowledging it. And that is entering into what they denied.

This verse is one of the clearest proofs of the corruption of the claim of those who deny that it is an obligation that cannot be borne except with the help of God, because God, may He be glorified and exalted, informed us that He sealed the hearts and ears of a group of His disbelieving servants, and then He did not drop the obligation from them, nor did He remove His obligations from any of them, nor did He excuse them for anything that they did in disobeying Him because of what He did to them of sealing and imprinting their hearts and ears. Rather, He informed us that all of them will have a great punishment from Him for abandoning His obedience in what He commanded them to do and forbade them from doing of His limits and obligations, while He inevitably decreed that they do not believe.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And over their eyes is a veil.

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, And over their eyes is a covering, is the predicate of a subject after the completion of the report about what God, the Most High, has sealed of the limbs of the disbelievers whose stories have passed. That is because covering is raised by His statement, and over their eyes, so that is evidence that it is the predicate of a subject, and that His statement, God has set a seal upon their hearts, has ended with His statement, and over their hearing.

This is the correct reading according to us for two reasons: One: The agreement of the authority among the reciters and scholars on testifying to its correctness, and the isolation of those who disagree with them in that, and its deviation from what they agree upon as being wrong. The agreement of the authority on the error of his reading is sufficient as evidence of its error.

The second: The seal is not used to describe the eyes in any of the Book of God, nor in any report from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, nor is it found in the language of any of the Arabs. God the Most High said in another Surah: And

He has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart, then He said: And He has placed over his vision a covering (Al-Jathiyah: 23). Thus, sight is not included in the meaning of the seal. This is what is known in the speech of the Arabs, so it is not permissible for us, nor for any of the people, to read with the accusative of the covering, because of the two reasons that were mentioned, even though its accusative has a known way of being pronounced in Arabic.

And with what we have said about that in terms of speech and interpretation, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas:

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said: My father told me, he said: My uncle Al-Hussein bin Al-Hassan told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and the covering is over their eyes.

If someone says: What is the reason for the accusative case in it?

It was said to him: To put it in the accusative case by implying ja'ala, as if he said: And He put a veil over their eyes, then he dropped ja'ala, since there was something at the beginning of the speech that indicated it. It may be possible to put it in the accusative case because it follows the place of hearing, since its place was in the accusative case, even if it is not good to repeat the factor in it on shawwa, but on the following of the speech of one part to another, as God Almighty said: And there will circulate among them immortal youths * With cups and pitchers, then he said: And fruit of whatever they choose * And the flesh of fowl of whatever they desire * And wide-eyed maidens, (Al-Waqi'ah: 17-22), so he lowered the meat and the maidens in the accusative case because of the conjunction with the fruit, following the beginning of the last speech. It is known that the meat is not circulated around, nor are the wide-eyed maidens, but as the poet said describing his horse:

I fed her straw and cold water until her eyes became watery.

It is known that water is drunk and not fed, but he set that up as I described before, and as the other said:

I saw your husband in the battlefield, carrying a sword and a spear.

Ibn Jurayj used to say about the end of the report about the seal to his saying and in their hearing, and the beginning of the report after it with something similar to what we said about it, and he interpreted it from the Book of God If God wills, He will seal your heart Ash-Shura 24.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, he said: Ibn Jurayj told us, he said: The seal is on the heart and hearing, and the covering is on the sight. God Almighty said: If God wills, He will set a seal upon your heart, and He said: And He has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart and put over his sight a covering (al-Jathiyah 45:23).

In Arabic, the word cloak means cover. From this

Surat al-Baqarah 2:7

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment.

comes the saying of Al-Harith bin Khalid bin Al-Aas:

I followed you while my eyes were covered with a veil, but when it cleared, I stopped blaming myself.

And from it it is said: Worry covered him, if it covered him and overwhelmed him, and from it the saying of the Nabigha of Banu Dhubyān:

Why don't you ask Bani Dhiḥyan what is enough for me when smoke covers the gray-haired woman?

Meaning: cover it and mix with it.

God, the Most High, informed His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, about those Jewish rabbis who disbelieved in Him, that He had sealed their hearts and made a mark on them, so that they would not understand the admonition that God, the Blessed and Exalted, had given them, in what He had given them of knowledge in their books, and in what He had specified in His book that He had revealed and sent down to His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in their hearing. They would not hear from Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, the Prophet of God, any warning, reminder, or proof that he had established against them regarding his prophethood, so that they would remember and beware of the punishment of God, the Almighty, for their denial of him, despite their knowledge of his truthfulness and the correctness of his command. He also informed him that there was a veil over their eyes, preventing them from seeing the path of guidance, so that they would know the ugliness of what they were upon of misguidance and ruin. In a manner similar to what we have said about that, the report was narrated by a group of people of interpretation: Ibn Ḥamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil, meaning from the guidance that they will never attain it without other than what they denied you of the truth that came to you from your Lord, until they believe in it, even if they believed in everything that came before you.

Musa bin Harun Al-Hamadani told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, meaning: so they do not understand and do not hear. And He says: And He has put a veil over their vision, meaning: over their eyes so they do not see.

As for others, they interpreted that those of the infidels whom God had told about doing this to them were the leaders of the parties who were killed on the day of Badr.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, he said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, he said: These two verses up to and for them is a great punishment are those who exchanged the favor of God for disbelief and settled their people in the home of destruction (Ibrahim 14:28), and they are those who were killed on the day of Badr, and none of the leaders entered Islam except two men: Abu Sufyan bin Harb and Al-Hakam bin Abi Al-Aas.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, he said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Al-Hassan, he said: As for the leaders, there is no one among them who answers, nor is there one who is saved, nor is there one who is guided.

We have previously demonstrated that the first of these two interpretations is correct, and we do not want to repeat it.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And for them is a great punishment.

And the interpretation of that, in my opinion, is as Ibn Abbas said and interpreted it: Ibn Ḥamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And for them, because of their opposition to you, is a great punishment. He said: This is about the rabbis from the Jews, because they denied you the truth that came to you from your Lord after knowing them.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment."

It has ten issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: The Seal of God. In this verse, the Almighty explained what prevented them from believing by saying: The Seal of God. The seal is the source of the word khatam which means to seal something, so it is sealed and sealed. The word is stressed for emphasis, and its meaning is to cover something and to make sure of it so that nothing enters it. From this is: to seal a book or a door and the like, so that what is in it cannot be reached, and nothing can be placed in it other than what is in it.

The scholars of meanings said: God the Almighty described the hearts of the unbelievers with ten descriptions: sealing, imprinting, constriction, disease, rust, death, hardness, turning away, zeal, and denial.

He said about denial: Their hearts are in denial, and they are arrogant. He said about zeal: When those who disbelieved put in their hearts zeal. He said about turning away: Then they turned away, God turned their hearts away because they were a people who do not understand. He said about hardness: So woe to those whose hearts are hardened against the remembrance of God. He said: Then your hearts hardened after that. He said about death: Or was he who was dead and We gave him life? He said: Only those who listen respond, and God will resurrect the dead. He said about rust: No! Rather, the rust has covered their hearts because of what they were earning. He said about disease: In their hearts is a disease. He said about constriction: And whomsoever He wills to misguide - He makes his breast tight and constricted. He said about the nature: So He has sealed their hearts, so they do not understand. He said: Rather, God has sealed them because of their disbelief. He said about the seal: God has sealed their hearts. All of these will be explained in their proper places, God willing.

Second: The seal is tangible as we have explained, and its meaning is as in this verse. The seal on the hearts: the lack of awareness of the Truth - Glory be to Him - the meaning of His addresses and thinking about His verses. And on the hearing: their lack of understanding of the Qur'an if it is recited to them or they are called to His Oneness. And on the eYa-Sin 36: their lack of guidance to contemplate His creations and the wonders of His manufactures. This is the meaning of the statement of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Mas'ud, Qatadah, and others.

Third: In this verse is the clearest proof and the most evident path that God, the Exalted, is the Creator of guidance and misguidance, disbelief and faith. So consider, O listeners, and be amazed, O thinkers, at the minds of the Qadarites who say that their faith and guidance are created. For the seal is the stamp, so how can they have faith even if they strive? He has stamped on their hearts and their hearing and placed a veil over their vision. So when will they be guided, or who will guide them after God if He has led them astray, deafened them, and blinded their vision? And he whom God leaves astray - for him there is no guide. And God's action was just toward those whom He led astray and forsaken, for He did not prevent them from a right that was due to them, so that the attribute of justice would be removed. Rather, He prevented them from what He should have bestowed upon them, not what was due to them.

If they say: The meaning of the seal, the stamp, and the covering is the naming, the ruling, and the information that they do not believe, not the action. We say: This is invalid, because the reality of the seal and the stamp is only the action by which the heart becomes stamped and sealed. It is not permissible for its reality to be the naming and the ruling. Do you not see that if it is said: So-and-so stamped the book and sealed it, the reality is that he did what made the book become stamped and sealed, not the naming and the ruling. This is something about which there is no disagreement among the people of language, and because the nation is unanimously agreed that God the Most High has described Himself as the seal and stamp on the hearts of the disbelievers as a punishment for their disbelief, as God the Most High said: Rather, God has set a seal upon them because of their disbelief. The Ummah has unanimously agreed that the imprint and seal on their hearts by the Prophet (peace be upon him), the angels and the believers is impossible. If the seal and imprint were the naming and the ruling, then the prophets and believers would not have been prevented from that, because they all call the disbelievers by saying that their hearts are imprinted, that they are sealed and that they are in misguidance and do not believe, and they judge them by that. So it is proven that the seal and imprint is a meaning other than the naming and the ruling, but rather it is a meaning that God creates in the heart that prevents belief in it, as evidenced by the statement of God the Most High: Thus do We cause it to enter the hearts of the criminals * They will not believe in it. And He said: And We have placed coverings over their hearts, lest they understand it. That is, lest they understand it, and the like.

Fourth: His saying: upon their hearts is evidence of the superiority of the heart over all the limbs. The heart is for humans and others, and the purest and most noble of everything is its heart. So the heart is the seat of thought. It is originally a source of the verb qalbat al-shay' aqlubahu qalban meaning to return it to its beginning. And qalbat al-ina' means to return it to its face. Then this word was transferred and this organ, which is the most noble of animals, was named after it, due to the speed of thoughts coming to it and their recurrence, as it was said:

The heart was named after its changing nature, so beware of the heart changing and turning.

Then, when the Arabs transferred this source to this noble organ, they committed to emphasizing its Qaf, to differentiate it from its original. Ibn Majah narrated on the authority of Abu Musa al-Ash'ari on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

The heart is like a feather that is tossed by the winds in the desert. For this reason, the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say:

O God, O He who makes hearts steadfast, make our hearts steadfast in Your obedience. If the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say this, despite his great status and majestic position, then we are more deserving of following his example. God Almighty said: And know that God comes between a man and his heart. And that will come.

Fifth: The limbs, even though they are subordinate to the heart, may be affected by their actions, even though it is their leader and king, due to the connection between the outward and the inward. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"A man may tell the truth, but a white spot appears in his heart. A man may tell a lie, but his heart blackens." Al-Tirmidhi narrated it and authenticated it on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace.

"A man may commit a sin and his heart blackens. If he repents, his heart is polished.” He said: It is the rust that God mentioned in the Qur’an in His statement: Nol Rather, what they were earning has rusted over their hearts. Mujahid said: The heart is like a hand, with a finger in it for each sin, then it is sealed.

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment.

I said: In this statement of Mujahid, and his saying, peace be upon him:

“There is a morsel of flesh in the body, if it is sound, the whole body is sound, and if it is corrupt, the whole body is corrupt. And that is the heart.” This is evidence that the seal is real, and God knows best. It has been said that the heart is like a pine tree, and this supports the statement of Mujahid, and God knows best.

Muslim narrated on the authority of Hudhayfah who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, told us two hadiths, one of which I have seen and I am waiting for the other: He told us that trustworthiness descended into the roots of men’s hearts, then the Qur’an was revealed, so they learned from the Qur’an and learned from the Sunnah. Then he told us about the lifting of trustworthiness, saying: A man would sleep, and trustworthiness would be taken from his heart, and its trace would remain like a spot, then he would sleep, and trustworthiness would be taken from his heart, and its trace would remain like a coal that you rolled over your foot, and it would evaporate and you would see it scattered with nothing in it. Then he took a pebble and rolled it over his foot, and people would come to buy and sell, and hardly anyone would fulfill the trust until it would be said: There is a trustworthy man among the Banu So-and-so, until it would be said about a man: How brave he is, how charming he is, how wise he is, and in his heart there is not even the weight of a mustard seed of faith. A time came upon me when I did not care which of you I pledged allegiance to, if he was a Muslim, he would return him to his religion, and if he was a Christian or a Jew, he would return him to his courier. But today, I would not pledge allegiance to anyone of you except so-and-so. And so-and-so

In his saying: The mark which is the slight trace. And it is said of the unripe date if a dot of moisture falls on it: it has been marked, so it is mokkat. And his saying: And his saying: The Majl, which is that there is water between the skin and the flesh, and the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, explained it by saying: Like a hot coal that you rolled, meaning you rolled it on your foot, so it bubbled. So you see it rising, meaning raised - which indicates that all of that is felt in the heart and is done to it, and likewise the seal and the stamp, and God knows best. And in the hadith of Hudhayfah, he said: “I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: Trials are presented to the hearts like a mat, stick by stick. So whichever heart absorbs them, a black dot is placed in it, and whichever heart rejects them, a white dot is placed in it, until it becomes two hearts, one white like a smooth rock, and no trial will harm it as long as the heavens and the earth endure, and the other black and dusty like an overflowing jug, it does not recognize good nor reject evil except what it absorbs from its desires.”... And he mentioned the hadith. Majkhan: means leaning.

Sixth: The heart may be expressed by the fu’ad and the chest. God Almighty said: Thus, that We may strengthen thereby your heart. And He said: Have We not expanded for you your breast? meaning in both places your heart. And it may be expressed by the mind. God Almighty said: Indeed in that is a reminder for whoever has a heart, meaning a mind, because the heart is the location of the mind according to the majority. And the fu’ad is the location of the heart, and the chest is the location of the fu’ad, and God knows best.

Seventh: The Almighty’s statement: And over their hearing. He used it as evidence of the superiority of hearing over sight because it precedes it. The Almighty said: “Say, ‘Have you considered: if God took away your hearing and your sight?’” And He said: And made for you hearing, sight, and hearts. He said: Hearing is perceived from the six directions, and in light and darkness, and sight is not perceived except from the opposite direction, and by means of light and radiance. Most theologians said that sight is superior to hearing, because hearing only perceives sounds and speech, while sight perceives all bodies, colors, and forms. They said: Since its connections are more, it is better, and they permitted perception by sight from the six directions.

Eighth: If someone were to say: Why did He put sight in the plural and hear in the singular? It would be said to him: He only put it in the singular because it is a verbal noun that applies to both little and much. It is said: I heard something, I hear it, hearing and listening. Hearing is the verbal noun of I heard, and hearing is also the name of the organ that is heard with, so it was called the verbal noun. It was said: Because He added hearing to the group, it indicated that what is meant by it are the hearings of the group, as the poet said:

It has corpses of sorrow, but its bones are white and its skin is a cross.

He only wanted to flog her, so he singled her out, because he knew that the group would not have one flog. Another said in a similar manner:

Do not deny the killing, we have taken a bone in your throat and we have caused you grief.

He wants to put it in your throats. And the same is said by another:

It is as if the face of two angry Turks is targeted for a stab without a response.

Rather, he meant two faces, so he said two Turkish faces, because he knew that two faces could not have one face, and there are many like it. It was read: And on their ears, and it is possible that the meaning is and on the places of their ears, because hearing is not sealed, but rather the place of hearing is sealed, so the complement was deleted and the complement to it was put in its place. Hearing may mean listening, it is said: Your hearing of my speech - meaning your listening to my speech - pleases me, and from this is the saying of Dhu al-Rummah describing a bull listening to the sound of a hunter and dogs:

He suspected a desolate, hidden place, with the report of the voice, which he had heard was a lie.

Anything in his listening is a lie, meaning he is honest in his listening. And the secret: the clever. And al-Naba 78: the low voice, and so is the focus. And the hearing with a broken seen and a silent meem: mentioning a person with something beautiful, it is said: his hearing went away in, meaning he mentioned it. And the hearing also: the offspring of the wolf from the hyena. And the pause here: and on their hearing. And the covering is a nominative as a subject and what precedes it is a predicate. And the pronouns are in their hearts and what is conjoined to it for those who have previously known in God that he will not believe from the infidels of Quraysh, and it was said from the hypocrites, and it was said from the Jews, and it was said from all of them, and this is more correct, because it is general. So the seal is on the hearts and listening. And the covering is on the eyes. And the covering: the cover. And it is:

Ninth: From it is the word ghashiyat al-sarj saddle covering and ghashiyat al-shay I cover something. Al-Nabigha said:

Why don't you ask Bani Dhibyan what is enough for me when smoke covers the gray-haired woman?

Another said:

I was with you when my eyes were covered with a veil, but when it lifted, I stopped blaming myself.

Ibn Kaysan said: If you pluralize ghashawat you say ghashawat without the ha. Al-Farra' said: ghashawi is like adawi. It was read ghashawat in the accusative case, meaning and made, so it is like his saying:

I fed her straw and cold water.

The other said:

I wish your husband was now wearing a sword and a spear

Meaning: And I gave her water to drink and carried a spear, because the spear is not girded. Al-Farsi said: You hardly find this usage in a situation of ease and choice, so reading in the nominative case is better, and the waw is a conjunction of one sentence to another. He said: I have not heard of a verb from ghashawa that is modified by the waw. Some commentators said: The ghashawa is on the ears and eyes, and the stop is on their hearts. Others said: The seal is in all of them, and the ghashawa is the seal, so the stop on this is on ghashawa. Al-Hasan read ghashawa with a damma on the ghain, and Abu Haywah read it with a fatha, and it was narrated on the authority of Abu Amr: ghashawa, returning it to the original source. Ibn Kaysan said: Ghashawa is permissible, and the best of it is ghashawa, likewise the Arabs use it for everything that is covered by something, such as a turban, a quiver, a necklace, a headband, and others.

Tenth: The Almighty said: And for them meaning for the disbelievers who deny is a great torment as a description of it. And torment is like whipping, burning with fire, cutting with iron, and other things that cause pain to a person. And in the revelation: And let a party of the believers witness their torment It is derived from confinement and prevention. It is said in the language A'dhabhu 'an kada meaning I detained him and prevented him, and from this the name of the sweetness of water is derived, because it has been made sweet. And it is made sweet by confining it in a vessel so that it becomes clear and whatever has mixed with it leaves it, and from this is the saying of Ali, may God be pleased with him: Torture your women from going out, meaning confine them. And from him, may God be pleased with him, when he sent a raiding party, he said: Torture yourselves from mentioning women, because that will break you from fighting. And whoever you prevent something from, you have tormented him. And in the proverb: I will bridle you with a tormenting bridle, meaning one that prevents people from riding. And it is said: A'dhab meaning he refrained. And torment is more painful than it, for it is transitive and intransitive. So torment is called torment because its owner is held back and prevented from all the report that is appropriate for the body, and its opposites are poured upon him.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said: God's seal means God's stamp. Qatada said about this verse: Satan took control of them when they obeyed him, so God sealed their hearts and their hearing, and over their sight is a veil, so they do not see guidance, nor do they hear, nor do they understand, nor do they reason. Ibn Jurayj said: Mujahid said: God sealed their hearts. He said: The stamp is fixed on the heart, so sins surround it from all sides until they meet upon it, so their meeting upon it is the stamp, and the stamp is the seal. Ibn Jurayj said: The seal is upon the heart and hearing. Ibn Jurayj said: Abdullah bin Katheer told me that he heard Mujahid say: The ran is easier than the stamp, and the stamp is easier than the closure, and the closure is more severe than all of that. Al-A'mash said: Mujahid showed us his hand and said: They used to think that the heart is in something like this, meaning the palm. So if the servant commits a sin, he closes it and says with his little finger like this, then if he sins, he closes it and says with another finger, then if he sins, he closes it and says with another finger like this until he closes all of his fingers, then he said: It is stamped upon it with a seal. And Mujahid said: They used to think that it was the rust, and Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Abu Kurayb on the authority of Wakee' on the authority of Al-A'mash on the authority of Mujahid in a similar manner. Ibn Jarir said: And some of them said: The meaning of the Almighty's saying: God has set a seal upon their hearts is a statement from God about their arrogance and their turning away from listening to the truth to which they were called, just as it is said that someone is deaf to this speech if he refuses to hear it and raises himself from understanding it out of arrogance. He said: This is not correct because God the Almighty has informed that He is the One who has set a seal upon their hearts and ears. I said

Surat al-Baqarah 2:7

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. And for them is a great punishment.

Al-Zamakhshari has elaborated in explaining what Ibn Jarir rejected here and interpreted the verse from five aspects, all of which are very weak. What made him do that was his isolation because the seal upon their hearts and preventing them from the truth reaching them is ugly in his view, God is exalted above it in his belief. And if he had understood the Almighty's saying: So when they deviated, God caused their hearts to deviate and His saying: And We will turn their hearts and their eyes away just as they did not believe in it the first time, and We will leave them in their transgression wandering blindly and similar verses indicating that He, the Almighty, only sealed their hearts and prevented them from guidance as a just recompense for their persistence in falsehood and abandonment of the truth. This is justice from Him, the Almighty, and is good, not ugly. If He had encompassed knowledge of this, He would not have said what He said. And God knows best.

Al-Qurtubi said: The nation agreed that God Almighty described Himself as sealing and imprinting the hearts of the unbelievers as a punishment for their unbelief, as He said: Rather, God has set a seal on them because of their unbelief. He mentioned the hadith about turning hearts: O Turner of hearts, make our hearts firm upon Your religion. He mentioned the hadith of Hudhayfah, which is in the Sahih, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. He said: "Trials are presented to the hearts like a mat, stick by stick. Any heart that absorbs them, a black dot will be placed on it, and any heart that rejects them, a white dot will be placed on it, until there are two hearts: one white like a smooth rock, which will not be harmed by any trial as long as the heavens and the earth endure, and the other black and dusty like an overturned cup, which will not recognize good nor reject evil." The hadith. Ibn Jarir said: The truth, in my opinion, is what is authentically reported from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, which is what Muhammad ibn Bashir narrated to us, Safwan ibn Isa narrated to us, Ibn Ajan narrated to us, from Al-Qa'qa', from Abu Salih, from Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When a believer commits a sin, a black dot will appear on his heart. If he repents, desists, and seeks forgiveness, his heart will be polished, but if he increases it, it will increase until it covers his heart. This is the rust of which God, the Most High, said: 'No! Rather, that which they were earning has rusted over their hearts.'" This hadith from this source was narrated by Al-Tirmidhi and Al-Nasa'i from Qutaybah and Al-Layth ibn Saad and Ibn Majah on the authority of Hisham bin Ammar on the authority of Hatim bin Ismail and Al-Walid bin Muslim, all three of them on the authority of Muhammad bin Ajan, with it. Al-Tirmidhi said: It is good and authentic. Then Ibn Jarir said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, informed us that when sins continue to overtake the hearts, they will close them. And when they close them, then the seal and stamp will come to them from God Almighty, so faith will not have a path to them, nor will disbelief escape from them. This is the seal and stamp mentioned in the words of God Almighty: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing. It is similar to the seal and stamp on what the eyes perceive of vessels and containers, which cannot be reached except by removing that from them and then untying them. Likewise, faith will not reach the hearts of those whom God described as having set a seal upon their hearts and their hearing except after removing His seal and untying His bond from them.

Know that the complete pause at the words of God Almighty: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing and His words: And over their vision is a veil is a complete sentence, for the seal is upon the heart and upon the hearing, and the veil, which is the covering, is upon the sight, as al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in his words: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, meaning that they do not understand or hear, and He has placed a veil over their vision, meaning that it is over their eyes, so that they do not see. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Saad told me, my father told us, my uncle al-Husayn ibn al-Hasan told me on the authority of his father on the authority of his grandfather on the authority of Ibn Abbas, God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and the veil is upon their sight. He said: Al-Qasim told us, al-Husayn told us, meaning Ibn Dawud, who is Sanid, told me, Hajjaj, who is Ibn Muhammad al-A'war, told me, Ibn Jurayj said: The seal is upon the heart and hearing, and the veil is upon the sight. God Almighty said: If God wills, He can set a seal upon your heart, and He said: And He has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and has placed over his vision a veil. Ibn Jarir said: Whoever puts a veil in the accusative case from the Almighty's statement, And over their vision is a veil, it is possible that he put it in the accusative case by implying a verb, the meaning of which is, And He has placed over their vision a veil, it is possible that it was put in the accusative case by following the place of and over their hearing, like the Almighty's statement, And wide-eyed maidens, and the statement of the poet:

I fed her straw and cold water until her eyes became dry.

The other said:

I saw your husband in the battlefield, carrying a sword and a spear.

His estimation and his giving her cold water and his spear, because the description of the believers in the beginning of the surah was presented in four verses, then he knew the state of the disbelievers with these two verses, the Almighty began to explain the state of the hypocrites who show faith and conceal disbelief, and because their matter is confusing to many people, he elaborated on mentioning them with multiple characteristics, each of which is hypocrisy, as he revealed Surah Bara'ah about them and Surah Al-Munafiqun about them and mentioned them in Surah An-Nur and other surahs as a definition of their states to avoid and to avoid those who are involved in them as well, so the Almighty said:

Fath al-Qadir

There is a difference of opinion regarding the Almighty's statement: 7- And over their hearing whether it is included in the ruling of sealing and thus is conjoined with the hearts or in the ruling of covering. It was said: The pause at His statement: And over their hearing is complete, and what follows is an independent statement, so the seal is on the hearts and ears, and the covering is on the eyes as a group said. It was read: covering in the accusative. Ibn Jarir said: It is possible that he made it accusative by implying a verb, the meaning of which is: And He placed a covering over their eyes. It is possible that it was made accusative by following the place of and over their hearing, like the Almighty's statement: And beautiful wide-eyed maidens and the poet's statement:

I fed her straw and cold water.

He united the word hearing with the word hearts and eyes because it is a verbal noun that applies to both little and much. Torment is that which causes pain, and it is taken from confinement and prevention. In the language, it is said I punished him for something: he detained him and prevented him. From this comes the word the sweetness of water because it was detained in the vessel until it became clear. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Al-Tabarani in Al-Kabeer, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, It is the same for them whether you warn them, that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was keen for all people to believe and follow him in guidance, so God informed him that no one believes except he for whom God has predestined happiness in the first remembrance, and no one goes astray except he for whom God has predestined misery in the first remembrance. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas also in his interpretation of the verse: They have disbelieved in what they have of Your remembrance, and denied what was taken from them of the covenant, so how can they hear a warning and caution from You, when they have disbelieved in what they have of Your knowledge?

God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: Indeed, those who disbelieved he said: These two verses were revealed regarding the leaders of the parties, and they are the ones mentioned by God in this verse: Have you not seen those who exchanged the favor of God for disbelief?

He said: They are the ones who were killed on the day of Badr, and the leaders did not enter Islam except for two men: Abu Sufyan and Al-Hakam bin Al-Aas. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated from Al-Suddi regarding his statement: Did you warn them or did you not warn them? He said: Did you admonish them or did you not admonish them. Abd bin Hamid narrated from Qatadah regarding this verse, he said: They obeyed Satan, so he took control of them, so God sealed their hearts and their hearing, and over their vision is a veil, so they do not see guidance, nor do they hear, nor do they understand, nor do they reason. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas, he said: The seal is over their hearts and their hearing, and the veil is over their vision. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Masoud, he said: God sealed their hearts and their hearing, so they do not reason or hear, and He put a veil over their vision, meaning their eyes, so they do not see.

Al-Suddi narrated that from a group of the Companions. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: The seal is on the heart and hearing, and the covering is on the sight. God Almighty said: If God wills, He will set a seal upon your heart. And He said: And He has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and has placed over his sight a covering. Ibn Jarir said regarding the meaning of the seal: The truth, in my opinion, is what is similarly authenticated from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then he mentioned a chain of transmission connected to Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: When a believer commits a sin, it is a black spot on his face.

His heart, if he repents, desists and seeks forgiveness, his heart will be polished, and if he increases, it will increase until it closes his heart." This is the rust that God said: No, but what they were earning has covered their hearts. Al-Tirmidhi narrated it from this source and authenticated it, and Al-Nasa'i. Then Ibn Jarir said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, informed us that if sins continue to accumulate on the hearts, they will close them, and if they close them, then the seal comes from God, the Most High, and the stamp, so there will be no path to it and no escape from disbelief. This is the seal that God mentioned in His statement: God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, similar to the stamp and seal upon what the eyes perceive of vessels and containers, which cannot be reached except by removing that from them and then untying them. This is how faith does not reach the hearts of those whom God described as having set a seal upon their hearts except after removing His seal and untying them.

7. He said, God has sealed God has stamped upon their hearts so they do not comprehend or understand good.

The reality of the seal is to ensure that something does not enter it, nor does what is in it exit it. From this is the seal on a door. The Sunnis said: That is, He judged their hearts to be unbelievers, due to His eternal knowledge of them. The Mu'tazila said: He placed a mark on their hearts by which the angels recognize them. And on their hearing: That is, on the place of their hearing, so they do not hear the truth nor benefit from it. He meant on their hearing, as He said: On their hearts. He only made it singular because it is a source, and a source cannot be dual or plural.

And over their eyes is a veil. This is the beginning of a sentence. A veil means a covering, so they do not see the truth. Abu Amr and Al-Kisa'i read absarhum with imalah. Likewise, every alif followed by a genitive ra' in nouns that had the lam of the verb, they would imalah it, and Hamzah would imalah some of them in which the ra' was repeated, such as qarār and the like. Al-Kisa'i added imalah to jaba'ir, al-jawwār, al-jar, barīkum, min ansārī, naṣarī, and its chapter. Likewise, these people imalah every alif in the position of the lam of the verb, or it was a feminine noun, if it was preceded by a ra', so it is a feminine noun, such as al-kubrā and al-akhrā. And the lam of the verb, such as tara and iftara, they pronounce the ra' in angular form.

And for them is a great punishment meaning: in the Hereafter. It was said: killing and captivity in this world and eternal punishment in the Hereafter. Punishment is everything that concerns a person and is difficult for him. Al-Khalil said: Punishment is what prevents a person from his desires, and from it: fresh water, because it prevents thirst.

7- God has set a seal upon their hearts and upon their hearing, and over their vision is a veil. This is an explanation of the previous ruling and an explanation of what it requires. The seal is the concealment, it is called the confirmation of something, the seal is applied to it because it is concealed for it, and reaching it is its last in view of it being the last action done to secure it. The concealment is the active participle of the word ghaana if it covers it, it is built for what includes something, like a headband and a turban, and there is no concealment in reality, but what is meant by them is to create in their souls a state that trains them to prefer disbelief and sins, and to despise faith and obedience because of their error, their preoccupation with imitation, and their turning away from correct vision, so their hearts are made to such a degree that it cannot penetrate them, and their ears are averse to hearing it, so it becomes as if it is secured from them by a seal, and their eyes do not see the signs set up for them in their souls and horizons as the eyes of the discerning see them, so it becomes as if they are covered. And a barrier was placed between them and sight, and He called it metaphorically a seal and a covering. Or He likened their hearts and their feelings that are in harmony with them to things that He set a veil between them and benefiting from them as a seal and a covering. And He expressed the creation of this form by sealing in His Almighty saying: Those are the ones over whose hearts, hearing and sight God has sealed. And by neglect in His Almighty saying: And do not obey one whose heart We have made heedless of Our remembrance. And by hardening in His Almighty saying: And We have made their hearts hard. And it is from the fact that all possibilities are based on God Almighty, occurring by His power, attributed to Him, and from the fact that they are caused by what they committed, as evidenced by His Almighty saying: Rather, God has set a seal upon them because of their disbelief. And His Almighty saying: That is because they believed and then disbelieved, so He sealed upon their hearts. The verse came to denounce them for the hideousness of their description and the severity of their end. The Mu'tazilah were confused about it, so they mentioned aspects of interpretation:

First: When the people turned away from the truth and it became established in their hearts until it became like nature to them, it was likened to the innate characteristic with which they were created.

Second: What is meant by it is to represent the state of their hearts as the hearts of animals that God Almighty created devoid of intelligence. Or hearts that God has destined to seal. Similar to it is: The valley flowed with him when he perished. And the phoenix flew away with him.

Third: That this is in reality the action of Satan or the infidel, but since it was caused by him by His Almighty's power, He attributed to him the attribution of the action to the cause.

Fourth: When their roots were firmly rooted in disbelief and became so entrenched that there was no way to obtain their faith except by compulsion and coercion, and then He did not compel them in order to maintain the purpose of the obligation, He expressed His abandonment with the seal, for it blocked their faith. In it is a sign of the persistence of their affair in error and the utmost immersion in misguidance and transgression.

Fifth: That it be a narration of what the infidels used to say, such as: Our hearts are covered from that to which you invite us, and in our ears is deafness, and between us and you is a veil, mocking and ridiculing them [and] like the Almighty's saying: Those who disbelieved among the People of the Scripture and the polytheists were not...

Sixth: That this will happen in the Hereafter, and it was only reported in the past because it was realized and its occurrence was certain, and it is supported by the Almighty's statement: And We will gather them on the Day of Resurrection on their faces, blind, dumb and deaf.

Seventh: What is meant by the seal is the marking of their hearts with a mark that the angels recognize, so they hate them and are repelled by them. And based on this approach is our speech and their speech regarding what is attributed to God Almighty of nature, misguidance, and the like.

And on their hearing is in apposition to their hearts, because God Almighty said: And He has set a seal upon his hearing and his heart, and to agree on stopping on it, and because since they share in perceiving from all sides, what prevents them from their specific action is the seal that prevents from all sides, and the sight's perception of what is specific to the direction of opposition, what prevents it from its action is the veil specific to that direction, and the preposition was repeated to be more indicative of the severity of the seal in the two places and the independence of each of them in the ruling. And hearing was made singular to avoid confusion and to consider the origin, because it is a source in its origin and sources are not pluralized. Or on the assumption of an addition like and on the senses of their hearing.

The eyes are the plural of sight, which is: the perception of the eye. It may be used metaphorically for the visual faculty, the organ, and also the hearing. Perhaps what is meant by them in the verse is the organ because it is more appropriate for sealing and covering. The heart is what is the place of knowledge, and it may be used to mean the mind and knowledge, as God Almighty said: Indeed in that is a reminder for whoever has a heart. It is permissible to make it inclined with the sad because the broken raa' predominates the high one because of the repetition in it. Ghashawa is raised by the beginning according to Sibawayh, and by the preposition and the noun according to Al-Akhfash, and it supports the conjunction with the verbal sentence. It was read in the accusative based on the estimation, and made a covering over their eyes, or by deleting the preposition and connecting the seal itself to it and the meaning. And He sealed their eyes with a covering, and it was read with the damma and the nominative, and with the fatha and the accusative, and they are two languages in it. Ghashawa with the kasra is raised, and with the fatha it is raised and accusative, and `ishawah with the unvoiced `ayn.

And for them is a great punishment. A warning and a statement of what they deserve. And punishment is like punishment in construction, and the meaning of you say: to punish from something and to refrain from it if you hold it back, and from this water because it suppresses thirst and deters it and for this reason it is called a slap and a fresh water, then it was expanded and applied to every spark even if it is not a slap, meaning: a punishment that deters the offender from repeating it, so it is more general than both of them. And it was said that it is derived from torture which is the removal of sweetness like spitting and nursing. And the great is the opposite of the insignificant, and the big is the opposite of the small, so just as the insignificant is below the small, so the great is above the big, and the meaning of describing it is that if it is compared to everything similar to it, it all falls short of it and is insignificant in comparison to it, and the meaning of the indefiniteness in the verse is that over their eyes is a type of veil that is not what people are familiar with, which is blindness to the signs, and for them are great pains whose nature is known only to God.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:8

And among the people are those who say, "We believe in God and the Last Day," but they are not believers.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:8

And among the people are those who say, "We believe in God and the Last Day", but they are not believers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And it was revealed about al-Munafiqun 63: And among the people is he who says, We believe in God and the Last Day, meaning the Day of Resurrection because it is the last of the days, (but they are not believers. The meaning of who was taken into account in it, and in the pronoun he says its wording

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: As for his saying: And among the people, there are two aspects to the al-Nas 114: One of them: That it is a plural that has no singular form, but rather their singular is human, and their singular is woman.

The other aspect: that its origin is Anas from which the hamza was dropped due to frequent use of it, then the definite alif and lam entered it, so the lam that entered with the alif in it for the purpose of definiteness was assimilated into the nun, as was said in But He is God, my Lord (al-Kahf 18:38) based on what we have explained in the name of God which is God. Some of them have claimed that the language of Nas is not Anas, and that he heard the Arabs make the diminutive of it Naways from Nas, and that if the origin had been Anas, the diminutive would have been said: Anis, so it was returned to its origin.

All the interpreters agreed that this verse was revealed about a group of hypocrites, and that this is their characteristic.

Mentioning the names of those who said that from the people of interpretation: Muhammad ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers, meaning the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj and those who followed their example. And in this hadith of Ibn Abbas, their names were mentioned on the authority of Abi ibn Ka'b, except that I left out naming them.

Disliking to prolong the book by mentioning them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers, until he reached: But their trade has brought them no profit, nor were they guided. He said: This is about the hypocrites.

Muhammad bin Amr Al-Bahili told us: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us: Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh told us, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: This verse up to thirteen, is in describing the hypocrites.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Sufyan told us, he said: My father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Ismail al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. They are the hypocrites.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding his statement: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day' to So God has increased their disease, and for them is a painful punishment (al-Baqarah 2:10), he said: These are the people of hypocrisy.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Husayn bin Dawud told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers, he said: This is the hypocrite, his words contradict his actions, his secret contradicts his public actions, his entrance contradicts his exit, and his presence contradicts his absence.

The interpretation of this is that when God, the Most High, gathered the matter for His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the land of his migration, and he settled there, and God made His word manifest there, and Islam spread in the homes of its people, and the Muslims subdued the polytheists who worshipped idols there, and humiliated the People of the Book there, the Jewish rabbis showed their grudges against the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and showed him enmity and hatred, out of envy and malice, except for a few of them whom God guided to Islam and they converted to Islam, as God, the Most High, said: Many of the People of the Scripture wish they could turn you back to disbelief after you have believed, out of envy from themselves after the truth has become clear to them (al-Baqarah 2:109). And they secretly agreed with them in their enmity towards the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions and their malice, a group of the Ansar who sheltered the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and supported him, and they had been wicked in their polytheism and ignorance, and they called us by their names. We hated to prolong the book by mentioning their names and lineages, and they supported them in that secretly, not openly, for fear of being killed for themselves, and the captivity of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions, and they relied on the Jews because of their polytheism and their poor insight into Islam. So when they met the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the people of faith in him from among his companions, they would say to them, for fear of themselves: We believe in God and His Messenger and in the Resurrection, and they gave them with their tongues the word of truth, to ward off from themselves the judgment of God regarding those who believed what they were established upon of polytheism, if they had revealed with their tongues what they believed of their polytheism. And when they met their brothers from the Jews and the people of polytheism and denial of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and they were alone with them, They said, 'Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking.' (al-Baqarah 2:14) So, the Most High meant them when He said: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. He meant by the Most High's statement, reporting on them: We believe in God: We believe in God.

We have demonstrated that the meaning of faith is belief, in what came before in this book of ours.

His saying: And on the Last Day, means: on the Resurrection Day. The Day of Resurrection is called the Last Day because it is the last day, and there is no day after it other than it.

If someone says: How can there be no day after it, no end to the Hereafter, no annihilation, and no disappearance?

It was said: The day among the Arabs was called a day because of the night that preceded it. If the day was not preceded by night, it was not called a day. So the Day of Resurrection is a day after which there is no night, except for the night on the morning of which the Resurrection occurred. That day is the last of the days. Therefore, God, the Most High, called it the Last Day, and described it as barren. He described it as a barren day because there is no night after it.

As for the interpretation of His statement: And they are not believers, and His negation of the name of faith from them, may He be glorified, and He informed us about them that they had said with their tongues: We believe in God and the Last Day, then that is from God, may He be glorified and exalted, as a denial of them in what they reported about their belief in faith and acknowledgment of the Resurrection, and an informing from Him to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that what they show him with their mouths is contrary to what is in the innermost thoughts of their hearts, and against what is in the resolve of their souls.

This verse clearly indicates the length of what the Jahmites claimed: that faith is belief in words, without any other meanings. God Almighty informed us about those whom He mentioned in His Book from among the hypocrites, that they said with their tongues: We believe in God and the Last Day, then He denied that they were believers, since their belief was not true to what they said.

His saying, And they are not believers, means that they are not believing in what they claim to believe.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers.

It contains seven issues:

First: Ibn Jurayj narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: Four verses of Surat Al-Baqarah were revealed about the believers, two describing the disbelievers, and thirteen about the hypocrites. Asbat narrated on the authority of Al-Sad regarding His statement: And among the people, he said: They are the hypocrites. The Sufi scholars said: People is a generic name, and a generic name is not used to address saints.

Second: Grammarians differed in the pronunciation of people. It was said: It is a collective noun, the plural of insan and insanah, in a different pronunciation, and its diminutive is nawis. People comes from nūs, which means movement. It is said: Nas yanūs, meaning he moved. From this comes the hadith that Zar'a said:

People from my ear adornments. It was said: Its origin is from forget, so the origin of nas is forget, then it became nis. The yaa was moved and what preceded it was opened, so it became an alif, then the alif and lam entered and it was said: people. Ibn Abbas said: Adam forgot the covenant of God, so he was called a human being. And he, peace be upon him, said:

Adam forgot, so his descendants forgot. And in the revelation: And We had already made a covenant with Adam before, but he forgot. And it will come. Based on this, the hamza is redundant. The poet said:

Do not forget those covenants, for you are called human because you forget.

Another said:

If you forget your previous promises, then forgive, for the first people are the first people.

It was said: He was called human because of his familiarity with Eve. It was also said: Because of his familiarity with his Lord, so the hamza is original. The poet said:

Man was named so because of his intimacy, and the heart was named so because it changes.

Third: When God, the Almighty, mentioned the believers first, and began with them because of their honor and virtue, He mentioned the disbelievers in contrast to them, since disbelief and belief are two extremes. Then He mentioned the hypocrites after them and included them with the disbelievers before them, to negate belief from them by His true statement: And they are not believers. In this is a refutation of the Karamiyah, who said: Faith is a statement on the tongue even if it is not believed in the heart, and they argued with His statement, the Almighty: So God rewarded them for what they said, and He did not say: for what they said and concealed, and with His statement, peace be upon him:

And among the people are those who say, "We believe in God and the Last Day," but they are not believers.

I have been commanded to fight people until they say, 'There is no god but God.' If they say it, their blood and their wealth are protected from me. This is a shortcoming and rigidity on their part, and a neglect of consideration of what the Qur'an and Sunnah have stated in terms of action, words, and belief. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Faith is knowledge in the heart, statement with the tongue, and action with the limbs. Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunan. What Muhammad ibn Karam al-Sijistani and his companions believed in is hypocrisy and the very essence of discord. We seek refuge in God from failure and bad belief.

Fourth: Our scholars, may God have mercy on them, said: The believer is of two types: a believer whom God loves and is loyal to, and a believer whom God does not love or support, but rather hates and is hostile to. So whoever God knows will die with faith, God loves him, is loyal to him, and is pleased with him. And whoever God knows will die with disbelief, God hates him, is angry with him, and is hostile to him, not because of his faith, but because of his disbelief and misguidance with which he will die. And the disbeliever is of two types: a disbeliever who will inevitably be punished, and a disbeliever who will not be punished. So the one who will be punished is the one who will die with disbelief, so God is angry with him and is hostile to him. And the one who will not be punished is the one who will die with faith, so God is not angry with this one nor hates him, but rather loves him and is loyal to him, not because of his disbelief but because of his faith with which he will die. So it is not permissible to say that they are:

Fifth: That the believer deserves reward, and the disbeliever deserves punishment. Rather, it must be restricted to the time of fulfillment. For this reason, we said: God was pleased with Omar at the time when he was worshipping idols, and wanted his reward and entry into Paradise, not for his worship of the idol, but for his faith in it. And God Almighty was angry with Satan in the state of his worship, for his disbelief in it.

The Qadarites disagreed with this and said: God was not angry with Iblis at the time of his worship, nor was He pleased with Umar at the time of his worship of the idol. This is invalid, because it has been proven that God, the Exalted, knows what Iblis, may God curse him, will encounter, and what Umar, may God be pleased with him, will encounter in the past. It has been proven that he was angry with Iblis and loved Umar. This is indicated by the consensus of the Ummah that God, the Exalted, does not love those who He knows are among the people of Hell, rather He is angry with them, and that He loves those who He knows are among the people of Paradise. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Actions are judged by their endings. That is why the Sufi scholars said: Faith is not what the servant adorns himself with in word and deed, but faith is the course of happiness in the past of eternity. As for its appearance in the bodies, it may be naked, or it may be true.

I said: This is as proven in Sahih Muslim and others, "On the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he is the truthful and believed one, told us: Verily, the creation of one of you is gathered in his mother's womb for forty days, then he is a clot for a similar period, then he is a lump of flesh for a similar period, then God sends the angel who breathes the spirit into him and he is commanded with four words: to write down his provision, his life span, his deeds, and whether he will be wretched or happy. By the One besides Whom there is no god, one of you may do the deeds of the people of Paradise until there is only a cubit between him and it, then the Book will overtake him and he will do the deeds of the people of Hell and enter it. And one of you may do the deeds of the people of Hell until there is only a cubit between him and it, then the Book will overtake him and he will do the deeds of the people of Paradise and enter it." If it is said: They are:

Sixth: Imam Al-Hafiz Abu Muhammad Abdul-Ghani bin Saeed Al-Masry narrated from the hadith of Muhammad bin Saeed Al-Shami, who was crucified for heresy, and he is Muhammad bin Abi Qais, from Sulayman bin Musa, who is Al-Ashdaq, from Mujahid bin Jabr, "from Ibn Abbas, Abu Razin Al-Uqaili told us that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to me: You and I, O Abu Razin, will drink from milk whose taste has not changed. I said: How does God revive the dead? He said: Have you not passed by a barren land of yours, then passed by a fertile land, then passed by a barren land, then passed by a fertile land? I said: Yes. He said: This is how the resurrection is. I said: How do I know that I am a believer? He said: There is no one from this nation - Ibn Abi Qais said: or he said from my nation - who does a good deed and knows that it is good and that God will reward it with good or does a bad deed and knows that it is bad and that God will reward it with evil or forgive it except a believer."

I said: Even though the chain of transmission of this hadith is not strong, its meaning is correct and does not contradict the hadith of Ibn Masoud, for that depends on the conclusion, as he, peace be upon him, said:

Actions are judged by their endings. This only indicates that he is a believer at the time, and God knows best.

Seventh: Linguists said: The hypocrite was called a hypocrite because he shows something other than what he conceals, in imitation of the jerboa. He has a hole called al-Nafqa' and another called al-Qas'aa'. This is because he digs holes in the ground until he almost reaches the surface of the ground, the thinnest of dirt. If something suspicious happens to him, he pushes that dirt with his head and comes out. The outside of his hole is dirt, but the inside is a hole. Likewise, the hypocrite appears to be a believer, but his inside is disbelief. This meaning has already been mentioned.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Hypocrisy is showing goodness and concealing evil. It has two types: belief-based, which will keep its owner in Hell forever. And my work is one of the greatest sins, as will be detailed in its place, God willing. This is as Ibn Jurayj said: The hypocrite's words contradict his actions, his secret contradicts his public, his entrance contradicts his exit, and his appearance contradicts his absence. The characteristics of the hypocrites were revealed in the Medinan surahs because there was no hypocrisy in Mecca, rather the opposite of it was among the people who showed disbelief under duress while they were believers inwardly. So when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, migrated to Medina, there were the Ansar from Aws and Khazraj, and in their ignorance they worshipped idols in the manner of the polytheists of the Arabs, and there were the Jews from the People of the Book in it in the manner of their ancestors, and they were three tribes: Banu Qaynuqa', allies of Khazraj, Banu Nadir, and Banu Qurayzah, allies of Aws. So when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina, and those who converted from the Ansar from the tribes of Aws and Khazraj converted to Islam, and few of the Jews converted to Islam except Abdullah ibn Salam, may God be pleased with him, and there was no hypocrisy at that time either, because the Muslims did not yet have a thorn to fear, rather, peace be upon him, Peace be upon the Jews and many tribes of the Arab tribes around Medina. When the Battle of Badr took place and God made His word manifest and Islam and its people were victorious, Abdullah bin Ubayy bin Salul, who was a leader in Medina and was from the Khazraj and was the master of the two sects in the pre-Islamic era, said: They had resolved to make him king over them, but goodness came to them and they converted to Islam and were busy with him, so he remained in his soul from Islam and its people. When the Battle of Badr took place, he said: This is it. God's command has been directed, so he made it clear that he had entered Islam and with him entered sects who were on his path and sect and others from the People of the Book. From there, hypocrisy was found among the people of Medina and the Arabs around it. As for the emigrants, there was not one hypocrite among them because no one emigrated under duress, but rather he emigrated leaving his wealth, children and land, desiring what is with God in the Hereafter. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. He means the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj and those who followed their example. This is how Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Hasan, Qatadah, and Al-Suddi interpreted it as the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj. For this reason, God, the Exalted, drew attention to the characteristics of the hypocrites so that the believers would not be deceived by their outward appearance, and thus great corruption would occur from not being cautious of them and from believing in their faith while they are disbelievers in reality. This is one of the great prohibitions, to think well of the people of immorality. God, the Exalted, said: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. That is, they say that as a statement without anything else behind it, as God, the Exalted, said: When the hypocrites come to you, they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of God.' And God knows that you are His Messenger. That is, they only say that when they come to you, not in reality. For this reason, they emphasize the testimony with in and the lam of emphasis in its predicate. They confirmed their matter and said: We believe in God and the Last Day. But the matter is not like that, as God denied them in their testimony and in their report regarding their belief in His Almighty saying: And God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars and in His saying: And they are not believers.

God the Almighty said: They deceive God and those who believe meaning that by showing what they show of faith while concealing their disbelief, they believe in their ignorance that they are deceiving God with that, and that this is beneficial to them with Him, and that it may be beneficial to Him as it may be beneficial to some of the believers, as God the Almighty said: "On the Day when God will resurrect them all, they will swear to Him as they swear to you, and they will think that they are on something. Unquestionably, they are the liars." For this reason, He responded to their belief with His statement: They deceive none but themselves, and they perceive not. He said: They are not deceived by their actions, and they are not deceiving anyone but themselves, and they do not perceive this from themselves, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, the hypocrites deceive God, and it is He who deceives them. Some of the reciters read: They deceive none but themselves, and both readings go back to one meaning. Ibn Jarir said: If someone were to say: How can a hypocrite be a deceiver to God and the believers when he does not show with his tongue anything other than what he believes in, except as a precaution? It was said: The Arabs do not refrain from calling someone who gives with his tongue something other than what is in his heart out of fear in order to escape from what he fears a deceiver. Likewise, the hypocrite is called a deceiver of God and the believers by showing what he shows with his tongue out of fear in order to escape from killing, captivity, and immediate punishment, while he is hidden behind something other than what he shows. This is from his action, even if it is a deception of the believers in this immediate world, but he is a deceiver to himself by his action, because he shows to them by his action that he is giving them their wish and giving them a cup of their joy, while he is their source of their ruin, their drinker of the cup of their torment, and the one who makes them taste from God's wrath and painful punishment what they cannot bear. This is his deception of himself, thinking, despite his wrongdoing to them in the matter of their return, that he is doing good to them, as God Almighty said: And they deceive none but themselves, and they perceive [it] not. This is to inform His believing servants that the hypocrites, by their wrongdoing to themselves in angering their Lord against them, disbelieve in them, and their doubt and denial, are not aware or aware, but they persist in their blindness. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ali bin Al-Mubarak informed us in what he wrote to me, Zaid bin Al-Mubarak told us, Muhammad bin Thawr told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding the Almighty's statement, They deceive God, he said: They show that there is no god but God, wanting thereby to protect their blood and their wealth, but in their souls there is something else. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada, "And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. They deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not." Many people describe the hypocrite as: He is submissive in his morals, he speaks the truth with his tongue but denies it with his heart, he contradicts it with his actions, he goes to bed in one state and goes to bed in another, he goes to bed in one state and wakes up in another, and he turns over like a ship, whenever the wind blows it blows with it.

And among the people are those who say, "We believe in God and the Last Day," but they are not believers.

Fath al-Qadir

8- And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. God the Almighty mentioned at the beginning of this Surah the sincere believers, then after them He mentioned the sincere disbelievers, then thirdly He mentioned the hypocrites, who were not from either of the two groups, but rather became a third group because they outwardly agreed with the first group and inwardly agreed with the second group, and despite that they are the people of the lowest level of Hell. The origin of the word nas was deleted from its hamza for ease, and it is from nus which means movement, it is said: nas yanus meaning to move, and it is one of the collective nouns, the plural of insan and insanah in a different form, and the lam that precedes it is for the genus, and min is a partitive, meaning some people, and min is described: meaning some people say. What is meant by the Last Day is the time that does not end, rather it is eternal.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

8. His saying: And among the people is he who says, 'We have believed in God' was revealed about the hypocrites Abdullah bin Ubayy bin Salul, Mu'tab bin Qushair, Jad bin Qais and their companions, as they declared the word of Islam in order to surrender to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions, and they believed otherwise, and most of them were Jews. The people are the plural of person, and they were called that because they were entrusted with a covenant and then forgot, as God Almighty said: And We had already entrusted Adam before, but he forgot 115-Taha. It was said that it was because it appeared from their saying I perceived, meaning I saw, and it was said that it was because they were comforted by it, and by the Last Day, meaning the Day of Resurrection. God Almighty said: And they are not believers, meaning they disobey God.

8- And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day.' When God Almighty began by explaining the state of the Book and proceeded to clarify it, He mentioned the believers who sincerely devoted their religion to God Almighty and whose hearts and tongues agreed upon it, and He repeated their opposites who were pure outwardly and inwardly and did not pay any attention at all, a third with the third division wavering between the two divisions, and they are those who believed with their mouths but their hearts did not believe, completing the division, and they are the most wicked and most hated by God because they are disbelievers and they sincerely believed in it as deception and mockery, and for this reason He prolonged the explanation of their wickedness and made them and mocked them, and ridiculed their actions and recorded their blindness and tyranny, and struck examples for them and revealed about them Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire. Their story, to its end, is connected to the story of the Egyptians.

The root of the word people is anas because they say: insan human, anas people, and anasi people. The hamza was deleted as in luqa and replaced by the definite article. Therefore, the two are rarely combined. And his saying:

Deaths come upon peaceful people

Anomalous. It is a collective noun like men, as it is not proven in the plural forms. It is taken from Anas because they are comforted by their likes. Or Anas because they are visible and seeing, and that is why they were called humans. The jinn were called jinn to avoid them. The lam in it is for the genus, and min is a relative pronoun because there is no covenant, so it is as if he said: And among the people are people who say. Or for the covenant and the covenant: They are those who disbelieved, and min is a relative pronoun intended by it is Ibn Abi and his companions and his peers, for since they were determined to be hypocrites, they entered the count of the disbelievers whose hearts are sealed, and their being distinguished by the additions they added to disbelief does not prevent their entry under this genus, for the genus varies by additions in which their parts differ, so on this basis the verse is a division of the second section.

The specific mention of belief in God and the Last Day is a specification of what is the greatest purpose of belief and a claim that they have passed through belief from both sides and encompassed its two sides, and an indication that they are hypocrites in what they think they are sincere in, so how about what they mean by hypocrisy, because the people were Jews and they believed in God and the Last Day with a belief that is complete belief, because they believed in anthropomorphism and taking sons, and that no one enters Paradise except them, and that the Fire will not touch them except for a few days and other things, and they see the believers as having believed as they have believed. And a statement of the multiplication of their evil and their excess in their disbelief, because what they said, if it had come from them not in a manner of deception and hypocrisy and their belief, would not have been belief, so how about when they said it to deceive the Muslims and mock them. And in the repetition of the letter Baa' is a claim of belief in each one on the basis of originality and solidity.

Saying is uttering something that is beneficial, and it is said in the sense of what is said, and for the meaning imagined in the soul expressed by the word, and for opinion and doctrine metaphorically. What is meant by the Last Day is from the time of gathering until it does not end. Or until the people of Paradise enter Paradise, and the people of Hell enter Hell because it is the last of the limited times.

And they are not believers is a denial of what they claimed and a negation of what they assumed to be proven. Its original form was and they did not believe to match their statement in stating the action without the agent, but it was the opposite of an emphasis or an exaggeration in the denial, because removing themselves from the number of believers is more eloquent than denying faith from them in the past. Therefore, the negation was emphasised with the preposition ba and faith was used to mean that they are not from faith in anything. It is possible that it is restricted by what they were restricted by because it is its answer.

The verse indicates that whoever claims to have faith but his heart contradicts his tongue in belief is not a believer. Because whoever utters the two testimonies of faith while his heart is empty of anything that agrees with them or contradicts them is not a believer. And disagreement with hatred in the second case does not constitute an argument against them.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:9

They deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:9

They deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

They deceive God and those who believe) by showing the opposite of what they concealed of disbelief in order to ward off His worldly rulings from them and they deceive only themselves because the consequences of their deception will return to them, so they will be disgraced in this world by God informing His Prophet of what they concealed, and they will be punished in the Hereafter and they do not perceive they know that their deception is of themselves, and the deception here is from one person like the punishment of the thief, and the mention of God in it is an improvement, and in the reading of what they deceive

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The hypocrite's deception of his Lord and the believers is his showing with his tongue what he says and believes, contrary to what is in his heart of doubt and denial, in order to ward off from himself, by what he shows with his tongue, the judgment of God Almighty that is necessary for someone who is in a similar state of denial, if he did not show with his tongue what he showed of belief and acknowledgment of killing and captivity. That is his deception of his Lord and the people of faith in God.

If someone says: How can a hypocrite be a deceiver to God and the believers, when he does not show with his tongue anything other than what he believes in, except out of dissimulation?

It was said: This does not prevent the Arabs from calling someone who gives with his tongue something other than what is in his heart out of dissimulation in order to escape from what he fears, and thus escapes from what he fears a deceiver of the one from whom he escaped with what he showed him of dissimulation. Likewise the hypocrite is called a deceiver of God and the believers, by showing what he showed with his tongue out of dissimulation, by which he escaped from killing, captivity and immediate punishment, while he is hidden behind something other than what he showed. And that is from his action, even if it is a deception of the believers in this immediate world, he is a deceiver to himself by his action, because he shows to them by his action that he is giving them their wish and giving them a cup of their joy, while he is their source of their ruin, their drink of the cup of their torment, and their vomitor of God's wrath and painful punishment that they cannot bear. This is his deception of himself, thinking that despite his wrongdoing to himself in the matter of his return, he is doing good to him, as God

Almighty said: They deceive only themselves, and they perceive not, informing his believing servants that the hypocrites, by their wrongdoing to themselves in angering their Lord with their disbelief, doubt, and denial, are neither aware nor conscious, but rather they persist in their matter blindly.

In a similar manner to what we said in the interpretation of that, Ibn Zayd used to say.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: I asked Abdul Rahman bin Zaid about the statement of God Almighty: They seek to deceive God and those who believe to the end of the verse. He said: These are the hypocrites. They seek to deceive God and His Messenger and those who believe, that they are believers in what they have shown.

This verse is one of the clearest proofs that God, the Most High, denies those who claim that God does not punish His servants except those who disbelieve in Him out of stubbornness, after knowing His Oneness, and after establishing the truth of what they had been stubborn about in their Lord, the Blessed and Exalted, regarding His Oneness, and acknowledging His Books and Messengers. Because God, the Most High, has informed us about those whom He described as hypocrites, and their deception of Him and the believers, that they do not feel that they are nullifying what they are adhering to of falsehood, and that they are deceived by their deception, by which they think they are deceiving their Lord and the people of faith in Him. Then God, the Most High, informed us that they will have a painful punishment for their denial of what they used to lie about the prophethood of His Prophet, and their belief in disbelief in him, and for what they used to lie about in their claim that they are believers, while they persist in disbelief.

If someone were to say to us: You know that the reciprocal verb can only be from two fa'ls, like when you say: I hit your brother, and I sat with your father, if each one sits with his companion and hits him. But if the action is from one of them, then it is said: I hit your brother, and I sat with your father. So who deceived the hypocrite, so it is permissible to say about him: He deceived God and the believers? It is said: Some of those who are attributed to knowledge of the Arabic language have said: That is a letter that came in this form, I mean yakhada' in the form of yaf'ala, and it has the meaning of yaf'ala, in letters like it that are anomalous in the language of the Arabs, similar to their saying: Qatalaka God, meaning Qatalaka God.

And the statement in this regard is not like what he said, rather it is from the interaction that only occurs from two, like all the known meanings of yaf'al and mafa'al in all the speech of the Arabs. That is: the hypocrite deceives God, the Most High, by lying with his tongue as described above, and God, the Blessed, the Most High, deceives him, by failing him from having good insight into what saves his soul in the Hereafter, as He informed in His statement: "And let not those who disbelieve think that Our granting them respite is better for themselves. We only grant them respite that they may increase in sin" (Al-Imran: 178) and in the meaning that He informed that He will do it in the Hereafter in His statement: "On the Day that the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believed, 'Wait for us that we may borrow some of your light,' it will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' Then a wall will be set up between them having a door, within which is mercy, but outside of it is punishment." (al-Hadid 57:13) So that is similar to all the meanings of speech that come with yaf'al and mafa'al. Some of the grammarians from Basra used to say: The mufa'ala can only be from two things, but it was said: They deceive God in their minds, by thinking that they will not be punished, but they knew otherwise in themselves, by the argument of God, blessed be His name, which is established upon His creation through His knowledge, and they only deceive themselves. He said: And some of them said: And they do not deceive, meaning: They deceive themselves by emptying themselves of it. The mufa'ala can be from one person in many things.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And they deceive none but themselves.

If someone were to say: Did not the hypocrites deceive the believers with what they revealed with their tongues of the truth about themselves, their wealth and their children until their worldly life was safe for them, even though they were deceived in the matter of their afterlife? It would be said: It is a mistake to say that they deceived the believers, because if we say that, we would attribute to them the reality of a deception that was permissible for them to commit against the believers. Just as if we were to say: So-and-so killed so-and-so, we would attribute to him the reality of a killing that he committed against so-and-so. But we say: The hypocrites deceived their Lord and the believers, and they did not deceive them, rather they deceived themselves, as the Most High said, and not others, similar to what you say about a man who killed another, so he killed himself and did not kill his companion: So-and-so fought so-and-so, but he only killed himself, so he is obligated to fight his companion, and it negates his killing of his companion, and it is obligatory for him to kill himself. Likewise, you say: The hypocrite deceived his Lord and the believers, so he only deceived himself. So it is proven that he deceived his Lord and the believers, and it is denied that he deceived anyone other than himself, because the deceiver is the one who was deceived and who actually did it. So the hypocrites only deceived themselves, because whatever wealth and family they had, the Muslims did not own it when they deceived them about it with their hypocrisy, nor before that, so that they could rescue it from them by their deception. Rather, they defended it with their lies and by showing with their tongues something other than what was in their hearts. And God judges for them regarding their wealth, themselves, and children in their outward affairs by the judgment of the religion to which they belong, and God knows what they conceal of their affairs. The deceiver is the one who deceives someone else about something, and the deceived one does not know where the deceiver deceived him. As for the deceiver, he is aware of his companion's deception of him, but he does not seek to deceive him in a way that is reprehensible. Rather, he avoids the one who thinks he is deceiving him, as a means of enticement, so that he may reach a goal in which he has a complete argument against him for the punishment that he will be subjected to, and when he reaches it, he is not aware of his own state when he is being deceived, nor does he know that he is aware of his conscience, and that the one who is deceiving him is not being punished for his crime, so that the deceiver and deceiver may reach the utmost level of deserving the punishment of the one who is deceiving him, due to his many wrongdoings, his long disobedience to him, and the many pardons and forgiveness of the one being deceived, so that he is deceiving himself, without a doubt, rather than the one who thinks he is being deceived. Therefore, God, the Most High, denied that the hypocrite has deceived anyone other than himself, since the characteristic that we have described is his characteristic.

Since the matter is as we have described, that the hypocrite deceives his Lord and the people of faith in him, and that he does not lead by his deception to a true deception except for himself and not others, because of the destruction and ruin that he involves them with his action, then it is necessary that the correct reading be: And they deceive none but themselves rather than and they do not deceive because the word deceiver does not require confirming the deception as true, and the word deceiver requires confirming the deception as true. There is no doubt that the hypocrite has caused the deception of God Almighty for himself by what he has done of deceiving his Lord, His Messenger, and the believers with his hypocrisy, so therefore the correct reading of the one who reads: And they deceive none but themselves is necessary.

Another indication that the reading of those who read: And they do not deceive is more correct than the reading of those who read: And they do not deceive, is that God, may He be glorified and exalted, has informed us about them that they deceive God and the believers at the beginning of the verse. So it is impossible to deny from them what He has established that they have done, because that would be a contradiction in meaning, and that is not permissible from God, may He be glorified and exalted.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And they do not perceive.

What He, the Most High, means by His saying, And they do not perceive, is that they do not know. It is said: So-and-so did not perceive this matter, and he does not perceive it if he does not perceive or know poetry and feeling. The poet said:

They were shot with an arrow and no one noticed.
Then they recovered and said: How wonderful is the clarity.

Meaning by his saying: He did not feel it, no one was aware of it and did not know. So God the Most High informed about al-Munafiqun 63: that they do not feel that God is deceiving them, by giving them leeway and luring them, which is from God the Most High to convey to them the argument and excuse, and from them to themselves, and it is harmful in the hereafter, like what: Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: I asked Ibn Zayd about his saying: And they deceive only themselves and they do not perceive, he said: They do not perceive that they have harmed themselves, by what they concealed of disbelief and hypocrisy. And he recited the saying of God the Most High: The Day God will resurrect them all, he said: They are the hypocrites until he reached and they think that they are upon something (Al-Mujadilah: 18), faith used to benefit them with you.

They deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: They seek to deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not.

Our scholars said: The meaning of they deceive God is that they deceive Him in their own minds and according to their assumptions. It was also said: He said that because their actions are the actions of the deceiver. It was also said: There is an omission in the speech, the meaning being: they deceive the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, according to Al-Hasan and others. And he made their deception of his Messenger a deception of him, because he called them with his message, and likewise if they deceive the believers then they have deceived God. And their deception is what they showed of faith contrary to what they concealed of disbelief, in order to spare their blood and wealth, and they think that they have been saved and deceived, as was said by a group of interpreters. The linguists said: The root of deception in the speech of the Arabs is corruption, as Tha'lab narrated from Abu Al-A'rabi. And he recited:

White in color, delicious in taste, good in saliva if saliva deceives

I said: They deceive God in this, meaning they corrupt their faith and their deeds between themselves and God Almighty through hypocrisy. This is how it was explained from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, as follows. In the Qur'an: They show off to people. It was said: Its origin is concealment, and from it comes the word makhdī' hidden place in which something is kept, as narrated by Ibn Faris and others. The Arabs say: The lizard was deceived in its hole.

The Almighty's saying: And they only deceive themselves is a negation and an affirmation, meaning that the consequences of deception only befall them. And from their saying: He who deceives someone who cannot be deceived is only deceiving himself. And this is correct, because deception is only with someone who does not know the inner meanings, but as for he who knows the inner meanings, then he who engages in deception with him is only deceiving himself. This indicates that the hypocrites did not know God, because if they knew Him, they would have known that He does not deceive. And it was mentioned before that he, peace be upon him, said:

Do not deceive God, for whoever deceives God, God will deceive him and himself, if he perceives. They said: O Messenger of God, how can God be deceived? He said: You know what God has commanded you to do and you seek something other than Him. The explanation of how God deceives will come in His statement: God mocks them. Nafi', Ibn Kathir and Abu Amr read: yukhadhiquun in both places, so that the two words are consistent. Asim, Hamzah, Al-Kisa'i and Ibn Amir read: yukhadhiquun in the second place. The source is khadhi'a with a kasra on the kha and khadi'ah, as narrated by Abu Zaid. Waraq Al-Ajli read: yukhadhiquun God with a damma on the ya', a fatha on the kha' and a shaddah on the dal for emphasis. Abu Talut, Abd Al-Salam Ibn Shaddad and Al-Jarud read with a damma on the ya', a sukoon on the kha' and a fatha on the dal, meaning they only deceive themselves, so the preposition was omitted, as God the Almighty said: And Moses chose his people meaning from his people.

The Almighty said: And they do not perceive meaning they do not realize that the consequences of their deception will come back upon them, so they think that they have escaped with their deception and have succeeded, but that is only in this world. In the Hereafter, it will be said to him, Go back behind you and seek light, as will come. Linguists said: I felt something means I became aware of it, and from this comes the poet for his intelligence, because he becomes aware of strange meanings that others do not. From this comes their saying: I wish I knew, meaning I wish I knew.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Hypocrisy is showing goodness and concealing evil. It has two types: doctrinal, which will keep its owner in Hell forever. And my work is one of the greatest sins, as will be detailed in its place, God willing. This is as Ibn Jurayj said: The hypocrite's words contradict his actions, his secret contradicts his public, his entrance contradicts his exit, and his appearance contradicts his absence. The characteristics of the hypocrites were revealed in the Medinan surahs because there was no hypocrisy in Mecca, rather the opposite of it was among the people who showed disbelief under duress while they were believers inwardly. So when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, migrated to Medina, there were the Ansar from Aws and Khazraj, and in their ignorance they worshipped idols in the manner of the polytheists of the Arabs, and there were the Jews from the People of the Book in it in the manner of their ancestors, and they were three tribes: Banu Qaynuqa', allies of Khazraj, Banu Nadir, and Banu Qurayzah, allies of Aws. So when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina, and those who converted from the Ansar from the tribes of Aws and Khazraj converted to Islam, and few of the Jews converted to Islam except Abdullah ibn Salam, may God be pleased with him, and there was no hypocrisy at that time either, because the Muslims did not yet have a thorn to fear, rather, peace be upon him, Peace be upon the Jews and many tribes of the Arab tribes around Medina. When the Battle of Badr took place and God made His word manifest and Islam and its people were victorious, Abdullah bin Ubayy bin Salul, who was a leader in Medina and was from the Khazraj and was the master of the two sects in the pre-Islamic era, said: They had resolved to make him king over them, but goodness came to them and they converted to Islam and were busy with him, so he remained in his soul from Islam and its people. When the Battle of Badr took place, he said: This is it. God's command has been directed, so he made it clear that he had entered Islam and with him entered sects who were on his path and sect and others from the People of the Book. From there, hypocrisy was found among the people of Medina and the Arabs around it. As for the emigrants, there was not one hypocrite among them because no one emigrated under duress, but rather he emigrated leaving his wealth, children and land, desiring what is with God in the Hereafter. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. He means the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj and those who followed their example. This is how Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Hasan, Qatadah, and Al-Suddi interpreted it as the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj. For this reason, God, the Exalted, drew attention to the characteristics of the hypocrites so that the believers would not be deceived by their outward appearance, and thus great corruption would occur from not being cautious of them and from believing in their faith while they are disbelievers in reality. This is one of the great prohibitions, to think well of the people of immorality. God, the Exalted, said: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. That is, they say that as a statement without anything else behind it, as God, the Exalted, said: When the hypocrites come to you, they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of God.' And God knows that you are His Messenger. That is, they only say that when they come to you, not in reality. For this reason, they emphasize the testimony with in and the lam of emphasis in its predicate. They confirmed their matter and said: We believe in God and the Last Day. But the matter is not like that, as God denied them in their testimony and in their report regarding their belief in His Almighty saying: And God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars and in His saying: And they are not believers.

God the Almighty said: They deceive God and those who believe meaning that by showing what they show of faith while concealing their disbelief, they believe in their ignorance that they are deceiving God with that, and that this is beneficial to them with Him, and that it may be beneficial to Him as it may be beneficial to some of the believers, as God the Almighty said: "On the Day when God will resurrect them all, they will swear to Him as they swear to you, and they will think that they are on something. Unquestionably, they are the liars." For this reason, He responded to their belief with His statement: They deceive none but themselves, and they perceive not. He said: They are not deceived by their actions, and they are not deceiving anyone but themselves, and they do not perceive this from themselves, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, the hypocrites deceive God, and it is He who deceives them. Some of the reciters read: They deceive none but themselves, and both readings go back to one meaning. Ibn Jarir said: If someone were to say: How can a hypocrite be a deceiver to God and the believers when he does not show with his tongue anything other than what he believes in, except as a precaution? It was said: The Arabs do not refrain from calling someone who gives with his tongue something other than what is in his heart out of fear in order to escape from what he fears a deceiver. Likewise, the hypocrite is called a deceiver of God and the believers by showing what he shows with his tongue out of fear in order to escape from killing, captivity, and immediate punishment, while he is hidden behind something other than what he shows. This is from his action, even if it is a deception of the believers in this immediate world, but he is a deceiver to himself by his action, because he shows to them by his action that he is giving them their wish and giving them a cup of their joy, while he is their source of their ruin, their drinker of the cup of their torment, and the one who makes them taste from God's wrath and painful punishment what they cannot bear. This is his deception of himself, thinking, despite his wrongdoing to them in the matter of their return, that he is doing good to them, as God Almighty said: And they deceive none but themselves, and they perceive [it] not. This is to inform His believing servants that the hypocrites, by their wrongdoing to themselves in angering their Lord against them, disbelieve in them, and their doubt and denial, are not aware or aware, but they persist in their blindness. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ali bin Al-Mubarak informed us in what he wrote to me, Zaid bin Al-Mubarak told us, Muhammad bin Thawr told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding the Almighty's statement, They deceive God, he said: They show that there is no god but God, wanting thereby to protect their blood and their wealth, but in their souls there is something else. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada, "And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. They deceive God and those who believe, but they deceive only themselves and perceive [it] not." Many people describe the hypocrite as: He is submissive in his morals, he speaks the truth with his tongue but denies it with his heart, he contradicts it with his actions, he goes to bed in one state and goes to bed in another, he goes to bed in one state and wakes up in another, and he turns over like a ship, whenever the wind blows it blows with it.

Fath al-Qadir

And deception in the original language: corruption, as Tha'lab narrated on the authority of Ibn al-A' rabi, and he recited:

White in color, delicate in taste, good in saliva if saliva deceives

It was said: Its origin is concealment, and from it comes the word makhḍib al-bayt the secret chamber in which something is kept, as narrated by Ibn Faris and others. What is meant by their deception of God is that they acted with Him as deceivers do, even though the All-Knowing, from whom nothing is hidden, is not deceived. The active participle form indicates participation in the origin of the action, so their deceiving God and those who believe indicates that God, the Exalted, and those who believe deceive them. What is meant by deception from God is that when He implemented the rulings of Islam upon them, even though they are not from Him in anything, it is as if He deceived them with that, just as they deceived Him by showing Islam and concealing disbelief, in conformity with what they did with what He did. What is meant by the believers' deception of them is that they implemented upon them what God commanded them of the rulings of Islam outwardly, even though they knew the corruption of their inner selves, just as the hypocrites deceived them by showing Islam and concealing disbelief. The meaning of the Almighty's saying: 9- And they only deceive themselves is to indicate that when they deceived those who cannot be deceived, they were deceiving themselves, because deception is only with those who do not know the inner meanings. As for those who know the inner meanings, and whoever engages in deception with them, he only deceives himself and does not realize that. This is the saying of those who said: Whoever deceives you and you are deceived, you have been deceived. Nafi', Ibn Kathir, and Abu Amr read yukhadhi'un in both places, while Hamzah, Asim, Al-Kisa'i, and Ibn Amir read yukhadhi'un in the second place. What is meant by their deceiving themselves is that they give them false hopes and they do so. Linguists said: I felt something, so I became aware. Al-Kashshaf said: "And feeling is the knowledge of something, sensory knowledge, from the symbol - and the feelings of a person: his senses." The meaning is: that the harm that befalls them is like something that is tangible, and they are, due to their continued heedlessness, like someone who has no sense. What is meant by the souls here are their selves, not the other meanings that are included in the term soul such as the spirit, blood, and heart. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that they are the hypocrites from the Aws and Khazraj and those who followed their example. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud that he said: What is meant by this verse are the hypocrites. Abd al-Razzaq and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Qatadah. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Sirin that he said: There was nothing more frightening to them than this verse: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. Ibn Saad narrated on the authority of Hudhayfah that it was said to him: What is hypocrisy? He said: To speak about Islam but not act upon it. Ahmad ibn Mani' narrated in his Musnad with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of a man from the Companions, "A Muslim said: O Messenger of God, what is salvation tomorrow? He said: Do not deceive God. He said: How do we deceive God? He said: To do what God has commanded you to do, intending something other than Him. So beware of showing off, for it is associating partners with God. For the hypocrite will call out on the Day of Resurrection in front of all creation with four names: O disbeliever, O wicked one, O loser, O traitor. Your work has gone astray and your reward has been nullified, for there is no dispute with God on that day. So seek your reward from the One for whom you were working, O deceiver. And he recited verses from the Qur'an: "So whoever hopes for the meeting with his Lord - let him do righteous work" (al-Baqarah 2:10), and Indeed, the hypocrites deceive God (al-Baqarah 2:10). Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Wahb, who said: I asked Ibn Zayd about His statement: They deceive God and those who believe, he said: These hypocrites deceive God and His Messenger, and those who believe believe in what they show. And about His statement: And they deceive none but themselves, and they perceive not, they harmed themselves with what they concealed of disbelief and hypocrisy. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Jurayj regarding his statement: They deceive God, he said: They show that there is no god but God, wanting to save their blood and money, but in their souls there is something else.

They deceive God means they disobey God. The root of deception in the language is concealment, and from it comes the word makhdaa for the house in which goods are hidden. So the deceiver shows something other than what he conceals. Deception is from God in His saying And He is the One Who deceives them 182-An-Nisaa', meaning He shows them and hastens for them from the bliss in this world something other than what is hidden from them from the torment of the Hereafter. It was said that the root of deception is corruption, meaning they corrupt what they show of faith with what they conceal of disbelief.

And His statement: And He is the One Who deceives them means: He spoils their pleasure in this world with what He will cause them to suffer of the torment of the Hereafter. If it is said, what is the meaning of His statement they deceive God and the mutual action is for participation, and God is far above participation in deception? It is said: The mutual action may be used not for the meaning of participation, like when you say: May God grant you well-being, and I punished so-and-so, and I knocked on the sandal. Al-Hasan said: Its meaning is that they deceive the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as God the Most High said: Indeed, those who annoy God 57-Al-Ahzab, meaning the allies of God. It is said: God mentioned here as a favor, and what is meant by deception are those who believe, as God the Most High said: Then for God is a fifth of it, and for the Messenger 41- Al-Anfal. It is said that its meaning is that they do in the religion of God what is deception in their religion. And those who believe means and they deceive the believers by saying when they see them that they believe, while they are not believers. And they do not deceive Ibn Kathir, Nafi', and Abu Amr read and they do not deceive as the first letter and made it from the mutual action that is specific to one. The rest read: And they do not deceive according to the original.

Except themselves because the consequences of their deception will return to them, because God Almighty will inform His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, of their hypocrisy, and they will be disgraced in this world and deserve punishment in the Hereafter. And they do not perceive meaning they do not know that they are deceiving themselves and that the consequences of their deception will return to them.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

9- They deceive God and those who believe.

Deception is to make others think something other than what you are hiding of the disliked thing in order to make them come down from what they are in, and from what they are about to do, as they say: The lizard deceived. When it hid in its hole, and the lizard is deceitful and deceived if it made the guard think it was approaching him, then it came out from another door. Its origin is concealment, and from it is the word makhdaa for the treasury, and the two khdaa'an for two hidden veins in the neck, and deception is between two people. Their deception with God is not as it appears because nothing is hidden from Him, and because they did not intend to deceive. Rather, what is meant is either deceiving His Messenger by deleting the added word, or that treating the Messenger is treating God in that he is His successor, as God the Almighty said: Whoever obeys the Messenger has obeyed God. "Indeed, those who pledge allegiance to you are only pledging allegiance to God." Either the image of their actions with God, the Most High, of showing faith and concealing disbelief, and God's actions with them by applying the rulings of Muslims to them, while they are in His eyes the most evil of disbelievers and the people of the lowest level of Hell, as a means of enticement and the obedience of the Messenger (may God's peace and blessings be upon him) and the believers to God's command to conceal their condition and apply the ruling of Islam to them as a punishment for their actions, is the image of the deceivers. It is possible that what is meant by they deceive is they deceive because it is a statement to say, or a punishment for them with their actions, is the image of the actions of the deceivers. It is possible that what is meant by they deceive is they deceive because it is a statement to say, or a resumption by mentioning what is the purpose of it, except that it was brought out in the form of fa'il for exaggeration, because the form is for exaggeration and the action, when it is overcome in it, is more eloquent than if it came without a corresponding opponent and a rival, it is accompanied by that, and this is supported by the reading of those who read they deceive. Their purpose in doing so was to protect themselves from the infidels who were attacking them, and to treat them as believers were treated in terms of honor and giving, and to mix with Muslims so that they could learn their secrets and divulge them to their opponents, among other purposes and goals.

They only deceive themselves. This is the reading of Nafi', Ibn Kathir, and Abu Amr. The meaning is that the circle of deception returns to them and its harm surrounds them. Or that they deceived themselves when they tempted themselves with that. And their souls deceived them when they told them empty hopes and led them to deceive the One from whom nothing is hidden.

The rest read and they do not deceive, because deception is only conceivable between two people. It was also read and they deceive from deceive, and they deceive means they are deceived, and they deceive and they deceive are in the passive form, and they are in the accusative case by removing the preposition, and the soul is the essence of the thing and its reality, then it was said of the spirit because the soul of the living is in it, and of the heart because it is the location of the soul or its relation, and of the blood because its existence is in it, and of water because of its great need for it, and of the opinion in their saying so-and-so orders his soul because it emanates from it or resembles a self that orders and advises him. What is meant here is their selves, and it is possible to carry it to their spirits and opinions.

And they do not perceive they do not do so because of their continued negligence. The consequences of deception and the return of its harm to them appear to them as something perceptible that is not hidden except from those who have weak senses. Feeling: sensation, and a person's feelings are his senses, and its origin is poetry, from which comes the slogan.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:10

In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:10

In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

In their hearts is a disease) doubt and hypocrisy, so it makes their hearts sick, i.e. weakens them. So God has increased their disease with what He revealed of the Qur'an due to their disbelief in it. And for them is a painful punishment painful because they used to deny with emphasis, i.e. the Prophet of God, and with emphasis, i.e. their saying, We believe.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The root of disease is illness, and it is also said about bodies and religions. So God, the Most High, informed us that there is a disease in the hearts of the hypocrites, and what He, the Blessed and Most High, meant by His report about the disease of their hearts is the report about the disease of belief in their hearts. However, since it is known by the report about the disease of the heart that it means the disease of belief in which they believe, the report dispensed with the heart in that regard, and it is sufficient to state the report about their consciences and beliefs explicitly, as Omar bin Luja said:

The city swam, do not blame it, it saw the moon in their market during the day

He means: And the people of the city glorified God, so he dispensed with the hearers' knowledge of his report about the city, rather than the report about its people. And similar to it is the saying of Antarah ibn Shaddad:

Why don't you ask the horses, O daughter of Malik, if you are ignorant of what you do not know?

He means: Why don't you ask the owners of the horses? And from this is their saying: O horses of God, ride, meaning: O owners of the horses of God, ride. And the evidence for that is more than can be counted in a book, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for whoever is guided to understand it. Likewise, the meaning of the statement of God, the Most High: In their hearts is disease only means: In the belief in their hearts that they believe in the religion, and belief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from God - disease and illness. So he sufficed with the indication of the report about their hearts in its meaning, instead of the explicit statement of the report about their belief.

The disease that God Almighty mentioned is in the belief in their hearts that we have described: it is their doubt about the matter of Muhammad and what he brought from God, and their confusion about it, so they are neither certain of it with the certainty of faith, nor do they deny it with the denial of polytheism, but rather, as God Almighty described them, they waver between that, neither with these nor with those, as it is said: So-and-so is sick about this matter, meaning his resolve weakens and his vision regarding it is not correct.

And like what we said in the interpretation of that, the interpretation of it was made clear by the commentators.

Mention of those who said that: Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: In their hearts is a disease, meaning doubt.

Al-Munjab narrated: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Illness is hypocrisy.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: In their hearts is disease, meaning: in their hearts is doubt.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid said, regarding His statement: In their hearts is disease, he said: This is a disease in those, and not a disease in the bodies. He said: And they are the hypocrites.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Suwaid bin Nasr told us: Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement, In their hearts is disease, he said: In their hearts is doubt and suspicion regarding the matter of God, may His praise be glorified.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas: In their hearts is a disease. He said: These are the people of hypocrisy, and the disease in their hearts is doubt in the matter of God Almighty.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd said: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' until he reached in their hearts is a disease. He said: The disease is the doubt that entered them regarding Islam.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: So God increased their disease.

We have previously demonstrated that the interpretation of the disease that God Almighty described as being in the hearts of the hypocrites is doubt in the beliefs of their hearts and their religions, and what they are upon regarding the matter of Muhammad, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the matter of his prophethood and what he brought and what they are establishing.

The disease that God, the Most High, spoke about, increased their disease, similar to what was in their hearts of doubt and confusion before the increase. So God increased them with what He introduced of His limits and obligations that were not imposed before the increase that the hypocrites increased of doubt and confusion, as they doubted and were suspicious of what He introduced for them from that to the disease and doubt that was in their hearts in the past, of His limits and obligations that He imposed before that. Just as He increased the believers in Him to their faith that they had before that, with what He introduced for them of the obligations and limits when they believed in Him, to their faith in the previous limits and obligations of His faith. Like what God, the Most High, said in His revelation: "And when a surah is revealed, some of them say, 'Which of you has this increased in faith?' As for those who believe, it increases them in faith, and they rejoice. But as for those in whose hearts is disease, it increases them defilement upon their defilement, and they die while they are disbelievers." (al-Tawbah 9:124-125) The increase that the hypocrites added from filth to their filth is what we have described. And what the believers added to their faith is what we have explained. And that is the interpretation agreed upon.

Some of the people of interpretation who said that mentioned: Ibn Hamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad.

Mawla Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: So God increased their disease. He said: He complained.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: So God increased their sickness, meaning: So God increased their doubt and suspicion.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Suwaid bin Nasr told us: Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: So God increased their disease, meaning: So God increased their doubt and suspicion in God's matter.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said, regarding the statement of God: In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease, he said: He has increased their filth, and he recited the statement of God Almighty: "As for those who believe, it has increased their faith, and they rejoice. But as for those in whose hearts is disease, it has increased their filth upon their filth" (al-Tawbah 9:124-125), he said: Evil upon their evil, and misguidance upon their misguidance.

And it was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi': So God increased their sickness, he said: God increased their complaint.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And for them is a painful punishment.

Abu Jaafar said: Al-Alim is the painful. Its meaning is: And for them is a painful punishment. By changing the word painful to painful, just as it is said: a painful strike meaning painful. And God is the Creator of the heavens and the earth, meaning the Originator. And from this is the saying of Amr ibn Ma'dikarib Al-Zubaidi:

The security of Rayhana, the All-Hearing Supplicant, keeps me awake and my companions awake

Meaning the one who hears. And from it is the saying of Dhu al-Rumma:

And from their chests rise the shamdalat, whose faces reflect a painful glow.

It is narrated that it is pronounced as Yasik, and that alim is an attribute of the torment, as if he said: And for them is a painful torment. It is taken from alam, and alam means pain. As: Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', he said: Alim means painful.

Yaqub told us, he said: Hisham told us, he said: Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, he said: The painful, the hurtful.

And it was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, regarding His statement, painful, he said: It is the painful torment. And everything in the Qur'an that is derived from the word painful is painful.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Because they used to lie.

The reading of this differed. Some of them read it: because they used to lie, with a light dhal and a fatha on the ya', which is the reading most recited by the people of Kufa. Others read it: they lie, with a damma on the ya' and a shaddah on the dhal, which is the reading most recited by the people of Medina, Hijaz, and Basra.

It is as if those who read this, with emphasis on the dhal and a damma on the ya, saw that God, may He be glorified and praised, only made painful punishment obligatory for the hypocrites because they denied His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and that lying, if not for denial, would not necessitate a slight punishment for anyone, so how about a painful one?

The matter in this regard is not like what they said.

In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie.

That is: God the Almighty informed about the hypocrites at the beginning of the report about them in this Surah, that they lie by claiming to believe, and showing that with their tongues, deceiving God the Almighty, His Messenger, and the believers, so He said: "And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. They deceive God and those who believe" with that from what they say, while they conceal doubt and suspicion, and they deceive with their actions no one but themselves not the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the believers? And they do not perceive the place of their deception of themselves, and God the Almighty's luring them by dictating to them, in their hearts the doubt and suspicion of hypocrisy, and God increased their doubt and suspicion because they lied about God, His Messenger, and the believers with their tongues, We believe in God and the Last Day, while they are liars in their saying that, because they conceal doubt and illness in the beliefs of their hearts regarding the matter of God and the matter of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. It is more appropriate in the wisdom of God, the Most High, that He threaten them with what He began the report with of their ugly actions and reprehensible morals, rather than what He did not mention of their actions. This is because all the verses of His revelation were revealed with that, which is: to begin mentioning the good deeds of a people, then to conclude that with a promise for what He began mentioning of their actions, and to begin mentioning the bad deeds of others, then to conclude that with a threat for what He began mentioning of their actions. Likewise, the correct statement regarding the verses in which He began mentioning some of the bad deeds of the hypocrites is to conclude that with a threat for what He began mentioning of their bad deeds. This is this, with the other verse indicating the correctness of what we said, and its testimony that what is required of reading is what we chose, and that the correct interpretation is what we interpreted, that God's threat to the hypocrites in this verse is painful punishment for the lie that includes the meaning of doubt and denial, and that is the saying of God Almighty: "When the hypocrites come to you, they say, 'We bear witness that you are the Messenger of God.' And God knows that you are His Messenger, and God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars. They have taken their oaths as a shield and averted [people] from the way of God. Indeed, evil is that which they have been doing." (al-Munafiqun 63:1-2). And the other verse in Al-Mujadilah: "They have taken their oaths as a shield and averted [people] from the way of God. So for them is a humiliating punishment." (Al-Mujadilah: 16). So God Almighty informed that the hypocrites, by saying what they said to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, while believing in him what they believed, are liars. Then God Almighty informed that the humiliating punishment is for them, for that of their lie. If the correct reading was as the reciters of Surat Al-Baqarah read: And for them is a painful punishment because they used to lie, then the reading in the other surah would have been: And God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars, so that the threat to them that follows that would be a threat for denial, not for lying. And the consensus of the Muslims is that the correct reading in His statement: And God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars means lying, and that God's threat to the hypocrites in it of painful punishment for their lying is the clearest evidence that the correct reading in Surat Al-Baqarah is: because they used to lie, meaning lying, and that the threat from God Almighty mentioned to the hypocrites in it for lying is true, not for lying, for which there was no mention similar to that in Surat Al-Munafiqun.

Some grammarians of Basra claimed that in the statement of God, the Blessed, the Named, Because they used to lie, is a noun of the verbal noun, just as an and fa' are nouns of the verbal noun in your statement, I love that you come to me, and that the meaning is because of their lie and their denial. He said: And he introduced 'kan' to inform that it was in the past, just as one says, How good it was Abdullah," so you are amazed by Abdullah, not by his being, but rather the amazement is in the wording of his being. Some grammarians of Kufa denied that from his statement and considered it wrong, and said: Kan was omitted in amazement because the verb preceded it, so it is as if he said, "Hasan was Zayd, and Hasan was Zayd nullifies kan, and it works with the nouns and attributes that are in the words of the nouns, if they come before kan, and kan" comes between them and the nouns. As for the reason for nullifying it if it is nullified in this case, it is because of the similarity of the attributes and nouns to fa' and yaf'al, in which the action of kan does not appear. Do you not see that you say, "Yaqoom kan Zayd, and the action of kan does not appear in Yaqoom, and likewise Qa'am kan Zayd." Therefore, he invalidated its function with the agent, as in the example of fa'al and yaf'al, and it sometimes worked with the agent because it is a noun, as it works with nouns. However, if it comes before the nouns and verbs, and the noun and verb come after it, then he made a mistake in his opinion that kāna would be invalid. Therefore, he rejected the statement of al-Basri that we have mentioned, and interpreted the statement of God Almighty, because they used to lie, as meaning: that which they lied about.

God Almighty says: "In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie."

God the Almighty says: In their hearts is disease is a subject and predicate. Disease is a metaphor for the corruption in their beliefs. This could be doubt and hypocrisy, or denial and falsification. The meaning is: Their hearts are diseased due to their lack of protection, guidance, care and support. Ibn Faris, the linguist, said: Disease is everything that takes a person outside the bounds of health, whether due to an illness, hypocrisy or negligence in a matter. The reciters agree on opening the ra of disease, except for what Al-Asma'i narrated on the authority of Abu Amr, who said that he closed the ra.

The Almighty's saying: So God increased their disease. It was said: It is a supplication against them. The meaning of the statement is: God increased their doubt and hypocrisy as a punishment for their disbelief, and their weakness in defending themselves and their inability to be able, as the poet said:

O sender of the wind south and north, when Zaid becomes angry, increase its anger.

That is, do not guide her to victory in what she is angry about. Based on this, the verse is evidence of the permissibility of supplicating against the hypocrites and expelling them, because they are the worst of God's creation. It was said: It is a statement from God the Most High about the increase in their illness, meaning that God increased their illness to their illness, as He said in another verse: So God increased their filth to their filth. The masters of meanings said: In their hearts is a disease meaning because of their indifference to the world and their love for it and their neglect of the Hereafter and their turning away from it. And His statement: So God increased their disease means that He left them to themselves, and gathered upon them the concerns of the world, so they did not devote themselves to caring about religion. And for them is a painful punishment because it destroys what remains. Al-Junayd said: The illness of the hearts is from following desires, just as the illness of the limbs is from the illness of the body.

God Almighty says: And for them is a painful punishment. Painful in the speech of the Arabs means painful, like the All-Hearing means the One Who hears. Dhu al-Rummah said, describing camels:

We raise from the chests of the Shamradals, whose faces are covered with a painful glow

And to cause pain. And to cause pain: to hurt. And pain: to ache. And to suffer pain: to be in pain. And the plural of pain is pain like kareem and karamaa, and pain like ashraaf.

The Almighty's saying: Because they used to lie is a source of ma, meaning because they lied about the messengers and rejected God Almighty and denied His signs. This was said by Abu Hatim. Asim, Hamza and Al-Kisa'i read it with a light ma, and its meaning is because they lied and said we believe while they were not believers.

Question: Scholars differed regarding the Prophet's, may God bless him and grant him peace, refraining from killing the hypocrites despite his knowledge of their hypocrisy, with four opinions:

The first statement: Some scholars said: He did not kill them because no one knew their condition except him. The scholars agreed that a judge does not kill based on his knowledge, but they differed on other rulings. Ibn al-Arabi said: This is invalid, because al-Mujadar ibn Ziyad killed al-Harith ibn Suwayd ibn al-Samit, because al-Mujadar killed his father Suwayd on the day of Bu'ath, then al-Harith converted to Islam and took him by surprise on the day of Uhud, so he killed him. Gabriel informed the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, so he killed him, because his killing was a treachery, and a treachery killing is one of the limits set by God.

I said: This is an oversight on the part of this Imam, because if the aforementioned consensus is proven, it is not invalidated by what was mentioned, because consensus is not established or proven except after the death of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the cessation of revelation. Based on this, this is a case in a specific case of revelation, so it cannot be used as evidence or it is abrogated by consensus. And God knows best.

The second statement: The followers of Al-Shafi'i said: He did not kill them because the zindiq, who is the one who conceals disbelief but shows faith, is given the opportunity to repent but is not killed. Ibn Al-Arabi said: This is a mistake, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, did not give them the opportunity to repent, and no one reported that, and no one says that giving the zindiq the opportunity to repent is obligatory, and the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, turned away from them despite his knowledge of them. This later follower of Al-Shafi'i's who said that giving the zindiq the opportunity to repent is permissible said something that no one has confirmed.

The third statement: He did not kill them for the sake of bringing hearts together against him so that they would not be alienated from him. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, indicated this meaning by saying to Omar:

God forbid that people should say that I kill my companions. Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. He used to give to those whose hearts were to be reconciled, knowing that they had bad beliefs, in order to reconcile them. This is the opinion of our scholars and others. Ibn Atiyyah said: This is the method of the companions of Malik, may God have mercy on him, in refraining from the hypocrites from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Muhammad ibn al-Jahm, Qadi Ismail, Al-Abhari, and Ibn al-Majishun stated this explicitly. They cited as evidence the words of God, the Most High: If the hypocrites and those in whose hearts is disease do not desist until His words: and are killed with a severe killing. Qatadah said: Its meaning is if they openly declare hypocrisy. Malik, may God have mercy on him, said: Hypocrisy during the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, is the heresy among us today. The heretic is killed if he testifies against him without being asked to repent. This is one of the two opinions of Al-Shafi'i. Malik said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, refrained from the hypocrites to show his nation that the ruler does not rule based on his knowledge, since he did not testify against the hypocrites. Judge Ismail said: No one testified against Abdullah bin Ubay except Zaid bin Arqam alone, and no one testified against Al-Jalas bin Suwaid except Umair bin Saad Rabiba. If two men testified against one of them regarding his heresy and hypocrisy, he would have been killed. Al-Shafi'i, may God have mercy on him, said, supporting the other opinion: The

In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie.

Sunnah regarding someone who is testified against for heresy and he denies it and declares his faith and disavows every religion except Islam is that this prevents his blood from being shed. The People of Opinion, Ahmad, Al-Tabari and others said the same. Al-Shafi'i and his companions said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, only forbade the killing of the hypocrites who were outwardly Muslim despite the knowledge of their hypocrisy, because what they show nullifies what came before it. Al-Tabari said: God, the Most High, made the rulings between His servants based on what is apparent, and He took charge of ruling in their secrets, not any of His creation. No one has the right to rule contrary to what is apparent, because he ruled based on suspicions. If that had been the case for anyone, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would have been more deserving of it. He ruled for the hypocrites according to what they showed of Islam, and He entrusted their secrets to God. And God has proven their outward appearance false in His statement: And God bears witness that the hypocrites are liars. Ibn Atiyah said: The Malikis separate themselves from what they have committed from this verse in that it did not specify their persons in it, but rather it came in it as a rebuke to everyone who is accused of hypocrisy, and it remains for each one of them to say: I did not mean it, and I am only a believer, and if he specified someone, his lie would not be necessary at all.

I said: This separation is questionable, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, knew them, or many of them, by their names and identities through God Almighty informing him, and Hudhayfah knew that through the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, informing him, to the point that Umar, may God be pleased with him, would say about him: O Hudhayfah, am I one of them? He would say to him: No.

The fourth statement: That God Almighty had preserved the companions of His Prophet, peace be upon him, by making them steadfast so that the hypocrites would not corrupt them or corrupt their religion, so there was no harm in keeping them alive. This is not the case today, because we are not safe from the heretics corrupting our common people and our ignorant ones.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, regarding this verse, In their hearts is a disease, he said, doubt, so God increased their disease, he said, doubt. Ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, In their hearts is a disease, he said, doubt. And Mujahid, Ikrimah, Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Qatadah said the same. And on the authority of Ikrimah and Tawus, In their hearts is a disease, meaning hypocrisy. And Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, In their hearts is a disease, he said, hypocrisy, so God increased their disease, he said, disease. This is like the first. Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: There is a disease in their hearts. He said: This is a disease in religion, not a disease in their bodies. They are the hypocrites. The disease is the doubt that entered them in Islam, so God increased their disease. He said: It increased their filth. He recited: "As for those who believed, it increased their faith, and they rejoiced. But as for those in whose hearts is disease, it increased their filth upon their filth." He said: Evil to their evil and misguidance to their misguidance. What Abd al-Rahman, may God have mercy on him, said is good, and the reward is of the same kind as the work. The first ones said the same, and it is similar to the Almighty's saying: And those who are guided - He increases them in guidance and gives them their righteousness. And His saying: Because they used to lie. It was read: They lie. They were described by this and that, for they were liars and lied about the unseen, combining this and that. Al-Qurtubi and other commentators were asked about the wisdom of his, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, refraining from killing the hypocrites despite his knowledge of the identities of some of them, and they mentioned answers to that, including what was proven in the two Sahihs that he, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, said to Umar, may God be pleased with him, I hate for the Arabs to say that Muhammad kills his companions. The meaning of this is fear that because of that, many of the Arabs would change their minds about entering Islam and they would not know the wisdom of his killing them, and that his killing them was only for disbelief, for they would only accept it as soon as it appeared to them, so they would say: Muhammad kills his companions." Al-Qurtubi said: This is the saying of our scholars and others, as he used to give to the authors with His knowledge of their bad belief. Ibn Atiyyah said: This is the method of the companions of Malik, as stated by Muhammad ibn al-Jahm, Judge Ismail, al-Abhari, and Ibn al-Majishun. Among them: What Malik said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, refrained from killing the hypocrites to show his nation that the ruler does not rule based on his knowledge. Al-Qurtubi said: The scholars have agreed, one and all, that the judge does not kill based on his knowledge, even though they differed on other rulings. He said: Among them is what al-Shafi'i said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, only forbade the killing of the hypocrites because they were showing Islam, knowing that they were hypocrites, because what they showed nullifies what came before it. This is supported by his saying, peace and blessings be upon him, in the hadith agreed upon as authentic in the two Sahihs and others: "I have been commanded to fight the people until they say, 'There is no god but God.' If they say it, their blood and their wealth are protected from me, except for a right, and their reckoning is with God, the Almighty and Majestic.” The meaning of this is that whoever says it, the rulings of Islam will be applied to him outwardly. If he believes it, he will find the reward for that in the Hereafter. If he does not believe it, the ruling will not benefit him in this world. He was mixed with the people of faith. They will call out to them, 'Were we not with you?' They will say, 'Yes, but you tempted yourselves and waited and doubted, and false desires deceived you until the command of God came.' The verse. They will mix with them in some of the place of assembly. When the rightful judgment comes true, they will be distinguished from them and will stay behind them. And they will be prevented from what they desire. They will not be able to prostrate with them, as stated in the hadiths, including what some of them said, that he did not kill them because he did not fear their evil, despite his presence, peace and blessings be upon him, among them, reciting to them clear verses. As for after him, they will be killed. If they show hypocrisy and the Muslims know about it, Malik said: The hypocrite during the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, is the heretic today. I said The scholars have differed about killing the heretic if he shows disbelief. Should he be given a chance to repent or not, or should a distinction be made between whether he is a preacher or not, or whether his apostasy is repeated or not, or whether his conversion to Islam and his return is of his own accord or after it has become apparent to him? There are multiple opinions, the place for their expansion, confirmation and attribution is the Book of Rulings.

Note The statement of the one who said that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, knew the notables of some of the hypocrites is based on the hadith of Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman in naming those fourteen hypocrites in the Battle of Tabuk who intended to kill the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the darkness of the night at a pass there. They resolved to frighten the she-camel with him so that he would fall off it, so God revealed their command to him, and Hudhayfah was informed of that. Perhaps the reason for refraining from killing them was due to one of these sources or another, and God knows best.

As for others, God the Almighty said: “And among those around you are hypocrites and among the people of Madinah are those who persist in hypocrisy. You do not know them. We know them.” The verse. God the Almighty also said: “If the hypocrites and those in whose hearts is disease and the agitators in Madinah do not desist, We will surely incite you against them; then they will not remain your neighbors therein except for a little while. Cursed are they. Wherever they are found, they will be seized and killed with a grievous slaughter.” This is evidence that he was not intrigued by them and did not recognize them personally, but rather their characteristics were mentioned to him and he would perceive them in some of them, as God the Almighty said: And if We willed, We could show them to you, and you would know them by their mark, and you would know them by the tone of their speech. The most famous of them for hypocrisy was Abdullah ibn Ubayy ibn Salul, and Zayd ibn Arqam testified against him with the words that were previously mentioned in the characteristics of the hypocrites. Despite this, when the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) died and witnessed his burial as he did with the rest of the Muslims, Umar ibn al-Khattab may God be pleased with him rebuked him for it, saying: I hate for the Arabs to say that Muhammad kills his companions. In a narration in Sahih, I was given a choice and I chose. In another narration, “If I knew that if I increased it to seventy, he would be forgiven, I would have increased it.”

Illness: Anything that takes a person out of the bounds of health, such as illness, spending, or negligence in a matter. Ibn Faris said that it is pain. According to this, it is borrowed from the corruption in their beliefs, either doubt and hypocrisy, or denial and falsification. The report is presented to indicate that the illness is specific to them, exaggerating the attachment of this disease to those hearts due to their intense envy and extreme enmity. What is meant by his saying: 10- “So God increased their illness” is to inform them that they are like that due to the blessings that are renewed for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the worldly and religious blessings that are repeated for him. It is possible that it is a supplication against them for increased doubt, recurring regret, and extreme hypocrisy. The painful and painful: meaning the painful, and what is in His statement: “because they used to lie” is a source: meaning because of their denial, which is their statement: “We believe in God and the Last Day, but they are not believers.” The reciters are unanimous in opening the ra' of His statement: disease, except for what Al-Asma'i narrated from Abu Amr that he read with a sukoon on the ra', and Hamza, Asim, and Al-Kisa'i read “they lie” with a light pronunciation, and the rest with a heavy pronunciation. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding His statement: “In their hearts is a disease,” he said: doubt, “So God increased their disease,” he said: doubt. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from him regarding His statement: “In their hearts is a disease,” he said: hypocrisy, “And for them is a painful punishment,” he said: a painful punishment, “because they used to lie,” he said: they change and distort. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Mas'ud the same as Ibn Abbas said at first. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas, he said: Everything in the Qur'an that is painful is the painful. He also narrated from Abu Al-'Aliyah the same. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ad-Dahhak the same. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada, In their hearts is a disease, meaning doubt and suspicion about the matter of God. So God has increased their disease, doubt and suspicion. And for them is a painful punishment because they used to lie. He said: Beware of lying, for it is the door to hypocrisy. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Zayd, who said: This is a disease in the religion, not a disease in the bodies, and they are the hypocrites. The disease is the doubt that entered Islam. It was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah and Tawus that the disease is showing off.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:10

In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease. And for them is a painful punishment because they [habitually] used to lie.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

10. "In their hearts is a disease." Doubt and hypocrisy. The root of disease is weakness. Doubt in religion is called a disease because it weakens religion just as disease weakens the body.

"So God increased their disease" because the verses were revealed one after the other, verse after verse, whenever they disbelieved in a verse they increased in disbelief and hypocrisy and that is the meaning of the Almighty's saying: "And as for those in whose hearts is disease, it will increase their disease upon their disease" 125-At-Tawbah. Ibn Amir and Hamza read "So God increased them with imala and Hamza added imala to the word Zaad wherever it occurred and Zagha and Khaba and Taaba and Haqq and Daq" and the others do not incline it with it. "And for them is a painful punishment painful whose pain reaches their hearts because they used to lie" what is for the source meaning because of their lie towards God and His Messenger in secret. The Kufians read "Yakdhibun with a lightened meaning because of their lie when they said we believe while they are not believers." 10- In their hearts is disease, so God has increased their disease." Disease is a reality that affects the body, taking it out of its normal moderation and causing imbalance in its actions. It is a metaphor for psychological symptoms that impair its perfection, such as ignorance, bad faith, envy, malice, and the love of sins, because they prevent one from attaining virtues, or lead to the disappearance of true, eternal life. The noble verse addresses them both, for their hearts were pained by deviation from what they had missed of leadership, and envy of what they saw of the steadfastness of the matter of the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the elevation of his status day by day. God increased their grief by what He increased in the elevation of his matter and the praise of his mention, and their souls were described as disbelief, bad faith, and hostility to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the like, so God, the Most High, increased that naturally. Or by increasing the costs, repeating the revelation, and doubling the victory. The increase was attributed to God Almighty in that it is caused by His action, and it was attributed to the surah in His Almighty's saying, So it increased them in filth, because it is a cause.

It is possible that what is meant by the disease is the cowardice and weakness that entered their hearts when they saw the thorns of the Muslims and God Almighty's support for them with angels, and the casting of terror into their hearts and its increase and weakening with what increased for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, victory over the enemies and ease in the country.

And for them is a painful punishment. That is, pain, so it is painful, like pain, so it is painful. It is used to describe the punishment for emphasis, as in His saying:

Greetings between them are painful

As they say: very, very old.

"Because they used to lie Asim, Hamza and Al-Kisa'i read it, and the meaning is because of their lie, or because of it as a reward for them, which is their saying, We believe. The rest read they lie, from the word lie" because they used to lie about the Messenger, peace and blessings be upon him, in their hearts, and when they were alone with their devils. Or from the word "lie which is for exaggeration or multiplication, like between something and the animals die. Or from the word lie" of a wild animal when it runs a distance and stops to look at what is behind it, because the hypocrite is confused and hesitant. Lying is reporting something in a way that is contrary to what it is. It is all forbidden because it is used to justify deserving punishment, as it was arranged for it. And what was narrated that Ibrahim, peace and blessings be upon him, lied three times, the intended meaning is an insinuation. But because it resembles lying in its form, it was called that.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:11

And when it is said to them, "Do not cause corruption on the earth", they say, "We are only reformers".

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when it is said to them (i.e. to these people) Do not cause corruption on the earth by disbelief and hindering faith they say, We are only reformers and what we are in is not corruption.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

The interpreters differed in their interpretation of this verse: It was narrated on the authority of Salman al-Farsi that he used to say: These people have not come yet.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Ali told us: Al-A'mash told us: I heard Al-Munhal bin Amr narrating, on the authority of Ibad bin Abdullah, on the authority of Salman, who said: These people did not come after, those who And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.'

Ahmad bin Othman bin Hakim told me: Abd al-Rahman bin Sharik told us: My father told us: Al-A'mash told me, on the authority of Zaid bin Wahb and others, on the authority of Salman, that he said regarding this verse: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' He said: These people have not come yet.

Others said: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers,' they are the hypocrites. As for Do not cause corruption on the earth, corruption is disbelief and committing sins.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi': And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' He said: So their corruption was disobedience to God, may He be glorified, because whoever disobeys God on the earth or orders disobedience to Him has corrupted the earth, because reforming the earth and the heavens is through obedience.

The first of the two interpretations of the verse is the interpretation of those who said: The statement of God, Blessed be His Name: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers,' was revealed about the hypocrites who were at the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, even though it is meant for all the hypocrites who were like them after them until the Day of Resurrection.

It may be possible that Salman's statement when reciting this verse: These have not come yet means that he said it after the demise of those who had this description during the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as report from him about those who came from them after them and who have not yet come, not that he meant that no one with this description had passed away.

We said that the more correct of the two interpretations of the verse is what we have mentioned, because of the consensus of the jurists among the people of interpretation that this is a description of the hypocrites who were among the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, during the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and that these verses were revealed about them. The interpretation agreed upon is more correct in interpreting the Qur'an than a statement whose authenticity is not proven by any source or analogue.

Corruption on earth means doing what God, the Most High, has forbidden, and neglecting what God has commanded to be preserved. This is the sum total of corruption, as God, the Most High, said in His Book, informing us of what His angels said: They said, 'Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?' (al-Baqarah 2:30). They meant by that: Will You place therein one who will disobey You and oppose Your command? Likewise, the description of the hypocrites is: they cause corruption on earth by disobeying their Lord therein, and by doing what He has forbidden them to do, and by neglecting His obligations, and by doubting the religion of God, which does not accept any action from anyone except by believing in it and being certain of its truth, and by belying the believers with their claim that they are not established upon, of doubt and suspicion, and by supporting the people who deny God, His Books, and His Messengers against the friends of God, if they find a way to do so. This is the corruption of the hypocrites on God's earth, and they think that by doing so they are reforming it. God, the Most High, did not drop His punishment from them, nor did He lighten for them the painful punishment He had prepared for those who disobeyed Him, because they thought that they were reformers in their disobedience to God. Rather, He made obligatory for them the lowest level of His Hellfire, the most painful of His torments, and the immediate disgrace because of God's cursing and insulting them. God, the Most High, said: Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not. (al-Baqarah 2:12). This is from the ruling of God, the Most High, regarding them. The clearest evidence of His denial of the statement of those who say that God's punishments are only deserved by those who defy their Lord in what is obligatory upon them of His rights and obligations, after his knowledge and the proof established against him by his knowledge of that being obligatory upon him.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: They said, 'We are only reformers.'

The interpretation of this is like that which Ibn Abbas said, who said: Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah bin al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, his statement: We are only reformers, meaning they said: We only want to reform between the two groups of believers and the People of the Book. And others disagreed with him on this.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' he said: If they commit a sin against God and it is said to them, Do not do such and such, they say, We are only on the right path, reformers.

Abu Ja'far said: Which of the two matters was theirs in that, I mean in their claim that they were reformers, for there is no doubt that they thought that in what they did of that they were reformers. So it was the same between the Jews and the Muslims, whether their claim was reform, or in their religions, and in what they committed of disobedience to God, and their lying to the believers in what they showed them of saying while they were not showing what they showed inwardly? Because in all of that of their affair they were good in their eyes, but they were evil in the eyes of God, and they were disobedient to the command of God. Because God, the Most High, had imposed on them enmity towards the Jews and their war with the Muslims, and He obligated them to believe in the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from God, just as He obligated the believers in that. Their encounter with the Jews was on the basis of their allegiance to them, and their doubt in the prophethood of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought that it was from God, was the greatest corruption, even if that was for them a reform and guidance: in their religions or between the believers and the Jews, so God Almighty said about them: Indeed, they are the corrupters without those believers who forbade them from corruption on earth, but they do not perceive.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.'

If it is in the accusative case as a circumstance and the agent in it is they said, and it indicates the occurrence of the expected action. Al-Jawhari said: If is a noun that indicates a future time, and it is only used as an addition to a sentence, you say: I will come to you when the dates turn red, and when so-and-so arrives. What indicates that it is a noun is that it occurs in the place of your saying: I will come to you on the day so-and-so arrives, so it is a circumstance and it has the meaning of recompense. The recompense of a condition is three: the verb, the fa', and if. The verb is like your saying: If you come to me, I will come to you. And the fa' is: If you come to me, then I will be good to you. And if is like the saying of God Almighty: And if evil befalls them for what their hands have put forth, at once they despair. And among the recompenses that came with if in poetry is the saying of Qays ibn al-Khatim:

If our swords are short, our steps will reach our enemies and we will fight

So he connected fa-mudarib in the subjunctive mood to kāna because it is subjunctive. If it were not subjunctive, he would have said fa-mudarib in the accusative. It may be added to idha for emphasis, so it is also subjunctive. An example of this is the saying of Al-Farazdaq:

Abu Laila Ibn Zalim went to him and whenever he drew his sword he would strike.

Sibawayh said: The good thing is what Ka'b bin Zuhair said:

And if you wish, you can send it out from the sunset, active and terrified.

It means that it is good not to make the word if in the subjunctive mood, as it was not made in the subjunctive mood in this verse. It was narrated from Al-Mubarrad that in your saying in the case of surprise: I went out and then Zayd was present, it is a circumstance of place, because it includes a corpse. This is rejected, because the meaning is I went out and then then Zayd was present, so it only includes the infinitive as required by all other circumstances of time, such as their saying: Today is wine and tomorrow is a matter, which means the presence of wine and the occurrence of a matter.

His saying: It was said from the word qawl and its origin is qawl. The kasrah of the waw was moved to the qaf and the waw became a ya. It is also permissible to say: It was said to them by assimilating the lam into the lam. It is also permissible to combine two quiescent letters, because the ya is a long vowel and soft letter. Al-Akhfash said: It is also permissible to say: Qayl by adding a damma to the qaf and the ya. Al-Kisa'i said: It is permissible to make the qaf sound with a damma to indicate that since its agent is not named, it is the language of Qais. Likewise, ja'i and ghaydh and hayl and sayyiq and say'it. Hisham narrated likewise from Ibn 'Amir and Ruways from Ya'qub. Nafi' especially sayyi and say'it are more pronounced. Ibn Dhakwan added: hayl and sayyiq, and the rest broke all of them. As for Hudhayl and Banu Dubayr from Asad and Banu Faq'as, they say: qawl with a silent waw.

His saying: Do not cause corruption is not a prohibition. Corruption is the opposite of righteousness, and its reality is turning away from righteousness to its opposite. Something becomes corrupt, corrupted, and corrupted, and it is corrupt and corrupted. The meaning of the verse is: Do not cause corruption on the earth through disbelief and befriending its people, and dividing people from belief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the Qur'an. It was said: Before the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was sent, there was corruption on the earth, and sins were committed on it. When the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was sent, corruption was lifted and the earth was made good. So if they committed sins, they have caused corruption on the earth after it had been set right, as God says in another verse: And do not cause corruption on the earth after its reformation.

His saying: On the earth: The earth is feminine, and it is a generic noun. It would have been right for the singular to say Ardhu his land, but they did not say Ardah he land. The plural is Ardhat lands, because they sometimes pluralized the feminine that does not have the feminine ha with the ta like they say 'arsat weddings. Then they said Ardun lands, so they pluralized with the waw and the nun. The feminine is not pluralized with the waw and the nun unless it is defective like Kathbah and Dhabbah. However, they made the waw and the nun a substitute for their deletion of the alif and the ta and left the fatha of the ra as it was, and sometimes it is quiescent. It is pluralized as arudh. Abu al-Khattab claimed that they say ardh and ardh, just as they said ahl and ahaal. The lands are also not according to analogy, as if they pluralized ardh. And everything that is lower is ardh. And ardhah land, meaning pure lands. And ardh areed' (wa-r-dh-t-h-a-d ... Amr said: We settled in a spacious land, meaning one that is pleasing to the eye. It is said: You have no land, just as it is said: You have no mother. And the land is the lower part of the animal's legs. Hamid said this describing a horse.

The veterinarian did not turn over its land, nor did the ink squid in it.

Any trace. And the earth: the shaking and the tremor. Hammad bin Salamah narrated on the authority of Qatada on the authority of Abdullah bin Al-Harith who said: The earth shook in Basra, and Ibn Abbas said: By God, I do not know! Did the earth shake or did I have an earth? That is, or did I have a tremor? And Dhu Al-Rummah said, describing a hunter:

If he feels a trace of her hooves or if the owner of the land or someone is afflicted with a calamity

The land: the common cold. God made him irdaan, meaning He made him suffer from a cold, so he is tamed. A young shoot is mustarada, and a mustarada wadiyya (with a kasra on the ra') is when it has a root in the ground. As for if it grows on the trunk of a palm tree, it is the rider. And irda' with a kasra: a huge rug of wool or hair: and a man who is aridha, meaning humble and worthy of goodness. Al-Asma'i said, it is said: He is the most aridha of them to do that, meaning the most well-mannered of them. And something wide and aridha is following it, and some of them separate it and say: my grandfather is aridha, meaning fat.

His saying: We: The root of we is we, the vowel of the ha was changed to the nun and the ha was made quiescent, said Hisham bin Muawiyah the grammarian. Al-Zajaj said: We is for a group, and the sign of the group is the waw, and the damma is from the same type as the waw, so when they were forced to move we due to the meeting of two quiescent letters, they moved it with what is for a group. He said: For this reason, they made a damma on the waw of the plural in the words of God Almighty: Those are the ones who purchased error. Muhammad bin Yazid said: We is before and after because it is related to reporting on behalf of two or more, so /is for the singular and we is for the dual and the plural, and the speaker may report on himself with it in his saying: We stood up, God Almighty said: We divided their livelihood among them. The feminine in this, if she is speaking, is like the masculine. A woman says: I stood up and went, We stood up and went, I did that, and We did. This is the speech of the Arabs, so know.

The Almighty said: reformers is an active participle of the verb aslaha. "Salah" is the opposite of corruption. "Salah" with a damma or fatha on the lam is two languages, as Ibn al-Sikkit said. Saluh with a damma on the sad is the source of salh with a damma on the lam. The poet said:

How about my limbs if you insult me? And after insulting parents, there is no reconciliation.

Salah is one of the names of Mecca. As-Salh with a kasra on the sad: a river.

They only said that based on their assumption, because their corruption was considered reform, meaning that what We gave to the disbelievers was only intended to reform between them and the believers. This was said by Ibn Abbas and others.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Tayyib Al-Hamdani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' He said: They are the hypocrites. As for Do not cause corruption on the earth, he said: Corruption is disbelief and committing sin. Abu Jaafar said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the words of God Almighty: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' he said: It means do not disobey on the earth. And their corruption was disobeying God because whoever disobeys God on the earth or orders disobedience to Him has corrupted on the earth because the reformation of the earth and heaven is through obedience. And this is what Al-Rabi' bin Anas and Qatadah said. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' he said: If they commit a sin against God and it is said to them, Do not do such and such, they say, We are only reformers upon guidance. Waki' and 'Isa bin Yunus and 'Uthman bin 'Ali said on the authority of Al-A'mash on the authority of Al-Munhal bin 'Amr on the authority of 'Ibad bin 'Abdullah Al-Azdi on the authority of Salman Al-Farsi: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.'

Surat al-Baqarah 2:11

Salman said: The people of this verse have not come yet. Ibn Jarir said: Ahmad bin Othman bin Hakim told me, Abd Al-Rahman bin Sharik told us, my father told me, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Zaid bin Wahb and others, on the authority of Salman Al-Farsi, regarding this verse. He said: What brought these people? Ibn Jarir said: It is possible that Salman, may God be pleased with him, meant by this that those who come with this description are more corrupt than those who were in the time of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, not that he meant that no one with that description has passed away. Ibn Jarir said: So the hypocrites are corruptors on earth by their disobedience to their Lord therein, and by doing what He forbade them from doing therein, and by neglecting His obligations, and by their doubts about His religion, which does not accept any action from anyone except by believing in it and being certain of its truth, and by their lying to the believers with their claim that is not what they are established upon, of doubt and suspicion, and by their supporting the people who deny God, His books, and His messengers against the friends of God if they find a way to do so. That is the corruption of the hypocrites on earth, and they think that by doing that they are reforming it. And what Hassan said is that corruption on earth includes taking the believers as allies of the unbelievers, as God Almighty said: "And those who disbelieve are allies of one another. If you do not do so, there will be fitnah on earth and great corruption." So God cut off the alliance between the believers and the unbelievers, as God Almighty said: "O you who believe, do not take the disbelievers as allies rather than the believers. Do you want to make for God a clear authority over you?" Then He said: "Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire. And never will you find for them a helper." So since the hypocrite appears to be a believer, his affair is confused for the believers, so it is as if corruption on the part of the hypocrite has occurred, because he is the one who deceived the believers with his words that have no truth, and he befriended the unbelievers over the believers. If he had continued in his first state, his evil would have been less, and if he had sincerely worked for God and his words and deeds were in agreement, he would have succeeded and prospered. For this reason God Almighty said: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' That is, we want to accommodate the two groups of believers and unbelievers and reconcile with these and those, as Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'id bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' That is, we only want to reform between the two groups of believers and the People of the Book.

God says: Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not. He says: Indeed, what they rely on and claim is reform is corruption itself, but due to their ignorance they do not perceive that it is corruption.

11- If is in the accusative case as a circumstance and the factor in it is said: the one mentioned after it. It has the meaning of condition. Corruption is the opposite of righteousness, and its reality is the deviation from righteousness to its opposite. The thing is corrupted, corrupted and corrupted, so it is corrupt and corrupted. What is meant in the verse: Do not cause corruption on the earth by hypocrisy, befriending the infidels, and dividing people from belief in Muhammad, peace be upon him, and the Qur'an, because if you do that, what is on the earth will be corrupted by the destruction of bodies, the ruin of homes, and the invalidation of means, as is seen when seditions and disputes arise. It is only from the tools of restriction as explained in the science of meanings. Righteousness is the opposite of corruption. When God forbade them from corruption, which was their habit, they responded with this broad claim, and transferred themselves from being described as they really are, which is corruption, to being described as the opposite of that, which is righteousness. They did not stop at this pure lie and sheer falsehood until they made the attribute of righteousness exclusive to them and purely theirs. God responded to them with the most eloquent response to what the letter of warning indicates of the realization of what comes after it, and to what is in inna of emphasis, and what is in the definition of the report with the mediation of the separating pronoun of exaggerated restriction by combining two matters that are useful for it, and He returned them to the attribute of corruption that they are described with in reality, an emphatic and exaggerated response in addition to what their false claim included of the mere restriction derived from inna. As for denying their awareness, it is possible that since they were showing righteousness while knowing that they were purely corrupt, they thought that this would be spent on the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and the falsehood of what they concealed would be concealed from him, and they did not feel that he knew about it, and that the report would come to him from the sky, so denying their awareness was from this perspective, not from the fact that they did not feel that they were corrupt. It is possible that their corruption was, in their view, righteousness because of what had settled in their minds of love for disbelief and enmity towards Islam. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Mas'ud that he said: Corruption here is disbelief and committing sins. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn 'Abbas regarding his statement: We are only reformers meaning that we only want to reform between the two groups of believers and the People of the Book. Ibn Jarir narrated from Mujahid in his interpretation of this verse, he said: If they commit a sin and it is said to them: Do not do such and such, they say: We are only on guidance. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Salman that he read this verse and said: The people of this verse have not yet come. Ibn Jarir said: It is possible that Salman meant by this that those who come with this description are more corrupt than those who were at the time of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and it is not that he is in need of anyone who has that description. It is possible that Salman sees that this verse is not about the hypocrites, but rather he applies it to people like the people of sedition whose people believe in putting the sword to the Muslims, such as the Khawarij and all those who believe that their corruption is a remedy for the false doubts that come to them.

11. And if it is said, Al-Kisa'i read: (Qa'il) and (Ghayd) and (Ja'il) and (Hail) and (Sayq) and (Sa'iyyat) with the first letters of each letter being dammah - and Ibn 'Amir agreed with (Sayq) and (Hail) and (Sa'iyyat) - and the people of Medina agreed with: Sayy and Sayyat because its origin is Qawl with a dammah on the qaf and a kasrah on the waw, like Qatal and likewise in its sisters, so the dammah was indicated to indicate the changed waw, and the rest read with a kasrah on the first letters of each, they found the movement on the waw too heavy, so they transferred its kasrah to the fa' of the verb and the waw was changed to a ya' because of the kasrah of what preceded it / And when it is said to them meaning to the hypocrites, and it is said to the Jews meaning the believers said to them Do not cause corruption on the earth with disbelief and preventing people from believing in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the Qur'an. It was said that its meaning is do not disbelieve, and disbelief is the most severe corruption in religion. They said, 'We are only reformers.' They say this statement falsely, just as they say, We believe, and they are liars.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

11-And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' is in apposition to they lie or say. What was narrated from Salman, may God be pleased with him, that the people of this verse have not yet come, perhaps he meant by it that its people are not only those who were, but also those who will come after will be in the same state as them, because the verse is connected to what precedes it by the pronoun in it. Corruption: is the departure of something from moderation. Righteousness is its opposite, and both include everything harmful and beneficial.

Among their corruption on earth was the incitement of wars and sedition by deceiving the Muslims and conspiring with the infidels against them by revealing secrets to them. This led to the corruption of the people, animals, and crops on earth.

This includes displaying sins and insulting religion, as violating the laws and turning away from them leads to chaos and disorder and disrupts the order of the world. The speaker is God Almighty, or the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, or some of the believers. Al-Kisa'i and Hisham read qayla with the first letter pronounced with a dammah.

They said, We are only reformers. This is an answer to if which was given to the advisor by way of exaggeration. The meaning is that it is not right to address us in this way, for our concern is nothing but reform, and our state is purely free of impurities of corruption, because namma indicates that what it is used for is restricted to what comes after it. For example: Nama Zaid is only leaving, and Nama Zaid is only leaving. They only said that because they imagined corruption as goodness due to the sickness in their hearts, as God Almighty said: Then is he to whom the evil of his deed has been made attractive so he regards it as good?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:12

Unquestionably, it is they who are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:12

Unquestionably, it is they who are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

God Almighty said in response to them:

Unquestionably to warn that they are the corrupters, but they do not perceive that.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

This statement from God, the Most High, is a refutation of the hypocrites in their claim. When they are commanded to obey God in what God has commanded them to do, and are forbidden from disobeying God in what God has forbidden them to do, they say: We are only reformers, not corrupters, and we are on the right path and guidance in what you have condemned us for, not you, and we are not astray. So God, the Most High, the Most Great, refuted their claim, saying: Indeed, they are the corrupters who disobey the command of God, the Most High, the transgressors of His limits, the riders of His disobedience, and the abandoners of His obligations, and they do not feel nor realize that they are like that, not those who command them to be just from the believers, and forbid them from disobeying God on His earth from the Muslims.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not.

The Almighty said: Indeed, they are the corruptors in response to them and as a refutation of their statement. The masters of meanings said: Whoever makes the claim outwardly is lying. Don't you see that God the Almighty says: Indeed, they are the corruptors? This is correct. And in was broken because it is a subject, as Al-Nahhas said. Ali bin Sulayman said: It is permissible to open it, as Sibawayh permitted: Truly, you are departing, meaning not. And they may be the subject and the corruptors its predicate, and the subject and its predicate are the predicate of in. And it is permissible for they to be an emphasis of the ha and mim in indeed. And it is permissible for it to be its separator - and the Kufians say Imad - and the corruptors is the predicate of in, and the meaning is not they are the corruptors, as mentioned previously in His statement: And those are the successful ones.

God the Almighty said: But they perceive not. Ibn Kaysan said: It is said: There is no blame upon the one who does not know that he is a corrupter. He is only blamed if he knows that he is a corrupter and then commits corruption knowingly. He said: There are two answers to this: One of them is that they knew corruption secretly and showed righteousness, but they did not realize that their matter was apparent to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. The other aspect is that their corruption was righteousness in their view, but they did not realize that it was corruption. They disobeyed God and His Messenger by not clarifying the truth and following it. But is a letter of emphasis and correction, and it must contain negation and affirmation. If there is a negation before it, then there is an affirmation after it, and if there is an affirmation before it, then there is a negation after it. It is not permissible to economize after it on one name if the affirmation precedes, but you mention a sentence that contradicts what precedes it as in this verse, and your saying: Zaid came to me but Amr did not come, and it is not permissible to say Zaid came to me but Amr and then pause, because they have dispensed with but in such a place, and it is only permissible if the negation precedes as in your saying: Zaid did not come to me but Amr.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Tayyib Al-Hamdani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' He said: They are the hypocrites. As for Do not cause corruption on the earth, he said: Corruption is disbelief and committing sin. Abu Jaafar said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the words of God Almighty: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' he said: It means do not disobey on the earth. And their corruption was disobeying God because whoever disobeys God on the earth or orders disobedience to Him has corrupted on the earth because the reformation of the earth and heaven is through obedience. And this is what Al-Rabi' bin Anas and Qatadah said. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' he said: If they commit a sin against God and it is said to them, Do not do such and such, they say, We are only reformers upon guidance. Waki' and 'Isa bin Yunus and 'Uthman bin 'Ali said on the authority of Al-A'mash on the authority of Al-Munhal bin 'Amr on the authority of 'Ibad bin 'Abdullah Al-Azdi on the authority of Salman Al-Farsi: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' Salman said: The people of this verse have not come yet. Ibn Jarir said: Ahmad bin Othman bin Hakim told me, Abd Al-Rahman bin Sharik told us, my father told me, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Zaid bin Wahb and others, on the authority of Salman Al-Farsi, regarding this verse. He said: What brought these people? Ibn Jarir said: It is possible that Salman, may God be pleased with him, meant by this that those who come with this description are more corrupt than those who were in the time of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, not that he meant that no one with that description has passed away. Ibn Jarir said: So the hypocrites are corruptors on earth by their disobedience to their Lord therein, and by doing what He forbade them from doing therein, and by neglecting His obligations, and by their doubts about His religion, which does not accept any action from anyone except by believing in it and being certain of its truth, and by their lying to the believers with their claim that is not what they are established upon, of doubt and suspicion, and by their supporting the people who deny God, His books, and His messengers against the friends of God if they find a way to do so. That is the corruption of the hypocrites on earth, and they think that by doing that they are reforming it. And what Hassan said is that corruption on earth includes taking the believers as allies of the unbelievers, as God Almighty said: "And those who disbelieve are allies of one another. If you do not do so, there will be fitnah on earth and great corruption." So God cut off the alliance between the believers and the unbelievers, as God Almighty said: "O you who believe, do not take the disbelievers as allies rather than the believers. Do you want to make for God a clear authority over you?" Then He said: "Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire. And never will you find for them a helper." So since the hypocrite appears to be a believer, his affair is confused for the believers, so it is as if corruption on the part of the hypocrite has occurred, because he is the one who deceived the believers with his words that have no truth, and he befriended the unbelievers over the believers. If he had continued in his first state, his evil would have been less, and if he had sincerely worked for God and his words and deeds were in agreement, he would have succeeded and prospered. For this reason God Almighty said: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' That is, we want to accommodate the two groups of believers and unbelievers and reconcile with these and those, as Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'id bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when it is said to them, 'Do not cause corruption on the earth,' they say, 'We are only reformers.' That is, we only want to reform between the two groups of believers and the People of the Book. God says: Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not. He says: Indeed, what they rely on and claim is reform is corruption itself, but due to their ignorance they do not perceive that it is corruption.

Fath al-Qadir

Tafsir al-Baghawi

12. Ala is a word of warning with which the addressee is alerted. They are the ones who are corrupting themselves by disbelief and the people by preventing them from believing. But they do not perceive meaning they do not know that they are corrupting because they think that what they are doing from their hidden disbelief is good. It was said: They do not know what punishment God has prepared for them.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

12- Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive not. A response to what I claim is the most eloquent response to resume with it and to introduce it with the two letters of emphasis: ala which alerts to the realization of what comes after it, for the interrogative hamza of denial when it enters into negation indicates realization, and its counterpart is Is not that able?, and therefore the sentence after it hardly comes except initiated by what meets the oath, and its sister, either, which is one of the pioneers of the oath: and in which determines the relation, and defines the report and mediates the separation to respond to what is in their saying We are only reformers of allusion to the believers, and the correction with they do not perceive.

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of His statement: And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the people have believed' means: And when it is said to those whom God described and described as saying, We believe in God and the Last Day, but they are not believers (al-Baqarah 2:8), they believe in Muhammad and what he brought from God, just as the people believed in him. And by the people he means the believers who believed in Muhammad and his prophethood and what he brought from God, as Abu Kurayb told us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Ammarah, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding His statement: And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the people have believed', he says: And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the companions of Muhammad believed', say: He is a prophet and a messenger, and that what was revealed to him is true, and believe in the Hereafter, and that you will be resurrected after death.

The definite article was inserted in al-Nas people, which refers to some people, not all of them, because they were known to those who were addressed by this verse specifically. Rather, its meaning is: Believe as the people whom you know, who are people of certainty and belief in God and in Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and in what he brought from God and in the Last Day, believed. For this reason, the definite article was inserted in it, just as it was inserted in His statement: Those to whom the people said, 'Indeed, the people have gathered against you, so fear them' (Al-Imran: 173), because its insertion was indicated to people who were known to those who were addressed by this.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: They said, 'Shall we believe as the fools have believed?'

Abu Jaafar said: "Fools is the plural of foolish, just as scholars is the plural of knowledgeable, and wise men is the plural of wise. A fool is an ignorant person, weak-willed, with little knowledge of where benefits and harms lie. That is why God, the Almighty, called women and children foolish, as He, the Almighty, said: "And do not give to the foolish your property which God has made a means of support for you" (An-Nisa': 5). Most of the people of interpretation said: They are women and children, because of the weakness of their opinions and their little knowledge of where benefits and harms lie in the way that money is spent.

The hypocrites meant by their statement: Shall we believe as the fools believed when they were called to believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from God, and to acknowledge the resurrection? So it was said to them: Believe as the people believed, the companions of Muhammad and his followers from the believers who believed in him, from the people of faith and certainty, and belief in God, and in what He imposed upon them on the tongue of His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in His Book, and in the Last Day. So they said in response to the one who said that to them: Shall we believe as the ignorant believed, and believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, as these people who have no minds or understanding believed in him? Like the one who:

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas - and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "They said: Shall we believe as the fools believed?" They meant the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: "They said: Shall we believe as the fools believed?" They meant the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam told us regarding his statement: "They said: Shall we believe as the fools have believed?" He said: This is the statement of the hypocrites, meaning the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: "They said: Shall we believe as the fools have believed?" They said: Shall we say as the fools say? They meant the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, because of their opposition to their religion.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Indeed, they are the fools, but they do not know.

Abu Ja'far said: This is report from God Almighty about the hypocrites whom He described previously, and described them with what He described them with of doubt and denial, that they are the ignorant in their religions, weak in their opinions in their beliefs and the choices they chose for themselves, of doubt and suspicion in the matter of God and the matter of His Messenger and the matter of his prophethood, and in what he brought from God, and the matter of the resurrection, because they harmed themselves with what they did of that while they thought that they were doing good to them. This is the very definition of foolishness, because the foolish person corrupts when he thinks he is reforming, and wastes when he thinks he is preserving. So too is the hypocrite: he disobeys his Lord when he thinks he is obeying Him, and disbelieves in Him when he thinks he is believing in Him, and harms himself when he thinks he is doing good to himself, as our Lord, may He be glorified and exalted, described them when He said: Indeed, they are the corrupters, but they perceive [it] not. He said: Indeed, they are the foolish ones, not the believers who believe in God, His Book, and His Messenger, and His reward and punishment, but they do not know. Ibn Abbas interpreted this verse in this way.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that God Almighty says: Indeed, they are the fools, meaning: the ignorant, but they do not know, meaning: but they do not understand.

As for the reason for the alif and lam in al-sufha', it is similar to the reason for their inclusion in al-nas, in His statement: And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the people have believed,' and we have explained the reason for their inclusion there, and the reason for their inclusion in al-sufha' is similar to its inclusion in al-nas there, the same.

The indication that this verse indicates of the error of the statement of those who claim that punishment from God is only deserved by those who oppose their Lord, after knowing the truth of what they opposed Him in, is similar to the indication of the other verses whose interpretation we have previously mentioned in His statement, But they do not perceive, and similar ones.

God Almighty says: And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the people have believed,' they say, 'Should we believe as the fools have believed?' Unquestionably, it is they who are the fools, but they do not know.

The Almighty said: And when it is said to them, meaning the hypocrites according to Muqatil and others, Believe as the people have believed, meaning believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his law, as the immigrants and the scholars of Yathrib believed. The alif in believe is an alif of separation, because you say: believes, and the kaf is in the accusative case, because it is an attribute of a deleted source, meaning like the belief of the people.

God the Almighty said: "They said: 'Shall we believe as the fools have believed?'" Meaning the companions of Muhammad, peace and blessings be upon him, on the authority of Ibn Abbas. And on his authority also:

The believers among the People of the Book. This statement of the hypocrites was only said in secret and in mockery, so God informed His Prophet and the believers of that, and decided that foolishness, softness of mind, and corrupted insight are in their domain and description, and He informed that they are the fools, but they do not know because of the rust on their hearts. Al-Kalbi narrated on the authority of Ibn Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas that it was revealed concerning the Jews, meaning that when it was said to them - meaning the Jews - believe as the people believed: Abdullah bin Salam and his companions, they said: Shall we believe as the fools have believed! Meaning the ignorant and the clumsy. The origin of foolishness in the speech of the Arabs is: lightness and delicacy. It is said: a foolish garment if it is poorly woven and light, or if it is worn out and thin. And the wind made the tree sway: it swayed it. Dhu al-Rumma said:

Walking as spears shake, their tops are blown away by the passing winds

And you burned something: you burned it. Foolishness is the opposite of patience. It is said that foolishness is when a man drinks a lot of water and is not satisfied. There are four possible ways for the two hamzas of fools, the best of which is to make the first one full and change the second one to a pure waw, and this is the reading of the people of Medina and the well-known reading of Abu Amr. If you wish, you can lighten them both, so you put the first one between the hamza and the waw and make the second one a pure waw. If you wish, you can lighten the first one and make the second full. If you wish, you can make them both full.

The Almighty's saying: But they do not know is like: But they do not perceive, which has already been mentioned. Knowledge is knowing the known thing as it is. You say: I knew the thing, I know it, I recognized it. I knew the man, so I taught him, I knew him with the dammah in the future tense: I overcame him with knowledge.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And when it is said to the hypocrites, Believe as the people have believed, meaning as the people believe in God, His angels, His books, His messengers, the resurrection after death, Paradise, Hell, and other things that the believers have been informed of and about, and obey God and His Messenger in complying with the commands and abandoning the prohibitions, They say, 'Shall we believe as the fools have believed?' They mean - may

Surat al-Baqarah 2:13

And when it is said to them, "Believe as the people have believed," they say, "Should we believe as the fools have believed?" Unquestionably, it is they who are the fools, but they do not know.

God curse them - the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, may God be pleased with them. Abu al-Aaliyah and al-Suddi said this in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, and more than one of the companions. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam, and others say this, saying: Are we and these people in the same position and on the same path, and they are fools? Fools is the plural of foolish, just as wise men are the plural of wise man and forbearing men are the plural of forbearing. A fool is an ignorant person who is weak in opinion and has little knowledge of what is beneficial and harmful. For this reason, God called women and children foolish in His statement, And do not give the foolish your property which God has made a means of support for you. Most scholars of interpretation said that they are women and children. God, the Exalted, took it upon Himself to answer them in all of these situations, saying, Indeed, they are the foolish ones. So He emphasized and limited the foolish ones to them. But they do not know. That is, part of their complete ignorance is that they do not know their state of misguidance and ignorance, and that is worse for them and more effective in blindness and distance from guidance.

Fath al-Qadir

That is, when it is said to al-Munafiqun 63: Believe as the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Muhajireen and Ansar believed, they answer with the most foolish answer, the furthest from the truth and right, and they attribute foolishness to the believers in mockery and contempt, and thus they cause God to record foolishness against them in the most eloquent expression and emphatic statement. And He confined foolishness, which is soft-heartedness, corrupted insight, and foolish minds, to them, even though they do not know that they are like that, either literally or metaphorically, to reduce their insistence on foolishness to the level of not knowing that they are like that and that they are characterized by it. And when God mentioned foolishness here, it was appropriate to deny them knowledge, because only an ignorant person would be foolish. And the kaf is in the accusative case because it is an attribute of a deleted source: that is, faith like the faith of people. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: 13- And when it is said to them, 'Believe as the people have believed,' meaning, believe as the companions of Muhammad believed that he is a prophet and messenger, and that what was revealed to him is true, they say, 'Shall we believe as the fools have believed,' meaning the companions of Muhammad. Unquestionably, it is they who are the fools, meaning, the ignorant. But they do not know, meaning, they do not understand. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Asakir in his history with a weak chain of transmission that he said: Abu Bakr, Umar, Uthman, and Ali believed as the people believed. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud regarding his statement:

as the fools have believed, meaning, the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Rabi' and Ibn Zayd narrated something similar. Al-Kalbi narrated on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas that it was revealed concerning the Jews, meaning, when it is said to them, meaning, the Jews, Believe as the people have believed, Abdullah ibn Salam and his companions, they say, 'Shall we believe as the fools have believed?'

13. And when it is said to them meaning to the hypocrites and it is said to the Jews Believe as the people have believed Abdullah bin Salam and others from the believers of the People of the Book and it is said as the Muhajireen and Ansar believed they say, Shall we believe as the fools have believed" meaning the ignorant. If it is said, how is hypocrisy correct with the Muhajireen by their saying "Shall we believe as the fools have believed" it is said that they were showing this saying among themselves and not to the believers. So God informed His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the believers of that, so God responded to them and said, "Indeed, they are the fools, but they do not know" that they are like that. So the foolish person is light-minded and delicate in patience from their saying: a foolish garment meaning thin. And it is said that the foolish person is the liar who deliberately lies contrary to what he knows.

The people of Kufa and Ash-Sham read as-sufha'a ala with the emphasis on both hamzas, and so on for every two hamzas that occur in two words that are the same or different. The others emphasize the first and soften the second in the two that are different, seeking lightness. If they are the same, such as: these, guardians, those, and the matter of your Lord came - Abu Amr and Al-Bazzi read it on the authority of Ibn Kathir with one hamza. Abu Ja'far, Warsh, Al-Qawwash, and Ya'qub read with the emphasis on the first and softening the second. Qaloon read with the softening of the first and the emphasis on the second, because what is renewed is more deserving of the hamza than what is silent on.

13- "And when it is said to them, 'Believe,'" is a complete advice and guidance, for the perfection of faith is achieved by the combination of two matters: turning away from what is not appropriate, which is what is meant by His saying, "Do not cause corruption, and doing what is appropriate, which is what is required by His saying, Believe.

As people believed in the accusative case as a source, and ma is a source or a collective noun like it in perhaps, and the lam in people" is for the genus and what is meant by it are those who are complete in humanity and who work with the issue of reason, for the name of the genus, as it is used for its name absolutely, is used for what gathers the meanings specific to it and intended by it, and for this reason it is taken away from others and it is said: Zaid is not a human being, and from this chapter is the saying of the Most High: "Deaf, dumb, blind" and the like, and the poet gathered them in his saying:

People are people and time is time

Or for the covenant, meaning the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those with him. Or those who believed from their own people, such as Ibn Salam and his companions, and the meaning is that they believed with a faith coupled with sincerity, pure and free from the impurities of hypocrisy, similar to their faith, and it was used as evidence for accepting the repentance of the heretic and that the confession with the tongue is faith even if the restriction does not benefit.

They said, "Shall we believe as the fools have believed?" The hamza in it is for denial, and the lam is referring to the people, or the entire race, which they claim is included in it. They only called them fools because they believed in the corruption of their opinion, or to belittle their status, for most of the believers were poor and among them were clients, such as Suhayb and Bilal. Or it is to show patience and indifference to those among them who believed, if the people are interpreted as Abdullah bin Salam and his followers. Foolishness is frivolity and foolishness of opinion that are required by a lack of reason, and the opposite of it is patience.

"Indeed, they are the fools, but they do not know." This is a response and an exaggeration in their ignorance. The ignorant person, with his absolute ignorance contrary to reality, is more misguided and more ignorant than the one who hesitates and admits his ignorance. He may be excused and the signs and warnings may benefit him. The verse was separated by "they do not know and the one before it by they do not perceive" because it is more in line with the mention of foolishness, and because understanding the matter of religion and distinguishing between truth and falsehood requires consideration and thought. As for hypocrisy and the trials and corruption it entails, it can only be perceived with the slightest insight and contemplation of what is seen of their words and actions.

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with their evil ones, they say, "Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:14

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when they meet its original form is liqaywa, the damma was dropped due to the heaviness, then the ya' because it meets silently with the waw those who believe, they say, We believe. But when they are alone with them and return (to their devils their leaders they say, Indeed, we are with you in religion we were only mocking at them for showing faith.

The Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, Al-Wahdai and Al-Tha'labi narrated on the authority of Muhammad bin Marwan and Al-Saddi Al-Saghir on the authority of Al-Kalbi on the authority of Abi Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: This verse was revealed about Abdullah bin Ubayy and his companions. They went out one day and were met by a group of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abdullah bin Ubayy said: Look how I will repel these fools from you. So he went and took Abu Bakr's hand and said: Welcome to the truthful one, the master of Banu Taym and the Sheikh of Islam and the second of the Messenger of God in the cave, who sacrificed himself and his wealth for the Messenger of God. Then he took Umar's hand and said: Welcome to the master of Banu Adi bin Ka'b Al-Faruq, the strong one in the religion of God, who sacrificed himself and his wealth for the Messenger of God. Then he took Ali's hand and said: Welcome to the cousin of the Messenger of God and his son-in-law, the master of Banu Hashim except for the Messenger of God. Then they parted. Abdullah said to his companions: How did you see me do it?

If you see them, do as I did and praise him well. The Muslims returned to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and told him about that, so this verse was revealed. This chain of transmission is very weak, for al-Suddi al-Saghir is a liar, and so is al-Kalbi, and Abu Salih is weak.

Abu Ja'far said: This verse is similar to the other verse in which God Almighty informed us about the hypocrites and their deception of God, His Messenger, and the believers. God Almighty said: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day' (al-Baqarah 2:8), then God Almighty denied them by saying: But they are not believers, and that by saying that they are deceiving God and those who believe. And likewise He informed about them in this verse that they say to the believers who believe in God,

His Book, and His Messenger with their tongues: We believe and we believe in Muhammad and what he brought from God, deceiving them about their blood, their wealth, and their children, and warding them off from them, and that when they are alone with their rebellious ones and the people of insolence, evil, and wickedness among them and the rest of the polytheists, who are like them in disbelief in God, His Book, and His Messenger, and they are their devils, and we have shown in what has passed of our Book that the devils of every rebellious thing say to them: We are with you, meaning we are with you in your religion, and your supporters against those who oppose you in it, and your allies without the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, We are only mocking at God, His Book, His Messenger, and his companions, like that: Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us, he said: Uthman ibn Sa'id told us, he said: Bishr ibn 'Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, regarding His statement: And when they meet those who believe, They said, "We believe. He said: When some of the Jews met the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, or some of them, they said, We follow your religion. And when they were alone with their companions, who were their devils, they said, We are with you; we were only mocking.

Ibn Humayd told us: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' But when they are alone with their devils, he said: When they are alone with their devils from among the Jews, who order them to deny and oppose what the Messenger brought, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you,' meaning, we are on the same as you are. We were only mocking.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: And when they are alone with their devils, as for their devils, they are their leaders in disbelief.

Bishr bin Muadh Al-Aqdi told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And when they are alone with their devils, meaning their leaders in evil, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking.'

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement, And when they are alone with their devils, he said: the polytheists.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us: Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh told us, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the words of God Almighty: And when they are alone with their devils, he said: When the hypocrites are alone with their companions from among the infidels.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us, on the authority of Shibl bin Abbad, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And when they are alone with their devils, he said: their companions from among the hypocrites and polytheists.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And when they are alone with their devils, he said: their brothers from the polytheists, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking.'

Al-Qasim bin Hassan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me: Ibn Jurayj said regarding His statement: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' that when the believers are granted ease, they say: We are with you, we are your brothers. But when they are alone with their devils, they mock the believers.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: And Mujahid said, their devils: their companions from among the hypocrites and polytheists.

If someone were to say to us: What do you think of His statement, And when they are alone with their devils, how is it said, They are alone with their devils, and not They were alone with their devils? You have learned that what is common among people in their speech is, I was alone with so-and-so, more often and more widespread than, I was alone with so-and-so. And from your saying that the Qur'an is the most eloquent of expressions.

It was said: The scholars of the Arabic language differed on this. Some of the grammarians of Basra used to say: It is said, I was alone with so-and-so if what is meant by it is: I was alone with him for a special need. If it is said thus, it does not mean anything other than being alone with him to fulfill a need. However, if it is said, I was alone with him, it has two possible meanings: one is being alone with him for a need, and the other is mocking him. According to this statement, And when they were alone with their devils, is undoubtedly more eloquent than if it were said, And when they were alone with their devils, because the statement of the speaker, When they were alone with their devils, is confusing to the listeners, which is not the case with his statement, And when they were alone with their devils. This is one of the statements.

The other statement: The meaning of His statement, And when they are alone with their devils, is directed to when they are alone with their devils, since the letters of the attributes punish each other. As God said, informing about Jesus, son of Mary, that he said to the disciples: Who will be my helpers to God? (al-Saff 61:114), meaning: with God. And as ala is placed in the place of min and fi and an and ba', and as the poet said:

If Banu Qushair were pleased with me, by God, I would be pleased with their satisfaction.

Meaning about me.

As for some of the grammarians of Kufa, he interpreted that it means: And when they meet those who believe, they say, We believe, and when they turn their private parts to their devils. He claims that what brings to to the meaning indicated by the speech is: the hypocrites turning away from meeting the believers to their devils, being private with them, not his saying, they were private. According to this interpretation, it is not suitable in a place other than it, because the speech changes with the entry of other letters in its place.

This statement is more correct in my opinion, because each letter of the letters of meaning has a face that it is more deserving of than others, so it is not appropriate to change that from it to another except with an argument that must be accepted. And with to in every place it enters in speech there is a ruling, and it is not permissible to deprive it of its meanings in its places.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: We were only mocking.

The people of interpretation have unanimously agreed, without any disagreement, that the meaning of His statement, We are only mocking is: We are only mocking. So the meaning of the statement is: And when the hypocrites turn away alone to their apostates from among the hypocrites and polytheists, they will say: We are with you in what you are upon of denying Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and opposing him and his followers. We are only mocking the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, by saying to them when we meet them: We believe in God and the Last Day, as Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us, he said: Uthman ibn Sa'id told us, he said: Bishr ibn 'Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: They said: We are only mocking, mocking the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: We are only mocking, meaning: We are only mocking the people and playing with them.

Bishr bin Muadh Al-Aqdi told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: We are only mocking, we are only mocking these people and making fun of them.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': We are only mocking, meaning we are mocking the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:14

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with their evil ones, they say, "Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking."

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe'; but when they are alone with their evil ones, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you; we were only mocking.'

God the Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' This verse was revealed in reference to the hypocrites. The root of laqa is laqiwa they met. The damma was transferred to the qaf and the ya' was deleted due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. Muhammad ibn al-Sumaiqa' al-Yamani read: laqawa al-dinhi amanu they met those who believed. The root is laqiwa they met. The ya' was moved and before it was a fatha which turned into an alif. Two quiescent letters met, the alif and the waw, so the alif was deleted due to the meeting of two quiescent letters, then the waw was moved with a damma.

If it is said: Why was the waw in laqa with a damma in al-idraj and deleted from laqa? The answer is: There is a damma before the waw in laqa, so if the waw had been moved with a damma, it would have been difficult for the tongue to pronounce it, so it was deleted because of its heaviness. It was moved in laqa because there was a fatha before it.

God Almighty said: And when they are alone with their devils, they say, 'Indeed, we are with you.' If it is said: Why did you connect khalwa to ila and know that it is connected to ba? It is said to him: Khalaw here means they went and departed, and from this is the saying of Al-Farazdaq:

How do you see me as a crazy person who turns his back on me?

God killed Ziyad for me

Because He put it in the position of a saffron. Some people said: To means with, and this is weak. Some people said: To means with, and this is rejected by Al-Khalil and Sibawayh. It was said: The meaning is: And when the believers are alone with their devils, so to is in its proper form. Devils is the plural of devil in the broken form, and the statement about its derivation and meaning in seeking refuge has been presented. The commentators differed about what is meant by devils here. Ibn Abbas and Al-Suddi said: They are the leaders of disbelief. Al-Kalbi said: They are the devils of the jinn. A group of commentators said: They are the soothsayers. The word devilry which means being far from faith and goodness includes all of those mentioned. And God knows best.

God Almighty says: We are only mocking. That is, we are denying what we are called to. It was also said: mocking. Mocking means mockery and play. It is said: he mocked him and made fun of him. The rajaz poet said:

Umm Taisalah mocked me and said, I see him as poor and without money.

It was said: The origin of mockery is revenge, as

another said:

They mocked them with two thousand armed men, their leaders crouching in the middle of the desert.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And when these hypocrites meet the believers, they say: We believe, and they show them faith, loyalty and friendship, to deceive the believers and out of hypocrisy, flattery and dissimulation, and to share with them what they have attained of good and spoils. And when they are alone with their devils means when they turn away and depart and are alone with their devils. So the word they were alone implies that they turned away because it is transitive with to to indicate the implied action and the spoken action. Some of them said to here means with, and the first is better, and this is what Ibn Jarir's speech revolves around. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik: They were alone means they went away, and their devils are their masters and leaders from the rabbis of the Jews and the leaders of the polytheists and hypocrites. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And when they are alone with their devils means they are their leaders in disbelief. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they are alone with their companions, who are their devils. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they are alone with their devils, from the Jews who order them to deny and oppose what the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, came with. Mujahid said: And when they are alone with their devils, to their companions from the hypocrites and polytheists. Qatada said: And when they are alone with their devils, meaning to their leaders and chiefs in polytheism and evil. Abu Malik, Abu al-Aaliyah, As-Suddi, and Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas interpreted it similarly. Ibn Jarir said: The devils of every thing are its rebels, and the devil is from among mankind and jinn as God Almighty said: And thus We have made for every prophet an enemy - devils from mankind and jinn, inspiring to one another decorative speech in delusion. And in Al-Musnad on the authority of Abu Dharr, he said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: We seek refuge in God from the devils of mankind and jinn. I said: O Messenger, do mankind have devils? He said: Yes." And His statement: "They said: We are with you," Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, meaning: We are on the same as you are. We are only mocking, meaning: We are only mocking the people and playing with them. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They said: We are only mocking and ridiculing the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas and Qatadah said the same. And the Almighty said in response and response to their actions: God mocks them and prolongs their transgression while they wander blindly. Ibn Jarir said: God informed us that He will do that to them on the Day of Resurrection in His statement: "On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believe, 'Wait for us that we may take from your light.' It will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' So a wall will be set up between them with a door, inside of which will be mercy, but outside of which will be punishment." And the statement of God: "And let not those who disbelieve think that Our granting them respite is better for themselves. We only grant them respite so that they may increase in sin." He said: This and what is similar to it is the mockery, ridicule, deception, and trickery of God, the Most High, to the hypocrites and the polytheists with Him, according to the one who said this statement and interpreted this interpretation. He said: And others said: Rather, His mockery of them is His rebuke and censure of them for the sins and disbelief they committed with Him. He said: Others said this and similar things as a way of answering, like a man saying to someone he deceives when he gets hold of him, I am the one who deceived you. There was no deception on his part, but he said that when the matter was up to him. They said: And likewise the saying of God Almighty, And they plotted, and God plotted, and God is the best of plotters, and God mocks at them, as an answer, and God does not plot or mock. The meaning is that deceit and mockery befell them. Others said that the Almighty's statement, "We were only mockers. God mocks at them," and His statement, They deceive God, but He deceives them, and His statement, So they mock at them, God mocks at them, and They forgot God, so He forgot them, and what is similar to that is information from God, the Almighty, that He will reward them with the reward of mockery and punish them with the punishment of deception. So He brought out His report about His reward and punishment of them in a way that He brought out His report about their action for which they deserved punishment in wording, even though the two meanings differed, as God, the Almighty, said, "The recompense for an evil is an evil like it. But whoever pardons and makes reconciliation, his reward is upon God," and His statement, But whoever transgresses against you, transgress against him, so the first is injustice and the second is justice, so they understand that even if their wording is the same, their meaning differs. He said, And to this meaning they directed everything in the Qur'an that is similar to that. He said: Others said that the meaning of this is that God informed about the hypocrites that when they enter their apostates they will say: We are with you in your religion in denying Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and we are only mocking what we show them of what we say to them. So God informed that He mocks them and shows them from His rulings in this world, meaning the protection of their blood and wealth, other than what He has in the Hereafter, meaning from punishment and chastisement. Then Ibn Jarir began to explain this statement and support it because deceit, trickery, and mockery in the form of play and frivolity are absent from God, the Almighty, by consensus. As for in the form of revenge and retaliation with justice and recompense, that is not impossible. He said, and similar to what we said about it, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Abu Kurayb told us, who said: Abu Uthman told us, who said: Bishr bin Abi Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement, God mocks them, he said: He mocks them to take revenge on them. And the statement of the Most High, And prolongs their transgression, wandering blindly, As-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He prolongs them, He gives them respite. And Mujahid said: He increases them. And the Most High said: Do they think that what We provide them with of wealth and children? * We hasten to them in good things? Rather, they do not perceive. And He said: We will gradually lead them on from where they do not know. Some of them said: Every time they committed a sin, He created for them a blessing, which is in reality a punishment. And the Most High said: "So when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the gates of every [good] thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they had been given, We seized them suddenly, and at once they were in despair. So He cut off the root of the people who did wrong. And praise be to God, Lord of the worlds." Ibn Jarir said: The correct is: We increase them in a way. Dictation and leaving them in their insolence and rebellion as God Almighty said: And We will turn away their hearts and their eyes just as they did not believe in it the first time and leave them in their transgression wandering blindly. Transgression is going beyond something as God Almighty said: Indeed, when the water overflowed, We carried you in the moving ship. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding their transgression, They wander blindly in their disbelief, wavering. And this is how As-Suddi interpreted it with his chain of transmission on the authority of the Companions, and Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, Mujahid, Abu Malik, and Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid say this regarding their disbelief and misguidance. Ibn Jarir said: And blindness means misguidance. It is said that someone is blind, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, his uncle, his plural is amahu, and his saying in their transgression they are blind in their misguidance and their disbelief whose filth has overwhelmed them and whose impurity has covered them, they wander around confusedly in misguidance and they do not find a way out of it because God has sealed their hearts and blinded their sight from guidance and covered it so they do not see right guidance nor are they guided to a path. Some of them said: Blindness is in the eye and blindness is in the heart, and blindness is also used in the heart, God the Almighty said: For indeed, it is not the eyes that are blinded, but blinded are the hearts which are within the breasts and you say that a man is amahu, he is amahu, his ama, and his plural is amahu, and his camels went blind if he did not know where they went.

Fath al-Qadir

14- لاَقُوْا is originally yalqaw, the damma was moved to the qaf and the ya was deleted due to the meeting of two sukoon letters. The meaning of lqaytuhu and lqaytuhu is: I met him soon. Muhammad ibn al-Samif al-Yamani and Abu Hanifa read laqaw, and its original form is laqiwu, the ya was moved and the letter before it was opened, so it turned into an alif. Then the alif was deleted due to the meeting of two sukoon letters. Khalawat bi-fulan wa-ilaih: if you were alone with him. It is transitive with ila and it is transitive with ba, so he said: I was alone with him, not khalwat ilaihi, because it includes the meaning they went and turned away. Shayatin is the plural of shaytan in the broken form. Sibawayh's speech differed regarding the noon of shaytan, so he made it original in one place in his book and extra in another, so according to the first it is from shatna meaning far from the truth, and according to the second it is from shat: meaning far away or shat: meaning invalid, shat: meaning burned, and ashaat: if he perished. He said:

And the hero may strike our spears

That is, he perishes. Another said:

And a white crown, our spears were kindled for the battle between the knights, the darkest

That is, he destroyed. Sibawayh narrated that the Arabs say: So-and-so became devilish if he did the actions of devils. If it were from shata they would have said: tashita, and from this is the saying of Umayya ibn Abi al-Salt:

Any devil who disobeys his orders, he will throw him into prison and chains.

His saying: We are with you means we are your companions in your religion and agree with you on it. Mocking means mockery and play. The rajaz poet said:

Umm Taisalah mocked me and said, I see him as poor and without money.

He said in Al-Kashshaf: The origin of the word al-Khafa is from al-Haz', which means a quick killing. Hazā means to die on the spot. Some Arabs said: I walked and was absent-minded, so I thought I would be mocking on the spot. His she-camel Tahza'a means to hurry and hurry. It was said: Its origin is revenge. The poet said:

They mocked them with two thousand armed men, their leaders crouching in the middle of the desert.

Their saying, We are with you, indicates that they are steadfast in disbelief, and their saying, We are only mocking, indicates that they have rejected Islam and rejected the truth. It is as if it were an answer to an implied question arising from their saying, We are with you, meaning, if you are with us, then what about when you meet the Muslims and agree with them?

They said, We are only mocking them in that agreement, and our inner selves were not in agreement with them or inclined toward them.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

14. And when they meet those who believe meaning these hypocrites when they meet the Muhajireen and Ansar they say, 'We believe' as you believe and but when they are alone they return. It is possible that from seclusion to means with meaning with their devils and it was said: to means with as God said the Most High and do not consume their wealth with your wealth 2-An-Nisa meaning with your wealth their devils meaning their leaders and priests Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with him said: They are five men from the Jews Ka'b bin Al-Ashraf in Madinah, Abu Burdah in Banu Aslam and Abd Al-Dar in Juhayna, Awf bin Amir in Banu Asad, and Abdullah bin Al-Sawda in Ash-Sham. And there is no priest except that there is a devil with him who follows him. And the devil is the rebellious, stubborn one from the jinn and mankind and from everything and its origin is distance, it is said the well of Shatoon meaning: of great depth, the devil was called a devil because of his extension in evil and his distance from good. Mujahid said: To their companions from the hypocrites and polytheists, "They said, 'We are with you,' meaning, on your religion. 'We are only mocking' Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions because of what we show of Islam."

Tafsir al-Baidawi

14-And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' This is a statement of their treatment of the believers and the infidels. The story began with a statement of their doctrine and a prelude to their hypocrisy, so it is not a repetition. It was narrated that Ibn Abi and his companions were met by a group of companions, so he said to his al-Nas 114: Look how I repel these fools from you. So he took the hand of Abu Bakr, may God be pleased with him, and said: Welcome to the truthful one, the master of Banu Taym, the Sheikh of Islam, and the second of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the cave, who sacrificed himself and his wealth for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then he took the hand of Umar, may God be pleased with him, and said: Welcome to the master of God, Adi Al-Faruq, the strong in his religion, who sacrificed himself and his wealth for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then he took the hand of Ali, may God be pleased with him, and said: Welcome to the cousin of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his son-in-law, the master of Banu Hashim, except for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. So it was revealed. A chance encounter is said, I met him, if you encountered him and met him. It is also derived from I threw him, if you threw him away, for by throwing him away you made him where he could be met.

And when they are alone with their devils from the verb khalwat bi-fulan and ilahi means to be alone with him. Or from khadhal meaning to go beyond you and pass away from you, and from it the previous centuries. Or from khalwat bi-hi if you mocked him, and the preposition ila is used to include the meaning of ending, and what is meant by their devils are those who resemble Satan in their rebellion, and they are those who show their disbelief, and their addition to them is to participate in disbelief. Or the great hypocrites and those who say their small ones. Sibawayh made the nun sometimes original on the basis that it is from shatan if he is far from righteousness, and their saying tashitan testifies to this. And other times it is additional on the basis that it is from shata if he is invalid, and one of his names is al-Batil.

They said, We are with you, meaning in religion and belief. They addressed the believers with the verbal sentence, and the devils with the nominal sentence, emphasizing that, because they intended with the first to claim to create faith and with the second to confirm their steadfastness in what they were upon, and because they had no motive of belief and sincerity, desiring what they addressed the believers with, nor did they expect the claim of perfection in faith to be widespread among the believers from the Muhajireen and Ansar, unlike what they said with the disbelievers.

We were only mocking is an emphasis on what came before it, because the one who mocks the thing that is belittled persists in its opposite. Or instead of it, because the one who belittles Islam has magnified disbelief. Or it is a resumption, as if the devils said to them when they said, We are with you if that is true, then what is the matter with you that you agree with the believers and claim faith? So they responded with that. Mocking is ridicule and belittling. It is said: I mocked and I mocked meaning like I answered and I responded, and its origin is lightness from mockery, which is a quick killing. It is said: So-and-so mocked if he died in his place, and his camel mocked him, meaning it hurried and lightened.

God mocks them and prolongs them in their transgression while they wander blindly.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:15

God mocks them and prolongs them in their transgression while they wander blindly.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

God mocks them) He rewards them for their mockery and prolongs them He gives them respite in their transgression by exceeding the limit in disbelief they wander blindly they hesitate in confusion

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: There is a difference of opinion regarding the description of the mockery of God, the Most High, which He mentioned that He will do to the hypocrites, whose characteristics He described. Some of them said: His mockery of them is like what He, the Blessed, the Most High, informed us that He will do to them on the Day of Resurrection in His statement, the Most High: On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who have believed, Wait for us, that we may take from your light. It will be said, Go back behind you and seek light." Then a wall will be set up between them, having a door, within which will be mercy, but outside of it will be punishment. They will call out to them, "Were we not with you? They will say, Yes." (al-Hadid 57:13-14) and the verse. And like what He informed us that He did to the disbelievers in His statement, "And let not those who disbelieve think that Our granting them respite is better for themselves. We only grant them respite that they may increase in sin; and for them is a humiliating punishment." (Al-Imran: 178). This and what is similar to it is the mockery, ridicule, deceit, and deception of God Almighty and Exalted, of the hypocrites and those who associate partners with Him, according to those who say this statement and interpret this interpretation.

Others said: Rather, his mockery of them is his rebuke and blame of them for the sins they committed against God and their disbelief in Him, just as it is said: So-and-so has been mocking and ridiculing him since today. What is meant by this is the people's rebuke and blame of him, or his destruction and devastation of them through them, just as Ubayd ibn al-Abrash said:

Ask us about Hajar Ibn Umm Qatam, while the young girls were playing with him.

They claimed that the samar, which is the spear, is not a game, but when it killed them and scattered them, it made its action a game with the one to whom it did that. They said: So is the mockery of God, the Most High, of those who mocked Him from among the hypocrites and disbelievers in Him: either by destroying them and ruining them, or by granting them respite to take them suddenly in a state of security with themselves, or by rebuking them and blaming them. They said: And so is the meaning of deceit, trickery, and mockery from Him.

Others said that His statement, They deceive God, but He is the One who deceives them (An-Nisa': 142) is an answer, like a man saying to someone he deceives when he gets hold of him: I am the one who deceived you, and it was not from him to deceive, but he said that when the matter was up to him. They said: And similarly His statement, And they plotted, and God plotted, and God is the best of plotters (Aal 'Imran: 54), God mocks them, is an answer, and God does not plot or mock, and the meaning is that the plot and mockery befell them. Others said: His statement, We were only mocking, God mocks them, and His statement, They deceive God, but He is the One who deceives them (An-Nisa': 142), and His statement, So they mock at them, God mocks at them (al-Tawbah 9:79), They forgot God, so He forgot them (al-Tawbah 9:67), and the like, is a statement from God that He will reward them with the reward for mockery and punish them with the punishment for deception. So He brought forth His report about His reward and punishment of them, bringing forth His report about their action for which they deserved punishment in wording, even though the two meanings differ, as the Most High said: And the recompense for an evil is an evil like it (al-Shura 42:40). It is known that the first is an evil from its doer, since it was a sin from him towards God, the Blessed and Exalted, and that the second is justice, because it is a recompense from God to the sinner for the sin. So even if their wording is the same, their meaning is different. Likewise His statement: But whoever transgresses against you, transgress against him (al-Baqarah 2:194). The first transgression is injustice, and the second is a recompense, not injustice, rather it is justice, because it is a punishment for the wrongdoer for his injustice, even if its wording is the same as the first.

To this meaning they directed everything in the Qur'an that is similar to that, which is report of God Almighty's deception of a people, and the like.

Others said: The meaning of this is that God, the Almighty, informed us about the hypocrites that when they are alone with their rebels, they say: We are with you in your religion in denying Muhammad, peace be upon him, and what he brought. We are only mocking what we show them of our saying to them: We believe in Muhammad, peace be upon him, and what he brought. They mean: We show them what is false to us, neither truth nor guidance. They said: This is one of the meanings of mockery. So God informed us that He mocks them, so He shows them from His rulings in this world that which are different from what they have with Him in the Hereafter, just as they showed to the Prophet, peace be upon him, and the believers in religion what they were different from in their hearts.

The correct interpretation and statement in this regard, according to us, is that the meaning of mockery in Arabic is the mocker showing to the one being mocked what he says or does that outwardly pleases him, and in doing so, what he says and does to him causes him inward harm. The same is true of deception, mockery, and cunning.

If that is the case, and God, the Most High, has made for the hypocrites in this world rulings based on what they have shown with their tongues, of acknowledging God and His Messenger and what came from God, which will include them among those who are included in the name of Islam, even if for other reasons they have internalized the rulings of the believing Muslims, acknowledging that with their tongues, in the secrets of their hearts, and the soundness of their resolve, and the praiseworthy deeds that confirm for them the soundness of their faith, with God, the Most High, knowing their lies, and being aware of the evil of their belief, and their doubt in what they claimed with their tongues that they believed in, until they thought in the Hereafter, when they are gathered among those who were among them in this world, that they will enter their place and enter their place. And God, the Most High, the Majestic, while revealing to them what He has revealed of the rulings that will include them in this worldly life and the Hereafter until He distinguishes between them and His friends, and separates between them and them together, He has given them His painful punishment and the most grievous torment, which He has prepared for His most hostile enemies and the worst of His servants, until He distinguishes between them and His friends, and includes them in the lowest levels of His Hellfire, it was known that He, the Most High, did that to them, even if it was a punishment for their actions, and justice for what He did to them because they deserved it from Him by their disobedience to Him, it was with them because of what He revealed to them of the matters that He revealed to them: of linking their rulings in this world with the rulings of His friends while they were His enemies, and gathering them in the Hereafter with the believers while they were among the deniers of Him until He distinguished between them and them - mocking, and ridiculing them, and deceiving them, and plotting against them. Since the meaning of mockery, ridicule, cunning and deception is what we described before, without that meaning being in a situation in which the one mocking his companion is unjust to him, or is unjust to him, rather that is its meaning in all of its situations, if the qualities that we mentioned earlier are found in the meaning of mockery and what is similar to it from its counterparts.

And in what we said about it, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas:

Abu Kuraib narrated: Uthman bin Saeed narrated: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated: Abu Rawq narrated: Ad-Dahhak narrated: Ibn Abbas, regarding His statement, God mocks them, said: He mocks them to take revenge on them. As for those who claimed that God's statement, God mocks them, is only in the form of an answer, and that there was no mockery, deceit, or trickery from God, then they deny from God, the Almighty, what God, the Almighty, has affirmed for Himself and made obligatory for Him. It is the same for someone to say: There was no mockery, deceit, deception, or mockery from God, the Almighty, of those He informed that He mocks, ridicules, and deceives, or to say: God did not cause the earth to swallow up those nations He informed that He caused to swallow up, nor did He drown those nations He informed that He drowned.

It is said to the one who says this: God, may He be glorified, informed us that He plotted against a people who had passed before us whom we had not seen, and He informed us about others that He caused the earth to swallow them up, and about others that He drowned them. So God, may He be glorified, has confirmed what He told us about that, and we did not differentiate between any of it. So what is your proof for your differentiation of what you differentiated between, by your claim: that He drowned and caused the earth to swallow up the one whom He informed that He drowned and caused the earth to swallow up, and He did not plot against the one whom He informed that He had plotted against?

Then we reverse the statement on him in that, and he will not say anything about one of them except that he will be obligated to do the same about the other.

If he resorts to saying: Mocking is frivolity and play. And that is denied of God Almighty.

It was said to him: If the matter is as you described, meaning mockery, then would you not say, God mocks them, and God mocked them, and God deceived them, even if you do not think that God is mocking or mocking you?

If he says: No, he has lied about the Qur'an and left the religion of Islam.

If he says: Yes, it will be said to him: Do you say, from the perspective you said: God mocks them, and God mocks them, that God plays with them and trifles, and there is no play or trifling from God?

If he says: Yes, he described God with what the Muslims have agreed to deny about Him, and to find fault with the one who described Him with it, and he added to Him what the minds have established as evidence of the error of the one who attributed it to Him.

And if he said: I do not say: God plays with them and does not trifle, and I may say: He mocks them and ridicules them.

It was said: You have differentiated between the meaning of play and fooling around, mockery and ridicule, and cunning and deception. From the perspective that it is permissible to say this and not permissible to say this, their meanings are different. So it is known that each one of them has a meaning other than the meaning of the other. There is a place for speaking about this type other than this, and we did not want to prolong the book by examining it thoroughly. What we have mentioned is sufficient for whoever is guided to understand it.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And He provides them.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of His statement: And He provides for them. Some of them leaned towards what Musa bin Harun told me. He said: Amr told us. He said: Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn

God mocks them and prolongs them in their transgression while they wander blindly.

Mas'ud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He provides for them, means He gives them time.

Others said: Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Suwaid bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Ibn Al-Mubarak, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, reading on the authority of Mujahid: He provides them, he said: He increases them.

Some of the grammarians of Basra interpreted this to mean that it means their mother, and he claimed that it is similar to the Arabs' saying: The boy plays with heels, meaning he plays with heels. He said: This is because they might say: I extended for him and I extended for him in a meaning other than this, and this is the saying of God the Most High: And we extended them (al-Tur 52:22), and this is from: We extended them. He said: It is also said: The sea has extended, so it is extended, and I extended the wound, so it is extended. It was narrated from Yunus al-Jarmi that he used to say: Whatever was evil, it is extended, and whatever was good, it is extended. Then he said: It is as I explained to you, if you meant that you left it, then you extended it for it, and if you meant that you gave it to it, you said: I extended it.

As for some of the grammarians of Kufa, he used to say: Every increase that occurred in a thing from itself is called amdad without an alif, just as you say: madd al-har cat and maddah nahr river another ghayr other than it, if it connected to it and became part of it. And every increase that occurred in a thing from something other than it is called amdad al-jarh the wound, because the maddah is from something other than the wound, and amdad al-jaysh with maddah.

The first of these sayings is correct in his saying: And He gives them extension: that it means He increases them, in the sense of giving them time and leaving them in their insolence and rebellion, as our Lord described what He did with their counterparts in His saying: And We will turn their hearts and their eyes away just as they did not believe in it the first time, and We will leave them in their transgression wandering blindly (al-An'am 6:110), meaning He will give them time and leave them in it, and We will give them time so that they will increase in sin upon sin.

There is no basis for the statement of those who said: This means that He extends to them, because there is no contradiction between the Arabs and those who know their language, that they would accept the statement of the one who said: The river extended another river, meaning: it connected to it so that the water of the connected one became additional to the water of the connected one without any interpretation on their part. That is because its meaning is: The river extended another river. So it is the same in the statement of God: And He extends them in their transgression, wandering blindly.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: in their transgression.

Abu Ja'far said: "Taghyan is a verb, from your saying:

So-and-so transgressed, yutaghan taghyan, meaning he exceeded his limits in a matter and transgressed. From this is the saying of God: "No indeed! Man transgresses, because he sees himself self-sufficient" (Al-'Alaq: 6-7), meaning he exceeds his limits. From this is the saying of Umayyah ibn Abi al-Salt:

And he called upon God with a call that did not come here after his tyranny, so he remained pointing

God Almighty meant by His statement, And prolongs their transgression, that He gives them respite and leaves them to go astray in their misguidance and disbelief, confused and hesitant. Like:

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: In their transgression they wander blindly, he said: In their disbelief they hesitate.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: In their transgression, in their disbelief.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, In their transgression they wander blindly, meaning in their misguidance they wander blindly.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': In their transgression, in their misguidance.

Yunus told us, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding his statement, in their transgression, he said: Their transgression, their disbelief and their misguidance.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: They wander blindly.

Abu Jaafar said: The word Amma itself means: going astray. It is said: So-and-so went astray means he went astray.

And from it is the saying of Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj, describing a misty mountain:

And he fails from time to time from a mission that he avoids in a mission

Blind guidance to the ignorant blind

The word blindness is the plural of general, and they are those who are lost in it and are confused. So the meaning of His statement, In their transgression they wander blindly is: in their misguidance and disbelief, whose filth has overwhelmed them and whose impurity has overcome them, they wander around confusedly in misguidance, not finding a way out of it, because God has sealed and sealed their hearts, and has blinded their eyes from guidance and covered them, so they do not see right guidance nor are they guided to a path.

And in the same way as we said about the turban, the interpretation of the interpreters came.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: They are blind, they persist in their disbelief.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abdullah bin Saleh told us, on the authority of Muawiyah bin Saleh, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They are going blindly, he said: They are persisting.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: They wander blindly, he said: They hesitate.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ibn Abbas said: They are blind: the one who is confused.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told us: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us: Ibn Abi Nujayh told us, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: In their transgression they wander blindly, he said: They hesitate.

Al-Muthanna told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Sufyan bin Wakee' told us: My father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Muthanna told me: Suwaid bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Ibn al-Mubarak, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, reading, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of: Al-Rabi' They wander blindly he said: They hesitate.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: God mocks them and prolongs them in their transgression, wandering blindly.

The Almighty says: God mocks them meaning He takes revenge on them, punishes them, mocks them and repays them for their mockery. So He called the punishment by the name of the sin. This is the opinion of the majority of scholars, and the Arabs use this a lot in their speech. An example of this is the saying of Amr ibn Kulthum:

Let no one be ignorant of us, lest we become more ignorant than the ignorant.

He called his victory ignorance, and ignorance is not something a rational person would boast about. Rather, he said it to double the words and make it easier on the tongue than the contradiction between them. When the Arabs used a word to respond to another word and recompense it, they would mention it with the same wording even if it differed in meaning. This is how the Quran and Sunnah came. God the Almighty said: The recompense for an evil is an evil like it. And He said: So whoever transgresses against you, transgress against him in proportion to his transgression against you. The recompense is not an evil. And retaliation is not an aggression, because it is a right that must be fulfilled. Similar to this is: And they planned, and God planned. And Indeed, they are plotting a plot, and I am plotting a plot. And We are only mocking. "God mocks at them." There is no plotting, mockery, or deception from Him, but it is a recompense for their plotting, mockery, and recompense for their plotting. Similarly, They deceive God, and He is the One Who deceives them. "So they mock at them, God mocks at them." The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

God does not get tired until you get tired, nor does He get bored until you get tired. It was said that until has the meaning of and, meaning get tired. It was also said that it means and you get tired. It was also said that it means and you get tired. It was also said that it means He will not cut off the reward for your deeds until you stop working. Some people said that God does to them actions that, in human contemplation, are mockery, deception, and cunning, according to what was narrated: The fire freezes just as oil freezes, so they walk on it thinking it is a means of salvation, but it swallows them up. Al-Kalbi narrated on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' they are the hypocrites of the People of the Book. He mentioned them and mentioned their mockery, and that when they are alone with their devils, meaning their leaders in disbelief - as mentioned above - they say: We are with you in your religion, we are only mocking the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. God mocks them in the Hereafter. He opens for them the gate of Hell from Paradise, then it is said to them: Come, so they come and glorify God in the Fire, and the believers are on couches - which are the beds - in the bridal chambers looking at them. When they reach the door, it is closed to them, and the believers laugh at them. That is the saying of God the Almighty: God mocks at them, meaning in the Hereafter, and the believers laugh at them when the gates are closed to them. That is the saying of God the Almighty: So today those who believe laugh at the disbelievers, on couches, looking on. at the people of the Fire. Is the garment of the disbelievers what they used to do? Some people said: The deception and mockery from God is His luring them by bestowing worldly blessings upon them. God Almighty shows them goodness in this world that is different from what is hidden from them, and conceals from them the torment of the Hereafter, so they think that He is pleased with them, while He, the Almighty, has decreed their torment. This, according to human contemplation, is like mockery, deceit, and trickery. This interpretation is indicated by the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

If you see God the Almighty giving a servant what he loves while he persists in his sins, then that is only an attempt to lure him in. Then He recited this verse: "But when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the doors of every [good] thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they had been given, We seized them suddenly, and at once they were in despair. So He eliminated the root of the people who did wrong. And praise be to God, Lord of the worlds." Some scholars said about the words of God the Almighty: We will lead them on gradually from where they do not know. Every time they commit a sin, He creates a blessing for them.

God the Almighty said: And He prolongs their time meaning He extends their time and gives them respite and gives them time, as He said: We only grant them respite that they may increase in sin. Its original form is increase. Yunus ibn Habib said: It is said He prolongs their evil and He prolongs their good. God the Almighty said: And We provided you with wealth and children. And He said: And We provided them with fruits and meat, whatever they desired. It was narrated from Al-Akbfash: I provided for him if you left him, and I provided for him if you gave him. Al-Farra' and Al-Lahyani said: I provided when its increase was from something similar to it. It is said the river provided and the river, and in the revelation: and the sea, after it, is replenished by seven more seas. And I provided when its increase was from something other than it, like you say: I provided the army with reinforcements, and from it: Your Lord will provide you with five thousand angels. And I provided means the wound, because the period is from something other than it, meaning it became a period in it.

The Almighty said: In their transgression in their disbelief and misguidance. The root of transgression is to exceed the limit, and from this is the Almighty's saying: When the water overflowed meaning it rose and became high and exceeded the amount that the reservoirs had estimated. And His saying about Pharaoh: Indeed, he transgressed meaning he went too far in his claim when he said: I am your highest lord. The meaning of the verse is: He extends their lives until they increase in transgression, so He increases their punishment.

God the Almighty said: They are blind. They are blind. Mujahid said: That is, they hesitate, seeking to disbelieve. The linguists have said: A man is blind, he is blind and confused, and he is blind and confused. It is said that a man is blind and confused, and the plural is blind. His camels went blind if he does not know where they went. Blindness is in the eye, and blindness is in the heart. In the Qur'an: For indeed, it is not the eyes that are blind, but blind are the hearts which are within the breasts.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And when these hypocrites meet the believers, they say: We believe, and they show them faith, loyalty and friendship, to deceive the believers and out of hypocrisy, flattery and dissimulation, and to share with them what they have attained of good and spoils. And when they are alone with their devils means when they turn away and depart and are alone with their devils. So the word they were alone implies that they turned away because it is transitive with to to indicate the implied action and the spoken action. Some of them said to here means with, and the first is better, and this is what Ibn Jarir's speech revolves around. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik: They were alone means they went away, and their devils are their masters and leaders from the rabbis of the Jews and the leaders of the polytheists and hypocrites. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And when they are alone with their devils means they are their leaders in disbelief. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they are alone with their companions, who are their devils. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they are alone with their devils, from the Jews who order them to deny and oppose what the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, came with. Mujahid said: And when they are alone with their devils, to their companions from the hypocrites and polytheists. Qatada said: And when they are alone with their devils, meaning to their leaders and chiefs in polytheism and evil. Abu Malik, Abu al-Aaliyah, As-Suddi, and Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas interpreted it similarly. Ibn Jarir said: The devils of every thing are its rebels, and the devil is from among mankind and jinn as God Almighty said: And thus We have made for every prophet an enemy - devils from mankind and jinn, inspiring to one another decorative speech in delusion. And in Al-Musnad on the authority of Abu Dharr, he said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: We seek refuge in God from the devils of mankind and jinn. I said: O Messenger, do mankind have devils? He said: Yes." And His statement: "They said: We are with you," Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, meaning: We are on the same as you are. We are only mocking, meaning: We are only mocking the people and playing with them. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They said: We are only mocking and ridiculing the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas and Qatadah said the same. And the Almighty said in response and response to their actions: God mocks them and prolongs their transgression while they wander blindly. Ibn Jarir said: God informed us that He will do that to them on the Day of Resurrection in His statement: "On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believe, 'Wait for us that we may take from your light.' It will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' So a wall will be set up between them with a door, inside of which will be mercy, but outside of which will be punishment." And the statement of God: "And let not those who disbelieve think that Our granting them respite is better for themselves. We only grant them respite so that they may increase in sin." He said: This and what is similar to it is the mockery, ridicule, deception, and trickery of God, the Most High, to the hypocrites and the polytheists with Him, according to the one who said this statement and interpreted this interpretation. He said: And others said: Rather, His mockery of them is His rebuke and censure of them for the sins and disbelief they committed with Him. He said: Others said this and similar things as a way of answering, like a man saying to someone he deceives when he gets hold of him, I am the one who deceived you. There was no deception on his part, but he said that when the matter was up to him. They said: And likewise the saying of God Almighty, And they plotted, and God plotted, and God is the best of plotters, and God mocks at them, as an answer, and God does not plot or mock. The meaning is that deceit and mockery befell them. Others said that the Almighty's statement, "We were only mockers. God mocks at them," and His statement, They deceive God, but He deceives them, and His statement, So they mock at them, God mocks at them, and They forgot God, so He forgot them, and what is similar to that is information from God, the Almighty, that He will reward them with the reward of mockery and punish them with the punishment of deception. So He brought out His report about His reward and punishment of them in a way that He brought out His report about their action for which they deserved punishment in wording, even though the two meanings differed, as God, the Almighty, said, "The recompense for an evil is an evil like it. But whoever pardons and makes reconciliation, his reward is upon God," and His statement, But whoever transgresses against you, transgress against him, so the first is injustice and the second is justice, so they understand that even if their wording is the same, their meaning differs. He said, And to this meaning they directed everything in the Qur'an that is similar to that. He said: Others said that the meaning of this is that God informed about the hypocrites that when they enter their apostates they will say: We are with you in your religion in denying Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and we are only mocking what we show them of what we say to them. So God informed that He mocks them and shows them from His rulings in this world, meaning the protection of their blood and wealth, other than what He has in the Hereafter, meaning from punishment and chastisement. Then Ibn Jarir began to explain this statement and support it because deceit, trickery, and mockery in the form of play and frivolity are absent from God, the Almighty, by consensus. As for in the form of revenge and retaliation with justice and recompense, that is not impossible. He said, and similar to what we said about it, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Abu Kurayb told us, who said: Abu Uthman told us, who said: Bishr bin Abi Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement, God mocks them, he said: He mocks them to take revenge on them. And the statement of the Most High, And prolongs their transgression, wandering blindly, As-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He prolongs them, He gives them respite. And Mujahid said: He increases them. And the Most High said: Do they think that what We provide them with of wealth and children? * We hasten to them in good things? Rather, they do not perceive. And He said: We will gradually lead them on from where they do not know. Some of them said: Every time they committed a sin, He created for them a blessing, which is in reality a punishment. And the Most High said: "So when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the gates of every [good] thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they had been given, We seized them suddenly, and at once they were in despair. So He cut off the root of the people who did wrong. And praise be to God, Lord of the worlds." Ibn Jarir said: The correct is: We increase them in a way. Dictation and leaving them in their insolence and rebellion as God Almighty said: And We will turn away their hearts and their eyes just as they did not believe in it the first time and leave them in their transgression wandering blindly. Transgression is going beyond something as God Almighty said: Indeed, when the water overflowed, We carried you in the moving ship. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding their transgression, They wander blindly in their disbelief, wavering. And this is how As-Suddi interpreted it with his chain of transmission on the authority of the Companions, and Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, Mujahid, Abu Malik, and Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid say this regarding their disbelief and misguidance. Ibn Jarir said: And blindness means misguidance. It is said that someone is blind, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, he is amahu, his uncle, his plural is amahu, and his saying in their transgression they are blind in their misguidance and their disbelief whose filth has overwhelmed them and whose impurity has covered them, they wander around confusedly in misguidance and they do not find a way out of it because God has sealed their hearts and blinded their sight from guidance and covered it so they do not see right guidance nor are they guided to a path. Some of them said: Blindness is in the eye and blindness is in the heart, and blindness is also used in the heart, God the Almighty said: "For indeed, it is not the eyes that are blinded, but blinded are the hearts which are within the breasts" and you say that a man is amahu, he is amahu, his ama, and his plural is amahu, and his camels went blind if he did not know where they went.

God responded to them by saying: 15- "God mocks them" meaning He brings down humiliation and contempt upon them, takes revenge on them and belittles them as a way to avenge His believing servants against them. God, the Almighty, made what happened from Him mockery, even though it was a punishment and a similar reward. When the Arabs used a word to respond to another word as a response or recompense, they would mention it with the same word, even if it differed from it in meaning. This was mentioned in the Quran a lot, including "And the recompense for an evil is an evil like it So whoever transgresses against you, transgress against him in proportion to his transgression against you" and the recompense is not an evil. And retaliation is not an aggression because it is true, including "And they planned, and God planned Indeed, they are planning a plan * And I am planning a plan They deceive God and those who believe They deceive God, and He is the deceiver You know what is in my soul, and I do not know what is in your soul". It is found frequently in the Sunnah, such as the saying of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him): God does not get tired until you get tired. He only said, God mocks them because it indicates renewal from time to time, which is more severe on them, more painful for their hearts, and more painful for them than the permanent, fixed mockery derived from the nominal sentence, because it is tangible that the punishment that occurs from time to time, and is renewed from time to time, is more severe for the one upon whom it befalls than the permanent, ongoing torment because he becomes accustomed to it and accustoms himself to it. And extension means increase. Yunus ibn Habib said: It is said to extend in evil and to extend in good, and from this: And We provided you with wealth and children, and And We provided them with fruits and meat. Al-Akhfash said: I extended for him if I left him, and I extended: if I gave him. Al-Farra and Al-Laythani said: "I extended what was increased by an increase of its like. It is said: he extended the river, and from this is "and the sea will be replenished by seven more seas after it." And I extended what was increased by something else, and from this is your Lord will reinforce you with five thousand angels. And tyranny is exceeding the limit and exaggeration in disbelief, and from this is When the water overflowed, meaning it exceeded the amount estimated by the treasurers, and his saying about Pharaoh: He has transgressed, meaning he went too far in his claim when he said: I am your highest Lord. And the blind and the general: the confused and hesitant, and his camels went to his uncle: if he does not know where they went, and blindness in the heart is like blindness in the eye. It was said in Al-Kashshaf: Blindness is like blindness, except that blindness is in sight and opinion, and blindness is in opinion specifically. End. What is meant is that God, the Most High, extends the period for them and gives them respite as He said: We only grant them respite so that they may increase in sin. Ibn Jarir said: They wander blindly in their transgression in their misguidance and disbelief that has overwhelmed them, wandering around confusedly in misguidance, not finding a way out of it, because God has set a seal on their hearts and has blinded their eyes from guidance and covered them, so they do not see right guidance nor are they guided to a path. Al-Wahidi and Al-Tha'labi narrated with a weak chain of transmission, because it includes Muhammad ibn Marwan, who is rejected, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: This verse was revealed about Abdullah ibn Ubayy and his companions, and he mentioned a story that happened to them with Abu Bakr, Umar, and Ali, may God be pleased with them. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority that he said: When some of the Jews met the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, or some of them, they would say: We follow your religion. But when they were alone with their devils, who were their brothers, they would say: We are with you, on the same basis as you. We are only mocking, at the companions of Muhammad. God mocks them, he said: He mocks them to take revenge on them. And prolongs them in their transgression, he said: in their disbelief. They wander blindly, he said: they hesitate. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Al-Asma' wa'l-Sifat on his authority with a similar meaning and longer. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority something similar to the first. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud regarding his statement: And when they are alone with their devils, he said: their leaders in disbelief. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Malik that he said: And when they are alone, meaning they go on. And Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada something similar to what Ibn Masoud said. And Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud regarding his statement: And He gives them respite he said: He gives them time. In their transgression they wander blindly he said: In their disbelief they persist. And Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas something similar to what Ibn Masoud said regarding the interpretation of They wander blindly. And Al-Faryabi, Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Mujahid He gives them respite he said: He increases them. In their transgression they wander blindly he said: They play and hesitate in misguidance. And Ahmad narrated in Al-Musnad on the authority of Abu Dharr who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: We seek refuge in God from the devils of mankind and jinn. So I said: O Messenger of God, are there devils among mankind? He said: Yes.

Abu Jaafar read: mustahazin and yathahazin and say they mocked and li-tafu and li-watawa and yastathanabuka and khatatin and khatun and mutakun and mutakun and malawun and munshun without the hamza in them.

15. God mocks them meaning He punishes them for their mockery. The punishment is called by its name because it is in response to it, as God the Most High said: And the recompense for an evil is an evil like it 40-Ash-Shura. Ibn Abbas said: It is that a door to Paradise is opened for them, and when they reach it, it is closed to them and they are returned to the Fire. It was said that it is that a light is struck for the believers by which they walk on the path, and when the hypocrites reach it, a barrier is placed between them and the believers, as God the Most High said: And a barrier will be placed between them and what they desire 54-Saba. God the Most High said: So a wall will be set up between them with a door 13-Al-Hadid.

Al-Hasan said that its meaning is that God exposes the believers to their hypocrisy. And He gives them respite He leaves them and gives them respite. The word and provision and provision are the same, and its origin is an increase, except that provision is more common in evil and provision in good. God the Most High said about provision: And We will prolong for him a provision of punishment 79-Maryam. He said about provision: And We provided you with wealth and children 6-Al-Isra. And We provided them with fruits 22-At-Tur in their transgression meaning in their misguidance. Its origin is exceeding the limit. And from it the water overflowed they are wandering blindly meaning they are wandering in misguidance, confused.

15- "God mocks them" He punishes them for their mockery. The punishment for mockery is called by its name, just as the punishment for a bad deed is called a bad deed, either because the word is matched by the word, or because it is similar to it in degree, or the consequences of mockery return to them and they are like those who mock them, or they are brought down with contempt and humiliation which is the necessary consequence of mockery, or the purpose of it, or He treats them as one who mocks. As for in this world, it is by applying the rulings of the Muslims to them, and luring them with respite and an increase in blessings in order to persist in their transgression. As for in the Hereafter, it is by opening for them while they are in the Fire a door to Paradise so that they can hasten towards it, but when they reach it, the door is closed on them. This is the saying of God the Most High: "So today those who believe laugh at the disbelievers." It was only resumed and not conjoined to indicate that God the Most High took charge of punishing them, and did not require the believers to oppose them, and that their mockery is not taken into account in contrast to what God does. He exalted them, and perhaps he did not say: God is mocking them, to match their words, hinting that mockery occurs from time to time and is renewed from time to time, and thus were God's punishments upon them, as God Almighty said: Do they not see that they are tested every year once or twice?

"And He extends them in their transgression, they wander blindly. From the verb mudd to increase and strengthen an army, and from it muddat I extended the lamp and the earth if you improve them with oil and fertilizer, not from mudd to extend in life, for it is transitive with the preposition lam like amla lahu". This is indicated by Ibn Kathir's reading and He extends them. When the Mu'tazilah were unable to take the statement literally, they said: When God, the Most High, prevented them from the kindness that He bestows upon the believers and let them down because of their disbelief and insistence, and blocked the paths of success for themselves, so their hearts became increasingly dark and oppressed, the hearts of the believers became increasingly open and enlightened, and Satan was able to mislead them, so he increased their transgression. This was attributed to God, the Most High, as an action is attributed to a cause, metaphorically, and transgression was added to them so that it would not be imagined that the action is attributed to Him in reality. The proof of this is that when He attributed the extension to the devils, He released the error and said: "And their brothers extend them in error." Or its origin is extending them in the sense of giving them time and extending their lives so that they would be alert and obey, but they only increased in transgression and blindness, so the lam was deleted and the verb was transitive by itself as in the Almighty's saying: And Moses chose his people. Or the meaning is extending them in order to reform them, and they are still blind in disbelief. And transgression with dammah and kasrah is like luqyan, and transgression: exceeding the limit in insolence, and extremism in disbelief, and its origin is exceeding the limit in something from its place. God Almighty said: When the water overflowed, We carried you. And blindness in insight is like blindness in sight, and it is: confusion in a matter. It is said a man is blind and blind, and a land is blind without lights. He said:

Blind guidance to the ignorant blind

Surat al-Baqarah 2:16

Those are the ones who have purchased error at the price of guidance, so their transaction has brought them no profit, nor were they guided.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:16

Those are the ones who have purchased error at the price of guidance, so their transaction has brought them no profit, nor were they guided.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Those who have purchased error in place of guidance i.e., they have exchanged it for guidance (so their transaction has brought no profit) i.e., they have not gained from it, but rather they have lost because of their destination to the eternal Fire and they were not guided in what they did.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say: How did these people buy misguidance in exchange for guidance, when they were hypocrites whose hypocrisy was not preceded by faith, then it would be said about them that they sold their guidance that they were upon for their misguidance that they exchanged for it? You know that the meaning of the understood purchase is: exchanging something for something else in its place, and the hypocrites whom God described with this characteristic were never upon guidance, so they abandoned it and exchanged it for disbelief and hypocrisy.

It was said: The people of interpretation differed about the meaning of that, so we will mention what they said about it, then we will explain the correct interpretation of that, God willing: Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah bin al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, meaning disbelief in exchange for faith.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Those are the ones who purchased misguidance in exchange for guidance. He said: They took misguidance and abandoned guidance.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, they preferred error over guidance.

Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, he said: Isa ibn Maymun told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, they believed then disbelieved. Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Abu Ja'far said: It is as if those who said in their interpretation of that: They took misguidance and abandoned guidance, directed the meaning of the purchase to the fact that the purchaser took the place of the price with which it was purchased, so they said: Likewise the hypocrite and the disbeliever, they took disbelief in place of faith, so that was a purchase from them for the disbelief and misguidance that they took by leaving what they left of guidance, and the guidance that they left was the price that they made in exchange for the misguidance that they took.

As for those who interpreted the meaning of His statement they bought as preferring, then when they found that God Almighty had described the disbelievers in another place, and attributed to them their preference for disbelief over guidance, and said: As for Thamud, We guided them, but they preferred blindness over guidance (Fussilat 41:17), they turned His statement they bought misguidance over guidance to that and said: The preposition ba may be used in place of ala and ala in place of the preposition ba, just as it is said: I passed by so-and-so, and I passed by so-and-so, with one meaning, and like the statement of God Almighty: And among the People of the Scripture is he who, if you entrust him with a great amount of wealth, he will return it to you (Al-Imran: 75), meaning for a great amount. So the interpretation of the verse was according to the meaning of these: those who chose misguidance over guidance. And I think that they directed the meaning of God Almighty's statement they bought to the meaning of they chose, because the Arabs say: I bought such-and-such for such-and-such, and I bought it, meaning I chose it over it.

Among the examples of showing off is the saying of A'sha Bani Tha'laba:

He brought the veiled maiden out of her chamber and spread gambling.

It means the chosen one.

Dhu al-Rummah said, regarding purchasing in the sense of choosing:

He defends the issues of the buyers as if they were crowds under the meadows of the mountains

By buyers means: the chosen one.

Another said something similar:

Buyers are the softness of money and the heart is the choice of money

Abu Ja'far said: Even if this is a way of interpretation, I do not have a choice in it. Because God Almighty said:

So their trade has brought them no profit, and with that he indicated that the meaning of His statement, Those are the ones who have purchased error in place of guidance, is the meaning of the purchase that people are familiar with, of exchanging one thing for another, and taking compensation for compensation.

As for those who said: The people were believers and then disbelieved, then there is no burden on them, if the matter was as they described the people. Because if the matter was like that, then they abandoned faith and replaced it with disbelief instead of guidance. That is the meaning understood from the meanings of buying and selling, but the evidence of the beginning of the verses in describing them to the end, indicates that the people were never illuminated by the light of faith, nor entered the religion of Islam. Have you not heard God, the Most High, from the time He began describing them until He came to their description? He only described them by showing lies with their tongues: by their claim to believe in our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought, deceiving God, His Messenger, and the believers in their own eyes, and mocking the believers in their souls, while they were not what they showed, inwardly. God the Almighty says: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. (al-Baqarah 2:8) Then He related their story until His statement: Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance. So where is the evidence that they were believers and then disbelieved? If the one who said this thought that His statement, Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, is evidence that the people had been believers and then moved from it to disbelief, and that is why they were told, they purchased, then this is an interpretation that is not acceptable to him, since purchasing, according to his opponents, may mean taking something by leaving something else, or it may mean choosing, and other meanings. If a word has multiple meanings, no one can change its meaning to some of its meanings and not others, except with an argument that must be accepted.

Abu Ja'far said: What I think is more appropriate in the interpretation of the verse is what we have narrated from Ibn 'Abbas and Ibn Mas'ud regarding their interpretation of the statement, They have purchased error in place of guidance: They took error and abandoned guidance. This is because every disbeliever in God has exchanged faith for disbelief, by acquiring the disbelief that he found in him, instead of the faith that he was commanded to have. Have you not heard God, the Most High, say about the one who acquired disbelief in Him instead of faith in Him and His Messenger: And whoever exchanges faith for disbelief has certainly strayed from the right path (al-Baqarah 2:108). This is the meaning of purchasing, because every buyer of something is exchanging what he took from him for something else instead of it. Likewise the hypocrite and the disbeliever, they exchanged guidance for misguidance and hypocrisy, so God led them astray and took away the light of guidance, so He left them all in darkness, unable to see. The statement in the interpretation of His statement, Then their trade has brought them no profit.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of this is that the hypocrites, by purchasing misguidance for guidance, lost and did not profit, because the profit among the merchants is the one who exchanges his owned goods for something more valuable than his owned goods or better than the price at which he bought them. As for the one who exchanges his goods for something less than them and less than the price at which he bought them, he is the loser in his trade without a doubt. Likewise the disbeliever and the hypocrite, because they chose confusion and blindness over guidance and right conduct, and fear and terror over preservation and security, and they exchanged confusion for guidance in the immediate life, misguidance for guidance, fear for preservation, and terror for security, along with what has been prepared for them in the hereafter of painful punishment and severe torment. So they failed and lost, that is the clear loss.

Qatada used to say something similar to what we said about that.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, So their trade brought them no profit, nor were they guided. By God, you have seen them depart from guidance to misguidance, from unity to division, from security to fear, and from the Sunnah to innovation.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone says: What is the meaning of his saying: So their trade did not profit, is trade something that brings profit or loss, so it is said: it brought profit or loss?

It was said: The reason for that is not what you thought. Rather, the meaning of that is: They did not profit from their trade, neither in what they bought nor in what they sold. But God, the Most High, addressed the Arabs in His Book, so He followed in His address to them and His explanation to them the same approach as they address one another and their common explanation. Since it was eloquent to them to say to another: Your efforts were in vain, your night slept, your sale was lost, and similar speech in which it is not hidden from the listener what the speaker intends, He addressed them with what is in their logic of speech, and He said: They did not profit from their trade, since it was reasonable to them that profit is only in trade, like sleeping at night. So He was satisfied with the understanding of those addressed by the meaning of that, rather than saying: They did not profit from their trade, even though that was its meaning, as the poet said:

The worst of deaths is a dead person among his family, like the death of a young girl who surrenders to his family while he is alive.

He meant by that: The worst of deaths is the death of a person who dies among his family. So he was satisfied with the listener understanding what he meant by that, rather than revealing what he left out, as Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj said:

Harith, you have relieved my worries, so I can sleep at night and my sorrow has been dispelled.

He described the night as sleeping, meaning that he is the one who slept, as Jarir ibn al-Khatfi said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:16

Those are the ones who have purchased error at the price of guidance, so their transaction has brought them no profit, nor were they guided.

A one-eyed man from Nabhan, he is blind during the day, but sees at night.

He added blindness and sight to night and day, and he meant to describe Al-Nabhani with that.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And they were not guided.

What He, the Most High, means by His saying, And they were not guided, is that they were not rightly guided in their choice of misguidance over guidance, their replacement of faith with disbelief, and their purchase of hypocrisy in exchange for belief and acknowledgment.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance. So their transaction has brought no profit, nor were they guided."

God the Almighty said: Those are the ones who have purchased error at the price of guidance. Sibawayh said: The waw was added to the word ishtaraw in order to differentiate it from the original waw, like: And if they had remained straight on the path. Ibn Kaysan said: The damma in the waw is lighter than in others because it is of the same type. Al-Zajaj said: It was moved with the damma as he did in nahnu. Ibn Abi Ishaq and Yahya ibn Ya'mar read the waw with a kasra based on the principle of two quiescent letters meeting. Abu Zayd al-Ansari narrated on the authority of Qanab Abi al-Samal al-'Adawi that he read the waw with a fatha because of the lightness of the fatha even if what preceded it was a fatha. Al-Kisa'i permitted the hamza and damma of the waw like ad'ur. And ishtaraw is from shira'. Here shira' is borrowed. The meaning is that they preferred disbelief over faith, like he said: So they preferred blindness over guidance. He expressed it as shira' because buying is only in what its buyer loves. As for the meaning of buying being in exchange, no, because the hypocrites were not believers, so they would sell their faith. Ibn Abbas said: They took misguidance and abandoned guidance. Its meaning is that they exchanged and chose disbelief over faith. And he only used the wording of buying as an extension, because buying and trading go back to exchange, and the Arabs use that for everyone who exchanges one thing for another. Abu Dhu'ayb said:

If you claim that I was the most ignorant among you, then I bought patience after you with ignorance.

The root of error is confusion. Forgetfulness is called error because of the confusion it causes. God Almighty said: I did it then, while I was among the astray, meaning the forgetful. Destruction is called error, as God Almighty said: And they said, 'Shall we then be lost in the earth?'

The Almighty said: So their trade did not profit them. The Almighty attributed the profit to the trade, as is the custom of the Arabs when they say: Your sale profited, and Your deal lost, and when they say: You stood in prayer at night and fasted during the day. The meaning is: You profited and lost in your trade, and you stood in prayer at night and fasted during the day, meaning: So they did not profit in their trade. The poet said:

Your day is wandering and your night is sleeping, so do the animals live in this world

Ibn Kaysan: It is permissible to trade and commerce, and to misguide and misguidance.

God Almighty says: And they were not guided in their purchase of misguidance. It was said: in God's prior knowledge. Guidance is the opposite of misguidance, and it has been mentioned previously.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the Companions, Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, meaning they took error and abandoned guidance. Ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, meaning disbelief in exchange for faith. Mujahid said they believed then disbelieved. Qatada said: They preferred error over guidance. What Qatada said is similar in meaning to what God Almighty said about Thamud, As for Thamud, We guided them, but they preferred blindness over guidance. The gist of what the commentators said in what preceded is that the hypocrites turned away from guidance to error and exchanged guidance for error, and this is the meaning of God Almighty's saying, Those are the ones who have purchased error in exchange for guidance, meaning they gave guidance in exchange for error, and it is the same for those among them who had faith then turned back to disbelief, as He said. God the Almighty said about them: That is because they believed and then disbelieved, so their hearts were sealed, or that they preferred misguidance to guidance, as is the case with another group of them, for they are types and divisions. For this reason God the Almighty said: So their trade did not profit them, nor were they guided. That is, their deal in this pledge did not profit them, nor were they guided, that is, they were rightly guided in their actions. Ibn Jarir said: Bashir told us: Yazid told us: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: So their trade did not profit them, nor were they guided. By God, you have seen them depart from guidance to misguidance, from community to division, from security to fear, and from the Sunnah to innovation. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it in the same manner from the hadith of Yazid ibn Zari' on the authority of Saeed on the authority of Qatada.

Fath al-Qadir

Sibawayh said: The waw is correct in 16- Ishtara to differentiate it from the original waw in the words Walu istaqamau. Al-Zajjaj said: It is moved with damma as is done in Nahnu. Yahya bin Ya'mar read with kasra on the waw based on the principle of two quiescent letters meeting. Abu Al-Sammak Al-Adwa read with fatha because of the lightness of the fatha. Al-Kisa'i permitted the hamza of the waw. Here, buying is borrowed for substitution: i.e. they exchanged misguidance for guidance, as in the Almighty's saying: So they preferred blindness over guidance. As for the meaning of buying being exchange as is its original meaning, it is not true, because the hypocrites were not believers, so they would sell their faith, and the Arabs use that for anyone who exchanges one thing for another. Abu Dhu'ayb said:

If you claim that I am the most ignorant among you, then I will buy the dream after you with ignorance

The root of misguidance is confusion, deviation from the intended goal, and loss of guidance. It is used to refer to forgetfulness, as in the saying of God the Almighty: He said, 'Then I would have done it, while I was among those astray.' And to destruction, as in His saying: And they said, 'Shall we then be lost in the land?' The root of profit is surplus. Trade is the trade of a merchant, and profit is attributed to it according to the Arabs' custom in saying: Your sale is profitable, and your deal is a loss. This is from metaphorical attribution, which is attributing an action to a thing that accompanies the doer, as is established in the science of semantics. What is meant is: they profited and lost. Guidance has been previously established: that is, they were not guided in their purchase of misguidance. It was said: in God's prior knowledge. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: They purchased misguidance in exchange for guidance. Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Qatada, who said: They preferred misguidance over guidance. By God, you have seen them depart from guidance to misguidance, from unity to division, from security to fear, and from the Sunnah to innovation.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

16. Those are the ones who have purchased error in place of guidance meaning they exchanged disbelief for faith. Their trade has brought them no profit meaning they have not made any profit in their trade. He added the profit to the trade because profit is in it, as the Arabs say: your sale is profitable and your deal is a loss. And they were not guided from error, and it was said that they were correct in their trade.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

16- Those who have purchased misguidance in place of guidance they chose it over it and exchanged it for it, and its origin is the giving of a price to obtain what is sought from the objects, so if one of the two exchanges is ripe, it is necessary, since it is not sought for its object, that it be a price and its giving is a purchase, otherwise whichever of the two exchanges you imagined in the form of a price, then its giver is a buyer and its taker is a seller, and for this reason the two words were considered opposites, then it was used as a metaphor for turning away from what is in one's hand, obtaining something else with it, whether it is from the meanings or the objects, and from this is the saying of the poet:

I took the whole head with a bald head and clear folds of dandruff

And with a long life, a long life is given to a Muslim, just as he bought a Christian.

Then it was expanded and used to denote a desire for something in order to desire something else. The meaning is that they neglected the guidance that God made for them based on the nature that He created people with, obtaining the misguidance that they went to. Or they chose misguidance and preferred it over guidance.

So their trade did not profit them. This is a metaphor, because when buying was used in their dealings, it was followed by something similar to it as a representation of their loss, and something similar to it:

When I saw the eagle, Ezz bin Daba, nesting in his nest, my chest was filled with joy.

Trade: seeking profit through buying and selling. Profit: the surplus over capital, and that is why it is called shafa. It is attributed to trade and is for its owners in general because it is associated with the agent, or because it is similar to it in that it is the cause of profit and loss.

And they were not guided to the paths of trade, because the purpose of it is the safety of capital and profit. These people have lost both goals because their capital was sound nature and pure reason. When they believed in these errors, their readiness was lost, their reason was disturbed, and they had no capital left to use to attain the truth and achieve perfection. So they remained losers, despairing of profit and lacking the origin.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:17

Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire; but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:17

Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire; but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Their example their description in their hypocrisy is like the example of one who kindled lit a fire in darkness and when it illuminated illuminated what was around him so he could see and warm himself and felt safe from the one he feared God took away their light extinguished it, and the pronoun was pluralized in consideration of the meaning of who and left them in darkness, not seeing what was around them, confused about the path, afraid. So likewise these people believed by declaring the word of faith, and when they died, fear and punishment came to them.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How was it said, Their likeness is like the one who kindled a fire, when you know that the ha and the mim in His saying, Their likeness, are a metaphor for a group of men or men and women, and who refers to one of the males? How could the report about one person be made an example for a group? Why not say: Their likeness is like the one who kindled a fire? And if it is permissible for you to use the group as an example, then would you permit someone who saw a group of men and was impressed by their appearance, the perfection of their creation, and their bodies, to say: As if these, or as if the bodies of these, were a palm tree? It was said: As for the place where our Lord, may He be glorified, likened a group of hypocrites to the one person whom He made an example of for their actions, then it is permissible and good, and in similar cases, as He, may He be glorified, said in a similar case: Their eyes will roll like one who is fainting from death (al-Ahzab 33:19), meaning like the rolling of the eye of one who is fainting from death, and as He said: He did not create you and resurrect you except as a single soul (Luqman 31:28), meaning: except as the resurrection of a single soul.

As for representing the bodies of a group of men, in height and perfection, with a single palm tree, this is not permissible, nor is it in its counterparts, due to the difference between them.

As for the comparison of the group of hypocrites with a single fire, this is permissible because what is meant by the report about the example of the hypocrites is the report about the example of their illumination with what they showed with their tongues of acknowledgment while they concealed other bad beliefs, and their mixing of their inner hypocrisy with the acknowledgment of apparent faith. And illumination, even if the persons of its people differ, has one meaning, not different meanings. So the example for it is in the meaning of the example for a single person, from things with different persons.

The interpretation of this is: Like the hypocrites being illuminated by what they showed of acknowledging God and Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, in word, while they deny it in belief, is like the lighting of a fire in a stove. Then the mention of lighting was omitted, and the example was attributed to them, as Nabigha Bani Ja'dah said:

How do you communicate with someone who has become like Abu Marhab?

He means: like the khallalah of Abu Marhab, so he omitted Halalah, since it was, in what appeared from the speech, an indication to his listeners of what was omitted from it. So the same is said in his saying: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire, since it was known to his listeners from what appeared from the speech, that the example was only given for the people's illumination by the acknowledgment and not their bodies, it was good to omit the mention of the illumination, and to add the example to its people. What is meant by the example is what we mentioned. So when we described, it was permissible and good to say: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire, and the example of the group is similar in wording to one, since what was meant by the example is one in meaning.

But if it is intended to liken a group of human beings or beings of forms and bodies to something, then the correct way to say it is to liken a group to a group, and one to one, because the essence of each one of them is not the essence of the others.

Therefore, from the meaning, the statement differed in likening actions and nouns. It is permissible to liken the actions of a group of people and others if they have the same meaning to the action of one person, then delete the names of the actions and add the example and likeness to those who have the action. So it is said: Your actions are nothing but like the action of a dog. Then it is deleted and it is said: Your actions are nothing but like a dog or like dogs, and you mean: except like the action of a dog, except like the action of dogs. It is not permissible to say: They are nothing but a palm tree, and you mean to liken their bodies to palm trees in length and perfection.

As for his saying: Light a fire, it is interpreted as: ignite, as the poet said:

Farewell supplication: O He who responds to the generosity, but no one responds to Him at that time

He meant: So he did not answer him, so the meaning of the speech was: Like the illumination of these hypocrites in their showing to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to the believers with their tongues, from their saying: We believe in God and the Last Day, and we believe in Muhammad and what he brought, while they are concealing disbelief in what God will do to them, like the illumination of a kindler with his fire, until the fire illuminates what is around him, meaning: what is around the kindler.

Some of the Arabists from Basra claimed that who in His statement: Like the one who kindled a fire, means those, as God Almighty said: And he who brought the truth and believed in it - those are the righteous (al-Zumar 39:33), and as the poet said:

Those whose blood was shed in Falaj are the people,
all the people, O Umm Khalid.

Abu Ja'far said: The first statement is the statement, for what we have described of the reason. And the one who said that has overlooked the difference between that in the two verses and in the verse. Because that in His statement: And he who brought the truth, the indication has come that its meaning is the plural, which is His statement: Those are the righteous, and likewise that in the verse, which is His statement: their bloods. And this indication is not in His statement: Like the one who kindled a fire. So that is the difference between that in His statement: Like the one who kindled a fire, and the rest of his evidence that he cited as evidence that the meaning of that in His statement: Like the one who kindled a fire is the meaning of sexual intercourse. And it is not permissible for anyone to transfer the word that is most commonly used by the Arabs from one meaning to another, except with an argument that must be accepted.

Then the people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of that. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas that there are sayings about it: One of them is: What Muhammad ibn Humayd narrated to us: Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: God gave an example of the hypocrites, saying: Their likeness is that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darknesses [so that they could not see]. That is, they see the truth and speak it, but when they emerge with it from the darkness of disbelief, they extinguish it with their disbelief in it and their hypocrisy in it, so He left them in the darkness of disbelief, so they do not see guidance nor do they remain steadfast in the truth.

The other: What Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim narrated to us, he said: Abu Salih narrated to us, he said: Muawiyah bin Salih narrated to us, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talhah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire to the end of the verse: This is a parable that God gave to the hypocrites, that they used to take pride in Islam, so the Muslims would marry them, inherit from them, and share the spoils with them. But when they died, God took away that pride from them, just as the owner of the fire took away his light. And left them in darkness means: in torment.

The third: What Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darknesses where they could not see. He claimed that some people entered Islam when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, entered Medina, then they became hypocrites, so their example was like that of a man who was in darkness, so he kindled a fire and it illuminated what was around him in dirt or harm, so he could see it until he knew what to avoid. While he was like that, his fire was extinguished, so he came forward not knowing what harm to avoid. So the same is the case with the hypocrite: he was in the darkness of polytheism, then he became Muslim, so he knew what was permissible from what was forbidden, and good from evil, but while he was like that, he disbelieved, so he no longer knew what was permissible from what was forbidden, or good from evil. As for the light, it is the belief in what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought. And the darkness was their hypocrisy.

The other: What Muhammad ibn Sa'd told me, he said: My father Sa'd ibn Muhammad told me, he said: My uncle told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: His statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, to so they will not return, God made it an example for the hypocrite. And His statement: God has taken away their light, he said: As for the light, it is their faith that they speak of. As for the darkness, it is their misguidance and disbelief that they speak of, and they are a people who were on guidance then it was taken away from them, so they rebelled after that.

Others said: What Bishr ibn Muadh narrated to me, he said: Yazid ibn Zari' narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darknesses [so] they could not see, and that the hypocrite spoke, There is no god but God, and it illuminated him in this world, so he married Muslims with it, fought Muslims with it, inherited from Muslims with it, and protected his blood and wealth with it. Then when he was about to die, the hypocrite took it away, because it had no basis in his heart, nor any reality in his knowledge.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, meaning: There is no god but God. It illuminated for them, so they ate and drank with it, and felt safe in this world, and married women, and protected their blood with it, until when they died, God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see.

Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire; but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Abu Tamila told me, on the authority of Ubaid bin Sulayman, on the authority of Al-Dahhak bin Muzahim, regarding his statement: Like the example of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, he said: As for the light, it is their faith that they speak of, and as for the darkness, it is their misguidance and disbelief.

Others said: Muhammad ibn Amr al-Bahili told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, he said: Isa ibn Maimun told us, he said: Ibn Abi Nujayh told us, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, he said: As for the lighting of the fire, it is their turning toward the believers and guidance, and the disappearance of their light is their turning toward the disbelievers and misguidance.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us, on the authority of Shibl, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him. As for the lighting of the fire, it is their turning toward the believers and guidance, and the disappearance of their light is their turning toward the disbelievers and misguidance.

Al-Qasim told me, he said: Al-Hussein told me, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, who said: He gave an example of the hypocrites, saying: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. He said: The light and glow of the fire is only what you kindled, so when it goes out, its light goes away. This is also the case with the hypocrite. Whenever he speaks a word of sincerity, it lights up for him, but when he doubts, he falls into darkness.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd told me, regarding His statement: Like one who kindled a fire, to the end of the verse, he said: This is the description of the hypocrites. They had believed until faith shone in their hearts, just as the fire shone for those who kindled it. Then they disbelieved, so God took away their light and snatched it away, just as He took away the light of this fire, leaving them in darkness where they could not see.

The first interpretation of the verse is what Qatada, Ad-Dahhak, and what Ali ibn Abi Talha narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas. That is: God, the Most High, only gave this example for the hypocrites, whose characteristics He described and whose stories He related, from the moment He began mentioning them with His saying: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers, not those who openly declare their disbelief and openly associate partners with God. If the example were for those who believed with true faith and then declared their disbelief with true declaration, as the interpreter thought, God's saying, the Most High, Like the example of one who kindled a fire, then when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darknesses [so] they could not see, would be that the light of the fire is an example of their faith, which they had in His view was sound, and the loss of their light is an example of their apostasy and their declaration of their disbelief with soundness. There would have been no deception, mockery, or hypocrisy on the part of the people. How can there be deception and hypocrisy from someone who has not shown you any word or action except that which requires you to know his state of affairs and his firm resolve? This is undoubtedly far from hypocrisy and innocent of deception. Since the people had only two states: a state of apparent faith and a state of apparent disbelief, the name of hypocrisy has dropped from them. Because in their state of true faith they were believers, and in their state of true disbelief they were disbelievers. There is no third state in which they were hypocrites.

In the description of God, the Most High, of them as hypocrites, there is what indicates that the statement is not the statement claimed by the one who claimed: that the people were believers, then they apostatized to disbelief and remained upon it, unless the one who said that meant that they moved from their faith that they had, to the disbelief that is hypocrisy. And that is a statement, if he said it, its authenticity would not be known except by a widespread report, or by some meanings that necessitate its authenticity. As for the apparent meaning of the Book, there is no indication of its authenticity, because it is open to interpretation that is more appropriate than it.

If the matter is as we have described in that, then the most appropriate interpretation of the verse is the verse: like the hypocrites' illumination by what they showed with their tongues to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, of acknowledging him, and their saying to him and to the believers: We believe in God, His Books, His Messengers, and the Last Day, until He ruled for them in this worldly life with the ruling of the Muslims: in the preservation of blood and wealth, and the security of the offspring from captivity, and in marriage and inheritance, like the lighting of the fire by the fire, until when he is comforted by its light and sees what is around him, illuminated by its light from the darkness, the fire is extinguished and goes out, so his light is gone, and the one who is illuminated by it returns to darkness and confusion.

This is because the hypocrite continues to be illuminated by the light of the statement that he defended in his life, killing and captivity, while he internalizes what would have required killing and the theft of money if he had expressed it with his tongue. He thus imagines to himself that he is mocking and deceiving God, His Messenger, and the believers, until his soul tempts him, when he comes to his Lord in the Hereafter, that he will be saved from Him by the same means that he was saved by in this world, from lying and hypocrisy. Or do you not hear God, the Most High, say when He described them, then informed them of their story when they came to Him: "On the Day when God will resurrect them all, they will swear to Him as they swear to you, and they will think that they are on something. Unquestionably, they are the liars." (Al-Mujadalah: 18) The people thought that their salvation from God's punishment in the Hereafter would be like the salvation from killing, captivity, and the theft of wealth in this world: from lies and slander, and that their deception would benefit them there as it would benefit them in this world, until they witnessed from God's command what they were certain of, that they were in their assumptions of delusion and misguidance, and mockery of themselves and deception, when God extinguished their light on the Day of Resurrection, so they waited for the believers to take from their light, but it was said to them: Go back behind you, seek light, and enter the Blaze. That is when God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see, just as the fire of a kindled fire was extinguished after it had illuminated it, and he remained in its darkness, confused and lost. God Almighty says: "On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believed, 'Wait a moment for us, that we may borrow some of your light.' It will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' Then a wall will be set up between them, having a door, within which is mercy, but outside of it is punishment. They will call out to them, 'Were we not with you?' They will say, 'Yes, but you tempted yourselves and waited and doubted, and wishful thinking deceived you until the command of God came, and the Deceiver deceived you about God.' So this Day no ransom will be taken from you, nor from those who disbelieved. Your refuge is the Fire; it is your protector, and wretched is the destination." (al-Hadid 57:13-15)

If someone were to say to us: You mentioned that the meaning of God Almighty's statement, Like one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, is that it went out and was extinguished, and this is not found in the Qur'an. So what is your proof that this is its meaning?

It was said: We have said that it is the nature of the Arabs to be brief and concise, if what they say is sufficient evidence of what they have omitted and left out, as Abu Dhu'ayb al-Hudhali said:

I disobeyed her heart, I hear her command, so I do not know how to guide her seekers

He meant by that: I do not know whether her students were guided or misguided. He omitted mentioning Umm Ghayy, since what he said indicated her, as Dhu al-Rumma said in describing Himyar:

When they were dressed at night, she set up a curtain of her ears for him while he was leaning forward.

Meaning: Or when night falls, there are many similar examples, we disliked making the book longer by mentioning them. So too is his statement: Like the example of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, because of what was in it and what came after it from his statement: God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see, indicating what was left out sufficiently, and from mentioning it, he shortened the speech in order to be brief.

Likewise, what was omitted and what was abbreviated was abbreviated from the report about the example of the hypocrites after it, similar to what was abbreviated from the report about the example of the fire kindled. Because the meaning of the speech is: Likewise, the hypocrites, God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see after the light they were in in this world because of what they used to show with their tongues of acknowledging Islam while they were concealing something other than it, just as the light of the fire of this kindled was taken away, by the extinguishing of its fire and its dying out, so it remained in darkness, unable to see.

The ha and the mim in his statement, God took away their light, refer to the ha and the mim in his statement, their like.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Their example is that of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see.

The Almighty said: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. Their example is raised by the subject and the predicate is in the kaf, so it is a noun, as it is in the saying of Al-A'sha:

You will stop, but those who are extravagant will not stop, like stabbing, in which oil is lost, and killing.

And the saying of Imru' al-Qais:

We went with the water tank to the side of us, the eye sometimes shooting at it and sometimes rising

He meant like a stab, and like the son of water. It is possible that the report is omitted, its meaning is like them, established like like, so the kaf in this case is a letter. And like, like and like are one and the same and their meaning is similar. And the identical: the similar, this is what the linguists said.

His saying: who is used for both singular and plural. Ibn Al-Shajari said: Hibat God bin Ali said: Some Arabs use the singular form for the plural, as he said:

Those whose blood was shed in Falaj are the people, all the people, O Umm Khalid.

It was said about the statement of God the Most High: And he who brought the truth and believed in it, those are the righteous: that it is in this language, and likewise his statement: Their likeness is like that of It was said: the meaning is like that of those who kindled, and for this reason he said: God took away their light, so he made the beginning of the statement refer to the singular, and the end to the plural. As for the statement of God the Most High: And you plunged like those who plunged, then that here is a description of a deleted source, the meaning of which is and you plunged like the plunge that they plunged. It was said: The reason for making that and lit singular is because the one who kindled was one of a group who took charge of lighting

Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire; but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness [so] they could not see.

the fire for them, so when the light went out, he returned to them all and said: with their light. And lit means lit, like responded means answered, so the sin and the ta are extra, said by Al-Akhfash, and from it is the saying of the poet:

Farewell, he called, O He who answers to the generosity, but no one answered him at that time.

That is, he answers it. The grammarians differed in his answer to when and in the pronoun referring back to their light. It was said: It is an answer to what was omitted, which is was extinguished. The pronoun in their light in this case refers to the hypocrites, and the report of this is about a state that will be in the Hereafter, as God Almighty said: So a wall was set up between them with a gate. It was said: Its answer is it went away, and the pronoun in their light refers back to who. According to this statement, the hypocrite is represented by the one who kindles the fire, because the one who kindles the fire remaining in darkness and cannot see is like the hypocrite remaining in his confusion and hesitation. The intended meaning of the verse is to give an example of the hypocrites, that the faith they show, which establishes for them the rulings of Muslims, such as marriages, inheritance, spoils of war, and security for themselves, their children, and their wealth, is like someone who lights a fire on a dark night, finds light from it, sees what he should avoid, and feels safe from it. But when it is extinguished or disappears, harm reaches him and he remains confused. Likewise, the hypocrites, when they believe, are deceived by the word of Islam, then after death they are sent to the painful torment - as the revelation has informed us: Indeed, the hypocrites will be in the lowest depths of the Fire - and their light is lost. That is why they say: Wait for us, that we may take from your light. It has been said that the hypocrites' approach to the Muslims and their talk with them is like fire, and their turning away from their friendship and their retreating towards them is like its disappearance. Others have been said.

His saying: Nara: Nar is feminine and it comes from light which is also illumination. It comes from the letter waw, because you say in the diminutive: nawira, and in the plural: light, lights, and fires. The waw was changed to a ya because of the kasra before it. Dhaha'at and ada'at are two languages. It is said: the moon dhaha'a yadhu'a daw'an yadhi'a, it can be intransitive and transitive. Muhammad ibn al-Sumaiqa' read: dhaha'at without an alif, but the general reading is with an alif. The poet said:

Their lineage and faces illuminated the darkness of the night until the piercing grief was organized.

Ma Hawluhu is an emphatic redundant particle. It was said: It is the object of illumined. Hawluhu is an adverb of place, and the ha is in the accusative case because of its addition to it. Dhahaba and Adhaba are two languages from dhaba, which means the disappearance of something. Warkahum means he left them. Fi dhalamat is the plural of dhalamah. Al-A'mash read: dhalamat with a sukoon on the lam according to the original. Whoever reads it with a damma, it is to differentiate between the noun and the adjective. Ashhab Al-Uqaili read: with a fatha on the lam. The Basrans said that the damma was replaced with a fatha because it is lighter. Al-Kisa'i said: Dalmat is the plural of the plural, the plural of Dhulm. La yubsiroon is a future tense verb in the place of the state, as if he said: not seeing, so it is not permissible to stop on this on dhalamat.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

It is also said, Mithl, Mithl, and Mithil, and the plural is Amthal. God Almighty said: And these examples We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. The meaning of this example is that God Almighty likened them in their purchase of misguidance for guidance, and their becoming blind after insight, to someone who kindled a fire, and when it illuminated what was around him and he benefited from it and saw what was to his right and left and found comfort in it, while he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he was in intense darkness, unable to see or find his way, and he was deaf, unable to hear, mute, unable to speak, blind. If there had been light, he would not have seen. For this reason, he does not return to what he was like before that. So too are these hypocrites in their substitution of misguidance for guidance and their preference for error over right guidance. In this example there is evidence that they believed then disbelieved, as God Almighty informed us about them in other places, and God knows best.

Al-Razi narrated what we have said in his interpretation on the authority of Al-Suddi, then he said: The comparison here is extremely correct because through their faith they first acquired light, then through their hypocrisy they nullified that and fell into great confusion, for there is no confusion greater than the confusion of religion.

Ibn Jarir claimed that those who are being parableed here did not believe at any time and he argued with the words of God Almighty: And of the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. The correct view is that this is a statement about them in their state of hypocrisy and disbelief. This does not negate the fact that they had faith before that and then it was taken away and their hearts were sealed. Ibn Jarir did not recall this verse here, which is the words of God Almighty: That is because they believed and then disbelieved, so their hearts were sealed so they do not understand. For this reason, this parable was directed to them being illumined by what they had shown of the word of faith, i.e. in this world, then darkness followed them on the Day of Resurrection. He said: It is correct to parse the group with the individual, as He said: I saw them looking at you, their eyes rolling like one who is fainting from death. That is, like the rotation of one who is fainting from death. God Almighty said: He did not create you and resurrect you except as a single soul.

God Almighty also said: The example of those who were entrusted with the Torah and then did not uphold it is like that of a donkey carrying volumes. Some of them said that the interpretation of the speech is like the story of those who kindled a fire. Fire, and some of them said that the one who kindles the fire is one for a group with him, and others said that which here means those, as the poet said:

Those whose blood was shed in Falaj are the people,
all the people, O Umm Khalid.

I said, and I have shifted during the parable from the singular to the plural in the Almighty's saying: "So when it illuminated what was around it, God took away their light and left them in darknesses [so that they could not see]. Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return." This is more eloquent in speech and more expressive in darkness. The Almighty's saying, God took away their light, means He took away from them what benefits them, which is the light, and left for them what harms them, which is the burning and smoke. And left them in darknesses, which is what they are in of doubt, disbelief, and hypocrisy. They cannot see, they are not guided to the path of goodness and do not know it, and they are, in addition to that, deaf, they do not hear good, dumb, they do not speak of what benefits them, blind, in misguidance and blindness of insight, as the Almighty said: For indeed, it is not the eyes that are blind, but blind are the hearts which are within the breasts. For this reason, they do not return to what they were upon of guidance that they sold for misguidance.

Mentioning the sayings of the early commentators in a manner similar to what we have mentioned.

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the Companions regarding the words of God Almighty: And when it illuminated what was around him, he claimed that some people entered Islam when the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, arrived in Medina, then they became hypocrites. Their example was like that of a man who was in darkness and lit a fire. When it illuminated what was around him of dirt or harm, he saw it until he knew what to avoid. While he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he came forward not knowing what harm to avoid. That hypocrite was in the darkness of polytheism, then he became Muslim and knew what was permissible and what was forbidden, good and evil. While he was like that, he disbelieved and no longer knew what was permissible and what was forbidden, nor good and evil. Al-Awfi said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding this verse: As for the light, it is their faith that they spoke of, and as for the darkness, it is their misguidance and disbelief that they spoke of. They were people who were on guidance, then it was taken away from them and they rebelled after that. Mujahid said: When it illuminated what was around him. As for the lighting of the fire, it is their turning to the believers and guidance. Ata' al-Khurasani said about the Almighty's statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. He said: This is like the hypocrite who sometimes sees and sometimes knows, then blindness of heart overtakes him. Ibn Abi Hatim said: It was narrated from Ikrimah, al-Hasan, al-Suddi, and al-Rabi' ibn Anas something similar to what Ata' al-Khurasani said. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said about the Almighty's statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, to the end of the verse. He said: This is the description of the hypocrites. They had believed until faith shone in their hearts just as fire shone for those who lit a fire, then they disbelieved, so God took away their light and snatched it away just as He took away the light of this fire, leaving them in darkness where they cannot see. As for the statement of Ibn Jarir, it is similar to what Ali bin Abi Talhah narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas in the words of God the Almighty: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. He said: This is a parable that God gave for the hypocrites, that they were proud of Islam, so Muslims would marry them, inherit from them, and share the spoils with them. Then when they died, God took away that pride from them just as the owner of the fire took away his light. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. The light of the fire is only what it lit, so when it goes out, its light goes away. Likewise, the hypocrite, whenever he speaks the word of monotheism, There is no god but God, it shines for him, but when he doubts, he falls into darkness. Ad-Dahhak said: God took away their light. As for their light, it is their faith. Which they spoke about, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatada: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, and when it illuminated what was around him, so it is There is no god but God, and it illuminated for them, so they ate and drank with it and believed in this world and married women and spared their blood until when they died, God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada regarding this verse: The meaning is that the hypocrite spoke, There is no god but God, and it illuminated him in this world, so he married Muslims with it, fought them with it, inherited from them with it, and protected his blood and wealth with it. Then when he was about to die, the hypocrite took it away because it had no basis in his heart or reality in his actions. And left them in darkness, not seeing. Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And left them in darkness, not seeing means in torment when they died. Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And left them in darkness means they see the truth and speak it until when they emerge from the darkness of disbelief, they extinguish it with their disbelief and hypocrisy in it. So he left them in the darkness of disbelief, so they do not see guidance, nor do they follow the truth. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation with his chain of transmission: And left them in darkness, so the darkness was their hypocrisy. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: And He left them in darkness, not seeing. That is when the hypocrite dies, his evil deeds will be darkened for him, and he will not find any good deeds that he has done to confirm his saying, There is no god but God. "Deaf, dumb, and blind." Al-Suddi said on the authority of his chain of transmission: Deaf, dumb, and blind, meaning they will not hear the guidance, nor will they see it, nor will they understand it. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Qatadah bin Di'amah said the same: So they will not return. Ibn Abbas said: meaning they will not return to guidance. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Al-Suddi said on the authority of his chain of transmission: Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return to Islam. Qatadah said: So they will not return, meaning they will not repent, nor will they remember.

Fath al-Qadir

17- Like them is raised by the beginning, and its predicate is either the kaf in his saying: Like like because it is a noun: meaning like like like as in the saying of Al-A'sha:

You will not stop, you who are so extravagant as to stab, in which the oil and the twist are lost.

And the saying of Imru' al-Qais:

We went with the water tank to the side of us, the eye sometimes shooting at it and sometimes rising

He meant like a stab and like the son of water. It is possible that the report is omitted: that is, like them is illuminated like like, so the kaf in this case is a letter. And like: the resemblance, and likes: the two similar ones. And who is the subject of those: that is, like those who kindled a fire, and this is found in the speech of the Arabs like the saying of the poet:

Those whose blood was shed in Falaj are the people, all the people, O Umm Khalid.

And from it is: And you plunged like those who plunged, and from it is: And he who brought the truth and believed in it, those are the righteous. And the fuel of the fire: its brightness and the height of its flame. Istawaqed means lit like istijaba means answered, so the sin and the ta are extra, as Al-Akhfash said. And from it is the saying of the poet:

Farewell, O He who answers the call, but no one answers him at that time.

That is, he answers it. Illumination is excessive illumination, and its verb can be intransitive or transitive. It was said that what is around him is redundant. It was also said that it is a relative pronoun in the accusative case as the object of illuminated, and around him is accusative as an adverbial phrase. He went is from going away, which is the disappearance of something. He left them means he kept them in darkness, plural of darkness. Al-A'mash read it with a sukoon on the lam as per the original. Ashhab Al-Uqayli read it with a fatha on the lam, which is the absence of light.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

17. Like them means they are likened, or it was said their description. The example is a common saying in the common usage of people by which the meaning of a thing is known, and it is one of the seven divisions of the Qur'an. Like the one who means those, as indicated by the context of the verse. And similar to it is And he who brought the truth and believed in it, those are the righteous 33-Az-Zumar. He lit or lit a fire, then when it lit the fire around him meaning around the one who lit it. And lit intransitive and transitive. It is said that something lit itself and someone else lit it, and here it is transitive. God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see. Ibn Abbas, Qatadah, Muqatil, Ad-Dahhak, and As-Suddi said that it was revealed about the hypocrites.

He said: Their hypocrisy is like a man who lit a fire on a dark night in a desert. He warmed himself and saw what was around him, so he avoided what he feared. While he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he remained in darkness, wandering around confused. So too are the hypocrites. By showing the word of faith, they feel secure regarding their wealth and children, and they marry the believers and inherit from them and share the spoils with them. That is their light. But when they die, they return to darkness and fear. It was said: Their light will go away in the grave. It was also said: On the Day of Resurrection, when they will say to those who believed: Wait for us, so that we may learn from your light. It was also said: Their light will go away by showing their belief on the tongue of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him). So he used fire as an example, then he did not say that God extinguished their fire, but rather he expressed that the light went away from it, because fire is light and heat, so their light goes away and the heat remains on them. Mujahid said: Lighting the fire is their turning towards the Muslims and guidance, and the going away of their light is their turning towards the polytheists and misguidance. Ata' and Muhammad ibn Ka'b said: It was revealed about the Jews. And they were waiting for the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, to come out and open the way for him against the polytheists of the Arabs. So when he came out, they disbelieved in him. Then God described them and said:

17- Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. When he came with the truth of their situation after that, the example is used to increase clarification and confirmation, because it is more effective in the heart and suppresses the most stubborn opponent, and because it shows you the imaginary as realized and the rational as tangible, and the matter is that God has multiplied the examples in His books, and they are widespread in the speech of the prophets and the wise. The example originally means the counterpart, it is said: a parable, a parable, and a counterpart like similarity, similarity, and similarity, then it was said for the common saying that is represented by its source, and it is only used for what is strange, and for that reason it was preserved from change, then it was used as a metaphor for every situation, story, or description that has a matter and in it is strange, like the Almighty's saying: The example of Paradise which the righteous have been promised and His saying: And to God belongs the highest example.

The meaning is that their strange state is like the state of someone who kindled a fire, and who means those as in the Almighty's saying: And you plunged like those who plunged if the reference of the pronoun in their light is made, and this is permissible and it is not permissible to put al-Qa'im in place of al-Qa'imin because it is not intended by the description, but rather the sentence which is its connection and it is a connection to the description of knowledge with it because it is not a complete name but rather it is like a part of it, so it is right that it is not pluralized as we do not pluralize its sisters, and the singular and plural are equal in it and who is not the corrected plural, but rather it has an addition that was added to increase the meaning and therefore it came with the ya always according to the eloquent language upon which the revelation is based, and because it is extended by its connection it deserved to be lightened, and therefore it was exaggerated so its ya was deleted then broken then it was limited to the lam in the names of the active and passive participles, or it was intended by it the type of those who kindled, or the group that kindled. And kindling: seeking fuel and striving to obtain it, and it is the brightness of the fire and the rise of its flame. The derivation of fire is from: a fire that lights a light if it flees because there is movement and disturbance in it.

When it lit up what was around it meaning: the fire, what was around the stove if you make it transitive, otherwise it could be attributed to what, and the feminine is because what was around it were things and places or to the pronoun of the fire, and what: is a relative pronoun in the sense of places, accusative as a circumstance, or an additional one, and around it is a circumstance and the composition of the year is for rotation. And it was said for the year because it rotates.

God took away their light is the answer to when, and the pronoun refers to who, and its plural is to carry the meaning. Based on this, he said: with their light and did not say: with their fire because what is meant is its lighting. Or it is a new sentence that responds to a previous objection that says: Why did you compare their state to the state of a kindling whose fire has been extinguished? Or it is a substitute for the sentence of comparison by way of clarification. The pronoun in both cases refers to the hypocrites, and the answer is omitted as in the Almighty's saying: So when they took him away for brevity and to avoid confusion. And he attributed the going to God Almighty either because everything is due to His action, or because the transgression occurred due to a hidden cause, or a heavenly matter such as wind or rain, or for exaggeration. Therefore, the verb is transitive with the preposition ba without the hamza because it has the meaning of presumption and retention. It is said: The sultan took his money if he took it, and what God took and retained has no sender. Therefore, he changed from the light that is required by the word to the light. If it was said: God took their light, it would imply that what is in the light of excess was taken away and what is called light remained, and the purpose is to remove the light from them completely. Do you not see how he decided and confirmed that by saying: And left them in darknesses where they could not see? So he mentioned the darkness which is the absence of light, and its complete disappearance, and he pluralized it and denied it and described it as pure darkness in which no two shadows can be seen. And he left the original meaning is to throw away and empty, and it has one object so it included the meaning of making, so it ran the course of the actions of the heart like the saying of God Almighty: And left them in darknesses.

And the poet said:

So the lions left him, picking at his beautiful fingertips and wrist.

Darkness is taken from their saying: What prevented you from doing such and such? That is, what prevented you? Because it blocks the sight and prevents seeing. Their darkness is the darkness of disbelief, the darkness of hypocrisy, and the darkness of the Day of al-Qiyamah 75: The day you will see the believing men and believing women, their light proceeding before them and on their right. Or the darkness of misguidance, the darkness of God's wrath, the darkness of eternal punishment, or intense darkness as if it were accumulated darkness. The object of they do not see is from the category of the abandoned and neglected, so it is as if the verb is intransitive.

The verse is an example that God has given to someone who has been given a form of guidance but then he has lost it and has not attained eternal bliss by it, so he remains confused and regretful, as a confirmation and clarification of what the first verse includes. These hypocrites fall under its generality, for they have lost what their tongues have spoken of the truth by concealing disbelief and showing it when they are alone with their devils. And those who prefer misguidance over guidance that is unknown to them by nature, or who have apostatized from their religion after having believed. And those who have sound states of will and claim states of love, so God has taken away from them the lights of will that had shone upon them. Or an example of their faith in that it returns to them, sparing bloodshed, keeping wealth and children safe, and sharing in the spoils of war with the Muslims. And the rulings are like a lit fire for illumination, and for the disappearance of its effect and the extinguishing of its light by their destruction and the disclosure of their condition by God the Most High extinguishing it and taking away its light.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

They are deaf to the truth, so they do not hear it with acceptance, dumb to goodness, so they do not say it, blind to the path of guidance, so they do not see it, so they do not turn back from misguidance.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: Since the interpretation of the words of God, may He be glorified: God has taken away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see, is what we have described, that it is report from God, may He be glorified, about what He will do to the hypocrites in the Hereafter,

When their veils are torn, and their secrets are exposed, and the light of their lights is taken away, who left them in the darkness of the terrors of the Day of Resurrection, wandering about, and in its darkness they do not see? So it is clear that His statement, may He be glorified and exalted: Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return, is from the deferred meaning of the forward, and that the meaning of the speech is: Those are the ones who purchased misguidance in exchange for guidance, so their trade did not profit them, nor were they guided. Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return. Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire, but when it illuminated what was around him, God took away their light and left them in darkness, not seeing, or like a downpour from the sky.

Since this is the meaning of the statement, it is known that his saying: Deaf, dumb, and blind can be in the nominative case in two ways, and in the accusative case in two ways. As for one of the two ways of the nominative case, it is for resumption, because of what it contains of blame. The Arabs may do that in praise and blame, so they put the accusative and nominative cases, even if it is report of a definite noun, as the poet said:

Do not distance my people, who are the poison of the enemy and the scourge of the islands.

Those who are in every arena and are good at all times

It is narrated: those who descend and those who descend, as well as the good ones and the good ones, based on what I have described of praise. The other aspect: with the intention of repetition from those, so the meaning then is: those who purchased misguidance in exchange for guidance, so their trade did not profit them, nor were they guided. Those are deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return. As for one of the two aspects of the accusative: it is to be a severance from what is in guided of the mention of those, because what is mentioned in it of them is definite, and the deaf is indefinite.

The other: that it is definitely from those who, because those who is definite and the deaf are indefinite.

It may also be permissible to use the accusative case as a form of blame, and this would be a third form of accusative.

As for the interpretation of what we have narrated from Ibn Abbas from other sources, such as the narration of Ali bin Abi Talha from him, then the nominative case is not permissible except in one way, which is resumption. As for the accusative case, it may be permissible in two ways: one of them is blame, and the other is the severance from the ha' and the mim that are in leaving them out, or from mentioning them in they do not see.

We have explained the most correct interpretation of this. The reading, which is the reading, is the nominative, not the accusative, because no one has a different way of reading than the scripts of the Muslims' Qur'ans. If it is read in the accusative, it is a reading that is contrary to the scripts of their Qur'ans.

Abu Ja'far said: This is report from God, may He be glorified, about al-Munafiqun 63: that by purchasing misguidance in exchange for guidance, they were not guided to guidance and truth. Rather, they are deaf to them and do not hear them, due to the overwhelming abandonment of God over them. They are mute and do not speak about them. Dumb means mute, and it is the plural of mute and blind, unable to see them and understand them, because God has sealed their hearts with their hypocrisy, so they are not guided.

And just as we said about that, the scholars of interpretation said:

Muhammad bin Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Deaf, dumb, and blind, on the authority of Al-Khair.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abdullah bin Saleh told us: Muawiyah bin Saleh told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Deaf, dumb, and blind, meaning: they do not hear the guidance, nor do they see it, nor do they understand it.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: With mutes, they are the mute.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement, Deaf, dumb, and blind: deaf to the truth so they do not hear it, blind to the truth so they do not see it, dumb to the truth so they do not speak it.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: They will not return.

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, They will not return, is a statement from God, the Most High, about these hypocrites whom God described as purchasing misguidance in place of guidance, and making them deaf to hearing goodness and truth, and dumb to what is said about them, and blind to seeing them, that they will not return to abandoning their misguidance, nor will they repent to turning back from their hypocrisy. So the believers have despaired of these people seeing the right path, or speaking the truth, or hearing a caller to guidance, or being reminded and repenting from their misguidance, just as He has despaired of the repentance of the leaders of the infidels of the People of the Book and the polytheists and their rabbis, whom He described as having sealed their hearts and their hearing and covered their sight.

And similar to what we said in interpreting that, the people of interpretation said:

Who said that?

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: They will not return, meaning: they will not repent or remember.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: They will not return: they will not return to Islam.

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that a statement is contrary to the meaning of this hadith, which is:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They will not return, meaning: they will not return to guidance or to goodness, and they will not attain salvation as long as they are upon what they are upon.

This is an interpretation of the apparent meaning of the recitation, which is contrary to it. That is because God, the Most High, informed about the people that they will not return from their purchase of misguidance in exchange for guidance to seeking guidance and seeing the truth, without Him, the Most High, limiting that of their condition to one time rather than another and one state rather than another. This report that we mentioned from Ibn Abbas, indicates that that of their description is limited to a time, which is what they were continuing in their matter, and that they have the way to return from it. That is an interpretation that is a false claim, for which there is no evidence from the apparent meaning or from a report that can be used as evidence, so it is accepted.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return.

The Almighty said: Deaf, dumb, and blind. Deaf means they are deaf, so it is the predicate of an implied subject. In the reading of Abdullah Ibn Masoud and Hafsa: Deaf, dumb, blind. So the accusative case is permissible for blame, as the Almighty said: Cursed wherever they are found, and as He said: And his wife, the carrier of firewood, and as the poet said:

They gave me wine to drink, then surrounded me with the enemies of God with lies and falsehood.

So, the enemies of God were put in the accusative case for blame. So, stopping at they see according to this doctrine is correct and good. And it is permissible to put deaf in the accusative case by leaving them, as if he said: And leaving them deaf, dumb, and blind. So, according to this doctrine, it is not good to stop at they see. Deafness in the speech of the Arabs means: blockage. It is said: a deaf channel if it is not hollow. And the bottle is deaf if you block it. So, the deaf is the one whose hearing holes are blocked. And the mute is the one who does not speak or understand, if the mute understands. And it was said: the mute and the mute are one. And it is said: a man and a mute, meaning a mute between mute and dumb. He said:

I wish my tongue was half in the air and half in the orbit of the planets.

Blindness: loss of sight. He became blind, so he is blind. People are blind, and God made him blind. A man became blind: I see that from himself. A matter became blind to him if it became confusing. From this is the saying of God Almighty: So the report was blinded to them that Day. The purpose of what we mentioned is not to deny perceptions from their senses altogether, but rather the purpose is to deny them from some aspect. You say: So-and-so is deaf to treachery. The poet did well when he said:

Deaf to what displeases him, yet all-hearing

Another said:

And the blindness of speech is deafening, even if I wish it, He hears it

Al-Darimi said:

Blind if my neighbor goes out until my neighbor is hidden by the walls

Some of them said in his advice to a man who frequently visits kings:

Enter blind and exit mute

Qatada said: Deaf to hearing the truth, mute to speaking it, blind to seeing it. I said: This meaning is what is intended in the description of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, of the rulers of the end times in the hadith of Gabriel:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:18

Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return.

And if you see the barefoot, naked, deaf and dumb kings of the earth, then that is one of its signs. And God knows best.

The Almighty says: So they will not return meaning to the truth because of the previous knowledge of God the Almighty about them. It is said: He returned by himself, and someone else returned him, and Hudhayl says: someone else returned him. And the Almighty says: Some of them return to the statement of others meaning they blame each other, according to what was explained in the revelation in Surat Saba.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

It is also said, Mithl, Mithl, and Mithil, and the plural is Amthal. God Almighty said: And these examples We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. The meaning of this example is that God Almighty likened them in their purchase of misguidance for guidance, and their becoming blind after insight, to someone who kindled a fire, and when it illuminated what was around him and he benefited from it and saw what was to his right and left and found comfort in it, while he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he was in intense darkness, unable to see or find his way, and he was deaf, unable to hear, mute, unable to speak, blind. If there had been light, he would not have seen. For this reason, he does not return to what he was like before that. So too are these hypocrites in their substitution of misguidance for guidance and their preference for error over right guidance. In this example there is evidence that they believed then disbelieved, as God Almighty informed us about them in other places, and God knows best.

Al-Razi narrated what we have said in his interpretation on the authority of Al-Suddi, then he said: The comparison here is extremely correct because through their faith they first acquired light, then through their hypocrisy they nullified that and fell into great confusion, for there is no confusion greater than the confusion of religion.

Ibn Jarir claimed that those who are being parableed here did not believe at any time and he argued with the words of God Almighty: And of the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. The correct view is that this is a statement about them in their state of hypocrisy and disbelief. This does not negate the fact that they had faith before that and then it was taken away and their hearts were sealed. Ibn Jarir did not recall this verse here, which is the words of God Almighty: That is because they believed and then disbelieved, so their hearts were sealed so they do not understand. For this reason, this parable was directed to them being illuminated by what they had shown of the word of faith, i.e. in this world, then darkness followed them on the Day of Resurrection. He said: It is correct to parse the group with the individual, as He said: I saw them looking at you, their eyes rolling like one who is fainting from death. That is, like the rotation of one who is fainting from death. God Almighty said: He did not create you and resurrect you except as a single soul.

God Almighty also said: The example of those who were entrusted with the Torah and then did not uphold it is like that of a donkey carrying volumes. Some of them said that the interpretation of the speech is like the story of those who kindled a fire. Fire, and some of them said that the one who kindles the fire is one for a group with him, and others said that which here means those, as the poet said:

Those whose blood was shed in Falaj are the people,
all the people, O Umm Khalid.

I said, and I have shifted during the parable from the singular to the plural in the Almighty's saying: "So when it illuminated what was around it, God took away their light and left them in darknesses [so that they could not see]. Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return." This is more eloquent in speech and more expressive in darkness. The Almighty's saying, God took away their light, means He took away from them what benefits them, which is the light, and left for them what harms them, which is the burning and smoke. And left them in darknesses, which is what they are in of doubt, disbelief, and hypocrisy. They cannot see, they are not guided to the path of goodness and do not know it, and they are, in addition to that, deaf, they do not hear good, dumb, they do not speak of what benefits them, blind, in misguidance and blindness of insight, as the Almighty said: For indeed, it is not the eyes that are blind, but blind are the hearts which are within the breasts. For this reason, they do not return to what they were upon of guidance that they sold for misguidance.

Mentioning the sayings of the early commentators in a manner similar to what we have mentioned.

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the Companions regarding the words of God Almighty: And when it illuminated what was around him, he claimed that some people entered Islam when the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, arrived in Medina, then they became hypocrites. Their example was like that of a man who was in darkness and lit a fire. When it illuminated what was around him of dirt or harm, he saw it until he knew what to avoid. While he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he came forward not knowing what harm to avoid. That hypocrite was in the darkness of polytheism, then he became Muslim and knew what was permissible and what was forbidden, good and evil. While he was like that, he disbelieved and no longer knew what was permissible and what was forbidden, nor good and evil. Al-Awfi said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding this verse: As for the light, it is their faith that they spoke of, and as for the darkness, it is their misguidance and disbelief that they spoke of. They were people who were on guidance, then it was taken away from them and they rebelled after that. Mujahid said: When it illuminated what was around him. As for the lighting of the fire, it is their turning to the believers and guidance. Ata' al-Khurasani said about the Almighty's statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. He said: This is like the hypocrite who sometimes sees and sometimes knows, then blindness of heart overtakes him. Ibn Abi Hatim said: It was narrated from Ikrimah, al-Hasan, al-Suddi, and al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar to what Ata' al-Khurasani said. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said about the Almighty's statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, to the end of the verse. He said: This is the description of the hypocrites. They had believed until faith shone in their hearts just as fire shone for those who lit a fire, then they disbelieved, so God took away their light and snatched it away just as He took away the light of this fire, leaving them in darkness where they cannot see. As for the statement of Ibn Jarir, it is similar to what Ali bin Abi Talhah narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas in the words of God the Almighty: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. He said: This is a parable that God gave for the hypocrites, that they were proud of Islam, so Muslims would marry them, inherit from them, and share the spoils with them. Then when they died, God took away that pride from them just as the owner of the fire took away his light. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire. The light of the fire is only what it lit, so when it goes out, its light goes away. Likewise, the hypocrite, whenever he speaks the word of monotheism, There is no god but God, it shines for him, but when he doubts, he falls into darkness. Ad-Dahhak said: God took away their light. As for their light, it is their faith. Which they spoke about, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatada: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire, and when it illuminated what was around him, so it is There is no god but God, and it illuminated for them, so they ate and drank with it and believed in this world and married women and spared their blood until when they died, God took away their light and left them in darkness, unable to see. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada regarding this verse: The meaning is that the hypocrite spoke, There is no god but God, and it illuminated him in this world, so he married Muslims with it, fought them with it, inherited from them with it, and protected his blood and wealth with it. Then when he was about to die, the hypocrite took it away because it had no basis in his heart or reality in his actions. And left them in darkness, not seeing. Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And left them in darkness, not seeing means in torment when they died. Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And left them in darkness means they see the truth and speak it until when they emerge from the darkness of disbelief, they extinguish it with their disbelief and hypocrisy in it. So he left them in the darkness of disbelief, so they do not see guidance, nor do they follow the truth. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation with his chain of transmission: And left them in darkness, so the darkness was their hypocrisy. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: And He left them in darkness, not seeing. That is when the hypocrite dies, his evil deeds will be darkened for him, and he will not find any good deeds that he has done to confirm his saying, There is no god but God. "Deaf, dumb, and blind." Al-Suddi said on the authority of his chain of transmission: Deaf, dumb, and blind, meaning they will not hear the guidance, nor will they see it, nor will they understand it. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Qatadah bin Di'amah said the same: So they will not return. Ibn Abbas said: meaning they will not return to guidance. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Al-Suddi said on the authority of his chain of transmission: Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return to Islam. Qatadah said: So they will not return, meaning they will not repent, nor will they remember.

Fath al-Qadir

18- Deaf and what follows is the predicate of a deleted subject: i.e. they. Ibn Masoud read deaf, dumb, blind in the accusative case as a censure, and it is permissible to make it accusative by saying he left them. Deafness: blockage, it is said a deaf channel: if it is not hollow, and the bottle is deaf: if you block it, and so-and-so is deaf: if the holes in his ears are blocked. The mute: is the one who does not move or understand, and if he understands, he is the mute. It was said: the mute and the mute are one. Blindness: the loss of sight. What is meant by his saying: they do not return is to the truth, and the answer to what is in his saying then when it was illuminated, it was said: God took away their light and it was said: it was deleted and its estimate is: it was extinguished and they remained confused. According to the second, his saying: God took away their light is a new statement or a substitute for the estimated one.

God gave this example of the hypocrites to show that the faith they show, while they conceal hypocrisy, does not establish the rulings of Islam for them. It is like the fire of a bonfire that was lit and then extinguished. It returns to darkness and that slight illumination does not benefit it. Thus, the fire of the bonfire remaining in darkness and not seeing is like the hypocrite remaining in his confusion and hesitation. This fire was described as being lit despite being the fire of falsehood because falsehood is also capable of flaring up its flames for a moment and then fading. From this is their saying: Falsehood has a surge and then fades away. Scholars of rhetoric have established that the use of examples plays a great role in revealing hidden meanings and lifting the veils of veiled details. For this reason, he used this a lot in his Noble Book, and the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) used to use this a lot in his addresses and sermons. Ibn Jarir said: Those for whom the example is given here never believed at any time, and he provided evidence with the words of God the Almighty: And among the people are those who say, 'We believe in God and the Last Day,' but they are not believers. Ibn Kathir said: The correct view is that this is a description of them in their state of hypocrisy and disbelief. This does not negate the fact that they had faith before that, then it was taken away and their hearts were sealed, as is indicated by the words of God the Almighty: That is because they believed and then disbelieved, so their hearts were sealed, so they do not understand. Ibn Jarir said: It is correct to use the example of a group as an individual, as in the saying: You saw them looking at you, their eyes rolling like one who is overcome by death, meaning like the eyes of one who is overcome by death. God the Almighty said: The example of those who were entrusted with the Torah and then did not uphold it is like that of a donkey carrying volumes. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: Their likeness is that of one who kindled a fire, he said: This is a likeness that God gave for the hypocrites. They used to take pride in Islam, so Muslims would marry them, inherit from them and share the spoils with them. But when they died, God stripped them of their pride, just as the owner of the fire had his light stripped away. And left them in darkness, not seeing, meaning in torment. Deaf, dumb and blind, so they do not hear the guidance, nor do they see it, nor do they understand it. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions regarding the words of God the Almighty: Their likeness is that of one who kindled a fire, they said: Some people entered Islam when the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) came to Medina, then they became hypocrites. Their likeness was like that of a man who was in darkness, so he lit a fire, and it illuminated the dirt and harm around him, so he could see it and knew what to avoid. While he was like that, his fire was extinguished and he came back, not knowing what harm to avoid. Likewise, the hypocrite was in the darkness of polytheism, then he converted to Islam and knew what was lawful from what was unlawful, and good from evil. While he was like that, he disbelieved and no longer knew what was lawful from what was unlawful, nor good from evil. They are deaf, dumb, and mute, so they do not return to Islam. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, Like one who kindled a fire, that God made him an example for the hypocrite. And his statement, God has taken away their light, that he said, as for the light, it is their faith that they speak with, and as for the darkness, it is their misguidance. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar from Ibn Abbas. Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar from Mujahid. They also narrated something similar from Qatadah. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar from Ikrimah, al-Hasan, al-Suddi, and al-Rabi' ibn Anas.

Deaf, dumb, and blind, so they will not return.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

18. Deaf means they are deaf to the truth and do not accept it. If they do not accept it, it is as if they have not heard. Dumb means they are mute to the truth and do not say it. Or because they concealed something other than what they revealed, it is as if they did not speak the truth. Blind means they have no insight. And he who has no insight is like he who has no sight. So they do not return from misguidance to the truth.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

18- Deaf, dumb and blind When they blocked their ears from listening to the truth and refused to utter it with their tongues and perceive the verses with their eyes, they made it as if their feelings were lost and their powers were absent, as in His saying:

They are deaf when you mention something good to them, but when you mention something bad to them, they listen.

And as he said:

I am deaf to what I do not want, but I hear God's creation when I want.

And its application to them is in the manner of representation, not metaphor, since one of its conditions is that the mention of the thing borrowed be omitted, such that the speech can be interpreted as the thing borrowed from were it not for the context, like Zuhair's saying:

A lion with a weapon has a sling and his claws are not trimmed.

Then you see the magicians ignoring the notion of likening, as Abu Tammam al-Ta'i said:

And he ascends until the ignorant thinks that he has a need in heaven

Here, even though he omitted the subject, it is still considered to be the subject of what is omitted. Similar to it is:

A lion in battles, but a shy ostrich that is frightened by the whistle of the whistle.

This is if you make the hypocrites as the summary of the example and its result, and if you make it for those who kindle, then it is as it is. The meaning is: When they kindled a fire, God took away their light, and left them in tremendous darkness that astonished them so that their senses were disturbed and their powers diminished, and all three of them were read in the accusative case as a state of the object of the verb He left them. Deafness: its origin is hardness from the accumulation of parts, and from it was said a deaf stone and a deaf canal, and the valve of a bottle, and the loss of the sense of hearing was named after it because its cause is that the interior of the eardrum is dense and has no cavity in it, so it contains air that hears the sound by its waves. And dumbness is muteness. Blindness: the lack of sight from what is meant to be seen, and it may be said for the lack of insight.

They will not return. They will not return to the guidance they sold and lost: or from the misguidance they bought, or they are confused, not knowing whether to advance or to fall back, and how to return to where they started. The fa indicates that their being described by the previous rulings is the reason for their confusion and being detained.

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Their example is like a downpour i.e. like the people of rain, and its root is Sayyub from Sab which means it descends from the sky the clouds in it i.e. the clouds there is darkness dense and thunder he is the angel assigned to him and it was said his voice and lightning the brightness of his voice with which he rebukes him they put i.e. the people of the downpour their fingers i.e. their fingertips in their ears because of (the thunderbolts) the intensity of the sound of thunder so that they do not hear it warning fear of death from hearing it, likewise these people when the Qur'an is revealed and in it is mention of disbelief likened to darkness and the threat against it likened to thunder and the arguments and evidence likened to lightning, they block their ears so that they do not hear it and are inclined to faith and abandon their religion which is, in their view, death and God encompasses the disbelievers with knowledge and power so that they do not escape Him

The Almighty said, or like a downpour, the verse K Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi Al-Kabir on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the companions, they said, there were two hypocrites from the people of Medina who fled from the Messenger of God to the polytheists, and this rain in which God mentioned severe thunder, lightning and thunderbolts struck them, so whenever the thunderbolts struck them, they put their fingers in their ears out of fear that the thunderbolts would enter their ears and kill them. And when the lightning flashed, they walked towards its light, and if it did not flash, they could not see, so they came to their place and walked, and they began to say, If only we had become so that we could go to Muhammad and put our hands in his hand. So they went to him and became Muslim and put their hands in his hand, and their Islam was good. So God made the matter of these two outgoing hypocrites an example for the hypocrites in Medina. And whenever the hypocrites attended the gathering of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, they put their fingers in their ears out of fear that the words of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, would be revealed. There is something in them or they are mentioned with something and they are killed, just as those two hypocrites who came out used to put their fingers in their ears and when it was light for them they would walk in it. Then when their wealth and children increased and they obtained booty or a conquest they would walk in it and say that the religion of Muhammad at that time is true and they would adhere to it, just as those two hypocrites used to walk when the lightning was light for them and when it was dark for them they would stand. And when their wealth and children were destroyed and afflicted with calamity they would say this is for the sake of the religion of Muhammad and they would apostatize as those two hypocrites said when the lightning was dark for them.

Abu Jaafar said: The word saib is derived from the verb saab the rain poured down meaning it descended and came down, as the poet said:

I am not for human beings, but for angels who descend from the sky and aim

As Alqamah bin Abdah said:

As if a cloud of lightning struck them, causing their birds to crawl.

Do not treat me as equal to Mughmar, who waters the rivers of rain when they rain down.

Meaning: when it descends. It is originally Sayyub, but when the waw was preceded by a silent ya, they both became a double ya, just as it was said: sayyid, from sada yasuwud, and jayyid, from jada yajud. The Arabs do the same with the waw if it is moving and before it is a silent ya, they both become a double ya.

And what we have said about that, the people of interpretation have said.

Who said that?

Muhammad bin Ismail Al-Ahmasi told me: Muhammad bin Ubaid told us: Harun bin Antara told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement, Or like a downpour from the sky, he said: rain.

Abbas bin Muhammad told me, he said: Hajjaj told us, he said: Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: Al-Sayyib is the rain.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Salih told us, he said: Muawiyah bin Salih told me, on the authority of Ali, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: As-Sayb is the rain.

Musa told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Al-Sayb is the rain.

Muhammad bin Saad told me: My father Saad told me: My uncle Al-Hussein told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, the same.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Or like a downpour, he says: rain.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, the same.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:19

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili and Amr bin Ali told me: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: As-Sayyib is the spring.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: As-Sayyib is the rain.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: As-Sayyib is the rain.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Al-Sayyib is the rain.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd said: Or like a downpour from the sky. He said: Or like rain from the sky.

Suwar bin Abdullah Al-Anbari told us: Sufyan said: Al-Sayyib is the one in which there is rain.

Amr bin Ali told us: Abu Muawiyah told us: Ibn Jurayj told us, on the authority of Ata', regarding his statement: Or like a downpour from the sky, he said: rain.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of that is: Like the hypocrites being illuminated by the light of their acknowledgment of Islam, while they conceal their disbelief, like the lighting of a fire by the light of its fire, as God Almighty described its description, or like dark, fine rain descending from the sky, carried by a dark cloud on a dark night. And that is the darkness that God Almighty informed us is in it.

If someone were to say to us: Tell us about these two parables: Are they parables for the hypocrites, or one of them? If they are parables for the hypocrites, how can it be said: or like a loss, and or comes with the meaning of doubt in the speech, and it was not said and like a loss with the waw that connects the second parable to the first parable, or the parable of the people is one of them, then what is the point of mentioning the other with or and you know that or if it is in the speech, then it only enters into it in the way of doubt from the informant in what he informed about, like the saying of the speaker: Your brother or your father met me, and only one of them met him, but he did not know the exact person he met from them, while he knew that one of them had met him. And it is not permissible for doubt to be attributed to God, may He be glorified and praised, in anything, or the absence of knowledge of something about Him, in what He informed or left out of informing about.

It was said to him: The matter in this is contrary to what you have gone to. And even if the letter aw in some speech comes with the meaning of doubt, it may come indicating something similar to what the letter waw indicates, either by what precedes the speech before it, or by what comes after it, like the saying of Tawbah ibn al-Humayr:

Laila claimed that I was immoral for my own sake, or that I was immoral for her sake.

It is known that this is from repentance without any doubt in what he said, but since the word or in this place indicates something similar to what the word and would have indicated if it had been in its place, he put it in its place, and likewise the saying of Jarir:

He attained the caliphate or it was a destiny for him as his Lord gave Moses according to destiny.

As the other said:

If crying could bring something back, I would have cried for Bujair or Afaq.

As the two women went on their way, sad and longing.

He indicated by his saying about the two women, since they both passed away, that his crying, which he wanted to make him cry, did not mean to target one of them without the other, but rather he wanted to make them both cry. Likewise in the statement of God, the Most High, or like a rainstorm from the sky. Since it is known that or indicates in that the like of what the and would have indicated if it had been in its place, it would have been the same whether he said it with or or with the and. Likewise, the reason for deleting the example from his statement, or like a rainstorm. Since his statement, like the one who kindled a fire, indicates that its meaning is like a rainstorm, he deleted the example, and was satisfied with the indication of what had preceded from the statement in his statement, like the one who kindled a fire, that its meaning is or like a rainstorm. By repeating the example, he sought brevity and abbreviation.

Abu Jaafar said: As for darkness, it is a plural, the singular of which is darkness.

As for thunder, scholars differed about it:

Some of them said: He is an angel who drives the clouds. Those who said that were mentioned:

Muhammad ibn al-Muthanna told us: Muhammad ibn Ja'far told us: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of al-Hakam, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds with his voice.

Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna told us: Ibn Abi Uday told us, on the authority of Shu'bah, on the authority of Al-Hakam, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Yahya bin Talha Al-Yarboui told me: Fadil bin Ayyad told us, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Hisham told us, he said: Ismail bin Salem told us, on the authority of Abu Saleh, he said: Thunder is an angel who glorifies God.

Nasr bin Abdul Rahman Al-Azdi told me: Muhammad bin Ya'la told us, on the authority of Abu Al-Khattab Al-Basri, on the authority of Shahr bin Hawshab, who said: Thunder is an angel assigned to the clouds, driving them as a driver drives camels, glorifying God. Whenever a cloud opposes another cloud, he shouts at it. When his anger becomes intense, fire flies from his mouth, and they are the thunderbolts that you saw.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Thunder is an angel named Al-Raad, and he is the one whose voice you hear.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad told us: Abdul Malik bin Hussein told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds away with glorification and magnification.

Al-Hasan bin Muhammad told us: Ali bin Asim told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Thunder is the name of an angel, and this sound of his is his glorification. When he becomes intense, he rebukes the clouds, and the clouds become disturbed and clash. Then thunderbolts come out from between them.

Al-Hasan told us, he said: Affan told us, he said: Abu Awana told us, on the authority of Musa al-Bazzar, on the authority of Shahr ibn Hawshab, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds with glorification, just as a camel driver drives camels with his song.

Al-Hasan bin Muhammad told us: Yahya bin Abbad and Shababah told us: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Al-Hakam, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds away.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Atab bin Ziyad told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: Thunder is an angel in the clouds, gathering the clouds as a shepherd gathers camels.

Bishr told us: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: Thunder is one of the creations of God, the Almighty, the Majestic, hearing and obeying God, the Almighty, the Majestic.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: Thunder is an angel who is commanded to drive the clouds and bring them together, and that sound is his glorification.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Thunder is an angel.

Al-Muthanna told me: Al-Hajjaj bin Al-Munhal told us: Hammad bin Salamah told us, on the authority of Al-Mughirah bin Salem, on the authority of his father, or someone else, that Ali bin Abi Talib said: Thunder is an angel.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, he said: Hammad told us, he said: Musa bin Salim Abu Jahdam, the client of Ibn Abbas, told us, he said: Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu al-Jild asking him about thunder, and he said: Thunder is an angel.

Al-Muthanna told us: Muslim bin Ibrahim told us: Omar bin Al-Waleed Al-Shani told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds as a shepherd drives camels.

Saad bin Abdullah bin Abdul Hakam told me: Hafis bin Omar told us: Al-Hakam bin Abaan told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: When Ibn Abbas heard thunder, he would say: Glory be to Him whom it glorifies. He said: And he used to say: Thunder is an angel who calls for rain as a shepherd calls for his sheep.

Others said: Thunder is a wind that suffocates under the clouds and then rises, and that sound comes from it.

Who said that?

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Bishr bin Ismail told us, on the authority of Abu Katheer, who said: I was with Abu Al-Jild when the messenger of Ibn Abbas came to him with a letter to him. He wrote to him: You wrote asking me about thunder, and thunder is the wind.

Ibrahim bin Abdullah told me: Imran bin Maysarah told us: Ibn Idris told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Al-Furat, on the authority of his father, who said: Ibn Abbas wrote to Ibn Abi Al-Jild asking him about thunder, and he said: Thunder is a wind.

Abu Ja'far said: If thunder is as Ibn 'Abbas and Mujahid mentioned, then the meaning of the verse is: Or like a downpour from the sky in which is darkness and the sound of thunder. Because if thunder is an angel driving the clouds, then it does not exist in downpour, because downpour is what descends from the direction of the clouds, and thunder is in the atmosphere of the sky driving the clouds. However, if it was in it and it did not have an audible sound, then there would be no terror that would terrify anyone. Because it has been said that with every drop of rain there is an angel, so the angel whose name is thunder, if he was with the downpour, if his voice was not audible, would not be more than one of those angels who descend with the rain to the earth, in that there is no terror for anyone because he is in it. So it is known, since the matter is as we have described from the statement of Ibn 'Abbas, that the meaning of the verse is: Or like a rain descending from the sky in which is darkness and the sound of thunder, if thunder is what Ibn 'Abbas said, and that he sufficed with the indication of mentioning thunder by its name to what is meant in the speech by mentioning its sound. If thunder is what Abu al-Jild said, then there is nothing in his saying, Therein is darkness and thunder, that should be ignored. Because the meaning of the statement then is: Therein is darkness and thunder, which is what we have described.

As for lightning, scholars differed about it. Some of them said:

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

Matar bin Muhammad al-Dhabi told us: Abu Asim told us, and Muhammad bin Bashir told me: Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi told me, and Ahmad bin Ishaq al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us, they all said: Sufyan al-Thawri told us, on the authority of Salamah bin Kuhail, on the authority of Saeed bin Ashwa', on the authority of Rabia bin al-Abyad, on the authority of Ali, who said: Lightning is the lightning bolts of the angels.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Abdul Malik bin Al-Hussein told us, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Lightning is whips in the hands of the angels, with which they drive the clouds.

Al-Muthanna told me: Al-Hajjaj told us: Hammad told us, on the authority of Al-Mughira bin Salim, on the authority of his father, or someone else, that Ali bin Abi Talib said: Thunder is the king, and lightning is struck by the clouds with an iron awl.

Others said: It is a whip of light with which the angel drives the clouds.

Who said that?

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that.

Others said: It is water.

Who said that?

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Bishr bin Ismail told us, on the authority of Abu Katheer, who said: I was with Abu Al-Jild when the messenger of Ibn Abbas came to him with a letter. He wrote to him: You wrote to me asking me about lightning, and lightning is water.

Ibrahim bin Abdullah told us: Imran bin Maysarah told us: Ibn Idris told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Al-Furat, on the authority of his father, who said: Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu Al-Jild asking him about lightning, and he said: Lightning is water.

Ibn Hamid told us: Jarir told us, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of a man from the people of Basra, one of their reciters, who said: Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu al-Jild, a man from the people of Hajar, asking him about lightning. So he wrote to him: You wrote to me asking me about lightning, and it is from water.

Others said: It is a king's palace.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Uthman bin al-Aswad, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Lightning is the striking of an angel.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Hisham told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Muslim al-Ta'ifi, he said: It has reached me that lightning is an angel with four faces: the face of a human, the face of a bull, the face of an eagle, and the face of a lion. When it strikes with its wings, that is lightning.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Wahb bin Sulayman, on the authority of Shu'ayb al-Jubba'i, who said: In the Book of God: The angels are the bearers of the Throne, each angel among them has the face of a human, a bull, and a lion, and when they move their wings it is lightning.

Umayyah bin Abi Al-Salt said:

A man with a bull under his right foot, an eagle under the other, and a lion in his sights.

Al-Husayn bin Muhammad told us: Ali bin Asim told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Lightning is an angel.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Thunderbolts are an angel who strikes the clouds with awls, striking whomever he wishes.

Abu Ja'far said: It is possible that what Ali ibn Abi Talib, Ibn Abbas and Mujahid said has one meaning. That is, the whips that Ali may God be pleased with him mentioned as lightning are the whips that are made of light, with which the king drives the clouds, as Ibn Abbas said. And the king drives the clouds with them is whipping them. That is because the origin of the word sword whip among the Arabs is: combat with swords, then it is used for everything that is used in war and otherwise, as A'sha of Banu Tha'labah said, describing female slaves playing with their jewelry and combating with it:

If they are descending their peers and the struggle is with what is in the jinn

It is said from it: Mas'ahu Mas'aan. It is as if Mujahid only said: Mas'a Malik, since the clouds do not Mas'a Malik, but rather the thunder is what Mas'a Malik, so he made it a source from Mas'ahu yas'ahu Mas'aan.

We have mentioned what Shahr bin Hawshab said in the past about the meaning of thunderbolt.

As for the interpretation of the verse, the people of interpretation differ on it:

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that there are several sayings about this: One of them is: What...

Muhammad ibn Humayd narrated to us, he said: Salamah narrated to us, he said: Muhammad ibn Ishaq narrated to us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: "Or like a rainstorm from the sky in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears because of the thunderbolts, for fear of death."

That is, they are from the darkness of what they are in of disbelief and fear of being killed because of what they are upon of disagreement and fear of you because of what he described, from the one who is in the darkness of the rainstorm, so he put his fingers in his ears because of the thunderbolts, for fear of death, the lightning almost snatches away their sight, that is, because of the intensity of the light of the truth, whenever it shines for them they walk in it, and when it becomes dark for them they stand still, that is, they know the truth and speak it, so they are on the right path from their saying it, but when they regress from it to disbelief they stand still bewildered.

The other: what

Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Or like a downpour from the sky in which is darkness and thunder and lightning to Indeed, God is over all things competent. As for the downpour, it is rain. There were two hypocrites from the people of Medina who fled from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, to the polytheists, and this rain that God mentioned struck them, in which there was severe thunder, lightning and thunderbolts, so whenever the thunderbolts flashed for them, they put their fingers in their ears, for fear that the thunderbolts would enter their ears and kill them. When the lightning flashed, they walked in its light, and when it did not flash, they could not see and stood where they were, not walking, so they said: If only we had become morning so we could go to Muhammad and put our hands in his hand. So they came to him in the morning and became Muslims, and put their hands in his, and their Islam was good. So God made the affair of these two outgoing hypocrites an example for the hypocrites in Medina. When the hypocrites attended the gathering of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would put their fingers in their ears, fearing that something would be revealed about them or that they would be mentioned in something and be killed, just as those two outgoing hypocrites would put their fingers in their ears, and when the light was on them, they would walk in it. Then when their wealth increased, and they had children, or they obtained booty or a conquest, they would walk in it, and they would say, 'The religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, is the religion of truth.' So they adhered to it, just as those two hypocrites used to walk. When the lightning flashed for them, they would walk in it, and when it became dark for them, they would stand. So when their wealth was lost, or they had children, or a calamity befell them, they would say, 'This is for the sake of the religion of Muhammad.' So they apostatized as infidels, just as those two hypocrites stood when the lightning was dark for them.

The third: what

Muhammad ibn Sa'd narrated to me, saying: My father narrated to me, saying: My uncle narrated to me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Or like a downpour from the sky, like rain, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning, to the end of the verse. He is like the hypocrite in the light of what he spoke of what he had of the Book of God and did, showing off to the people. But when he is alone, he acts otherwise. So he is in darkness as long as he remains in that. As for darkness, it is misguidance, and as for lightning, it is faith, and they are the People of the Book. And when darkness befalls them, he is a man who takes the edge of the truth and is unable to go beyond it.

Fourth: What

Al-Muthanna narrated to me, he said: Abdullah bin Saleh narrated to us, he said: Muawiyah bin Saleh narrated to me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Or like a downpour from the sky, which is rain, he gave an example of it in the Qur'an. He says: Therein is darkness, he says: a test, and thunder, he says: there is intimidation, and lightning, "the lightning almost snatches away their sight," he says: the decisive Qur'an almost points to the weaknesses of the hypocrites, whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein. He says: whenever the hypocrites attain honor from Islam, they are reassured, and if a calamity befalls Islam, they stand up to return to disbelief. He says: and when darkness falls upon them, they stand up, like His statement: "And among mankind is he who worships God on the edge. If good befalls him, he is reassured by it, but if a trial befalls him, he turns back on his face. He loses this world and the Hereafter. That is what is the manifest loss." (al-Hajj 22:11)

Then the rest of the people of interpretation differed after that, similar to what was narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding the difference: Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: The lighting of lightning and its darkness, is similar to that example.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Amr bin Ali told us, he said: Abu Asim told us, he said: Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

And Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding the statement of God: In it is darkness and thunder and lightning until His statement, And when darkness descends upon them, they stand up, so the hypocrite, when he sees in Islam ease or peace or consolation of life, says: I am with you and I am of you, and if a hardship befalls him, he is overwhelmed by it, and he is cut off from it, so he is not patient with its affliction, nor does he expect its reward, nor does he hope for its outcome.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya narrated to us, saying: Abd al-Razzaq informed us, saying: Muammar informed us, on the authority of Qatada: Therein is darkness, thunder, and lightning, meaning: The most cowardly people, who do not hear anything unless they think they are going to perish in it, fearing death, and God encompasses the disbelievers. Then He gave them another example, saying: "The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein," meaning: This hypocrite, when his wealth increases, his livestock increases, and he is afflicted with health, he says: Nothing has befallen me since I entered this religion of mine except good. And when darkness covers them, they stand up, meaning: When their wealth is gone, their livestock perish, and afflicted with calamity, they stand up, bewildered.

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi bin Anas: Therein is darkness, thunder, and lightning. He said: Their example is like that of people who walked on a dark night, and there was rain, thunder, and lightning on a road. When it flashed, they saw the road and continued on it. But when the lightning went away, they became confused. And so is the hypocrite. Whenever he spoke the word of sincerity, it lit up for him. But when he doubted, he became confused and fell into darkness. So is His statement: Whenever it lit up for them, they walked therein, but when darkness fell upon them, they stood still. Then He said: In their hearing and sight by which they lived among the people. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight.

Abu Ja'far said: Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Husayn told us, he said: Abu Tamila told us, on the authority of Ubayd ibn Sulayman al-Bahili, on the authority of al-Dahhak ibn Muzahim, In it are darknesses, he said: As for the darknesses, they are misguidance, and the lightning is faith.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd told me, regarding His statement: In it is darkness, thunder, and lightning, and he recited until he reached: Indeed, God is over all things competent, he said: This is also a parable that God gave for the hypocrites, who had been enlightened by Islam, just as this one was enlightened by the light of this lightning.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, he said: Ibn Jurayj said: There is nothing on earth that a hypocrite hears except that he thinks that it is intended for him, and that it is death, out of hatred for it. And the hypocrite is the most hateful of God's creation to death, just as if they were in the rain, fleeing from lightning.

Amr bin Ali told us: Abu Muawiyah told us: Ibn Jurayj told us, on the authority of Ata', regarding his statement: Or like a rainstorm from the sky in which there is darkness, thunder, and lightning, he said: A parable for the disbeliever.

These sayings that we have mentioned from those from whom we have narrated them, even if the words of those who said them differ, are close in meaning, because they all indicate that God struck the downpour as an example for the outward faith of the hypocrite, and the example of what is in it of darkness for his misguidance, and the example of what is in it of lightning for the light of his faith, and his protection from the thunderbolts by placing his fingers in his ears, for the weakness of his mind and the fear of his heart from the arrival of God's punishment in his courtyard, and his walking in the light of lightning for his steadfastness in the light of his faith? And his standing in the darkness for his confusion in his misguidance and his sinking into his blindness.

The interpretation of the verse, then, if the matter is as we have described: Or like what the hypocrites found light in, from their saying to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to the believers with their tongues: We believe in God and the Last Day and in Muhammad and what he brought, until they had the rulings of the believers in this world, and while they show with their tongues what they show in God and in His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought from God and the Last Day, they are disbelievers, and in the opposite of what they show with their tongues they believe in their hearts, despite their blindness and ignorance of what they are upon of misguidance, not knowing which of the two matters that were legislated for them, guidance: in the disbelief that they were upon before God sent Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, with what He sent him with to them, or in what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought to them from their Lord? So they are afraid of God's threat to them on the tongue of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and despite their fear of that, they are in reality doubtful, in their hearts is a disease, so God has increased their disease. Like a rain that flows at night in a dark cloud and a dark night, driven by thunder, and flying at its edges with lightning of intense brilliance, very dangerous, the flash of its lightning almost takes away the sight and snatches it from the intensity of its light and the brightness of its beam, and from it sometimes thunderbolts fall, almost leaving souls to perish from the intensity of its terrors.

The downpour is an example of what the hypocrites showed with their tongues of acknowledgment and belief, and the darkness that is in it is the darkness of what they conceal of doubt, denial and disease of the hearts. As for the thunder and lightning, it is because of their fear of God's threat to them through the tongue of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, in any of His Books, either in the immediate or the future, that it will befall them, with their doubt about that: Will it happen or not? And does it have a reality or is it a lie and falsehood? An example. They understand from their fear that it is true, they avoid it by acknowledging what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought with their tongues, fearing for themselves destruction and the descent of punishments. This is the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: They put their fingers in their ears against the thunderbolts, fearing death. By that, He means: They fear the threat of God that He revealed in His Book on the tongue of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, by what they express with their tongues of apparent acknowledgment, just as one who is afraid fears the sounds of thunderbolts by covering his ears and putting his fingers in them, fearing for himself from them.

We have mentioned the report narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and Ibn Abbas that they used to say: When the hypocrites attended the gathering of the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him), they would put their fingers in their ears out of fear that the words of the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) would be revealed about them, or that they would be mentioned in something and be killed. If that is true, and I do not know it to be true, as I have doubts about its chain of transmission, then the statement narrated on their authority is the statement. If it is not true, then what we have said is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse, because God only told us about their story at the beginning of their story: that they deceive God, His Messenger, and the believers by saying: We believe in God and the Last Day, while their hearts were doubtful and their hearts were sick about the truth of what they claimed to believe in, of what the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) brought to them from their Lord. And thus He described them in all the verses of the Qur'an in which He mentioned their description. And so it is in this verse.

God made their putting their fingers in their ears an example of their protection from the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and the believers, as we mentioned that they protect themselves from them, just as someone who hears the sound of thunderbolts protects himself by putting his fingers in his ears. This is an example similar to God's example of what He revealed about them of threats in the verses of His Book with the sounds of thunderbolts. Likewise, His statement, Beware of death, made it an example of their fear and dread of the imminent destructive punishment that they were threatened with in their courtyard, just as someone who hears the sounds of thunderbolts puts his fingers in his ears, fearing destruction and death for himself, lest he perish from its severity.

The word wary of death is in the accusative case in the same way that the word honor is in the accusative case in your saying: I visited you as an honor to you, meaning: because of honoring you, and as God Almighty said: And they call upon Us in hope and fear (Al-Anbiya': 90), as an explanation of the verb.

It was narrated on the authority of Qatada that he interpreted his saying: Beware of death as being a warning against death.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us that. He said: Abd al-Razzaq told us. He said: Muammar told us, on his authority.

This is a weak interpretation, because the people did not put their fingers in their ears out of fear of death, so its meaning is what he said it meant: out of fear of death, but rather they put them in their ears out of fear of death.

Qatada and Ibn Jurayj interpreted his statement, They put their fingers in their ears against the thunderbolts, fearing death, as meaning that this is from God, the Most High, as a description of the hypocrites, with their panic, weak hearts, and hatred of death. They interpreted in this regard his statement, They think that every shout is against them (al-Munafiqun 63:4).

In my opinion, the matter is not like what they said. That is because there were among them those whose bravery and courage could not be denied, such as Quzman, whose place no believer could take, or anyone less than him. Rather, their reluctance to witness the scenes with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their abandonment of helping him against his enemies was because they were not insightful in their religions, nor did they believe in the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. So they were reluctant to attend his scenes with him, except by discouraging him from them. But that is a description from God, may He be glorified, of them out of fear of God's punishment coming upon them for their hypocrisy, either sooner or later. Then He, the Most High, informed us that the hypocrites whom God described with the description He mentioned, and for whom He gave the examples He described, even if they feared His punishment and feared His torment with the fear of one who places his fingers in his ears, fearing the occurrence of the threat that He threatened them with in any of His Book, He will not save them from its descent upon their punishment and its occurrence in their courtyard, either immediately in this world or later in the Hereafter, because of what is in their hearts of disease and doubt in their belief. So He said: And God encompasses the disbelievers, meaning He encompasses them, so He will bring His punishment upon them.

Mujahid interpreted this as follows: Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: And God encompasses the disbelievers, he said: He will gather them in Hell.

As for Ibn Abbas, it was narrated from him regarding that: Ibn Hamid told me, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the freed slave of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And God encompasses the disbelievers, meaning: God sent down that punishment upon them.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: And God encompasses the disbelievers, he said: He gathers them.

Then He, the Most High, returned to describing the hypocrites' confession with their tongues, and the report about Him, them, and their hypocrisy, and completing the example that He began by giving to them and their doubts and the sickness of their hearts, saying: The lightning almost strikes, meaning by the lightning the confession that they showed with their tongues in God and in His Messenger and what he brought from their Lord. So He made the lightning an example for Him, as we have already described it.

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

It steals their sight, meaning: it takes it away, steals it, and dazzles it with the intensity of its light and the brightness of its beam.

It was also narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, he said: Their sight flashes but it does not yet do so.

Abu Ja'far said: "Khatf is theft, and from this is the report narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he forbade snatching, meaning by it plunder. And from this is the name given to the hook that is used to pull the bucket out of the well, because it snatches and takes away what is stuck to it. And from this is the saying of the Nabigha of Banu Dhubyān:

Hooks of Hajj in strong ropes, hands extending to you with desires

So He made the light of lightning and the intensity of its ray of light, like the light of their confession with their tongues of God and His Messenger, and what he brought from God and the Last Day and the ray of its light, an example.

Then the Almighty said: "Whenever it lights up for them," meaning that the lightning lights up for them, and He made the lightning an example of their faith. What He meant by that is that whenever faith lights up for them, and its lighting up for them is that they see in it what pleases them in their immediate worldly life, such as victory over enemies, obtaining spoils in battles, many conquests and their benefits, wealth in money, and safety in bodies, family and children, then that is its lighting up for them, because they only show with their tongues what they show of acknowledgment, seeking that, and defending themselves, their money, family and children, and they are as God, the Most High, described them in His saying: "And of the people is he who worships God on the edge. If good befalls him, he is content therewith; but if a trial befalls him, he turns back on his face." (al-Hajj 22:11)

What he means by his saying, They walked in it, is that they walked in the light of lightning. This is an example of their affirmation of what we have described. Its meaning is: whenever they saw in faith something that pleased them in their immediate worldly life, as we have described, they remained steadfast in it and remained in it, just as a traveler walks in the darkness of the night and the darkness of the downpour that the Most High described, when a flash of lightning flashes in it, he sees his way in it.

And when it becomes dark means: the light of lightning disappears from them.

By His saying, upon them, He means those who walk in the path that the Most High described. This is for the hypocrites, for example. The meaning of the darkness of that is that whenever the hypocrites do not see in Islam what pleases them in their worldly life when God tests the believing servants of His with hardship and tests them with difficulties and tribulations, such as their failure in their mission, the defeat of their enemy among them, or the turning away of those in their worldly life from them, they persist in their hypocrisy and remain steadfast in their misguidance, just as the one who walks in the path that the Most High described does when it becomes dark and the light of lightning dims, so he becomes confused on his way and does not know his path.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight.

Abu Ja'far said: The Almighty mentioned hearing and sight, that if He willed, He could take them away from the hypocrites, without the rest of their body parts, because of what was mentioned in the two verses, I mean His statement: They put their fingers in their ears against the thunderbolts and His statement: "The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein." So they were mentioned in the two verses as an example. Then the Almighty followed up by mentioning that if He willed, He could take them away from the hypocrites as a punishment for their hypocrisy and disbelief, and as a threat from God to them, as He threatened them in the verse before it in His statement: And God encompasses the disbelievers, describing Himself with that as the One who has power over them and over their entirety, to bring down His wrath upon them, and to send down His vengeance upon them, and to warn them with that of His power and to frighten them with His punishment, so that they may fear His wrath and hasten to Him in repentance.

Ibn Hamid also told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight, because they abandoned the truth after knowing it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, he said: Then he said, meaning God said about their hearing, meaning the hearing of the hypocrites, and their sight with which they lived among the al-Nas 114: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight.

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of his statement, He would have taken away their hearing and their sight, is

He would have taken away their hearing and their sight. However, when the Arabs insert the preposition ba in such a case, they say: He took away his sight. And if they omit the preposition ba, they say: He took away his sight, just as God, the Most High, said: Bring us our lunch Al-Kahf 62. If the preposition ba had been inserted in lunch, it would have been said: Bring us our lunch.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How is it that it was said: He would have taken away their hearing and made it singular, and said: and their sight and made it plural? And you know that the report about hearing is report about the hearing of a group, just as the report about sight is report about the sight of a group?

It was said: The Arabists differed on this. Some grammarians of Kufa said: He made the word hearing singular because he meant the source and intended the breach, and he made the word absar plural because he meant the eyes. Some grammarians of Basra claimed that even though hearing is in one word, it means a group. He used as evidence for that the words of God: Their glances will not return to them (Ibrahim 14:43) meaning: Their limbs will not return to them, and his words: And they turn their backs (al-Qamar 54:45) meaning their backs. I think that is permissible because there is something in the speech that indicates that it is intended for the group, so in its indication of what is intended by it, and the performance of the meaning of the one from hearing instead of the meaning of a group, it sufficed for its group. If he did to the sight something similar to what he did to the hearing, or did to the hearing something similar to what he did to the eyes in terms of plural and singular, it would be eloquent and correct, for the reason we mentioned, as the poet said:

Eat some of your stomachs and you will be spared, for our time is a time of starvation.

So he used the word belly alone, meaning the bellies, for the reason we described.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Indeed, God is over all things competent.

Abu Ja'far said: God, the Most High, described Himself as having power over all things in this passage because He warned the hypocrites of His might and power, and informed them that He encompasses them and is able to take away their hearing and sight. Then He said: So fear Me, O hypocrites, and beware of My deception and the deception of My Messenger and the people of faith in Me. I will not inflict My vengeance upon you, for I am capable of that and other things. The meaning of Qadeer is Able, just as the meaning of Aleem is All-Knowing, as I described in what preceded from its counterparts, of adding the meaning of Fa'il to Fa'il in praise and blame.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "Or like a rainstorm from the sky, in which there is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears against the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers."

The Almighty said: Or like a downpour from the sky. Al-Tabari said: Or means and, and Al-Farra' said the same. He recited:

Laila claimed that I was immoral for my own sake, or that I was immoral for her sake.

Another said:

He attained the caliphate or it was a destiny for him as his Lord gave Moses according to destiny.

Any and it was. It was said: Or for choice, meaning like them with this or with that, not on the basis of limiting them to one of the two matters, and the meaning is or like the people of a downpour. And the downpour is the rain. And its derivation is from the word sab, which means to pour, when it falls. Alqamah said:

Do not be equal to me in the flood, I will give you the rain of the clouds wherever it rains.

Its original form is: Sayyub. The Ya and Waw came together and one of them was preceded by a sukoon, so the Waw was changed to a Ya and assimilated, as they did in Mayt, Sayyid, Hain, and Layn. Some of the Kufians said: Its original form is Sawyb, on the model of Fa'il. An-Nahhas said: If it were as they said, then its assimilation would not be permissible, just as the assimilation of Tawil is not permissible. The plural of Sayyib is Sayyib. The meaning in Arabic is: Their example is like the one who lit a fire or like the example of a rain.

The Almighty says: From the sky. The sky is masculine and feminine, and is pluralized as Asmiya and Samawat, and Sami is pluralized as Fa'ul. Al-Ajjaj said:

Windblown and poisonous

The sky: everything that is above you and shades you, and from this the roof of the house is called the sky. The sky: the rain, it was named thus because it descends from the sky. Hassan bin Thabit said:

The land of the Bani Al-Hasahs is deserted and covered by mountains and sky.

Another said:

If the sky falls on the land of a people, we will take care of it, even if they are angry.

Mud and pasture are also called sky. It is said: We kept treading the sky until we came to you. They mean pasture and mud. The back of a horse is also called sky because of its height. He said:

And red as brocade, its sky is free, and its land is transformed.

The sky: what is above. The earth: what is below, as mentioned above.

The Almighty's saying: In it are darknesses is a subject and predicate. And thunder and lightning is conjoined to it. He said: Darknesses in the plural refers to the darkness of the night and the darkness of the dusk, which is the clouds, and from where they overlap and increase they are pluralized. What is in it from languages has passed, so there is no point in repeating it, and so is everything that came before, God willing.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:19

Scholars differed about thunder. In Al-Tirmidhi, "On the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The Jews asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about thunder, what is it? He said: An angel from among the angels assigned to the clouds, with him are whips of fire with which he drives the clouds wherever God wills. They said: What is this sound that we hear? He said: His driving the clouds when he drives them until they reach where God has commanded. They said: You have spoken the truth." The hadith in its entirety. Most scholars agree on this interpretation. Thunder is the name of the audible sound, and Ali, may God be pleased with him, said it, and it is known in the language of the Arabs. Labid said in his pre-Islamic era:

Thunder and lightning struck me with the knight on the day of the calamity of Najd

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Thunder is a wind that suffocates between the clouds and makes that sound. They differed about lightning. It was narrated on the authority of Ali, Ibn Masoud, and Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them: Lightning is an iron whip in the hand of the angel with which he drives the clouds.

I said: This is what is apparent from the hadith of Al-Tirmidhi. And from Ibn Abbas also: It is a whip of light in the hand of the angel with which he drives the clouds. And from him also: Lightning is an angel who appears.

The philosophers said: Thunder is the sound of the clashing of clouds. Lightning is what is sparked by their clashing. This is rejected and cannot be transmitted correctly, and God knows best. It is said: The origin of thunder is from movement, and from it comes the word ra'did for the coward. And trembled: became disturbed, and from it comes the hadith:

They were brought with them, their limbs trembling.

The hadith was narrated by Abu Dawood. Lightning comes from the root bariq and light, and from it comes al-buraq.

A beast that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, rode on the night of his Isra', and the prophets before him, peace be upon them, rode on it. The sky thundered with thunder and flashed with lightning. The woman thundered and flashed: she became beautiful and adorned herself. The man thundered and flashed: he threatened and made a warning. Ibn Ahmar said:

Oh, how far our country and our students are from you, so thunder and lightning in your land

The people thundered and flashed: thunder and lightning struck them. Abu Ubaidah and Abu Amr narrated: The sky thundered and flashed, and a man thundered and flashed if he threatened and made a warning, and Al-Asma'i rejected this. He cited as evidence for this the saying of Al-Kumait:

Lightning and thunder, Yazid, for your threat does not harm me.

He said: Al-Kumait is not an argument.

Benefit: Ibn Abbas narrated: We were with Umar ibn al-Khattab on a journey between Madinah and Ash-Sham, and with us was Ka'b al-Ahbar. A wind, thunder, heavy rain, and hail struck us, and the people were scattered. Ka'b said to me: Whoever says upon hearing thunder: Glory be to Him whom the thunder glorifies with His praise, and the angels out of fear of Him, will be spared from what is in that cloud, hail, and lightning. He said: So Ka'b and I said it, and when morning came and the people had gathered, I said to Umar: O Commander of the Faithful, it is as if we were not in the place where the people were. He said: What is that? He said: So I told him the hadith of Ka'b. He said: Glory be to God! Why didn't you tell us so we could say as you said! In another narration, a cloak hit Umar's nose and affected it. This narration will come in Surat Ar-Ra'd, God willing. Abu Bakr Ahmad ibn Ali ibn Thabit al-Khatib mentioned the two narrations in the narrations of the Companions from the Followers, may God have mercy on them all. On the authority of Ibn Omar, when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, heard thunder and lightning, he would say: O God, do not kill us with Your wrath, do not destroy us with Your punishment, and spare us before that.

God the Almighty said: They put their fingers in their ears. They put their fingers in their ears so that they would not hear the Qur'an and believe in it and in Muhammad, peace be upon him. This is considered disbelief, and disbelief is death. There are five languages for the word finger: finger with a kasra on the hamza and a fatha on the ba', finger with a fatha on the hamza and a kasra on the ba', and it is said with a fatha on both of them, a damma on both of them, and a kasra on both of them. It is feminine. The same is true for ear, and it is pronounced lightly, heavily, and diminutively, so it is said: adhina. If you named a man with it and then made him diminutive, you would say: adhina, and it is not made feminine because the femininity was removed from it by transferring it to the masculine. As for their saying: adhina in a proper noun, it was named with it in a diminutive form, and the plural is adhina. You say: adhinatu if you hit his ear. A man with adhina if he hears everyone's speech, the singular and the plural are the same. Adhani: big ears. A sheep with adhina, and a ram with adhina. To make a sandal or something else hurt: if you give it an ear. And to make a boy's ear hurt: you rub his ear.

God the Almighty said: Of the thunderbolts meaning of the most severe thunderbolts. Thunderbolts is the plural of thunderbolt. Ibn Abbas, Mujahid and others said: When the wrath of the thunder, which is the angel, becomes intense, fire flies from its mouth, which is the thunderbolts. Al-Khalil said the same, he said: It is the severe occurrence of the sound of thunder, sometimes accompanied by a piece of fire that burns whatever it hits. Abu Zaid said: Thunderbolt is a fire that falls from the sky in severe thunder. Al-Khalil narrated from some al-Nas 114:As-Sa'i'qah with a s. Abu Bakr Al-Naqqash said: It is said: Thunderbolt, shock, and thunderbolt have the same meaning. Al-Hasan read: Of the thunderbolts with the qaf prefixed, and from this is the saying of Abu Al-Najm:

They tell of the polished incisors that lightning cracks from the thunderbolts.

An-Nahhas said: It is the language of Tamim and some of Banu Rabi'ah. It is said: The sky struck them if it casts thunderbolt upon them. Thunderbolt also means a cry of torment. God Almighty said: So the thunderbolt of humiliating torment seized them. It is also said: The man was struck with a thunderbolt or a stunner, meaning he fainted. From this is the saying of God Almighty: And Moses fell unconscious, so someone else struck him with a thunderbolt. Ibn Muqbil said:

You see the blue flags under his gum, one by one and two, his howls have struck them.

God the Almighty said: So whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on the earth was struck dead meaning, they died. God the Almighty likened in this verse the state of the hypocrites to the darkness, thunder, lightning, and thunderbolts in the downpour. The darkness is an example of what they believe of disbelief, and the thunder and lightning are an example of what they frighten with. It was said: God the Almighty likened the Qur'an to the downpour because of the confusion it contains for them, and the blindness is the darkness, and what it contains of threat and deterrence is the thunder, and what it contains of light and dazzling arguments that sometimes almost dazzle them is the lightning. The thunderbolts are an example of what is in the Qur'an of the call to fight in this life and the threat in the hereafter. It was said: The thunderbolts are the obligations of the Shari'ah that they hate, such as jihad, zakat, and others.

His saying: Beware of death. Beware and beware have the same meaning, and they were read with both. Sibawayh said: It is accusative, because it is located for it, that is, an object for it, and its reality is that it is a source, and Sibawayh recited:

Forgive the faults of the generous person for his generosity, and turn away from the insults of the ignoble person out of kindness.

The reciters said: It is in the accusative case as a specification. Death is the opposite of life. He died, dies, and also dies. The rajaz poet said:

My daughter, the lady of girls, live and do not believe that you will die

He is dead and dead, and dead people and dead and dead and dead. Mawat with dammah is death. Mawat with fathah: that which has no soul. Mawat also: the land that has no human owner and no one benefits from it. Mawat with sukoon: the opposite of an animal. It is said: buy the two dead, but do not buy the animal, meaning buy the lands and houses, but do not buy slaves and animals. Mawat with dammah: a death that befalls livestock. It is said: two deaths befell the money. And God caused him to die and his death, doubled for emphasis. He said:

Urwa died a peaceful death, so here I am dying every day

The she-camel died when her offspring died, so she is called mumayt and mumaytah. Abu Ubaid said: The same applies to a woman, and its plural is mumayt. Ibn al-Sikkit said: So-and-so died when his son or sons died. Al-Mutamawwat is a description of a hypocritical ascetic. The death of a dead person, like your saying: a dark night, you take from its wording what it emphasizes. And the one who is determined to do something: is the one who is devoted to it. Ru'bah said:

The sea has become rough and the night is still raging above the water

Also: the one who is desperate and does not care about death in war. In the hadith:

I see the people fighting to the death They are those who are fighting to the death. Death with dammah: is a type of madness and epilepsy that befalls a person. When he wakes up, his mind returns to him, like a sleeper or a drunkard. Mu'tah with dammah on the meem and hamza on the waw: is the name of a land where Ja'far ibn Abi Talib, peace be upon him, was killed.

The Almighty says: And God encompasses the disbelievers is a subject and predicate, meaning they will not escape Him. It is said: The sultan surrounded someone if he seized him in a besieging manner from every direction. The poet said:

We surrounded them until, when they were certain of what had been decreed, they all inclined toward peace.

And from this is the saying of God the Almighty: And its fruit is encompassed. Its root is Muhit, the movement of the Ya' was transferred to the Ha' and then it became quiescent. So God the Almighty encompasses all of His creation, meaning they are in His grasp and under His control, as He said: And the earth entirely will be in His grasp on the Day of Resurrection. It was said: Surrounding the disbelievers meaning He knows them. Its evidence is: And that God has encompassed all things in knowledge. It was said: He will destroy them and gather them. Its evidence is the saying of God the Almighty: Unless you are encompassed meaning unless you all perish. And He specifically mentioned the disbelievers because they were mentioned earlier in the verse. And God knows best.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is another example that God the Almighty gave for another type of hypocrites, who sometimes see the truth and sometimes doubt. Their hearts, in their state of doubt, disbelief and hesitation, are like a downpour. A downpour is rain, said Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn Abbas, some of the Companions, Abu Al-'Aliyah, Mujahid, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, 'Ata', Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Qatadah, 'Atiyyah Al-'Awfi, 'Ata Al-Khurasani, Al-Suddi and Al-Rabi' ibn Anas. Ad-Dahhak said: It is the clouds, and the most famous is rain that descends from the sky in a state of darkness, which is doubt, disbelief and hypocrisy. Thunder is what disturbs the hearts with fear, for it is the nature of hypocrites to be extremely fearful and frightened, as God the Almighty said: They think that every shout is against them. And He said: "And they swear by God that they are of you, but they are not of you. But they are a people who are afraid. If they could find a refuge or caves or a place of entry, they would turn to it, rushing headlong." Lightning is what is sometimes glimpsed in the hearts of these types of hypocrites from the light of faith, and for this reason He said: They make... Their fingers in their ears from the thunderbolts, for fear of death, and God encompasses the disbelievers." That is, their caution will not avail them at all, because God encompasses them with His power and they are subject to His will and desire, as He said: "Has there come to you the story of the hosts? Pharaoh and Thamud? Rather, those who disbelieved are in denial. And God is behind them, encompassing them." Then He said: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, that is, because of its intensity and strength in itself, and the weakness of their insights and their lack of steadfastness in faith. Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, meaning that the decisive verse of the Qur'an almost points to the faults of the hypocrites. Ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, that is, because of the intensity of the light of the truth, whenever it shines for them, they walk in it, and when it darkens for them, they stand, that is, whenever something of faith appears to them, they take comfort in it and follow it. And sometimes doubts appear to them, their hearts darken and they stand confused. Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it. He said, "Whenever the hypocrites are afflicted with the glory of Islam, they are reassured by it, and when a disaster befalls Islam, they stand up to return to disbelief, as God Almighty said, 'And of mankind is he who worships God on the verge; if good befalls him, he is reassured by it.' " Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it, and when it darkens for them, they stand up. That is, they know the truth and speak it, so they are on the right path from what they say, but if they regress from it to disbelief, they stand up, that is, confused. This is what Abu Al-'Aliyah, Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Qatadah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, and Al-Suddi said on the authority of the Companions, and this is more correct and clear, and God knows best. This is how they will be on the Day of Resurrection when people are given light according to their faith. Some of them are given light that will illuminate them for a distance of farsakhs, and more than that, and less than that. Some of them have their light extinguished at one time and illuminated at another, so they walk on the Sirat at one time and stop at another. Some of them have their light extinguished completely, and they are the sincere ones. The hypocrites, about whom God Almighty said: On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believed, 'Wait a moment for us that we may borrow some of your light.' It will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' And He said about the believers: On the Day when you see the believing men and believing women, their light proceeding before them and on their right, 'Good tidings for you today are gardens beneath which rivers flow.' And God Almighty said: "On the Day when God will not disgrace the Prophet and those who believed with him, their light proceeding before them and on their right, they will say, 'Our Lord, perfect for us our light and forgive us. Indeed, You are over all things competent.'"

Surat al-Baqarah 2:19

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

Saeed bin Abi Aruba said on the authority of Qatada regarding the words of God Almighty: On the Day you see the believing men and believing women the verse, he mentioned to us that the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say that among the believers there are those whose light will shine from Medina to Aden or between Sana'a and even less than that, so that among the believers there are those whose light will shine only where their feet are. It was narrated by Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim from the hadith of Imran bin Dawar al-Qattan on the authority of Qatada in a similar manner. This is like what al-Minhal bin Amr said on the authority of Qais bin al-Sakn on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud, who said: They will be given their light according to their deeds. Some of them will be given their light like a palm tree and some of them will be given their light like a standing man, and the light of them will be the light of the least of them on his thumb, it will be extinguished at one time and ignited at another. This is how Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Ibn Muthanna on the authority of Ibn Idris on the authority of his father on al-Minhal. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Muhammad bin Ali bin Muhammad al-Tanafisi told us, Ibn Idris told us, I heard my father mention on the authority of al-Minhal bin Amr on the authority of Qais bin al-Sakn on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud: Their light will run between... Their hands" He said: They will pass over the Sirat according to their deeds. Some of them will have light like a mountain, and some of them will have light like a palm tree. The light of the light closest to them will be in their thumbs, which will flare up at one time and be extinguished at another. Ibn Abi Hatim also said: Muhammad ibn Ismail al-Ahmasi told us: Abu Yahya al-Hamani told us: Utbah ibn al-Yaqzan told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: There is no one among the people of monotheism who will not be given light on the Day of Resurrection. As for the hypocrite, his light will be extinguished, so the believer will be afraid of what he sees of the extinguishing of the light of the hypocrites, so they will say: Our Lord, perfect our light for us. Ad-Dahhak ibn Muzahim said: Everyone who showed faith in this world will be given light on the Day of Resurrection, and when he reaches the Sirat, the light of the hypocrites will be extinguished. When the believers saw that, they were afraid and said: Our Lord, perfect our light for us.

If this is established, then people are divided into categories: sincere believers, who are described in the four verses at the beginning of Surat Al-Baqarah; sincere disbelievers, who are described in the two verses after it; and hypocrites, who are divided into two categories: sincere, who are the ones for whom the fiery parable is given; and hypocrites who hesitate, sometimes showing the sparkle of faith and sometimes fading, who are the ones with the watery parable, and they are in a lighter state than those before them. This situation is similar in some ways to what was mentioned in Surat An-Nur, about the parable of the believer and what God has placed in his heart of guidance and light, with the lamp in the glass that is like a shining star, which is the heart of the believer who is created with faith and deriving it from the pure and clear Sharia that reaches him without turbidity or confusion, as will be explained in its place, God willing. Then the parable of the servants of the disbelievers who believe that they are on something but are not on anything, and they are the ones with compound ignorance is given in the Almighty's saying: And those who disbelieve - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty person thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing. The verse. Then the parable of the ignorant disbelievers is given, who are the ones about whom God Almighty said: Or like darknesses. In a deep sea covered by waves above waves above clouds - darknesses, one above another. If he puts out his hand, he can hardly see it. And he to whom God has not appointed light - for him there is no light. So He divided the disbelievers here into two groups: the preacher and the imitator, as He mentioned at the beginning of Surat al-Hajj 22: And among the people is he who disputes about God without knowledge and follows every rebellious devil. And He said: And among the people is he who disputes about God without knowledge or guidance or an enlightening Book. And God divided the believers at the beginning of the event and at the end of it, and in Surat Al-Insan, into two groups: the foremost, who are the close ones, and the companions of the right, who are the righteous.

The summary of these noble verses is that believers are of two types: those who are close to God and those who are righteous. The disbelievers are of two types: those who call to God and those who imitate. The hypocrites are also of two types: a pure hypocrite and a hypocrite who has some form of hypocrisy, as stated in the two Sahih's on the authority of Abdullah ibn Amr on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "There are three things, whoever has them is a pure hypocrite, and whoever has one of them has some trait of hypocrisy until he gives it up: whoever lies when he speaks, whoever breaks his promise, and whoever betrays when he is entrusted." They used this as evidence that a person may have some form of faith and some form of hypocrisy. This is either practical in accordance with this hadith or belief, as indicated by the verse, as stated by a group of the Salaf and some scholars, as mentioned above and as will come, God willing. Imam Ahmad said: Abu al-Nadr told us: Abu Muawiyah, meaning Shaiban, told us, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Amr ibn Murrah, on the authority of Abu al-Bukhtari, on the authority of Abu Saeed, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Hearts are of four types: a bare heart in which there is a lamp that shines, a covered heart tied to its covering, an inverted heart, and a plated heart. As for the bare heart, it is the heart of the believer, and its lamp is its light. As for the plated heart, it is the heart of the disbeliever. As for the inverted heart, it is the heart of the pure hypocrite, who knew and then denied. As for the plated heart, it is a heart in which there is both faith and hypocrisy. The example of faith in it is like that of a plant nourished by good water, and the example of hypocrisy in it is like that of an ulcer nourished by pus and blood. Whichever of the two substances overcomes the other, it overcomes it." This is a good and good chain of transmission.

And the Almighty's saying: "And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent." Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the Almighty's saying: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. He said: "Because they abandoned the truth after knowing it. Indeed, God is over all things competent." Ibn Abbas said: That is, God is capable of everything He intends for His servants, whether punishment or forgiveness. Ibn Jarir said: God Almighty described Himself as having the power to do all things in this place because He warned the hypocrites of His wrath and might and informed them that He encompasses them and is capable of taking away their hearing and sight. The meaning of Qadir is Qadir, just as the meaning of Aleem is Aalim. Ibn Jarir and many of the commentators who followed him went to the fact that these two examples were given for one type of hypocrites, and the word aw in the Almighty's saying: or like a rainstorm from the sky means and like the Almighty's saying: and do not obey among them a sinner or an ingrate. Or it is for choice, i.e. give them an example of this or that if you wish. Al-Qurtubi said: or for equality, like sitting with Al-Hasan or Ibn Sirin, according to what Al-Zamakhshari explained, that each of them is equal to the other in the permissibility of sitting with him. And its meaning, according to his saying, whether you give them an example of this or that, it is consistent with their condition I said. This is in consideration of the type of hypocrites, for they are types and they have conditions and attributes as God the Almighty mentioned in Surat Bara'ah: and among them - and among them - and among them - mentioning their conditions and attributes and what they rely on of actions and words. So He made these two examples for two types of them that are more consistent with their conditions and attributes, and God knows best, just as the two examples were given in Surat An-Nur for the two types of the infidels, the preachers. And the imitators in the Almighty's saying: And those who disbelieve - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland until He said: Or like darknesses in a deep sea the verse: the first is for the preachers who are in compound ignorance, and the second is for those with simple ignorance from the imitating followers, and God knows best what is correct.

Fath al-Qadir

This example was connected to the first example with the letter of doubt in order to give a choice between the two examples: that is, give them an example of this or that. Although it was originally for doubt, it was expanded until it became for mere equality without doubt. It was said that it has the meaning of the letter waw, as was said by the reciters and others. He recited:

Laila claimed that I was immoral for my own sake, or that I was immoral for her sake.

Another said:

He attained the caliphate or it was a destiny for him as his Lord gave Moses according to destiny.

What is meant by saib is rain, and its derivation is from sab yasub which means to fall. Alqamah said:

Do not treat me and Muammar equally. I will give you the nectar of death wherever it may be.

Its origin is Saiyub, the Ya and Waw came together and one of them was preceded by a sukoon, so the Waw was changed to a Ya and assimilated, as they did in Mayt and Sayyid. The sky in the original: everything that rises above you and covers you. From this, the roof of the house is called the sky. The sky also: rain is called by this name because it descends from it, and the benefit of mentioning its descent from the sky even though it only occurs from it is that its descent is not specific to one side of it rather than another, and the use of the sky to refer to rain occurs frequently in the speech of the Arabs, such as the saying of Hassan:

The land of the Bani Al-Hasahs is deserted and covered by the whirlpools and the sky.

Another said:

If the sky descends to the land of a people

The explanation of darkness has been presented, but the plural is an indication that the darkness of the clouds is joined to the darkness of the night. Thunder is the name for the sound of the angel who drives the clouds. At-Tirmidhi narrated from the hadith of Ibn Abbas who said: "The Jews asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about thunder, what it is? He said: An angel from among the angels in whose hand are whips of fire with which he drives the clouds wherever God wills. They said: What is this sound that we hear? He said: His driving the clouds when he drives them until they reach where he is commanded. She said: You have spoken the truth." The hadith in its entirety, and there is an argument in its chain of transmission. Al-Qurtubi said: Most scholars agree with this interpretation - and it was said: It is the turmoil of the cloud bodies when rain falls from them, and this is what a group of commentators followed, following the philosophers and ignorant theologians, and other things were said. Lightning is an iron whip in the hand of the angel who drives the clouds, and this was agreed upon by many of the companions and the majority of scholars of Islamic law, based on the previous hadith. Some commentators, following the philosophers, said: Lightning is what is sparked by the clash of cloud bodies accumulated from rising vapors containing a fiery part that ignites when they clash. His statement: 19- They put their fingers in their ears is a new sentence that has no syntactic position, as if someone said: What is their condition during that thunder? So it was said: They put their fingers in their ears. Calling some of the fingers a well-known metaphor, and the partial and complete relationship is because what is placed in the ear is only the head of the entire finger. And the thunderbolts, and it is said the thunderbolts: are a piece of fire that separates from the king's whip that restrains the clouds when he is angry and strikes them violently, and what is indicated by that is what is in the hadith of Ibn Abbas, some of which we mentioned shortly, and many scholars of Islamic law said the same. Some of them said: It is a fire that comes out of the mouth of the king. Al-Khalil said: It is the intense sound of thunder, sometimes accompanied by a piece of fire that burns whatever it hits. Abu Zaid said the thunderbolt: Fire that falls from the sky in severe thunder. Some commentators, following the philosophers and those who said the same as them, said: It is a subtle fire that flares up from the clouds when their bodies collide. And in Surat Ar-Ra'd, God willing, there will be more benefit and clarification in the interpretation of thunder, lightning, and thunderbolts. And the word warm of death is in the accusative case as an object for which it is intended. Al-Farra' said: It is in the accusative case as a specification. Death is the opposite of life. And encompassing is taking from all sides so that the thing encompassed is not missed in any way.

19. Or like a downpour meaning like the people of a downpour. This is another example that God Almighty gave for the hypocrites with another meaning. If you wish, liken them to a fire, or if you wish, to the people of the downpour. It was said that / or with the meaning of the waw, meaning and like a downpour, like His Almighty saying: Or they increase meaning and they increase. The downpour is rain and everything that descends from above to below is a downpour, and it is a verb from saba, yasub, meaning it descends from the sky, meaning from the clouds. It was said that it is the sky itself, and the sky is everything that rises above you and shades you. It is one of the names of species, it can be singular and plural. In it meaning in the downpour. It was said in the sky, meaning from the clouds, and that is why he mentioned it. It was said that the sky is masculine and feminine. God Almighty said: The sky is split by it 18-Al-Muzzammil and He said: When the sky is split 1-Al-Infitar. Darkness is the plural of darkness, Thunder is the sound that is heard from the clouds, and lightning is the fire that comes out of it.

Ali, Ibn Abbas and most of the commentators may God be pleased with them said: Thunder is the name of an angel who drives the clouds, and lightning is the flashing of a whip of light with which the angel rebukes the clouds. It was also said that the sound is the rebuke of the clouds, or it was said that it is the glorification of the angel. It was also said that thunder is the speech of the angel and lightning is his laughter. Mujahid said that thunder is the name of the angel, and his voice is also called thunder, and lightning is the striking of an angel who drives the clouds. Shahr ibn Hawshab said: Thunder is an angel who drives the clouds, and when they disperse, he gathers them together, and when his anger is intense, fire flies from his mouth, which are the thunderbolts. It was also said that thunder is the sound of the wind deflecting between the clouds, but the first is more correct.

They put their fingers in their ears because of the thunderbolts. The plural of thunderbolt is a shout that causes death or unconsciousness to those who hear it. Every deadly punishment is called a thunderbolt. It has also been said that a thunderbolt is a piece of punishment that God Almighty sends down on whomever He wills.

It was narrated on the authority of Salim bin Abdullah bin Omar, on the authority of his father, may God be pleased with him, that when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, heard the sound of thunder and lightning, he would say: O God, do not kill us with Your wrath, nor destroy us with Your punishment, and pardon us before that. His statement, fear of death, means fear of destruction. And God encompasses the disbelievers, meaning He knows them. It was also said that He gathers them. Mujahid said: He gathers them and punishes them. It was also said: He will destroy them. The evidence for this is the statement of God Almighty: Unless you are encompassed 66-Yusuf, meaning that you are all destroyed. Abu Amr and Al-Kisa'i incline the word the disbelievers in the accusative and genitive cases, but they do not incline: the first to disbelieve in Him 41-Al-Baqarah.

19- Or like a downpour from the sky is in apposition to the one who kindled the fire, meaning: like those with a downpour, as He said: They put their fingers in their ears. And or originally indicates equality in doubt, then it was expanded and was used to indicate equality without doubt, such as: Sit with Al-Hasan or Ibn Sirin, and the Almighty's saying: And do not obey among them a sinner or an ingrate. It indicates equality in good sitting and the obligation of disobedience. From that is His saying: Or like a downpour. Its meaning is that the story of the hypocrites is similar to these two stories, and that they are the same in the validity of the likening to them, and you have the choice to represent them or whichever you want. And the downpour is a verb from the word saub, which means descent, and it is said for rain and clouds. Al-Shamakh said:

And Asham Dan Sadiq Al-Raad Saib

In the verse, both are possible, and its indefiniteness is because what is meant by it is a type of heavy rain. And the definition of the sky is to indicate that the clouds are dense and cover the entire horizons of the sky, for each of them is called a sky, just as each layer of it is a sky. And he said:

And then there is land between us and sky

It was provided with a share of exaggeration in terms of origin, construction and indefiniteness. It was said that what is meant by the sky is the clouds, so the lam is for defining the essence.

In it is darkness, thunder, and lightning. If what is meant by rain is rain, then its darkness is the darkness of its condensation due to the successive drops, and the darkness of a cloud with the darkness of the night, and making it a place for thunder and lightning because they are at its top and its slope, intertwined with it. If what is meant by it is the clouds, then its darkness is its blackness and its application with the darkness of the night. And its rise by circumstance is in agreement because it is dependent on the described. Thunder is a sound heard from the clouds. It is well-known that its cause is the disturbance of the cloud bodies and their clashing if the wind makes them tremble. And lightning is what flashes from the clouds, from the lightning of something, and both are originally a source, and therefore they were not combined.

They put their fingers in their ears. The pronoun refers to the owners of the loss. Even though its wording was omitted and loss was used in its place, its meaning remains. It is permissible to rely on it, just as Hassan relied on it in his saying:

They are watered with roses, and upon them is a papyrus that claps with pure nectar.

The pronoun was mentioned because the meaning is cold water, and the sentence is a resumption, so when he mentioned what indicates severity and horror, it was said: What is their condition with something like that? So it was answered with it, and he only used the fingers instead of the fingertips for emphasis.

From the thunderbolts is related to they make, meaning for the sake of which they make, like their saying He gave him a drink from the 'aymah. And the thunderbolt is a violent thunderclap with fire that does not pass anything without destroying it, from sa'q which is the intensity of the sound, and it may be applied to anything violent that is heard or seen, it is said the thunderbolt struck him if it destroyed him by burning or the intensity of the sound, and it is read from the thunderbolts although it is not a reversal of from the thunderbolts because both structures are the same in declension, it is said the rooster slapped, and the orator slapped, and his thunderbolt is originally either an attribute of the thunderclap or of the thunder. And the ta is for emphasis as in the narration or a source like al-'afiyah and al-kadhibah. Hadhar al-mawt is in the accusative case as in his saying:

Or like a downpour from the sky, in which is darkness and thunder and lightning. They put their fingers in their ears to avoid the thunderclaps, fearing death. And God encompasses the disbelievers.

I forgive the generosity of the generous and I pardon the insults of the mean out of generosity.

Death: the disappearance of life. It was said that it is an opposite of it, as he said: He created death and life. It was replied that creation means estimation, and annihilation is estimation.

And God encompasses the disbelievers. They will not escape Him, just as the one who is surrounded by Him will not escape the one who surrounds Him. Deception and trickery will not save them. The sentence is parenthetical and has no syntactic position.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:20

The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, and when darkness covers them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

The lightning almost comes close to snatching away their sight taking it away quickly Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it that is, in its light and when it becomes dark for them, they stand still they stop, a representation of the disturbance of what is in the Qur'an of the arguments in their hearts and their belief in what they heard in it of what they love and their stopping from what they hate And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing meaning their hearing and their sight the apparent as He took away the hidden Indeed, God is over all things He willed Able and similar to it is the taking away of what was mentioned

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

"The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, but when it darkens for them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent."

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, but when darkness descends upon them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent."

The Almighty says: The lightning almost snatches away their sight. The meaning of almost is approaches. It is said: He almost did something if he came close but did not do it. It is also permissible in places other than the Qur'an to say: He almost did something, as Ru'bah said:

It has almost become worn out from long wear and tear.

Derived from the word musah which means lesson. It is better to use it without an because it is to approximate the situation, and to refer the speech to the future, and this is contradictory. God the Almighty said: The flash of its lightning almost takes away the sight. And from the sayings of the Arabs: The ostrich almost flew away and The bride almost became a prince, because of their proximity to that situation.

Kada is a verb that is modified on the basis of fa'ilu yaf'ulu. Its predicate is a noun, which is rare. He said: And I almost returned. It runs the same course as Kada, "Karaba," Ja'ala, "Qaraba," and Tafaqa, in that its predicate is without an. God the Almighty said: And they began to fasten together, over themselves, from the leaves of Paradise, because they all mean the state and approximation, and an does not come with the state, so know.

God the Almighty says: It snatches away their sight. Khuff means to seize quickly, and from this the bird is called a snatcher for its speed. So whoever makes the Qur'an an example of intimidation, the meaning is that their fear of what will befall them almost takes away their sight. And whoever makes it an example of the explanation in the Qur'an, the meaning is that there came to them from the explanation what dazzled them. And yakhtafu and yakhtafu are two languages in which it was recited. And qad khtafuhu with a kasra yakhtafuhu khtafan, and it is the good language, and the other language narrated by Al-Akhfash: khtafu yakhtafu. Al-Jawhari: It is rare and poor and is hardly known. Yunus recited it with it in His Almighty saying: The lightning almost snatches away their sight.

Al-Nahhas said: There are seven ways of reciting yakhtafu, the eloquent recitation is: yakhtafu. Ali ibn Al-Hasan and Yahya ibn Watthab recited: yakhtafu with a kasra on the ta'. Saeed Al-Akhfash said: It is a language. Al-Hasan, Qatada, Asim Al-Jahdari and Abu Raja Al-Attardi recited with a fatha on the ya' and a kasra on the kha' and the ta'. It was also narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan that he read it with a fatha on the kha'. Al-Farra' said: Some of the people of Medina read it with a sukoon on the kha' and a shaddah on the ta'. Al-Kisa'i, Al-Akhfash and Al-Farra' said: It is permissible to say yakhtafi with a kasra on the ya', the kha' and the ta'. So these are six aspects that are in agreement with the script. The seventh was narrated by Abdul-Warith who said: I saw in the copy of Ubayy ibn Ka'b the word yatakhatafi, and Sibawayh and Al-Kisa'i claimed that whoever reads yakhtafi with a kasra on the kha' and the ta', the original word in his view is yatakhatafi, then the ta' was assimilated into the ta' and two quiescent letters met, so the kha' was kasra because of the meeting of two quiescent letters. Sibawayh said: Whoever opens the kha' adds the vowel of the ta' to it. Al-Kisa'i said: Whoever breaks the ya', it is because the alif in ikhtafafi is kasra. As for what Al-Farra' narrated on the authority of the people of Medina about sukoon on the kha' and assimilation, it is not known and is not permissible, because it is combining two quiescent letters. This was said by Al-Nahhas and others.

I said: It was also narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Raja' that he snatches. Ibn Mujahid said: I think it is a mistake, and he provided evidence for that by saying that no one read khtafat al-khutfaf with the fat-ha.

Their eyes is the plural of sight, which is the sense of sight. The meaning is: The clear arguments and proofs of the Qur'an almost dazzle them. Whoever uses lightning as an example of intimidation means that their fear of what will befall them almost blinds them.

God the Almighty said: Whenever it lights up for them,

Surat al-Baqarah 2:20

The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, and when darkness covers them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent.

they walk therein. Whenever is in the accusative case because it is an adverb. If when it means if, then it is a relative pronoun and the agent in it is they walked, which is its answer, and it does not work on it because it is in the relation of what. The object according to Al-Mubarrad is omitted, the meaning according to him is: whenever the lightning lights up the way for them. It was said: It is permissible for fa'l and af'al to have one meaning, like sakat and askat, so idda' and idda' are the same and there is no need to estimate the omission of an object. Al-Farra' said: It is said da' and idda', and it has been mentioned before. The meaning is that whenever they heard the Qur'an and the arguments became clear to them, they forgot and walked with it, but when something was revealed from the Qur'an that they were blind to and led astray by or were forced to do, they stood up, that is, they remained in their hypocrisy. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas. It was also said: The meaning is whenever their conditions improved in their crops and livestock and blessings continued, they said: The religion of Muhammad is a blessed religion. But when a calamity befell them and hardship befell them, they became angry and remained in their hypocrisy. It was narrated from Ibn Mas'ud and Qatadah. An-Nahhas said: This is a good statement, and its correctness is indicated by the following: And among the people is he who worships God on the edge, if good befalls him he is content therewith, but if a trial befalls him he turns back on his face. The Sufi scholars said: This is an example given by God the Most High for someone who did not have sound states of will to begin with, so he ascended from those states through claims to the states of the great, as if the states of will would illuminate him if he corrected them by adhering to their manners, but when he mixed them with claims, God took away those lights from him and he remained in the darkness of claims from which he could not see the way out. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas that what was meant were the Jews, when the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was granted victory at Badr, they were greedy and said: This is, by God, the Prophet whom Moses gave us glad tidings of, no banner of his will will be rejected, but when the calamity befell him at Uhud, they turned back and doubted, and this is weak. The verse is about the hypocrites, and this is more correct from Ibn Abbas, and the meaning includes everyone.

The Almighty said: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Law is a particle of wish and it has the meaning of recompense, and its response is lam. The meaning is: And if God had willed, He could have informed the believers of them and taken away the glory of Islam by taking control of them, killing them, and expelling them from among them. He specifically mentioned hearing and sight because they were mentioned in the verse first, or because they are the most honorable aspects of man. It was read with their hearing for all, and we have already discussed this.

God the Almighty said: Indeed, God has power over all things. This is general, and its meaning according to the theologians is that which is permissible to describe God the Almighty with power over it. The Ummah agreed to call God the Almighty the Almighty, for He is Almighty, Able, and Powerful. The Almighty is more eloquent in description than the Able, as stated by Al-Zajaji. Al-Harawi said: The Almighty and the Able have the same meaning. It is said: I have power over something, I have power over it, a power, a power, a power, and two powers, meaning power. And the power to do something means the power over it. So God the Almighty and Majestic is Able and Powerful over every possible thing that can exist or not exist. So every accountable person must know that God the Almighty is Able, He has the power by which He acts and does what He wills according to his knowledge and choice. He must also know that the servant has the power by which he acquires what God the Almighty has enabled him to do according to the usual course of events, and that he is not the sole possessor of his power. Rather, God the Almighty mentioned here His attribute, which is power, and not others, because an action that includes threat and fear was mentioned previously, so mentioning power was appropriate for that. And God knows best.

These are twenty verses, according to the number of the Kufians, four verses describing the believers, then two verses mentioning the disbelievers, and the rest of them about the hypocrites. The narration of them from Ibn Jurayj has been presented previously, and Mujahid also said the same.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is another example that God the Almighty gave for another type of hypocrites, who sometimes see the truth and sometimes doubt. Their hearts, in their state of doubt, disbelief and hesitation, are like a downpour. A downpour is rain, said Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn Abbas, some of the Companions, Abu Al-'Aliyah, Mujahid, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, 'Ata', Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Qatadah, 'Atiyah Al-'Awfi, 'Ata Al-Khurasani, Al-Suddi and Al-Rabi' ibn Anas. Ad-Dahhak said: It is the clouds, and the most famous is rain that descends from the sky in a state of darkness, which is doubt, disbelief and hypocrisy. Thunder is what disturbs the hearts with fear, for it is the nature of hypocrites to be extremely fearful and frightened, as God the Almighty said: They think that every shout is against them. And He said: "And they swear by God that they are of you, but they are not of you. But they are a people who are afraid. If they could find a refuge or caves or a place of entry, they would turn to it, rushing headlong." Lightning is what is sometimes glimpsed in the hearts of these types of hypocrites from the light of faith, and for this reason He said: They make... Their fingers in their ears from the thunderbolts, for fear of death, and God encompasses the disbelievers." That is, their caution will not avail them at all, because God encompasses them with His power and they are subject to His will and desire, as He said: "Has there come to you the story of the hosts? Pharaoh and Thamud? Rather, those who disbelieved are in denial. And God is behind them, encompassing them." Then He said: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, that is, because of its intensity and strength in itself, and the weakness of their insights and their lack of steadfastness in faith. Ali bin Abi Talhah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, meaning that the decisive verse of the Qur'an almost points to the faults of the hypocrites. Ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The lightning almost snatches away their sight, that is, because of the intensity of the light of the truth, whenever it shines for them, they walk in it, and when it darkens for them, they stand, that is, whenever something of faith appears to them, they take comfort in it and follow it. And sometimes doubts appear to them, their hearts darken and they stand confused. Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it. He said, "Whenever the hypocrites are afflicted with the glory of Islam, they are reassured by it, and when a disaster befalls Islam, they stand up to return to disbelief, as God Almighty said, 'And of mankind is he who worships God on the verge; if good befalls him, he is reassured by it.' " Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it, and when it darkens for them, they stand up. That is, they know the truth and speak it, so they are on the right path from what they say, but if they regress from it to disbelief, they stand up, that is, confused. This is what Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Qatadah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, and Al-Suddi said on the authority of the Companions, and this is more correct and clear, and God knows best. This is how they will be on the Day of Resurrection when people are given light according to their faith. Some of them are given light that will illuminate them for a distance of farsakhs, and more than that, and less than that. Some of them have their light extinguished at one time and illuminated at another, so they walk on the Sirat at one time and stop at another. Some of them have their light extinguished completely, and they are the sincere ones. The hypocrites, about whom God Almighty said: On the Day when the hypocrites, men and women, will say to those who believed, 'Wait a moment for us that we may borrow some of your light.' It will be said, 'Go back behind you and seek light.' And He said about the believers: On the Day when you see the believing men and believing women, their light proceeding before them and on their right, 'Good tidings for you today are gardens beneath which rivers flow.' And God Almighty said: "On the Day when God will not disgrace the Prophet and those who believed with him, their light proceeding before them and on their right, they will say, 'Our Lord, perfect for us our light and forgive us. Indeed, You are over all things competent.'" regarding the words of God Almighty: On the Day you see the believing men and believing women the verse, he mentioned to us that the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say that among the believers there are those whose light will shine from Medina to Aden or between Sana'a and even less than that, so that among the believers there are those whose light will shine only where their feet are. It was narrated by Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim from the hadith of Imran bin Dawar al-Qattan on the authority of Qatada in a similar manner. This is like what al-Minhal bin Amr said on the authority of Qais bin al-Sakn on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud, who said: They will be given their light according to their deeds. Some of them will be given their light like a palm tree and some of them will be given their light like a standing man, and the light of them will be the light of the least of them on his thumb, it will be extinguished at one time and ignited at another. This is how Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Ibn Muthanna on the authority of Ibn Idris on the authority of Qais bin al-Sakn on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud: Their light will run between... Their hands" He said: They will pass over the Sirat according to their deeds. Some of them will have light like a mountain, and some of them will have light like a palm tree. The light of the light closest to them will be in their thumbs, which will flare up at one time and be extinguished at another. Ibn Abi Hatim also said: Muhammad ibn Ismail al-Ahmadi told us: Abu Yahya al-Hamani told us: Utbah ibn al-Yaqzan told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: There is no one among the people of monotheism who will not be given light on the Day of Resurrection. As for the hypocrite, his light will be extinguished, so the believer will be afraid of what he sees of the extinguishing of the light of the hypocrites, so they will say: Our Lord, perfect our light for us. Ad-Dahhak ibn Muzahim said: Everyone who showed faith in this world will be given light on the Day of Resurrection, and when he reaches the Sirat, the light of the hypocrites will be extinguished. When the believers saw that, they were afraid and said: Our Lord, perfect our light for us.

Mention the hadith mentioned in that regard

If this is established, then people are divided into categories: sincere believers, who are described in the four verses at the beginning of Surat Al-Baqarah; sincere disbelievers, who are described in the two verses after it; and hypocrites, who are divided into two categories: sincere, who are the ones for whom the fiery parable is given; and hypocrites who hesitate, sometimes showing the sparkle of faith and sometimes fading, who are the ones with the watery parable, and they are in a lighter state than those before them. This situation is similar in some ways to what was mentioned in Surat An-Nur, about the parable of the believer and what God has placed in his heart of guidance and light, with the lamp in the glass that is like a shining star, which is the heart of the believer who is created with faith and deriving it from the pure and clear Sharia that reaches him without turbidity or confusion, as will be explained in its place, God willing.

The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, and when darkness covers them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent.

Then the parable of the servants of the disbelievers who believe that they are on something but are not on anything, and they are the ones with compound ignorance is given in the Almighty's saying: And those who disbelieve - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland which a thirsty person thinks is water until, when he comes to it, he finds it is nothing. The verse. Then the parable of the ignorant disbelievers is given, who are the ones about whom God Almighty said: Or like darknesses. In a deep sea covered by waves above waves above clouds - darknesses, one above another. If he puts out his hand, he can hardly see it. And he to whom God has not appointed light - for him there is no light. So He divided the disbelievers here into two groups: the preacher and the imitator, as He mentioned at the beginning of Surat al-Hajj 22: And among the people is he who disputes about God without knowledge and follows every rebellious devil. And He said: And among the people is he who disputes about God without knowledge or guidance or an enlightening Book. And God divided the believers at the beginning of the event and at the end of it, and in Surat Al-Insan, into two groups: the foremost, who are the close ones, and the companions of the right, who are the righteous.

The summary of these noble verses is that believers are of two types: those who are close to God and those who are righteous. The disbelievers are of two types: those who call to God and those who imitate. The hypocrites are also of two types: a pure hypocrite and a hypocrite who has some form of hypocrisy, as stated in the two Sahih's on the authority of Abdullah ibn Amr on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "There are three things, whoever has them is a pure hypocrite, and whoever has one of them has some trait of hypocrisy until he gives it up: whoever lies when he speaks, whoever breaks his promise, and whoever betrays when he is entrusted." They used this as evidence that a person may have some form of faith and some form of hypocrisy. This is either practical in accordance with this hadith or belief, as indicated by the verse, as stated by a group of the Salaf and some scholars, as mentioned above and as will come, God willing. Imam Ahmad said: Abu al-Nadr told us: Abu Muawiyah, meaning Shaiban, told us, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Amr ibn Murrah, on the authority of Abu al-Bukhtari, on the authority of Abu Saeed, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Hearts are of four types: a bare heart in which there is a lamp that shines, a covered heart tied to its covering, an inverted heart, and a plated heart. As for the bare heart, it is the heart of the believer, and its lamp is its light. As for the plated heart, it is the heart of the disbeliever. As for the inverted heart, it is the heart of the pure hypocrite, who knew and then denied. As for the plated heart, it is a heart in which there is both faith and hypocrisy. The example of faith in it is like that of a plant nourished by good water, and the example of hypocrisy in it is like that of an ulcer nourished by pus and blood. Whichever of the two substances overcomes the other, it overcomes it."

This is a good and good chain of transmission.

And the Almighty's saying: "And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent." Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the Almighty's saying: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. He said: "Because they abandoned the truth after knowing it. Indeed, God is over all things competent." Ibn Abbas said: That is, God is capable of everything He intends for His servants, whether punishment or forgiveness. Ibn Jarir said: God Almighty described Himself as having the power to do all things in this place because He warned the hypocrites of His wrath and might and informed them that He encompasses them and is capable of taking away their hearing and sight. The meaning of Qadir is Qadir, just as the meaning of Aleem is Aalim. Ibn Jarir and many of the commentators who followed him went to the fact that these two examples were given for one type of hypocrites, and the word aw in the Almighty's saying: or like a rainstorm from the sky means and like the Almighty's saying: and do not obey among them a sinner or an ingrate. Or it is for choice, i.e. give them an example of this or that if you wish. Al-Qurtubi said: or for equality, like sitting with Al-Hasan or Ibn Sirin, according to what Al-Zamakhshari explained, that each of them is equal to the other in the permissibility of sitting with him. And its meaning, according to his saying, whether you give them an example of this or that, it is consistent with their condition I said. This is in consideration of the type of hypocrites, for they are types and they have conditions and attributes as God the Almighty mentioned in Surat Bara'ah: and among them - and among them - and among them - mentioning their conditions and attributes and what they rely on of actions and words. So He made these two examples for two types of them that are more consistent with their conditions and attributes, and God knows best, just as the two examples were given in Surat An-Nur for the two types of the infidels, the preachers. And the imitators in the Almighty's saying: And those who disbelieve - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland until He said: Or like darknesses in a deep sea the verse: the first is for the preachers who are in compound ignorance, and the second is for those with simple ignorance from the imitating followers, and God knows best what is correct.

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 20- The lightning almost snatches away their sight is a new sentence as if it was said: How are they with that lightning? Almost: approaches. And snatching: taking quickly, and from it the bird is called a sucker for its speed. Mujahid read snatching with a kasra on the taa and a fatha, which is more eloquent. And His saying: Whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it is a new sentence as if it was said:

How do you act with the lightning's fluttering and stillness? It is a metaphor for the severity of the matter on the hypocrites with its severity on the people of the calamity And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight by increasing the thunder and lightning Indeed, God is over all things competent and this is among the things that He has powers, glory be to Him. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Or like a downpour Indeed, God is over all things competent and this is among the things that He has powers, glory be to Him. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Or like a downpour which is rain, and its example is given in the Qur'an. In it is darkness meaning a test, and thunder and lightning intimidation. The lightning almost snatches away their sight meaning: the decisive verse of the Qur'an almost points to the weaknesses of the hypocrites. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein meaning: whenever the hypocrites attain honor from Islam, they feel reassured. But if a calamity befalls Islam, they rise up to return to disbelief, as He says: And among the people is he who worships God on the edge the verse. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions who said: There were two hypocrites from the people of Medina who were fleeing from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, to the polytheists. This rain in which God mentioned was accompanied by severe thunder, lightning, and thunderbolts. Whenever the thunderbolts struck them, they would put their fingers in their ears out of fear that the thunderbolts would enter their ears and kill them. Whenever the lightning flashed, they would walk in its light, but if it did not flash, they would not see. They would stand still and not walk. They would say: If only we had become morning so that we could go to Muhammad and put our hands in his hand. So they became morning and went to him, became Muslim, and put their hands in his hand, and their Islam was good. So God made the matter of these two outgoing hypocrites an example for the hypocrites in Medina. When the hypocrites attended the gathering of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would put their fingers in their ears out of fear that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, would say something about them or that they would be mentioned about something and they would be killed, just as the two outgoing hypocrites would put their fingers in their ears. Their ears, and if it lights up for them, they walk in it: meaning, if their wealth and children increase and they obtain booty and victory, they walk in it and say: The religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, is true, and they adhere to it, just as those two hypocrites used to walk when lightning lights up for them, and if it becomes dark for them, they stand up. So if their wealth and children perish and afflict them, they say: This is for the sake of the religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they apostatize in disbelief, just as the two hypocrites stood up when lightning became dark for them. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Abbas, who said: Or like a downpour, meaning it is rain, and it is an example of the hypocrite in its light, he speaks from what he has of the Book of God, showing off to people, but if he is alone, he acts in accordance with something other than it, so he is in darkness as long as he remains in that. As for darkness, it is misguidance. As for lightning, it is faith, and they are the People of the Book, and if it becomes dark for them, it is a man who takes the edge of the truth and is unable to go beyond it. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim also narrated something similar to what was mentioned above from Ibn Abbas. Its interpretation was narrated in a similar manner by a group of the followers.

Know that hypocrites are of different types. Some of them outwardly show Islam but conceal disbelief, and some of them the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said about them, as proven in the two Saheehs and others: "There are three things, whoever has them is a pure hypocrite, and whoever has one of them has one characteristic of hypocrisy until he gives it up: whoever lies when he speaks, whoever breaks his promise, and whoever is entrusted with something betrays that trust." It was also reported in the wording of four, and he added, and whoever argues, behaves indecently. It was also reported in the wording of, and whoever makes a covenant, betrays it. Ibn Jarir and those who followed him among the commentators mentioned that these two examples refer to one type of hypocrites.

20. The lightning almost means it comes close. It is said: It almost did if it comes close but it does not. It snatches their sight means it steals it. Snatching is to steal quickly. Whenever every letter of a sentence is added to the what of the clause, so it becomes a tool for repetition. Their meaning is whenever it lights up for them, they walk in it, and when it becomes dark for them, they stand still meaning they stand confused. So God Almighty likened their disbelief and hypocrisy to a people who were in a desert on a dark night, and rain fell upon them in which there was darkness such that the traveler cannot walk in it, and thunder such that the listeners are covered in it.

Their fingers to their ears from its terror, and lightning whose description is such that it almost snatches their sight and blinds it from the intensity of its blazing. This is an example that God gave for the Qur'an and the actions of the disbelievers and hypocrites with it. The rain is the Qur'an because it is the life of the heavens, just as rain is the life of the bodies. The darkness is what is mentioned in the Qur'an of disbelief and polytheism, and the thunder is what they were frightened with of the threat, and the mention of the fire and lightning is what is in it of guidance, clarification, promise and mention of Paradise. The disbelievers block their ears when reciting the Qur'an for fear that their hearts will incline towards it, because belief in them is disbelief and disbelief is death. The lightning almost snatches away their sight meaning the Qur'an dazzles their hearts. It was said that this is a parable that God gave for Islam. The rain is Islam, the darkness is what it contains of affliction and trials, the thunder is what it contains of threats and fears in the hereafter, and the lightning is what it contains of promise and threat. They put their fingers in their ears means that when the hypocrites see affliction and hardship in Islam, they flee in fear of destruction. And God encompasses the disbelievers He gathers them, meaning their flight will not benefit them because God, the Most High, is behind them, gathering them and punishing them. The lightning almost means the signs of Islam, disturbing them to look, were it not for what preceded them of misery.

The lightning almost snatches away their sight. Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, and when darkness covers them, they stand still. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight. Indeed, God is over all things competent.

Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein. This means that when the hypocrites show the word of faith, they believe, but when they die, they return to darkness. It was said that its meaning is that whenever they attain booty and comfort in Islam, they stand firm and say, We are with you. "And when darkness falls upon them, they stand up." This means: when they see hardship and affliction, they delay and stand up, that is, they stop, as God Almighty said: And among mankind is he who worships God on the edge. (al-Hajj 22:11) And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing, meaning their hearing, and their sight, the apparent, just as He took away their hearing and their inner sight. It was said that He would have taken away what they benefited from of honor and security, which is like hearing and sight.

God is capable of everything: Capable. Amer and Hamza read sha'a and ja'a with imala.

20- The lightning almost snatches their sight A second resumption as if it were an answer to someone who says: What is their condition with those thunderbolts? Almost is one of the verbs of approximation, it was placed to bring the report close to existence due to the occurrence of its cause but it did not exist, either due to the absence of a condition, or the presence of an obstacle. Asaa is placed for his hope, so it is pure good and therefore it came inflected unlike asa, and its report is conditional on it being a present tense verb to indicate that it is intended by proximity, without an, to emphasize proximity by indicating the state, and it may enter it by making it bear it on asa, as it bears it by deletion from its report due to their sharing in the original meaning of proximity. And kidnapping is taking quickly, and it was read yakhtafi with a kasra on the ta and yakhtafi as if it is yakhtafi, so the fatha on the ta was changed to kha then it was assimilated into the ta, and yakhtafi with a kasra on the kha due to the meeting of two quiescent letters and the following of the ya to it, and yakhtafi and yakhtafi

Whenever it lights up for them, they walk therein, but when it darkens for them, they stand still. This is a third resumption, as if it were said: What do they do when the lightning flashes and is hidden? So it was answered with that. And light up is either transitive and the object is omitted, meaning whenever a path is lit for them, they take it, or it is intransitive, meaning whenever it shines, they walk in the place of its light. And likewise darkness came as a transitive verb, taken from darkness of the night. And the reading of darkness in the passive form bears witness to this, and the saying of Abu Tamman:

They darkened my condition, then removed their darkness from the face of a gray-haired man.

Even though he was one of the modernists, he was one of the scholars of Arabic, so it is not far-fetched to consider what he says as if he narrated it. He said whenever with the light and whenever with the darkness because they were keen to walk, so whenever they came across an opportunity they seized it, and it is not the same with stopping. The meaning of they stood is they stopped, and from this comes the word the market stood when it was stagnant, and water stood when it froze. And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight meaning, if God had willed to take away their hearing with the clap of thunder and their sight with the flash of lightning, He would have taken them both away. So the object was omitted because the answer indicates it, and its omission has been so frequent in wish and wanted that it is hardly mentioned except in something strange, like his saying:

If I wanted to cry blood, I would cry it

And if is one of the conditional letters, and its apparent meaning is to indicate the negation of the first because of the negation of the second, as is necessary for the necessary to be negated when it is required. It was read: I will make them hear, with the addition of the letter ba, like the Almighty's saying: And do not throw yourselves with your own hands into destruction.

The benefit of this condition is to show the obstacle to their hearing and sight being lost, while what requires it is present, and to draw attention to the fact that the effect of causes on their effects is conditional upon the will of God Almighty, and that their existence is linked to their causes, occurring by His power and word.

Indeed, God has power over all things as an explicit statement and confirmation of it. And the thing is specific to the existent, because it is originally a source of will, sometimes used to mean will, and then it includes the Creator, the Most High, as He said, Say, 'What thing is greatest in testimony?' Say, 'God is Witness.' And in the sense of will at other times, meaning will of its existence, and whatever God wills to exist is present in the whole, and based on this, His, the Most High, saying, Indeed, God has power over all things. "God is the Creator of all things," so they are general without duality. And when the Mu'tazila said that the thing is what can be found, and it includes the necessary and the possible, or what can be known and reported about, and it also includes the impossible, they were obliged to specify it with the possible in both places based on the evidence of reason.

And ability: is the ability to create something. It was said that it is an attribute that requires ability, and it was said that the ability of man is a state by which he is able to act, and the ability of God the Most High: is an expression of negating his inability, and the able is the one who if he wills he does and if he does not will he does not, and the powerful is the doer of what he wills in whatever he wills, and therefore it is rarely described by anyone other than the Creator the Most High, and the derivation of ability from fate because the able causes the action to occur according to the amount of his power, or according to the amount required by his will. And in it is evidence that the event when it occurs and the possible when it remains are both possible and that what the servant is possible is possible for God the Most High, because he is a thing and everything is possible for God the Most High. And it appears that the two representations are among the composite representations, and that is to liken a quality extracted from a group whose parts were combined and stuck together until they became one thing to another like it, like the saying of God the Most High: The parable of those who were entrusted with the Torah and then did not uphold it, for it is a likening of the state of the Jews in their ignorance of what they had of the Torah, to the state of the donkey in its ignorance of what it carries of the books of wisdom. The purpose of both is to represent the state of the hypocrites of confusion and hardship, as is suffered by someone whose fire is extinguished after it has been lit in the darkness, or by someone who is caught in the sky on a dark night with thunder, lightning, and fear of thunderbolts. Like the Almighty's saying: The blind and the seeing are not alike, nor are darkness and light, nor shade and heat. And the saying of Imru' al-Qais:

As if the hearts of birds are wet and dry, jujubes and old straw near their nest.

By likening in the first place: the selves of the hypocrites to those who kindle fires, and their showing of faith in kindling fires and what they benefited from in terms of sparing blood and preserving wealth and children and other things by lighting fires around those who kindle fires, and the removal of that from them soon by their destruction and by revealing their condition and keeping them in permanent loss and eternal torment by extinguishing their fires and taking away its light. And in the second: Their souls are like the people of the scourge and their faith mixed with disbelief and deception with a scourge in which there is darkness, thunder and lightning, in that although it is beneficial in itself, but when it is found in this form, its benefit turns into harm and their hypocrisy is out of caution against the evils of the believers, and what they knock with from others of the disbelievers by putting fingers in their ears from the thunderbolts is out of caution of death, in that it does not repel anything from the decree of God the Most High, nor does it save from what He intends for them of harm and their confusion due to the severity of the matter and their ignorance of what they do, and they leave that whenever they encounter a flash of lightning they seize it as an opportunity with fear that it will steal their sight, so they draw a small line, then if it disappears and its brilliance fades they remain bound and unable to move. And it was said: The likening of faith and the Qur'an and all the knowledge that man has been given, which is the cause of eternal life, to the scourge by which the earth lives. And the invalidating doubts that have been committed against it, and the objections that have been raised against it, casting doubt on the darkness. And he likened the promise and threat contained in it to thunder, and the dazzling signs contained in it to lightning, and their deafness to what they hear of the threat is like the state of someone who is terrified by thunder and fears its lightning bolts so he blocks his ears from them even though there is no escape for them from it, and this is the meaning of the Most High's saying: And God encompasses the disbelievers. And their shaking at what flashes to them of guidance that they perceive, or support that their eyes aspire to, by their walking in the place of the lightning's light whenever it lights up for them, and their confusion and hesitation in the matter when a doubt arises to them, or a calamity is predicted for them, by their hesitation when it becomes dark for them.

And the Almighty warned in His saying: And if God had willed, He could have taken away their hearing and their sight, that the Almighty gave them hearing and sight so that they could use them to seek guidance and success, then they diverted them to immediate fortunes and blocked them from future benefits. And if God had willed, He could have made them in the state that they make for themselves, for He is capable of whatever He wills.

O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:21

O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

O mankind) meaning the people of Mecca worship and make one your Lord who created you brought you into being when you were nothing and created those before you that you may become righteous by worshipping Him as a punishment, and perhaps in the original for hope, and in His Almighty's words for confirmation

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: So the Most High commanded the two groups, about one of which God informed that it is the same for them whether they are warned or not, that they will not believe, because of His seal on their hearts and their hearing, and about the other that he deceives God and those who believe with what he expresses with his tongue from his saying: We believe in God and the Last Day, while he internalizes the opposite, and his heart is sick, and he doubts the truth of what he expresses of that and others from the rest of His creation who are restrained by submission, and submit to Him through obedience, and singling out the Lordship and worship for Him without the idols, statues and gods. Because He, the Most High, is their Creator and the Creator of those before them from their fathers and grandfathers, and the Creator of their idols, statues and gods. So He, the Most High, said to them: The One who created you and created your fathers and grandfathers and all the creation other than you, and He is able to harm you and benefit you, is more deserving of obedience than the one who is not able to benefit or harm you.

Ibn Abbas, according to what was narrated to us from him, used to say something similar to what we have said about it, except that it was mentioned from him that he used to say regarding the meaning of Worship your Lord: Unify your Lord. We have already demonstrated in this book that the meaning of worship is submission to God through obedience, and humility to Him through submission. What Ibn Abbas intended, God willing, by his interpretation of his statement: Worship your Lord is Unify Him, meaning single out obedience and worship for your Lord without the rest of His creation.

Muhammad ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: God said: O mankind, worship your Lord, to both groups of disbelievers and hypocrites, meaning, worship your Lord alone who created you and those before you.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us, on the authority of Asbat, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you. He says: He created you and created those before you.

Abu Ja'far said: This verse is one of the clearest proofs of the corruption of the statement of those who claim that it is not permissible to impose a duty that cannot be borne except with the help of God, except after God gives the one charged with the duty assistance in what He has charged him with. This is because God commanded those whom We have described to worship Him and repent from their disbelief, after informing them that they do not believe and that they will not return from their misguidance.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Perhaps you will become righteous.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of that is: Perhaps you may become pious by worshipping your Lord who created you, and obeying Him in what He has commanded you to do and forbidden you to do, and devoting worship to Him alone so that you may fear His wrath and anger from descending upon you, and so that you may be among the pious with whom their Lord is pleased.

Mujahid used to say in his interpretation of His statement: Perhaps you will become righteous: you will obey.

Ibn Wakee' told us: My father told me, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Perhaps you will become righteous, he said: Perhaps you will obey.

Abu Jaafar said: What I think Mujahid meant by this statement is: Perhaps you will fear your Lord by obeying Him and refraining from your misguidance.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How did He, the Most High, say: Perhaps you will become righteous? Was He not aware of what would happen to them if they worshipped and obeyed Him, so that He said to them: Perhaps if you do that you will become righteous, and He removed the report about the consequences of their worship of Him in a way that would raise doubt?

It was said to him: That is not the meaning you imagined. Rather, the meaning of that is: Worship your Lord who created you and those before you, so that you may fear Him by obeying Him, making Him one, and singling Him out for lordship and worship, as the poet said:

You told us: Stop the wars, so that we may stop! And you gave us every document that we could.

When we stopped the war, your covenants were like a shining mirage in the desert.

He means by that: You told us to stop so we can stop. That is because perhaps in this situation if there was doubt, they would not have been confident, as is the case with all confidence.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous.

The Almighty said: O mankind, worship your Lord. Alqamah and Mujahid said: Every verse that begins with O mankind was revealed in Mecca, and every verse that begins with O you who believe was revealed in Medina.

I said: This is refuted by the fact that this Surah and An-Nisa are Medinan and contain the phrase O people. As for their statement about O you who believe, it is correct. Urwah ibn Az-Zubayr said: Whatever was regarding a punishment or an obligation, it was revealed in Medina, and whatever was regarding the mention of nations and punishment, it was revealed in Mecca. This is clear.

The letter ya in his statement ya ayyuha is a vocative particle. That is, a singular vocative built on the damma, because it is a vocative in pronunciation, and ha is for emphasis. Nas is a nominative adjective for ay according to a group of grammarians, except for Al-Mazini, who permitted the accusative by analogy to its permissibility in ya hath al-rajul. It was said: It was damma, that is, just as the intended singular was damma, and they brought ha instead of another ya, and they did not bring ya so that the speech would not be interrupted, so they brought ha so that the speech would remain connected. Sibawayh said: It is as if you repeated ya twice and the noun was between them, as they said: ha huwa dha. It was said: Since it was difficult for them to combine two definite articles, they brought in the picture a vocative without a definite article, and they applied the definite article with lam intended by the vocative, and they committed to raising it, because it is intended by the vocative, so they made its i'rab with the vowel that it would have deserved if the vocative had preceded it, as emphasis that it is the vocative, so inform him.

There are two opinions about who is meant by people here: One of them is the disbelievers who did not worship Him, as indicated by His statement: And if you are in doubt. The second is that it is general for all people, so His address is to the believers regarding the continuation of worship, and to the disbelievers regarding its initiation. This is good.

The Almighty's saying: Worship is a command to worship Him. Worship here means affirming His Oneness and adhering to the laws of His religion. The root of worship is submission and humility. It is said: a paved road if it is trodden underfoot.

Tarafa said:

Functional function above the temple

Worship: obedience. Devotion: asceticism. I worshipped someone: I took him as a slave.

The Almighty said: Who created you. The Almighty singled out His creation for them from among all His attributes, since the Arabs acknowledged that God created them. So He mentioned that as an argument against them and a rebuke to them. It was said: To remind them of His favor upon them. There are two aspects to the origin of creation: One of them: Estimation. It is said that I created the skin for the water skin if I estimated it before cutting it. The poet said:

Because you create what you have created, and some people create and then do not create.

Al-Hajjaj said: I did not create except that I squandered, and I did not promise except that I fulfilled. The second: creation, invention and innovation. God Almighty said: And you invent falsehood.

The Almighty says: And those before you. It is said that if their creation is confirmed to them, then the creation of others is confirmed to them. The answer is that the speech is only for the purpose of alerting and reminding in order to be more eloquent in the sermon. So He reminded them of those before them so that they would know that He who caused death to those before them, and He created them, will cause them to die, and so that they would think about those who came before them, how they were, and what matters they went through in terms of destroying those who were destroyed, and so that they would know that they will be tested as they were tested. And God knows best.

The Almighty's saying: Perhaps you will become righteous. Perhaps is connected to worship and not to your creation, because the one whom God created for Hell was not created to be righteous. This and what is similar to it in what was mentioned in the words of God Almighty, such as His saying: Perhaps you will understand, "Perhaps you will be grateful," Perhaps you will remember, "Perhaps you will be guided." There are three interpretations of this.

First: That perhaps is based on hope and expectation, and hope and expectation are only in the realm of humans, so it is as if they were told: Do that with the hope and desire that you will understand, remember, and fear God. This is the saying of Sibawayh and the leaders of the language. Sibawayh said about the words of God Almighty: "Go to Pharaoh, for he has transgressed. And speak to him with gentle speech that perhaps he may be reminded or fear." He said that its meaning is: Go with your hope and desire that he will remember or fear. Abu al-Ma'ali chose this saying.

Second: The Arabs used perhaps without doubt in the sense of lam ki. So the meaning is so that you may understand, remember, and fear God. This is indicated by the poet's saying:

You told us to stop the wars so that we might stop, and

Surat al-Baqarah 2:21

O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous.

you gave us every reliable document.

When we stopped the war, your covenants were like a mirage shining in the open.

Meaning: Stop the wars so that we may stop, and if there was perhaps doubt here, they would not have been documented for them in every document. This statement is from Qatrib and al-Tabari.

Third: That perhaps means to be exposed to something, as if it was said: Do that, exposing yourself to reason, or to remember, or to be pious. The meaning of His statement perhaps you will be pious is: perhaps you will make, by accepting what God has commanded you, a shield between you and the Fire. This is from the saying of the Arabs: He faced him with his right if he faced him with it, so it is as if he made paying him his right a shield for him from being demanded, and from this is the saying of Ali, may God be pleased with him: "Whenever there was a severe battle, we would protect ourselves with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace," meaning we made him a shield for us from the enemy. And Antara said:

I repeated the foal, and its throat was bleeding, until the horses were acquired by my son Hudhaym.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Blessed and Exalted began to explain the oneness of His divinity, that He is the One who bestows blessings upon His servants by bringing them out from nothingness into existence and bestowing upon them apparent and hidden blessings by making the earth a bed for them, i.e. a cradle like a bed, settled, paved and fixed by the lofty mountains, and the sky a structure which is the ceiling, as He said in the other verse: And We made the sky a protected ceiling, but they, from its signs, turn away. "And He sent down for you water from the sky." What is meant by this here is the clouds at their time when they need it, so He brought forth for them from it types of crops and fruits what is visible as provision for them and for their livestock, as He stated this in more than one place in the Qur'an. The most similar verse to this verse is the Almighty's saying: "Who made for you the earth a resting place and the sky a canopy and shaped you and perfected your forms and provided for you from the good things. That is God, your Lord, so blessed be God, Lord of the worlds." Its meaning is: He is the Creator, the Provider, the Owner of the abode and its inhabitants and the Provider of them, so by this He deserves to be worshipped alone and not to be associated with others. And for this reason he said: Do not make rivals to God while you know. And in the two Sahihs, "On the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, he said: I said, O Messenger of God, which sin is the greatest before God? He said: To make rivals to God when He created you." And likewise the hadith of Mu'adh: Do you know what God's right over His servants is? To worship Him and not associate anything with Him. And in the other hadith: Let none of you say, 'What God willed and so-and-so willed,' but let him say, 'What God willed and then so-and-so willed.' And Hammad ibn Salamah said: Abdul-Malik ibn Umair told us, on the authority of Rib'i ibn Harash, on the authority of Tufail ibn Sakhbarah, the brother of Aisha, the Mother of the Believers, on her mother's side, who said: I saw in a dream that I came upon a group of Jews and I said, Who are you? They said, We are the Jews. I said, "You would be the people if you did not say, 'Uzair is the son of God.'" They said, "And you would be the people if you did not say, 'What God willed and what Muhammad willed.'" Then I passed by a group of Christians and I said, "Who are you?" They said, We are Christians. I said, You are the people, if only you did not say that Christ is the son of God. They said, You are the people, if only you did not say, 'Whatever God wills and Muhammad wills.' So when morning came, I told it to whomever I told, then I came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and told him. He said, Have you told anyone about it? I said: Yes. So he stood up and praised and thanked God, then he said: "As for what follows, Tufail saw a vision that he told to whomever among you he told, and you said a word that such and such prevented me from forbidding you from saying. So do not say, 'Whatever God and Muhammad willed,' but say, 'Whatever God alone willed.'" This is how Ibn Mardawayh narrated it in his interpretation of this verse from the hadith of Hammad ibn Salamah with it. Ibn Majah narrated it from another chain of transmission on the authority of Abd al-Malik ibn Umair with it in a similar manner. Sufyan ibn Sa'id al-Thawri said on the authority of al-Ajlal ibn Abd God al-Kindi on the authority of Yazid ibn al-Asam, "On the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: A man said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, 'Whatever God and you willed,' so he said: Have you made me an equal to God? Say, 'Whatever God alone willed.'" Narrated by Ibn Mardawayh, and narrated by al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah from the hadith of 'Isa ibn Yunus on the authority of al-Ajlal with it. All of this is to protect and safeguard the side of monotheism, and God knows best. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'eed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: God Almighty said: O mankind, worship your Lord for both groups of disbelievers and hypocrites, meaning: worship your Lord alone who created you and those before you. And with this from Ibn Abbas: So do not make rivals to God while you know meaning: do not associate with God other than Him from rivals that do not benefit or harm while you know that you have no Lord who provides for you other than Him and you know that what the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, calls you to of monotheism is the truth about which there is no doubt. And this is what Qatada said. And Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad bin Amr bin Abi Asim told us, Abu Amr told us, Abu Ad-Dahhak bin Mukhallad Abu Asim told us, Shabib bin Bishr told us, Ikrimah told us on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the statement of God Almighty: So do not make rivals to God he said: Rivalry is polytheism more hidden than the crawling of an ant on a black rock in the darkness of the night, and it is for someone to say, By God and by your life, O so-and-so. By my life, he says, If it weren't for this dog, the thieves would have come to us yesterday, and if it weren't for the ducks in the house, the thieves would have come. A man saying to his friend, Whatever God wills and you will, and a man saying, If it weren't for God and so-and-so, do not include so-and-so in it, all of this is polytheism. In the hadith, a man said to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, Whatever God wills and you will, and he said, Have you made me a rival to God? And in another hadith, You are good people, if it weren't for the fact that you are opposing each other and saying, "Whatever God wills and so-and-so wills, Abu Al-Aaliyah said, Do not make rivals to God, meaning equal partners. This is what Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Qatadah, Al-Suddi, Abu Malik, and Ismail bin Abi Khalid said. Mujahid said, Do not make rivals to God while you know, meaning you know that He is one God in the Torah and the Gospel.

A hadith was mentioned about the meaning of this noble verse.

Imam Ahmad said: Affan told us: Abu Khalaf Musa bin Khalaf told us, and he was considered one of the substitutes. Yahya bin Abi Katheer told us, on the authority of Zaid bin Salam, on the authority of his grandfather Mamtur, on the authority of Al-Harith Al-Ash'ari, that the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God Almighty commanded Yahya bin Zakariya, peace be upon him, with five words to act upon and to command the Children of Israel to act upon them, and he almost delayed in doing so. Then Jesus, peace be upon him, said to him: You have been commanded with five words to act upon and command the Children of Israel to act upon them. Either you convey them to them or I will convey them. He said: O my brother, I fear that if you precede me, I will be punished or the earth will swallow me up." Yahya bin Zakariya gathered the Children of Israel in the Holy House until the mosque was full. He sat on the balcony, praised God and extolled Him, then said: God commanded me with five words to act upon and command you to act upon them. The first of them is: Worship God and do not associate anything with Him. The example of that is like that of a man who bought a slave with his own money for silver or gold, and he began to work and pay. And I command you to fast, for that is like a man with a bundle of musk in a headband, all of them smelling the fragrance of musk, and the bad breath of a fasting person is better to God than the fragrance of musk. And I command you to give charity, for that is like a man who was captured by the enemy, so they tied his hands to his neck and brought him forward to behead him, and he said to them, Would you like me to ransom myself from you? So he kept ransoming himself from them with little and much until he was freed. And I command you to remember God often, for that is like a man who was pursued by the enemy quickly, so he came to a strong fortress and took refuge in it, and the servant is most protected from Satan when he is in the remembrance of God." He said: And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "And I command you to do five things that God has commanded me to do: congregation, hearing, obedience, and emigration."

And jihad in the way of God, for whoever leaves the group by a handspan has removed the yoke of Islam from his neck unless he returns. And whoever calls with a call of ignorance is from the knees of Hellfire." They said: O Messenger of God, even if he fasts and prays? He said: And even if he prays and fasts and claims that he is a Muslim, then call the Muslims by their names as God the Almighty called them, the Muslims, the believers, the servants of God. This is a good hadith and the evidence from it in this verse is his saying: And God created you and provided for you, so worship Him and do not associate anything with Him. This verse indicates the oneness of God the Almighty in worship alone, with no partner. Many commentators, such as Al-Razi and others, have used it as evidence for the existence of the Almighty Creator, and it indicates that by way of priority, for whoever contemplates these lower and higher beings and the differences in their shapes, colors, natures, and benefits and their placement in the places of benefit from them, will know the power of their Creator, His wisdom, knowledge, perfection, and great authority, as some of the Bedouins said. And he was asked: What is the evidence for the existence of the Almighty Lord? He said: Glory be to God! The dung indicates the camel, and the footprints indicate the footsteps. So the sky with its constellations, the earth with its valleys, and the seas with their waves? Do they not indicate the existence of the Gracious, the All-Knowing?

Al-Razi narrated on the authority of Imam Malik that Al-Rashid asked him about this, so he provided evidence for him with the differences in languages, origins, and melodies. And on the authority of Abu Hanifa that some of the heretics asked him about the existence of the Almighty, so he said to them: Leave me, for I am thinking about a matter that you have been told about. They mentioned to me that a ship in the sea is loaded with various types of merchandise, and there is no one guarding it or driving it. Despite that, it goes and comes and travels by itself, penetrating the great waves until it is freed from them, and travels wherever it wants by itself without anyone driving it. They said: This is something that no sane person would say. He said: How wise are these beings with what they contain of the upper and lower worlds and what they contain of perfect things that have no maker. So the people were astonished and returned to the truth and became Muslims at his hands. It was narrated from Al-Shafi'i that he was asked about the existence of the Creator, so he said: This is a mulberry leaf, its taste is one, the worm eats it and silk comes out of it, the bees eat it and honey comes out of it, the sheep, cows and cattle eat it and they throw it as dung and droppings, and the gazelles eat it and musk comes out of it, and it is one thing. And it was narrated from Imam Ahmad bin Hanbal that he was asked about that and he said: Here is a strong, smooth fortress that has no door or exit, its exterior is like white silver, and its interior is like pure gold, and while it is like that, its wall cracks and from it comes out a hearing, seeing animal with a beautiful form and a pleasant voice, meaning by that the egg when a chicken comes out of it. And Abu Nuwas was asked about that and he recited:

Contemplate the plants of the earth and see the effects of what the King has made.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:21

O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous.

Eyes of silver, staring with pupils of pure gold

On the emerald rods are witnesses that God has no partner

Ibn Al-Mu'tazz said:

How strange it is that God is disobeyed, or how the denier denies Him.

And in everything there is a sign that indicates that He is One.

Others said that whoever contemplates these heavens, their height and vastness, and what they contain of large and small luminous planets, both moving and fixed, and sees how they revolve with the great sphere every day and night, rotating and having within themselves a course of their own, and looks at the seas surrounding the earth from every side, and the mountains placed on the earth to settle and inhabit their inhabitants, with their different shapes and colors, as God Almighty said: "And among the mountains are streaks white and red, varying in colors, and black [some]; and among the people and the beasts and the cattle are varying in colors, likewise. Only those fear God, from among His servants, who have knowledge." And likewise these rivers flowing from one country to another for benefits, and what He has created on the earth of various animals and plants of different tastes, scents, shapes, and colors, with the unification of the nature of the soil and water, he has proven the existence of the Creator and His great power, wisdom, mercy for His creation, His kindness to them, His goodness to them, and His righteousness toward them. There is no god but Him, and no lord but Him. In Him I rely, and to Him I turn. And the verses in the Qur'an that indicate this position are very numerous.

Fath al-Qadir

21- O mankind, worship your Lord, who created you and those before you, that you may become righteous. When the Almighty finished mentioning the believers, the disbelievers, and the hypocrites, He addressed them, paying attention to the previous point in Al-Fatihah. Ya is a letter of address. The vocative is a singular noun built on the damma, and ha is a letter of emphasis inserted between the vocative and its description. Sibawayh said: It is as if you repeated ya twice, and the noun became between them as they said: Ha huda. We have already discussed the interpretation of people and worship. Rather, He singled out the blessing of creation and bestowed it upon them because all blessings are dependent upon it. It is its origin, without which nothing of it exists. Also, the disbelievers acknowledge that God is the Creator. And if you ask them who created them, they will surely say, God." So He bestowed upon them what they acknowledge and do not deny. There are two aspects to the original meaning of creation: One of them is estimation. It is said: I created the skin for the water-skin: if I estimated it before cutting. Zuhair said:

Because you create what you have created, and some people create and then do not create.

Second: Creation, invention and innovation. Perhaps its origin is hope, greed, expectation and compassion, and that is impossible for God Almighty, but since He was addressing humans, it was like saying to them: Do that out of hope and greed, and this is what a group of the imams of Arabic said, including Sibawayh. It was said: The Arabs used perhaps without doubt in the sense of lam ki. The meaning here is: so that you may fear God. And the same is true for what occurred in this position, including the saying of the poet:

You told us to stop the wars, so that we might stop, and you gave us every document that we could.

When we stopped the war, your covenants were like a mirage shining in the open sky.

That is, they stopped fighting so that we could stop. If it had been for doubt, they would not have been given every guarantee. This is what a group of people said, including Qatirib. It was said that it means exposing oneself to something, as if he said: exposing oneself to piety. And it was made here in the sense of making it transitive to two objects. From this is the saying of the poet:

I started seeing two as four and four as two when old age led me astray.

21. The Almighty's saying: O people. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: O people is addressed to the people of Mecca, and O you who believe is addressed to the people of Medina, and it is general here except for the fact that it does not include children and the insane.

"Worship" and unify. Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with him said: Everything mentioned in the Qur'an about worship means monotheism. "Your Lord is He who created you" creation: inventing something without a previous example. "And those before you meaning He created those before you that you may become righteous" so that you may be saved from the punishment. It was said that its meaning is be in hope of righteousness by becoming covered and protected from the punishment of God, and the judgment of God is behind you, doing what He wills, as He said: "So speak to him with gentle speech that perhaps he may be reminded or fear" 44-Taha, meaning call him to the truth and be in hope of remembering, and the judgment of God is behind him, doing what He wills. Sibawayh said: "Perhaps and asa are letters of hope, and they are obligatory from God."

21-O mankind, worship your Lord." When He enumerated the groups of those charged with the duty and mentioned their special characteristics and the ways in which their affairs are directed, He addressed them in a way that would mock the listener and stimulate him and interest him in the matter of worship, and magnify its importance, and compensate for the burden of worship with the pleasure of addressing. And O is a letter that is used to call someone who is far away, and someone who is close may call with it, lowering him to the status of someone who is far away. Either because of its greatness, as the caller says: O Lord, and O God, He is closer to him than his jugular vein. Or because of his negligence and poor understanding. Or to care for the one called upon and increase the urging on him. And it is a useful sentence with the one called, because it is a verb. And: And any: made a connection to the call of the definite noun with the letter lam, because the introduction of ya upon it is impossible due to the impossibility of combining the two definite letters, for they are like two examples, and it was given the rule of the called and the intended by the call was applied to it, describing it clearly, and committing to raising it to indicate that it is the intended, and the letter ha of warning was inserted between them as emphasis and compensation for what it deserves, that is, from the added to, and the calling in this manner is more common in the Qur'an because it is independent with aspects of emphasis, and everything that God calls His servants to in terms of them being great matters, it is their right that they be aware of them, and that they turn their hearts to them, and most of them are heedless of them, it is worthy of calling for it with the most emphatic emphasis, and the plurals and their names that are decorated with the letter lam are for generality where there is no covenant, and the validity of the exception from them indicates. Or emphasis with what indicates generality like the saying of the Most High:

Then the angels prostrated, all of them together. The evidence of the Companions for its generality is widespread and well-known, as the people include those who were present at the time of the revelation in wording and those who will be present, because of what has been transmitted from his religion, peace and blessings be upon him, that the implication of his address and his rulings is comprehensive for both tribes, and is established until the Day of Judgment, except for what the evidence specifies. And what was narrated from Alqamah and Al-Hasan that everything that was revealed in it, O people, is Meccan, O you who believe, is Medinan, if its being elevated is correct, then it does not necessitate its being restricted to the disbelievers, nor is it an order to them to worship, as what is commanded is the common denominator between beginning worship, increasing it, and continuing it. So what is required of the disbelievers is to begin it after doing what must be presented in terms of knowledge and acknowledgment of the Creator, as one of the requirements of the obligation of something is the obligation of what is not completed except by it. And just as ritual impurity does not prevent the obligation of prayer, so disbelief prevents the obligation of worship, rather it must be removed and one must be occupied with it after it. And among the believers is their increase and steadfastness in it. He only said: Your Lord to draw attention to the fact that what necessitates worship is Lordship.

Who created you is an attribute that was applied to Him, the Most High, for the purpose of glorification and explanation. It may also be used as a restriction or explanation if the address is specific to the polytheists, and what is meant by Lord is more general than the true Lord and the gods whom they call lords. Creation is the bringing into existence of something according to estimation and proportion. Its origin is said: he created the sandal if he measured it and proportioned it according to the scale.

And those before you refers to everything that precedes man in essence or time. It is in the accusative case, in apposition to the accusative pronoun in He created you. The sentence was presented as established by them, either because they acknowledged it, as God Almighty said: And if you ask them, who created them, they will surely say, 'God' or because they were able to know it with the slightest glance! From before you was read by inserting the second relative pronoun between the first and its clause for emphasis, as Jarir inserted in his saying:

Oh Tim Adi, you have no father

Tima, the second between the first and what was added to it.

"Perhaps you will become righteous is a state of the pronoun in worship" as if he said: Worship your Lord, hoping to be included in the ranks of the righteous, the victorious in guidance and success, and the deserving of the proximity of God the Most High. He pointed out with it that righteousness is the ultimate degree of those who follow the path, and it is disavowal of everything except God the Most High to God, and that the worshipper should not be deceived by his worship, and should have fear and hope. God the Most High said: "They call upon their Lord in fear and hope They hope for His mercy and dread His punishment". Or from the object of "He created you" and what is conjoined to it, meaning that He created you and those before you in the image of one from whom righteousness is hoped, due to the preponderance of his matter due to the combination of its causes and the many motives to it. The addressees are mostly absent in the wording, and the meaning is to intend them all. It was said that it is an explanation for creation, meaning He created you so that you will become righteous, as He said: "And I did not create the jinn and mankind except to worship Me". This is weak, as nothing like it has been proven in the language.

The verse indicates that the path to knowing God Almighty and knowing His Oneness and His deservingness of worship is to consider His creation and to deduce from His actions, and that the servant does not deserve a reward for his worship of Him, because it is obligatory upon him as thanks for the previous blessings He has enumerated for him, so he is like a hired worker who receives the wage before working.

He who has made for you the earth a bed and the sky a canopy and has sent down water from the sky and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for you. So do not set up equals to God while you know.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:22

He who has made for you the earth a bed and the sky a canopy and has sent down water from the sky and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for you. So do not set up equals to God while you know.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

) Who made) created for you the earth as a bed a carpet that is spread out, not extremely hard or soft so that it is not possible to settle on it and the sky as a structure a roof and sent down from the sky water and brought forth thereby from types (of fruits as provision for you. So do not make rivals to God) partners in worship while you know that He is the Creator and you do not create, and there is no god except He who creates.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

And His statement: Who made the earth a bed for you is a response to the first who in His statement: Worship your Lord who created you, and both of them are attributes of your Lord, so it is as if He said: Worship your Lord, your Creator, and the Creator of those before you, who made the earth a bed for you. He means by that that He made the earth a resting place for you and a place to settle on. Our Lord, may He be glorified and exalted, reminds His servants of His blessings and favors upon them, so that they may remember His favors upon them, and turn to His obedience out of His compassion for them, and His mercy towards them, without any need for their worship, but to complete His blessings upon them and perhaps they will be guided.

As Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He who made the earth a bed for you. So it is a bed on which one walks, and it is the resting place and the resting place.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Who made the earth a bed for you, he said: a resting place for you.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: He who made the earth a bed for you, meaning a cradle.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And the sky is a structure.

Abu Ja'far said: The sky was called the sky because of its height above the earth and its inhabitants from among His creation. Everything that is above something else is a sky for what is below it. That is why the roof of a house is called a sky, because it is above it and is elevated above it. That is why it is said: So-and-so is high for so-and-so, if he looks down on him and heads towards him high above him, as al-Farazdaq said:

We named Najran Al-Yemeni and its people, and Najran is a land that has not been destroyed.

As the genius of Banu Dhubyan said:

She looked at me, and I saw her in a veil.

He means by that: I saw a glance and it appeared. Likewise, the sky was named for the earth: sky, because of its height and its view of it.

As Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And the sky is a structure, so the structure of the sky on the earth is like the shape of a dome, which is a ceiling on the earth.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding God's statement: And the sky is a structure, he said: He made the sky a ceiling for you.

God Almighty mentioned the heavens and the earth among the blessings He bestowed upon them because from them are their sustenance, provisions, and livelihoods, and through them is the basis of their worldly life. So He informed them that the One who created them and created all that is in them and the blessings they have is the One who deserves their obedience, and is deserving of their thanks and worship, not the idols and statues, which can neither harm nor benefit.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And He sends down water from the sky and brings forth thereby fruits as provision for you.

Meaning, the Most High, that He sent down rain from the sky, and with that rain He brought forth from what they had grown in the earth of their crops and plantings fruits as provision for them, food and provisions. So He alerted them to His power and authority, and reminded them of His favors to them, and that He is the One who created them, and He is the One who provides for them and takes care of them, unlike those whom they had made a rival or equal to Him from among the idols and deities. Then He warned them against making a rival to Him, even though they knew that it was as He had informed them, and that He has no rival or equal, and that there is no one who can benefit or harm them, no Creator or Provider for them other than Him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So do not make rivals to God.

Abu Jaafar said: "Andalus is the plural of 'andal', and 'andal' means justice and equal, as Hassan bin Thabit said:

Do you satirize him, even though you are not his equal? Your partnership is good, just as ransom is.

He means by his saying: I am not His equal, I am not His equal nor comparable. And everything that is similar to something else and has something similar to it is its equal.

As Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: "So do not make equals to God," meaning equals.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told me, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: So do not make equals to God, meaning equals.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: So do not make for God equals, he said: Men of equal standing whom you obey in disobeying God. Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding God's statement: So do not make for God equals, he said: The equals are the gods whom they made with Him, and they made for them the same as they made for Him. I was told by Al-Munjab, he said: Bishr told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding His statement: So do not make for God equals, he said: Similar.

Muhammad ibn Sinan told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Shabib, on the authority of Ikrimah: So do not make rivals to God, that is, say: If it were not for our dog, the thief would have entered our house, if it were not for our dog, he would have barked in the house, and so on.

God Almighty forbade them from associating anything with Him, or worshipping other than Him, or taking for Him a rival or equal in obedience. He said: Just as I have no partner in your creation, or in the provision that I provide for you, or in My possession of you, or in My blessings that I have bestowed upon you, so too, single out obedience to Me, and be sincere in worshipping Me, and do not make for Me a partner or equal from among My creation, for you know that every blessing upon you is from Me.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And you know.

The interpreters differed about who was meant by this verse. Some of them said: It meant all the polytheists from the polytheists of the Arabs and the People of the Book.

Some of them said: He meant by that the people of the two books, the people of the Torah and the Gospel.

It was mentioned that he said: He meant by it all idol worshippers from the Arabs and the infidels of the People of the Book: Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah bin al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: This was revealed regarding both groups of infidels and hypocrites. And what the Almighty meant by His saying: So do not make rivals to God while you know is do not associate with God other than Him from rivals that do not benefit or harm, while you know that you have no Lord who provides for you other than Him, and you know that what the Messenger calls you to of His Oneness is the truth without a doubt.

Bishr told us, he said: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And you know, meaning you know that God created you and created the heavens and the earth, and then you make rivals to Him.

Mention of those who said: He meant the People of the Two Books:

Abu Kuraib told us: Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid: So do not make rivals to God while you know, that He is one God in the Torah and the Gospel.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Qubaysah told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And you know, he says: And you know that there is no equal to Him in the Torah and the Gospel.

Abu Ja'far said: I think that what led Mujahid to this interpretation, and to add to that that it was addressed to the people of the Torah and the Gospel and no one else, was his assumption that the Arabs did not know that God was their Creator and Provider, because they denied the Oneness of their Lord and associated others with Him in worship. And that is a statement! But God Almighty has informed us in His Book that they acknowledged His Oneness, but they associated in His worship what they used to associate with Him. So He Almighty said: And if you ask them, 'Who created them?' they will surely say, 'God.' (al-Zukhruf 43:87), and He said: "Say, 'Who provides for you from the heaven and the earth? Or who controls hearing and sight? And who brings the living out of the dead and brings the dead out of the living? And who directs the affair?' They will say, 'God.'" So say, 'Then will you not fear God?'" (Yunus 10:31).

The most deserving interpretation of His statement: And you know is that what the Arabs had of knowledge of the Oneness of God, and that He is the Creator of creation, their Maker and their Provider, was similar to what the People of the Book had of that. And there was no indication in the verse that God, may He be glorified, meant by His statement: And you know one of the two parties, rather the way the address is directed to all people is general to them, because He challenged all people with His statement: O mankind, worship your Lord, that its interpretation is what Ibn Abbas and Qatadah said, that he meant by that every accountable person who knows the Oneness of God, and that He has no partner in His creation, who associates others with Him in His worship, whoever he may be from the people, whether Arab or foreign, literate or illiterate, even though the address was to the infidels of the People of the Book who were around the place of the migration of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the hypocrites among them, and those among them who had been polytheists and then moved to hypocrisy with the arrival of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace.

He who has made for you the earth a bed and the sky a canopy and has sent down water from the sky and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for you. So do not set up equals to God while you know.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "He who made the earth a bed for you and the sky a canopy and sent down water from the sky and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for you. So do not attribute to God equals while you know."

The Almighty's saying: Who made the earth a bed for you. There are six issues in it:

The first: The Almighty's saying: Who made here means patience because it takes two objects. It also means created, as in the Almighty's saying: God has not made any lake or sabi'ah. And His saying: And He made darkness and light. It also means named, as in the Almighty's saying: "Ha Meem. By the clear Book. Indeed, We have made it an Arabic Qur'an." And His saying: And they have assigned to Him a portion of His servants. "They made the angels, who are the servants of the Most Merciful, females," meaning they named them. It also means took, as the poet said:

I made myself happy to bite them both, their fangs knocking on the bone

It may come as an extra, as the other said:

I started seeing two as four and one as two when old age led me astray.

It has been said about the Almighty's saying: And He made the darkness and the light: that it is redundant. And ja'ala and ijta'ala have the same meaning. The poet said:

He is responsible for the weak and made the night like an extended rope

Beds means a cushion on which they lie down and rest. And that which is not a bed, such as mountains, rough terrain, and seas, is among the interests of what is sought after from them, because mountains are like pegs, as He said: Have We not made the earth a bed, and the mountains pegs? And the seas are ridden for all their benefits, as He said: And the ships which sail through the sea with that which benefits people.

Second: The followers of Al-Shaffi'i said: If a man swears not to sleep on a bed or not to light a lamp, and he sleeps on the ground and sits in the sun, he has not broken his oath, because the wording does not refer to them according to custom. As for the Malikis, they based it on their principle regarding oaths, that they are based on the intention, the reason, or the rug on which the oath was made. If that is not the case, then it is according to custom.

Third: The Almighty's saying: And the sky is a structure. The sky is for the earth as the roof is for the house. That is why He, and His saying is the Truth, said: And We have made the sky a protected roof. And everything that rises and provides shade is called a sky, and we have already discussed it. Stopping at bana is better than stopping at tatqawn, because His saying: Who has made the earth a bed for you is an attribute of the Lord. It is said: So-and-so built a house, and built for his family—building in them—meaning he brought them together. The common people say: he built with his family, and this is wrong. It seems that the origin of it is that the one who enters with his family used to pitch a dome over it on the night of his entry into it, so it was said to every one who enters with his family: banaa. And banaa short is doubled for abundance, and banna he built a house and bana have the same meaning, and from it is the construction of a wall, and its origin is placing one brick on another until it is fixed.

The root of water is muwah. The waw was changed to an alif because it had a vowel and what preceded it had a vowel, so it was qatal maah. Two hidden letters met, so the ha was replaced with a hamza because it is stronger, and it is more similar to the alif. So it was qatal: water. The first alif is the root of the verb, and after it is the hamza which is a substitute for the ha, and after the hamza is an alif instead of the tanween. Abu al-Hasan said: It is not permissible to write it except with two alifs according to the Basrans, and if you wish with three, then if they pluralize or make smaller they return to the original and say: muwayh, amwah, and miyah, like jamal and ajmal.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: Then He brings forth thereby fruits as provision for you. Fruits is the plural of fruit. It is also said: fruit like a tree. It is also said: fruit like wood. It is also said: fruit like a body. Fruits like ikam is the plural of fruit. This will be further explained in Al-An'am, God willing. Fruits of whips: the knots of their ends.

The meaning of the verse is that We have brought forth for you various types of fruits and kinds of plants. Provision is food for you and fodder for your animals. This is explained by the Almighty's statement: "Indeed, We poured down water in abundance. Then We split the earth with a split. And We caused to grow therein grain, and grapes and herbage, and olives and palm trees, and gardens of dense foliage, and fruits and pastures, for enjoyment for you and your livestock." We have already discussed provision in detail, praise be to God.

If it is said: How is the name of sustenance given to what comes out of the fruits before ownership? It is said to him: Because it is prepared to be owned and it is permissible to benefit from it, so it is sustenance.

Fifth: I said: This verse indicates that God Almighty has made man independent of every creature, and for this reason he, peace be upon him, said, indicating this meaning:

By God, if one of you were to take his rope and collect firewood on his back, it would be better for him than to ask someone who would give him or refuse him.

Narrated by Muslim. The meaning of collecting firewood includes all kinds of work, crafts and other things. Whoever makes himself in need of people like himself because of greed, hope and desire for the adornments of this world has taken a side of making a rival to God. The Sufi scholars said: God the Almighty has taught in this verse the path of poverty, which is to make the earth a bed, the sky a cover, the water good and the grass food, and not to worship anyone in this world from among the creation because of this world, for God the Almighty has made available to you what you need, without anyone showing you any favor in it. Nawf al-Bakali said: I saw Ali ibn Abi Talib go out and look at the stars and he said: O Nawf, are you asleep or are you awake? I said: Rather, it is a sight, O Commander of the Faithful. He said: Blessed are those who renounce the world and desire the Hereafter. They are people who have taken the earth as a carpet, its soil as a bed, its water as a perfume, and the Qur'an and supplication as a covering and a slogan. So they rejected the world in the manner of Christ, peace be upon him... He mentioned the rest of the story, and its completion will come in this surah when God Almighty says: I answer the call of the caller, God Almighty willing.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: So do not make a prohibition for God equals meaning equals and similarities. And peers, the singular of which is peer, and Muhammad bin al-Sumaiqa' read it as peer. The poet said:

We thank God and we do not dispute with Him. He has all goodness and whatever He wills He does.

Hassan said:

They satirized him, but he has no clause. Your company is good, as is the ransom.

It is said: Nad, Nadeed, and Nadeeda, as an exaggeration. Labid said:

So that Sindari would not be my equal and I would make the people in general my uncles

And Ubaidah said: Peers are opposites. An-Nahhas: Peers is the first object, and God is in the second place: Al-Jawhari: And the peer with the opening of the noon: the high hill in the sky. And the peer of perfume is not Arabic. And the peer of perfume is peer, peer, and peer: he fled and went on his way, and from this some of them read the day of calling. And he called him famous, meaning he made him famous and heard about him.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: And you know is a subject and predicate, and the sentence is in the position of a state, and the address is to the disbelievers and hypocrites, according to Ibn Abbas.

If it is said: How did He describe them with knowledge when He described them with the opposite of that, such as sealing, imprinting, deafness and blindness? The answer is from two aspects: The first: And you know means the specific knowledge that God created the creation, sent down the water and caused the provision to grow, so they know that He is the One who bestows favors upon them without any rivals. The second: That the meaning is that you know His Oneness potentially and possibly if you contemplate and consider, and God knows best. In this is evidence of the command to use the arguments of reason and invalidate imitation. Ibn Furak said: It is possible that the verse includes the believers, so the meaning is do not turn back, O believers, and make rivals to God after your knowledge, which is the negation of ignorance, that God is One.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Blessed and Exalted began to explain the oneness of His divinity, that He is the One who bestows blessings upon His servants by bringing them out from nothingness into existence and bestowing upon them apparent and hidden blessings by making the earth a bed for them, i.e. a cradle like a bed, settled, paved and fixed by the lofty mountains, and the sky a structure which is the ceiling, as He said in the other verse: And We made the sky a protected ceiling, but they, from its signs, turn away. "And He sent down for you water from the sky." What is meant by this here is the clouds at their time when they need it, so He brought forth for them from it types of crops and fruits what is visible as provision for them and for their livestock, as He stated this in more than one place in the Qur'an. The most similar verse to this verse is the Almighty's saying: "Who made for you the earth a resting place and the sky a canopy and shaped you and perfected your forms and provided for you from the good things. That is God, your Lord, so blessed be God, Lord of the worlds." Its meaning is: He is the Creator, the Provider, the Owner of the abode and its inhabitants and the Provider of them, so by this He deserves to be worshipped alone and not to be associated with others. And for this reason he said: Do not make rivals to God while you know. And in the two Sahih, "On the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, he said: I said, O Messenger of God, which sin is the greatest before God? He said: To make rivals to God when He created you." And likewise the hadith of Mu'adh: Do you know what God's right over His servants is? To worship Him and not associate anything with Him. And in the other hadith: Let none of you say, 'What God willed and so-and-so willed,' but let him say, 'What God willed and then so-and-so willed.' And Hammad

ibn Salamah said: Abdul-Malik ibn Umair told us, on the authority of Rib'i ibn Harash, on the authority of Tufail ibn Sakhbarah, the brother of Aisha, the Mother of the Believers, on her mother's side, who said: I saw in a dream that I came upon a group of Jews and I said, Who are you? They said, We are the Jews. I said, "You would be the people if you did not say, 'Uzair is the son of God.' They said, "And you would be the people if you did not say, 'What God willed and what Muhammad willed.' Then I passed by a group of Christians and I said, "Who are you?" They said, We are Christians. I said, You are the people, if only you did not say that Christ is the son of God. They said, You are the people, if only you did not say, 'Whatever God wills and Muhammad wills.' So when morning came, I told it to whomever I told, then I came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and told him. He said, Have you told anyone about it? I said: Yes. So he stood up and praised and thanked God, then he said: "As for what follows, Tufail saw a vision that he told to whomever among you he told, and you said a word that such and such prevented me from forbidding you from saying. So do not say, 'Whatever God and Muhammad willed,' but say, 'Whatever God alone willed.'" This is how Ibn Mardawayh narrated it in his interpretation of this verse from the hadith of Hammad ibn Salamah with it. Ibn Majah narrated it from another chain of transmission on the authority of Abd al-Malik ibn Umair with it in a similar manner. Sufyan ibn Sa'id al-Thawri said on the authority of al-Ajlal ibn Abd God al-Kindi on the authority of Yazid ibn al-Asam, "On the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: A man said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, 'Whatever God and you willed,' so he said: Have you made me an equal to God? Say, 'Whatever God alone willed.'" Narrated by Ibn Mardawayh, and narrated by al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah from the hadith of 'Isa ibn Yunus on the authority of al-Ajlal with it. All of this is to protect and safeguard the side of monotheism, and God knows best. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: God Almighty said: O mankind, worship your Lord for both groups of disbelievers and hypocrites, meaning: worship your Lord alone who created you and those before you. And with this from Ibn Abbas: So do not make rivals to God while you know meaning: do not associate with God other than Him from rivals that do not benefit or harm while you know that you have no Lord who provides for you other than Him and you know that what the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, calls you to of monotheism is the truth about which there is no doubt. And this is what Qatada said. And Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad bin Amr bin Abi Asim told us, Abu Amr told us, Abu Ad-Dahhak bin Mukhallad Abu Asim told us, Shabib bin Bishr told us, Ikrimah told us on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the statement of God Almighty: So do not make rivals to God he said: Rivalry is polytheism more hidden than the crawling of an ant on a black rock in the darkness of the night, and it is for someone to say, By God and by your life, O so-and-so. By my life, he says, If it weren't for this dog, the thieves would have come to us yesterday, and if it weren't for the ducks in the house, the thieves would have come. A man saying to his friend, Whatever God wills and you will, and a man saying, If it weren't for God and so-and-so, do not include so-and-so in it, all of this is polytheism. In the hadith, a man said to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, Whatever God wills and you will, and he said, Have you made me a rival to God? And in another hadith, You are good people, if it weren't for the fact that you are opposing each other and saying, "Whatever God wills and so-and-so wills, Abu Al-Aaliyah said, Do not make rivals to God, meaning equal partners. This is what Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Qatadah, Al-Suddi, Abu Malik, and Ismail bin Abi Khalid said. Mujahid said, Do not make rivals to God while you know, meaning you know that He is one God in the Torah and the Gospel.

A hadith was mentioned about the meaning of this noble verse.

Imam Ahmad said: Affan told us: Abu Khalaf Musa bin Khalaf told us, and he was considered one of the substitutes. Yahya bin Abi Katheer told us, on the authority of Zaid bin Salam, on the authority of his grandfather Mamtur, on the authority of Al-Harith Al-Ash'ari, that the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God Almighty commanded Yahya bin Zakariya, peace be upon him, with five words to act upon and to command the Children of Israel to act upon them, and he almost delayed in doing so. Then Jesus, peace be upon him, said to him: You have been commanded with five words to act upon and command the Children of Israel to act upon them. Either you convey them to them or I will convey them. He said: O my brother, I fear that if you precede me, I will be punished or the earth will swallow me up." Yahya bin Zakariya gathered the Children of Israel in the Holy House until the mosque was full. He sat on the balcony, praised God and extolled Him, then said: God commanded me with five words to act upon and command you to act upon them. The first of them is: Worship God and do not associate anything with Him. The example of that is like that of a man who bought a slave with his own money for silver or gold, and he began to work and pay. And I command you to fast, for that is like a man with a bundle of musk in a headband, all of them smelling the fragrance of musk, and the bad breath of a fasting person is better to God than the fragrance of musk. And I command you to give charity, for that is like a man who was captured by the enemy, so they tied his hands to his neck and brought him forward to behead him, and he said to them, Would you like me to ransom myself from you? So he kept ransoming himself from them with little and much until he was freed. And I command you to remember God often, for that is like a man who was pursued by the enemy quickly, so he came to a strong fortress and took refuge in it, and the servant is most protected from Satan when he is in the remembrance of God."

He said: And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "And I command you to do five things that God has commanded me to do: congregation, hearing, obedience, and emigration." And jihad in the way of God, for whoever leaves the group by a handspan has removed the yoke of Islam from his neck unless he returns. And whoever calls with a call of ignorance is from the knees of Hellfire." They said: O Messenger of God, even if he fasts and prays? He said: And even if he prays and fasts and claims that he is a Muslim, then call the Muslims by their names as God the Almighty called them, the Muslims, the believers, the servants of God. This is a good hadith and the evidence from it in this verse is his saying: And God created you and provided for you, so worship Him and do not associate anything with Him. This verse indicates the oneness of God the Almighty in worship alone, with no partner. Many commentators, such as Al-Razi and others, have used it as evidence for the existence of the Almighty Creator, and it indicates that by way of priority, for whoever contemplates these lower and higher beings and the differences in their shapes, colors, natures, and benefits and their placement in the places of benefit from them, will know the power of their Creator, His wisdom, knowledge, perfection, and great authority, as some of the Bedouins said. And he was asked: What is the evidence for the existence of the Almighty Lord? He said: Glory be to God! The dung indicates the camel, and the footprints indicate the footsteps. So the sky with its constellations, the earth with its valleys, and the seas with their waves? Do they not indicate the existence of the Gracious, the All-Knowing?

Al-Razi narrated on the authority of Imam Malik that Al-Rashid asked him about this, so he provided evidence for him with the differences in languages, origins, and melodies. And on the authority of Abu Hanifa that some of the heretics asked him about the existence of the Almighty, so he said to them: Leave me, for I am thinking about a matter that you have been told about. They mentioned to me that a ship in the sea is loaded with various types of merchandise, and there is no one guarding it or driving it. Despite that, it goes and comes and travels by itself, penetrating the great waves until it is freed from them, and travels wherever it wants by itself without anyone driving it. They said: This is something that no sane person would say. He said: How wise are these beings with what they contain of the upper and lower worlds and what they contain of perfect things that have no maker. So the people were astonished and returned to the truth and became Muslims at his hands. It was narrated from Al-Shaff'i that he was asked about the existence of the Creator, so he said: This is a mulberry leaf, its taste is one, the worm eats it and silk comes out of it, the bees eat it and honey comes out of it, the sheep, cows and cattle eat it and they throw it as dung and droppings, and the gazelles eat it and musk comes out of it, and it is one thing. And it was narrated from Imam Ahmad bin Hanbal that he was asked about that and he said: Here is a strong, smooth fortress that has no door or exit, its exterior is like white silver, and its interior is like pure gold, and while it is like that, its wall cracks and from it comes out a hearing, seeing animal with a beautiful form and a pleasant voice, meaning by that the egg when a chicken comes out of it. And Abu Nuwas was asked about that and he recited:

Contemplate the plants of the earth and see the effects of what the King has made.

Eyes of silver, staring with pupils of pure gold

On the emerald rods are witnesses that God has no partner

Ibn Al-Mu'tazz said:

How strange it is that God is disobeyed, or how the denier denies Him.

And in everything there is a sign that indicates that He is One.

Others said that whoever contemplates these heavens, their height and vastness, and what they contain of large and small luminous planets, both moving and fixed, and sees how they revolve with the great sphere every day and night, rotating and having within themselves a course of their own, and looks at the seas surrounding the earth from every side, and the mountains placed on the earth to settle and inhabit their inhabitants, with their different shapes and colors, as God Almighty said: "And among the mountains are streaks white and red, varying in colors, and black [some]; and among the people and the beasts and the cattle are varying in colors, likewise. Only those fear God, from among His servants, who have knowledge." And likewise these rivers flowing from one country to another for benefits, and what He has created on the earth of various animals and plants of different tastes, scents, shapes, and colors, with the unification of the nature of the soil and water, he has proven the existence of the Creator and His great power, wisdom, mercy for His creation, His kindness to them, His goodness to them, and His righteousness toward them. There is no god but Him, and no lord but Him. In Him I rely, and to Him I turn. And the verses in the Qur'an that indicate this position are very numerous.

Fath al-Qadir

22- And a bed meaning a cushion on which they rest. When He presented the blessing of creating them, He followed it with the blessing of creating the earth as a bed for them, since the earth, which is their dwelling place and place of settlement, is one of the greatest things their need calls for. Then He followed that with the blessing of making the sky like a dome pitched over them, and the roof of the house in which they live, as He said: And We made the sky a protected roof. The origin of construction: placing one brick on another. Then He bestowed upon them the favor of sending down water from the sky. The origin of water is mawh, the waw was accepted because of its movement and the openness of what preceded it with an alif, so it became mah, so two light letters came together and the ha was changed to a hamza. The fruits are the plural of fruit. The meaning is: We brought forth for you various types of fruits and kinds of plants so that this may be a provision for you for a time. The peers are the plural of peer, which is the like and the equivalent. His saying: And you know is a circumstantial clause and the address is to the disbelievers and the hypocrites. If it is said: How did He describe them with knowledge when He described them otherwise, where He said: But they do not know, "But they do not perceive," And they were not guided, "Deaf, dumb, blind." It is said that what is meant is that their ignorance and lack of perception does not include this: that is, their knowing that He is the Benefactor and not any other equals to Him, for they knew this and did not deny it, as God related about them in more than one verse. It may be said: What is meant is that you know His Oneness potentially and possibly if you contemplate and consider. And in it is evidence for the obligation to use arguments and abandon imitation. Ibn Furak said: What is meant is that you make equals to God after your knowledge, which is the negation of ignorance that God is One. End quote. The object of know was omitted to indicate that what they have of knowledge is not limited to one type of the types that necessitate monotheism. Al-Bazzar, Al-Hakim, Ibn Mardawayh, and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Dala'il narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, who said: Whatever was O you who believe, was revealed in Madinah, and whatever was O people, was revealed in Makkah. Something similar to this was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abd ibn Hamid, Al-Tabarani in Al-Awsat, and Al-Hakim, who authenticated it. Something similar was narrated by Abu Ubaid, Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn Al-Mundhir on the authority of Alqamah. Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abd ibn Hamid, Ibn Mardawayh and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated something similar on the authority of Ad-Dahhak. Abu Ubaid also narrated something similar on the authority of Maymun ibn Mihran. Ibn Abi Shaybah and Ibn Mardawayh also narrated something similar on the authority of Urwah and Ikrimah. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, O mankind, that it applies to both groups, the disbelievers and the believers. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Malik regarding his statement, Perhaps you, meaning so. Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Awn ibn Abdullah ibn Utbah, that he said, Perhaps it is obligatory from God. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions regarding his statement, Who has made the earth a bed for you, that is, you walk on it and it is the resting place and the resting place, and the sky a canopy, that he said, like the shape of a dome, which is the roof of the earth. Abu Al-Sheikh narrated in Al-Azmah on the authority of Al-Hasan that he was asked: Is the rain from the sky or from the clouds? He said: From the sky. Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Sheikh narrated on the authority of Ka'b who said: The clouds are a sieve for the rain, and were it not for the clouds when the water descends from the sky, it would spoil whatever it falls on of the earth and the seeds. Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Sheikh narrated on the authority of Khalid bin Ma'dan who said: Rain is water that comes out from under the Throne and descends from one sky to another until it gathers in the lowest sky, and it gathers in a place called Al-Abzam, then the black clouds come and enter it and drink it like a sponge drinks, and God drives it wherever He wills. Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Sheikh narrated on the authority of Ikrimah who said: The water descends from the seventh heaven, and a drop of it falls according to the calculation like a camel. Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Sheikh narrated on the authority of Khalid bin Yazid who said: Some of the rain is from the sky, and some of it is what the clouds draw from the sea and it is tormented by thunder and lightning. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya narrated in the Book of Rain on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: When the rain comes from the sky, the shells open for it and it becomes pearls. Al-Shafi'i narrated in Al-Umm, Ibn Abi Al-Dunya in Kitab Al-Matar, and Abu Al-Shaykh in Al-Azmah on the authority of Al-Muttalib bin Hantab that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: There is no hour of the night or day except that the sky rains, and God directs it as He wills. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya and Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "Rain does not fall from the sky except that it brings with it seeds. If you were to spread out a blanket, you would see it." Ibn Abi Al-Dunya and Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "Rain is a mixture from Paradise. If the mixture is abundant, the blessing is great, even if the rain is little. If the mixture is little, the blessing is little, even if the rain is abundant." Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan, who said: "No year is more rainy than another year, but God directs it as He wills. So-and-so from the angels descend with the rain, writing down where the rain falls, who provides it, and who produces it with every drop." Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: So do not make for God equals meaning do not associate with Him other equals that can neither harm nor benefit while you know that you have no Lord who provides for you other than Him. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Equals meaning: Similar. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud: Equals meaning: Men of equal standing who obey them in disobeying God. Abd ibn Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah: Equals meaning: Partners. Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ahmad, Al-Bukhari in Al-Adab Al-Mufrad, Al-Nasa'i, Ibn Majah and Abu Nu'aym in Al-Hilyah narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: "A man said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: 'Whatever God wills and you will.' He said: 'You have made me an equal to God, whatever God wills alone.'" Ibn Saad narrated on the authority of Qutaylah bint Saifi who said: "A rabbi from the rabbis came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: 'O Muhammad, what good people you are, were it not for the fact that you associate partners with God.' He said: 'How?' He said: 'One of you should say, 'No, by the Kaaba.' The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Whoever swears an oath, let him swear by the Lord of the Kaaba.' He said: 'O Muhammad, what good people you are, were it not for the fact that you make a rival to God.' He said: 'How is that?' He said: 'One of you should say, 'Whatever God wills and you will.' The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Whoever among you says, 'Whatever God wills,' he should say, 'Then whatever you will.'" Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ahmad, Abu Dawud, al-Nasa'i, Ibn Majah, and al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Hudhayfah ibn al-Yaman who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Do not say, 'Whatever God wills and so-and-so wills.' Say, 'Whatever God wills and so-and-so wills.' Ahmad, Ibn Majah, al-Bayhaqi, and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Tufayl ibn Sakhbarah that he saw in a dream that he passed by a group of Jews and said: 'You are good people, were it not for the fact that you claim that Ezra is the son of God.' They said: And you are indeed good people, were it not that you say, Whatever God wills and Muhammad wills. Then he passed by a group of Christians and said: You are indeed good people, were it not that you say, The Messiah is the son of God. They said: And you are indeed good people, were it not that you say, Whatever God wills and Muhammad wills. When morning came, he informed the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he delivered a sermon, saying: Tufayl saw a vision, and you are saying a word that I was prevented from saying out of modesty before you, so do not say it, but say, 'Whatever God wills, He has no partner.' Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "And is polytheism, more hidden than the crawling of ants on a black rock in the darkness of the night. It is when you say, 'By God, by your life, O so-and-so, and by my life,' and you say, 'Were it not for his dog, the thieves would have come to us,' and if it were not for the cat in the house, the thieves would have come.' And a man saying, 'Whatever God wills and you will,' and a man saying, 'Were it not for God and so-and-so,' all of this is polytheism." Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud, who said: "I said: O Messenger of God, which sin is the greatest? He said: To make a rival to God, even though He created you." The hadith.

22. Who made the earth a bed for you meaning a carpet, and it was said a place to sleep, and it was said a cushion, meaning He made it submissive and did not make it a place of rest that cannot be settled on. Al-Bukhari said: Uthman bin Abi Shaybah told us, Jarir told us, on the authority of Mansur, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, on the authority of Amr bin Shurahbil, on the authority of Abdullah, may God be pleased with him, who said: "I asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: Which sin is the greatest in the sight of God? He said: To make a rival to God, even though He created you. I said: That is great. Then what? He said: To kill your child for fear that he will eat with you. I said: Then what? He said: To commit adultery with your neighbor's wife." And making here means creating, and the sky is a building and a raised ceiling.

And He sent down from the sky meaning from the clouds water which is rain and brought forth thereby fruits of various types of fruits and plants as provision for you food for you and fodder for your animals so do not make for God equals meaning likenesses that you worship as you worship God. Abu Ubaidah said: A peer is an opposite, and it is one of the opposites, and God Almighty is innocent of likenesses and opposites. And you know that He is One, the Creator of these things.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

22- Who made the earth a bed for you is a second attribute, or praise in the accusative case, or in the nominative case, or a subject whose predicate is do not make. And made is one of the general verbs that comes in three ways: meaning became, and began so it is not transitive like his saying:

The camels of Bani Suhayl have made their pasture near the mountains.

The meaning of created is that it takes one object, as in the Almighty's saying: And He made darkness and light. The meaning of made is that it takes two objects, as in the Almighty's saying: He made the earth a bed for you. Making is sometimes done by action, and other times by saying or making a contract. The meaning of made it a bed is that He made some of its sides protruding and visible from the water, despite its nature encompassing it, and He made it medium between hardness and softness until it became prepared for them to sit and sleep on it like a spread out bed. This does not require it to be flat, because its spherical shape, with its large size and wide body, does not refuse to be spread out.

And the sky is a building a dome pitched over you. The sky is a generic noun that applies to both singular and plural things, such as dinar and dirham. It has also been said that it is the plural of sky. The building is a source, and the thing built is named after it, whether it is a house, a dome, or a tent. From this comes the word bana he built over his wife, because when they got married, they pitched a new tent over her.

And He sends down water from the sky, and brings forth thereby fruits as provision for you. This is in apposition to made. The fruits come forth by the power and will of God Almighty, but He made the water mixed with the earth a cause for their coming forth and a substance for them, like semen for animals, by making His custom of bestowing their forms and qualities upon the substance mixed from them, or He deposited in the water an active power and in the earth a receptive power, from the combination of which various types of fruits are generated. He is able to bring into existence all things without causes and substances, just as He created the souls of causes and substances, but in their creation He has a progression from one state to another, crafts and wisdom in which He renews for those of insight a lesson, and tranquility to His great power, not in bringing them into existence all at once. The first from is for the beginning, whether what is meant by the sky is the clouds, for what is above you is the sky, or the heavens, for the rain begins from the sky to the clouds and from there to the earth, as the phenomena indicate. Or from celestial causes that stir up the moist parts from the depths of the earth to the atmosphere, so they form rain clouds. The second min is for partiality, as evidenced by the Almighty's saying: Then We brought forth thereby fruits and the encompassing of those who deny it, I mean water and provision, as if He said: And We sent down from the sky some water, then We brought forth thereby some fruits so that it would be some of your provision. And this is the reality, since not all the water came down from the sky, nor did He bring forth by rain all the fruits, nor did He make all that which is provided fruits. Or for clarification, and provision is an object with the meaning of that which is provided, like your saying, I spent a thousand dirhams. And the fruits are permissible, and the place is the place of the abundance, because what He meant by fruits is the group of fruits that are in your saying, I attained the fruit of his garden. And this supports the reading of those who read: from the fruit on the basis of singularity. Or because the groups take turns in place of each other, like the Almighty's saying: How many gardens and springs did they leave behind? and His saying: Three menstrual periods. Or because since it was marked with the lam, it went beyond the limit of paucity. For you is an attribute of provision if it means the one who is provided for, and its object if it means the source, as if he said: provision for you.

So do not make rivals for God is related to worship as a prohibition conjoined to it. Or a negation in the accusative case with the implication that that is an answer to it. Or perhaps as the accusative case of make "so look" in the Almighty's saying: Perhaps I may reach the causes * The causes of the heavens so I may look is to connect it to the six things because they share in that they are not obligatory. The meaning is: If you fear God, do not make rivals for God. Or with the One Who made, if you start with it as a prohibition, it becomes report according to the interpretation of what is said in it: Do not make. The fa is for causality, it was introduced to it so that the subject includes the meaning of a condition. The meaning is: He who has distinguished you with these great blessings and great signs should not be associated with Him. And the rival is the opposite example. Jarir said:

You make me a rival, while I have no rival to one of noble lineage.

From nada yanda nududan: if he is repelled, and nadatu man is his opponent, the opponent is specified as the one who is similar in essence, just as the equal is specified as the one who is similar in power, and the naming of what the polytheists worship besides God peers, and what they claim is equal to Him in His essence and attributes, nor that it differs from Him in His actions, because when they abandoned worshipping Him for worshipping them, and called them gods, their situation resembled the situation of those who believe that they are necessary entities in themselves, able to repel the wrath of God from them, and grant them what God did not intend for them of good, so he mocked them and denounced them for making peers for those who are unable to have a peer. For this reason, the monotheist of the pre-Islamic era, Zayd ibn Amr ibn Nufayl, said:

One quarter or a thousand quarters I owe if things are divided

And you know is a state of the pronoun do not make, and the object of you know is omitted, meaning: and your state is that you are people of knowledge, contemplation, and correct opinion, so if you contemplate even the slightest contemplation, your mind will be compelled to prove a Creator of the possibilities who is unique in his necessary essence, exalted above the similarity of the creatures. Or it is intended, which is that they do not resemble Him nor are they capable of doing anything like what He does, as in His statement, the Most High, the Most Great: Is there among your partners anyone who does anything of that? Based on this, the intended meaning is rebuke and reproach, not restricting the ruling and limiting it to him, because the knowledgeable and the ignorant who is capable of knowledge are equal in their duties.

Know that the content of the two verses is the command to worship God, the Most High, the Most Great, and the prohibition of associating partners with Him, the Most High, and the indication of what is the cause and the requirement. Its explanation is that He arranged the command to worship on the attribute of Lordship, indicating that it is the cause for its obligation. Then He explained His Lordship by saying that He, the Most High, is their Creator and the Creator of their origins and what they need in their livelihood of food, shelter, food and clothing, for fruit is more general than food, and provision is more general than food and drink. Then, since these matters that no one else can do are evidence of His Oneness, the Most High, the Most High, based on them the prohibition of associating partners with Him. Perhaps He, the Most High, intended from the last verse, along with what the apparent meaning indicates and the speech is given, to indicate the details of the creation of man and what He bestowed upon him of meanings and attributes in the manner of representation. He likened the body to the earth, the soul to the sky, the mind to the water, and what He bestowed upon him of practical and theoretical virtues obtained by means of the mind's use of the senses, and the duality of the psychological and physical powers, with the fruits generated from the duality of the active heavenly powers and the passive earthly powers by the power of the chosen doer. For every verse there is an outward and an inward meaning, and every limit has a beginning.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:23

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah the like thereof and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down to Our servant Muhammad of the Qur'an that it is from God then produce a surah like it meaning the one that was sent down, and min is for clarification, meaning it is like it in eloquence, beautiful composition, and reporting of the unseen. - A surah is a section that has a beginning and an end, the minimum of which is three verses - and call upon your witnesses your gods that you worship other than God meaning other than Him to help you if you should be truthful that Muhammad said it from himself, then do that, for you are eloquent Arabs like him.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: This is from God, the Almighty, as an argument for His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, against the polytheists of his people from the Arabs and their hypocrites, and the infidels of the People of the Book and their misguidance, whose stories He began with His saying, may His praise be exalted: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them (al-Baqarah 2:6). He is addressing them with these verses, and He means those like them. God, the Almighty, said to them: And if you, O polytheists from the Arabs and infidels from the People of the Two Books, are in doubt, which is suspicion, about what We have sent down to Our servant Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, of light and proof and verses of the Criterion: that it is from Me, and that I am the One who sent it down to him, but you did not believe in it and did not believe him in what he says, then bring an argument that refutes his argument, because you know that the argument of every prophet for the truthfulness of his claim to prophethood is to bring a proof that all of creation is unable to bring the like of. And from the proof of Muhammad (peace be upon him) of his truthfulness, and his evidence of the truth of his prophethood, and that what he brought from Me, all of you and all of those you seek help from among your supporters and helpers, are unable to produce a surah like it. And if you are unable to do that, and you are the people of excellence in eloquence, rhetoric and fluency, then you know that others are even more unable to do what you are unable to do. Just as the proof of those who came before from My messengers and prophets of his truthfulness, and his proof of his prophethood from the signs, is what all of My creation is unable to produce the like of. Then it is established for you that Muhammad did not fabricate or invent it, because if that was from him, then you and all of My creation would not be unable to produce the like of it. Because Muhammad (peace be upon him) is no more than a human being like you, and in the same state as you in body, spaciousness of character and fluency of tongue. So it is possible that he is thought to be able to do what you are unable to do, or that you are imagined to be unable to do what he is able to do.

Then the people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of his saying: Then bring a surah like it.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Then bring a surah like it, meaning: like this Qur'an, truly and honestly, with no falsehood or lies in it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Then bring a surah like it, he said: a surah like this Qur'an.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Then bring a surah like it, like the Qur'an.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Then bring a surah like it, he said: like it is like the Qur'an.

The meaning of the statement of Mujahid and Qatadah, which we mentioned from them, is that God Almighty said to those who argued with Him about His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, from among the infidels: Then bring a surah like this Qur'an from your speech, O Arabs, as Muhammad brought it in your languages and with the meanings of your logic.

Other people said: The meaning of his saying: Then bring a surah like it, is like Muhammad among humans, because Muhammad is a human being like you.

Abu Ja'far said: The first interpretation, which was stated by Mujahid and Qatadah, is the correct interpretation. Because God Almighty said in another surah: Or do they say, 'He has invented it?' Say, 'Then bring a surah like it.' (Yunus 10:38) It is known that the surah has no counterpart or resemblance to Muhammad, so it is permissible to say: Then bring a surah like Muhammad.

If someone says: You mentioned that God meant by His saying: Then bring a surah like it, something like this Qur'an. Is there an example for the Qur'an that would say: Bring a surah like it?

It was said: He did not mean by it: Bring a surah like it in composition and meanings that distinguish it from all other speech, but rather he meant: Bring a surah like it in eloquence, because God revealed the Qur'an in the Arabic language, so the speech of the Arabs undoubtedly has a similar meaning in Arabic. As for the meaning by which the Qur'an distinguishes itself from all other speech of creation, it has no equivalent, peer, or likeness in that respect.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:23

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah the like thereof and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

God, the Most High, argued against them for His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, with the same argument He argued against him from the Qur'an, when it became clear that the people were unable to produce a surah like it in eloquence, since the Qur'an was an eloquence like their eloquence, and speech revealed in their language. So He, the Most High, said to them: "And if you are in doubt that what I have revealed to My servant of the Qur'an is from Me, then produce a surah from your speech that is like it in Arabic, since you are Arabs, and it is an eloquence similar to your eloquence, and speech similar to your speech." So He, the Most High, did not charge them to produce a surah from a language other than the language that is similar to the language in which the Qur'an was revealed, so that they could say: You charged us with something that if we knew it we would produce it, but we are not able to produce it because we are not from the people of the language that You charged us to produce. So you have no argument against us in this. Indeed, even if we are unable to produce something like it from other languages because we are not its people, there are many people among the people who are not people of our language who are able to produce something like it from the language that you have commanded us to produce. But He, the Most High, said to them: Bring a surah like it, because something like it from your languages is like your tongues, and if Muhammad invented and fabricated it, if you were to gather and cooperate to produce something like it from your language, your eloquence would be more capable of inventing, arranging and composing it than Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Even if you were not more capable of it than him, you will not be incapable, as a whole, of what Muhammad was able to do from that and he is alone, if you are truthful in your claim and assertion that Muhammad invented and fabricated it, and that it is from someone other than me.

The interpreters differed in their interpretation of His statement: And call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

Ibn Abbas said: Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zaid bin Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And call upon your witnesses other than God, meaning your helpers in what you are upon, if you are truthful.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And call your witnesses, meaning people who testify.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Abu Kuraib told us: Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: People who will testify for you.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: And call your witnesses, he said: People who testify. Ibn Jurayj said: Your witnesses upon it, if you bring it, it is like it, like the Qur'an.

This is what God said to those infidels who doubted what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought.

His saying, So call upon, means: seek help and assistance, as the poet said:

When our knights and their men met, they called out: O Ka'ab! and we sought refuge with Amer.

He means by his saying: Leave, O Ka'b, seek Ka'b's help and cry out to them for help. As for martyrs, it is the plural of martyr, just as partners is the plural of partner, and orators is the plural of orator. The witness is called the one who witnesses something for someone else in a way that confirms his claim. It may also be called the one who witnesses something, just as it is said: So-and-so is the companion of so-and-so, meaning he sits with him, and his companion means he is his drinking companion, and likewise it is said: his witness, meaning he witnesses him.

If the martyrs could be the plural of martyr, which is used for the two meanings described, then the most appropriate interpretation of the verse is what Ibn Abbas said, which is that its meaning is: And seek help from your helpers and witnesses who witness you and assist you in your denial of God and His Messenger, and support you in your disbelief and hypocrisy, if you are right in your denial that what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought to you is fabrication and slander, so that you may test yourselves and others: Are you able to produce a surah like it, so that Muhammad is able to produce all of it by himself, fabricating it?

As for what Mujahid and Ibn Jurayj said in interpreting this, it is baseless. Because the people at the time of the Messenger of God (peace be upon him) were of three types: people of true faith, people of true disbelief, and people of hypocrisy in between. The people of faith were believers in God and His Messenger, so it was impossible for the disbelievers to claim that they had witnesses to the truth of what they were doing, if they had fabricated a message, then claimed that the Qur'an had a counterpart from the believers. As for the hypocrites and disbelievers, there is no doubt that if they had called for the establishment of falsehood and the nullification of truth, they would have disputed over it, despite their disbelief and misguidance. So which of the two groups would their witnesses be if they claimed that they had brought a surah like the Qur'an?

But that is as God, the Most High, said: Say, 'If mankind and the jinn gathered to produce the like of this Qur'an, they could not produce the like of it, even if they were to each other assistants.' (Al-Isra': 188) So

God, the Most High, informed in this verse that the like of the Qur'an cannot be produced by the jinn and mankind, even if they cooperated and helped each other to produce it. And He challenged them in the sense of rebuking them in the opposite, saying, the Most High: And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah like it and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful. He means by that: If you are in doubt about the truthfulness of Muhammad in what he brought to you from Me, that it is from Me, then produce a surah like it, and let some of you support one another in that, if you are truthful in your claim, until you know that since you are unable to do that, neither Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, nor any human being is able to produce it, and it is true for you that it is My revelation and inspiration to My Servant.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And if you are in doubt meaning in doubt. About what We have sent down meaning the Qur'an, and what is meant are the polytheists who challenged, for when they heard the Qur'an they said: This does not resemble the speech of God, and we are in doubt about it, so the verse was revealed. The reason for its connection to what preceded it is that when God Almighty mentioned in the first verse the evidence of His Oneness and Power, then He indicated the prophethood of His Prophet, and that what he brought was not fabricated by Him.

His saying: upon our servant means Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. The word servant is derived from the word worship, which means humility. So the slave was called a servant because of what he does, due to his humility to his master. Tarafa said:

Until the whole clan avoided me and I was singled out like a purebred camel

That is, the submissive. Some of them said: Since worship is the most honorable of qualities and naming oneself with it is the most honorable of plans, He called His Prophet a servant, and they recited:

Oh people, my heart is with Zahra, and the one who hears and sees it knows it.

Do not call me except by the name of Abdha, for it is the most honorable of my names.

Bring a surah The fa is the answer to the condition. Bring is shortened because it is from the root word to come, as Ibn Kaysan said. It is a command that means to make it impossible, because God knows that they are unable to do it. The surah is one of the surahs. We have already discussed it and the inimitability of the Quran, so there is no point in repeating it. The word min in His statement: of something like it is redundant, as He said: Bring a surah like it. The pronoun in something like it refers to the Quran according to the majority of scholars, such as Qatada, Mujahid, and others. It was said that it refers to the Torah and the Gospel. So the meaning is: Bring a surah from a book like it, for it confirms what is in it. It was said that it refers to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. The meaning is: Who is an illiterate human being like him who cannot read or write? min according to these two interpretations is for partiality. Stopping at something like it is not complete, because and call upon is a sequence based on it.

God the Almighty said: And call upon your witnesses meaning your helpers and supporters. Al-Farra': your gods. Ibn Kaysan said: If it is said: How were the witnesses mentioned here? The witnesses are only to witness a matter, or to inform about a matter they witnessed, and it was said to them: Then bring a surah like it, then the answer is: The meaning is: Seek help from whomever you find among your scholars, and bring them to witness what you bring, so the response to everyone is more emphatic in the argument against them.

I said: This is the meaning of what Mujahid said. Mujahid said: The meaning of And call your witnesses is: call people who will testify for you, that is, who will testify that you opposed him. An-Nahhas: Your witnesses is the plural of martyr, it is said: witness and martyr, like able and powerful. And his saying: from other than God means from other than Him, and without is the opposite of above, and it is short of the goal, and it is an adverb. And without: the insignificant and vile, he said:

If a person is high, he aspires to the highest, and he who is lowly is satisfied with the lowest.

It is not difficult to do an action from it, and some of them say from it: dan yadun dunan. It is also said: this dun that, meaning closer to it. It is also said in temptation with something: donakahu. Tamim said to Al-Hajjaj: We buried Salih - and he had crucified him - so he said: donakahu.

God Almighty says: If you are truthful in what you said that you are able to oppose, because they said in another verse: If We willed, We could say the like of this. Truthfulness is the opposite of lying, and he was truthful in the hadith. Truthfulness is the hardness of spears. It is also said: They were truthful to them in battle. A friend is someone who is constantly truthful. It is also said: A truthful man, just as one says: A good man. Friendship is derived from charity in giving advice and friendship.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Then the Almighty proceeded to establish the prophethood after he had established that there is no god but Him, so he said, addressing the disbelievers: And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant, meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, then produce a surah like what he brought, if you claim that it is from other than God, then oppose it with something like what he brought, and seek help in that from whomever you wish besides God, for you will not be able to do that. Ibn Abbas said: Your witnesses are your helpers. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik: Your partners, meaning other people who help you in that, meaning seek help from your gods in that, so they support you and aid you. Mujahid said: And call upon your witnesses, meaning people who testify to it, meaning eloquent rulers. God Almighty has challenged them with this in more than one place in the Qur'an, so he said in Surat al-Qasas 28: "Say: Then bring a book from God that is better guidance than both of them, so I will follow it, if you should be truthful." And he said in Surat Al-Subhan: "Say: If mankind and the jinn gathered to produce the like of this And He said in Surah Hud 11: "Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it'? Say, 'Then bring ten surahs like it, fabricated, and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.'" And He said in Surah Yunus 10: "And this Qur'an could not have been fabricated by anyone other than God, but it is a confirmation of what was before it and a detailed explanation of the Scripture - there is no doubt about it - from the Lord of the worlds. Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it'? Say, 'Then bring a surah like it and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.'" And all of these verses are from Mecca. Then He challenged them with that in Medina as well, saying in this verse: And if you are in doubt meaning, doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, then bring a surah like it meaning like the Qur'an. This was said by Mujahid and Qatadah, and it was chosen by Ibn Jarir, al-Tabari, al-Zamakhshari, and al-Razi. He transmitted it from 'Umar, Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn 'Abbas, al-Hasan al-Basri, and most of the scholars. He preferred that with several aspects, the best of which is that He challenged them all, separately and together. Whether in that their illiterate and their scribes, and that is more complete than the challenge and more comprehensive than challenging one of them who is illiterate and does not know anything about sciences, and the evidence for that is the saying of the Most High: Then bring ten Surahs like it and His saying: They do not bring the like of it. And some of them said: "Who is like Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace," meaning from an illiterate man like him, and the first is correct, because the challenge is general to all of them even though they are the most eloquent of nations, and he challenged them with this in Mecca and Medina many times despite the intensity of their enmity towards him and their hatred for his religion, and despite this they were unable to do it, and for this reason the Most High said: But if you do not, and you will never do it, and and you will never do it is to negate eternity in the future, meaning you will never do that, and this is also another miracle, which is that he informed with decisive, conclusive, and advanced report, not afraid or fearful, that this Qur'an will not be opposed by anything like it forever and ever, and the matter happened like that, it has not been opposed from its time until our time, and it is not possible, and how can that be possible for anyone when the Qur'an is the speech of God, the Creator of all things, and how is the speech of the Creator similar to the speech of the created, and whoever contemplates the Qur'an will find in it aspects The miracle is an apparent and hidden art in terms of wording and meaning. God Almighty said: "Alif, Lam, Ra. This is a Book whose verses are perfected and then presented in detail from One Who is Wise and Acquainted." So its words are perfected and its meanings are detailed, or vice versa, according to the disagreement. So each of its words and meanings is eloquent, without parallel or comparison. It has informed about past unseen events that were and occurred exactly as it was informed, and it has commanded all good and forbidden all evil, as God Almighty said: And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled in truth and justice. That is, truth in the report and justice in the rulings. So it is all truth, honesty, justice, and guidance, in which there is no risk, falsehood, or slander, as is found in the poetry of the Arabs and others, and the lies and risks that their poetry is not good without, as it was said about poetry that the sweetest of it is the most false. You will find that the long, extended poem has mostly been used to describe women, horses, wine, or to praise a specific person, horse, camel, war, creature, fear, beast, or something from the specific observations that do not benefit anything except the ability of the specific speaker to The hidden or subtle thing or its manifestation to the clear thing, then you find for it in it a house or two or more which are the houses of poetry and the rest of it is idle talk with no benefit under it, and as for the Qur'an, all of it is eloquent in the utmost extremes of eloquence for those who know that in detail and in summary from those who understand the speech of the Arabs and the forms of expression, for if you contemplate its report you will find it in the utmost sweetness whether it is extended or brief and whether it is repeated or not, and whenever it is repeated it becomes sweeter and higher, it does not become old from frequent repetition, and scholars do not get tired of it, and if it takes on threats and intimidation, it comes from it what makes the deaf and steadfast mountains tremble, so what do you think of the hearts of the understanding, and if it promises it comes with what opens the hearts and ears, and longs for the abode of peace and the proximity of the throne of the Most Merciful as he said in Al-Targhib No soul knows what has been hidden for them of comfort for the eyes as reward for what they used to do and he said: And therein is whatever the souls desire and the eyes delight in, and you will abide therein eternally and he said in Al-Tarhib: Do you then feel secure that a side of the land will not swallow you up? "Do you then feel secure?" And He said in the warning: So each one We seized for his sin. And He said in the preaching: Have you seen if We should grant them enjoyment for years? Then that which they were promised came to them? What they were enjoying will not avail them. And other types of eloquence, rhetoric, and sweetness. And if the verses came in the rulings, commands, and prohibitions, they included the command of every good, beneficial, good, and beloved good thing, and the prohibition of every ugly, vile, and base thing, as Ibn Masoud and others from the Salaf said. If you hear God the Most High say in the Qur'an: O you who have believed, then listen to it, for it is good that He commands or evil that He prohibits. For this reason, God the Most High said: "He enjoins upon them what is right and forbids them what is wrong, and He makes lawful for them the good things and prohibits for them the bad things, and He removes from them their burden and the shackles which were upon them." And if the verses came in describing the afterlife and the horrors in it and in describing Paradise, And the Fire and what God has prepared in it for His friends and enemies of bliss, hell, refuge and painful torment, it gave glad tidings of it, warned about it and warned about it, and called for doing good deeds and avoiding evil deeds, and renounced the world and desired the Hereafter, and remained steadfast on the best path, and guided to the straight path of God and His upright law, and removed from the hearts the filth of the accursed Satan. This is why it was proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, "On the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: 'There is no prophet among the prophets who was not given signs that people believed in the like of them. What I was given was only a revelation that God revealed to me, so I hope that I will have the most followers on the Day of Resurrection.'" - wording of Muslim - and his statement, may God bless him and grant him peace: What I was given was only a revelation means that what I was given was the one that distinguished me from among them, this miraculous Qur'an for people to oppose, unlike other divine books, which are not miraculous according to many scholars, and God knows best. And he, may God bless him and grant him peace, has signs that indicate his prophethood and his truthfulness in what he brought that are beyond counting, and praise and thanks be to God.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:23

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah the like thereof and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

Some theologians have decided on the miracle in a way that includes the saying of the Sunnis and the saying of the Mu'tazila regarding the diversion, so he said: If this Qur'an is a miracle in itself and humans are unable to produce something like it and are not able to oppose it, then the claim has been made and is what is required. And if it is possible for them to oppose it with something like it and they did not do so despite their intense hostility towards it, then that is evidence that it is from God because He diverted them from opposing it despite their ability to do so. And this method, even if it is not satisfactory because the Qur'an is a miracle in itself and humans are unable to oppose it as we have decided, it is suitable for the purpose of concession, argumentation and defending the truth. And in this way, al-Razi answered in his interpretation his question about the short surahs such as al-'Asr and Inna a'naka al-Kawthar.

And the Almighty said: So fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers. As for the fuel, with the opening of the waw, it is what is thrown into the fire to ignite it, such as firewood and the like, as the Almighty said: And as for the unjust, they will be fuel for Hell. And the Almighty said: "Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell; you will be entering it. Had these been gods, they would not have entered it, and all therein will abide eternally." What is meant by stones here are the great, black, hard, stinking sulfur stones, and they are the hottest stones when heated, may God protect us from them. Abdul Malik bin Maysarah Al-Zarrad said on the authority of Abdul Rahman bin Sabit bin Amr bin Maymun on the authority of Abdullah bin

Masoud regarding the Almighty's statement: whose fuel is men and stones, he said they are stones of sulfur, created by God on the day He created the heavens and the earth in the lowest heaven, preparing them for the disbelievers. Narrated by Ibn Jarir and this is his wording, and Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak, and he said it meets the conditions of the two sheikhs. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: Fear the Fire whose fuel is people and stones. As for the stones, they are black sulfur with which they will be tormented along with the Fire. Mujahid said: Stones of sulfur are more foul-smelling than a carcass. Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn 'Ali said: Stones of sulfur. Ibn Jurayj said: Stones of black sulfur in the Fire. 'Amr ibn Dinar said to me: Harder and greater than these stones. It was said that what is meant by them are the stones of idols and rivals that were worshipped instead of God, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hellfire 17:1. Al-Qurtubi and Al-Razi narrated this and preferred it over the first. He said that taking the Fire from stones of sulfur is not strange, so making them these stones is more appropriate. What he said is not strong, because if fire is lit with sulfur stones, its heat is more intense and its blazing is stronger, especially according to what the predecessors mentioned, that they are stones of sulfur prepared for that. Then the fire takes these stones as well, and this plaster is made into stones and is worked on with fire until it becomes like that. Likewise, all the stones are blown away by fire and burnt. This was only mentioned in the heat of this fire that they were promised, and the intensity of its blazing and the strength of its flames, as God the Almighty said: Every time it subsides, We increase their blazing. And thus Al-Qurtubi preferred that what is meant by it are the stones that are lit with fire to make it red and its flames intense, so that this would be a more severe punishment for its people. He said, and it came in the hadith from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: Everyone who harms people will enter the fire, and this hadith is not preserved or known. Then Al-Qurtubi said, and it has been interpreted with two meanings, one of them is that everyone who harms people will enter the fire, and the other is that everything that harms in the fire will harm its people from wild animals and vermin and other than that.

The Almighty said: Prepared for the disbelievers. It is more apparent that the pronoun in prepared refers to the Fire whose fuel is people and stones. It is possible that it refers to stones, as Ibn Masoud said. There is no contradiction between the two statements in meaning, because they are interrelated. Prepared means set aside and obtained for the disbelievers in God and His Messenger, as Ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Prepared for the disbelievers means for those who are like you in disbelief. Many of the imams of the Sunnah have used this verse as evidence that the Fire exists now, because the Almighty said: Prepared means set aside and prepared. Many hadiths have been narrated on this, including Paradise and Hell argued and Hellfire asked permission from its Lord and said, 'Lord, some of me consumes some of me.' So He gave it permission to take two breaths, one in the winter and one in the summer. The hadith of Ibn Masoud: We heard a meal, so we said, What is this? The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: This is a stone that was thrown from the edge of Hell seventy years ago and has now reached its bottom. It is in Muslim, and the hadith of the eclipse prayer and the Night of the Isra' and other hadiths that are transmitted in this meaning. The Mu'tazila disagreed with them due to their ignorance in this, and Judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id al-Baluti, the judge of Andalusia, agreed with them.

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah the like thereof and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

Warning to be noted

The Almighty's saying: Then bring a surah like it. And His saying in Surah Yunus 10: A surah like it includes every surah in the Qur'an, whether long or short, because it is indefinite in the context of the condition, so it is general as it is in the context of negation from the investigators of the principles of jurisprudence, as is established in its place. So the miracle is achieved in the long surahs and the short ones, and this is something that I do not know of any dispute among the people, past and present. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: If it is said that the Almighty's saying: Then bring a surah like it includes Surah Al-Kawthar and Surah Al-Asr, and Say, O you disbelievers, and we know by necessity that bringing something like it or something close to it is possible. If you say that bringing something like these surahs is beyond the capacity of humans, then it is stubbornness, and embarking on this stubbornness is something that brings accusation to the religion we say: For this reason we chose the second path and said that if these surahs reached the level of eloquence as a miracle, then the intended purpose has been achieved. If it was not so, then their refusal to oppose it despite the intensity of their motives to weaken his command was a miracle. So in both cases it is achieved. The miracle, this is its exact wording, and the truth is that every Surah of the Quran is a miracle that humans cannot oppose, whether it is long or short. Al-Shafi'i, may God have mercy on him, said, If people pondered this Surah, it would suffice them: "By the declining day. Indeed, mankind is in loss, Except for those who have believed and done righteous deeds and advised each other to truth and advised each other to patience." We have narrated on the authority of Amr ibn al-'As that he visited Musaylimah the Liar before he converted to Islam, and Musaylimah said to him: What was revealed to your companion in Mecca at this time? Amr said to him: A brief, eloquent Surah was revealed to him. He asked: What is it? He said: "By the declining day. Indeed, mankind is in loss." He thought for a moment, then raised his head and said: The same was revealed to me. He asked: What is it? He said: O wool, O wool, you are nothing but two ears and a chest, and the rest of you is insignificance and poverty. Then he said: What do you think, O Amr? Amr said to him: By God, you know that I know that you are lying.

Fath al-Qadir

23- In doubt meaning doubt about what We have sent down to Our servant: meaning the Qur'an that We sent down to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. The servant is taken from worship, which means humility. Revelation means gradualness and astrology. His saying: Then bring the fa is the answer to the condition, which is a command that means to make it impossible. When he argued with them with what proves monotheism and invalidates polytheism, he followed it with what is the proof of proving the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what removes doubt about the Qur'an being a miracle, so he challenged them to recite a surah from its surahs. The surah is a group of the Qur'an that is called by a specific name, so it is called that because it includes its words as the surahs of the country include them. And the min in His saying: of its like is redundant because of His saying: So bring a surah like it. The pronoun in its like refers to the Qur'an according to the majority of scholars. It was said: It refers to the Torah and the Gospel, because the meaning is: So bring a surah from a book like it, for it confirms what is in it. It was said: It refers to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the meaning of from a human being like Muhammad is: he neither writes nor reads. And martyrs is the plural of martyr, meaning present or one who bears witness or assists, and what is meant here is the gods. The meaning of below is: the lowest place of something, and it was expanded to the point that it was used to mean passing one thing to another, and from this is what is in this verse, and also the saying of God Almighty: Let not the believers take the disbelievers as allies instead of the believers and it has other meanings, including falling short of the goal and insignificance. It is said: This thing below: meaning insignificant, and from this:

If a person is high, he seeks the highest and is satisfied with the lowest

And the word closeness is said to mean this without that: meaning closer than it and it is a temptation. You say: here is Zaid: meaning take him from the lowest place. From without God is connected to call: meaning call on those who testify for you from without God if you are truthful in what you said that you are able to oppose. This is to make them incapable and to show their disconnection. And truthfulness is the opposite of lying, and it is the correspondence of the report to reality or to belief or to both according to the known disagreement in the science of semantics.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

23. And if you are in doubt meaning and if you are in doubt, because God Almighty knew that they were doubting about what We have sent down meaning the Qur'an upon Our servant Muhammad then bring a command to make it impossible "a surah" and the surah is a part of the Qur'an whose beginning and end are known from as'arta meaning preferred, the hamza was deleted, and it was said: the surah is the name of the high status / and from this the surah of the building due to its height it was called a surah because the reader attains a high status by reading it until he completes the stations by completing the surahs of the Qur'an of like it meaning like the Qur'an (of) is a connection, like the Almighty's saying: Tell the believing men to lower their gaze 30-An-Nur and it was said: the ha' in like it refers to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, meaning: who is like Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, who is illiterate and does not know how to write and write [Mahmoud said here of like it and not the rest of the surahs, because of the particle and this surah is the first of the Qur'an after the Fatiha, so he included of it to show that the challenge is applied to all the surahs of the Qur'an, and if he included of it in the rest of the surahs, the challenge would be It applies to all the chapters of the Qur'an. If the hidden part of the rest of the chapters were included, the challenge would apply to some of the chapters.

And call upon your witnesses meaning, seek help from your gods that you worship other than God. Mujahid said: people who will testify for you if you are truthful that Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, says it of his own accord. So when he challenged them, they were unable to do so, so he said:

Tafsir al-Baidawi

23-And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant, then produce a surah When He established His Oneness, the Most High, and explained the path leading to knowledge of it, He mentioned after that what is the proof of the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, which is the miraculous Qur'an with its eloquence that surpassed the eloquence of every logician and silenced those who were asked to oppose it from the most prominent orators of the Arabs, despite their great number and their excessive opposition and harm, and their rush to contradict and criticize, and he knew what would recognize its miraculousness and be certain that it is from God as he claims. Rather, he said, Of what We have sent down, because its revelation is a gradual process according to events, as the people of poetry and rhetoric see, which makes them doubt, as God has related about them, saying, And those who disbelieve say, 'Why was the Qur'an not sent down to him all at once?' So it was obligatory to challenge them in this manner, to remove doubt and to make the argument binding. The servant added to himself, the Most High, to draw attention to his mention, and to alert that he is specific to him and obedient to his flesh, the Most High. And it was read, Our servants, meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his nation. And the sura is a group from the translated Qur'an, the least of which is three verses, and if its waw is made original, it is transferred from the surah of Madinah because it encompasses a group of the Qur'an, separated and contained in its own way, or it contains types of knowledge as the surah of Madinah contains what is in it, or from the surahs that are the rank. An-Nabigha said:

And the group of spears and spears, a surah in glory, whose crow is not an airport

Because the surahs are like houses and ranks in which the reader ascends, the first of which are ranks in length, brevity, virtue, honor, and reward for reading. If it is made a substitute for the hamza, then it is from the surah that is the remainder and piece of something. The wisdom in dividing the Qur'an into surahs is to separate the types, the succession of forms, the correspondence of the systems, stimulating the reader, facilitating memorization, and encouraging it. For if he completes a surah, that same thing is removed from him, like a traveler who knows that he has traveled a mile or folded a post, and the memorizer, when he deletes it, believes that he has taken a complete portion of the Qur'an, and has won a limited group that is independent in itself, so that is great to him and he rejoices in it, and other benefits.

From the like of it is an attribute of a surah, meaning: with a surah like it. The pronoun refers to what We revealed, and from is for partiality or clarification. It is redundant according to Al-Akhfash, meaning: with a surah similar to the Noble Qur'an in eloquence and beautiful composition. Or for Our servant, and from is for beginning, meaning: with a surah from someone who is in the same state as him, peace and blessings be upon him, of being an illiterate human being who did not read books or learn sciences. Or the connection of bring, and the pronoun refers to the servant, may God bless him and grant him peace, and referring it back to the one who revealed it is more appropriate because it is consistent with the Almighty's saying Then bring a surah like it and with all the verses of challenge, and because the speech is about it and not about the one who revealed it, so it is right that it should not be separated from it in order for the arrangement and system to be consistent, and because addressing the great multitude to bring something like what one of their own kind has brought is more eloquent in the challenge than saying to them: Let him bring something like what this other one has brought, and because it is a miracle in itself, not in relation to it, because the Almighty said: "Say: If mankind and the jinn gathered to produce the like of this Qur'an, they could not produce the like of it", and because referring it back to Our servant suggests the possibility of it coming from someone who was not of its description, and it is not compatible with the Almighty's saying: And call upon your witnesses other than God, because it is a command to seek help from anyone who supports and assists them. And martyrs is the plural of martyr meaning present, or one who bears witness, or supporter or imam. It is as if it was named thus because he attends the clubs and matters are concluded in his presence, since the construction is for attendance, either in person or in imagination, and from this it was said: for the one killed in the way of God, a martyr because he attended what he hoped for, or the angels attended him. The meaning of below is the lowest place of something, and from this is the recording of books, because it is the bringing of some near to others, and below you is this, meaning: take it from the lowest place from you, then it was borrowed for ranks, so it was said: Zaid below Amr, meaning: in honor, and from this is the inferior thing, then it was expanded in it and used in every transgression of one limit to another and passing over one matter to another, God the Almighty said: Let not the believers take the disbelievers as allies instead of the believers meaning they do not exceed the guardianship of the believers to the guardianship of the disbelievers. Umayyah said:

And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our Servant, then produce a surah the like thereof and call upon your witnesses other than God, if you should be truthful.

O soul, you have no protector but God

That is, if you exceed the protection of God, then none but Him can protect you. From is related to call upon. The meaning is call upon to oppose those who are present with you, or whose help you hope from your humans, jinn, and gods, other than God, the Most High, for none is able to bring the like of it except God. Or: And call upon besides God witnesses who will testify for you that what you have brought is the same, and do not call upon God as a witness, for that is the way of the stunned who is unable to establish proof. Or with your witnesses, that is, those whom you have taken as allies and gods besides God, and you claimed that they will testify for you on the Day of Resurrection. Or those who will testify for you before God, the Most High, according to your claim, from the words of Al-A'sha:

She shows you the dirt without it, and it is without him

To help you, and in their matter, they use inanimate objects to oppose the Noble Qur'an, the ultimate in rebuke and mockery of them. It was said: other than God, meaning other than His saints, meaning the eloquent Arabs and prominent figures, to bear witness to you that what you have brought is like it, for the wise man is not satisfied to bear witness to the correctness of something whose corruption has become clear and whose disorder has become apparent.

If you are truthful is the speech of humans, and its answer is omitted and indicated by what preceded it. Truthfulness is the information that matches it. It was said: the belief of the informant that it is so based on evidence or indication, because the Almighty denied the hypocrites in their saying: You are the Messenger of God, because they did not believe in its matching, and it was responded by diverting the denial to their saying We bear witness, because the testimony is reporting what he knew and they did not know it.

But if you do not - and you will never be able to - then fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when they were unable to do that, the Most High said But if you do not what was mentioned because of your inability and you will never do that because of the manifestation of its miracle - objection - then fear by believing in God and that it is not the speech of humans the Fire whose fuel is men the disbelievers and stones like their idols from it, meaning extremely hot and ignites with what was mentioned, not like the fire of this world that is ignited with wood and the like prepared made ready for the disbelievers they will be tormented with it, a new sentence or a necessary state

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: God Almighty means by His statement: If you do not do so, if you do not produce a surah like it, then you have conspired against it, you and your partners and your helpers, and it has become clear to you through your testing and examination that you and all of My creation are incapable of doing so, and you have come to know that it is from Me, then you persist in denying it.

And his saying: And you will never do so, meaning you will never produce a surah like it.

As Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: If you do not do it and you will not do it, meaning you are not able to do it and you are not able to do it.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: If you do not do it - and you will never do it, then the truth has been made clear to you.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, meant by His saying, So fear the Fire, is that He says: So fear that you will reach the Fire by denying My Messenger what he brought to you from Me, that it is from My revelation and sending down, after you have made clear that it is My Book and from Me, and the proof has been established against you that it is My speech and My revelation, due to your inability and the inability of all My creation to produce anything like it.

Then He, the Most High, described the Fire that He warned them against entering, and informed them that people are its fuel, and that stones are its fuel, and He said: whose fuel is people and stones, meaning by His saying: its fuel its firewood, and the Arabs make it a verbal noun, and it is a noun, if you open the waw, like firewood. If you close the waw of fuel, it is a verbal noun from the saying of the speaker: And the fire was kindled, so it is kindled with fuel, kindling, and kindling, meaning that it is ignited.

If someone says: How were stones singled out and paired with people, so that they were made firewood for the fire of Hell?

It was said: They are sulfur stones, and they are the hottest stones, as far as we know, when heated.

Abu Kuraib also told us: Abu Muawiyah told us, on the authority of Misa'ar, on the authority of Abd al-Malik ibn Maysarah al-Zarrad, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Sabit, on the authority of Amr ibn Maymun, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, regarding his statement: Its fuel is men and stones, he said: They are stones of sulfur, which God created on the day He created the heavens and the earth in the lowest heaven, preparing them for the disbelievers.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Ibn Uyaynah told us, on the authority of Misa'ar, on the authority of Abd al-Malik al-Zarrad, on the authority of Amr bin Maymun, on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, regarding his statement: And its fuel is men and stones, he said: Sulphur stones, God made them as He willed.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Beware of the Fire whose fuel is people and stones. As for the stones, they are stones in the Fire made of black sulfur, with which they are tormented along with the Fire.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: Its fuel is men and stones, he said: Stones of black sulfur in the fire. He said: And Amr ibn Dinar said to me: Stones harder than these and greater.

Sufyan bin Wakee' told us: My father told us, on the authority of Misa'ar, on the authority of Abd al-Malik bin Maysarah, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman bin Sabit, on the authority of Amr bin Maimun, on the authority of Abdullah bin Mas'ud, who said: Stones of sulfur.

God created it as He wished and however He wished.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Prepared for the disbelievers.

We have previously demonstrated in this book that the unbeliever in the speech of the Arabs is the one who covers something with a covering, and that God, may He be glorified and praised, only called the unbeliever an unbeliever because of his denial of His favors to Him and his covering of His blessings before Him.

The meaning of His saying, If it is prepared for the disbelievers, is that the fire is prepared for those who deny that God is their Lord, the One who created them and those before them, who made the earth a bed for them, and the sky a structure, and sent down water from the sky and brought forth thereby fruits as provision for them, those who associate partners with Him in worshipping Him, and He is the One who is unique in creating them, and the One who is unique in providing sustenance and provisions.

As Ibn Hamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: It has been prepared for the disbelievers, meaning for those who are on the same level of disbelief as you are.

God Almighty says: But if you do not - and you will never be able to - then fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers.

The Almighty's saying: And if you do not means in the past, and you will not do it meaning you will be able to do it in the future. Stopping at this point at truthful is complete. A group of commentators said: The meaning of the verse is: And call upon your witnesses other than God if you are truthful and and you will not do it. If you do not do it, then fear the Fire. So according to this interpretation, stopping at truthful is not complete.

If it is said: How did in come before lam when an agent does not come before an agent? The answer is that in here is not an agent in the wording, so it came before lam as it comes before the past tense, because it does not work with lam as it does not work in the past tense. So the meaning of if you do not do is: if you leave the action.

The Almighty's saying: And you will not do so is in the accusative case with lan, and some Arabs use it in the subjunctive mood, as mentioned by Abu Ubaidah, and from it is the verse of Al-Nabigha:

I will not show my father the curse of the chains

In the hadith of Ibn Omar when he was taken to the fire in his sleep: It was said to me, You will not be afraid. This is according to that language. And in His saying, And you will not do it, it is to arouse their enthusiasm and stir their souls, so that their inability after that will be more wonderful. This is from the unseen matters that the Qur'an informed about before they happened. Ibn Kaysan said, And you will not do it is to stop them from believing that it is the truth, and that they are not truthful in what they claimed that it is a lie, and that it is fabricated and that it is magic and poetry, and that it is legends of the ancients, and they claim knowledge but do not produce a surah like them.

His saying: So fear the Fire is the answer to If you do not do so, meaning fear the Fire by believing in the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and obeying God Almighty. The meaning of piety has already been mentioned, so there is no point in repeating it. It is said: If Tamim and Asad are idle, then fear the Fire. Sibawayh narrated: Taqaa yataqi, like qada yaqdi. Fire: Mafulah. Layti is an adjective. There are three languages for it: Layti, "Lat" with a kasra on the ta' and Lat with a sukoon on it. It is an indefinite noun for the feminine and it is definite, and it is not permissible to remove the alif and lam from it for indefiniteness, and it is not complete except with a connection. There are also three languages for its dual: Lattan, "Latta" with the deletion of the nun, and Lattan with a shaddah on the nun. There are five languages for its plural: Latti, which is the language of the Qur'an; Lat with a kasra on the ta' without a ya'; Lawati with a shaddah on the nun; and Lawat without a ya'. Abu Ubaidah recited:

Of those who claimed that my self had grown old

And Al-Lawa with the omission of the ta', and this is what Al-Jawhari narrated. Ibn Al-Shajari added: Al-La'i with the hamza and the confirmation of the ya', Al-La' with the kasra of the hamza and the deletion of the ya', and Al-La with the deletion of the hamza. If you make the plural plural, you say in Al-Lati: Al-Lawati. And in Al-Lai: Al-Lawa'i. Al-Jawhari said: And the diminutive of Al-Layti is Al-Latiya with the fatha and the shaddah, the rajaz poet said:

After all the hardships and sufferings that if people suffer from them, they will perish.

Some poets added the letter of address to that, and the letters of address are not added to anything that contains the definite article except in our saying: O God, alone. So it is as if he likened it to Him in that the definite article was not separated from it, and he said:

For you, who has captured my heart, and you are stingy with your love for me

It is said: So-and-so fell into al-Latiya and al-Layti, and they are two names of the calamity. Fuel with the fat-ha: firewood. With the damma: kindling. People are general, and its meaning is specific to those who have been predestined to be firewood for it, may God protect us from it. The stones are black sulfur stones - according to Ibn Masoud and al-Farraa - and they were singled out for that because they exceed all other stones in five types of torment: rapid ignition, foul odor, abundant smoke, intense adhesion to bodies, and intense heat when heated. And in the words of God the Most High: Its fuel is people and stones - there is no evidence that there is nothing in it but people and stones, as evidenced by what He mentioned in more than one place about the jinn and devils being in it. And it was said: What is meant by stones are idols, because God the Most High said: Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell meaning firewood for Hell. Based on that, the stones and people are fuel for the fire, and this was mentioned to glorify the fire that it burns stones as it burns people. According to the first interpretation, they will be tormented with fire and stones. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Everyone who causes harm will be in the Fire. There are two interpretations of this verse: One is that everyone who harms people in this world will be punished by God in the Hereafter with fire. The second is that everything that harms people in this world, such as wild animals, vermin, etc., will be in the Fire as punishment for the people of the Fire. Some of the commentators have said that this Fire marked with stones is the Fire of the unbelievers in particular. And God knows best.

Muslim narrated on the authority of Al-Abbas bin Abdul Muttalib who said: I said: O Messenger of God, Abu Talib used to protect you and support you, did that benefit him? He said: Yes, I found him in the depths of the Fire, so I took him out to the shallows - in another narration - and had it not been for me, he would have been in the lowest depths of the Fire. Its fuel is the subject. People is its predicate. And the stones are in apposition to them. Al-Hasan, Mujahid, and Talhah bin Masraf read: Its fuel with a damma on the waw. Ubayd bin Umair read: And the people bound it. Al-Kisa'i and Al-Akhfash said: The fuel with a fatha on the waw is the firewood, and with a damma is the action. It is said: I lit the fire, igniting it, fueling it with a damma, and fueling, and fueling, and fueling, and fueling, meaning it was kindled. I ignited it and I also kindled it. Ignition is like ignition, and a place is ignited, like a council, and the fire is ignited. Waqdah: intense heat, which lasts for ten days or half a month. An-Nahhas said: According to this, it should not be read except waqooduha with an open waw because the meaning is its firewood, except for Al-Akhfash, who said: It was said that some Arabs make waqood and waqood mean firewood and the source. An-Nahhas said: He went to the first one more, he said: Just as ablution is water, and ablution is the source.

God the Almighty said: Prepared for the disbelievers. It appears that non-disbelievers will not enter it, but this is not the case, as evidenced by what they mentioned in more than one place regarding the threat to sinners and by the authentic hadiths about intercession, as will come. It is evidence for what the people of truth say, that Hell exists and was created, contrary to the innovators who say that it has not been created until now. This is the statement in which Judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id al-Baluti al-Andalusi fell. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: We were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he heard a crash, so the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Do you know what this is? We said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: This is a stone that was thrown into the Fire seventy years ago, and it is now falling into the Fire until it has reached its bottom. Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that he said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Hellfire and Paradise argued. One said: 'The tyrants and the arrogant will enter me.' The other said: 'The weak and the poor will enter me.' God, the Almighty, said to the one: 'You are My punishment; I punish with you whomever I will.' He said to the other: 'You are My mercy; I have mercy with you on whomever I will. Each of you will have its fill.'" Muslim narrated it with the same meaning. It is said that 'argued' means 'arguing', because of the hadith mentioned above, the hadith of Ibn Mas'ud, and because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was shown them in the eclipse prayer, and he also saw them during his Night Journey and entered Paradise. So there is no meaning to what contradicts that. And God is the Grantor of success. 'I prepared' may be a state of Hell in the sense of 'I prepared', and 'Qad' was implied with it, as He said: 'Or they came to you with their chests constricted', meaning their chests were constricted, so 'Qad' is implied with 'hasara' because the past tense can only be a state with 'Qad'. Based on this, the pause on 'al-Hijr' is not valid. It is possible that it is a statement disconnected from what preceded it, as He said: And that is your assumption which you assumed about your Lord that has ruined you. Al-Sijistani said: Prepared for the disbelievers is from the prayer of that, as He said in Al-Imran: And fear the Fire which has been prepared for the disbelievers. Ibn al-Anbari said: This is a mistake, because that in Surat al-Baqarah has been connected by His statement: whose fuel is people, so it is not permissible for it to be connected by a second connection, and in Al-Imran there is no connection other than prepared.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Then the Almighty proceeded to establish the prophethood after he had established that there is no god but Him, so he said, addressing the disbelievers: And if you are in doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant, meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, then produce a surah like what he brought, if you claim that it is from other than God, then oppose it with something like what he brought, and seek help in that from whomever you wish besides God, for you will not be able to do that. Ibn Abbas said: Your witnesses are your helpers. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik: Your partners, meaning other people who help you in that, meaning seek help from your gods in that, so they support you and aid you. Mujahid said: And call upon your witnesses, meaning people who testify to it, meaning eloquent rulers. God Almighty has challenged them with this in more than one place in the Qur'an, so he said in Surat al-Qasas 28: "Say: Then bring a book from God that is better guidance than both of them, so I will follow it, if you should be truthful." And he said in Surat al-Subhan: "Say: If mankind and the jinn gathered to produce the like of this And He said in Surat Hud 11: "Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it'? Say, 'Then bring ten surahs like it, fabricated, and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.'" And he said in Surat Yunus 10: "And this Qur'an could not have been fabricated by anyone other than God, but it is a confirmation of what was before it and a detailed explanation of the Scripture - there is no doubt about it - from the Lord of the worlds. Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it'? Say, 'Then bring a surah like it and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.'" And all of these verses are from Mecca. Then He challenged them with that in Medina as well, saying in this verse: And if you are in doubt meaning, doubt about what We have sent down upon Our servant meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, then bring a surah like it meaning like the Qur'an. This was said by Mujahid and Qatadah, and it was chosen by Ibn Jarir, al-Tabari, al-Zamakhshari, and al-Razi. He transmitted it from 'Umar, Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn 'Abbas, al-Hasan al-Basri, and most of the scholars. He preferred that with several aspects, the best of which is that He challenged them all, separately and together. Whether in that their illiterate and their scribes, and that is more complete than the challenge and more comprehensive than challenging one of them who is illiterate and does not know anything about sciences, and the evidence for that is the saying of the Most High: Then bring ten Surahs like it and His saying: They do not bring the like of it. And some of them said: "Who is like Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace," meaning from an illiterate man like him, and that is more correct, because the challenge is general to all of them even though they are the most eloquent of nations, and he challenged them with this in Mecca and Medina many times despite the intensity of their enmity towards him and their hatred for his religion, and despite this they were unable to do it, and for this reason the Most High said: But if you do not, and you will never do it, and you will never do it is to negate eternity in the future, meaning you will never do that, and this is also another miracle, which is that he informed with decisive, conclusive, and advanced report, not afraid or fearful, that this Qur'an will not be opposed by anything like it forever and ever, and the matter happened like that, it has not been opposed from its time until our time, and it is not possible, and how can that be possible for anyone when the Qur'an is the speech of God, the Creator of all things, and how is the speech of the Creator similar to the speech of the created, and whoever contemplates the Qur'an will find in it aspects The miracle is an apparent and hidden art in terms of wording and meaning. God Almighty said: "Alif, Lam, Ra. This is a Book whose verses are perfected and then presented in detail from One Who is Wise and Acquainted." So its words are perfected and its meanings are detailed, or vice versa, according to the disagreement. So each of its words and meanings is eloquent, without parallel or comparison. It has informed about past unseen events that were and occurred exactly as it was informed, and it has commanded all good and forbidden all evil, as God Almighty said: And the word of your Lord has been fulfilled in truth and justice. That is, truth in the report and justice in the rulings. So it is all truth, honesty, justice, and guidance, in which there is no risk, falsehood, or slander, as is found in the poetry of the Arabs and others, and the lies and risks that their poetry is not good without, as it was said about poetry that the sweetest of it is the most false. You will find that the long, extended poem has mostly been used to describe women, horses, wine, or to praise a specific person, horse, camel, war, creature, fear, beast, or something from the specific observations that do not benefit anything except the ability of the specific speaker to The hidden or subtle thing or its manifestation to the clear thing, then you find for it in it a house or two or more which are the houses of poetry and the rest of it is idle talk with no benefit under it, and as for the Qur'an, all of it is eloquent in the utmost extremes of eloquence for those who know that in detail and in summary from those who understand the speech of the Arabs and the forms of expression, for if you contemplate its report you will find it in the utmost sweetness whether it is extended or brief and whether it is repeated or not, and whenever it is repeated it becomes sweeter and higher, it does not become old from frequent repetition, and scholars do not get tired of it, and if it takes on threats and intimidation, it comes from it what makes the deaf and steadfast mountains tremble, so what do you think of the hearts of the understanding, and if it promises it comes with what opens the hearts and ears, and longs for the abode of peace and the proximity of the throne of the Most Merciful as he said in Al-Targhib No soul knows what has been hidden for them of comfort for the eyes as reward for what they used to do and he said: And therein is whatever the souls desire and the eyes delight in, and you will abide therein eternally and he said in Al-Tarhib: Do you then feel secure that a side of the land will not swallow you up? "Do you then feel secure?" And He said in the warning: So each one We seized for his sin. And He said in the preaching: Have you seen if We should grant them enjoyment for years? Then that which they were promised came to them? What they were enjoying will not avail them. And other types of eloquence, rhetoric, and sweetness. And if the verses came in the rulings, commands, and prohibitions, they included the command of every good, beneficial, good, and beloved good thing, and the prohibition of every ugly, vile, and base thing, as Ibn Masoud and others from the Salaf said. If you hear God the Most High say in the Qur'an: O you who have believed, then listen to it, for it is good that He commands or evil that He prohibits. For this reason, God the Most High said: "He enjoins upon them what is right and forbids them what is wrong, and He makes lawful for them the good things and prohibits for them the bad things, and He removes from them their burden and the shackles which were upon them." And if the verses came in describing the afterlife and the horrors in it and in describing Paradise, And the Fire and what God has prepared in it for His friends and enemies of bliss, hell, refuge and painful torment, it gave glad tidings of it, warned about it and warned about it, and called for doing good deeds and avoiding evil deeds, and renounced the world and desired the Hereafter, and remained steadfast on the best path, and guided to the straight path of God and His upright law, and removed from the hearts the filth of the accursed Satan. This is why it was proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, "On the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: 'There is no prophet among the prophets who was not given signs that people believed in the like of them. What I was given was only a revelation that God revealed to me, so I hope that I will have the most followers on the Day of Resurrection.'" - wording of Muslim - and his statement, may God bless him and grant him peace: What I was given was only a revelation means that what I was given was the one that distinguished me from among them, this miraculous Qur'an for people to oppose, unlike other divine books, which are not miraculous according to many scholars, and God knows best. And he, may God bless him and grant him peace, has signs that indicate his prophethood and his truthfulness in what he brought that are beyond counting, and praise and thanks be to God.

Some theologians have decided on the miracle in a way that includes the saying of the Sunnis and the saying of the Mu'tazila regarding the diversion, so he said: If this Qur'an is a miracle in itself and humans are unable to produce something like it and are not able to oppose it, then the claim has been made and is what is required. And if it is possible for them to oppose it with something like it and they did not do so despite their intense hostility towards it, then that is evidence that it is from God because He diverted them from opposing it despite their ability to do so. And this method, even if it is not satisfactory because the Qur'an is a miracle in itself and humans are unable to oppose it as we have decided, it is suitable for the purpose of concession, argumentation and defending the truth. And in this way, al-Razi answered in his interpretation his question about the short surahs such as al-'Asr and Inna a'naka al-Kawthar.

And the Almighty said: So fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers. As for the fuel, with the opening of the waw, it is what is thrown into the fire to ignite it, such as firewood and the like, as the Almighty said: And as for the unjust, they will be fuel for Hell. And the Almighty said: "Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell; you will be entering it. Had these been gods, they would not have entered it, and all therein will abide eternally." What is meant by stones here are the great, black, hard, stinking sulfur stones, and they are the hottest stones when heated, may God protect us from them. Abdul Malik bin Maysarah Al-Zarrad said on the authority of Abdul Rahman bin Sabit bin Amr bin Maymun on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud regarding the Almighty's statement: whose fuel is men and stones, he said they are stones of sulfur, created by God on the day He created the heavens and the earth in the lowest heaven, preparing them for the disbelievers. Narrated by Ibn Jarir and this is his wording, and Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Hakim in his Mustadrak, and he said it meets the conditions of the two sheikhs. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: Fear the Fire whose fuel is people and stones. As for the stones, they are black sulfur with which they will be tormented along with the Fire. Mujahid said: Stones of sulfur are more foul-smelling than a carcass. Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn 'Ali said: Stones of sulfur. Ibn Jurayj said: Stones of black sulfur in the Fire. 'Amr ibn Dinar said to me: Harder and greater than these stones. It was said that what is meant by them are the stones of idols and rivals that were worshipped instead of God, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hellfire 17:1. Al-Qurtubi and Al-Razi narrated this and preferred it over the first. He said that taking the Fire from stones of sulfur is not strange, so making them these stones is more appropriate. What he said is not strong, because if fire is lit with sulfur stones, its heat is more intense and its blazing is stronger, especially according to what the predecessors mentioned, that they are stones of sulfur prepared for that. Then the fire takes these stones as well, and this plaster is made into stones and is worked on with fire until it becomes like that. Likewise, all the stones are blown away by fire and burnt. This was only mentioned in the heat of this fire that they were promised, and the intensity of its blazing and the strength of its flames, as God the Almighty said: Every time it subsides, We increase their blazing. And thus Al-Qurtubi preferred that what is meant by it are the stones that are lit with fire to make it red and its flames intense, so that this would be a more severe punishment for its people. He said, and it came in the hadith from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: Everyone who harms people will enter the fire, and this hadith is not preserved or known. Then Al-Qurtubi said, and it has been interpreted with two meanings, one of them is that everyone who harms people will enter the fire, and the other is that everything that harms in the fire will harm its people from wild animals and vermin and other than that.

The Almighty said: Prepared for the disbelievers. It is more apparent that the pronoun in prepared refers to the Fire whose fuel is people and stones. It is possible that it refers to stones, as Ibn Masoud said. There is no contradiction between the two statements in meaning, because they are interrelated. Prepared means set aside and obtained for the disbelievers in God and His Messenger, as Ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Prepared for the disbelievers means for those who are like you in disbelief. Many of the imams of the Sunnah have used this verse as evidence that the Fire exists now, because the Almighty said: Prepared means set aside and prepared. Many hadiths have been narrated on this, including Paradise and Hell argued and Hellfire asked permission from its Lord and said, 'Lord, some of me consumes some of me.' So He gave it permission to take two breaths, one in the winter and one in the summer. The hadith of Ibn Masoud: We heard a meal, so we said, What is this? The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: This is a stone that was thrown from the edge of Hell seventy years ago and has now reached its bottom. It is in Muslim, and the hadith of the eclipse prayer and the Night of the Isra' and other hadiths that are transmitted in this meaning. The Mu'tazila disagreed with them due to their ignorance in this, and Judge Mundhir ibn Sa'id al-Baluti, the judge of Andalusia, agreed with them.

Warning to be noted

The Almighty's saying: Then bring a surah like it. And His saying in Surah Yunus 10: A surah like it includes every surah in the Qur'an, whether long or short, because it is indefinite in the context of the condition, so it is general as it is in the context of negation from the investigators of the principles of jurisprudence, as

But if you do not - and you will never be able to - then fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers.

is established in its place. So the miracle is achieved in the long surahs and the short ones, and this is something that I do not know of any dispute among the people, past and present. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: If it is said that the Almighty's saying: Then bring a surah like it includes Surah Al-Kawthar and Surah Al-Asr, and Say, O you disbelievers, and we know by necessity that bringing something like it or something close to it is possible. If you say that bringing something like these surahs is beyond the capacity of humans, then it is stubbornness, and embarking on this stubbornness is something that brings accusation to the religion we say: For this reason we chose the second path and said that if these surahs reached the level of eloquence as a miracle, then the intended purpose has been achieved. If it was not so, then their refusal to oppose it despite the intensity of their motives to weaken his command was a miracle. So in both cases it is achieved. The miracle, this is its exact wording, and the truth is that every Surah of the Quran is a miracle that humans cannot oppose, whether it is long or short. Al-Shafi'i, may God have mercy on him, said, If people pondered this Surah, it would suffice them: "By the declining day. Indeed, mankind is in loss, Except for those who have believed and done righteous deeds and advised each other to truth and advised each other to patience." We have narrated on the authority of Amr ibn al-'As that he visited Musaylimah the Liar before he converted to Islam, and Musaylimah said to him: What was revealed to your companion in Mecca at this time? Amr said to him: A brief, eloquent Surah was revealed to him. He asked: What is it? He said: "By the declining day. Indeed, mankind is in loss." He thought for a moment, then raised his head and said: The same was revealed to me. He asked: What is it? He said: O wool, O wool, you are nothing but two ears and a chest, and the rest of you is insignificance and poverty. Then he said: What do you think, O Amr? Amr said to him: By God, you know that I know that you are lying.

Fath al-Qadir

24- If you do not means in the past and you will not meaning you will be able to do so in the future and it becomes clear to you that you are unable to oppose, then fear the Fire by believing in God, His Books and His Messengers, and by performing His obligations and avoiding His prohibitions. He expressed the coming with the action because coming is an action for the purpose of brevity, and the sentence you will not do has no place in parsing because it is parenthetical, and lan is for the negation confirming what it entered into, and this is from the unseen things that the Qur'an informed about before they happened, because there was no opposition from any of the infidels in the days of the Prophethood and after it and until now. Fuel with the fat-ha: firewood, and with the damma: kindling, meaning the source, and it came in Al-Fath. What is meant by stones are the idols that they worshipped because they associated themselves with them in this world, so they were made fuel for the Fire with them. This is indicated by the Almighty's saying: Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell meaning firewood for Hell. It was said: What is meant by it are sulfur stones, and in this there is an intimidation that cannot be estimated, as this fire is kindled by people and stones, so it was kindled with the same thing that is intended to be burned by it, and what is meant by his saying: prepared is that it was made a provision for their punishment and was prepared for that. God the Almighty has repeatedly challenged the infidels with this in several places in the Qur'an, including this, and His statement in Surat al-Qasas 28: "Say, 'Then bring a book from God that is better guidance than both of them. I will follow it, if you should be truthful.'" And He said in Subhan: Say, 'If mankind and the jinn gathered in order to produce the like of this Qur'an, they could not produce the like of it, even if they were to each other assistants.' And He said in Surat Hud 11: Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it?' Say, 'Then bring ten surahs like it, fabricated, and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.' And He said in Surat Yunus 10: "This Qur'an could not have been fabricated by other than God, but it is a confirmation of what was before it and a detailed explanation of the Scripture - there is no doubt about it - from the Lord of the worlds. Or do they say, 'He has fabricated it.' Say, 'Then bring a surah like it and call upon whomever you can besides God, if you should be truthful.'"

There has been disagreement among scholars as to whether the miracle of the Qur'an is due to its being of a high level of eloquence beyond the capacity of human beings, or whether it is due to the inability to oppose it due to God Almighty's diversion for them to oppose it. The first is true, and the discussion of this is detailed in its proper places. Ahmad, Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Dala'il narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "There is no prophet among the prophets but that he was given something like it that people believed in. What I was given was only a revelation that God revealed to me, so I hope that I will have the largest number of followers on the Day of Resurrection." Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan regarding His statement: And if you are in doubt, he said: This is the statement of God to those disbelievers who doubted what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought. Abd Al-Razzaq, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding His statement: And if you are in doubt, he said: In doubt, of what We have sent down upon Our servant, then produce a surah like it, he said: Something like the Qur'an, true and honest, with no falsehood or lies in it. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Then produce a surah like it, he said: Something like the Qur'an, and call your witnesses, he said: People who will testify for you that it is like it when you bring it. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas

In His statement: Your witnesses, he said: Your helpers in what you are upon. But if you do not do it and you will not do it, the truth has been made clear to you. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah: But if you do not do it and you will not do it, meaning: You will not be able to do that and you will not be able to do it. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Mujahid that he used to read everything in the Qur'an as its fuel, raising the first waw, except for that in the heaven with the constellations, the fire with fuel, with the waw in the accusative case. Abd al-Razzaq, Sa'id bin Mansur, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, al-Tabarani in al-Kabir, and al-Hakim narrated it and authenticated it on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, who said: The stones that God mentioned in the Qur'an in His statement: its fuel is men and stones, are stones of sulfur that God created with Him as He willed. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Ibn Jarir also narrated something similar on the authority of Amr bin Maymun. Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shu'ab Al-Iman on the authority of Anas who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited this verse: 'Its fuel is men and stones.' He said: 'Its fire was kindled for a thousand years until it turned red, a thousand years until it turned white, and a thousand years until it turned black. So it is black and dark and its flame will not be extinguished.'" Ibn Abi Shaybah, Al-Tirmidhi, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, with a similar chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Ahmad, Malik, Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

He said: The fire of the children of Adam that you kindle is one part of seventy parts of the fire of Hell. They said: O Messenger of God, is that enough? He said: It is sixty-nine parts more than it, all of which are like its heat. At-Tirmidhi narrated with a similar chain of transmission on the authority of Abu Sa'id. Ibn Majah and Al-Hakim narrated with a similar chain of transmission on the authority of Anas. Malik narrated in Al-Muwatta' and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Ba'th on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: Do you see it as red like this fire of yours that you kindle? It is blacker than tar. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Prepared for the disbelievers, he said: That is, for those who are like you in disbelief.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

24. If you did not do it in the past and you will never do it in what remains. He only said that to clarify the miracle and that the Qur'an was a miracle for the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, as they were unable to produce anything like it. Then fear the Fire meaning believe and fear the Fire with faith. Whose fuel is men and stones Ibn Abbas and most of the commentators said that it means sulfur stones because they are more flammable, and it was said that it means all stones and it is evidence of the greatness of that fire. It was said that he meant idols because most of their idols were carved from stones as He said

Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell 98-Al-Anbiya Prepared was made ready

For the unbelievers.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

24- But if you do not - and you will not - then fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones. When He explained to them what they would recognize as the matter of the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and distinguished for them the truth from falsehood, He arranged for it what is like a summary of it, which is that if you strive to oppose it all by bringing what is equal to it or similar to it, a miracle will appear and belief in it is obligatory, so believe in it and fear the punishment prepared for those who deny, so He expressed the coming that is qualified by the action that includes coming and other things in a concise manner, and He lowered the necessary penalty to its status by way of writing, confirming what is implied, and intimidating the matter of the equipment, and stating the threat with the conciseness, and He began the conditional with that which is for doubt and the situation requires if which is for obligation, for the speaker, glory be to Him, was not doubting their inability, and therefore He denied their coming, interrupting between the condition and the penalty, mocking them and addressing them according to Their assumption, for the inability before contemplation was not confirmed for them. And tafa'alu is jussive with lam because it is obligatory to work and is specific to the present tense connected to the object, and because when it made it past it became like a part of it, and the conditional letter is like the one that enters the whole, so it is as if he said: If you leave the action, and therefore it is permissible for them to come together. Wlan both in negating the future, but it is more eloquent and it is a concise letter according to Sibawayh and Al-Khalil in one of the two narrations from him, and in the other narration its origin is la an, and according to Al-Farra' la so its alif was replaced with a noon, and the fuel with the fatha is what the fire is lit with, and with the damma the source and the source came with the fatha Sibawayh said: And we heard someone say I lit the fire with a high fuel, and the name with the damma and perhaps it is a source named by it as it was said: So-and-so is the pride of his people and the adornment of his country, and it was read with it and it appears that what is meant by it is the name, and if what is meant by it is the source then it is by deleting the added meaning: its fuel is the burning of people, and the stones: it is the plural of stone. Like Jamalah, the plural of Jamal, which is a small and immeasurable word. What is meant by it are the idols that they carved and associated themselves with and worshipped, hoping for their intercession, benefiting from them, and warding off harm due to their status. This is what God Almighty said: Indeed, you and what you worship besides God are fuel for Hell. They were punished for what was the source of their crime, just as the disbelievers were punished for what they hoarded. Or with the opposite of what they expected, to increase their regret. It was said: the gold and silver that they hoarded and were deceived by. Based on this, there was no reason to specify the preparation of this type of punishment for the disbelievers. It was said: sulfur stones, which is a specification without evidence and nullifying the intended meaning, since the purpose is to exaggerate its status and intensify its flames so that it ignites with what nothing else ignites, and sulfur is what ignites every fire, no matter how weak it is. If this is authentic from Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, then perhaps he meant by it that all stones are for that fire, like sulfur stones are for all other fires. Since the verse was revealed in Medina after the verse in Surat At-Tahrim, A Fire whose fuel is men and stones, was revealed in Mecca. They heard it, so the definition of fire was correct. The occurrence of the sentence as a connection to its opposite, so it must be a known story.

But if you do not - and you will never be able to - then fear the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, prepared for the disbelievers.

Prepared for the disbelievers I prepared for them and made provision for their punishment. It was read: I prepared from al-'itad meaning the provision. The sentence is a resumption, or a state with the omission of qad from the fire, not the pronoun in wajduha its fuel, even if you make it a source to separate between them with the report. In the two verses there is what indicates prophethood from aspects:

The first: What they contain of challenge and incitement to seriousness and doing one's best in opposition through rebuke and threat, and suspending the threat on not bringing anything that opposes the shortest surah of the Qur'an. Then: despite their large numbers and their fame for eloquence and their eagerness to oppose, they did not confront it, they resorted to leaving the homeland and sacrificing their lives.

Second: They include information about the unseen as it is. If they opposed it with something, its concealment would usually be impossible, especially since those who attack it are more numerous than those who defend it in every era.

Third: If he, may God bless him and grant him peace, had doubted his matter, he would not have called them to oppose him with this exaggeration, for fear that he would oppose and his argument would be refuted. And the Almighty's saying: Prepared for the disbelievers indicates that the Fire was created and is now prepared for them.

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, This is what we were provided with before. And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds, obligatory and voluntary, that they will have gardens, gardens with trees and dwellings, with rivers flowing beneath them, that is, beneath their trees and palaces. The river is the place where the water flows, it digs it, and attributing the flow to it is a metaphor. Whenever they are provided with fruit from it, they will say, This is what we were provided with before, that is, before it in Paradise, because its fruits resemble its counterpart. And they will be brought with it, that is, they will be brought with the provision, similar, resembling one another in color but differing in taste. And they will have therein spouses, from the houris and others, purified, from menstruation and all impurity. And they will abide therein forever, remaining forever, never perishing or leaving. It was revealed in response to the Jews' statement when God gave the example of the fly in His statement: {And if the fly should steal something from them} and the spider in His statement: {Like the spider}. God did not mean by mentioning these vile things, so God revealed:

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: As for the Almighty's saying: And give good tidings, it means: inform them. And the origin of good tidings is the report of what pleases the informant, if he preceded it with every informant other than him.

This is an order from God the Most High to His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, to convey His glad tidings to His creation who believed in him, and in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from his Lord, and who were true to their faith and acknowledged it through their righteous deeds. So He said to him: O Muhammad, give glad tidings to whoever believes you that you are My Messenger and that what you have brought of guidance and light is from Me, and who confirms his belief in that by word by doing the righteous deeds that I have made obligatory upon him and made obligatory in My Book on your tongue that he will have gardens beneath which rivers flow, in particular, without the one who disbelieved in you and denied what you have brought him of guidance from Me and opposed you, and without the one who showed his belief in you and acknowledged that what you have brought him is from Me in word, and denied it in belief, and did not confirm it in action. Then for those, the Fire whose fuel is men and stones, is prepared with Me.

Gardens: plural of garden, and garden: orchard.

Rather, what He, the Most High, meant by mentioning Paradise is what is in Paradise of its trees, fruits, and plants, not its land. That is why He, the Most High, said: Undereath it rivers flow. Because it is known that He, the Most High, intended to inform about the water of its rivers, that it flows under its trees, fruits, and plants, not that it flows under its land. Because if the water flows under the ground, then there is no share in it for those above it except by uncovering the barrier between them and it. However, what the rivers of Paradise are described with is that they flow in other than trenches.

Abu Kuraib told us: Al-Ashja'i told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Amr ibn Murrah, on the authority of Abu Ubaidah, on the authority of Masruq, who said: The palm trees of Paradise are arranged in rows from their roots to their branches, and their fruit is like jugs. Whenever a fruit is plucked, another one takes its place, and its water flows in a groove other than a furrow.

Mujahid bin Musa told us: Yazid told us: Misa'ar bin Kadam told us, on the authority of Amr bin Marra, on the authority of Abu Ubaidah, something similar.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Ibn Mahdi told us: Sufyan told us: I heard Amr bin Murrah narrating, on the authority of Abu Ubaidah, and he mentioned something similar. He said: So I said to Abu Ubaidah: Who told you? He became angry and said: Masruq.

If this is the case, that its rivers flow in other than trenches, then there is no doubt that what is meant by the gardens is the trees of the gardens, their plants and their fruits, not their land, since their rivers flow above their land and beneath their plants and trees, as Masruq mentioned. This is more fitting of the description of the garden than its rivers flowing beneath its land.

God Almighty, with this verse, encouraged His servants to believe and urged them to worship Him by what He informed them that He had prepared for those who obey Him and believe in Him, just as He warned them in the verse before it by what He informed them of what He had prepared for those who disbelieved in Him, who made gods and rivals with Him, of His punishment for associating others with Him, and exposing themselves to His punishment by committing His disobedience and abandoning His obedience.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Whenever they are provided with a fruit therefrom as provision, they say, 'This is what we were provided with before.' And they are given something similar.

Abu Ja'far said: God Almighty means by His statement: Whenever they are provided with provision therefrom: from the gardens, and the ha refers back to the gardens, but what is meant is their trees, so it is as if He said: Whenever they are provided with provision from the trees of the gardens that God has prepared for those who believe and do righteous deeds in His gardens from a fruit from its fruits, they say: This is what we were provided with before.

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

Then the people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of his saying: This is what He provided for us before.

Some of them said: The interpretation of that is: This is what we were provided with before this in this world.

Mention of the one who said that: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, they said: This is what we were provided with before, he said: They were brought the fruit in Paradise, and when they looked at it they said: This is what we were provided with before in the world.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: They said, 'This is what we were provided with before,' meaning in this world.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: "They said: This is what we were provided with before," they said: How similar it is to him.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said: "They said: This is what we were provided with before," in this world. He said: And they brought it in a similar form, they knew it.

Abu Ja'far said: Others said: Rather, the interpretation of that is: This is what we were provided with from the fruits of Paradise before this, due to the great similarity of some of them in color and taste to others. And among the reasons for those who say this statement is that whenever something is taken from the fruits of Paradise, something similar to it is returned in its place.

Ibn Bashar told us: Ibn Mahdi told us: Sufyan told us: I heard Amr ibn Marra narrating, on the authority of Abu Ubaidah, who said: The palm trees of Paradise are arranged in rows from their roots to their branches, and their fruit is like jars. Whenever a fruit is taken from them, another one returns in its place.

They said: It was confused for the people of Paradise because the one that returned is similar to the one that was taken away and eaten, in all its meanings. They said: That is why God, the Most High, said: And they will bring it similar, because all of it is confused in all its meanings. Some of them said: Rather, they said: This is what we were provided with before, because it is similar to the one before it in color, even though it differs from it in taste.

Who said that: Al-Qasim bin Al-Hussain narrated to us, he said: Al-Hussain bin Dawud narrated to us, he said: An old man from Al-Masisa narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Awza'i, on the authority of Yahya bin Abi Katheer, he said: One of them will be brought a plate and he will eat from it, then he will be brought another and he will say: This is what we were brought before. The angel will say: Eat, for the color is the same but the taste is different. This interpretation is the doctrine of those who interpreted the verse. However, its correctness is refuted by the apparent meaning of the recitation. What indicates its correctness is the apparent meaning of the verse and confirms its correctness is the saying of those who say: The meaning of that is: This is what we were provided with before in this world. That is because God, the Most High, said: Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, so He, the Most High, informed that what the people of Paradise will say, whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit from Paradise, is: This is what we were provided with before. And He did not specify that this is what they said about some of it and not others. So since He, the Most High, has informed us about them that this is what they said about everything they were provided with from its fruits, then there is no doubt that this is what they said about the first provision they were provided with from its fruits, which they brought after they entered Paradise and settled in it, which they did not precede from its fruits with any fruit. So since there is no doubt that this is what they said at the beginning, as it is what they said in its middle and what follows it, then it is known that it is impossible for it to be what they said about the first provision they were provided with from the fruits of Paradise: This is what we were provided with before this from the fruits of Paradise. And how is it permissible for them to say about the first provision they were provided with from its fruits, when there is something else that preceded it with them: This is what we were provided with before? Unless someone with a false purpose or misguidance attributes them to the false statement from which God has purified them, or someone claims that this is what they said about the first provision they were provided with from its fruits, then he rejects the validity of what God has made valid by His statement: Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit from it, without the accusative, indicating that it is meant by it a state of their states and not a state.

It has become clear from what we have explained that the meaning of the verse is: Whenever those who believe and do righteous deeds are provided with a fruit from the fruits of Paradise in Paradise, they will say: This is what we were provided with before this in the world.

If someone asked us, saying: How could the people say: This is what we were provided with before, and what they were provided with before has ceased to exist because they ate it? And how is it possible for the people of Paradise to say something that has no truth to it?

It was said: The matter is not as you have gone in that. Rather, its meaning is: This is from the type that We provided for him before this, from fruits and provisions. Like a man who says to another: So-and-so has prepared for you such-and-such food of various types of cooked food, grilled food, and sweets. So the one to whom that is said says: This is my food in my house. He means by that: The type of food that his companion mentioned to him that he prepared for him is his food, not that the substance of what his companion told him that he had prepared for him is his food. Rather, that is something that it is not permissible for a listener who hears him say that to imagine that he meant or intended it, because that is contrary to the way the speaker speaks. Rather, the speech of every speaker is directed to what is known among people from its ways of speaking, not to its unknown meanings. So it is the same in His statement: They said, 'This is what We provided for before,' since what they had been provided for before had vanished and ceased to exist. So it is known that they meant by that: This is from the type that We provided for us before, and from its kind in characteristics and colors, as we have explained in the statement about that in this book of ours.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And they brought it in a similar form.

Abu Jaafar said: The letter ha in his statement: And they bring it similar refers to the provision, so its interpretation is: And they bring what they were provided with of its fruits similar.

The interpreters differed in their interpretation of the ambiguous verses in this regard. Some of them said: Its ambiguous verses mean that all of it is good and there is no bad in it.

Mention of those who said that: Khallad bin Aslam told us, he said: An-Nadhr bin Shumayl told us, he said: Abu Amer told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding his statement: similar; he said: All of them are good, with no bad in them.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Ibn Ulayyah told us, on the authority of Abu Raja': Al-Hasan recited verses from Surat Al-Baqarah, and he came to this verse: And they bring it in a form similar to it. He said: Have you not seen the fruits of this world and how you despise some of it? And there is nothing despised in that.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, he said: Al-Hasan said: And they brought it in a similar form, he said: Some of it resembles some of it, there is nothing bad in it.

Bishr told us, he said: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: And they will bring it in a similar form, meaning good, with no bad in it. The fruits of this world are purified and some of them are bad, but the fruits of Paradise are all good, with nothing bad in them.

Al-Qasim told us: Al-Hussein told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: The fruit of this world includes what is bad and what is pure, and the fruit of Paradise is all pure, some of it resembles others in its goodness, and there is none of it that is bad.

Some of them said: It is similar in color but different in taste.

It was mentioned that he said that: Musa told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And they brought it similar, in color and appearance, but it did not resemble the taste.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And they brought it in a similar form, like the cucumber.

Al-Muthanna told us: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And they brought it, similar in color but different in taste, like a cucumber from a gourd.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas: And they brought it in a similar form, some of it resembles others but the taste differs.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Al-Thawri told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: similar; he said: similar in color, and different in taste.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: And they brought it in a similar form, like the choice.

Some of them said: It is similar in color and taste.

Mention of those who said that: Ibn Wakee' told us, he said: My father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, his statement: similar he said: color and taste.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, on the authority of al-Thawri, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid and Yahya ibn Sa'id: similar, they said: in color and taste.

Some of them said: It is similar, as the fruit of Paradise and the fruit of this world are similar in color, even if their tastes differ.

Mention of those who said that: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada:

And they brought it similar, he said: It resembles the fruit of this world, except that the fruit of Paradise is better.

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Hafs bin Umar said, he said: Al-Hakam bin Abaan told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, regarding his statement: And they will bring it in a similar form, he said: It resembles the fruits of this world, except that the fruits of Paradise are better. And some of them said: Nothing in Paradise resembles anything in this world, except the names.

Those who said that: Abu Kurayb told me, he said: Al-Ashja'i told us, and Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, he said: Mu'ammil told us, they both said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu Dhiyban, on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Abu Kurayb said in his hadith on the authority of Al-Ashja'i: Nothing in Paradise resembles what is in this world, except the names. And Ibn Bashir said in his hadith on the authority of Mu'ammil, he said: There is nothing in this world that is in Paradise except the names.

Abbas bin Muhammad told us: Muhammad bin Ubaid told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu Dhiyban, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: There is nothing in this world of Paradise except the names.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, saying: Ibn Wahb informed us, saying: Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd said, regarding His statement: And they will be given it in a similar form, he said: They will know its names as they were in the world, apples for apples and pomegranates for pomegranates. They will say in Paradise: This is what we were provided with before, in the world, and they will be given it in a similar form, they will know it, but it is not the same in taste.

Abu Ja'far said: The most appropriate of these interpretations of the verse is the interpretation of the one who said: And they will be brought with it similar in color and appearance, but different in taste. He means by that the similarity of the fruit of Paradise and the fruit of this world in appearance and color, but different in taste and taste, for what we have presented of the reason for the interpretation of His statement: Whenever they are provided with a fruit therefrom as provision, they say, 'This is what we were provided with before.' And that its meaning is: Whenever they are provided with a fruit from the fruits of Paradise as provision, they say, This is what we were provided with before, this is in this world. So God, the Most High, informed us about them that they said that, and because they brought what they brought of it in Paradise similar, he means by that the similarity of what they brought in Paradise from it, and what they were provided with in this world, in color, appearance and appearance, even if they differ in taste and taste, so they are different, so nothing in Paradise has a counterpart in this world.

We have demonstrated the corruption of the statement of those who claim that the meaning of His statement, They said, 'This is what We were provided with before,' is only a statement by the people of Paradise in their likening some fruits of Paradise to others. That proof of the corruption of that statement is the proof of the corruption of the statement of those who disagree with our statement in the interpretation of His statement, And they bring it in a similar form, because God, may He be glorified, only informed about the meaning for which the people said, This is what We were provided with before, by His statement, And they bring it in a similar form.

And he who denies this is asked, and claims that it is not permissible for anything in Paradise to be similar to anything in this world in any way, and he is asked: Is it permissible for the names of the fruits, foods, and drinks in Paradise to be similar to the names of the things in this world?

If he denies this, he has contradicted the text of the Book of God, because God, may He be glorified and exalted, only made known to His servants in this world what is with Him in Paradise by the names by which what is in this world is called.

And if he said: That is permissible, then it is so.

It was said: Why do you not deny that the colors of what is in it are similar to the colors of what is in this world, meaning whiteness, redness, yellowness, and all other types of colors, even if they differ and are differentiated by virtue of the beauty of the mirror and the view, so that what is in Paradise of that of splendor and beauty and the beauty of the mirror and the view is different from what is in this world of it, just as it was permissible in the names with the difference in the names by virtue of the body? Then the statement in that is reversed on him, so he will not say something about one of them except that he will impose the same in the other.

Abu Musa al-Ash'ari used to say about that what: Ibn Bashir told me, he said: Ibn Abi Uday, Abd al-Wahhab, and Muhammad ibn Ja'far told us, on the authority of Awf, on the authority of Qasama, on the authority of al-Ash'ari, he said: When God expelled Adam from Paradise, He provided him with fruits from Paradise, and taught him how to make everything, so these fruits of yours are from the fruits of Paradise, except that these change and those do not.

Some Arabists have claimed that the meaning of his saying: And they brought it similar, is that it is similar in merit, meaning that each one of them has merit in its kind, like that of the other in its kind.

Abu Ja'far said: This is not a statement that we consider permissible to be preoccupied with indicating its corruption, because it departs from the statement of all the scholars of the people of interpretation. It is sufficient to say that its departure from the statement of all the people of knowledge is an indication of its error.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And they will have therein purified spouses.

Abu Jaafar said: The ha and the mim in lahum refer to those who believed and did righteous deeds, and the ha and the alif in fiha refer to the gardens. The interpretation of that is: And give good tidings to those who believed and did righteous deeds that they will have gardens in which there are purified spouses.

Awjaw is the plural of zawj, which is a man's wife. It is said: so-and-so is the husband of so-and-so and his wife.

As for his saying: purified, its interpretation is that they are purified from every harm, filth, and suspicion that occurs in the women of this world, such as menstruation, postpartum bleeding, feces, urine, mucus, saliva, semen, and the like of harm, filth, suspicion, and unpleasant things.

As Musa bin Harun told us, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: As for the wives of purified women, they do not menstruate, nor do they urinate, nor do they spit.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abdullah bin Saleh told us: Muawiyah bin Saleh told us, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: purified spouses. He said: purified from filth and harm.

Muhammad bin Bashar told us: Yahya al-Qattan told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And they will have therein purified spouses. He said: They will not urinate, defecate, or ejaculate.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar, except that he added to it: nor should he swear an oath nor should he menstruate.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God Almighty: And they will have therein purified spouses, he said: Purified from menstruation, feces, urine, phlegm, saliva, semen, and children.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Suwaid bin Nasr told us: Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Al-Thawri told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: They do not urinate, defecate, menstruate, give birth, ejaculate, or spit.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similar to the hadith of Muhammad ibn Amr, on the authority of Abu Asim.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: And they will have therein purified spouses, yes, by God, from sin and harm.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And they will have therein purified spouses, he said: God purified them from all urine, feces, and filth, and from all sin.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Qatada, who said: Purified from menstruation, pregnancy, and harm.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Layth, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The one who is purified from menstruation and pregnancy.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd: And they will have therein purified spouses. He said: The purified ones are those who do not menstruate. He said: And the spouses of this world are not pure. Do you not see them bleeding and abandoning prayer and fasting? Ibn Zayd said: And Eve was created like this until she disobeyed. When she disobeyed, God said: I created you pure and I will make you bleed as I made this tree bleed.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', on the authority of al-Hasan, regarding his statement: And they will have therein purified spouses, he said: He says: Purified from menstruation.

Amr bin Ali told us: Khalid bin Yazid told us: Abu Jaafar Al-Razi told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding his statement: And they will have therein purified spouses, he said: from menstruation.

Amr told us, he said: Abu Muawiyah told us, he said: Ibn Jurayj told us, on the authority of Ata', his statement: And they will have therein purified spouses, he said: from children, menstruation, feces, and urine, and he mentioned things of this sort. The statement in the interpretation of his statement: And they will abide therein eternally.

Abu Jaafar said: God Almighty means by that: And those who believe and do righteous deeds will abide in Paradise.

The ha and the mim in his statement and they refer to those who believed and did righteous deeds. The ha and the alif in therein refer to the gardens. And their eternity in it refers to their perpetual stay in it based on what God has given them in it of joy and lasting bliss.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have

Surat al-Baqarah 2:25

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a fruit therefrom as provision, they will say, 'This is what we were provided with before.' And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally."

First: When God the Almighty mentioned the reward of the disbelievers, He also mentioned the reward of the believers. And giving good tidings is informing about what appears on the skin - which is the surface of the skin - to change with the first piece of report that comes to you. Then it is mostly used in joy, restricted to the good that is given good tidings, and also without restriction. And it is not used in sorrow and evil except restricted and explicitly stating the evil that is given good tidings. God the Almighty said: Then give them good tidings of a painful punishment. And it is said: Bisharatuhu and Bisharatuhu - light and heavy - Bishara with a kasra on the ba so be glad and be happy. And Bishara yabshir if he is happy. And a face that is good between Bishara with a fatha on the ba. And Bishara is what the giver of good tidings is given. And Bashira of something is its beginning.

Second: The scholars agreed that if the person responsible says: Whoever among my slaves gives me good report of such-and-such is free, and one or more of his slaves gives him good report, the first of them is free but not the second. They differed if he says: Whoever among my slaves tells me such-and-such is free, is the second like the first? The companions of al-Shafi'i said: Yes, because each one of them is an informant. Our scholars said: No, because the person responsible only intended to give good report, and that is specific to the first, and this is known by custom, so the statement must be directed to him. Muhammad ibn al-Hasan distinguished between his saying: He told me, or He told me, and said: If a man says: Which slave of mine told me such-and-such, or He informed me of such-and-such, then he is free—and he has no intention—and a slave of his tells him that by letter, speech, or messenger, then the slave is freed, because this is report. If a slave of his tells him after that, he is freed, because he said: Which slave of mine told me, then he is free. Even if they all told him, they would be freed. But if he meant - when he swore - the report verbally, not one of them would be freed unless he told him that report verbally. He said: And if he said, Which boy of mine told me? then this is verbal, and not one of them would be freed.

Third: The Almighty's statement: And they did righteous deeds is a response to those who say: Faith alone requires acts of obedience, because if that were the case, he would not have repeated them. Paradise is attained through faith and righteous deeds. It was said: Paradise is attained through faith, and ranks are earned through righteous deeds. And God knows best.

That they have is in the accusative case with beshara, and the meaning is: give good tidings to those who believe that they have, or because they have, so when the preposition was dropped, the verb worked. Al-Kisa'i and a group of Basrans said: That is in the accusative case with the implied ba.

Janāt is in the accusative case as the subject of an, and an and what it works on are in the second object. Janāt are orchards, and they are called Janāt because they protect those in them, i.e. they conceal them with their trees. From this comes the words al-majn the shield, al-jann the fetus, and al-jannah the paradise.

Tajar is in the position of an adjective for Jannat, and it is in the nominative case, because it is a future tense verb, so the damma was deleted from the ya because it is heavy with it.

From beneath it means from beneath its trees, and it was not mentioned because the gardens refer to it.

Rivers means river water. The flow was attributed to rivers as an extension, but only water flows, so it was omitted for brevity, as God Almighty said: And ask the town meaning its people. And the poet said:

I was informed that the fire was lit after you, and the council was closed after you, O Kulayb.

He meant: the people of the council, but he deleted it. The river: is taken from the word anharat, meaning it expanded, and from it is the saying of Qais bin Al-Khatim:

I held it in my hand and it flowed, and I saw what was behind it standing without it.

Its breadth, describing a stab wound. And from this is the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

Whatever the blood flows over and the name of God has been mentioned over it, eat it. Meaning: Whatever the slaughtering has allowed the blood to flow like a river. The plural of river is rivers and rivers. And its river is river: abundant in water. Abu Dhu'ayb said:

She stayed there and built a tent on the reeds of the Euphrates River.

It was narrated that the rivers of Paradise are not in grooves, but rather they flow on the surface of Paradise, controlled by power, wherever its people will. Stopping at the rivers is good, but not complete, because His statement, Whenever they are provided with fruit therefrom, is a description of the Paradise.

Rizqan is its source, and we have already discussed the provision. The meaning of min Qabl means in this world, and there are two aspects to this: One of them is that they said: This is what we were promised in this world. The second is: This is what we were pleased with in this world, because its color is similar to the color of the fruits of this world, so when they eat, they will find its taste different from that. It was said: Min Qabl means in Paradise because they are provided for and then provided for, so when they are brought food and fruits at the beginning of the day and eat from them, then they are brought from them at the end of the day, they say: This is what we were provided for before, meaning He fed us at the beginning of the day, because its color is similar to that, so when they eat from it, they will find its taste different from the taste of the first.

And they came is a verb derived from I came. The group read it with a damma on the hamza and the taa. Harun al-Aawar read And they came with a fatha on the hamza and the taa. So the pronoun in the first reading refers to the people of Paradise, and in the second it refers to the servants.

Its similarity is a state of the pronoun in it, meaning that some of it resembles others in appearance but differs in taste. This was said by Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Al-Hasan and others. Ikrimah said: It resembles the fruits of this world and differs from it in most of its characteristics. Ibn Abbas: This is by way of astonishment, and there is nothing in this world that is in Paradise except the names, so it is as if they were astonished at what they saw of the beauty of the fruit and the magnificence of its creation. Qatada said: The best, with no bad in it, like the Almighty's saying: A Book that is similar and it is not like the fruits of this world that are not similar, because in it there is good and not good.

And they will have spouses therein is subject and predicate. Spouses: plural of spouse. A woman: a man's spouse. A man: a woman's spouse. Al-Asma'i said: The Arabs hardly ever say wife. Al-Farra' narrated that it is said: wife. Al-Farazdaq recited:

He who seeks to corrupt my wife is like a seeker after a lion that seeks to seize her.

Ammar bin Yasir said about Aisha, the Mother of the Believers, may God be pleased with her: By God, I know that she is his wife in this world and the hereafter, but God has tested you. It was mentioned by Al-Bukhari, and Al-Kisa'i chose it.

Purified is an adjective for spouses. In the language, purified is more comprehensive than pure and more eloquent. The meaning of this purity is from menstruation, spitting, and all other human impurities. Abd al-Razzaq said, "Ath-Thawri told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Purified." He said, They do not urinate, defecate, give birth, menstruate, ejaculate, or spit. We have already discussed all of this in the description of the people of Paradise, the description of Paradise, and its delights in the Book of Remembrance. Praise be to God.

And they will abide therein eternally. They is the subject. Immortal is its predicate, and the adverb is omitted. It is permissible in places other than the Qur'an to put immortal in the accusative case as a state. Eternity means permanence, and from this comes the word Paradise of eternity. It may also be used metaphorically for something that is long, and from this comes their saying in supplication: May God make his kingdom eternal, meaning its length. Zuhair said:

I do not see anything lasting or eternal in the events except the steadfast mountains.

As for what is in the verse, it is truly eternal.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

When God Almighty mentioned what He had prepared for His enemies from the wretched disbelievers in Him and His messengers of torment and punishment, He followed it up by mentioning the state of His friends from the happy believers in Him and His messengers who confirmed their faith with their righteous deeds. This is the meaning of calling the Qur'an Mathani according to the most correct of the scholars' statements, as we will explain in its place, which is that faith is mentioned and followed by disbelief or its opposite, or the state of the happy ones then the wretched ones or its opposite. The gist of it is mentioning a thing and its opposite. As for mentioning a thing and its counterpart, that is the similarity as we will explain, God willing. That is why God Almighty said:

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. So He described them as having rivers flowing beneath them, meaning beneath their trees and rooms. It was mentioned in the hadith: that its rivers flow without a groove. It was mentioned in Al-Kawthar that its two edges are domes of hollow pearls, and there is no contradiction between them. Its clay is the most fragrant musk, and its pebbles are pearls and jewels. We ask God for His grace, for He is the Most Kind, the Most Merciful. Ibn Abi Hatim said: He read to Al-Rabi' bin Sulayman, Asad bin Musa told us, Abu Thawban told us, on the authority of Ata' bin Qurrah, on the authority of Abdullah bin Damrah, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The rivers of Paradise gush forth from hills or from beneath mountains of musk. He also said: Abu Saeed told us, Waki' told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Abdullah bin Murrah, on the authority of Masruq, who said: Abdullah said: The rivers of Paradise gush forth from a mountain of musk.

And the Almighty's saying: Whenever they are provided with a fruit therefrom as provision, they say, 'This is what we were provided with before.' Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, they said, This is what we were provided with before. He said that they were brought the fruit in Paradise and when they looked at it they said, This is what we were provided with before in the world. And this is what Qatada, Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam, and Nasra ibn Jarir said. And Ikrimah said, They said, 'This is what we were provided with before.' He said that its meaning is like what was yesterday, and this is what al-Rabi' ibn Anas said. Mujahid said: They say: What is similar to it? Ibn Jarir said: Others said: Rather, the interpretation of what we were provided with before is the fruits of Paradise before this, due to the strong similarity of some of it to others, as God Almighty said: And they will be given it in a similar state. Sunayd ibn Dawud said: A sheikh from the people of Misyisa told us, on the authority of Al-Awza'i, on the authority of Yahya ibn Abi Katheer, who said: One of them will be given a plate of something and he will eat from it, then he will be given another and he will say: This is what we were given before, and the angels will say: Eat, for the color is the same but the taste is different. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Saeed bin Sulaiman told us, Amer bin Yasaf told us, on the authority of Yahya bin Abi Katheer, who said: The grass of Paradise is saffron and its dunes are musk. Children will come around to them with fruits and they will eat them, then they will be brought something similar. The people of Paradise will say to them: This is what you brought us just now. The parents will say to them: Eat, for the color is the same but the taste is different. This is the statement of God the Most High: And they will be brought similar. Abu Jaafar al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-Aliyah: And they will be brought similar. He said: Some of it resembles others, but it differs in taste. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Something similar was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, al-Rabi' bin Anas, and al-Suddi. Ibn Jarir said with his chain of transmission on the authority of al-Suddi in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the Companions regarding the statement of God the Most High: And they will be brought similar, meaning in color and appearance, but it is not similar in taste. This is the choice of Ibn Jarir. Ikrimah said: And they will be brought similar. "Similar" He said: It resembles the fruits of this world, except that the fruits of Paradise are tastier. Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of al-A'mash on the authority of Abu Dhibyan on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Nothing in Paradise resembles anything in this world except in names. In another narration: There is nothing in this world that is in Paradise except the names. Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of al-Thawri and Ibn Abi Hatim on the authority of Abu Mu'awiyah, both on the authority of al-A'mash. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said regarding the words of God Almighty: And they will be given it in a similar state He said: They will recognize its names as they were in this world, apples for apples and pomegranates for pomegranates. They said in Paradise: This is what we were provided with before in this world. And they will be given it in a similar state, they will recognize it, but it is not like it in taste.

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

And the Almighty's saying: And they will have therein purified spouses. Ibn Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Purified from filth and harm. Mujahid said: From menstruation, feces, urine, phlegm, saliva, semen and children. Qatada said: Purified from harm and sin. In a narration on his authority, there is no menstruation or puberty. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ata', Al-Hasan, Ad-Dahhak, Abu Salih, Atiyah and As-Suddi. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus ibn Abd Al-A'la told me. Ibn Wahb informed us on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam, who said: The purified one is the one who does not menstruate. He said: And Eve, peace be upon her, was created in this way. When she disobeyed, God Almighty said: I created you pure and I will make you bleed as I made this tree bleed. This is strange.

Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr ibn Mardawayh said: Ibrahim ibn Muhammad told us, Ja'far ibn Muhammad ibn Harb and Ahmad ibn Muhammad al-Juri told us, they said: Muhammad ibn Ubayd al-Kindi told us, Abd al-Razzaq ibn Umar al-Buzay'i told us, Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak told us on the authority of Shu'bah on the authority of Qatadah on the authority of Abu Nadrah on the authority of Abu Sa'id on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, regarding God Almighty's statement: And they will have therein spouses purified, he said: from menstruation, feces, phlegm, and spittle. This is a strange hadith. Al-Hakim narrated it in his Mustadrak on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ya'qub ibn al-Hasan ibn 'Ali ibn 'Affan on the authority of Muhammad ibn 'Ubayd, and he said: It is authentic according to the conditions of the two sheikhs. What he claimed is questionable, because Abu Hatim ibn Hibban al-Busti said about 'Abd al-Razzaq ibn 'Umar al-Buza'i: It is not permissible to use him as evidence. I said What is more apparent is that this is from the words of Qatadah, as mentioned above, and God knows best.

And the Almighty's saying: And they will abide therein eternally. This is the perfection of happiness, for with this bliss they are in a secure position free from death and interruption, for it has no end or termination, but rather in everlasting, everlasting bliss, and God is the one who is asked to gather us with them, for He is Generous, Noble, Kind, and Merciful.

Fath al-Qadir

When God the Almighty mentioned the punishment of the unbelievers as an obstacle to the punishment of the believers, He combined encouragement and intimidation, promise and threat, as is His habit in His Noble Book, because it motivates His believing servants to obey Him, and discourages His unbelieving servants from disobeying Him. Giving good report is informing about something that appears on the skin, which is the visible skin, of joy and happiness. Al-Qurtubi said: The scholars agreed that if the person responsible says: Whoever among my slaves gives me good report, he is free, and he gives him good report from one of his slaves or more, then the first of them is free but not the second. They differed if he said: Whoever among my slaves tells me such and such, he is free. The companions of Al-Shafi'i said: It is general because each one of them is an informant. Our scholars said: No, because the person responsible only intended report that would be good report, and that is specific to the first. The truth is that if he intended the meaning of the report, then they would all be freed, and if he intended the report restricted to being good report, then the first one would be freed, so the difference is verbal. The one commanded to give good tidings is said to be the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. It is also said to be everyone, as in his saying, may God bless him and grant him peace: Give good tidings to those who walk. Although these sentences begin with a performative sentence, this does not detract from their being connected to what precedes them, because what is meant is to connect a sentence describing the reward of the obedient to a sentence describing the punishment of the disobedient, without looking at what the two descriptions contain of different individuals, both predicate and performative. It is also said that his saying: 25- And give good tidings is connected to his saying: So fear the Fire, and this is not good.

Righteous deeds are upright actions. What is meant here are the actions required of them and obligatory upon them. This is a response to those who say that faith alone is sufficient, for Paradise is attained through faith and righteous deeds. Gardens are orchards, and they are called gardens because they cover what is in them, that is, they cover it with their trees. It is the name of the entire abode of reward, and it contains many gardens. Rivers is the plural of river, which is the wide channel above the stream and below the sea. What is meant is the water that flows in it. The flow is attributed to it metaphorically, and the flowing thing in reality is the water, as in the Almighty's saying: And ask the town, meaning its people. And as the poet said:

I was informed that the fire was lit after you, and the council was closed after you, O Kulayb.

The pronoun in His statement: from beneath it refers to the gardens because it contains trees: that is, from beneath its trees. His statement: Whenever they are provided with provision is another description of the gardens, or it is a new sentence as if someone asked: What are its fruits? And from fruit means from any fruit: that is, any type of fruit. What is meant by His statement: This which we were provided with before is that it is similar and comparable to it, not that it is it, because the self of the present cannot be the same as the self of the absent because they are different, and that is because the color is similar to the color even if the size, taste, smell and water are different. The pronoun in bad refers to the provision, and it was said: What is meant is that they are given what they are provided with in Paradise similar, so what comes to them at the beginning of the day is similar to what comes to them at the end of it, so they say, This is what we were provided with before, and when they eat they find a taste for it that is different from the first taste. And similar is in the accusative case as a state. What is meant by purifying the spouses is that they are not affected by what affects women, such as the filth of menstruation, postpartum bleeding, and other impurities that are not prevented from being attached to the women of this world. Immortality means permanent existence that does not end, and it may be used metaphorically for something that is long, but what is meant here is the first. Ibn Majah, Ibn Abi Al-Dunya, Al-Bazzar, Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Hibban, Al-Bayhaqi, and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said:

"Who is preparing for Paradise? Paradise is not dangerous. By the Lord of the Kaaba, it is a shining light, a swaying fragrant plant, a lofty palace, a flowing river, ripe fruit, a beautiful wife, many garments, a permanent residence in a sound home, and green fruits." The hadith describing Paradise is very numerous, proven in the two Sahihs and others. Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Hibban, Al-Tabarani, Al-Hakim, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Baath narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah who said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: The rivers of Paradise gush forth from beneath the mountains of musk. Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abu Hatim, Abu Al-Shaykh, Ibn Hibban and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Baath narrated something similar and authenticated it on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Malik regarding his statement: Underneath which rivers flow, he said: He means the dwellings beneath which their rivers flow. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions regarding his statement: Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, he said: They will be brought the fruit in Paradise and will look at it. They will be brought similar, in color and appearance, but not similar in taste. Abd bin Hamid narrated something similar on the authority of Ali Ibn Zayd and Qatadah. Musaddad narrated in his Musnad, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: There is nothing in this world that is in Paradise except the names. Abd bin Hamid narrated from Ikrimah who said: Their saying: before means: This is like what was yesterday. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar from Yahya bin Abi Katheer. Abd al-Razzaq, Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated from Mujahid who said: Similar in color but different in taste. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated from al-Hasan regarding his statement: Similar he said: Good, all of it resembling one another, there is no bad in it. Have you not seen how you despise some of the fruits of this world? Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar from Qatadah. Al-Hakim narrated, and he authenticated it, and Ibn Mardawayh narrated from Abu Saeed from the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) regarding his statement: And for them therein are purified spouses, he said: Free from menstruation, feces, spittle and phlegm. Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas who said: Free from filth and harm. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Mas'ud who said: They should not menstruate, they should not urinate, and they should not spit. Something similar to this was narrated from a group of the Tabi'een. It was proven from the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) in the two Sahihs and other books on the description of the people of Paradise, through a group of the Companions, that the people of Paradise will not spit, blow their noses or defecate. It was also proven from the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) in many hadeeths in the two Sahihs and other books on the description of the women of Paradise, which there is not enough space to explain here. So let us look in the collections of Islam and other books. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And they will abide therein eternally meaning they will abide forever, informing them that the reward for good and evil will remain for its people forever and will not end. Ibn Abi

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

Hatim narrated from Saeed ibn Jubayr regarding his statement: And they will abide therein eternally meaning they will not die. Al-Bukhari, Muslim and others narrated from Ibn 'Umar from the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) who said: "The people of Paradise will enter Paradise and the people of Hell will enter Hell, then a caller will stand between them saying: O people of Hell, there is no death, and O people of Paradise, there is no death. Each will abide in what he is in." Al-Bukhari narrated something similar from the hadeeth of Abu Hurayrah. Al-Tabarani and Al-Hakim narrated, and authenticated it, from the hadith of Muadh, something similar. Al-Tabarani, Ibn Mardawayh, and Abu Nu'aym narrated from the hadith of Ibn Mas'ud, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "If it were said to the people of Hell, 'You will remain in Hell for the number of every pebble in this world,' they would rejoice. If it were said to the people of Paradise, 'You will remain for the number of every pebble,' they would grieve. But eternity has been made for them."

25. And give good tidings to those who believe meaning inform, and good tidings are any true report that changes the complexion of the face, and it is used for good and evil, and it is mostly used for good. And do righteous deeds meaning righteous actions, meaning the believers who are among the people of obedience. Uthman ibn Affan, may God be pleased with him, said: And do righteous deeds meaning they are sincere in their deeds as he said: So let him do righteous work 110-Al-Kahf, meaning free from hypocrisy. Muadh said: The righteous deed that has four things: knowledge, intention, patience, and sincerity. That they will have gardens is the plural of paradise, and paradise is the orchard that has fruitful trees, and it was named thus because it is avoided and covered by trees. Al-Farra' said: Paradise is that which has palm trees, and Al-Firdaws is that which has vineyards.

Rivers flow beneath it meaning beneath its trees and dwellings Rivers meaning the water in the rivers because the river does not flow. It was also said from beneath it meaning by their command, based on the Almighty's statement, narrating from Pharaoh, And these rivers flow beneath me 51-Az-Zukhruf, meaning by my command. Rivers are the plural of river, named for its breadth and brightness. From this comes the word day. In the hadith, The rivers of Paradise are not in a trench. "Whenever whenever they are provided with they are fed from it meaning from Paradise from fruit, meaning fruit and from the connection of provision "food they say, This is what we were provided with before" and before is raised as a limit. God the Almighty said, "To God belongs the command before and after" 4-Ar-Rum. It was said: before in this world. It was also said: the fruits in Paradise are similar in color, different in taste, so when they are provided with one fruit after another, they think it is the first. "And they bring it with the provision similar" Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, and Ar-Rabi' said: similar in time, different in taste. Al-Hasan and Qatada said: similar. That is, they resemble each other in quality, that is, they are all good and have no bad qualities. Muhammad ibn Ka'b said: They resemble the fruits of this world, except that they are tastier. It was also said: They are similar in name but different in taste. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: There is nothing in this world that is in Paradise except the names.

They are inspired to praise and glorify God, just as you are inspired to breathe. Their food is belching, and their sweat is musk."

God the Almighty said: And for them therein in Paradise are spouses women and female slaves, meaning from the wide-eyed houris, purified from feces, urine, menstruation, postpartum bleeding, spitting, mucus, semen, children, and all impurities. Ibrahim Al-Nakha'i said: In Paradise you have intercourse with whomever you wish and no children. Al-Hasan said: They are your old women, with narrow eyes and blemishes, purified from the filth of this world. It was said: Purified from bad morals. And they will abide therein permanent, they will not die in it and will not leave it.

They will neither urinate nor defecate, nor spit nor blow their noses. Paradise is not dangerous, and by the Lord of the Kaaba it is a shining light, a swaying fragrant plant, a lofty palace, a flowing river, ripe fruit, a beautiful wife, many garments, an eternal abode in a sound home, green fruits, joy, and comfort in a high and splendid place." They said: Yes, O Messenger of God, we are eager to go to Paradise. He said: Say, God willing. The people said: God willing.

It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "The people of Paradise will be hairless, beardless, and Kohl-lined. Their youth will never fade, and their clothes will never wear out."

If a man desires an image, he enters it. In it there is a gathering of the houris, calling out in a voice the like of which no creation has ever heard: We are the immortals, so we will never perish. We are the soft ones, so we will never be miserable. We are the contented ones, so we will never be angry. So blessed is he who is for us and we are for him and we are for him." Abu 'Isa narrated it on the authority of Hanad and Ahmad ibn Mani' on the authority of Abu Na'awiyah, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, and he said: This is a strange hadith.

Then they return to their families, and they have increased in beauty and handsomeness, and their families say to them, 'By God, you have increased in beauty and handsomeness after we left,' and they say, 'And by God, you have increased in beauty and handsomeness after we left.'"

25- "And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens" is a continuation of the previous sentence, and the intended meaning is to continue the state of the one who believes in the Great Qur'an and the description of its reward, to the state of the one who disbelieves in it, and the manner of his punishment according to what is the divine custom of interceding with intimidation, to stimulate the acquisition of what saves, and to discourage the commission of what is destructive, not to continue the action itself so that it is necessary to seek for it what is similar to it of command or prohibition so that it is continued to it or to "fear God", because if they do not come with what contradicts it after the challenge, its miracle will appear, and if that appears, then the one who disbelieves in it deserves punishment, and the one who believes in it deserves reward, and that requires frightening these and giving good tidings to those, and only the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, or the scholar of every age, or anyone who is able to give good tidings is to give them good tidings. He did not address them with good report as he addressed the infidels, to magnify their status and to indicate that they were deserving of being given good report and to be congratulated on what had been prepared for them.

And it was read "and give them good tidings in the passive form, in opposition to I prepared", so it would be a resumption. And good tidings are the good report, because the effect of joy appears in the skin, and therefore the jurists said that good tidings are the first pieces of report, so if a man said to his slaves: Whoever gives me good tidings of the arrival of my son is free, and they informed him individually, the first of them would be freed. And if he said: Whoever informed me, they would all be freed. As for the Almighty's saying: "Then give them good tidings of a painful punishment," it is in mockery or in the manner of His saying: A greeting between them is a painful blow.

And give good tidings to those who believe and do righteous deeds that they will have gardens beneath which rivers flow. Whenever they are provided with a provision of fruit therefrom, they will say, "This is what we were provided with before." And they will be given something similar to it. And they will have therein purified spouses, and they will abide therein eternally.

Al-Salihah is the plural of Salihah, which is one of the common attributes that are used in the same way as nouns, like Hasanah. Al-Hutay'ah said:

How is satire, and Saliha from Al-Umm does not cease to come to me in absentia?

These are actions that the Shariah has permitted and deemed good. The feminine form of the word is interpreted as a characteristic or trait, and the lam in it is for the genus. The conjunction of the action with faith is arranged to rule on them, indicating that the reason for deserving this good report is the sum of the two matters and the combination of the two descriptions. Faith, which is the expression of verification and belief, is a foundation, and righteous action is like building upon it, and there is no harm in not building upon it. Therefore, they are rarely mentioned alone. This is evidence that they are outside the meaning of faith, since the basic principle is that something is not conjoined with itself or with what is included in it.

"That they have" is in the accusative case by removing the preposition and adding the verb to it, or in the genitive case by implying it, like: God, I will do it. And Paradise: the time of the jinn, and it is the source of Jannah if it covers, and the construction depends on covering, and the shady tree was named after it because its branches intertwine for emphasis, as if it covers what is beneath it with a single covering. Zuhair said:

As if my eyes in the west are a slaughter of camels watering a crushed paradise

That is, tall palm trees, then the garden, because of the dense, shady trees in it, then the abode of reward because of the gardens in it. It was said: It was called that because it concealed in this world what was prepared for mankind in it of the branches of blessings, as the Most High said: No soul knows what has been hidden for them of comfort for their eyes. And the plural and indefinite form are because the gardens, according to what Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, mentioned, are seven: the Garden of Paradise, the Garden of Eden, the Garden of Bliss, the House of Eternity, the Garden of Refuge, the House of Peace, and the Most High, and in each one of them there are ranks and degrees that vary according to the differences in deeds and workers. The lam in for them indicates that they deserve it, because of what resulted from it of faith and righteous deeds, not for its own sake, as it does not equal previous blessings, let alone require a reward and recompense in the future, but rather by the making of the Lawgiver, and the requirement of His promise, the Most High, not absolutely, but on the condition that he continues upon it until he dies as a believer, according to His statement, the Most High: And whoever among you turns back from his religion and dies while he is a disbeliever - for those, their deeds have become worthless and His statement, the Most High, to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: If you associate others with God, your work will surely become worthless and the like. Perhaps He, the Most High, did not restrict it here, as it was sufficient.

Rivers flow beneath it means beneath its trees, as you see them flowing beneath the trees growing on its banks. According to Masruq: Rivers flow in other than a ditch. The lam in rivers is for the genus, as in your saying to someone: A garden in running water, or for the covenant. The covenant is the rivers mentioned in the Almighty's saying: In it are rivers of water that is not stagnant. The river, with the fatha and sukoon, is the wide channel above the stream and below the sea, like the Nile and the Euphrates. The construction is for the breadth, and what is meant by it is its water, by implication, or metaphor, or the channels themselves. Attributing the flow to it is a metaphor, as in the Almighty's saying: And the earth will bring forth its burdens.

"Whenever they are provided with a fruit therefrom as provision, they say, 'This is what we have been provided with.'" A second description of gardens, or the predicate of a deleted subject, or a renewed sentence. As if when it was said: They have gardens, the listener thought that their fruits are like the fruits of this world, or other kinds, so it was removed by that, and every time is in the accusative case as a circumstance, and sustenance is the direct object, and the first and second are for beginning and are in the position of a state, and the origin of the speech and its meaning is: Every time they are provided with a provision, beginning from the gardens, beginning from a fruit, the provision is restricted by being a beginning from the gardens, and its beginning from it is by its beginning from a fruit, so the owner of the first state is provision and the owner of the second state is its pronoun implied in the state, and it is possible that it is from its fruit, an explanation that was presented as in your saying: I saw a lion from you, and this is an indication of the type of what they were provided with, like your saying, pointing to a flowing river: This water does not stop, for you do not mean the visible eye of it, but the known type that continues with the succession of its flow, even if the indication is to its eye, so the meaning is like our provision, but when the similarity between them is established, it is made its essence like your saying: Abu Yusuf Abu Hanifa.

Before means: before this in this world, He made the fruit of Paradise of the same type as the fruit of this world so that the soul would incline towards it when it first sees it, for nature inclines towards what is familiar and avoids what is not, and its advantage and the essence of the blessing in it would become clear to it, for if it were a type that was not known, it would think that it would only be like that, or in Paradise because its food is similar in form, as Ibn Kathir narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan, may God be pleased with them both: (One of them will be brought a plate and eat from it, then another will be brought and he will see it like the first and say that, so the angel will say: Eat, for the color is the same but the taste is different). Or as it was narrated that he, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, said: "By the One in Whose Hand is the soul of Muhammad, a man from the people of Paradise will reach for a fruit to eat it, but it does not reach his mouth until God Almighty replaces it with another like it." Perhaps when they saw it in its first form they said that, and the first is more apparent because it preserves the generality of whenever, as it indicates their repetition of this statement every time they were provided with sustenance, and the reason for them to do that was their extreme astonishment and their boasting about what they found of the great disparity in pleasure and the similarity to the eloquent in image.

"And they will be given something similar" is an objection that confirms this. The pronoun in the first case refers to what they were provided with in the two abodes, as it is indicated by the words of God the Almighty: "This is what We have provided before." And similar to it is His words the Almighty: "Whether he be rich or poor, God is more worthy of them both." That is, of the two types of the rich and the poor. And in the second case, it refers to the provision. If it is said: Similarity is similarity in description, and it is missing between the fruits of this world and the hereafter, as Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with him said: There is no food in Paradise except the names. I say: The similarity between them is in the form, which is the basis of the name, not the quantity or taste, and this is sufficient to make the similarity general. This: And the noble verse has another interpretation, which is that pleasure is according to its difference, so it is possible that what is meant by "This is what We have provided" is its reward, and from their similarity is their similarity in honor, advantage, and high status, so this is in the promise similar to His words: "Taste what you used to do" in the threat.

And they will have therein purified spouses from what is considered disgusting and blameworthy in women, such as menstruation, filth, impurity of nature, and bad character. Purification is used for bodies, morals, and actions. It was read: purified, and they are two eloquent languages. It is said that women did and did, and they are fa'ila and fawa'il. He said:

And the virgins covered themselves with smoke and hastened to set up the pots, but they got bored.

The plural is based on the wording, and the singular is based on the interpretation of the group. Mutahhara with a shaddah on the ta' and a kasrah on the ha' means purified. Mutahhara is more expressive than Tahera and Mutahhara to indicate that the purifier purified them and that it is none other than God, the Almighty. The word 'spouse' is said for both males and females, and it is originally for what has a partner of the same kind, like the pair of a sandal. If it is said: The benefit of food is nourishment and repelling the harm of hunger, and the benefit of marriage is procreation and preservation of the species, and these are dispensed with in Paradise. I say: The foods of Paradise, its marriages, and all of its other names are by way of metaphor and representation, and they do not share in its complete reality until they entail all that is required of it and provide the same benefit.

And they will abide therein forever means permanent. Immortality and eternity originally mean long-term stability, whether it lasts or not. That is why fire pits and stones are called immortal, and the part of a human being that remains in the same state as long as he is alive is called immortal. If it had been set for perpetuity, the restriction to perpetuity in the Almighty's statement, abiding therein forever would have been superfluous, and its use where there is no permanence, like their saying an eternal endowment, would require a ambiguity, or a metaphor. The original negates both, unlike if it had been set for the more general of it, then it was used in it with that consideration, like the application of the word body to a human being, like the Almighty's statement, And We have not granted to any human being before you immortality. However, what is meant by it here is permanence according to the majority, due to what is supported by the verses and Sunnahs.

If it is said: Bodies are composed of parts that are opposite in quality, and are subject to transformations that lead to separation and dissolution, so how can their eternity in Paradise be understood? I say: God Almighty restores them so that they are not subject to transformation by making their parts, for example, opposing each other in quality, equal in strength, with none of them strong enough to transform the other, intertwined and interconnected, with one part inseparable from the other, as is seen in some minerals.

This is because the comparison of that world and its conditions to what we find and witness of the deficiency of the mind and the weakness of insight. And know that since most of the sensory pleasures are limited to: dwellings, food, and marriage, as indicated by induction, the essence of all of that was permanence and stability, for every great blessing, if it is accompanied by fear of disappearance, is spoiled and not pure from the impurities of pain. He gave the believers good tidings of it and likened it to what was prepared for them in the Hereafter with the most splendid of what they can enjoy from it, and He removed from them the loss with the promise of eternity to indicate their perfection in enjoyment and happiness.

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

) Indeed, God is not ashamed to set forth) make an example the first object what an indefinite noun described by what follows it as a second object, i.e. like it was or an extra word to emphasize baseness, so what follows it is the second object a mosquito the singular of mosquitoes, which is small bugs or what is above it i.e. bigger than it, i.e. He does not leave its explanation because of the ruling in it As for those who believe, they know that it i.e. the example is the truth the established and established in its place (from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, What did God intend by this example?) a distinguishing feature, i.e. by this example, and what is an interrogative of denial, a subject, and that in the sense of what is connected to it is its predicate, i.e.: what is the benefit in it. God the Almighty said in their answer He misleads thereby i.e. by this example many from the truth due to their disbelief in it and guides thereby many of the believers due to their belief in it and He misleads thereby only the wicked those who go against His obedience

God Almighty says: God is not ashamed to present an example. Verse K Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi with his chains of transmission when God presented these two examples for the hypocrites, His saying: Its example is like the example of one who kindled a fire, and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky. The hypocrites said: God is higher.

And he was too noble to make these parables, so God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to make a parable, until His saying: They are the losers. Al-Wahidi narrated on the authority of Abdul-Ghani bin Saeed Al-Thaqafi, on the authority of Musa bin Abdul-Rahman, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "God mentioned the gods of the polytheists, and said: 'And if the fly should steal something from them,' and he mentioned the plot of the gods, so he made it like a spider's web. They said: 'Do you see where God mentioned the fly and the spider in what He revealed of the Qur'an to Muhammad, what was done with this?' So God revealed this verse." Abdul-Ghani is very weak. Abdul-Razzaq said in his interpretation: "Muammar told us on the authority of Qatadah, when God mentioned the spider and the fly, the polytheists said: 'Why are the spider and the fly mentioned?' So God revealed this verse." Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan, who said: "When the verse: 'O people, a parable was given,' the polytheists said: 'This is not one of the parables to be given,' or something similar to these parables." So God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to make a parable, the verse. I said: The first statement is more authentic in chain of transmission and more appropriate to what was mentioned at the beginning of the surah, and mentioning the polytheists does not fit with the verse being Madinan, and what we have mentioned about Qatada and Al-Hasan narrated it from Al-Wahidi without a chain of transmission, with the wording: The Jews said, which is more appropriate.

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: The people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning in which God Almighty revealed this verse and its interpretation.

Some of them said: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When God gave these two examples for the hypocrites, meaning His saying: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky, the three verses, the hypocrites said: God is too high and majestic to give these examples, so God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example of a gnat until His saying: Those are the losers.

Others said: Ahmad bin Ibrahim narrated to me, he said: Qurad narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Ja'far al-Razi, on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: God is not ashamed to present a parable - that of a gnat or anything greater than that. He said: This is a parable that God has presented for the world. The mosquito lives as long as it is hungry, but when it gets fat, it dies. And so is the parable of these people for whom God has presented this parable in the Qur'an: When they are filled with worldly pleasures, God will seize them at that time. He said: Then he recited: "But when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the gates of every [good] thing until, when they rejoiced in that which they had been given, We seized them suddenly, and at once they were in despair." (Al-An'am: 44)

told us: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, something similar, except that he said: When their appointed times are over and their time is cut short, they become like a mosquito that lives as long as it is hungry and dies when it is satisfied. So too are those for whom God has given this example: when they are filled with worldly pleasures, God takes them and destroys them. That is what He says: Until, when they rejoice in what they have been given, We seize them suddenly, and at once they are in despair. (Al-An'am: 44)

Others said: Bishr ibn Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid narrated to us on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, his statement: God is not ashamed to set forth an example - that of a gnat or what is greater than it means that God is not ashamed to mention anything of the truth, whether it is small or large. When God mentioned the fly and the spider in His Book, the people of misguidance said: What did God intend by mentioning this? So God revealed: God is not ashamed to set forth an example - that of a gnat or what is greater than it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: When God mentioned the spider and the fly, the polytheists said: Why are the spider and the fly mentioned? So God revealed: God is not ashamed to make an example of a gnat or anything greater than that.

Each of the people we mentioned had a different opinion regarding this verse and the meaning for which it was revealed. However, what is most correct and most similar to the truth is what we mentioned from the opinion of Ibn Masoud and Ibn Abbas.

This is because God, the Most High, informed His servants that He is not ashamed to make an example of a mosquito or anything greater than it, following the examples that have already been mentioned in this surah, which He made for the hypocrites, rather than the examples that He made in all the other surahs. So it is more appropriate and fitting that this statement, I mean His statement, Indeed, God is not ashamed to make an example of anything, be an answer to the disbelievers and hypocrites' denunciation of the examples He made for them in this surah than it be an answer to their denunciation of the examples He made for them in other surahs.

If someone were to say: What made it necessary for this to be an answer to their denial was the parables given in the other surahs, because the parables that God gave to them and their gods in the other surahs were parables that agreed in meaning with what He had informed us about: that He is not ashamed to give an example of it, since some of them were a representation of their gods as spiders, and some of them were a likening of them in weakness and humiliation to flies. And none of that is mentioned in this surah, so it is permissible to say: that God is not ashamed to give an example of it.

This is contrary to what he thought. That is because the statement of God Almighty: God is not ashamed to set forth a parable - that of a gnat or anything greater than that, is only a statement from Him Almighty that He is not ashamed to set forth in the truth any parable, small or large, as a trial and examination of His servants, to distinguish the people of faith and belief in Him from the people of misguidance and disbelief in Him, as a way for Him to mislead some people and guide others.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: An example of a mosquito, meaning examples, small and large, in which the believers believe and know that it is the truth from their Lord, and God guides them by it and misguides the wicked by it. He says: The believers know it and believe in it, and the wicked know it and disbelieve in it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told me, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Abu Ja'far said: No, He, may He be glorified, intended to tell us about the eye of the mosquito, that He is not ashamed to use it as an example, but rather the mosquito is the weakest of creation.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Abu Sufyan told us, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Qatada, he said: The mosquito is the weakest thing that God created.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, something similar.

God singled it out for mention in terms of fewness, so He informed us that He is not ashamed to give the least, most insignificant and highest examples of truth, to an infinite degree of height, as an answer from Him, may He be glorified, to those among His creation who denied what He gave them as an example of the kindling of fire and the rain from the sky, as He described them with.

If someone were to say to us: Where did the hypocrites' denunciation of the examples that were described, which this report is the answer to, mention, then we know that what you said about that is what we said?

It was said: The evidence for that is clear in the statement of God, the Most High: "As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What does God intend by this as an example? He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby.'" (al-Baqarah 2:26). And the people for whom the examples were given in the two previous verses, which are like what the hypocrites are living in: by the fire and the rain from the sky, as described before His statement: Indeed, God is not ashamed to set forth an example, denied the example and said: What does God intend by this as an example? So God, the Most High, explained to them the error of what they said, and deemed ugly what they uttered, and informed them of their judgment in what they said of it, and that it is misguidance and immorality, and that what is correct and right is what the believers said, not what they said.

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

As for the interpretation of his statement: God is not ashamed, some of those who claim to have knowledge of the Arabic language interpreted the meaning of God is not ashamed as: God is not afraid to be used as an example, and he cites as evidence for that the statement of God Almighty: And you fear people, while God is more deserving of being feared (al-Ahzab 33:37), and he claims that the meaning of that is: And you are ashamed of people, while God is more deserving of being ashamed. So he says: Ashamed means fear, and fear means shyness.

As for the meaning of his saying: to give an example, it is to clarify and describe, as God Almighty said: He gives you an example from among yourselves (al-Rum 30:28), meaning to describe to you, and as Al-Kumait said:

This is a comparison of fifths and sixths, so that they may not be

Meaning: description of fifths.

The parable: the resemblance. It is said: this is like this and like it, just as it is said: he resembled it and he resembled it. From this is the saying of Ka'b bin Zuhair:

Her appointments were like a proverb, but her appointments were nothing but falsehoods.

It means a resemblance. So the meaning of his saying, God is not ashamed to make an example is that God is not afraid to describe a resemblance to what He likened it to.

As for what is with examples, it means which, because the meaning of the statement is: God is not ashamed to make an example of what is a mosquito in smallness and fewness or what is greater than it.

If someone were to say to us: If what you said about that is true, then what is the reason for putting the mosquito in the accusative case, since you know that the interpretation of the statement is what you interpreted: that God is not ashamed to give an example that is a mosquito? So the mosquito, according to what you say, is in the nominative case? So how did it come to be in the accusative case?

It was said: The accusative case came to it from two aspects: One of them is that since ma was in the accusative case with the word yadrubu he hits, and the mosquito was related to it, it was Arabized according to its Arabization, so it was bound by its inflection, as Hassan bin Thabit said:

It is enough for us to be favored over others that the Prophet Muhammad loved us.

So, it was parsed in the same way as min. The Arabs do this especially with min and ma. They parse their connections in the same way as they do, because they are sometimes definite and sometimes indefinite.

The other aspect is that the meaning of the statement is: God is not ashamed to give an example of what is between a mosquito and what is above it, then the mention of between and to was omitted, since the mosquito was in the accusative and the fa' was included in the second ma, indicating them, as the Arabs said: We received rain from a garbage can and a fox, and he has twenty camels and two camels, and she is the best of people in terms of horns and feet, meaning: what is between her horn and her foot. And likewise they say in everything in which it is good to include: what is between such and such to such and such, they place the first and second in the accusative, so that the accusative in them indicates what was omitted from the statement. And so it is in His statement: what is not a mosquito and what is above it.

Some Arabists have claimed that the word ma with the word mithl is a conjunction in the speech that means lengthening, and that the meaning of the speech is: God is not ashamed to strike a mosquito, for example, with a mosquito or something above it. According to this interpretation, ba'wah must be in the accusative case with yadrab and the second ma in ma or something above it must be conjoined with the mosquito, not with ma.

As for the interpretation of his statement, and what is above it: what is greater than it in my opinion, based on what we mentioned before from the statement of Qatada and Ibn Jurayj: that the mosquito is the weakest of God's creation, so since it is the weakest of God's creation, it is the ultimate in smallness and weakness. Since that is the case, there is no doubt that what is above the weakest of things can only be stronger than it. So the meaning should be as they said, what is above it in greatness and largeness, since the mosquito is the ultimate in weakness and smallness. And it was said in the interpretation of his statement, and what is above it, in smallness and smallness. Just as it is said about a man who is mentioned by someone and described as mean and stingy, and the listener says: Yes, and above that, meaning above what you described in stinginess and meanness, and this statement is contrary to the interpretation of the people of knowledge whose knowledge is accepted in the interpretation of the Qur'an.

It has become clear, then, from what we have described, that the meaning of the statement is: God is not ashamed to describe a likeness to that to which He has been likened, which is between a mosquito and something above a mosquito.

As for the interpretation of the statement, if the mosquito is raised, it is not permissible in what, except what we said, that it is a noun, not related to the meaning of length.

The statement in the interpretation of His saying: "As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What did God intend by this as an example?'"

Abu Ja'far said: God Almighty means by His statement: As for those who believe, as for those who believed in God and His Messenger. And His statement: They will know that it is the truth from their Lord, means: They will know that the example that God gave, when He gave it to him, is an example.

As Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us, he said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: But as for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, that this is the true parable from their Lord, and that it is the word of God and from Him.

And as Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid ibn Zurai' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, his statement, But as for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, meaning they know that it is the speech of the Most Gracious, and that it is the truth from God. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What does God intend by this as an example?'

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, And as for those who disbelieved, means those who denied the signs of God, rejected what they knew, and concealed what they knew to be true. This is the description of the hypocrites, and God Almighty meant them and those who were like them and their partners from the polytheists from the People of the Book and others with this verse. They say: What did God mean by this example, as we mentioned before from the report that we narrated from Mujahid, who narrated it to us from Muhammad ibn 'Amr, who said: Abu 'Asim narrated to us, from 'Isa, from Ibn Abi Najeh,

On the authority of Mujahid: But as for those who have believed, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, the verse. He said: The believers believe in it, and they know that it is the truth from their Lord, and God guides them by it, and He misguides the wicked by it. He says: The believers know it and believe in it, and the wicked know it and disbelieve in it.

The interpretation of his saying: What did God intend by this parable? What did God intend by this parable? So, who with what has the meaning of who, and He intended its connection, and this is a reference to the parable.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Almighty and Majestic, means by His saying, He misleads many thereby, is that God misleads many of His creation thereby. The ha in bihi is from the mention of the parable. This is a report from God, the Almighty and Majestic, as a subject, and the meaning of the statement is that God misleads many of the hypocrites and disbelievers by the parable that He strikes, as Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He misleads many thereby, meaning the hypocrites, and guides many thereby, meaning the believers. So these people increase in misguidance to their misguidance, because they have denied what they knew to be true with certainty of the parable that God struck when He struck it for them, and that when He struck it it was in agreement with them. So that is God misleading them thereby. And He guides thereby, meaning the parable, many of the people of faith and belief, so He increases their guidance to their guidance and their faith to their faith. For their belief in what they have truly known with certainty that it is in accordance with what God has given as an example for him, and their acknowledgment of it. And that is guidance from God to them through it. Some of them have claimed that this is report about the hypocrites, as if they said: What did God mean by a parable that not everyone knows, by which He misleads this one and guides that one. Then the speech and report about God were resumed, so God said: And He misleads thereby none but the wicked. And in what is in Surat Al-Muddaththir of God's saying: And let those in whose hearts is a disease and the disbelievers say, 'What did God mean by this as an example?' Thus does God mislead whom He wills and guides whom He wills (al-Muddaththir 74:31), what indicates that it is also in Surat Al-Baqarah, a subject, I mean His saying: He misleads thereby many and guides thereby many.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And He misguides thereby only the wicked.

The interpretation of that is what: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And He misguides thereby only the wicked, they are the hypocrites.

And Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: And He misguides thereby only the wicked, so they committed wickedness, so God misguided them due to their wickedness.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And He misguides thereby only the wicked, they are the hypocrites.

Abu Ja'far said: The root of the word fisq in Arabic is to depart from something. It is said: Fasqat al-Rutbah the date if it emerges from its shell. The mouse is called fuwaisifa transgressor because it emerges from its hole. Likewise, the hypocrite and the disbeliever are called fasiqin transgressors because they depart from the obedience of their Lord. That is why the Almighty said in describing Iblis: Except Iblis, he was one of the jinn and departed from the command of his Lord (al-Kahf 18:50), meaning he departed from His obedience and following His command. As Ibn Hamid

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

told us, he said: Salamah told us, he said: Ibn Ishaq told me, on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn, on the authority of 'Ikrimah, the freed slave of Ibn 'Abbas, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, regarding His statement: Because they were transgressing (al-Baqarah 2:59), meaning because they departed from My command.

The meaning of his statement: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked, is that God does not misguide by the example He sets for the people of misguidance and hypocrisy, except those who disobey Him and abandon following His command, from among the people of the Book who disbelieve in Him, and the people of misguidance from among the hypocrites.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a gnat or anything larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What did God intend by this as an example?' He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads thereby only the defiantly disobedient."

God the Almighty says: Indeed, God is not ashamed to make an example. Ibn Abbas said in the narration of Ibn Salih: When God the Almighty made these two examples for al-Munafiqun 63: meaning, Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky, they said: God is too great and exalted to make examples, so God revealed this verse. In the narration of Ata' from Ibn Abbas, he said: When God mentioned the gods of the polytheists and said: And if a fly steals away something from them, they cannot recover it from it, and He mentioned the trickery of the gods and made it like a spider's web, they said: Do you see where God mentioned the fly and the spider in what He revealed of the Qur'an to Muhammad, what does He do? So God revealed the verse. Al-Hasan and Qatada said: When God mentioned the fly and the spider in His Book and made an example for the polytheists with it, the Jews laughed and said: This does not resemble the words of God, so God revealed the verse.

The root of istahya is yastahy, its 'ayn and lam are weak letters, the lam of which was made high because the damma on the ya was too heavy, so it was quiescent. The active participle according to this is mustahya, and the plural is mustahyoon and mustahyoon. Ibn Muhaisin read yastahy with a kasra on the ha' and one quiescent ya', and it was narrated from Ibn Kathir, and it is the language of Tamim and Bakr ibn Wa'il, in which the vowel of the first ya' was transferred to the ha' and it was quiescent, then the damma on the second was too heavy, so it was quiescent, so one of them was deleted because of the meeting, and the active participle is mustah, and the plural is mustahoon and mustaheen. This was said by al-Jawhari. The commentators differed about the meaning of yastahy in this verse, and it was said: does not fear, and al-Tabari preferred it. In the revelation: And you fear people, while God is more deserving of being feared means you are ashamed. Another said: it is not abandoned. It was said: it is not forbidden. The origin of shyness is to shrink from something and refrain from it for fear of falling into something ugly, and this is impossible for God Almighty. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Umm Salamah, may God be pleased with her, she said:

Umm Salamah came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: O Messenger of God, God is not ashamed of the truth. The meaning is that He does not command shame in it, nor does He refrain from mentioning it.

The Almighty says: To make an example of something. The meaning of to make clear is to make clear. "An" with the verb is in the accusative case with the estimation of the deletion of min. For example, it is in the accusative case with to make clear. There are four ways in which ba'udah can be in the accusative case:

First: The word ma is redundant, and ba'udah is used instead of saying, for example.

Second: The indefinite noun ma is in the accusative case as a substitute for his saying: For example, and a mosquito is an adjective for ma, so ma was described with the indefinite genus because of its ambiguity, because it means little, as Al-Farra', Al-Zajaj, and Tha'lab said.

The third: It was placed in the accusative case on the assumption that the preposition was omitted, and the meaning is to give an example of what is between a mosquito, so between was deleted and parsed according to its parsing, and the fa means to, that is, to what is above it. This is the saying of Al-Kisa'i and Al-Farra' also, and Abu Al-Abbas recited:

O best of people, neither a horn nor a foot nor a rope of love can reach you

He wanted to say between a century, but when he omitted between, he put instead.

Fourth: That it means to hit, so that the mosquito is the second object. Ad-Dahhak, Ibrahim bin Abi Ubla, and Ru'bah bin Al-A'aj read mosquito in the nominative case, which is the language of Tamim. Abu Al-Fath said: The reason for that is that ma is a noun in the position of alladhi, and ba'dah is in the nominative case because the subject is implied, the subject. Similar to it is the reading of some of them: Tamaman ala al-dhi hasan meaning ala al-dhi is ahsan. Sibawayh reported: I am not the one who says something to you, meaning he is the one who says. An-Nahhas said: The deletion is in what is uglier than it in alladhi, because alladhi has only one meaning and the noun with it is longer. It is said: The meaning of I struck an example for him is I gave him an example. These constructions are of one type, one example, and one type, and bat' is the type. Ba'dah is a verbal noun from ba'd if the meat is cut, it is said: ba'd and ba'd in the same sense, and qad bittuhu ta'dithan meaning I divided it so it was divided. Ba'd is a bug, the singular is ba'dah, named thus because of its small size. Al-Jawhari and others said it.

God the Almighty said: And what is above it It has been previously mentioned that the fa' means to, and whoever makes the first ma a useful relative clause, then the second ma is conjoined to it. Al-Kisa'i, Abu Ubaidah and others said: The meaning of what is above it - and God knows best - is what is below it, meaning that it is above it in smallness. Al-Kisa'i said: This is like your saying in speech: Do you see him short? The speaker says: Or above that, meaning he is shorter than you see. Qatada and Ibn Jurayj said: The meaning is in the size. The pronoun in it refers back to the example, meaning that the example is true. The truth is the opposite of falsehood. The truth is one of the rights. Al-Haqqah with the opening of the ha' is more specific than it, it is said: This is my right, meaning my right.

The Almighty said: And as for those who disbelieved, the language of Banu Tamim and Banu Amir in ama ayma, they replace one of the two meems with a ya' out of dislike of doubling, and based on this the verse of Omar bin Abi Rabi'ah is recited:

She saw a man who was either bald when the sun was in the morning or bald in the evening.

God the Almighty said: And they say, 'What did God intend by this as an example?' Grammarians differed about what. It was said: It is in the position of a single noun meaning what did God intend, so it is in the accusative case with wanted. Ibn Kaysan said: This is the best. It was said: What is a complete noun in the nominative case as a subject, and that means which and it is the predicate of the subject, and the meaning of this statement is: What did God intend by this as an example? The meaning of their statement is: denial with the form of a question. For example is in the accusative case as a definite noun, the meaning is: He intended an example, as Tha'lab said. Ibn Kaysan said: It is in the accusative case as a distinguishing feature that is in the position of a state.

God the Almighty says: He misguides many thereby and guides many thereby. It was said: This is from the saying of the disbelievers, meaning what does God mean by this parable by which He divides people into misguidance and guidance? It was also said: Rather, it is a statement from God the Almighty, and this is more likely, because they acknowledge that guidance is from Him, so the meaning is: Say: God misguides many thereby and guides many thereby, meaning He grants success and lets down. Accordingly, it is a refutation of those previously mentioned from the Mu'tazilah and others in their saying: God does not create misguidance or guidance. They said: The meaning of He misguides many thereby here is the naming, meaning He calls him astray, as one says: I made so-and-so a sinner, meaning I called him a sinner, because God the Almighty does not misguide anyone. This is their way of misguiding, and it is contrary to the sayings of the commentators, and it is not possible in the language, because it is said: he misled him if he called him astray, and it is not said: he misled him if he called him astray, but its meaning is what the commentators and people of interpretation mentioned of the truth that he will let down many people with it as a punishment for their disbelief. And there is no disagreement that his saying.

And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. This is from the statement of God the Most High. And the wicked are in the accusative case because the action occurs to them, and the meaning is: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked whom He has already known that He will not guide. And it is not permissible to make them accusative as an exception because the exception does not occur except after the completion of the statement. Nawf al-Bakali said: Uzair said in his supplication to his Lord the Almighty: My God, You create creation and misguide whom You will and guide whom You will. He said, so it was said: O Uzair, turn away from this! You must turn away from this or I will erase you from prophethood. Indeed, I am not questioned about what I do, but they are questioned. And the origin of misguidance is destruction. It is said from it: the water is lost in the milk if it is consumed. And from it is the statement of God the Most High: Will we then go astray in the earth? And it was mentioned previously in the opening chapter. And the origin of misguidance in the speech of the Arabs is to go out from something. It is said that the date is fasqat if it comes out of its shell, and the mouse from its hole. And the mouse is the fuwaisqa. And in the hadith:

"Five pests are to be killed in the sacred precincts and outside of it: the snake, the speckled crow, the mouse, the rabid dog, and the kite." Narrated by Aisha from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and narrated by Muslim. In another narration, it is said that the snake was replaced by a scorpion. So the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, called it fasq because of its harm, as will be explained in this book, God willing. A man's fasq is also called fasqan and fusqan, according to Al-Akhfash. As for the words of God Almighty: He disobeyed the command of his Lord, it means he went out. Ibn Al-A'rabi claimed that he had never heard of a fasq in the speech of the pre-Islamic era or in their poetry. He said: This is strange, and it is Arabic speech that Ibn Faris and Al-Jawhari narrated from him.

I said: Abu Bakr al-Anbari mentioned in his book al-Zahir, when he spoke about the meaning of immorality, the poet's saying:

They go to Najd and to the deep valleys, wicked and transgressing against her will.

Al-Fasiq: the one who is constantly corrupt. It is said in the call: O corruption and O wickedness, meaning: O corrupt one, and O wicked one. And corruption in the legal usage is: going out of the obedience of God Almighty, so it may apply to one who went out with disbelief and to one who went out with disobedience:

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the companions that when God gave these two examples for the hypocrites, meaning His saying: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky the three verses, the hypocrites said: God is too high and majestic to give these examples, so God revealed this verse up to His saying: They are the losers. And Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatada when God mentioned the spider and the fly, the polytheists said: Why are the spider and the fly mentioned? So God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to set forth an example - of a gnat or anything greater than that. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada, meaning that God is not ashamed to mention anything of the truth, whether small or large, and when God mentioned the fly and the spider in His book, the people of misguidance said: What did God intend by mentioning this? Then God revealed, God is not ashamed to make an example of a mosquito or anything greater than that. I said The first phrase from Qatada indicates that this verse is Meccan, but it is not. The phrase in Saeed's narration from Qatada is closer, and God knows best. Ibn Jurayj narrated from Mujahid something similar to this second one from Qatada. Ibn Abi Hatim said, something similar to what As-Suddi and Qatada said was narrated from Al-Hasan and Ismail bin Abi Khalid. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said from Ar-Rabi' bin Anas regarding this verse, he said, "This is an example that God made for the world, that the mosquito lives as long as it is hungry, but when it gets fat, it dies. And likewise the example of these people for whom this example is made in the Qur'an, when they are filled with worldly pleasures, God seizes them at that time." Then he recited, But when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the gates of every [good] thing. This was narrated by Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it from the hadith of Abu Ja'far from Ar-Rabi' bin Anas from Abu Al-'Aliyah in a similar manner, and God knows best. This is their disagreement about the reason for revelation. Ibn Jarir chose what Al-Suddi narrated because it is most appropriate to the surah, and the meaning of the verse is that the Almighty informed that He is not ashamed, that is, He is not ashamed, and it was said that He is not afraid to give an example, that is, any example, whether it is small or large. Ma here is for diminution, and Ba'wadah could be in the accusative case as a substitute, as you say I will strike a strike, so it is believed with the smallest thing, or Ma could be an indefinite noun described by Ma'wadah. Ibn Jarir chose that Ma is a relative pronoun and Ma'wadah is parsed according to its parsing. He said that this is permissible in the speech of the Arabs, that they parse the relative pronoun Ma and Man according to their parsing, because they are sometimes definite and sometimes indefinite, as Hassan ibn Thabit said:

It is enough for us to have a superiority over others that the Prophet Muhammad loved us.

He said: It is permissible for ba'udah to be in the accusative case by deleting the preposition, and the meaning of the statement is: God is not ashamed to give an example between a gnat and what is above it, and this is what Al-Kisa'i and Al-Farra' chose, and Ad-Dahhak and Ibrahim bin Ubla read ba'udah in the nominative case. Ibn Jinni said: It is a relative clause for ma and the pronoun is deleted as in his saying perfectly upon what is best meaning upon what is best, and Sibawayh narrated: I am not the one who will say anything to you, meaning the one who will say anything to you. And the Almighty's saying: and what is above it has two opinions: One of them is what is below it in smallness and insignificance, as if a man is described as mean and stingy and the listener says yes and he is above that - meaning in what you described - and this is the opinion of Al-Kisa'i and Abu Ubaid, and Al-Razi and most of the investigators said it. And in the hadith: If the world weighed in the sight of God the wing of a mosquito, He would not have given a disbeliever a sip of water from it. The second: What is above it is for what is greater than it, because there is nothing more insignificant or smaller than a mosquito. This is the statement of Qatada bin Di'amah and the choice of Ibn Jarir, as it is supported by what Muslim narrated on the authority of Aisha, may God be pleased with her, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: There is no Muslim who is pricked by a thorn or something greater than it, except that a degree is written for him because of it and a sin is erased from him because of it. So he informed that he does not belittle anything to use as an example, even if it is as insignificant and small as a mosquito, just as he does not disdain to create it, likewise he does not disdain to use it as an example, just as he used the fly and the spider as an example in His statement: "O mankind, an example is presented, so listen to it. Indeed, those you invoke besides God will never create a fly, even if they banded together for that purpose. And if the fly steals away something from them, they cannot recover it from it. Weak are the seeker and the sought." And He said: "The example of those who take protectors other than God is like that of the al-Ankabut 29: it builds a home. And indeed, the flimsiest of homes is the spider's home, if they only knew." And God, the Most High, said: Have you not seen how God presents a parable of the worldly life, and the like of the worldly life is like the likeness of the earth. For example, a good word is like a good tree, whose root is firm and whose branches are in the sky. It brings forth its fruit at all times by permission of its Lord. And God presents examples for the people that perhaps they will be reminded. And the example of a bad word is like a bad tree, uprooted from the surface of the earth, having no stability. God makes firm those who believe, with the firm word, in worldly life and in the Hereafter. And God sends astray the wrongdoers, and God does what He wills. And God, the Most High, said: "God presents an example: a slave owned by someone who has no power over anything." Then He said: "And God presents an example: two men, one of them mute, unable to do anything, and he is a burden on his master. Wherever he directs him, he brings no good. Are they equal to one who enjoins justice?" He also said: "He presents to you an example from among yourselves: Do you have among those your right hands possess partners in what We have provided for you?" He said: "God presents an example: a man in whom are partners who quarrel." He said: And these parables We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. And in the Qur'an there are many parables. Some of the Salaf said: If I hear a parable in the Qur'an and do not understand it, I cry for myself because God said: And these parables We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. And Mujahid said regarding the words of God the Almighty: Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - be it that of a gnat or anything greater than that. The believers believe in parables, whether small or large, and they know that they are the truth from their Lord, and God guides them by them. Qatada said: But as for those who have believed, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, meaning they know that it is the speech of the Most Merciful and that it is from God. Something similar was narrated from Mujahid, Al-Hasan, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, meaning this parable. As for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What does God intend by this as an example?' As He said in Surat al-Muddaththir 74: "And We have not made the keepers of the Fire except as a trial for those who disbelieve - that those who were given the Scripture will be certain and those who have believed will increase in faith and those who were given the Scripture and the believers will not doubt and that those in whose hearts is hypocrisy and the disbelievers will say, 'What does God intend by this as an example?'" Thus does God leave astray whom He wills and guides whom He wills. And none knows the soldiers of your Lord except Him. "And He leaves astray many thereby and guides many thereby. And He leaves astray none thereby except the wicked." Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: He leaves astray many thereby meaning the hypocrites and He guides the believers thereby. So these people increase in misguidance to their misguidance because they deny what they knew to be true with certainty from the parable that God set forth for them, and that when He set forth it was in accordance with it, so that is God's misguidance. And He guides thereby many of the people of faith and belief, and He increases their guidance to their guidance and their faith to their faith, because they believe in what they have learned to be true, with certainty that it is in accordance with what God has given as an example for him, and their acknowledgment of it. This is guidance from God to them through it. And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: They are the hypocrites. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: They are the hypocrites. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And

He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: The disbelievers know it and disbelieve in it. Qatada said: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. So they became wicked, so God led them astray in their wickedness. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us on the authority of Ishaq bin Sulayman on the authority of Abu Sinan on the authority of Amr bin Murrah on the authority of Mus'ab bin Sa'd on the authority of Sa'd. He misguides thereby many, meaning the Khawarij. Shu'bah said on the authority of 'Amr ibn Murrah on the authority of Mus'ab ibn Sa'd who said: I asked my father and said: The words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it to the end of the verse: He said: They are the Kharijites. This chain of transmission, even if it is authentic on the authority of Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas, may God be pleased with him, is an interpretation of the meaning, not that the verse was intended to explicitly mention the Khawarij who rebelled against Ali at Nahrawan, for those were not present at the time of the revelation of the verse, but rather they are included in it with those who entered because they were called Khawarij for their rebellion against the Imam and the implementation of the laws of Islam. The wicked in the language is also the one who rebels against obedience, and the Arabs say fasqat al-rutbah when it comes out of its shell, and for this reason the mouse is called fuwaisqa because it comes out of its hole to corrupt. It is proven in the two Sahihis on the authority of 'Aishah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Five wicked things are to be killed in the sacred precincts and outside of it: the crow, the kite, the scorpion, the mouse, and the rabid dog." The wicked includes the infidel and the sinner, but the wickedness of the infidel is more severe and more heinous, and what is meant by it is: From the verse, the disbelieving sinner, and God knows best, as evidenced by His description of them in His Almighty saying: Those who break the covenant of God after its ratification and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those are the losers. These attributes are the attributes of the disbelievers that are based on the attributes of the believers, as God Almighty said in Surat Ar-Ra'd: "Is he who knows that what has been revealed to you from your Lord is the truth like one who is blind? Only those with understanding will remember. * Those who fulfill the covenant of God and do not break the covenant. * And those who join what God has ordered to be joined and fear their Lord and dread the evil reckoning." The verses, until He said: "And those who break the covenant of God after its ratification and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those will have the curse, and they will have the worst home." The people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning of the covenant that these disbelieving sinners were described as having broken. Some of them said that it is God's command to His creation and His command to them regarding what He has ordered them to do in obeying Him and His prohibition of them regarding what He has prohibited them from disobeying Him in His books and on the tongues of His messengers. Their violation of this is their abandonment of working with it.

Others said: Rather, it is about the disbelievers of the

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

People of the Book and the hypocrites among them. The covenant of God that they broke is what God took from them in the Torah to act according to what is in it and to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he was sent and to believe in him and in what he brought from their Lord. Their breaking of that is their denial of it after knowing its truth and their rejection of that and their concealing knowledge of that from the people after God gave them a covenant from themselves to make it clear to the people and not to conceal it. So God the Almighty informed us that they threw it behind their backs and bought with it a small price. This is the choice of Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, and it is the statement of Muqatil ibn Hayyan.

Others said: Rather, what is meant by this verse is all the people of disbelief, polytheism and hypocrisy. His covenant with all of them in His Oneness is what He has set for them of evidence indicating His Lordship. He has also covenanted with them in His commands and prohibitions what He has used as evidence for His messengers of miracles that no one else among the people can produce the like of, bearing witness to their truthfulness. They said: Their refutation of that is their failure to acknowledge what has been proven to them to be true by evidence, and their denial of the messengers and books while they know that what they brought is true. Something similar to this has also been narrated from Muqatil ibn Hayyan, and it is good. Al-Zamakhshari inclined towards it, for he said: If you say: What is meant by the covenant of God? I said: What was focused in their minds of the argument for monotheism was as if it was a command that He commanded them to do and made them testify to it, and it is the meaning of the Almighty's saying: And He made them testify of themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yes.' Since He took the covenant from them from the books revealed to them, like His saying: And fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant. Others said: The covenant that the Almighty mentioned is the covenant that He took from them when He brought them forth from the loins of Adam, which He described in His saying: And when your Lord took from the children of Adam, from their loins, their descendants and made them testify of themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yes, we testify.' The two verses, and their violation of that was their failure to fulfill it, and this is how it was narrated from Muqatil ibn Hayyan as well. Ibn Jarir narrated these statements in his interpretation.

Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those are the losers. He said: They are six characteristics of the hypocrites. If they are in power over people, they show these characteristics: If they speak, they lie, if they promise, they break their promise, if they are entrusted, they betray. They break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined, and spread corruption on earth. If they are in power over people, they show three characteristics: If they speak, they lie, if they promise, they break their promise, and if they are entrusted, they betray. Al-Rabi' bin Anas also said the same. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation with his chain of transmission regarding the words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it. He said: It is what was entrusted to them in the Qur'an, so they acknowledged it and then disbelieved and broke it.

And His statement: And they sever that which God has ordered to be joined, it was said that what is meant by it is maintaining ties of kinship and blood relations, as Qatadah explained, like His statement, the Most High: Then would you, if you were given authority, cause corruption in the land and sever your ties of kinship? Ibn Jarir preferred this view. It was said that what is meant is more general than that, so everything that God has ordered to be joined and done, they sever it and abandon it. Muqatil ibn Hayyan said about His statement, the Most High: Those are the losers, he said about the Hereafter, and this is like His statement, the Most High: Those are the ones for whom is the curse, and for them is the worst home. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Everything that God attributes to non-Muslims, such as /loser, means disbelief, and whatever He attributes to Muslims, means sin. Ibn Jarir said about the Almighty's saying: Those are the losers. The losers is the plural of loser, and they are those who have diminished their own fortunes by disobeying God from His mercy, just as a man loses in his trade by losing some of his capital in his sale. Likewise the hypocrite and the disbeliever lose by God depriving them of His mercy which He created for His servants on the Day of Resurrection when they are most in need of His mercy. It is said from this that the man lost, the man loses, he loses, loss and loss, as Jarir ibn Atiyah said:

Indeed, he is a loser, he is the son of a people who created a channel

Fath al-Qadir

God revealed this verse in response to the infidels when they denied the parables that He, the Almighty, had given, such as His statement: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire and His statement: Or like a rainstorm from the sky. They said that God is too great and lofty to give examples. Al-Razi said: When God, the Almighty, had explained the evidence that the Qur'an is miraculous, He mentioned here a doubt that the infidels had raised to cast doubt on that, and he responded to it. The explanation of the doubt is that the Qur'an mentions bees, spiders, and ants, and these things are not appropriate to be mentioned in the speech of eloquent people, so the inclusion of them in the Qur'an casts doubt on its eloquence, let alone its being miraculous. God responded to them by saying that the smallness of these things does not cast doubt on eloquence if their mention contains profound wisdom. It is not hidden from you that the report of this doubt in this manner and the attribution of the denial to mere eloquence has no basis or evidence for it. The author of Al-Kashshaf had preceded it to something of this, and what we mentioned first appears to be what we mentioned because this verse came after the two examples that were mentioned before them, and their denunciation of the striking of examples with insignificant things does not necessarily mean that this is because it is a defect in eloquence and miracle. Modesty: a change and a brokenness that befalls a person from fear of what he is blamed for and condemned for: thus in Al-Kashshaf, and Al-Razi followed him in Mafatih Al-Ghaib. Al-Qurtubi said: The origin of modesty is to shrink from something and refrain from it for fear of falling into something ugly, and this is impossible for God. End quote. They differed in the interpretation of what is mentioned in this verse of modesty. It was said: It is permissible because it occurs in the speech narrated from the infidels. It was said: It is from the category of similarity as mentioned above. It was said: It is based on the way of representation. He said in Al-Kashshaf: Like his leaving the servant disappointed and that he does not return his hands empty from his giving due to his generosity by leaving someone who leaves the needy to him out of shyness before him. And Ibn Muhaisin and Ibn Kathir read in a narration from him wa yastaha with one ya', which is the language of Tamim and Bakr bin Wa'il, in which the movement of the first ya' was transferred to the ha' and was made quiescent, then the damma on the second was considered heavy and was made quiescent, so one of them was deleted due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. And the example was given: his reliance and his making. And what is in his saying: 26- ma ba'udhah is vague, meaning it requires the vagueness of what it entered into until it becomes more general than it was and more common in its individuals, and it is in the accusative case as a substitute for his saying: for example, and ba'udhah is an attribute of it for its vagueness, as stated by Al-Farra', Al-Zajaj, and Tha'lab, and it was said: it is redundant, and ba'udhah is a substitute for like. The accusative case of ba'udah in these two cases is clear. It was said that it is accusative by removing the preposition, and the meaning is: to strike an example of what is between ba'udah so the word ba'in was deleted. This was narrated from Al-Kisa'i. It was said that yadrab means ya'jil so ba'udah is the word ba'in. This was narrated from Al-Kisa'i. It was said that yadrab means ya'jil so ba'udah is the second object. Ad-Dahhak, Ibrahim bin Abi Ubla, and Ru'bah bin Al-A'aj read ba'udah in the nominative case, and this is the language of Tamim. Abu Al-Fath said: The reason for that is that ma is a noun in the position of aladhi, and ba'udah is in the nominative case because the subject is implied. It is possible that ma is an interrogative as if God Almighty said: ma ba'udah or what is above it so that the example is not struck with it, but rather it is used as an example with something that is much less than that. Ba'udah is a fa'ulah from ba'd if it is cut off. It is said: ba'd and ba'd mean the same thing. Ba'udah is the bug, the singular is ba'udah, and it was named thus because of its smallness, as Al-Jawhari and others said. And his saying: And what is above it Al-Kisa'i, Abu Ubaidah and others said. So what is above it, and God knows best, is what is below it: meaning that it is above it in smallness, like its wing. Al-Kisa'i said: This is like your saying in speech, Do you see it short? and the speaker says: Or above that, meaning shorter than you see. And it is possible that it is intended for what is greater than it in size. And the group said that. His saying: And as for those who believed, As is a particle that has the meaning of a condition, and Sibawayh estimated it as whatever it is, so it is like that. And the author of Al-Kashshaf mentioned that its benefit in speech is that it gives it the advantage of emphasis and made Sibawayh's estimate an evidence for that. And the pronoun in that refers to the example. And the truth is the established, and it is the opposite of falsehood, and the truth is one of the rights, and what is intended here is the first. And the grammarians differed regarding what, and it was said: It is like a single noun meaning: what thing did God want, so it is in the accusative case with wanted. Ibn Kaysan said: And that is the best. It was said: Ma is a complete noun in the nominative case as a subject, and tha means who, and it is the predicate of the subject with its relative clause, and its answer is in the accusative case in the first case and in the nominative case in the second case. Will is the opposite of dislike, and Muslims have agreed that it is permissible to use this word for God, the Most High, and for example Tha'lab said: It is accusative of separation, and the estimation is: He wanted for example. Ibn Kaysan said: It is accusative of the distinction that occurred in the place of the state, and this is stronger than the first. His saying: He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby is like an explanation of the two previous sentences beginning with amma, as it is a predicate from God, the Most High. It was said: It is a narration of the words of the disbelievers, as if they said: What does God mean by this example by which He divides people into misguidance and guidance? This is not correct, because the disbelievers do not acknowledge that there is any guidance in the Qur'an, nor do they acknowledge any misguidance against themselves. Al-Qurtubi said: There is no disagreement that His saying: And He misleads thereby only the wicked is from the words of God, the Most High. Al-Razi's research in his interpretation of Mafatih al-Ghayb in this place has been psychologically refined, its existence and length and its branches and origins clarified, so let it be referred to as it is very useful. As for the author of Al-Kashshaf, he relied here on his stick which he leans on in his interpretation, so he attributed misguidance to God the Almighty as a cause, so it is from the metaphorical attribution to the clothes of the real doer. Al-Qurtubi narrated from the people of truth among the interpreters that what is meant by his saying: misleads is to let down. And transgression is to depart from something, it is said: the date is transgressed: if it comes out of its shell. And the mouse from its hole, Al-Farra' mentioned the meaning of this. Abu Bakr bin Al-Anbari cited as evidence in his book Al-Zahir the saying of Ru'bah bin Al-A'aj on the meaning of transgression:

They wander in Najd and deep valleys, and commit sins against their will.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:26

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

Ibn al-A'rabi claimed that he had never heard of a sinner in the speech of the pre-Islamic era or in their poetry. This is refuted, as it has been reported from the Arabs and that it is from their speech by a group of the imams of the language such as Ibn Faris, al-Jawhari, Ibn al-Anbari and others. It has been proven in Sahih that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Five sins, the hadith. And he said in al-Kashaf: Sin is going beyond the intended purpose, then he mentioned the second half of the aforementioned verse of Ruwiya, then he said: And the sinner in Islamic law is the one who goes beyond the command of God by committing a major sin. End quote. Al-Qurtubi said: And sin in the usage of Islamic law is going beyond the obedience of God Almighty, so it may apply to the one who went beyond disbelief and the one who went beyond disobedience. End quote. This is more appropriate in the linguistic meaning, and there is no reason to limit it to some of those who went beyond others. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: The people of the Qiblah differed as to whether he is a believer or a disbeliever? According to our companions, he is a believer, according to the Khawarij, he is an unbeliever, and according to the Mu'tazila, he is neither a believer nor an unbeliever. The opponent provided evidence with the words of God Almighty: How evil is the name of immorality after faith and His words: Indeed, the hypocrites are the immoral and His words: He has endeared faith to you and made it pleasing in your hearts, and He has made hateful to you disbelief, immorality, and disobedience. This issue is long and is mentioned in the science of theology. End quote.

26. The Almighty's saying, Indeed, God is not ashamed to make an example of a gnat or anything greater than that. The reason for the revelation of this verse is that when God, the Almighty, made an example of the fly and the spider, He said, Indeed, those you invoke besides God will never create a fly, even if they banded together for that purpose. 73-Al-Hajj and He said, The parable of those who take protectors besides God is like that of the spider who builds a home. 41-Al-Ankabut The Jews said: What did God mean by mentioning these vile things? It was said: The polytheists said: We do not worship a god who mentions such things, so God, the Almighty, revealed, Indeed, God is not ashamed, meaning He does not refrain, nor is shame prevented, to make an example, mentioning a likeness, not a gnat. "Ma" is a relative clause, meaning an example of the gnat, and a gnat is an accusative in place of the example.

And the mosquitoes are small bugs. It was called a mosquito as if it were some bugs. And above it means the fly and the spider. Abu Ubaidah said: meaning what is below it, as it is said: and above that, meaning more ignorant. As for those who believe in Muhammad and the Qur'an, they know that it means: the parable is the truth the truth "from their Lord. As for those who disbelieve, they say: What did God intend by this parable?" That is, by this parable. So when he deleted the alif and lam, he made it accusative in the state and in the cut-off. Then he answered them and said: He misleads thereby meaning by this parable many of the disbelievers, because they deny it and thus increase in misguidance. And He guides thereby meaning by this parable many of the believers and they believe it. Misguidance is turning away from the truth to falsehood. It was said: It is destruction. It is said that water is lost in milk if it perishes. And He misleads thereby only the wicked the disbelievers. The root of misguidance is to go out. It is said that a date fasqat if it comes out of its shell. God the Most High said: So he went out from the command of his Lord 50-Al-Kahf, meaning he went out. Then he described them and said:

Tafsir al-Baidawi

26- God is not ashamed to make an example of a mosquito. Since the previous verses included types of example, He followed that with a statement of its beauty, what is true for it and the condition for it, which is that it be in accordance with what is represented in terms of the aspect to which the example is attached in terms of greatness, smallness, baseness and honor without the represented, for example is only resorted to in order to reveal the meaning represented and lift the veil from it and present it in the form of the tangible scenes, so that the imagination may help the mind in it and reconcile it with it, for the pure meaning is only perceived by the mind with a dispute from the imagination, because it is by its nature to incline toward the senses and love imitation, and for this reason examples became widespread in the divine books and became widespread in the expressions of the eloquent and the signs of the wise, so the insignificant is represented as the great is represented by the great, even though the example is greater than every great thing, as in the Gospel the rancor of the chests is represented by bran, and the hard hearts are represented by pebbles, and addressing the foolish by stirring up the wasps. It was said in the speech of the Arabs: Hearing more than a tick, more flighty than a bed, and more precious than the brain of a mosquito. No, what the ignorant infidels said: Why did God compare the state of the hypocrites to the state of those who set fire to fire? And the people of misfortune and idol worship in weakness and frailty to the spider's web? And made it less than a fly and lower in status than it? God, the Almighty, is too high and majestic to make examples and mention flies and spiders. Also, when He guided them to what indicates that the challenge is a revealed revelation? And He arranged for it a threat to whoever disbelieves in it and a promise to whoever believes in it after its matter becomes clear? He began to answer what they attacked Him with, so He, the Almighty, said: Indeed, God is not ashamed. That is, He does not leave off making an example of a mosquito, leaving someone who is ashamed to represent it due to its insignificance. Modesty is the soul's contraction from the ugly in opposition to blame, and it is the middle ground between impudence, which is daring to do ugly things and not caring about them, and shyness, which is the soul's withdrawal from action absolutely. It is derived from life, for it is a weakness that befalls the animal force and prevents it from its actions. So it was said: A man became shy, just as it is said: Nasi Wahshi, if his forgetfulness and his sadness become weak. And when it is used to describe the Almighty, as came in the hadith: God is shy of a gray-haired Muslim to punish him. "God is shy and generous, and is shy when the servant raises his hands to return them empty until He puts good in them." What is meant by it is the necessary abandonment of contraction, just as what is meant by His mercy and anger is the occurrence of good and bad that are necessary for their meanings. Similar to it is the saying of someone describing camels:

If the water is too strong, it presents itself as a ram in a vase of roses.

Rather, it was changed from omission because of the representation and exaggeration in it. The verse specifically suggests that it came in contrast to what occurred in the speech of the infidels. The striking of the example is done from striking the ring, and its origin is that one thing fell upon another, and that its connection is the location according to Al-Khalil with the omission of min, accusative by the verb leading to it after its deletion according to Sibawayh. And ma is an ambiguity that increases the ambiguity and prevalence of the indefinite noun and blocks the paths of restriction from it, like your saying give me a book what, meaning: any book. Or it is added for emphasis like that in the saying of the Most High: So by the mercy of God and we do not mean by added the wasted idle talk, because the entire Qur'an is guidance and clarification, but rather what was not placed for a meaning intended by it, and it was only placed so that it is mentioned with something else and thus it provides it with reliability and strength, and it is an increase in guidance without detracting from it. And mosquito is an appositive of for example. Or it is the object of to strike, and for example is a state that precedes it because it is indefinite. Or they are its two objects because it includes the meaning of sentences. It was read in the nominative case as the predicate of a deleted subject, and based on this, ma has other possibilities: that it is a relative pronoun whose beginning was deleted, as was deleted in his saying: Completely upon the one who did good, and a relative pronoun with an attribute likewise, and its place is the accusative as a substitute in both ways. And it is an interrogative pronoun as the subject, as if when he rejected their exclusion, God struck examples, then he said after that: What is a mosquito and what is above it so that it is not struck as an example, but rather it can be struck with something more insignificant than that.

And its equivalent is so-and-so does not care what he gives, whether it is a dinar or two dinars. And the mosquito is a fa'ul from the ba'd, which means cutting like bad' and 'adhab, and it is prevalent in this type like scratches.

And what is above it is in apposition to a mosquito, or what was made a noun, and its meaning is what is greater than it in size, such as a fly or a spider, as if he intended by it to respond to what they found objectionable. The meaning is that he is not ashamed to make an example of a mosquito, let alone something larger than it, or in the meaning for which it was made an example, which is smallness and insignificance like its wing, for the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him, made it an example for the world, and similar to it in both possibilities is what was narrated that a man in Mina fell on the rope of a tent, so Aisha, may God be pleased with her, said: I heard the Messenger of God, peace and blessings be upon him, say: There is no Muslim who is pricked by a thorn or something greater than it, except that a degree is written for him because of it, and a sin is erased because of it. So it is possible for what exceeds the thorn in pain, such as falling, and what is greater than it in smallness, such as the tip of an ant, based on his saying, peace and blessings be upon him: Whatever harm befalls a believer is an expiation for his sins, even the tip of an ant.

As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. As for the letter of detail, it separates what is generalized and confirms what it begins with and includes the meaning of the condition, and therefore it is answered with the letter fa. Sibawayh said: As for Zayd, its meaning is, whatever happens, Zayd is going without a doubt, and that it is a determination from him. The original was to include the letter fa in the sentence because it is the consequence, but they disliked giving it the letter of the condition, so they included it in the predicate, and they replaced the subject with the condition verbally. In beginning the two sentences with it, there is an extinguishing of the matter of the believers and a reliance on their knowledge, and a strong condemnation of the disbelievers according to their saying, and the pronoun in that is for the example, or to be used.

The established truth that cannot be denied includes established entities, correct actions, and truthful statements. From their saying, the truth of the matter, if it is established. From this, a garment that is firmly woven.

As for those who disbelieve, they say, 'It was his right.' As for those who disbelieve, they do not know, to match his counterpart and contrast his counterpart. But since their statement was clear evidence of their complete ignorance, he turned to it by way of metaphor to be like proof of it.

What did God intend by this example? has two possible meanings: that ma is an interrogative and dha means who and what comes after it is its relative clause, and the whole is the predicate of ma. Or that ma and dha are one noun meaning what thing, in the accusative case as the object, like ma God intended. The best way to answer it is to raise it in the first place and lower it in the second, so that the answer matches

Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - that of a mosquito or what is larger than that. As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord. But as for those who disbelieve, they say, "What did God intend by this as an example?" He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby. And He misleads not thereby except the defiantly disobedient.

the question. Will: the inclination of the soul and its inclination to do an action such that it compels it to do it. It is said of the power that is the beginning of the inclination, and the first is with the action and the second is before it. Both meanings are inconceivable for the Creator, the Most High, to be described by them. Therefore, there is a difference of opinion regarding the meaning of His will. It has been said: His will for His actions is that He is not absent-minded or forced, and for the actions of others He commands them to do them. Therefore, sins were not by his will. It was said: His knowledge that the matter includes the most perfect system and the most suitable aspect, so he urges the one who is able to obtain it. The truth is: It is giving preference to one of his abilities over the other and specifying it in one way rather than another, or a meaning that necessitates this preference. It is more general than choice, for it is an inclination with preference, and in this there is contempt and disdain. And for example is in the accusative case for distinction, or the state, like the Almighty's saying: This she-camel of God is a sign for you.

"He misleads many thereby and guides many thereby." The answer to what, that is: misleading many thereby and guiding many thereby. The verb was placed in the place of the source to indicate occurrence and renewal, or to clarify the two sentences beginning with either, and to record that knowledge of it being true is guidance and clarification, and that ignorance - in terms of its being mentioned and the denial of its good source - is misguidance and immorality. The abundance of each of the two tribes is in relation to themselves, not in comparison to their counterparts, for the guided are few in comparison to the people of misguidance, as God Almighty said: And few are they, "And few of My servants are grateful." It is possible that the abundance of the misguided is in terms of number, and the abundance of the guided is in terms of virtue and honor, as He said:

Few if they count, many if they tighten

He said:

Generous people are many in the country, even if they are few, just as others are few, even if they are many.

And He misguides thereby only the wicked, meaning those who go beyond the bounds of faith, as God Almighty says: Indeed, the hypocrites are the wicked, from their saying: The date has fallen from its husk when it comes out. The root of wickedness is: going beyond the intended goal. Ru'bah said:

Intentionally immoral

In Islamic law, the immoral person is the one who goes against God's command by committing a major sin. He has three levels:

The first: pretending to be stupid, which is when he commits it sometimes and finds it ugly.

Second: Preoccupation, which is when one gets used to committing it without caring about it.

Third: Denial, which is that he commits it and approves of it, but if he approaches this station and exceeds its limits, he removes the yoke of faith from his neck and wears disbelief. As long as he is at the level of pretending to be stupid or immersed, the name of believer is not taken away from him because he is characterized by belief, which is the name of faith, and because of the Almighty's saying: And if two parties among the believers should fight (Al-Baqara: 10). And the Mu'tazila, when they said: Faith is an expression of the sum of belief, acknowledgment, and action, and disbelief is the denial and denial of the truth, they made it a third category, descending between the two positions of the believer and the disbeliever because each of them shares some of the rulings, and the specification of misguidance to them, arranged according to the characteristic of immorality, indicates that he is the one who prepared them for misguidance and led them to misguidance. This is because their disbelief, their deviation from the truth, and their insistence on falsehood diverted their thoughts from the wisdom of the parable to the insignificance of the parable, until their ignorance became entrenched and their misguidance increased, so they denied it and mocked it. It was read yudhlil in the passive form and al-fasiqu in the nominative case.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:27

Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - it is those who are the losers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Those who break the covenant of God) what He has promised them in the books regarding belief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace after ratifying it confirming it to them and sever what God has ordered to be joined regarding belief in the Prophet, kinship, and other things. And that is a substitute for the pronoun with it and spread corruption on earth through sins and obstruction of belief. Those who are described by what was mentioned are the losers because of their destiny in the eternal Fire upon them.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: This is a description from God, the Most High, of the wicked, about whom He informed that none but them will be led astray by the example that hypocrisy has given, so He said: And God does not lead astray by the example that He gives, as described before in the previous verses, except the wicked who break the covenant of God after its ratification.

Then the people of knowledge differed about the meaning of the covenant that God described these wicked people as having broken:

Some of them said: It is God's command to His creation, and His command to them to do what He commanded them to do in obeying Him, and His prohibition of them from what He prohibited them from disobeying Him, in His books and on the tongue of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. And their violation of that is their abandonment of acting upon it.

Others said: These verses were revealed about the disbelievers among the People of the Book and the hypocrites among them, and God, the Most High, meant them when He said: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them whether you warn them Al-Baqarah 2:6, and when He said: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day' Al-Baqarah 2:8. Everything in these verses is a reproach and rebuke to them until the end of their stories. They said: The covenant of God that they broke after their pledge was what God took from them in the Torah to act according to what was in it, and to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he was sent, and to believe in him and in what he brought from their Lord. Their breach of that was their denial of it after knowing its truth, their rejection of it, and their concealing knowledge of it from the people, after God gave them a covenant from themselves to make it clear to the people and not to conceal it. So God, the Most High, informed us that they threw it behind their backs and bought with it a small price.

Some of them said: God meant by this verse all the people of polytheism, disbelief and hypocrisy. His covenant with all of them in His Oneness: what He presented to them of evidence indicating His Lordship. His covenant with them in His commands and prohibitions: what He presented to His messengers of miracles that no one else among the people is able to produce the like of, testifying to their truthfulness. They said: And their refutation of that is their failure to acknowledge what has been proven to them to be true by evidence, and their denial of the messengers and the books, despite their knowledge that what they brought is true.

Others said: The covenant that God Almighty mentioned is the covenant that He took from them when He brought them forth from the loins of Adam, which He described in His saying: And when your Lord took from the children of Adam - from their loins - their descendants and made them testify of themselves, [saying], 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yes, we testify.' (7:172-173) They said, Yes, we testify. (7:173) This should not bring you back to the Day of Resurrection, Indeed, we were of this unaware. Or you should say, "It was only our fathers who associated others with God before, and we were descendants after them. Then will You destroy us for what the falsifiers have done?" Their breaking of that is their failure to fulfill it.

The most correct opinion in my opinion is the opinion of those who said: These verses were revealed about the infidel Jewish rabbis who were among the immigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the remnants of the Children of Israel who were close to them, and those who were polytheists among the hypocrites whose stories we have explained in the past of this book of ours.

We have shown that the words of God Almighty: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same for them Al-Baqarah 2:6, and His words: And among the people is he who says, 'We believe in God and the Last Day' Al-Baqarah 2:8, were revealed about them and about those who were like them in associating partners with God. However, in my opinion, even though these verses were revealed about them, they are meant for everyone who was like them in misguidance, and what is meant by those that are in accordance with the description of the hypocrites in particular is all the hypocrites? And what is in accordance with the description of the disbelieving rabbis of the Jews is all those who were similar to them in their disbelief.

This is because God, the Most High, sometimes describes all of them with the attribute, because He mentioned all of them first in the verses that mentioned their stories, and sometimes He describes some of them with the attribute, because He preferred them in the first verses between their two groups, I mean: the group of hypocrites from the idol worshippers and the polytheists, and the group of the infidel rabbis of the Jews. So those who break the covenant of God are those who abandon what God has entrusted to them of acknowledging Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and explaining his prophethood to the people, concealing the clarification of that after their knowledge of it, and what God has taken from them in that, as God, the Most High, said: And when God took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture, 'You shall make it clear to the people and not conceal it,' but they threw it behind their backs (Al-Imran: 187). Their throwing that behind their backs is their breaking the covenant that He entrusted to them in the Torah that we have described, and their abandoning working by it.

Rather, I said that he meant by these verses whom I said he meant, because the verses from the beginning of verses five and six of Surat Al-Baqarah were revealed about them, until the end of their stories. And in the verse that comes after the report about the creation of Adam and its explanation in His saying: O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant Al-Baqarah 2:40. His addressing them, may He be glorified, with fulfilling that specifically and not to the rest of humanity is what indicates that His saying: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it is intended for their disbelievers and hypocrites, and whoever of their followers from the polytheists who worship idols in their misguidance. However, even though the address was to those described from the two groups, it is included in their rulings, and in what God has obligated for them of threat, blame, and rebuke, everyone who is on their path and method from all creation and the types of nations addressed with the command and prohibition.

The meaning of the verse is: And none misguides thereby except those who abandon obedience to God, who go outside of following His commands and prohibitions, who break the covenants of God that He made with them, in the books that He revealed to His messengers and on the tongues of His prophets, by following the command of His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought, and obeying God in what He imposed upon them in the Torah of explaining His command to the people, and informing them that they find him written with them that he is a messenger from God and that obedience to him is obligatory, and leaving that concealed from them. And their breaking and violating that is their disobedience to God in His covenant with them in what was described as a covenant with them after their Lord gave them the covenant to fulfill that. As our Lord, the Most High, described them in His saying: "Then there came after them a generation who inherited the Scripture, taking the goods of this world and saying, 'We will be forgiven.' But if a goods like it comes to them, they take it. Was not a covenant taken from them of the Scripture that they would not say about God except the truth?" (al-A'raf 7:169)

As for his saying: after his covenant, he means: after

God took confidence in him, by taking his covenants to fulfill what he entrusted to them in that. However, confidence is a source from your saying: I took confidence from so-and-so, and the covenant is a noun from it.

The letter ha in the covenant refers to the name of God.

This verse may include anyone who has the characteristics that God described these immoral hypocrites and infidels with, in terms of breaking covenants, severing family ties, and causing corruption on earth.

Bishr bin Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it, then beware of breaking this covenant, for God hates its breaking and has threatened in it, and has presented in the verses of the Qur'an an argument, an admonition, and advice for it. We do not know that God, may He be glorified and exalted, has threatened for a sin what He has threatened for breaking the covenant. So whoever gives God's covenant and pledge from the fruit of his heart, let him fulfill it for the sake of God.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding His statement: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those are the losers. These are six characteristics of the hypocrites. If they are victorious, they will display all six of these characteristics: When they speak, they lie; when they promise, they break their promise; when they are entrusted, they betray; and they break the covenant of God after ratifying it; they sever what God has ordered to be joined; and they spread corruption on earth. And if they are victorious, they will display the three characteristics: When they speak, they lie; when they promise, they break their promise; and when they are entrusted, they betray.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And they sever what God has ordered to be joined.

Abu Ja'far said: What God encouraged us to connect and condemned severing in this verse is the womb. He made this clear in His Book, where God the Almighty said: Then, if you were given authority, would you perhaps cause corruption in the land and sever your ties of kinship? (Muhammad 47:22). What He meant by the womb were the relatives who were united with him by the womb of one mother. Severing that was his injustice in not fulfilling what God obligated of her rights and made obligatory of being dutiful to her. Connecting with her was fulfilling what is due to her from the rights of God that He obligated of her, and showing her compassion in the way that compassion is due to her.

And that which is with yusul is in the accusative case, meaning that it is returned to the position of the ha' in bih. So the meaning of the statement is: And they sever that which God has commanded to be joined. And the ha' in bih is a metaphor for mentioning that he should be joined. And based on what we said in interpreting his statement: And they sever that which God has commanded to be joined, and that it is the womb, Qatada used to say:

Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: And they sever what God has commanded to be joined, so by God, they sever what God has commanded to be joined by severing kinship ties and blood relations.

Some of them interpreted this as meaning that God condemned them for severing ties with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the believers in him and their relatives. They cited as evidence for this the general meaning of the verse, and that there is no indication that it refers to some of what God commanded to be connected and not others.

Abu Ja'far said: This is an interpretation of the verse that is not far from the truth, but God Almighty has mentioned the hypocrites in more than one verse in His Book, and described them as severing family ties. This is similar to that, but even if it is like that, it indicates God's condemnation of every severer of family ties that God has commanded to be maintained, whether it is family ties or otherwise.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And they spread corruption on earth.

Abu Ja'far said: Their corruption on earth is what we described before, their disobedience to their Lord, their disbelief in Him, their denial of His Messenger, their denial of his prophethood, and their denial of what he brought them from God, that it is the truth from Him.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Those are the losers.

Abu Ja'far said: The losers are the plural of loser, and the losers are those who deprive themselves of their share of God's mercy by disobeying Him, just as a man loses in his trade, when some of his capital is lost in his sale. Likewise the disbeliever and the hypocrite, he loses because God has deprived him of His mercy which He created for His servants on the Day of Resurrection, when he is most in need of His mercy. It is said of this: The man lost, he loses, a loss, and a loss, as Jarir ibn `Atiyah said:

Indeed, he is a loser, he is the son of a people who created a channel

He means by his saying: in loss, that is, in what their share of honor and generosity brings them. It has been said that the meaning of those are the losers is: those are the ones who perish. It may be possible that the one who said that meant what we said about the perishing of the one whom God described with the attribute He described him with in this verse, by God depriving him of what He deprived him of of His mercy, by his disobedience to Him and his disbelief in Him. So the interpretation of the speech is taken to mean its meaning, without clarifying the interpretation of the word itself, for the people of interpretation may have done that for many reasons that call them to it.

Some of them said about this:

It was narrated to me on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Everything that God attributes to non-Muslims, such as a name like loser, he means by it disbelief. And whatever He attributes to Muslims, he means by it sin.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - it is those who are the losers.

It has seven issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: those who "those who" is in the accusative case as an attribute of the wicked, and if you wish, you can put it in the nominative case as the predicate of a deleted subject, meaning they are the ones who. And it has been mentioned before.

Second: The Almighty's saying: They break. Breaking means spoiling what you have concluded of a building, a rope, or a covenant. And an-Naqdah means what is broken from a rope of hair. And contradiction in speech means that you speak in a way that contradicts its meaning. And an-Naqdah in poetry means what is broken by it. And an-Naqd means what is broken. People differed in identifying this covenant. It was said: It is what God took from the children of Adam when He extracted them from his back. And it was said: It is God Almighty's commandment to His creation, and His command to them with what He commanded them with from His power, and His prohibition of them from what He prohibited them from of disobedience in His books on the tongues of His messengers, and their breaking of that is abandoning working with it. And it was said: Rather, setting up evidence for His Oneness in the heavens and the earth and all of creation is like a covenant, and their breaking of that is abandoning looking into that. And it was said: It is what He entrusted to those who were given the Book to clarify the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and not to conceal his matter. So the verse is about the People of the Book. Abu Ishaq Al-Zajaj said: His covenant, glory be to Him, is what He took from the prophets and those who came after them, that they would not disbelieve in the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. The evidence for that is: And when God took a covenant from the prophets until His saying, And you took upon that My covenant meaning My covenant.

I said: The apparent meaning of what comes before and after indicates that it is about the infidels. So these are five opinions, and the second opinion includes them all.

Third: The Almighty's saying: After his covenant. Covenant: a pledge confirmed by an oath, derived from the root word wathaqaḥ and mu'ahadah, which means strength in a contract, binding, and the like. The plural is mawāṭiq, based on the original, because the root word is muthāq, the waw became a ya' because of the kasrah before it - and also miyāthiq and miyāṭiq. Ibn al-A'rabi recited:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:27

Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - it is those who are the losers.

Fever, time does not come except with our permission, and we do not ask people for a covenant

The covenant: the covenant. The treaty: the agreement, and from it the Almighty's saying: And His covenant by which He has bound you.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: And they sever. Severing is well-known, and the source - in the womb - is severing. It is said: He severed his womb with severing, so he is a man of severing and severing, an example of a hamza. And I cut the rope severing. And I cut the river severing. And I cut the birds severing and severing if they went from one country to another. And the people were afflicted with severing: if their waters decreased. And a man with severing: meaning astonishment.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: What God has commanded to be joined is in the accusative case with they cut off. And that if you wish is a substitute for what and if you wish from har in beh and that is better. It is also permissible for it to be so that it will not be joined, meaning out of dislike for it to be joined. There is a difference of opinion as to what is the thing that was commanded to be joined. It was said: It was said: It was commanded to connect words with deeds, so they severed them by saying and not doing. It was said: It was commanded to connect belief in all of His prophets, so they severed it by believing in some of them and disbelieving some of them. It was said: The reference is to the religion of God and His worship on earth, and establishing His laws and observing His limits. It is general in everything that God Almighty has commanded to be joined. This is the opinion of the majority, and the womb is part of this.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: And they spread corruption on earth, meaning they worship other than God Almighty and are unjust in their actions, as they are according to their desires, and this is the height of corruption.

Those are the losers is the subject and predicate. They is redundant, and it is possible that they is a second subject, the losers is its predicate, and the second and its predicate are the predicate of the first, as mentioned above. The loser is the one who has diminished his share of success and victory. Loss is the deficiency, whether in the balance or otherwise. Jarir said:

Indeed, Sulait is in loss. He is the son of a people who created a channel.

By loss he means what diminishes their fortunes and honor. Al-Jawhari said: I lost something with the fat-ha and I made it lose it. Loss, loss, and loss mean misguidance and destruction. So the one who perishes is called a loser, because he lost himself and his family on the Day of Resurrection and was prevented from his home in Paradise.

Seventh: This verse is evidence that fulfilling a covenant and adhering to it, and every covenant that a person has bound himself to, is permissible for him to break, whether it is between a Muslim or someone else, because God Almighty has condemned those who break their covenant. He said: Fulfill contracts, and He said to His Prophet, peace be upon him: But if you fear treachery from a people, then throw back to them on equal terms, so He forbade him from treachery, and that can only happen by breaking the covenant, as will be explained in its place, God willing.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on some of the companions that when God gave these two examples for the hypocrites, meaning His saying: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky the three verses, the hypocrites said: God is too high and majestic to give these examples, so God revealed this verse up to His saying: They are the losers. And Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatada when God mentioned the spider and the fly, the polytheists said: Why are the spider and the fly mentioned? So God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to set forth an example - of a gnat or anything greater than that. Saeed said on the authority of Qatada, meaning that God is not ashamed to mention anything of the truth, whether small or large, and when God mentioned the fly and the spider in His book, the people of misguidance said: What did God intend by mentioning this? Then God revealed, God is not ashamed to make an example of a mosquito or anything greater than that. I said The first phrase from Qatada indicates that this verse is Meccan, but it is not. The phrase in Saeed's narration from Qatada is closer, and God knows best. Ibn Jurayj narrated from Mujahid something similar to this second one from Qatada. Ibn Abi Hatim said, something similar to what As-Suddi and Qatada said was narrated from Al-Hasan and Ismail bin Abi Khalid. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said from Ar-Rabi' bin Anas regarding this verse, he said, "This is an example that God made for the world, that the mosquito lives as long as it is hungry, but when it gets fat, it dies. And likewise the example of these people for whom this example is made in the Qur'an, when they are filled with worldly pleasures, God seizes them at that time." Then he recited, But when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, We opened to them the gates of every [good] thing. This was narrated by Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it from the hadith of Abu Ja'far from Ar-Rabi' bin Anas from Abu Al-'Aliyah in a similar manner, and God knows best. This is their disagreement about the reason for revelation. Ibn Jarir chose what Al-Suddi narrated because it is most appropriate to the surah, and the meaning of the verse is that the Almighty informed that He is not ashamed, that is, He is not ashamed, and it was said that He is not afraid to give an example, that is, any example, whether it is small or large. Ma here is for diminution, and Ba'wadah could be in the accusative case as a substitute, as you say I will strike a strike, so it is believed with the smallest thing, or Ma could be an indefinite noun described by Ma'wadah. Ibn Jarir chose that Ma is a relative pronoun and Ma'wadah is parsed according to its parsing. He said that this is permissible in the speech of the Arabs, that they parse the relative pronoun Ma and Man according to their parsing, because they are sometimes definite and sometimes indefinite, as Hassan ibn Thabit said:

It is enough for us to have a superiority over others that the Prophet Muhammad loved us.

He said: It is permissible for ba'udah to be in the accusative case by deleting the preposition, and the meaning of the statement is: God is not ashamed to give an example between a gnat and what is above it, and this is what Al-Kisa'i and Al-Farra' chose, and Ad-Dahhak and Ibrahim bin Ubla read ba'udah in the nominative case. Ibn Jinni said: It is a relative clause for ma and the pronoun is deleted as in his saying perfectly upon what is best meaning upon what is best, and Sibawayh narrated: I am not the one who will say anything to you, meaning the one who will say anything to you. And the Almighty's saying: and what is above it has two opinions: One of them is what is below it in smallness and insignificance, as if a man is described as mean and stingy and the listener says yes and he is above that - meaning in what you described - and this is the opinion of Al-Kisa'i and Abu Ubaid, and Al-Razi and most of the investigators said it. And in the hadith: If the world weighed in the sight of God the wing of a mosquito, He would not have given a disbeliever a sip of water from it. The second: What is above it is for what is greater than it, because there is nothing more insignificant or smaller than a mosquito. This is the statement of Qatada bin Di'amah and the choice of Ibn Jarir, as it is supported by what Muslim narrated on the authority of Aisha, may God be pleased with her, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: There is no Muslim who is pricked by a thorn or something greater than it, except that a degree is written for him because of it and a sin is erased from him because of it. So he informed that he does not belittle anything to use as an example, even if it is as insignificant and small as a mosquito, just as he does not disdain to create it, likewise he does not disdain to use it as an example, just as he used the fly and the spider as an example in His statement: "O mankind, an example is presented, so listen to it. Indeed, those you invoke besides God will never create a fly, even if they banded together for that purpose. And if the fly steals away something from them, they cannot recover it from it. Weak are the seeker and the sought." And He said: "The example of those who take protectors other than God is like that of the al-Ankabut 29: it builds a home. And indeed, the flimsiest of homes is the spider's home, if they only knew." And God, the Most High, said: Have you not seen how God presents a parable of the worldly life, and the like of the worldly life is like the likeness of the earth. For example, a good word is like a good tree, whose root is firm and whose branches are in the sky. It brings forth its fruit at all times by permission of its Lord. And God presents examples for the people that perhaps they will be reminded. And the example of a bad word is like a bad tree, uprooted from the surface of the earth, having no stability. God makes firm those who believe, with the firm word, in worldly life and in the Hereafter. And God sends astray the wrongdoers, and God does what He wills. And God, the Most High, said: "God presents an example: a slave owned by someone who has no power over anything." Then He said: "And God presents an example: two men, one of them mute, unable to do anything, and he is a burden on his master. Wherever he directs him, he brings no good. Are they equal to one who enjoins justice?" He also said: "He presents to you an example from among yourselves: Do you have among those your right hands possess partners in what We have provided for you?" He said: "God presents an example: a man in whom are partners who quarrel." He said: And these parables We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. And in the Qur'an there are many parables. Some of the Salaf said: If I hear a parable in the Qur'an and do not understand it, I cry for myself because God said: And these parables We present to the people, but none will grasp them except those of knowledge. And Mujahid said regarding the words of God the Almighty: Indeed, God is not ashamed to present an example - be it that of a gnat or anything greater than that. The believers believe in parables, whether small or large, and they know that they are the truth from their Lord, and God guides them by them. Qatada said: But as for those who have believed, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, meaning they know that it is the speech of the Most Merciful and that it is from God. Something similar was narrated from Mujahid, Al-Hasan, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: As for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, meaning this parable. As for those who disbelieve, they say, 'What does God intend by this as an example?' As He said in Surat al-Muddaththir 74: "And We have not made the keepers of the Fire except angels. And We have not made their number except as a trial for those who disbelieve - that those who were given the Scripture will be certain and those who have believed will increase in faith and those who were given the Scripture and the believers will not doubt and that those in whose hearts is hypocrisy and the disbelievers will say, 'What does God intend by this as an example?'" Thus does God leave astray whom He wills and guides whom He wills. And none knows the soldiers of your Lord except Him. "And He leaves astray many thereby and guides many thereby. And He leaves astray none thereby except the wicked." Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: He leaves astray many thereby meaning the hypocrites and He guides the believers thereby. So these people increase in misguidance to their misguidance because they deny what they knew to be true with certainty from the parable that God set forth for them, and that when He set forth it was in accordance with it, so that is God's misguidance. And

He guides thereby many of the people of faith and belief, and He increases their guidance to their guidance and their faith to their faith, because they believe in what they have learned to be true, with certainty that it is in accordance with what God has given as an example for him, and their acknowledgment of it. This is guidance from God to them through it. And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: They are the hypocrites. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: They are the hypocrites. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. He said: The disbelievers know it and disbelieve in it. Qatada said: And He misguides thereby none but the wicked. So they became wicked, so God led them astray in their wickedness. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us on the authority of Ishaq bin Sulayman on the authority of Abu Sinan on the authority of Amr bin Murrah on the authority of Mus'ab bin Sa'd on the authority of Sa'd. He misguides thereby many, meaning the Khawarij. Shu'bah said on the authority of 'Amr ibn Murrah on the authority of Mus'ab ibn Sa'd who said: I asked my father and said: The words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it to the end of the verse: He said: They are the Kharijites. This chain of transmission, even if it is authentic on the authority of Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas, may God be pleased with him, is an interpretation of the meaning, not that the verse was intended to explicitly mention the Khawarij who rebelled against Ali at Nahrawan, for those were not present at the time of the revelation of the verse, but rather they are included in it with those who entered because they were called Khawarij for their rebellion against the Imam and the implementation of the laws of Islam. The wicked in the language is also the one who rebels against obedience, and the Arabs say fasqat al-rutbah when it comes out of its shell, and for this reason the mouse is called fuwaisqa because it comes out of its hole to corrupt. It is proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of 'Aishah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Five wicked things are to be killed in the sacred precincts and outside of it: the crow, the kite, the scorpion, the mouse, and the rabid dog." The wicked includes the infidel and the sinner, but the wickedness of the infidel is more severe and more heinous, and what is meant by it is: From the verse, the disbelieving sinner, and God knows best, as evidenced by His description of them in His Almighty saying: Those who break the covenant of God after its ratification and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those are the losers. These attributes are the attributes of the disbelievers that are based on the attributes of the believers, as God Almighty said in Surat Ar-Ra'd: "Is he who knows that what has been revealed to you from your Lord is the truth like one who is blind? Only those with understanding will remember. * Those who fulfill the covenant of God and do not break the covenant. * And those who join what God has ordered to be joined and fear their Lord and dread the evil reckoning." The verses, until He said: "And those who break the covenant of God after its ratification and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those will have the curse, and they will have the worst home." The people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning of the covenant that these disbelieving sinners were described as having broken. Some of them said that it is God's command to His creation and His command to them regarding what He has ordered them to do in obeying Him and His prohibition of them regarding what He has prohibited them from disobeying Him in His books and on the tongues of His messengers. Their violation of this is their abandonment of working with it.

Others said: Rather, it is about the disbelievers of the People of the Book and the hypocrites among them. The covenant of God that they broke is what God took from them in the Torah to act according to what is in it and to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he was sent and to believe in him and in what he brought from their Lord. Their breaking of that is their denial of it after knowing its truth and their rejection of that and their concealing knowledge of that from the people after God gave them a covenant from themselves to make it clear to the people and not to conceal it. So God the Almighty informed us that they threw it behind their backs and bought with it a small price. This is the choice of Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, and it is the statement of Muqatil ibn Hayyan.

Others said: Rather, what is meant by this verse is all the people of disbelief, polytheism and hypocrisy. His covenant with all of them in His Oneness is what He has set for them of evidence indicating His Lordship. He has also covenanted with them in His commands and prohibitions what He has used as evidence for His messengers of miracles that no one else among the people can produce the like of, bearing witness to their truthfulness. They said: Their refutation of that is their failure to acknowledge what has been proven to them to be true by evidence, and their denial of the messengers and books while they know that what they brought is true. Something similar to this has also been narrated from Muqatil ibn Hayyan, and it is good. Al-Zamakhshari inclined towards it, for he said: If you say: What is meant by the covenant of God? I said: What was focused in their minds of the argument for monotheism was as if it was a command that He commanded them to do and made them testify to it, and it is the meaning of the Almighty's saying: And He made them testify of themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yes.' Since He took the covenant from them from the books revealed to them, like His saying: And fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant. Others said: The covenant that the Almighty mentioned is the covenant that He took from them when He brought them forth from the loins of Adam, which He described in His saying: And when your Lord took from the children of Adam, from their loins, their descendants and made them testify of themselves, 'Am I not your Lord?' They said, 'Yes, we testify.' The two verses, and their violation of that was their failure to fulfill it, and this is how it was narrated from Muqatil ibn Hayyan as well. Ibn Jarir narrated these statements in his interpretation.

Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - those are the losers. He said: They are six characteristics of the hypocrites. If they are in power over people, they show these characteristics: If they speak, they lie, if they promise, they break their promise, if they are entrusted, they betray. They break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined, and spread corruption on earth. If they are in power over people, they show three characteristics: If they speak, they lie, if they promise, they break their promise, and if they are entrusted, they betray. Al-Rabi' bin Anas also said the same. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation with his chain of transmission regarding the words of God the Almighty: Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it. He said: It is what was entrusted to them in the Qur'an, so they acknowledged it and then disbelieved and broke it.

And His statement: And they sever that which God has ordered to be joined, it was said that what is meant by it is maintaining ties of kinship and blood relations, as Qatadah explained, like His statement, the Most High: Then would you, if you were given authority, cause corruption in the land and sever your ties of kinship? Ibn Jarir preferred this view. It was said that what is meant is more general than that, so everything that God has ordered to be joined and done, they sever it and abandon it. Muqatil ibn Hayyan said about His statement, the Most High: Those are the losers, he said about the Hereafter, and this is like His statement, the Most High: Those are the ones for whom is the curse, and for them is the worst home. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Everything that God attributes to non-Muslims, such as loser, means disbelief, and whatever He attributes to Muslims, means sin. Ibn Jarir said about the Almighty's saying: Those are the losers. The losers is the plural of loser, and they are those who have diminished their own fortunes by disobeying God from His mercy, just as a man loses in his trade by losing some of his capital in his sale. Likewise the hypocrite and the disbeliever lose by God depriving them of His mercy which He created for His servants on the Day of Resurrection when they are most in need of His mercy. It is said from this that the man lost, the man loses, he loses, loss and loss, as Jarir ibn Atiyah said:

Indeed, he is a loser, he is the son of a people who created a channel

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 27- Those who break is in the accusative case, describing the wicked. Breaking: spoiling what was concluded from a building, rope, or covenant, and breaking: what was broken from a hair rope. The covenant: It was said: It is what God took from the children of Adam when He extracted them from his back, and it was said: It is God's commandment to His creation and His command to them with what He commanded them to do of obeying Him and His prohibition of them from what He prohibited them from disobeying Him in His books on the tongues of His messengers, and their breaking of that: leaving working with it, and it was said: Rather, it is setting up evidence of His Oneness in the heavens and the earth and all of His creations, and breaking it: leaving looking into it, and it was said: It is what He entrusted to those who were given the Book to make it clear to the people. The covenant: The covenant confirmed by an oath, from the verb wathaqa, which is the intensity in the contract and binding, and the plural is mawaateeq and mayaateeq, and Ibn al-A'rabi recited:

Fever, time does not come except with our permission, and we do not ask people for a covenant

The use of annulment in nullifying a covenant is a metaphor. Cutting is well-known, and the source of the womb is severance. I cut the rope, and I cut the river. What is in his saying: what God has commanded is in the accusative case with they cut and that we connect is in the accusative case with a command. It is possible that it is a substitute for what or for the ha in it. They differed about what is the thing that God has commanded to be connected: It was said: the wombs. It was said: He commanded that words be connected with deeds. It was said: He commanded that belief be connected with all of His laws and limits that He has commanded in His revealed books and on the tongues of His messengers to be preserved, so they are general. The majority said this and it is the truth. What is meant by corruption on earth are actions and words that contradict what God has commanded, such as worshipping other than Him, harming His servants, and changing what He has commanded to preserve. In short, everything that contradicts goodness, whether legally or rationally, is corruption. Loss: deficiency, and the loser is the one who diminished his own success and victory. When these people replaced breaking with fulfillment and severing with connection, their work was corruption because they diminished their own success and profit. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions that he said: When God gave these two examples to the hypocrites, His saying: Their example is like that of one who kindled a fire and His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky, the hypocrites said: God is too high and majestic to give these examples, so God revealed: Indeed, God is not ashamed to set forth an example 10:13. Al-Wahidi narrated in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: God mentioned the gods of the polytheists and said: And if a fly should steal something from them, and mentioned the trickery of the gods and made it like a spider's web, so they said: Have you seen where God mentioned the fly and the spider in what He revealed of the Qur'an to Muhammad, what was this doing? Then God revealed, God is not ashamed. Abd al-Razzaq, Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Qatada something similar to what Ibn Abbas said. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of al-Hasan who said: When the verse, O mankind, a parable is presented, was revealed, the polytheists said: What parable is this to be presented? Then God revealed this verse. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu al-A'aliyah regarding the words of God, the Most High, But as for those who believe, they know that it is the truth from their Lord, he said: The believer believes in it and knows that it is the truth from their Lord, and God guides them by it, and the wicked recognize it and disbelieve in it. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions regarding His words, He misleads many thereby, meaning the hypocrites, and guides many thereby, meaning the believers, and He misleads none thereby except the wicked, he said: They are the hypocrites. And regarding His words, They break the covenant of God after ratifying it, he said: It is what was entrusted to them in the Qur'an, so they acknowledged it and then disbelieved and broke it. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And He misguides thereby none but the defiantly disobedient, meaning: The disbelievers know it and disbelieve in it. Al-Bukhari, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Sa'd Ibn Abi Waqqas who said: The Kharijites are those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it, and He used to call them the defiantly disobedient. Abd Ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Qatada who said: We do not know of any more threat from God for a sin than He has for breaking this covenant. Among the authentic hadiths in Sahih and other sources from a group of the Companions is the prohibition of breaking a covenant and the severe threat thereof. Abd Ibn Humayd and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And sever what God has ordered to be joined, he said: Kinship and blood relations. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi regarding his statement: And they cause corruption on earth, he said: They are known to commit sin therein. Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Muqatil regarding his statement: Those are the losers, he said: They are the people of the Fire. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Everything that God attributes to non-Muslims, such as loser, extravagant, unjust, criminal, and immoral, he means by it disbelief, and whatever He attributes to the people of Islam, he means by it blame.

Those who break the covenant of God after ratifying it and sever what God has ordered to be joined and spread corruption on earth - it is those who are the losers.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

27. Those who break disobey and abandon. The root of breaking is breaking. The covenant of God is the command of God that He entrusted to them on the Day of the Covenant when He said: "Am I not your Lord? They said: Yes" 173-Al-A'raf. It was said: He meant by it the covenant that He took from the prophets and all the nations that they would believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, in His saying: And when God took the covenant of the prophets 81-Al-Imran the verse. It was said: He meant by it the covenant that He entrusted to them in the Torah that they would believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and explain his description. After

His covenant is its emphasis. The covenant: the confirmed pledge. And they sever that which God has commanded to be joined, meaning belief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in all the messengers, peace be upon them, because they said: We believe in some and disbelieve in others. And the believers said: We make no distinction between any of His messengers 285-Al-Baqarah. It was said: He meant by it the wombs. And they cause corruption in the land with sins and preventing people from believing in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in the Qur'an. Those are the losers, the deceived. Then he said to the polytheists of the Arabs in a way of astonishment:

Tafsir al-Baidawi

27- Those who break the covenant of God is an attribute of the wicked for blame and confirmation of wickedness. And the breach: is the cancellation of the structure, and its origin is in the energies of the rope, and its use in nullifying the covenant from the point of view that the rope is used metaphorically for the covenant because it connects one of the covenantors to the other, so if it is mentioned with the word rope, it is a nomination for the metaphor, and if it is mentioned with the covenant, it is a symbol of what is from its synonyms, which is that the covenant is a rope in its bravery, an ocean in view of its benefit. And the covenant: the document and its placement for what is likely to be observed and undertaken like the will and the oath, and it is said for the house, from the point of view that it is observed by referring to it. And history because it is preserved, and this covenant is like the covenant taken by reason, which is the proof based on worship indicating His Oneness and the necessity of His existence and the truthfulness of His Messenger, and upon this is the beginning of the Almighty's saying: And He made them witness against themselves. Or: The covenant taken by the messengers over the nations, that if a messenger was sent to them confirming the miracles, they would believe him and follow him, and they would not conceal his command or disobey his rule, and to this he referred in his saying: And when God took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture and similar verses. It was said: The covenants of God the Most High are three: A covenant He took from all the descendants of Adam that they would acknowledge His Lordship, a covenant He took from the prophets that they would establish the religion and not be divided in it, and a covenant He took from the scholars that they would clarify the truth and not conceal it.

After His covenant The pronoun refers to the covenant and the covenant: the name for what the covenant is based on, which is the strengthening, and what is meant by it is what God has made His covenant binding with from the verses and books, or what they have made binding with from commitment and acceptance, and it is possible that it is in the meaning of the source. And from is for the beginning of the breach after the covenant.

And they sever that which God has ordered to be joined includes any severance that God is not pleased with, such as severing family ties, turning away from befriending believers, distinguishing between the prophets, peace be upon them, and the books in belief, abandoning the obligatory groups, and everything else that involves rejecting good or engaging in evil, as it severs the connection between God and the servant intended in itself from every connection and separation. The command is for the statement requesting the action, and it was said: with elevation, and it was said: with superiority, and with it the command which is one of the matters was named, naming the object with the source, as it is among what is commanded, as it was said: it has a matter, which is the request. And the intention is said: I shanat shahan, if you intended his intention. And to connect includes the accusative and genitive as a substitute for what, or a pronoun. The second is better in wording and meaning.

And they cause corruption on earth by preventing people from believing, mocking the truth, and severing the ties that keep the world in order and in good health.

Those are the losers who lost by neglecting the mind to consider and seize what benefits them eternal life, and replacing denial and criticism of the verses with belief in them, and considering their truths and quoting from their lights, and buying refutation with fulfillment, and corruption with righteousness, and punishment with reward.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:28

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:28

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

How do you disbelieve, O people of Mecca, in God, when you were dead, sperm in the loins, and He gave you life, in the wombs and in this world by breathing the spirit into you? The question is to express astonishment at their disbelief, despite the proof being established, or to rebuke them. Then He will cause you to die, when your appointed times have come to an end. Then He will bring you to life, by resurrection. Then to Him you will be returned, after the resurrection, and He will reward you for your deeds. And He said, as evidence of the resurrection, when they denied it:

The interpreters differed in their interpretation of this:

Some of them said:

Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life, then He will cause you to die and then He will bring you to life, meaning: You were nothing and He created you, then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life on the Day of Resurrection.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abu Ishaq, on the authority of Abu al-Ahwas, on the authority of Abdullah, regarding his statement: You caused us to die twice and gave us life twice (Ghafir 40:11), he said: It is like what is in Surat al-Baqarah 2: You were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die and then He will bring you to life.

Abu Hasin Abdullah bin Ahmad bin Abdullah bin Yunus told me: Abthar told us: Hasin told us, on the authority of Abu Malik, regarding his statement: You caused us to die twice and brought us to life twice, he said: You created us when we were nothing, then You caused us to die, then You brought us to life.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Hisham told us, on the authority of Hisin, on the authority of Abu Malik, regarding his statement: You caused us to die twice and brought us to life twice, he said: They were dead and God brought them to life, then He caused them to die, then He brought them to life.

Al-Qasim told us: Al-Husayn bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die and then bring you to life, he said: You were nothing when He created you, then He will cause you to die the true death, then He will bring you to life. His statement: You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice is similar.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ata' Al-Khurasani told me, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: It is His saying: You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', who said: Abu al-'Aliyah narrated to me, regarding the statement of God: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead? He said: When they were nothing, then He revived them when He created them, then He caused them to die, then He revived them on the Day of Resurrection, then they returned to Him after life.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding His statement: You caused us to die twice and gave us life twice, he said: You were dust before He created you, so this is death. Then He gave you life and created you, so this is life. Then He will cause you to die and you will return to the graves, so this is another death. Then He will raise you on the Day of Resurrection, so this is life. So they are two deaths and two lives, so this is His statement: How can you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, then to Him you will be returned.

Others said:

Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Waki' narrated to us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of al-Suddi, on the authority of Abu Salih: How can you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, then to Him you will be returned. He said: He will bring you to life in the grave, then He will cause you to die.

Others said:

Bishr bin Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid bin Zari' narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead, the verse, he said: They were dead in the loins of their fathers, then God brought them to life and created them, then caused them to die the inevitable death, then brought them to life for the resurrection on the Day of Resurrection, so they are two lives and two deaths. And some of them said what:

Yunus told me that Ibn Wahb told us that Ibn Zayd said, regarding the statement of God, the Most High: Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice. He said: He created them from the back of Adam when He took the covenant from them, and he recited: And when your Lord took from the children of Adam, from their loins, their descendants, until he reached: Or do you say, 'Our fathers associated others with God before, and we were descendants after them, so will You destroy us for what the falsifiers have done?' (al-A'raf 7:172-173). He said: So He gained their intellect and took the covenant from them. He said: And He extracted a rib from the short ribs of Adam and created Eve from it. He mentioned this from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. He said: That is the saying of God the Most High: O mankind, fear your Lord, who created you from one soul and created from it its mate and dispersed from both of them many men and women (An-Nisa': 1). He said: And after that, He dispersed from them in the wombs many creations. And he recited: He creates you in the wombs of your mothers, creation after creation (al-Zumar 39:6). He said: A creation after that. He said: Then when He took the covenant from them, He caused them to die, then created them in the wombs, then caused them to die, then brought them back to life on the Day of Resurrection. So that is the saying of God the Most High: "Our Lord, You caused us to die twice, and You gave us life twice. So we acknowledged our sins" (Ghafir 40:11). And he recited the saying of God the Most High: And We took from them a solemn covenant (al-Ahzab 33:7). He said: On that day. He said: And he recited the saying of God the Most High: And remember the favor of God upon you and His covenant which He bound you with when you said, "We hear and we obey (al-Ma'idah 5:7).

Abu Jaafar said: Each of these sayings that we have narrated from those from whom we have narrated them has a face and a method of interpretation.

As for the interpretation of those who interpreted His statement: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life, meaning that you were nothing, then he went to something similar to what the Arabs say about a forgotten thing or a forgotten matter: This is a dead thing and this is a dead matter, meaning by describing it as dead: its mention has faded and its trace has been forgotten by people. Likewise it is said in its opposite and its opposite: This is a living matter, and the mention of a living matter, meaning by describing it as that it is prominent and prominent among people, as Abu Nukhaylah al-Sa'di said:

So you revived my memory, and I was not inactive, but some remembrances awakened me from others.

He means by his saying: Then you revived my memory, that is, you raised it up and made it famous among the people until it became alive and remembered, after it had been dormant and dead. So is the interpretation of the statement of the one who said in his saying: And you were dead, you were nothing, that is, you were dormant and not remembered, and that was your death, so He revived you, and made you living human beings who are remembered and recognized. Then He will cause you to die by taking your souls and returning you, as you were before He gave you life, from the loss of your memory, the obliteration of your traces, and the dormancy of your affairs. Then He will revive you by returning your bodies to their original forms, and breathing the soul into them, and making you human beings as you were before death, recognizing one another in your resurrection and at your gathering.

As for the interpretation of those who interpreted that: that it is death which is the departure of the soul from the body, then it should have gone with his saying and you were dead, to the fact that it is addressed to the people of the graves after they were revived in their graves. And that is a far-fetched meaning, because the rebuke there is only a rebuke for what has passed and is excessive of their crimes, not a request for forgiveness and return. And His saying, may He be glorified: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead, is a rebuke of one who seeks forgiveness from His servants, and a reprimand of one who retrieves His creation from sins to obedience, and from misguidance to repentance, and there is no repentance in the graves after death, and there is no repentance in them after death.

As for the interpretation of Qatada's statement: That they were dead in the loins of their fathers, he meant by that that they were sperm with no souls in them, so it was in the sense of all dead things that have no souls, and His bringing them to life, may He be exalted, is His breathing the souls into them, and His causing them to die after that is His taking their souls. And His bringing them to life after that is His breathing the souls into their bodies on the Day when the Trumpet is blown and creation is resurrected for the promised time.

As for Ibn Zayd, he made clear what he intended by his interpretation of that, and that the first death, according to him, is God, may He be glorified, returning His servants to the loins of their fathers, after He took them from the loins of Adam, and that the second revival is the breathing of souls into them in the wombs of their mothers, and that the second death is the taking of their souls to return to the dust, and the destination in the intermediate realm until the Day of Resurrection, and that the third revival is the breathing of souls into them for the resurrection of the Hour and the spreading of the Resurrection.

This is an interpretation that if the contemplative ponders it, he will find it contradictory to the apparent meaning of the statement of God, whose interpreter claimed that what we have described of His statement is its interpretation. That is because God, the Most High, informed in His Book about those He informed about from His creation that they said: Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice, and Ibn Zayd claimed in his interpretation that God gave them life three times and caused them to die three times. And the matter with us, even if it was in what was described of God, the Most High, extracting his offspring from the loins of Adam, and taking His covenant from them as he described, that is not from the interpretation of these two verses, I mean His statement: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead? and His statement: Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice, in any way. Because no one has declared that God caused any of His offspring to die on that day other than the death by which they were in the intermediate realm until the Day of Resurrection, so it is permissible to direct the interpretation of the verse to what Ibn Zayd directed it to.

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Some of them said: The first death is the man's sperm leaving his body and entering the woman's womb. It is dead from the moment it leaves his body until the soul is breathed into it. Then God revives it by breathing the soul into it and makes it a normal human being after a number of times. Then He causes it to die the second death by taking the soul from it. It is dead in the intermediate realm until the Day of Judgment, when the Trumpet is blown and its soul is returned to its body, and it returns alive and normal for the Day of Resurrection. So that is two deaths and two lives. These people called for this statement because they said: The death of a person with a soul is the departure of the soul from it. They claimed that everything in the son of Adam is alive as long as it does not leave his living body with a soul. So everything that leaves his living body with a soul, life leaves it and it becomes dead. Like a limb from his limbs, like a hand from his hands, or a foot from his feet. If they were cut off and separated, the one from whom that was cut off is alive. The one separated from his body is dead and has no soul in it because of the separation from the rest of his body in which the soul is. They said: Likewise, his sperm is alive with his life as long as it does not leave his body with a soul. But if it leaves him and is separated from him, it becomes dead, similar to what we described regarding the ruling on the hand, the foot, and the rest of his limbs. This is a statement and a way of interpretation, if it were said by someone from the people of the example whose interpretation of the Qur'an is acceptable.

The first of the statements we mentioned that we explained in the interpretation of the statement of God Almighty: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life verse, is the statement we mentioned from Ibn Masoud and from Ibn Abbas: that the meaning of His statement: And you were dead is dead in remembrance, dormant in the loins of your fathers as sperm, not knowing nor remembering, so He gave you life by creating you as sound human beings until you were remembered and recognized and brought to life, then He will cause you to die by taking your souls and returning you as remains that you are not known nor remembered in the intermediate realm until the Day of Resurrection, then He will revive you after that by breathing the souls into you for the Resurrection of the Hour and the Cry of the Resurrection, then to God you will return after that, as He said: Then to Him you will be returned, because God Almighty will revive them in their graves before their gathering, then He will gather them for the place of reckoning, as He Almighty said: On the Day when they will emerge from the graves quickly as if they were, toward an idol, hastening (al-Ma'arij 70:143). He said: And the Trumpet will be blown, and at once they will hasten from the graves to their Lord (Ya-Sin 36:51).

The reason for which we chose this interpretation is what we have already mentioned to those who say it, and the corruption of what contradicts it, as we have explained before.

This verse is a rebuke from God, the Most High, to those who say, We believe in God and the Last Day, about whom God informed us that despite their saying that with their mouths, they do not believe in Him. And that they only say that to deceive God and the believers. So God rebuked them by saying, How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life? And He rebuked them and provided evidence against them for their denial of what they denied of that and their denial of what they denied with their sick hearts. He said, "How can you disbelieve in God and deny His ability to bring you back to life after you have died, for the Resurrection, and to reward the wrongdoer among you with wrongdoing and the gooddoer with goodness, while you were dead sperm in the loins of your fathers, and He created you as a sound creation, and made you alive, then He caused you to die after your creation." You have known that He who did this by His power, without being amazed by the power with which He did this to you, is to revive you after your death, and to return you after your annihilation, and to gather you to Himself to reward you for your deeds.

Then our Lord, the Most High, mentioned them and their allies from the Jewish rabbis, whose stories were combined with the stories of the hypocrites in many verses of this Surah, in which the report about them began with His saying: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is the same for them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe. His blessings that He had previously bestowed upon them and upon their fathers, which had great effects on them. Then He took away from many of them many of them, because of the sins they committed, the crimes they committed, and the transgression they had gone from obedience to disobedience, warning them thereby of the hastening of the punishment for them, like that which He hastened for the ancestors and the extremists before them, and frightening them of the coming of His likeness in their courtyard like that which He brought upon their first, and informing them of what salvation they have in quickly returning to Him, and hastening repentance, and of their deliverance from punishment on the Day of Resurrection.

After enumerating for them the blessings in which they are living, He began by mentioning our father and their father Adam, the father of mankind, may God's prayers be upon him, and what preceded from him of His honor to him, and His favors with him, and what He brought upon him and his enemy Iblis of His immediate punishment for their disobedience which they committed, and their opposition to the command which He commanded them. And what was of His covering Adam with His mercy when he repented and turned to Him. And what was of His bringing upon Iblis of His curse in this immediate life, and His preparing for him what He prepared for him of the lasting torment in the hereafter, when he was arrogant and refused to repent to Him and turn to Him, alerting them to His judgment regarding those who turn to Him with repentance, and His judgment regarding those who are arrogant about turning to Him, as an excuse from God to them and a warning to them, so that they may ponder His verses and those among them who possess understanding may remember. And especially the People of the Book with what was mentioned of the stories of Adam and all the other stories that he mentioned with them and after them, which the People of the Book knew and the illiterate nation of polytheists who worship idols was ignorant of, by arguing with them and not with others from all other types of nations, who have no knowledge of that for his Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, so that they would know by his informing them of that, that he is a Messenger sent to God, and that what he brought to them is from Him. Since what he related to them of these stories was from the hidden knowledge of their knowledge, and the protected contents of their books, and the hidden matters of their affairs that no one claimed to know the knowledge of except them and those who took from them and read their books.

It was known that Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was never a writer, nor a reciter of their books, nor a companion or a member of any of them. They could claim that he took that from their books or from some of them. So the Most High said, in enumerating to them what they were living in of His blessings, despite their disbelief in Him and their failure to thank Him for them with what is due to Him from their obedience: "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things." So the Most High informed them that He created for them all that is on the earth, because the earth and all that is in it are benefits for the children of Adam. As for religion, it is evidence of the Oneness of their Lord, and as for this world, it is a livelihood and a means for them to obey Him and perform His duties.

Therefore, He, the Most High, said: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth.

His saying: He empowered me with the name of God, may He be glorified and exalted, refers back to His name in His saying: How do you disbelieve in God?

The meaning of His creation is what He created, may His praise be glorified, His creation of it itself, and His bringing it out from a state of non-existence into existence. And what means which.

The meaning of the words then is: How can you disbelieve in God when you were sperm in the loins of your fathers, and He made you living human beings, then He causes you to die, and then He will revive you after that and raise you on the Day of Resurrection for reward and punishment, and He is the One who bestowed upon you the blessings He created for you on earth of your livelihoods and your evidence of the oneness of your Lord.

And how is in the sense of astonishment and rebuke, not in the sense of question, as if he said: Woe to you, how do you disbelieve in God, as he said: Then where are you going? (al-Takwir 81:26). And his statement: And you were dead and He gave you life is in place of the state. And in it is the pronoun qad, but it was deleted because of the evidence for it in the speech. That is because when a verb is in place of the state, it is known that it requires qad, as God the Most High said: Or they came to you with their chests constricted (An-Nisa': 90), meaning: their chests were constricted. And as you say to a man: Your livestock has increased in the morning, meaning: Your livestock has increased in the morning.

And in a manner similar to what we said about His statement: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth, Qatada used to say.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth, yes, God has subjected to you what is on the earth.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens.

Abu Jaafar said: They differed in the interpretation of his saying: Then He directed Himself to the heaven.

Some of them said: The meaning of he rose to the sky is that he turned towards it, as you say: So-and-so was turning towards so-and-so, then he rose to me insulting me and he rose to me insulting me. Meaning he turned to me and to me insulting me. The poet's saying was used as evidence that he rose to means turning towards.

I say, and the evils of the steadfast have cut us off, and we have risen from our lying down

He claimed that he meant that they came out of their lying position, and that for them meant: they came forward. This is a wrong interpretation of this verse. Rather, the meaning of his saying: And they came out of their lying position, they came out on the road, meaning they stood still on it.

Some of them said: This was not from God Almighty in the sense of a transformation, but rather in the sense of His action, as you say: The Caliph was in Iraq, supporting them, then he moved to the Levant. What he means is: His action transformed. Some of them said: His statement: Then He rose to the heaven, means: It rose up, as the poet said:

I told him when he was laid down in his grave, on what religion did Musab kill people?

Some of them said: Then He rose to the heaven, meaning He intended it. He said: Rather, everyone who abandons an action that he was doing until another, is equal to what he intended for and is equal to it.

Some of them said: Istiwa' means elevation, and

Surat al-Baqarah 2:28

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

elevation means height. Among those who said this was Al-Rabi' bin Anas.

I was told about this on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: Then He rose to the heaven, meaning: He ascended to the heaven.

Then the interpreters of the word istiwa establishing differed in meaning of elevation and height, regarding the One Who established Himself in the heaven. Some of them said: The One Who established Himself in the heaven and rose above it is its Creator and Originator. Some of them said: Rather, the One who rose above it is the smoke that God made a sky for the earth.

Abu Jaafar said: In the speech of the Arabs, the word istiwa has many meanings: one of them is the end of a man's youth and strength, so it is said, when he becomes like that: the man has become istiwa. Another of them is: the straightening out of what he had of matters and causes, so it is said: so-and-so's matter has become istiwa if it has become straight after it has become istiwa. From this is the saying of al-Tirmaah ibn Hakim:

He took a long time to draw a threatened picture, which was eternal and forgotten, and his country became equal to him

Meaning: He straightened it. And from it: turning towards something. It is said: So-and-so rose above so-and-so with what he disliked and disliked after doing him good. And from it: acquisition and domination, like their saying: So-and-so rose above the kingdom. Meaning he took possession of it and acquired it. And from it: elevation and height, like the saying of the speaker: So-and-so rose on his bed. Meaning by it he rose above it. And the most appropriate meanings of the saying of God, the Most High: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them straight, He rose above them and ascended, so He managed them with His power, and He created them as seven heavens.

It is surprising that someone denied the meaning understood from the speech of the Arabs in interpreting the statement of God: Then He rose to the heaven, which means elevation and rising, escaping in his mind from being obligated, if he interpreted it with its understood meaning, that He rose and ascended after being beneath it, until he interpreted it with the unknown of his reprehensible interpretation. Then he did not escape from what he escaped from, so it was said to him: You claimed that the interpretation of His statement rose to the heaven is approached, so was he turning away from the heaven and then turning toward it? If he claims that this is not an approach of action, but rather an approach of management, it is said to him: So say: He rose above it with the elevation of kingship and authority, not the elevation of transition and disappearance. Then he will not say anything about any of that except that he will be obligated in the other like it. And if we were not averse to lengthening the book with what is not of its kind, we would have informed about the corruption of the statement of every speaker who said something about that, because the people of truth said something contrary to it. And in what we have explained of it is what will suffice for the one with understanding, God willing.

Abu Jaafar said: If someone were to say to us: Tell us about God Almighty's ascension to the heavens, was that before the creation of the heavens or after?

It was said: After that, and before He made them into seven heavens, as He, the Most High, said: Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke and said to it and to the earth, 'Come in, willingly or by compulsion' (Fussilat 41:11). And the establishment was after He created them into smoke, and before He made them into seven heavens.

Some of them said: He said: He rose to the sky, but there is no sky, like a man saying to another: Make this garment, but there is only yarn with it.

As for his saying, He proportioned them, he means that He prepared them, created them, managed them, and made them straight. In Arabic, placing means straightening, correcting, and preparing for them, just as one says, So-and-so made this matter straight for so-and-so, if he made it straight, corrected, and prepared it for him. So too is the proportioning of God, may He be glorified, of His heavens: He straightened them according to His will, and managed them according to His desire, and separated them after they were joined together.

Also: It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: Then He made them seven heavens, meaning: He made their creation, and He is Knowing of all things.

And He, the Most High, said: And He proportioned them, so He brought out their two forms in the same way as the two forms of the whole. He had said before: Then He directed Himself to the heaven, so He brought it out in the sense of the singular. And He brought out their two forms in the sense of the two forms of the whole, because the heaven is a plural, the singular of which is samawah, so the estimation of its singular and its plural is thus the estimation of a cow and cows, a palm tree and palm trees, and the like. For this reason, the heaven was made feminine once, so it was said: this is a heaven, and masculine another time, so it was said: The heaven is split open by it (al-Muzzammil 73:18), as is done with the plural that has no difference from its singular except the entry and exit of the ha', so it is said: this is a cow and this is a cow, this is a palm tree and these are palm trees, and the like.

Some Arabists claimed that the sky is one, but it refers to the heavens, so it was said: He made them equal, meaning what was mentioned and what it referred to from the rest of the heavens that were not mentioned with it. He said: It is only mentioned when it is mentioned and it is feminine, so it is said: The sky is split by it, just as the feminine is mentioned, and as the poet said:

Neither rain nor thunder nor rain nor land that is as green as it

As the blind man of Bani Tha'laba said:

If you see when it changed, then the incidents have made it worse.

Some of them said: Even if the sky is a sky above a sky and an earth above an earth, it is in interpretation one if you wish, then that one is a group, as it is said: a garment of morals and rags, and a pot of tenths, for the broken one, and a pot of broken pieces and repairs, and morals, meaning that its sides are morals.

If someone were to say to us: You have said that God, may His praise be glorified, rose to the heaven while it was smoke before He made it seven heavens, then He made it seven after He rose to it, so how did you claim that it is a group?

It was said: They were seven, not leveled, so the Most High said: Then He made them seven. As Muhammad bin Hamid told me, he said: Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, he said: Muhammad bin Ishaq said: The first thing that God Almighty created was light and darkness, then He distinguished between them, so He made darkness a black, dark night, and He made light a bright, visible day, then He made the seven heavens thick with smoke, it is said - and God knows best - from the smoke of water until they became independent and He did not intertwine them. And He covered the night in the lowest heaven, and brought forth its brightness, so night and day flowed in it, and there was no sun, moon, or stars in it. Then He spread out the earth and anchored it with mountains, and measured out the sustenance in it, and spread out in it what He wanted of creation, so He finished the earth and what He measured out of its sustenance in four days. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, which was smoke as He had said, and He wove them together. He placed in the lowest heaven its sun, its moon, and its stars, and He inspired in each heaven its command, so He completed their creation in two days. So He finished creating the heavens and the earth in six days. Then He directed Himself on the seventh day above His heavens, then He said to the heavens and the earth: Come, willingly or unwillingly, to what I intend for you, and be reassured about it, willingly or unwillingly. They said: We come willingly.

Ibn Ishaq reported that God, the Most High, rose to the heaven after creating the earth and what is in it, and they were seven of smoke, and He leveled them as He described. We cited as evidence for what we said in that regard the statement of Ibn Ishaq, because it is a clearer explanation of the creation of the heavens, that they were seven of smoke before our Lord rose to them to level them without Him, and it is a better explanation of what we wanted to prove, that the meaning of the heaven about which God, the Most High, said: Then He rose to the heaven means all, as we described. And that He, the Most High, said: Then He leveled them, because the heaven means all, as we explained.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: What is the description of God Almighty's leveling of the heavens that He mentioned in His statement, Then He leveled them, since they had been created seven before He leveled them? And what is the reason for mentioning their creation after mentioning the creation of the earth? Is it because it was created before it, or for some other meaning?

It was said: We have mentioned that in the report that we narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, and we confirm it with confirmation of what we add to it from the reports of some of the early predecessors and their sayings:

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens." He said: God, the Blessed and Exalted, had His throne over the water, and He did not create anything other than what He created before the water. Then when He wanted to create creation, He brought forth smoke from the water, and it rose above the water and rose above it, and He called it heaven. Then He dried up the water and made it one earth, then He split it open and made seven earths in two days, on Sunday and Monday, so He created the earth on a whale, and the whale is the Nun that God mentioned in the Qur'an: Nun and the Pen, and the whale is in the water, and the water is on the back of a rock, and the rock is on the back of an angel, and the angel is on a rock, and the rock is in the wind, and it is the rock that Luqman mentioned, it is not in the sky nor on the earth: so the whale moved and was shaken, and the earth quaked, so He anchored the mountains on it and it became stable, so the mountains stand proud on the earth, so that is what He said: And He has cast into the earth firm mountains, lest it should shake with you (al-Nahl 16:15). And He created the mountains in it, and the sustenance of its people, and its trees, and what is appropriate for it, in two days, on Tuesday and Wednesday, and that is when He says: "Do you indeed disbelieve in He who created the earth in two days, and do you attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds. And He placed therein firm mountains above it, and blessed it." He says: He caused its trees to grow. And measured therein its sustenance. He says: Its sustenance for its people. In four days, equally for those who ask. He says: Say to the one who asks you: This is the matter. Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke. (Fussilat 41:9-11) And that smoke was from the breathing of the water when He breathed, so He made it one heaven, then He split it and made it seven heavens in two days, on Thursday and Friday. And it was called Friday because He gathered together the creation of the heavens and the earth in it and inspired in each heaven its command. He said: He created in each heaven what He created from the angels and the creation that is in it, from the seas and the mountains of hail and what is not known, then He adorned the lowest heaven with the stars, so He made it an adornment and a protection, to protect from the devils. So when He finished creating what He loved, He directed Himself to the Throne. This is when He says: He created the heavens and the earth in six days (al-A'raf 7:54). And He says: They were joined together, then We separated them (al-Anbiya 21:30).

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told me: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding His statement: "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven." He said: He created the earth before the heaven. When He created the earth, smoke rose from it, and that is when He says: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens. He said: Some of them are above others, and seven earths, some of them are below others.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Then He made them seven heavens, he said: Some of them are above others, between every two heavens is a journey of five hundred years.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told us: Abu Salih told us: Muawiyah bin Salih told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Where He mentioned the creation of the earth before the heaven, then He mentioned the heaven before the earth, that is because God created the earth with its sustenance without spreading it out before the heaven, Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens, then He spread out the earth after that, so that is His statement: And the earth after that He spread out (al-Nazi'at 79:30).

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abdullah bin Saleh told us, he said: Abu Ma'shar told me, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Saeed, on the authority of Abdullah bin Salam that he said: God began creation on Sunday, so He created the earths on Sunday and Monday, and He created the sustenance and the mountains on Tuesday and Wednesday, and He created the heavens on Thursday and Friday, and He finished in the last hour of Friday, so He created Adam in it in haste. So that is the hour in which the Hour will come.

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of the statement is: He is the One who bestowed His blessings upon you, creating for you everything on earth and subjecting it to you as a favor from Him to you, so that it may be a provision for you in your worldly life and a provision until your appointed times, and a proof for you of the Oneness of your Lord. Then He ascended to the seven heavens while they were smoke, and He proportioned them and interwoven them, and He caused His sun, moon, and stars to run through some of them, and He determined in each one of them what He determined of His creation.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And He is All-Knowing of everything.

Meaning by His Most High saying: And He Himself, and by His saying: Of all things is Knowing that the

One who created you, and created for you everything on the earth, and proportioned the seven heavens and what is in them, and perfected them from the smoke of water, and perfected their work, nothing is hidden from Him - O hypocrites and atheists who disbelieve in Him from the People of the Book - what you reveal and what you conceal in yourselves, even if your hypocrites express with their tongues their saying: We believe in God and the Last Day, while they are concealing it. And your rabbis denied what My Messenger brought them of guidance and light, while they knew its truth. And they denied it and concealed what I took from them by explaining it to My creation of the matter of Muhammad and his prophethood, covenants, while they knew of it. Rather, I am Knowing of that of your matter and other matters of yours and the matters of others. Indeed, I am Knowing of all things.

His saying: All-Knowing means All-Aware. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he used to say: He is the one whose knowledge is perfect.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abdullah bin Saleh told us, he said: Muawiyah bin Saleh told us, he said: Ali bin Abi Talha told me, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The scholar is the one who has completed his knowledge.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned.

How is a question about the state, and it is a noun in the accusative case with takfirun, and it is built on the fat-ha and its way was to be quiescent, because it has the meaning of interrogation which means astonishment, so it resembles the letters, and the fat-ha was chosen for it because of its lightness, meaning these are among those who should be astonished when they disbelieved and the proof was established against them.

If it is said: How can this address be to the People of the Book when they did not disbelieve in God? The answer is what was mentioned previously, that since they did not confirm the matter of Muhammad, peace be upon him, and did not believe him in what he brought, they committed shirk, because they did not acknowledge that the Qur'an is from God. And whoever claims that the Qur'an is the speech of humans has committed shirk with God and has broken the covenant. And it is said: How is it that he worded it as a question and it is not that, rather it is a confirmation and a rebuke, meaning how do you disbelieve in His blessings upon you and His power! Al-Wasiti said: He rebuked them with this with the utmost rebuke, because the dead and inanimate do not dispute with their Maker in anything, but rather the dispute is from the spiritual structures.

The Almighty said: And you were dead. This waw is the waw of state, and qad is implied. Al-Zajjaj said: The meaning is and you were, then qad was deleted. Al-Farra' said: Dead is the predicate of you were.

Then He gave you life, then He will cause you to die. This is the pause for completion. This is what Abu Hatim said. Then he said: Then He will bring you to life. The people of interpretation differed about the order of these two deaths and two lives, and how many deaths and lives does a person have? Ibn Abbas and Ibn Masoud said: That is, you were dead and non-existent before you were created, so He gave you life—that is, He created you—then He will cause you to die when your appointed times come to an end, then He will bring you to life on the Day of Resurrection. Ibn Atiyyah said: This statement is what is meant by the verse, and it is what the disbelievers cannot avoid because they acknowledge them, if the souls of the disbelievers acknowledge that they are dead and non-existent, then for the life in this world, then for the death in it, the necessity of the other life is strong upon them, and their denial of it is a claim that has no proof. Another said: The life that is in the grave according to this interpretation is subject to the ruling of this world. It was said: It is not taken into account just as the death of someone whom He caused to die in this world and then brought to life in this world is not taken into account. It was said: You were dead in the back of Adam, then He brought you out from his back like atoms, then He will cause you to die the death of this world and then He will resurrect you. It was said: You were dead - that is, as sperm - in the loins of men and the wombs of women, then He transferred you from the wombs and brought you to life, then He will cause you to die after this life, then He will bring you to life in the grave for questioning, then He will cause you to die in the grave, then He will bring you to life with the life of resurrection until the gathering, which is the life after which there is no death.

I said: According to this interpretation, there are three deaths and three resurrections. Their being dead in Adam's back, and their being brought out from his back and the testimony against them is not like their being sperm in the loins of men and wombs of women. According to this, there are four deaths and four resurrections. It has been said that God Almighty created them before the creation of Adam, peace be upon him, like dust, then He caused them to die. According to this, there are five deaths and five resurrections. And the sixth death for the sinners of the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, when they enter the Fire, according to the hadith of Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'As for the people of the Fire who are its people, they will neither die in it nor live. Rather, there are people who were afflicted by the Fire because of their sins - or he said because of their transgressions - so God caused them to die a death until they were like coal. Then intercession is permitted, and they are brought in groups and spread out on the rivers of Paradise. Then it is said, 'O people of Paradise, pour out water upon them,' so they will grow like the seed that grows in the silt of a torrent.' A man from the people said: 'It is as if the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was in the desert.'"

Narrated by Muslim.

I said: His saying: So God caused them to die is a literal meaning of death, because He emphasized it, because He emphasized it with the infinitive, and that is to honor them. It was said: It is possible that He caused them to die is an expression of their being hidden from its pains by sleeping, and that is not death in reality, and the first is more correct. The grammarians have agreed that if you emphasize the verb with the infinitive, it is not metaphorical, but rather it is in reality, and similar to it is: God spoke to Moses directly, as will be explained, God willing. It was said: The meaning is: You were dead in obscurity, so He revived you by remembering and honoring you with this religion and the Prophet who came to you, then He will cause you to die and your memory will die, then He will revive you for the resurrection.

The Almighty said: Then to Him you will be returned. That is, to His punishment you will be returned for your disbelief. It was said: to life and to the questioning, as the Almighty said: As We began the first creation, We will repeat it. So their return is like their beginning, so it is a return. And you will be returned is the reading of the group. Yahya bin Ya'mar, Ibn Abi Ishaq, Mujahid, Ibn Muhaysin, and Salam bin Ya'qub open the letter of the present tense and break the jim wherever it occurs.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, arguing for His existence and power and that He is the Creator who controls His servants, How do you disbelieve in God? That is, how do you deny His existence or worship other than Him? And you were dead and He gave you life. That is, you were nothing and He brought you into existence, as God Almighty said, Or were they created from nothing, or were they the creators? Or did they create the heavens and the earth? Rather, they are not certain. God Almighty also said, Has there not been over man a period of time when he was not a thing worth mentioning? There are many verses on this subject. Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abu Ishaq on the authority of Abu al-Ahwas on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, may God be pleased with him, "They said, 'Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and brought us to life twice, so we acknowledged our sins.' " He said, "It is what is in Surat al-Baqarah. "And you were dead and He gave you life. Then He will cause you to die, then He will give you life." Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Ata' on the authority of Ibn Abbas: You were dead and He gave you life means dead in the loins of your fathers. You were nothing until He created you, then..." He will cause you to die a true death, then He will bring you back to life when He resurrects you. He said: It is like the saying of God the Almighty: You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the saying of God the Almighty: Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice. He said: You were dust before He created you, so this is a death. Then He gave you life and created you, so this is a life. Then He will cause you to die and you will return to the graves, so this is another death. Then He will resurrect you on the Day of Resurrection, so this is another life. So these are two deaths and two lives. It is like His saying: How can you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die and then bring you back to life. And thus it was narrated on the authority of As-Suddi with his chain of transmission on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on some of the Companions and on the authority of Abu Al-Aliyah, Al-Hasan, Mujahid, Qatadah, Abu Salih, Ad-Dahhak, and Ata' Al-Khurasani, something similar to that. And Ath-Thawri said on the authority of As-Suddi on the authority of Abu Salih: How can you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die and then bring you back to life, then to Him you will be returned. He said: He will bring you back to life in the grave. Then He will cause you to die. Ibn Jarir said on the authority of Yunus on the authority of Ibn Wahb on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam, who said: He created them in the back of Adam, then He took a covenant from them, then He caused them to die, then He created them in the wombs, then He caused them to die, then He will bring them back to life on the Day of Resurrection. This is like the statement of God the Almighty: 'They will say, 'Our Lord, You caused us to die twice and You gave us life twice.' This is strange, as is the statement before it. What is correct is what was stated above on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn Abbas, and that group of the followers, and it is like the statement of God the Almighty: Say, 'God gives you life, then causes you to die, then gathers you together for the Day of Resurrection, about which there is no doubt.' (10:14), as God the Almighty said about idols: Dead, not alive, and they perceive not. (10:14), and He said: "And a sign for them is the dead earth. We give it life and produce from it grain, from which they eat."

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Fath al-Qadir

How is built on the fat-ha for its lightness and it is in the accusative position with takfirun, and it asks about the state, and this question is to deny them and express astonishment at their state and it includes the question hamza, and the waw in 28- and you were is for the state and it is understood as al-Zajaj and al-Farraa said, and it is correct to make this past a state because the state is not just his saying: you were dead but rather it is what comes after it until his saying: you return as the author of al-Kashshaf asserted as if he said: How do you disbelieve? And this story of yours: meaning while you are aware of this story and its beginning and end. The dead are the plural of dead, and the commentators differed in the order of these two deaths and two lives. It was said that what is meant is you were dead before you were created, meaning nonexistent, because it is permissible to call something nonexistent death because they both share in not feeling. Then He gave you life meaning He created you. Then He will cause you to die when your appointed times come to an end. Then He will bring you to life on the Day of Resurrection. A group of the Companions and those who came after them held this view. Ibn Atiyyah said: This statement is what is meant by the verse, and it is what the disbelievers cannot avoid. If the souls of the disbelievers acknowledge that they were nonexistent, then alive in this world, then dead in it, then they must acknowledge the afterlife. Another said: The life that is in the grave according to this interpretation is like the life of this world. It was said that what is meant is that you were dead in the back of Adam, then He brought you out from his back like ants, then He will cause you to die the death of this world, then He will resurrect you. It was said: You were dead meaning sperm in the loins of men Then He gave you life to the life of this world Then He will cause you to die after this life Then He will give you life in the graves Then He will cause you to die in the grave Then He will give you life to the life after which there is no death. Al-Qurtubi said: According to this interpretation, there are three deaths and three resurrections, and their being dead in the back of Adam and their being brought out from his back and the testimony against them is not like their being sperm in the loins of men, so according to this there are four deaths and four resurrections. It was said: God created them before the creation of Adam like animals and caused them to die, so according to this there are five deaths and five resurrections, and a sixth death for the sinners from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, as mentioned in the hadith: "But people were afflicted by the Fire because of their sins, so God caused them to die a death, until when they were charcoal, He permitted intercession and they were brought, until he said: Then they grow like a seed in the silt of the torrent." It is in the Sahih from the hadith of Abu Saeed. And His statement: Then to Him you will be returned means to God, the Most High, and He will reward you for your deeds. Yahya bin Ya'mar, Ibn Abi Ishaq, Mujahid, Salam, and Ya'qub read with the fat-ha on the letter of the present tense, while the group read with the damma on it. He said in Al-Kashshaf: The first was connected with the fa' and what followed it with thumma, because the first revival followed death without delay, while death was delayed from revival, and the second revival is also delayed from death if what is meant by it is the resurrection, an apparent delay, and if what is meant by it is the revival of the grave, then knowledge is acquired from it by its delay, and the return to the reward is also delayed from the resurrection. It is not hidden from you that if he meant by his statement that the first revival followed death that it occurred on what is characterized by death, then the second death occurred on what is characterized by life. And if he meant that the first revival occurred at the beginning of its description by death, unlike the second, then this is not accepted, because it occurred at the last moments of his death just as the second occurred at the last moments of his life, so ponder this. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions regarding the words of God the Almighty: And you were dead verse, he said: You were nothing, so He created you. Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life on the Day of Resurrection. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi

Hatim narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Abd Ibn Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Qatadah as well. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu Salih, he said: He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life in the grave, then He will cause you to die. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding His words: And you were dead he said: When you were nothing, then He caused them to die, then He will bring them to life on the Day of Resurrection, then they will return to Him after life. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman Ibn Zaid Ibn Aslam, he said: He created them from the back of Adam, then He took a covenant from them, then He caused them to die, then He created them in the wombs, then He caused them to die, then He will bring them to life on the Day of Resurrection. The first is correct.

28. How do you disbelieve in God? After the evidence was established and the proofs were made clear, then He mentioned the evidence and said: And you were dead as sperm in the loins of your fathers Then He gave you life in the wombs and in this world Then He will cause you to die when your appointed times have come to an end Then He will give you life for the resurrection Then to Him you will be returned meaning you will be returned in the Hereafter and He will reward you for your deeds.

Jacob read You will return throughout the Qur'an with the opening of the ya and the ta to name the subject.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

28-How do you disbelieve in God? is a question that includes denial and astonishment at their disbelief by denying the state in which it occurs on the demonstrative path, for its issuance is inseparable from a state and description. So if he denies that their disbelief has a state in which it exists, this necessitates denying its existence. It is more eloquent and stronger in denying disbelief than Do you disbelieve? and more appropriate to what follows it from the state. The address is to those who disbelieved because He described them with disbelief, evil speech, and evil deeds. He addressed them in the manner of turning away, and rebuked them for their disbelief despite their knowledge of their state that requires otherwise. The meaning is, tell me in what state do you disbelieve?

And you were dead, meaning bodies without life, elements and food, mixtures and sperm, and chewed flesh, left behind and not left behind.

He gave you life by creating souls and breathing them into you. The reason for connecting it with the letter fa is because it is connected to what it is connected to and not separated from it, unlike the rest.

Then He will cause you to die when your appointed times are fulfilled. Then He will bring you to life by resurrection on the Day when the Trumpet is blown or for questioning in the graves. Then to Him you will be returned after the gathering, and He will reward you for your deeds. Or you will be raised to Him from your graves for the reckoning. How strange is your disbelief, given your knowledge of this state of yours. If it is said: If they knew that they were dead and He brought them to life and then caused them to die, they did not know that He would bring them to life and then to Him they will be returned. I say: Their ability to know both of these things is due to the evidence He has set up for them, which is equivalent to their knowledge in removing the excuse, especially since the verse draws attention to what indicates their correctness, which is that when He was able to bring them to life first, He was able to bring them to life a second time, for the beginning of creation is not easier for Him than its repetition. Or the address to the two tribes, for He, glory be to Him, the Most High, when He explained the evidence of monotheism and prophethood, and promised them for faith, and threatened them for disbelief, He confirmed that by enumerating upon them the general and specific blessings, and He deemed it ugly for them to disbelieve and excluded it from them with those great blessings, for the greatness of blessings necessitates the greatness of disobeying blessings. If it is said: How can death be considered among the blessings that necessitate gratitude? I say: Since it was a connection to the second life, which is the true life, as God Almighty said: And indeed, the home of the Hereafter - that is the life, it was among the great blessings, even though what was enumerated upon them as a blessing is the meaning extracted from the story in its entirety, just as what is actually a state is knowledge of it, not each one of the sentences, for some of them are past and some of them are future, and neither of them can be a state. Or with the believers specifically to establish the favor upon them, and to distance disbelief from them in the sense of, how can disbelief be imagined from you while you were dead and ignorant, so He revived you with what He gave you of knowledge and faith, then He causes you to die the known death, then He revives you with the true life, then to Him you will return, and He will reward you with what no eye has seen, no ear has heard, and no human heart has imagined. And life is true in the sensitive power, or what requires it, and with it the animal was called an animal metaphorically in the growing power, because it is from its vanguards and introductions, and with regard to what is specific to man from the species, such as reason, knowledge, and faith in terms of their perfection and goal, and death in contrast to it is said of what corresponds to it in every level. God Almighty said: "Say: God gives you life, then He causes you to die." He said: Know that God revives the earth after its death. He said: Or was he dead and We gave him life and made for him a light by which he walks among the people? When the Almighty Creator is described with this, it is intended to indicate the validity of His being described with the knowledge and ability necessary for this power in us, or a meaning that exists in itself and requires that on the basis of metaphor. And Yaqub read tarja'oonu with the opening of the ta in all of the Qur'an.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:28

How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, and then to Him you will be returned?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:29

It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, and made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

It is He who created for you whatever is on the earth meaning the earth and what is in it all together so that you may benefit from it and take heed Then He directed Himself after creating the earth, meaning He intended to the heaven and proportioned them the pronoun refers to the heaven because it is in the meaning of the sentence referring to Him: meaning He made it as in another verse {Then He completed them} seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things in general and in detail, so do you not consider that the One who is able to create that from the beginning and is greater than you is able to return you?

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

"It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens. And He is Knowing of all things."

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. There are ten issues in it:

The first: to create means to invent and bring into existence after nothingness. It may be said about a human being: He created something when he created it, and from this the poet said:

Whoever creates what he says, my tricks in it are few

This meaning has been mentioned before. Ibn Kaysan said: He created for you means for your sake. It was also said: The meaning is that everything on earth is blessed for you and is yours. It was also said: It is evidence of monotheism and consideration.

I said: This is correct, as we explain. It is possible that he meant by it what they need of all things.

Second: Those who said that the basic principle of things that are beneficial is permissibility used this verse and similar things as evidence - such as His statement: And He has subjected to you whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth - all from Him (al-Baqarah 2:17) - to establish evidence for the prohibition. They supported this by saying: Delicious foods were created even though it was possible that they would not be created, so they were not created in vain, so there must be a benefit for them. And that benefit cannot be attributed to God Almighty because He is sufficient by His essence, so it is attributed to us. And our benefit is either in attaining its pleasure, or in avoiding it so that we may be tested by that or in our consideration of it. And none of those things are achieved except by tasting them, so it is necessary that they be permissible. This is invalid, because we do not accept the necessity of the futility of creating them except for a benefit, rather He created them in this way because the basic principle of benefit is not required of Him, rather He is the one who requires it. We do not accept that the benefit is limited to what they mentioned, nor that some of those benefits are obtained except by taste, but rather the tastes may be proven by other matters as is known to the naturalists. Then it is opposed by what is feared to be a deadly poison, and they are opposed by the doubts of the proponents of prohibition. Others hesitated and said: There is no action from which we do not perceive good or bad except that it is possible for it to be good in itself, and there is no specific one before the arrival of the Shari'ah, so it is necessary to stop until the arrival of the Malikis and the Sayrafi in this issue saying about stopping. And its meaning to them is that there is no ruling in it in that case, and that the Shari'ah when it comes can rule as it wishes, and that the mind does not rule with obligation or otherwise, but its share is to know things as they are. Ibn Atiyyah said: Ibn Furak narrated from Ibn al-Sa'igh that he said: The mind has never been devoid of hearing, and there is no incident except that there is hearing in it, or it is related to it, or it has a state that is maintained. He said: So this should be relied upon, and it is sufficient to look into prohibition, permissibility, and stopping.

Third: The correct meaning of the Almighty's statement: He created for you whatever is on the earth is consideration. It is indicated by what precedes and follows it from the accusative of the examples: giving life and causing death, creation, and rising to the heaven and leveling it, meaning that He who was able to give you life and create you and create the heavens and the earth, the ability to restore is not far from Him.

If it is said: The meaning of how much benefit is that you may benefit from all of that, we say: What is meant by benefit is consideration of what we have mentioned. If it is said: What consideration is there in scorpions and snakes, we say: A person may be reminded by some of the harmful things he sees of what God has prepared for the disbelievers in the Fire of punishments, and this may be a reason for faith and abandoning sins, and that is the greatest consideration. Ibn al-Arabi said: There is nothing in the information about this ability regarding this whole sentence that requires prohibition, permission, or suspension, but rather the mention of this verse came in the context of proof and warning to prove His Oneness.

The masters of meanings said about His statement: He created for you all that is on the earth: So that you may gain strength through it to obey Him, not to spend it in ways that disobey Him. Abu Uthman said: He gave you everything and made it subservient to you so that you may use it as evidence of the vastness of His generosity, and be content with what He has guaranteed for you of His abundant giving in the afterlife, and not consider His great goodness too much for your little work, for He began with you with the greatest of blessings before the work, which is monotheism.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:29

It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, and made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things.

Fourth: Zaid bin Aslam narrated on the authority of his father on the authority of Omar bin Al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him.

“A man came to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and asked him to give him something. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I do not have anything, but buy from me, and when something comes, we will pay. Umar said to him: This is what you have been given, if you have it, for God has not charged you with what you cannot bear. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, disliked what Umar said, so a man from the Ansar said: O Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace,

Spend and do not fear the loss of your wealth

The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, smiled, and joy was evident on his face at what the Ansari had said. Then the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: “I was commanded to do so.” Our scholars, may God have mercy on them, said: “Fearing diminishing comes from bad thoughts about God, because God, the Most High, created the earth and everything in it for the children of Adam, and He said in His revelation: ‘He created for you all that is on the earth,’ and: ‘He has subjected to you all that is in the heavens and all that is on the earth, from Him.’” All these things are subject to man, cutting off his excuse and argument against him, because he is a servant to Him just as He created him as a servant. So if the servant has good thoughts about God, he will not fear diminishing because He will replace it for him, as God, the Most High, said: And whatever you spend, He will replace it, and He is the Best of providers. And He said: For indeed, my Lord is Free of need and Generous. And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God, the Most High, said: My mercy has preceded My wrath. O son of Adam. Spend, and I will spend on you. God’s right hand is full of abundance, and nothing diminishes it, night or day.” And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: “There is no day in which the servants arise except that two angels descend, and one of them says: ‘O God, give to the spender a replacement,’ and the other says: ‘O God, give to the withholder.’” And likewise in the evening at sunset they also call out, and all of this is correct and was narrated by the Imams, praise be to God. So whoever’s heart is enlightened and knows the wealth and generosity of his Lord, he spends and does not fear being deficient. And likewise whoever’s desires for this world have died and he is content with the little sustenance that sustains his life, and his will for himself is cut off, then this one gives from his ease and his difficulty and does not fear being deficient. And only the one who has a will in things fears being deficient, so if he gives today and tomorrow he has a will in something, he fears that he will not get it tomorrow, and the matter of spending today becomes difficult for him for fear of being deficient. Muslim narrated on the authority of Asma’ bint Abi Bakr, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to me: Blow, or sacrifice, or spend, and do not count, lest God count against you, and do not store, lest God store against you. Al-Nasa’i narrated on the authority of Aisha, who said: “A beggar once came to me in the presence of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, so I ordered something for him, then I called for it and looked at it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: ‘Do you not want anything to enter or exit your house except with your knowledge?’ I said: ‘Yes.’ He said: ‘Easy, Aisha, do not count, lest God Almighty count for you.’”

Fifth: The Almighty’s saying: Then He rose up. Then is to arrange the report, not to arrange the matter in itself. And rising up in the language means rising and being high above something. God Almighty said: So when you and those with you are established on the ship, and He said: That you may be established on their backs, and the poet said:

So I brought them water in a deserted place, and the Yemeni star was created and rose up.

That is, it rose and ascended, and the sun rose over my head and the bird rose over the top of my head, meaning it rose. This verse is one of the problematic verses, and people have three opinions about it and similar verses. Some of them said: We recite it and believe in it but do not interpret it. Many of the imams went with this, and this is as narrated from Malik, may God have mercy on him, that a man asked him about the words of God, the Most High: The Most Gracious established Himself firmly on the Throne. Malik said: Ascending is not unknown, and how is not rational, and belief in it is obligatory, and asking about it is an innovation, and I see you are a bad man! Expel him. Some of them said: We recite it and interpret it according to what the apparent meaning of the language implies. This is the opinion of the anthropomorphists. Some of them said: We recite it and interpret it and do not take it at face value. Al-Farra’ said about the words of God, the Most High: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them straight, He said: Ascending in the speech of the Arabs has two opinions, one of them is that a man becomes straight and his youth and strength end, or he becomes straight without crookedness, so these are two opinions. A third way is to say: So-and-so was facing so-and-so, then he rose up to me and to me, insulting me. In the sense of he turned to me and to me. This is the meaning of his statement: Then he rose up to the heaven, and God knows best. He said: Ibn Abbas said: Then he rose up to the heaven means he ascended. This is like your saying: He was sitting, then he rose up standing, and he was standing, then he rose up sitting, and all of that is permissible in the speech of the Arabs. Al-Bayhaqi Abu Bakr Ahmad bin Ali bin Al-Hussein said: His statement that he rose up in the meaning of he approached is correct, because approaching is the intention to create the heaven, and the intention is the will, and that is permissible in the attributes of God the Most High. The word then relates to creation, not to will. As for what was narrated from Ibn Abbas, he took it from Al-Kalbi’s interpretation, and

Al-Kalbi is weak. Sufyan bin Uyaynah and Ibn Kaysan said about his statement: Then he rose up to the heaven, he intended it, meaning with his creation and invention, so this is one statement. It was said: on without specification or definition, and Al-Tabari chose it. It is mentioned on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah Al-Riyahi regarding this verse that it is said: He rose meaning that He ascended. Al-Bayhaqi said: What he meant by that - and God knows best - is the ascension of His command, which is the water vapor from which the creation of the sky occurred. It was also said: The rose is the smoke. Ibn Atiyah said: This is contradicted by the description of speech. It was also said: The meaning is He took control, as the poet said:

Bashar has taken control of Iraq without sword or bloodshed.

Ibn Atiyah said: This only comes in the words of God Almighty: The Most Gracious established Himself firmly on the Throne. I said: It has already been mentioned in Al-Farra's statement that upon me and to me have the same meaning. This chapter will be further explained in Surah Al-A'raf, God willing. The rule in this verse and others like it is to prevent movement and transfer.

Sixth: It appears from this verse that He, glory be to Him, created the earth before the heaven, and likewise in Ha Mim As-Sajdah. And He said in al-Nazi'at 79: Were you more difficult to create, or is the heaven which He constructed? So He described its creation, then He said: And the earth after that He spread out. So it is as if He created the heaven on this basis before the earth, and the Most High said: Praise be to God, Who created the heavens and the earth. This is the statement of Qatadah: The heaven was created first, as reported by At-Tabari. And Mujahid and other commentators said: He, glory be to Him, dried up the water that His Throne was on, then He made it earth, and smoke rose from it and rose, so He made it heaven, so the creation of the earth came before the creation of the heaven, then He directed His command to the heaven and made them seven heavens, then He spread out the earth after that, and when He created it it was not spread out.

I said: Qatada's statement is correct, God Almighty willing, which is that God Almighty first created the smoke of the sky, then He created the earth, then He turned to the sky while it was smoke and leveled it, then He spread out the earth after that.

What indicates that smoke was created first before the earth is what Al-Suddi narrated on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamdani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, regarding the words of God Almighty: "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens." He said: God, blessed and exalted be He, had His throne over the water and did not create anything before the water. When He wanted to create creation, He brought forth smoke from the water, which rose above the water, and rose above it, and called it heaven. Then He dried up the water and made it one earth, then He split it and made it seven earths in two days, on Sunday and Monday. So He made the earth on a whale, and the whale is the Nun that God Almighty mentioned in the Qur'an in His saying: Nun and the Pen, and the whale is in the water and the water is on a rock, and the rock is on the back of an angel, and the angel is on the rock, and the rock is in the wind - and it is the rock that Luqman mentioned: It is not in the sky nor on the earth, so the whale moved and was shaken, and the earth quaked, so He sent mountains upon it and it became stable, so the mountains are proud of the earth, and that is what God Almighty said: And He has cast into the earth firm mountains, lest it should shift with you, and He created the mountains in it, and the sustenance of its people and its trees, and what is not appropriate for them in two days, on Tuesday and Wednesday, and that is when He says: "Say: Do you indeed disbelieve in He who created the earth in two days, and do you attribute to Him rivals? That is the Lord of the worlds. And He placed therein firm mountains from above it and blessed it and measured therein its sustenance in four days, equal for those who ask." He says: Whoever asks, then this is the matter, Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke, and that smoke was from the breathing of the water when it breathed, so He made it one heaven, then He surpassed it and made it seven. Heavens in two days, on Thursday and Friday, and it was called Friday because He gathered the creation of the heavens and the earth in it, And He inspired in each heaven its command. He said: He created in each heaven what He created of the angels and the creation in it of the seas and mountains of hail and what is not known, then He decorated the lowest heaven with the stars, and made them an adornment and a protection to protect from the devils. Then when He finished creating what He loved, He rose over the Throne, and said, "This is when He says: 'He created the heavens and the earth in six days,' and He says: 'They were joined together, then We parted them.'" And He mentioned the story of the creation of Adam, peace be upon him, as will be explained in this Surah, God willing. And Wakee' narrated on the authority of Al-A'mash on the authority of Abu Thabyan on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The first thing that God Almighty created was the pen, and He said to it, Write. It said, O Lord, what should I write? He said, Write the destiny. So it ran with what would happen from that day until the Hour. He said: Then He created the Noon and spread the earth over it. The water vapor rose and from it He split the heavens. The Noon shook and the earth shook and was fixed with mountains. The mountains will stand tall on the earth until the Day of Resurrection. So in this narration, He created the earth before the water vapor, which is smoke, rose, contrary to the first narration. The first narration from him and others is more appropriate, because God Almighty said: And after that He spread the earth out. And God knows best what He did, for there are different opinions about it, and independent reasoning has no place in it.

Abu Naim narrated on the authority of Ka'b al-Ahbar that Iblis penetrated the whale on whose back was the entire earth, and he cast into its heart, and said: Do you know what is on your back, O Luthia, of nations, trees, beasts, people, and mountains? If you shake

It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, and made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things.

them off, you will cast them all off your back. He said: Luthia thought of doing that, so God sent a beast that entered his nostril, and he cried out to God for it and it came out. Ka'b said: By the One in Whose Hand is my soul, he looks at it in front of him and it looks at him. If he intends to do something about it, it returns to where it was.

Seventh: The origin of the creation of all things is from water, as narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunan, and Abu Hatim al-Basti in his Sahih Musnad, "On the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: I said: O Messenger of God, when I see you, my soul is content and my eyes are comforted. Tell me about everything. He said: Everything was created from water. I said: Tell me about something that if you do it, you will enter Paradise. He said: Feed the poor, spread peace, maintain family ties, and pray at night while people are asleep, and you will enter Paradise in peace." Abu Hatim said that Abu Hurayrah's statement: Tell me about everything meant everything that was created from water. The evidence for the correctness of this is the answer of the Chosen One, peace be upon him, to him when he said: Everything was created from water, even though it was not created. Saeed bin Jubair narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he used to narrate that the Messenger of God, peace be upon him, said:

The first thing that God created was the pen, and He commanded it to write down everything that would happen.

This is also narrated on the authority of Ubadah ibn al-Samit, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. Al-Bayhaqi said: What he meant - and God knows best - was that the first thing He created after creation was the water, the wind, the throne, and the pen. This is clear in:

Hadith of Imran bin Husain, Then He created the heavens and the earth. Abdul Razaq narrated on the authority of Umar bin Habib bin Amr bin Al-Makki on the authority of Humaid bin Qais Al-Araj on the authority of Tawus who said: A man came to Abdullah bin Amr bin Al-Aas and asked him: From what were the creations created? He said: From water, light, darkness, wind, and dust. The man said: From what were these created? He said: I do not know. He said: Then the man came to Abdullah bin Al-Zubayr and asked him, and he said the same as Abdullah bin Amr. He said: Then the man came to Abdullah bin Abbas and asked him, and he said: From what were the creations created? He said: From water, light, darkness, wind, and dust. The man said: From what were these created? Then Abdullah bin Abbas recited: And He has subjected to you whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth - all from Him. The man said: No one could have done this except a man from the family of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Bayhaqi said: He meant that the source of all is from Him, meaning from His creation, innovation, and invention. He created water first, or water and whatever He willed of His creation, not from an origin nor based on a previous example, then He made it the origin of what He created after that. He is the Creator and the Maker, there is no god but Him and no creator but Him, glory be to Him, the Majestic and the Almighty.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: And He made them seven heavens. The Almighty mentioned that the heavens are seven. The earth was not given an explicit number in the revelation that does not bear interpretation, except for His saying: And of the earth the like of them. There is a difference of opinion about it. It was said: And of the earth the like of them, meaning in number, because the manner and description differ according to observation and reports, so the number is specified. It was said: And of the earth the like of them, meaning in their thickness and what is between them. It was said: They are seven except that some of them are not separated from others, as Al-Dawudi said. The first is correct, and that they are seven like the heavens are seven. Muslim narrated on the authority of Saeed bin Zaid, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say:

Whoever takes a handspan of land unjustly will have it hung around his neck to the extent of seven earths.

And on the authority of Aisha, may God be pleased with her, the same, except that it has from instead of to. And from the hadith of Abu Hurairah:

And no one takes a handspan of land unjustly, except that God will make him wear it around his neck to the seven earths on the Day of Resurrection. An-Nasa'i narrated on the authority of Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, "On the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Moses, peace be upon him, said: O Lord, teach me something by which I may remember You and supplicate You. He said: O Moses, say: There is no god but God. Moses said: O Lord, all Your servants say this. He said: Say: There is no god but God. He said: There is no god but You, I only want something that You would make special for me. He said: O Moses, if the seven heavens and their inhabitants other than Me were on one side of a scale and There is no god but God were on the other side, There is no god but God would tip the scales against them." At-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said:

"While the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was sitting with his companions, a cloud came over them. The Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Do you know what this is? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: This is the cloud, these are the irrigators of the earth, which God drives to a people who do not thank Him nor call upon Him. He said: Do you know what is above you? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: It is the firmament, a preserved ceiling and a restrained wave. Then he said: Do you know how much is between you and it? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: Between you and it is a journey of five hundred years. Then he said: Do you know what is above that? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: Above that are two heavens, and between them is a journey of five hundred years. Then he said likewise until he counted seven heavens, between each two heavens is what is between the heaven and the earth. Then he said: Do you know what is above that? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: Above that is the Throne, and between it and the heaven is a distance like that between the two heavens. Then he said: Do you know what is below you? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: It is the earth. Then he said: Do you know what is beneath that? They said: God and His Messenger know best. He said: Underneath it is the other earth, between them is a journey of five hundred years, until he counted seven earths, between every two earths is a journey of five hundred years. Then he said: By the One in Whose Hand is the soul of Muhammad, if you were to be lowered by a rope to the lowest earth, it would descend upon God. Then he recited: "He is the First and the Last, the Evident and the Immanent, and He is Knowing of all things." Abu 'Isa said: The recitation of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, of the verse indicates that he meant: He would descend upon the knowledge, power, and authority of God. God's knowledge, power, and authority are in every place, and He is on His Throne, as He described Himself in His Book. He said: This is a strange hadith, and al-Hasan did not hear it from Abu Hurayrah. The reports that the earths are seven are many, and what we have mentioned is sufficient. Abu Ad-Dahha - whose name is Muslim - narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: It is God who created seven heavens and of the earth the like of them. He said: Seven earths, in each earth a prophet like your prophet, and an Adam like Adam, and a Noah like Noah, and an Abraham like Abraham, and a Jesus like Jesus. Al-Bayhaqi said: The chain of transmission of this on the authority of Ibn Abbas is sound, but it is very strange, and I do not know of any evidence for Abu Ad-Dahha for it, and God knows best.

Ninth: The Almighty's saying: It is He who created for you whatever is on the earth is a subject and predicate. Ma is in the accusative case. All together according to Sibawayh is in the accusative case as a state. Then He rose the people of Najd tend to indicate that it is one of the words with the letter ya, and the people of Hijaz emphasize it. Seven is in the accusative case as a substitute for the letter ha and the letter nun, meaning He made seven heavens. It is permissible for it to be an object on the assumption that He made seven heavens equal between them, as God Almighty said: And Moses chose from his people seventy men, meaning from his people, as An-Nahhas said. Al-Akhfash said: It is in the accusative case as a state. And He is Knowing of all things is a subject and predicate. The original is to move the letter ha, and the sukoon is to make it lighter.

The sky can be singular and feminine, like 'anan, and its masculinity is irregular, and it is the plural of samawah according to al-Akhfash, and sama'ah according to al-Zajaj, and the plural of the plural is samawat and samawat. So the word sawahun came either on the basis that the sky is a plural or on the basis that it is a singular generic noun. The meaning of sawahun is sawahuum he made their surfaces smooth. It was also said: He made them equal.

Tenth: The Almighty's saying: And He is All-Knowing of all things, meaning of what He created, and He is the Creator of everything, so it is necessary for Him to be All-Knowing of everything. He said: Does He not know who created? So He is the All-Knowing and All-Aware of all information with one ancient, eternal knowledge that exists in itself. The Mu'tazilah agreed with us on the universality but not the knowledge. The Jahmites said: All-Knowing without knowledge exists and does not exist in a place. God is exalted above the saying of the people of deviation and misguidance, and the refutation of these people is in the books of religions. He described Himself, the Almighty, with knowledge, saying: He sent it down with His knowledge, and the angels bear witness. And He said: So know that it was sent down with the knowledge of God. And He said: So We will narrate to them with knowledge. And He said: And no female conceives or gives birth except with His knowledge. And He said: And with Him are the keys of the unseen, none knows them except Him. And we will prove the establishment of His knowledge and the rest of His attributes in this Surah when He says: God intends for you ease and does not intend for you hardship, God willing. Al-Kisa'i and Qalun read on the authority of Nafi' with a sukoon on the ha' of huwa and hiwa if it is preceded by a fa', waw, lam, or thumma. Likewise, fa'l or 'umrah except with thumma. Abu 'Awn added on the authority of al-Halwani on the authority of Qalun with a sukoon on the ha' of an yamla huwa, and the rest with a fat-ha.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

When God Almighty mentioned evidence from their creation and what they see of themselves, He mentioned another evidence from what they see of the creation of the heavens and the earth, saying, "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens." That is, He intended the heaven. And the establishment here includes the meaning of intention and approach, because it is transitive with to and so they are made seven, meaning He created the heavens as seven, and the heavens here are a generic noun, so He said, So He made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things, meaning His knowledge encompasses all that He created, as He said, Does He not know who created? The details of this verse are in Surat Ha Mim As-Sajdah, and it is the saying of the Most High: "Say, 'Do you indeed disbelieve in He who created the earth in two days and attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds.'" And He placed therein firm mountains above it and blessed it and measured therein its sustenance in four days, equal for those who ask. Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke and said to it and to the earth, 'Come, willingly or by compulsion.' They said, 'We come, willingly.' So He completed them as seven heavens in two days and inspired in each heaven its command, and We adorned the lowest heaven with lamps and as a protection. That is the determination of the Almighty, the Knowing." In this there is evidence that the Most High began with the creation of the earth first, then He created the heavens as seven, and this is the nature of construction, that it begins with the construction of its lower parts and then its upper parts after that, and The commentators have stated this, as we will mention later, God willing. As for the Almighty's saying, "Are you more difficult in creation, or is the heaven which He constructed? He raised its ceiling and proportioned it. And He covered its night and brought forth its brightness. And the earth, after that, He spread out. He brought forth from it its water and its pasture. And the mountains, He fixed firmly. As provision for you and your livestock," it has been said that then here is only for linking the report to the report, not for linking the verb to the verb, as the poet said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:29

It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, and made them seven heavens, and He is Knowing of all things.

Tell him who became a leader, then his father became a leader, then his grandfather became a leader before that.

It was said that the Duh occurred after the creation of the heavens. It was narrated by Ali bin Abi Talha on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: "It is He who created for you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens. And He is Knowing of all things." He said that God, the Blessed and Exalted, had His throne over the water and did not create anything other than what He created before the water. When He wanted to create, He brought forth smoke from the water and it rose above the water and rose above it and called it heaven. Then He dried up the water and made it one earth. Then He split it and made it seven earths in two days, on Sunday and Monday. He created the earth on a whale. The whale is the one mentioned by God in the Qur'an: Nun and the Pen. The whale is in the water and the water is on the back of a rock and the rock is on the back of an angel. The angel is on a rock and the rock is in the wind, and it is the rock that Luqman mentioned. It is neither in the heaven nor on the earth. So the whale moved and was shaken and the earth shook. Then He anchored the mountains on it and they became stable. So the mountains boast on the earth. This is what God Almighty said. And We have placed on the earth firm mountains, lest it should quake with them. And He created the mountains in it, the sustenance of its people, its trees, and what is appropriate for it, in two days, Tuesday and Wednesday. That is when He says, "Say, 'Do you indeed disbelieve in He who created the earth in two days, and do you attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds.'" And He placed therein firm mountains above it, and blessed it." He says, He caused its trees to grow. And measured therein its sustenance for its people. In four days, equal for those who ask. He says, whoever asks, then this is the matter. Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke. That smoke is from the breathing of the water when He breathed, so He made it one heaven, then He split it open and made it seven heavens in two days, Thursday and Friday. It was only called Friday because He gathered together the creation of the heavens and the earth in it, and inspired in each heaven its command. He said, God created in each heaven what He created of the angels and the creation in it of the seas, mountains, hail, and what is not known. Then He adorned the lowest heaven with the stars, making them an adornment to protect from the devils. So when He finished creating what He loved, He established Himself on the Throne. That is when He says, He created the heavens and the earth in six days, then He established Himself. On the throne" and he says They were joined together, then We separated them and made from water every living thing. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Muthanna told me, Abdullah bin Saleh told us, Abu Ma'shar told me, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Saeed, on the authority of Abdullah bin Salam, that he said: God began creation on Sunday, so He created the earths on Sunday and Monday, and He created the sustenance and the mountains on Tuesday and Wednesday, and He created the heavens on Thursday and Friday, and He finished in the last hour of Friday, so He created Adam in it in haste, and that is the hour in which the Hour will come.

Mujahid said about the Almighty's statement: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth, he said that God created the earth before the sky, and when He created the earth, smoke rose from it. That is when He says: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens, He said: Some of them are above others and seven earths, meaning some of them are below others. This verse indicates that the earth was created before the sky, as He said in Surat al-Sajdah 32: "Say: Do you indeed disbelieve in He who created the earth in two days and do you attribute to Him equals? That is the Lord of the worlds. And He placed therein firm mountains above it and blessed it and measured therein its sustenance in four days, equal for those who ask. Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke and said to it and to the earth, "Come, willingly or by compulsion." They said, We have come, willingly. So He completed them as seven heavens in two days and inspired in each heaven its command. And We adorned the lowest heaven with lamps and as a preservation. That is the determination of the Almighty, the Knowing." This and this indicate that the earth was created before the sky, and this is something about which I do not know of any dispute among the scholars except what Ibn Jarir narrated from Qatadah that he claimed that the sky It was created before the earth, and Al-Qurtubi paused at that in his interpretation of the Almighty's saying: "Are you more difficult to create or is the heaven which He constructed? He raised its ceiling and proportioned it. And covered its night and brought forth its brightness. And the earth after that He spread out. He brought forth from it its water and its pasture. And the mountains He fixed firmly." They said: So he mentioned the creation of the heaven before the earth, and in Sahih Al-Bukhari it is mentioned that Ibn Abbas was asked about this very thing and he answered that the earth was created before the heaven and that the earth was only spread out after the creation of the heaven, and more than one of the scholars of interpretation, ancient and modern, answered likewise, and we have explained that in Surat An-Nazi'at. The gist of that is that Ad-Dahy is explained by the Almighty's saying: "And the earth after that He spread out. He brought forth from it its water and its pasture. And the mountains He fixed firmly." So Ad-Dahy was explained as bringing out what was deposited in it in potential to action when the image of the earthly and then heavenly creatures was completed, so He spread out the earth after that and it brought out what was deposited in it of water, so plants grew in their various types, qualities, colors and shapes, and thus these spheres moved and revolved with the planets in them. Constants and the car, and God the Almighty knows best. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Mardawayh mentioned in their interpretation of this verse the hadith narrated by Muslim and al-Nasa'i in al-Tafsir also from the narration of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ismail bin Umayyah told me on the authority of Ayoub bin Khalid on the authority of Abdullah bin Rafi', the freed slave of Umm Salamah, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, took my hand and said: "God created the soil on Saturday and created the mountains in it on Sunday and created the trees in it on Monday and created the disliked on Tuesday and created the light on Wednesday and spread the animals in it on Thursday and created Adam after the afternoon on Friday from the last hour of the hours of Friday between the afternoon and the night." This hadith is one of the strange hadiths of Sahih Muslim, and Ali bin al-Madini, al-Bukhari and more than one of the hadith masters spoke about it and attributed it to Ka'b, and that Abu Hurayrah only heard it from the words of Ka'b al-Ahbar, but some of the narrators were confused, so they attributed it to the Prophet, and al-Bayhaqi has clarified that.

Ibn Kaysan said: 29- He created for you meaning for your sake, and in it is evidence that the original state of created things is permissibility until evidence is presented indicating the transfer from this original state, and there is no difference between animals and other things that are beneficial without harm, and in the emphasis in his saying: all is the strongest evidence for this. This verse has been used as evidence for the prohibition of eating clay, because God Almighty created for us what is in the earth without the earth itself. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: Someone may say: There is in the earth as a whole what is called in the earth, so it includes both descriptions, and there is no doubt that minerals are included in that, as are the veins of the earth and what runs in the course of some of it, and because specifying something by mention does not indicate the negation of the ruling for what is other than it. The author of Al-Kashshaf mentioned something clearer than this, saying: If you say: Is there any validity to the statement of the one who claims that the meaning is He created the earth and what is in it? I say: If he meant by the earth the lower directions without the dusty ones, as the sky is mentioned and the upper directions are meant, then that is permissible, because the dusty ones and what is in it are located in the lower directions. As for dirt, it has been mentioned in the Sunnah that it is forbidden. It is also harmful, so it is not something that can be eaten, but it can be used for other purposes. What is meant is not a specific benefit such as eating, but rather everything that can be used in some way, and all of them are in the accusative case. Istiwa' in the language means moderation and straightness, as stated in Al-Kashshaf. It is used to mean rising and being high on something. God the Almighty said: So when you and those with you are established on the ship and He said: That you may be established on their backs. This meaning is appropriate for this verse. It has been said that this verse is problematic. Many imams have believed in it and left out explaining it, but others disagreed with them. The pronoun in His statement: Then He proportioned them is ambiguous and is explained by what follows it, like their statement: Zayd made a man. It has been said that it refers to the sky because it is in the meaning of a genus, and the meaning is that He made their creation just so there is no crookedness in it. His statement: Then He proportioned Himself has been used as evidence that the creation of the earth preceded the creation of the sky. The same applies to the verse in Ha Mim As-Sajdah. He said in An-Nazi'at: Are you more difficult to create or is the heaven which He constructed? Then he described its creation and said: And the earth, after that, He spread it out. So it is as if the heaven was created before the earth, as is the saying of God the Almighty: Praise be to God, Who created the heavens and the earth. It has been said that the creation of the earth's mass preceded the heaven and its spreading out came after it. A group of scholars have mentioned something similar to this, and this is a good grouping that must be referred to, but the creation of what is on the earth does not happen except after the spreading out, and the verse mentioned here indicates that He created what is on the earth before the creation of the heaven, and this requires the ambiguity to remain and not to be resolved by such a grouping. His saying: seven heavens clearly states that the heavens are seven, but as for the earth, its number was not mentioned except in His saying the Almighty: and of the earth the like thereof. It was said: in number, and it was said: in their thickness and what is between them. Al-Dawudi said: The earth is seven, but some of it was not separated from others. The correct view is that it is seven like the heavens. It has been proven in Sahih that the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: Whoever takes a handspan of land unjustly, God will make him wear seven earths around his neck. This is proven from the hadith of Aisha and Saeed bin Zaid. The meaning of God's statement: He made them level is to make their surfaces level with smoothness. It has also been said: He made them equal. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: If it is said: Does the explicit mention of seven heavens indicate only seven heavens? We say: The truth is that specifying the number by mentioning it does not indicate the negation of the additional, and God knows best. This is an indication of what the philosophers mentioned about the addition to the seven. We say: Nothing has come to us from God or His Messenger except the seven, so we limit ourselves to that and do not act on the additional unless it comes through the Shari'ah, and nothing of that has come. Rather, He has proven for Himself, glory be to Him, that He is All-Knowing of everything, because He must be All-Knowing of everything that He has proven to be its Creator. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated from Qatadah regarding God's statement: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth, that he said: He has subjected to you all that is on the earth as an honor from God and a blessing for the son of Adam and as a means of attainment and benefit for a term. And Abd al-Razzaq, Abd ibn Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and Abu al-Shaykh in al-Azmah narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding his statement: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth, he said: He subjected to you all that is on the earth. Then He directed Himself to the heaven, he said: He created the earth before the heaven, and when He created the earth, smoke rose from it. That is why His statement: Then He directed Himself to the heaven and made them seven heavens, he said: He created seven heavens, one above the other, and seven earths, one above the other. Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and al-Bayhaqi narrated in al-Asma' wa'l-Sifat on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Mas'ud, and some of the Companions regarding His statement: It is He who created for you whatever is on the earth 3:10, the verse, they said: God's throne was on the water and He did not create anything before the water. Then when He wanted to create creation, He brought forth smoke from the water and it rose above the water and rose above it and called it the sky. Then the water froze and He made it one earth. Then He split it into seven earths in two days, Sunday and Monday. So He created the earth on a whale, which is what He mentioned in His statement: Nun and the Pen. The whale was in the water, the water was on the back of a rock, the rock was on the back of an angel, the angel was on a rock, and the rock was in the wind, which is the rock that Luqman mentioned. It is neither in the sky nor on the earth. So the whale moved and was shaken, so the earth quaked. Then He anchored the mountains on it and it stabilized. That is what God Almighty said: And He cast into the earth firm mountains, lest it should shake with you. And He created the mountains in it and the sustenance of its people. He subjected them to what is not appropriate for them in two days, Tuesday and Wednesday. That is what He said: Do you indeed disbelieve? By He Who created the earth, until His saying, Blessed it, meaning: He caused its trees to grow, and measured therein its sustenance, meaning: the sustenance of its people, in four days, equal for those who ask, meaning: Whoever asks, then this is the matter, Then He directed Himself to the heaven while it was smoke, and that smoke was from the breathing of the water when it breathed, so He made it one heaven, then He split it open and made it seven heavens in two days, Thursday and Friday. It was only called Friday because He gathered the creation of the heavens and the earth in it, and inspired in each heaven its command, he said: He created in each heaven what He created from the angels and the creation in it of the seas and mountains of hail and what He does not know, then He adorned the lowest heaven with the stars and made them an adornment and protection from the devils, so when He finished creating what He loved, He rose above the Throne. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Al-Asma' wa'l-Sifat on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His saying, Then He directed Himself to the heaven, meaning His command ascended to the heaven and He made them equal: meaning He created seven heavens. He said: He caused the fire to flow over the water, so the sea evaporated and rose into the air, so He made the heavens from it. It has been proven from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the hadith of Abu Hurayrah in Sahih, who said: "The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, took my hand and said: God created the soil on Saturday, and created the mountains in it on Sunday, and created the trees on Monday, and created the detestable on Tuesday, and created the light on Wednesday, and spread the animals in it on Thursday, and created Adam on Friday after the afternoon." It has been proven from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, through the chains of transmission of the people of Sunnah and others, from a group of the Companions, hadiths describing the heavens, and that the thickness of each heaven is a journey of five hundred years, and the distance between each heaven and the next heaven is five hundred years, and that there are seven heavens, and that the earth is seven earths. Likewise, there are traces of a group of the Companions describing the heavens. Al-Suyuti mentioned some of that in his interpretation of this verse in Al-Durr Al-Manthur, but we have left it out here because it is not related to this verse in particular, but rather it is related to what is more general than it.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

29. The Almighty said: It is He who created for you all that is on the earth so that you may consider and infer, and it was said: so that you may benefit. Then He directed Himself to the heaven. Ibn Abbas and most of the early commentators said: That is, He ascended to the heaven. Ibn Kaysan, Al-Farra' and a group of grammarians said: That is, He turned to creating the heaven. It was said: He intended because He created the earth first, then proceeded to create the heaven. Then He proportioned them seven heavens He created them levels, with no cracks or fissures in them. And He is Knowing of all things. Abu Ja'far, Abu `Amr, Al-Kisa'i and Qalun read He and It with a sukoon on the ha' if there is a waw, fa' or lam before the ha'. Al-Kisa'i and Qalun added: Then He and Qalun That He should dictate 282-Al-Baqarah.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

29- It is He who created for you all that is on the earth is a statement of another blessing that is arranged on the first, for He created them alive and capable, time after time, and this is the creation of what their survival depends on and by which their livelihood is completed.

The meaning of for you is for your sake and your benefit in your worldly life by your benefiting from it in the interests of your bodies with or without a medium, and your religion by reasoning, consideration, and recognition of what is appropriate for it of the pleasures and pains of the Hereafter, not by way of purpose, for the doer has a purpose that is completed by it, but rather it is like the purpose in that it is the consequence of the action and its result, and it requires the permissibility of beneficial things, and it does not prevent some of them from being specific to others for incidental reasons, for it indicates that all is for all, not that each one is for each one. And it does not include everything on the earth, unless it is intended by it the lower direction as the sky is intended by the upper direction. All: a state of the second relative pronoun.

Then He directed Himself to the heaven means He aimed at it with His will, from their saying He directed Himself to it like a launched arrow, if he aimed at it with a straight aim without turning to anything. The origin of istawa is seeking equality, and its application to moderation is because it involves levelling the position of parts, and it cannot be applied to that because it is one of the characteristics of bodies. It was said that istawa means: He took control and owned. He said:

Bashar has taken control of Iraq without sword or bloodshed.

The first is more in accordance with the origin and the connection that is transitive and the leveling that results from it with the letter fa. What is meant by the sky are these celestial bodies, or the directions of elevation. Then is perhaps for the difference between the two creations and the superiority of the creation of the sky over the creation of the earth, as in the Almighty's saying: Then he was among those who believed. It is not for the delay in time, as it contradicts the apparent meaning of the Almighty's saying: And the earth, after that, He spread it out. It indicates the delay of the spreading of the earth, which preceded the creation of what is in it, after the creation of the sky and its leveling, unless its spreading out is resumed, estimated to be the installation of the earth by another action indicated by Are you more difficult in creation? like You know the earth and manage its affairs after that, but it is contrary to the apparent meaning.

He proportioned them He made them just and created them protected from crookedness and defects. They is the pronoun for the sky if it is interpreted as the bodies because it is a plural. Or it is in the meaning of a plural, otherwise it is vague and explained by what comes after it like their saying: His Lord is a man.

Seven heavens is a substitute or its interpretation. If it is said: Did not the observers prove nine spheres? I say: There are doubts in what they mentioned, and if it is correct, then there is no negation of the extra in the verse, even though if the throne and the footstool are added to it, then there is no disagreement.

And He is All-Knowing of all things. This is an explanation, as if He said: And because He is All-Knowing of the essence of all things, He created what He created in this most perfect manner and most beneficial way, and an argument that whoever did it in this wondrous order and elegant arrangement was All-Knowing, for the perfection of actions, their perfection, and their specification in the best and most beneficial way, can only be imagined from a All-Knowing, All-Wise, All-Merciful One, and a removal of what is in their hearts, that the bodies, after they have been dispersed, their parts have been fragmented, and they have been connected to what is similar to them, how can the parts of each body be gathered together again so that nothing of them is separated, and nothing that was not with them is joined to it, so that it is returned from it as it was, and similar to it is the saying of the Most High: And He is All-Knowing of all creation.

It is known that the validity of the resurrection is based on three premises, and He has demonstrated them in these two verses: The first is that the materials of bodies are capable of being gathered and of life, and He indicated the proof of it by saying: And you were dead, and He gave you life; then He will cause you to die. The succession of separation and gathering, death and life upon them indicates that they are capable of it in themselves, and that which is in themselves refuses to disappear and change. As for the second and third: He, the Almighty, is All-Knowing of them and their locations, and is Able to gather them and revive them, and He indicated the way to prove them by saying that He, the Almighty, is Able to bring them forth and to bring forth what is greater in creation and more wondrous in craftsmanship, so He was more capable of returning them and bringing them back to life, and that He, the Almighty, created what He created in a perfect, perfect creation without any difference or disorder, taking into account their interests and meeting their needs. This is evidence of the finiteness of His knowledge and the perfection of His wisdom, may His power be exalted and His wisdom be precise. Nafi', Abu Amr and Al-Kisa'i made the ha' of the word fa-huwa wa-huwa silent, likening it to a hump.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority." They said, "Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we exalt Your praise and sanctify You?" He said, "Indeed, I know that which you do not know."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And remember, O Muhammad, (when your Lord said to the angels, Indeed, I am placing upon the earth a successor, who will succeed Me in implementing My rulings therein, and he is Adam. (They said, Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?) Shed it by killing as the sons of the jinn did when they were there, and when they caused corruption, God sent upon them the angels who expelled them to the islands and mountains. And we glorify clothed in Your praise, that is, we say, Glory be to God and praise be to Him. And sanctify You We absolve You of what is not befitting of You, so the lam is redundant and the clause is a state, that is, we are more deserving of the oath. He the Most High said, Indeed, I know what you do not know, of the benefit in appointing Adam as successor and that his descendants include the obedient and the disobedient, so justice will appear among them. They said, Our Lord will never create a creation more honorable to Him than us, and I do not know, because of our precedence over Him and our seeing what He did not see. So God, the Most High, created Adam from the surface of the earth, that is, its face, by taking a handful of it of all its colors and kneading it with different waters. And He formed it and breathed life into it, so it became a sensitive animal after it had been inanimate.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: Some of those who claim to have knowledge of the Arabic languages from the people of Basra claimed that the interpretation of his saying: And when your Lord said, and your Lord said, and that when is one of the extra letters, and that its meaning is deletion. He based his statement on what we described about him in that regard on the verse of Al-Aswad bin Ya'far:

So, if that is not enough for his remembrance of time, then the righteous will be followed by corruption.

Then he said: Its meaning is: This is because of his remembrance of God, and the verse of Abd Manaf bin Rub' al-Hudhali:

Until they lead them in a swarm, like camels chasing strays.

He said: Its meaning is, until I made them walk.

Abu Ja'far said: The matter in this is different from what he said: That is because idh is a letter that comes with the meaning of recompense, and indicates an unknown time. And it is not permissible to invalidate a letter that was evidence of a meaning in speech. For it is the same whether one says: it means lengthening, and in speech it is evidence of an understood meaning, or another says, in all the speech that he uttered it is evidence of what was intended by it: it means lengthening.

And what the one we described did not claim in his statement about the verse of Al-Aswad bin Ya'far: that if means lengthening has an understood meaning, but rather if that were deleted from the speech, the meaning that Al-Aswad bin Ya'far intended in his statement would be nullified:

So, that is for his mother's sake

This is because he meant by his saying: Then what we are in, and what has passed of our life. And he referred by his saying that to what was previously described of his life in which he was in a state of emptiness, because of his mention, meaning there was no taste or excess, because time had followed up that which was good with corruption. And likewise is the meaning of the saying of Abd Manaf bin Rib':

Even if they lead them to the path of Qata'idah Shala...

If it was omitted from it, the meaning of the statement would be invalidated, because its meaning is: until when they led them in the path of Qata'idah, they led them in a chain. So his saying: led them in a chain, indicates the meaning of what was omitted, so it was unnecessary to mention it because if indicated it, so it was omitted. Just as what we mentioned previously in our book indicated what the Arabs do in similar cases. And as Al-Nimr ibn Talib said:

Death will meet whoever fears it, wherever he goes.

He means: wherever he goes. And as the Arabs say: I came to you before and after. They mean before that, and after that. So it is with if, as the speaker says: If your brother honors you, then honor him, and if not, then do not. He means: And if he does not honor you, then do not honor him. And from that is the saying of another:

So, that will not harm you in a day when I ask for something good or something bad.

Similar to what we mentioned of the meaning in the verse of Al-Aswad bin Ya'far. And likewise the meaning of the statement of God Almighty: And when your Lord said to the angels, if when were invalidated and deleted from the speech, it would be transformed from its original meaning, and in it is when.

If someone were to say to us: What is the meaning of that? What brought about when, since there was nothing in the speech before it to connect it with?

It was said to him: We have previously mentioned that God, the Most High, addressed those whom He addressed with His saying: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life? with these verses and the ones after them, rebuking them and making ugly to them their evil deeds and their position in their misguidance, despite the blessings He bestowed upon them and their ancestors? And reminding them of the enumeration of His blessings upon them and their ancestors, His punishment, that they should follow the path of those of their ancestors who perished in His disobedience, so that He would make them follow their path in His punishment? And informing them of what was from Him of His compassion for those of them who repented, encompassing them. So among what He enumerated of His blessings upon them was that He created for them everything on the earth, and subjected to them everything in the heavens of its sun, moon, and stars, and other benefits that He made for them and for all the children of Adam with them benefits. So in His Almighty's saying: How can you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, then to Him you will be returned, the meaning is: Remember My favor that I bestowed upon you, when I created you when you were nothing, and I created for you everything on the earth, and I leveled for you what is in the heaven. Then He connected with His saying: And when your Lord said to the angels, to the meaning required by His saying: How can you disbelieve in God, since it was required by what I described of His saying: Remember My favor when I did to you and did, and remember My action with your father Adam when I said to the angels, Indeed, I will place a vicegerent on the earth.

If someone were to say: Is there an equivalent to this in the speech of the Arabs by which we can know the truth of what you said? It would be said: Yes, more than can be counted, including the words of the poet:

I find you will not see a snake or a hyena alive

And there is no remedy, and the sun is a child, carrying some of the valley's bright lights

He said: Nor is there a remedy, nor a verb preceded it with the same wording that links it to it, nor a letter with the same inflection, so that the remedy is returned to it in its inflection. But since it was preceded by a negated verb with lan that indicates the meaning required in the speech from the deleted word, it dispensed with the indication of what was apparent from it from revealing what was deleted, and the speech was treated in meaning and inflection as if what was deleted from it were apparent. Because his saying:

I find you will not see the foxes

Meaning: I find you are not innocent, so he returned when to the place of you see, as if you are not and with were present in the speech. Likewise, his saying: And when your Lord said, because of what preceded it, God reminded those addressed by it of what preceded them and their fathers of His favors and blessings, and his saying: And when your Lord said to the angels with what came after it of the blessings that He enumerated for them and alerted them to their locations, returned when to the place of and you were dead and He brought you to life. Because the meaning of that is: Remember this of My blessings, and this in which I said to the angels. So since the first required when, when was connected to its place in the first, as we described from the poet's saying in and not to compensate.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: for the angels.

Abu Jaafar said: "Al-Mala'ikah is the plural of Malaak, except that one of them without the hamza is more common and well-known in the speech of the Arabs than with the hamza. This is because they say in their singular form: Malaak min al-Mala'ikah, so they delete the hamza from it, and they move the lam that would have been sukoon if the name had been hamzated. They only move it with the fatha because they transfer the movement of the hamzah in it by dropping it to the sukoon letter before it. So if they make the singular form plural, they return the plural to the original and add a hamzah, and they say: Mala'ikah."

The Arabs often do something like this in their speech, leaving out the hamza in a word that has a hamza, so their speech runs by leaving out the hamza in one case and by hamza in another, like when they say: I saw so-and-so, so their speech runs by hamza in ra'ita, then they say: nara, taraa, yarra, so their speech runs in yaf'al and similar words by leaving out the hamza, until the hamza became anomalous with it, even though the hamza is originally in them. Likewise in malak and malikah, their speech runs by leaving out the hamza in one of them, and by hamza in all of them. And sometimes the one word comes with a hamza, as the poet said:

I am not human, but an angel descending from the sky

It may be said of one of them, ma'alik, and that would be like their saying jabth and jadhb, shamil and shamal, and similar inverted letters. However, what is required when one of them is called ma'alik is that it is pluralized if it is pluralized as ma'alik, and I do not remember their pluralization in this way by hearing, but they may pluralize: mal'aika' and ma'alaika', just as ash'ath pluralizes: ash'aath and ash'athatha, and masma': masma' and masma'a. Umayya ibn Abi al-Salt said about their plural in this way:

And in them are among the servants of God a people who are angels who were humbled, although they are difficult.

The origin of the word angel is message, as Adi bin Zaid Al-Abbadi said:

Al-Nu'man informed an angel about me that my imprisonment and waiting have been prolonged.

It may be recited: ma'alika, in the other language. So whoever says: ma'alikan, it is a maf'il, from la'ak ilaihi yala'ak if he sent him an angelic message? And whoever says: ma'alikan, it is a maf'il from alkat ilaihi alk: if you sent him an angelic message and aluka, as Labid bin Rabi'ah said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority." They said, "Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we exalt Your praise and sanctify You?" He said, "Indeed, I know that which you do not know."

And a boy whom his mother sent with Alouk, so we gave him what he asked for.

This is from Alkat, and from it is the saying of the Nabigha of Banu Dhubyan:

But I have a word for you, O Ain, I will dedicate it to you, to you from me

Abdul Bani Al-Hasas said:

May God grant you a long life, young man, with a sign that has not come to us as gifts.

He means by that: I convey my message to her. So the angels are called angels of the message, because they are God's messengers between Him and His prophets and those of His servants to whom they are sent.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Indeed, I am placing on the earth.

The people of interpretation differed regarding his saying: I am going to make, and some of them said: I am going to do.

Mention of those who said that: Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Jarir bin Hazim, and Mubarak, on the authority of Al-Hasan, and Abu Bakr, meaning Al-Hudhali, on the authority of Al-Hasan, and Qatadah, they said: God Almighty said to His angels: I am going to place a successor on earth, He said to them: I will do it.

Others said: I am a creator. Mention of those who said that: I was told by Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, who said: Everything in the Qur'an that was made is created.

Abu Ja'far said: The correct interpretation of his statement, I am going to place a vicegerent on earth is: I will appoint a vicegerent on earth and establish a successor therein. This is more similar to the interpretation of the statement of al-Hasan and Qatadah.

It was said: The land that God mentioned in this verse is Mecca. Those who said that mentioned: Ibn Hamid told us: Jarir told us, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Sabit, that "the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The earth was spread out from Mecca, and the angels used to circumambulate the House, so it was the first to circumambulate it, and it is the land" about which God said: Indeed, I am placing a successor on earth, and when the people of the Prophet perished, and he and the righteous were saved, he and those with him would go to it and worship God there until they died, for the graves of Noah, Hud, Salih, and Shu'aib are between Zamzam, the Corner, and the Station.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Caliph.

The active caliph is derived from the saying: someone succeeded someone in this matter, if he took his place in it after him. As God, the Most High, said: Then We made you successors on the earth after them to see how you would act (Yunus 10:14). He means by that that He replaced them for you on the earth, so He made you successors after them. From that, the greatest sultan is called a caliph, because he succeeded the one who was before him, so he took his place in the matter, so he was a successor from him. From that, it is said: the caliph succeeded, he succeeds a caliphate, and my successor.

Ibn Ishaq used to say what Ibn Hamid told us, he said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq. I am going to place a successor on earth, meaning: a resident and a populator who will inhabit and develop it with a successor who is not from among you.

What Ibn Ishaq said about the meaning of the caliph is not its interpretation, even though God, may He be glorified, only informed His angels that He would make a caliph on earth to inhabit it, but its meaning is what was described before.

If someone says: What was on the earth before the children of Adam inhabited it, and the children of Adam replaced it, and there are successors to it?

It was said: The people of interpretation differed on that: Abu Kurayb told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Ammarah told us on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The first to inhabit the earth were the jinn, so they corrupted it, shed blood, and killed one another. Then God sent Satan to them with an army of angels, and Satan and those with him killed them until they reached the islands of the seas and the edges of the mountains. Then He created Adam and settled him there, and for that reason He said: Indeed, I will place a vicegerent on the earth.

According to this statement: I am going to place a successor on earth, from among the jinn, who will succeed them in it, inhabit it and develop it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Abdullah bin Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding his statement: Indeed, I will place a successor on earth, the verse, he said: God created the angels on Wednesday, and created the jinn on Thursday, and created Adam on Friday, and a group of jinn disbelieved, so the angels would descend to them on earth and fight them, and there would be bloodshed and corruption on earth.

Others said in their interpretation of His statement: I am going to place a successor on earth, that is, a successor who will succeed one another, and they are the children of Adam who succeed their father Adam, and each generation of them succeeds the generation that preceded it. This is a statement attributed to Al-Hasan Al-Basri.

Similar to it is what Muhammad bin Bashir told me. He said: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us. He said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ata bin Al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Ibn Sabit, regarding his statement: Indeed, I am going to place a successor on earth. They said: Will You place on it someone who will cause corruption and shed blood? He said: They mean the children of Adam, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said: God Almighty said to the angels: I want to create a creation on the earth and make a successor on it. And on that day God will have no creation except the angels, and there will be no creation on the earth.

This statement may be supported by what was narrated from Al-Hasan, and it may be that Ibn Zayd meant that God informed the angels that He would make a successor on earth who would rule among His creation with His judgment, similar to what Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: that God, may His praise be exalted, said to the angels: I am making a successor on earth. They said: Our Lord, what will that successor be? He said: He will have offspring who will cause corruption on earth, envy one another, and kill one another.

The interpretation of the verse according to this narration that we mentioned from Ibn Masoud and Ibn Abbas is: I am going to place on earth a successor from Me who will succeed Me in ruling among My creation. That successor is Adam and whoever takes his place in obeying God and ruling with justice among His creation. As for corruption and unjustly shedding blood, that is from other than his successors, and from other than Adam and whoever takes his place among the servants of God, because they both informed us that God Almighty said to His angels when they asked Him: Who is that successor?: He is a successor who will have offspring who will spread corruption on earth, envy one another, and kill one another. So He attributed corruption and unjustly shedding blood to the offspring of his successor and not him, and He excluded his successor from him.

This interpretation, although it differs in the meaning of the caliph from what was narrated from al-Hasan in one respect, is in agreement with it in another respect. As for its agreement with him, it is because its interpreters attributed corruption on earth and bloodshed to someone other than the caliph. As for its disagreement with him, it is because they attributed the caliphate to Adam, meaning God made him his successor in it, and al-Hasan attributed the caliphate to his sons, meaning some of them succeeding others, and a generation of them taking the place of a generation before them, and attributed corruption on earth and bloodshed to the caliph.

What led the interpreters to say: I am going to place a successor on earth in the interpretation mentioned by Al-Hasan to what they said about that, is that they said that the angels only said to their Lord when their Lord said to them: I am going to place a successor on earth: Will you place on it someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? informing them of that about the successor whom God Almighty informed them that He would place on earth, not about someone else. Because the dialogue between the angels and their Lord about him took place. They said: If that is the case and God has absolved Adam from corruption on earth and bloodshed, and purified him from that, it is known that what He meant by it is someone else from his descendants. So it is proven that the successor who will corrupt on earth and shed blood is not Adam, and that they are his descendants who did that, and that the meaning of the succession that God mentioned is the succession of a generation of them and a generation other than them, for what we have described.

Those who said this statement and interpreted this verse have ignored the interpretation of the verse. That is because when the angels were told by their Lord: I am going to place a successive authority on earth, they did not attribute corruption and bloodshed in their Lord's response to His successor on earth, but rather said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? It is not strange that their Lord informed them that His successor would have offspring who would cause corruption and bloodshed, so they said: O our Lord, will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? As Ibn Mas'ud and Ibn Abbas said, and those of the people of interpretation from whom we have narrated that.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty, as report from His angels: They said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How did the angels say to their Lord when He informed them that He would place a vicegerent on the earth: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? while Adam had not yet been created nor his descendants, so that they would know clearly what they were doing? Did they know the unseen and say that, or did they say what they said of that based on conjecture? That is testimony from them based on conjecture, and saying what they do not know. That is not part of their description. Or what is the reason for them saying that to their Lord?

It was said: The scholars of interpretation have said statements about this. We will mention their statements about this, then we will inform you of the most correct and clearest evidence. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas about this: Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Iblis was from a tribe of angels called Al-Han, they were created from the poisonous fire from among the angels. He said: His name was Al-Harith. He said: He was a treasurer from the treasurers of Paradise. He said: And all the angels were created from light other than this tribe. He said: And the jinn who were mentioned in the Qur'an were created from a flame of fire, which is the tongue of fire that is at its edge when it is ignited. He said: And man was created from clay. So the first to inhabit the earth were the jinn. So they corrupted it, shed blood, and killed one another. He said: So God sent to them Satan with an army of angels, and they are this tribe called Al-Han. Satan and those with him killed them until they reached the islands of the seas and the edges of the mountains. When Satan did that, he became arrogant and said: I have done something that no one else has done. God saw that in his heart, but the angels who were with him did not see it. So God said to the angels who were with him: I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. The angels said in response to him: Will you place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? Just as the jinn had corrupted and shed blood, and We were sent against them for that purpose. So He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know, meaning: I have seen in Satan's heart with him you did not see, of his arrogance and arrogance. He said: Then He ordered the soil of Adam to be lifted, so God created Adam from sticky clay - sticky is the sticky, hard, from aged mud - stinking. He said: It was only aged mud after the soil. He said: Then He created Adam from him with His hand. He said: So he remained forty nights as a lying body. Then Satan would come to him and strike him with his foot, and he would make a rattling sound. He said: So this is what God says: From clay like pottery (al-Rahman 55:14). He says: Like something that is blown up and not solid. He said: Then it enters his mouth and exits from his anus, and enters from his anus and exits from his mouth, then he says: You are nothing for the rattling and for nothing you were created. If I am given power over you, I will destroy you, and if you are given power over me, I will disobey you. He said: So when God breathed into him of His spirit, the breath came from the head, and nothing of it would flow in his body except that it became flesh and blood. When the breath reached his navel, he looked at his body and was pleased with what he saw of its beauty, so he went to get up but could not. So this is what God says: And man is ever hasty (Al-Isra': 11). He said: Impatient, he has no patience for ease or hardship. He said: When the blowing was completed in his body, he sneezed and said: Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds, by inspiration from God the Most High. God said to him: May God have mercy on you, O Adam. He said: Then God said to the angels who were with Iblis specifically, excluding the angels in the heavens: Prostrate to Adam. They all prostrated together except Iblis, who refused and was arrogant, because of what he had thought of in his soul due to his arrogance and conceit. He said: I will not prostrate to him, and I am better than him, older in age and stronger in creation. You created me from fire and created him from clay, saying: Fire is stronger than clay. He said: When Iblis refused to prostrate, God made him despair of all good, and made him a cursed devil as a punishment for his disobedience. Then He taught Adam all the names, and they are the names by which people are familiar: human, beast, earth, plain, sea, mountain, donkey, and similar names from nations and others. Then He showed these names to those angels, meaning the angels who were with Iblis, who were created from the fire of the poisonous fire, and said to them: Inform Me of the names of these, meaning: Tell Me the names of these, if you are truthful, if you know that I have not made a successor on earth. He said: When the angels knew that God would hold them accountable for what they spoke of regarding the knowledge of the unseen, which no one else knows, which they had no knowledge of, they said: Glory be to You, God is far removed from having anyone know the unseen other than Him. We repent to You. We have no knowledge except what You have taught us, disavowing them of the knowledge of the unseen except what You have taught us as You have taught Adam. So He said: O Adam, inform them of their names, meaning: Tell them their names. So when He informed them of their names, He said: Did I not tell you, O angels in particular, that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and no one else knows it, and I know what you reveal, meaning: what you reveal and what you conceal, meaning: I know the secret as I know the open, meaning what Iblis concealed in himself out of arrogance and deception.

Abu Jaafar said: This narration from Ibn Abbas indicates that the statement of God, the Most High: And when your Lord said to the angels, 'I am going to place a successive authority on earth,' is a speech from God, the Most High, to a special group of angels, not to all of them, and that those to whom this was said from the angels were the tribe of Iblis in particular, who fought with him against the jinn of the earth before the creation of Adam, and that God only singled them out with this statement as a test and trial from Him, to show them the deficiency of their knowledge and the superiority of many who are weaker in creation than them than He created them, and that His honor cannot be attained by the strength of bodies and the strength of their bodies, as Iblis, the enemy of God, thought. And it is clear that their statement to their Lord, Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, was a slip of the tongue and a guess? And that God, the Most High, informed them of the abhorrent nature of what they had said, and made them stand on it until they repented and turned to Him for what they had said and spoken of guessing the unseen, and they declared to Him that no one else knows the unseen. And he showed them from Satan what he had hidden of arrogance from them.

It was narrated from Ibn Abbas that something different from this narration is as follows: Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, from Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, from Abu Malik, from Abu Salih, from Ibn Abbas, from Marra, from Ibn Masoud, and from some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When God finished creating what He loved, He established Himself on the Throne, and He made Iblis the king of the lowest heaven. He was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, and they were called the jinn because they were the treasurers of Paradise. Iblis was a treasurer with his kingdom, so arrogance entered his heart, and he said: God did not give me this except for an advantage for me. This is what Musa bin Harun said, and others narrated it to me, and he said: For an advantage for me over the angels. When that arrogance entered his soul, God revealed it to him, so God said to the angels: Indeed, I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. They said: Our Lord, and what will that vicegerent be? He said: He will have offspring who will cause corruption on earth, envy one another, and kill one another. They said: Our Lord, Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we declare Your praise and sanctify You? He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. That is, about the affair of Satan. So He sent Gabriel to the earth to bring Him some clay from it. The earth said: I seek refuge in God from You, lest You diminish me or disgrace me. So he returned and did not take anything. He said: My Lord, it has sought refuge in You, so grant it refuge. Then God sent Michael, and it sought refuge from Him, so He granted it refuge. So he returned and said as Gabriel had said. Then He sent the Angel of Death, and it sought refuge from Him, and he said: And I seek refuge in God that I should return without carrying out His command. So he took from the face of the earth and mixed it, so he did not take from one place. He took from red, white, and black soil, and that is why the children of Adam came out different. So He ascended with it and moistened the soil until it became sticky clay. Sticky is that which sticks together, then it was left until it stinks and changes. And that is when He says: From black mud altered (al-Hijr 15:28). He said: Foul-smelling. Then He said to the angels: "Indeed, I am going to create a human being from clay." * So when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] spirit, then fall down to him in prostration" (Sad: 71-72). So God created him with His hands so that Satan would not be arrogant towards Him, to say to him: Are you arrogant about what I have done with My hands, and why am I arrogant towards Him? So He created him as a human being, and he was a body of clay for forty years, the length of a Friday. So the angels passed by him and were terrified by him when they saw him. And the one who was most terrified of him was Satan, so he would pass by him and strike him, and his body would make a sound like the sound of pottery, and it would make a clanging sound, and that is when He says: From clay like pottery (Al-Rahman: 14). And he says for a matter that I have created and entered from his mouth and came out from his anus. So He said to the angels: Do not be afraid of this, for your Lord is steadfast, and this is hollow. If I have power over him, I will destroy him. When the time came when God, the Most High, wanted to breathe the spirit into him, He said to the angels: When I breathe into him of My spirit, then prostrate to him. When He breathed the spirit into him and the spirit entered his head, he sneezed, and the angels said to him: Say, Praise be to God. He said: Praise be to God. God said to him: May your Lord have mercy on you. When the spirit entered his eyes, he looked at the fruits of Paradise. When it entered his stomach, he desired food, so he jumped up before the spirit reached his feet in haste to the fruits of Paradise. That is when He says: Man was created of haste (Al-Anbiya': 37). So all the angels prostrated together except Iblis, who refused to be with those who prostrated, meaning he was arrogant and was among the disbelievers. God said to him: What prevented you from prostrating when I commanded you to what I created with My hands? He said: I am better than him. I would never prostrate to a human being whom I created from clay. God said to him: Get out of it, for it will not be for you, meaning it is not appropriate for you to be arrogant in it, so get out, for you are among the humiliated. And humiliation means humiliation. He said, "And He taught Adam all the names. Then He showed the creation to the angels and said, 'Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful that the children of Adam cause corruption on earth and shed blood.' They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.' God said, 'O Adam! Inform them of their names.' So when He had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?' He said, 'Will You place therein one who causes corruption therein?' This is what they revealed. 'And I know what you reveal and what you conceal.' This means what Satan concealed within himself of arrogance.

Abu Ja'far said: The beginning of this report is different in meaning from the narration narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas from the narration of Ad-Dahhak, which we have mentioned before, and the meaning of its end is in agreement with its meaning. That is because it mentions at the beginning that the angels asked their Lord: Who is that caliph? When He said to them: I am going to place a caliph on earth. He replied that he will have offspring who will corrupt the earth, envy one another, and kill one another. The angels then said: Will You place on it someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? So the words of the angels were what they said to their Lord, after God informed them that this would be from the offspring of the caliph whom He would place on earth. So that is the meaning of its beginning that is different from the meaning of the narration of Ad-Dahhak that we have mentioned.

As for his agreement with him at the end of it, it is their saying in the interpretation of his saying: "Inform me of the names of these, if you are truthful": that the children of Adam corrupt the earth and shed blood, and that the angels said when their Lord said that to them, disavowing knowledge of the unseen: "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise."

If a person of understanding contemplates this, he will know that its beginning corrupts its end, and that its end nullifies the meaning of its beginning. This is because if God, the Most High, informed the angels that the offspring of the Caliph whom He will place on earth will cause corruption in it and shed blood, and the angels said to their Lord: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption in it and shed blood? There is no reason to rebuke them, for they informed about the one whom God informed them about who will cause corruption in the earth and shed blood, in the same way that their Lord informed them about them. It is permissible to say to them about what was hidden from them of knowledge: If you are truthful in what you know by God's informing you that matters will happen, and you informed us about it, then inform us of what God has hidden from you of His knowledge, just as you informed us of what God has informed you of. Rather, that is a false interpretation, and a claim about God that which it is not permissible for Him to have an attribute. I fear that some of the transmitters of this report are the ones who made a mistake regarding the Companions who narrated it from him, and that their interpretation was based on this: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful, in what you thought you had understood from the knowledge of my informing you that the children of Adam would corrupt the earth and shed blood, until you considered it permissible to say: Will You place therein someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? So the rebuke then would be based on what they thought they had understood from God's statement to them: He will have offspring who will corrupt the earth and shed blood, not on their informing them of what God had informed them would happen. This is because God, the Most High, even though He informed them of what would happen from some of the offspring of His Caliph on earth, what would happen from him in it of corruption and bloodshed, He had concealed from them the report of what would happen from many of them, what would happen from their obedience to their Lord, their reformation on His earth, the prevention of bloodshed, His raising their status, and their honor before Him, so He did not inform them of that. The angels said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? They assumed that the interpretation of these two reports that you mentioned, which appear to indicate that all the descendants of the Caliph whom He places on Earth will cause corruption therein and shed blood, so God said to them when He taught Adam all the names: Inform Me of the names of these if you are truthful that you know that all the children of Adam will cause corruption on Earth and shed blood, as you thought in yourselves, denying from Him, may He be glorified, what they said about that to everyone and in general, and it is a characteristic of the descendants of the Caliph among them. What we mentioned is a description from us of the interpretation of the report, not the statement that we choose in the interpretation of the verse.

What indicates what we mentioned about the direction of the angels' report about the corruption of the Caliph's offspring and their shedding of blood in general, is what:

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ata bin Al-Sa'ib, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Sabit, regarding his statement: Will You place therein those who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? He said: They mean the people.

Others said about this:

Bishr bin Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid bin Zurai' narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And when your Lord said to the angels, 'Indeed, I am going to place upon the earth a successive authority,' So he consulted the angels about creating Adam, and they said: Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? And the angels knew from the knowledge of God that there is nothing more hateful to God than the shedding of blood and corruption on earth. And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You. He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. So it was in the knowledge of God, the Most High, that from that successive authority there would be prophets, messengers, righteous people, and inhabitants of Paradise. He said: It was mentioned to us that Ibn Abbas used to say: When God began to create Adam, the angels said: God has not created a creation more honorable to Him than us, nor more knowledgeable than us. So they were tested by the creation of Adam, and every creation is tested, just as the heavens and the earth were tested by obedience, so God said: Come willingly or by compulsion. They said: We come willingly. (Fussilat 41:11)

This report from Qatada indicates that Qatada believed that the angels said what they said when they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? without having any certain knowledge that this would happen, but rather based on their opinion and conjecture, and that God, may He be glorified and praised, denied what they said, and responded to what they saw by saying: Indeed, I know what you do not know, that among the descendants of that caliph would be the prophets and messengers and those who strive in obedience to God.

Qatada narrated a different interpretation of this, which is:

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? He said: God knew best that when there were people on earth, they would cause corruption therein and shed blood, so that is what He said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein?

And similar to what Qatada said, a group of people of interpretation said, including Al-Hasan Al-Basri:

Al-Qasim narrated to us, he said: Al-Husayn narrated to us, he said: Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Jarir bin Hazim and Mubarak, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: God said to His angels: Indeed, I will place a vicegerent on earth. He said to them: I will do so. So they presented their opinion, so He taught them knowledge and concealed from them knowledge that He taught them that they did not know. So they said with the knowledge that He taught them: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? And the angels knew from God's knowledge that there is no sin greater in the sight of God than the shedding of blood. And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You. He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. So when He began to create Adam, the angels whispered among themselves, saying: Let our Lord create whatever He wills to create, for He will not create a creation except that we are more knowledgeable than it and more honorable to Him than it. When He created him and breathed into him of His spirit, He commanded them to prostrate to Him for what they said, so He preferred him over them, and they knew that they were not better than him, so they said: If we are not better than him, then we are more knowledgeable than him, because we were before him, and the nations were created before him. When they were impressed by their work, they were tested, so "He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then he showed them to the angels and said: Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful." He said: So the people turned to repentance, and to it every believer turns, and they said: "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise." He said: O Adam, inform them of their names. And when he informed them of their names, He said: Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? Because of their saying: Let our Lord create what He wills, so He will not create a creation more honorable to Him than us or more knowledgeable than us. He said: He taught him the name of everything, these mountains, these mules, camels, jinn, and wild animals, and he began to name everything by its name. Every nation was presented to him, and he said: Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? He said: As for what they revealed, it was their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? As for what they concealed, it was their saying to one another: We are better than him and more knowledgeable.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding His statement: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority 3:10, he said: God created the angels on Wednesday, and created the jinn on Thursday, and created Adam on Friday. He said: Then a group of jinn disbelieved, so the angels would descend to them on the earth and fight them, and there was bloodshed and corruption on the earth. So they said: Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? 3:10.

Muhammad bin Jarir narrated: I was told by Ammar bin Al-Hasan: Abdullah bin Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', similarly: "Then he showed them to the angels and said: Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful." to His saying: Indeed, You are the Knowing, the Wise. He said: That was when they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? He said: When they knew that He was going to place a successor on earth, they said among themselves: God will not create a creation except that we are more knowledgeable and more honorable than it. So God wanted to inform them that He had favored Adam over them. And He taught Adam all the names, so He said to the angels: Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful, to His saying: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal. What they revealed was when they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? and what they concealed among themselves was their saying: God will not create a creation except that we are more knowledgeable and more honorable than it. So they knew that God favored Adam over them in knowledge and honor.

Ibn Zayd said:

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la narrated to me, saying: Ibn Wahb told us, saying: Ibn Zayd said: When God created the Fire, the angels were terrified by it and said: Our Lord, why did You create this Fire? And for what did You create it? He said: For those of My creation who disobeyed Me. He said: And God had no creation on that day except the angels, and there was no creation on the Earth, but He created Adam after that, and he recited the words of God: Has there not been over man a period of time when he was not a thing worth mentioning? (al-Insan 76:1). He said: Umar ibn al-Khattab said: O Messenger of God, if only that was the time. Then he said: The angels said: O Lord, or will a time come upon us in which we disobey You and they will not see any creation for Him other than them? He said: No, I want to create a creation on the Earth and place a successor on it who will shed blood and spread corruption on the Earth. The angels said: Will You place on it someone who will spread corruption on it and shed blood? You have chosen us, so place us on it, so we will glorify You with praise and sanctify You and work on it in obedience to You. The angels were greatly distressed that God would place on earth someone who would disobey Him, so He said: I know that which you do not know. "O Adam, tell them their names." He said: So-and-so and so-and-so. He said: When they saw what knowledge God had given Adam, they acknowledged Adam's superiority over them, but the evil Iblis refused to acknowledge him, saying: "I am better than him. You created me from fire and created him from clay." (al-A'raf 7:7). He said: Then get down from it, for it is not for you to be arrogant therein. (al-Baqarah 2:74)

Ibn Ishaq said:

Ibn Humayd narrated to us: Salamah ibn al-Fadl narrated to us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, who said: When God wanted to create Adam with His power, to test him and to test him, because of His knowledge of what is in His angels and all of His creation, and the first trial with which the angels were tested was that which they liked and disliked, for the trial and purification of what was in them that they did not know, and God's knowledge encompassed it from them, the group of angels from the inhabitants of the heavens and the earth, then He said: Indeed, I am going to place upon the earth a successor, meaning: a dweller and a builder, to inhabit it and populate it with a successor who is not from you. Then He informed them of His knowledge of them, and He said: They will corrupt the earth, shed blood, and commit sins. They all said: Will You place upon it someone who will corrupt it and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, we do not disobey, nor do we do anything that You dislike? He said: I know what you do not know. He said: I know in you and from you, and he did not reveal it to them of disobedience, corruption, bloodshed, and doing what I hate from them, of what happens on earth, of what I mentioned about the children of Adam. God said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: "I had no knowledge of the highest assembly when they disputed. It is not revealed to me except that I am a clear warner. When your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I am going to create a human being from clay. So when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] soul, then fall down to him in prostration." (Surah Sad: 69-72). So He mentioned to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, what was mentioned by Adam when He wanted to create him, and the angels' review of what He mentioned to them about him. When God, the Most High, decided to create Adam, He said to the angels: I am creating a human being from clay from black mud molded by My hands, as an honor to him, to magnify his command, and to honor him. The angels kept His covenant, understood His words, and unanimously obeyed, except for the enemy of God, Iblis, who remained silent about what was in his soul of envy, transgression, arrogance, and disobedience. God created Adam from the skin of the earth, from sticky clay from black mud molded by His hands, as an honor to him, to magnify his command, and to honor him over all of His creation. Ibn Ishaq said: It is said, and God knows best: God created Adam, then placed him to look at him for forty years before breathing the soul into him, until he returned to clay like pottery, and no fire touched him. He said: It is said, and God knows best: When the soul reached his head, he sneezed and said: Praise be to God. His Lord said to him: May your Lord have mercy on you. The angels fell down when he stood up in prostration to him, preserving the covenant of God that He had made with them, and obeying the command that He had commanded them to do. And the enemy of God, Satan, rose from among them and did not prostrate himself, being stubborn and arrogant out of envy and malice. So He said to him: O Satan, what prevented you from prostrating to that which I created with My hands? to: I will fill Hell with you and those who follow you among them, all together (Sad: 75-85).

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

He said: When God finished with Iblis and rebuking him, and he refused to do anything but disobey, He cursed him and expelled him from Paradise. Then He turned to Adam, having taught him all the names, and said: O Adam, inform them of their names. When he had informed them of their names, He said: Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal? They said: Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise. That is, we only answered You in what You have taught us, but as for what You have not taught us, You know best. So whatever Adam named was the name that he will bear until the Day of Resurrection.

Ibn Jurayj said:

Al-Qasim narrated to us, saying: Al-Husayn narrated to us, saying: Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: They only spoke about what they knew would happen from the creation of Adam, so they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? Some of them said: The angels only said what they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? because God gave them permission to ask about that after He had informed them that it would happen from the children of Adam. So the angels asked Him, and they said, in astonishment at them: How can they disobey You, O Lord, when You are their Creator? So their Lord answered them: I know what you do not know, meaning: That it will happen from them even if you do not know it, you and some of those whom you see obedient to Me. He makes them know by that the inadequacy of their knowledge compared to His knowledge.

Some Arabists said: The angels' statement, Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? was not in the sense of denouncing their Lord. Rather, they asked Him to know, and they reported on their own behalf that they glorify Him. He said: They said that because they hated to disobey God, because the jinn had been commanded before that and disobeyed.

Some of them said: This was from the angels in order to seek guidance about what they did not know about it, so it was as if they said: O Lord, tell us, a question from them to God, not in order to ask for rebuke.

Abu Ja'far said: The most appropriate of these interpretations is the statement of God, the Most High, informing about His angels who said to Him: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? The interpretation of those who said: That from her was a questioning of her Lord, meaning: Inform us, O our Lord, will You place on earth someone with this description, and will You not make Your successors from among us, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? There is no denial from her of what her Lord informed her that He would do. Even if she thought it too great when she was informed of that, that God would have a creation who would disobey Him.

As for the claim of the one who claimed that God Almighty had permitted her to ask about that, and she asked him in amazement, this is a claim for which there is no evidence in the apparent revelation, nor is there any information about it from the proof that would cut off the excuse. It is not permissible to say about the interpretation of the Book of God that which has no evidence from some of the aspects on which the proof is established.

As for the description of the angels of those who were described in their inquiry to their Lord about corruption on the earth and the shedding of blood, it is not impossible that what was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Ibn Masoud from the statement narrated by al-Suddi, and Qatada agreed with them on it regarding the interpretation: which is that God, may He be glorified and praised, informed them that He would place on the earth a caliph who would have offspring who would do such and such, so they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein, based on what was described of the inquiry.

If someone were to say to us: What is the reason for her inquiry, when the matter is as you described, that she was informed that this would happen?

It was said: The reason for her inquiry at that time would be about their condition when that happened, and whether that was from them? And their asking their Lord to make them successors on Earth so that they would not disobey Him. Also not invalid is what Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas followed him in this, that the angels said that because they had knowledge of the inhabitants of Earth before Adam from the jinn, so they said to their Lord: Shall I place therein the likes of them from among the creation who do as they used to do? As a way of asking their Lord, not as a way of affirming that that would happen like that, so that would be from her informing about what she did not know of the knowledge of the unseen. Also not wrong is what Ibn Zayd said, that what the angels said was what they said, as a way of astonishment from them that God would have a creation who disobeys its Creator.

We have left the statement that Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas agreed with him on it, and what Ibn Zayd said in interpreting that, because we do not have any report about what they said from a source that would cut off the excuse and oblige the listener to it. And the report about what has passed and what has preceded, the knowledge of its authenticity cannot be attained except by its coming in a way that prevents quarrelling and collusion, and makes lying, error and forgetfulness impossible. And that is not found in what Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and Ar-Rabi' agreed with him on it, nor in what Ibn Zayd said.

The first interpretation, since this is the case in the verse, is what the apparent meaning of the revelation indicates, which can be interpreted correctly in the concept.

If someone says: If the first interpretation of the verse is what you mentioned, that God informed the angels that the offspring of His successor on earth would cause corruption and shed blood, then for that reason the angels said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? So where is the mention of God informing them of that in His Book?

It was said to him: He was satisfied with the indication of what had appeared from the speech about him, as the poet said:

Do not bury me, for my burial is forbidden to you, but bury me with your mother, Umm Amer.

So he omitted his statement: "Leave me to the one who is called when she hunts: Khamari or Aamer," since it was, in what appeared from his statement, an indication of the meaning he intended. Likewise in his statement: "They said: 'Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein?'" since it was an indication of what he left out after his statement: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority, of the report of what will happen from the corruption of his offspring on the earth. He was satisfied with its indication and omitted it, so he left out mentioning it as we mentioned from the statement of the poet. And there are similar examples of that in the Qur'an and the poetry and speech of the Arabs more than can be counted. So when we mentioned that, we chose what we chose from the statement in interpreting his statement: "They said: 'Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?'"

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You.

Abu Ja'far said: As for his statement: And we glorify You with praise, it means: We magnify You with praise and thanks to You, as the Most High said: So glorify the praises of your Lord (al-Nasr 110:3) and as He said: And the angels glorify the praises of their Lord (al-Shura 42:5). And every mention of God among the Arabs is glorification and prayer. A man among them says: I have completed my glorification of remembrance and prayer. And it has been said: Glorification is the prayer of the angels.

Ibn Humayd narrated: Yaquub al-Qummi narrated on the authority of Ja'far ibn Abi al-Mughira on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, who said: "The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was praying, and a Muslim man passed by a hypocrite and said to him: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is praying and you are sitting. He said to him: Go to your work if you have any work. He said: I do not think that someone will pass by you and criticize you. 'Umar ibn al-Khattab passed by him and said to him: O so-and-so, the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is praying and you are sitting. He said the same to him, and he said: This is part of my work. So he jumped on him and beat him until he finished, then he entered the mosque and prayed with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. When the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, turned away, 'Umar stood up and said: O Prophet of God, I just passed by so-and-so while you were praying, and I said to him: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is praying and you are sitting! He said: Go to your work if you have any work. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Why did you not strike his head? 'Umar stood up quickly and said: O 'Umar, go back, for your anger is honor and your pleasure is wisdom." God has angels in the seven heavens who pray, and He has no need of the prayers of so-and-so. So Umar said: O Prophet of God, what is their prayer? He did not answer him anything, so Gabriel came to him and said: O Prophet of God, did Umar ask you about the prayer of the people of heaven? He said: Yes. So Gabriel said: Give Umar my greetings, and tell him that the people of the lowest heaven will prostrate until the Day of Resurrection, saying: Glory be to the Possessor of dominion and sovereignty. The people of the second heaven will bow until the Day of Resurrection, saying: Glory be to the Possessor of glory and might. The people of the third heaven will stand until the Day of Resurrection, saying: Glory be to the Ever-Living Who does not die.

Abu Ja'far said: Ya'qub ibn Ibrahim and Sahl ibn Musa al-Razi told me: Ibn 'Ulayyah told us: al-Jariri told us, on the authority of Abu 'Abdullah al-Jisri, on the authority of 'Abdullah ibn al-Samit, on the authority of Abu Dharr: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, visited him - or Abu Dharr visited the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace - and said: O Messenger of God, may my father be sacrificed for you, which speech is most beloved to God? He said: What God has chosen for His angels: Glory be to my Lord and praise be to Him, glory be to my Lord and praise be to Him."

In the forms of the report we mentioned, we did not want to prolong the book by examining them.

The origin of glorifying God among the Arabs is to sanctify Him from attributing to Him anything that is not His attributes, and to exonerate Him from that, as A'sha of Banu Tha'labah said:

I say when his pride came to me: Glory be to the one who made Alqamah proud.

He means: Glory be to God for the pride of Alqamah, meaning God is glorified for what Alqamah did of pride, in a way that he disapproved of that.

The people of interpretation differed about the meaning of glorification and sanctification in this place. Some of them said: Their saying, We glorify Your praise means: We pray to You. Those who said that mentioned: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And we glorify Your praise and sanctify You, he said: They say: We pray to You.

Others said: We glorify Your praise is the known glorification. Those who said that mentioned: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And we glorify Your praise, he said: Glorification is glorification.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And We sanctify for You.

Abu Ja'far said: Sanctification is purification and glorification, and from this is their saying: Subbooh Quddus, meaning by their saying Subbooh, sanctifying God, and by their saying Qaws, purifying and glorifying Him. That is why the earth is called a holy earth, meaning purified. So the meaning of the angels' saying: And we glorify You with praise, is that we sanctify You and declare You innocent of what the polytheists attribute to You, and we pray to You, and we sanctify You, we attribute to You what is from Your attributes, of purity from impurities and what the disbelievers attribute to You. It has been said that the sanctification of the angels for their Lord is their prayer to Him. As: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: 'Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Mu' mar told us, on the authority of Qatadah, regarding His statement: and we sanctify You, he said: Sanctification is prayer.

Some of them said: We sanctify you: we glorify and exalt you. Mention who said that.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Hashim bin Al-Qasim told us: Abu Saeed Al-Mu'addab told us: Ismail told us, on the authority of Abu Salih, regarding his statement: And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, he said: We magnify You and glorify You.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, he said: Isa told me, and Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us all on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: And we sanctify You, he said: We magnify and glorify You.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq: And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, we do not disobey nor do we do anything that You dislike.

And he narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, he said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, regarding his statement: And we sanctify for You, he said: Sanctification means purification.

As for the statement of those who said: Sanctification is prayer or glorification, the meaning of his statement goes back to the meaning we mentioned of purification, because her prayer to her Lord is a glorification of Him and a purification from what the disbelievers attribute to Him. If he had said instead of and we sanctify you and we sanctify you, it would have been eloquent speech. This is because the Arabs say: So-and-so glorifies God and sanctifies Him, and he glorifies God and sanctifies Him, with one meaning. The Qur'an has come with this, God Almighty said: So that we may glorify You much * And remember You much (Ta-Ha: 33, 134). And He said in another place: Whatever is in the heavens and whatever is on the earth glorifies God (Al-Jumu'ah: 1).

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: He said, 'Indeed, I know what you do not know.'

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of that. Some of them said: He means by His saying, I know what you do not know, what he found out about Iblis and his concealing of disobedience to God and his concealing of his arrogance, which God, the Blessed and Exalted, found out about him and which was hidden from His angels. Those who said that mentioned: Muhammad ibn al-'Ala' told us, he said: 'Uthman ibn Sa'id told us, he said: Bishr ibn 'Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: Indeed, I know what you do not know, meaning: I have found out about Iblis's heart what you have not found out about his arrogance and delusion.

Musa told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: I know what you do not know, meaning about the affair of Satan.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad told us, and Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Muammil told us. They both said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: I know what you do not know. He said: He knew about the sin and created it from Iblis.

Musa bin Abdul Rahman Al-Masruqi told me, Muhammad bin Bishr told us, he said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ali bin Badhima, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

Abu Kuraib told us: Ibn Yaman told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ali bin Badhima, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Ibn Hamid told us: Hakam told us, on the authority of Anbasa, on the authority of Muhammad Abd al-Rahman, on the authority of al-Qasim ibn Abi Bazza, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Indeed, I know what you do not know, he said: He knew about the sin and created it from Iblis.

Jaafar bin Muhammad Al-Bazuri told me: Hassan bin Bishr told us, on the authority of Hamza Al-Zayyat, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Indeed, I know what you do not know, he said: He knew from Iblis that he concealed his arrogance and did not prostrate to Adam.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said: Abu Asim told us, he said: Isa bin Maimun told us, he said: Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us all on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh on the authority of Mujahid regarding the statement of God: Indeed, I know what you do not know, he said: He knew from Satan the sin.

Abu Kuraib told us: Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Suwaid told us, he said: Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Sufyan, he said: Mujahid said regarding his statement: Indeed, I know what you do not know, he said: He knew from Iblis the sin and created it.

He said once: Adam.

Al-Muthanna told me: Hajjaj bin Al-Munhal told us: Al-Mu'tamir Sulayman told us: I heard Abd Al-Wahhab bin Mujahid narrating on the authority of his father regarding his statement: Indeed, I know that which you do not know, he said: He knew from Iblis disobedience and created it, and He knew from Adam obedience and created it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Tawus, on the authority of his father, and al-Thawri, on the authority of Ali bin Badhima, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Indeed, I know that which you do not know, he said: He knew about the sin and created it from Satan.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq: I know what you do not know, meaning in you and from you, and he did not reveal it to them, of disobedience, corruption, and bloodshed.

Others said: The meaning of this is: I know what you do not know, that from that caliph will be people of obedience and loyalty to God. Those who said this were: Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said: Yazid bin Zari' told us, he said: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said: I know what you do not know, so it was in God's knowledge that from that caliph will be prophets, messengers, righteous people, and inhabitants of Paradise.

This report from God, the Most High, indicates that the angels who said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? were horrified that God would have a creation who would disobey Him, and were amazed at it when they were informed that this would happen. Therefore, their Lord said to them: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. He meant by that, and God knows best: You are amazed at God's command and find it horrifying, and I know that it is in some of you, and you describe yourselves with a description that I know is different from some of you, and you expose a matter that I have made for others. This is because when their Lord informed the angels of what would happen from the descendants of His successor, of corruption and bloodshed, they said to their Lord: O Lord, will You place on earth a successor from other than us, from whose descendants there will be someone who will disobey You, or from us, so that we will glorify You and pray to You and obey You and not disobey You? They did not have knowledge of what Iblis had concealed in his arrogance towards his Lord, so their Lord said to them: Indeed, I know of some of you other than what you say. This is what was hidden from them about the matter of Satan, and his concealment of what he had concealed of arrogance. And for saying that, and describing themselves with a general description, they were rebuked.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: And when your Lord said to the

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority." They said, "Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we exalt Your praise and sanctify You?" He said, "Indeed, I know that which you do not know."

angels, 'I am going to place a vicegerent on earth.'

There are seventeen issues in it:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And when your Lord said to the angels When and when they both fell are timing, so when is for the past, and when is for the future, and one of them may be used in place of the other. Al-Mubarrad said: If when comes with a future tense, its meaning is past, like His saying: And when they plotted against you, "And when you said to him upon whom God had bestowed favor," meaning when they plotted, and when I said. And if when comes with the past tense, its meaning is future, like His saying: So when the disaster comes, "So when the deafening blast comes," and When the victory of God and the conquest comes, meaning it comes. Muammar bin Al-Muthanna Abu Ubaidah said: When is redundant, and the meaning is: And your Lord said, and he cited as evidence the saying of Al-Aswad bin Ya'far:

So, there is no point in mentioning it, and time brings about corruption in the good.

This statement was denied by Al-Zajaj, Al-Nahhas and all the commentators. Al-Nahhas said: This is a mistake, because if is a noun and it is a circumstance of time, not something that is added. Al-Zajaj said: This is an abruptness on the part of Abu Ubaidah. God Almighty mentioned the creation of people and others, so the meaning is and the beginning of your creation when He said, so this was one of the omitted things that the speech indicated, as he said:

Death will come to those who fear it, wherever they go.

He wants wherever he goes. It is possible that it is related to an implied action, the meaning of which is: And remember when He said. It was said: It is attributed to the Almighty's saying: Worship your Lord who created you. So the meaning is that He created you when your Lord said to the angels. And the saying of God Almighty and His address to the angels is established and ancient in eternity, provided that they exist and understand. And thus the whole chapter is about the commands of God Almighty, His prohibitions, and His addresses. This is the school of thought of Sheikh Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari, and it is what Abu al-Ma'ali accepted. We have already mentioned it in the book Al-Asna fi Sharh Asma' God al-Husna wa Sifat God al-Ali.

The Lord: the owner, the master, the reformer, and the restorer. This has been explained above.

Second: The Almighty's saying: To the angels. The singular form of angels is angel. Ibn Kaysan and others said: The weight of angel is a verb from king. Abu Ubaidah said: It is a verb from laka, meaning to send. Al-aluka, amaalaka, and maalaka mean the message. Labid said:

And a boy whom his mother sent with Alook, so we gave him what he asked for.

Another said:

Al-Nu'man informed Malik about me that my imprisonment and waiting have been prolonged.

It is said: alkani meaning send me. Its root is ma'lak. The hamza is the fa of the verb, so they changed it to the ayn of the verb and said: malak. Then they made it easier and said: malak. It is said that its root is malak from malak which means to melek, like shamal from shamal. So the hamza is an extra word from Ibn Kaysan as well, and it may come in poetry in the original form. The poet said:

I am not for human beings, but for angels who descend from the sky and aim

Al-Nadr ibn Shumayl said: "The Arabs have no derivation for the word 'king'. The 'ha' in 'al-malaikah' is an emphasis on the feminine of the plural, and the same is true of 'as-saladamah'. 'As-saladam' are strong horses, the singular of which is 'thaldam'. It was said: It is for exaggeration, like 'alama' and 'nasaba'. The masters of meaning said: God addressed the angels not for advice, but to extract from them what was in them of seeing movements, worship, glorification and sanctification, then He returned them to their value, and the Almighty said: "Prostrate to Adam."

Third: The Almighty's saying: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority. Here, making means creator. Al-Tabari mentioned this on the authority of Abu Rawq, and this indicates that it is transitive to one object, as has been mentioned previously. And the earth, it was said, is Mecca. Ibn Sabit narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said:

The earth was rolled out from Mecca and that is why it was called the mother of villages. He said: The graves of Noah, Hud, Salih and Shuaib are between Zamzam, the corner and the station. Khalifa can mean the active participle, meaning he succeeds those who were before him from the angels on earth, or those who were before him from other than the angels according to what was narrated. It is possible for Khalifa to mean the passive participle, meaning the successor, just as it is said Dhabihah in the sense of the passive participle. The successor with a fat-ha is from the righteous, and with a sukun it is from the wicked, and this is what is known, and more clarification will come to it in Al-A'raf, God willing. Khalifa with the letter fa is the reading of the group, except what was narrated from Zaid bin Ali, who read Khalifa with the letter qaf. The meaning of the Khalifa here - according to Ibn Mas'ud, Ibn Abbas and all the people of interpretation - is Adam, peace be upon him, and he is the Khalifa of God in implementing His rulings and commands, because he was the first messenger to the earth, as in the hadith of Abu Dharr, who said: I said: O Messenger of God, was a prophet sent? He said: Yes. The hadith. It is said: To whom was he a messenger and there was no one on earth? It is said: He was a messenger to his son, and they were forty sons in twenty wombs, in each womb a male and a female, and they multiplied until they multiplied, as God Almighty said: He created you from one soul and created from it its mate and dispersed from both of them many men and women. And He revealed to them the prohibition of dead meat, blood, and pork. He lived nine hundred and thirty years, as the people of the Torah mentioned. It was narrated on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih that he lived a thousand years, and God knows best.

Fourth: This verse is the basis for appointing an Imam and Caliph who is heard and obeyed, so that the word is united and the rulings of the Caliph are implemented. There is no disagreement about the obligation of this among the nation or among the Imams except what was narrated from Al-Asamm, who was deaf to the Sharia. Likewise, everyone who said what he said and followed him in his opinion and school of thought said: It is not obligatory in religion, but rather it is permissible, and that when the nation performs their Hajj and Jihad, and divides equally among themselves, and gives what is right from themselves, and divides the spoils, booty and charity among its people, and establishes the limits on those upon whom it is obligatory, that is sufficient for them, and it is not obligatory for them to appoint an Imam to undertake this. Our evidence is the statement of God the Most High: Indeed, I am going to place a vicegerent on the earth, and His statement: O David, indeed We have made you a vicegerent on the earth, and He said: God has promised those among you who believe and do righteous deeds that He will surely make them successors upon the earth, meaning that He will make successors from among them, and other verses.

The companions agreed to give precedence to Abu Bakr after a disagreement occurred between the Muhajireen and the Ansar in Saqifah Bani Sa'idah regarding the appointment, until the Ansar said:

From us is a leader and from you is a leader. Abu Bakr, Umar and the Muhajireen pushed them away from that and said to them: The Arabs do not submit to anyone except this tribe of Quraysh. They narrated to them the report about that, so they returned and obeyed Quraysh. If the obligation of the Imamate was not obligatory for Quraysh or anyone else, this debate and discussion about it would not have been permissible, and someone would have said: It is not obligatory for Quraysh or anyone else. So there is no point or benefit in your dispute over a matter that is not obligatory. Then, when death approached Abu Bakr may God be pleased with him, he entrusted Umar with the Imamate, and no one said to him: This is a matter that is not obligatory for us or for you. This indicates its obligation and that it is a pillar of the religion by which the Muslims are established. Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds.

The Rafidah said: It must be installed rationally, and that hearing only came as a way of emphasizing the issue of reason. As for knowing the Imam, that is perceived from the perspective of hearing and not reason. This is corrupt, because reason does not obligate or prohibit or disgrace or approve. If that is the case, it is proven that it is obligatory from the perspective of the Shari'ah and not from the perspective of reason, and this is clear.

If it is said that it is:

Fifth: If we accept that the path to the obligation of the Imamate is hearing, then tell us whether it is obligatory from the aspect of hearing by the text of the Imam from the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, or from the aspect of the people of authority and contract choosing him, or by the perfection of the characteristics of the Imams in him, and his calling upon himself with that is sufficient in it.

The answer is to say: People differed on this matter. The Imams and others went to the fact that the way to know the Imam is the text from the Messenger, peace be upon him, and there is no room for choice in it. With us: contemplation is a way to know the Imam, and the consensus of the people of ijtihad is also a way to it. Those who said that there is no way to it except the text based it on their principle that analogy, opinion, and ijtihad are invalid and nothing is known by them at all, and they invalidated analogy as a principle and a branch. Then they differed into three groups: a group claiming the text on Abu Bakr, a group claiming the text on al-Abbas, and a group claiming the text on Ali ibn Abi Talib, may God be pleased with them. The evidence for the absence of a text or its absence on a specific Imam is that if the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, had imposed on the nation obedience to a specific Imam such that it is not permissible to deviate from him to someone else, he would have known that, because it is impossible to charge the entire nation with obeying God in anything other than a specific person, and they have no way to know that charge. If knowledge of it is required, then that knowledge is not without its path being evidence from reason or from the report, and there is nothing in reason that indicates the establishment of the Imamate for a specific person. Likewise, there is nothing in the report that necessitates knowledge of the establishment of a specific Imam, because that report is either a continuous chain of transmission that necessitates knowledge by necessity or by inference, or it is from the reports of individuals, and it is not permissible for its path to be the continuous chain of transmission that necessitates knowledge by necessity or by inference, because if it were like that, then every person responsible would find in himself the knowledge of the obligation of obedience to that specific person and that this is from the religion of God upon him, just as every person responsible knows that from the religion of God that is required of him are five prayers, fasting Ramadan, Hajj, and the like, and no one knows that from himself by necessity, so this claim is invalid, and it is invalid that it is known by the reports of individuals because it is impossible for knowledge of it to occur. Also, if it were necessary to resort to transmitting the text on the Imam in any way, then it would be necessary to prove the Imamate of Abu Bakr and Abbas, because each of them has people who transmit the text explicitly on his Imamate. If proving the three by text at the same time is invalid - as will be explained - then the same applies to one, since no group is more deserving of the text than the other. If proving the text is invalid due to the lack of a path leading to it, then choice and ijtihad are established. If an arbitrary person is arbitrary and claims the continuous transmission and necessary knowledge of the text, then they should be confronted immediately with the opposite of their claim in the text on Abu Bakr and with many reports on that which also take the place of the text. Then there is no doubt in the determination of those other than the Imamis to deny the text, and they are the great multitude and the great multitude. And the necessary knowledge is not agreed upon by those who are less than a tenth of the number of opponents of the Imamis. If it were permissible to reject the necessary in that, then it would be permissible for the sect of Baghdad and China Al-Aqsa and others to deny it.

Sixth: In response to the hadiths that the Imamis used as evidence to indicate the text on Ali, may God be pleased with him, and that the nation disbelieved in this text and apostatized, and opposed the command of the Messenger out of stubbornness, including his saying, peace be upon him:

"Whoever I am his master, then Ali is his master. O God, befriend whoever befriends him and be hostile to whoever is hostile to him." They said: In the language, master means more deserving, so when he said then Ali is his master with the fa of consequence, it is known that what is meant by his saying master is that he is more deserving and more deserving. So it is necessary that he meant by that the Imamate and that obedience is obligatory. And his saying, peace be upon him, to Ali:

You are to me as Aaron was to Moses, except that he is a prophet after me. They said: Aaron's position is well-known, and that is that he shared in prophethood, while Ali did not. He was his brother, while Ali did not. He was a caliph, so it is known that what is meant by him is the caliphate, and other things that they used as evidence for what will be mentioned in this book, God willing.

The answer to the first hadith is that it is not mutawatir, and there is disagreement about its authenticity. Abu Dawud al-Sijistani and Abu Hatim al-Razi have criticized it, and they have provided evidence for its invalidity by saying that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"Muzaynah, Juhaynah, Ghifar, and Aslam are my clients to the exclusion of all people. They have no client except God and His Messenger." They said: "If he had said: 'Whoever I am his client, then Ali is his client,' then one of the two reports would have been a lie."

Second answer: Even though the report is authentic and narrated by a trustworthy person, it does not contain anything that indicates his Imamate, but rather his virtue. This is because mawla means guardian, so the meaning of the report is: Whoever I am his guardian, then Ali is his guardian. God Almighty said: Indeed, God is his Guardian, meaning his Guardian. The purpose of the report was to teach people that Ali's outward appearance was like his inward appearance, and this is a great virtue of Ali.

Third answer: This report was reported for a reason, which is that Usama and Ali had a dispute, and Ali said to Usama:

You are my master. He said: I am not your master, but I am the master of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. This was mentioned to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said: Whoever I am the master of, then Ali is his master.

Fourth answer: When Ali, peace be upon him, said to the Prophet, peace be upon him, in the story of the slander against Aisha, may God be pleased with her:

There are many women other than her. This was difficult for her, so the hypocrites found an opportunity to attack him and pretend to be innocent of him. So the Prophet, peace be upon him, said this statement in response to their statement, and to deny what they had said in their previous statement of being innocent of him and attacking him. This is why it was narrated from a group of the Companions that they said: We did not know the hypocrites during the time of the Messenger of God, peace be upon him, except by their hatred of Ali, peace be upon him. As for the second hadith, there is no disagreement that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, did not mean that Aaron was to Moses in the caliphate after him, and there is no disagreement that Aaron died before Moses, peace be upon them - as will come from the explanation of their deaths in Surat Al-Ma'idah - and he was not a caliph after him, but rather the caliph was Joshua bin Nun. If he had meant by his saying: You are to me in the position of Aaron and Moses disagreement, he would have said: You are to me in the position of Joshua to Moses. Since he did not say this, it indicates that he did not mean this, but rather he meant that I have appointed you as my successor over my family during my life and my absence from my family, just as Aaron was the successor of Moses over his people when he went out to commune with his Lord. It has been said that this hadith was narrated for a reason, which is that when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, went out to the Battle of Tabuk, he appointed Ali, peace be upon him, as his successor in Medina over his family and people, so the hypocrites spread rumors about him and said: He only appointed him out of hatred and dislike for him, so Ali went out and caught up with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said to him: The hypocrites said such and such! So he said:

"They lied. Rather, I have succeeded you as I succeeded Moses and Aaron." He said: Are you not satisfied that you are to me in the same position as Aaron and Moses? If it is proven that he intended to succeed according to their claim, then Ali shared this virtue with others, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, succeeded in every battle a man from his companions, including: Ibn Umm Maktum, Muhammad bin Maslama and others from his companions and others from his companions, and the basis of this report is Sa'd bin Abi Waqqas and it is one report. And he narrated in his meeting with Abu Bakr and 'Umar what is more appropriate than it. And "It was narrated that when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, sent Mu'adh bin Jabal to Yemen, it was said to him: Why don't you send Abu Bakr and 'Umar? He said: I cannot do without them, for their position to me is like the position of hearing and sight to the head." He said: They are my ministers among the people of the earth. And "It was narrated from him, peace be upon him, that he said: Abu Bakr and 'Umar to me in the same position as Aaron to Moses." This report was reported initially, and the report of Ali was reported as a reason, so it is necessary that Abu Bakr be more deserving of the imamate than him, and God knows best.

Seventh: There is a difference of opinion about what makes an Imam an Imam, and that is in three ways. One of them is the text, and the difference of opinion about it has been mentioned before. The Hanbalis and a group of the people of hadith and al-Hasan al-Basri and Bakr the nephew of Abd al-Wahid and his companions and a group of the Khawarij also said this. That is because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, designated Abu Bakr by indication, and Abu Bakr designated Umar. So if the successor designated a specific person as Abu Bakr did, or a group as Umar did, which is the second way, then the choice is up to them in appointing one of them as the companions, may God be pleased with them, did in appointing Uthman ibn Affan, may God be pleased with him. The third way: The consensus of the people of influence and contract. This is because if the group in a Muslim country dies and they do not have an imam or a successor, and the people of that country, which is the presence and location of the imam, appoint an imam for themselves, they agree upon him and are satisfied with him. Then all of the Muslims who are behind them and in front of them in the horizons are obligated to enter into the obedience of that imam, if the imam is not openly immoral and corrupt, because it is a call that encompasses them and must be answered, and no one can refrain from it because of the difference of opinion and corruption in appointing two imams. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"There are three things that a believer's heart will not be deceived about: sincerity in action for the sake of God, adherence to the group, and advising those in authority, for the supplication of the Muslims from behind them encompasses them."

Eighth: If the contract is concluded by one of the people of influence and agreement, then that is established and others are obligated to do it, contrary to what some people say: It is not concluded except by a group of people of influence and agreement. Our evidence is that Omar, may God be pleased with him, concluded the pledge of allegiance to Abu Bakr and none of the companions objected to that. And because it was a contract, it was necessary that it not be in need of a number to conclude it like all other contracts. Imam Abu al-Ma'ali said: If the imamate is concluded for him by one contract, then it is binding, and it is not permissible to remove him without an event or a change in the matter. He said: This is agreed upon.

Ninth: If the one who is qualified for the imamate prevails and takes it by force and coercion, it has been said that this is a fourth way. Sahl ibn Abdullah al-Tustari was asked: What is our duty to the one who prevails over our country while he is an imam? He said: You answer him and give him what he demands of you from his right, and do not deny his actions or flee from him, and if he entrusts you with a secret of the religion, do not divulge it. Ibn Khuwayz Mandad said: If someone who is suitable for it seizes power without consultation or choice and the people pledge allegiance to him, the pledge of allegiance is complete for him, and God knows best.

Tenth: There is a difference of opinion regarding the testimony of the contract of Imamate. Some of our companions said: It does not require witnesses, because testimony is not proven except by a conclusive hearing, and here there is no conclusive hearing that indicates proof of testimony. Some of them said: It requires witnesses. Those who said this argued by saying: If the testimony was not established in it, it would lead to each claimant claiming that he contracted for him secretly, and it would lead to chaos and strife. So the testimony must be considered and two witnesses are sufficient for it, contrary to al-Jubba'i, who said that four witnesses, a contracting party and the one for whom the contract was made are considered, because 'Umar, when he made it a consultation of six, indicated that. Our evidence is that there is no disagreement between us and him that the testimony of two is considered, and what is more is disputed and is not indicated by evidence, so it must not be considered.

Eleventh: The conditions of the Imam, which are eleven:

First: That he be from the heart of the Quraysh, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The Imams are from Quraysh. There is disagreement about this.

Second: He must be one of those who are fit to be a Muslim judge, a mujtahid who does not need anyone else to consult him about incidents. This is agreed upon.

Third: He must have experience and sound judgment in matters of war, managing armies, closing gaps, protecting the nation, deterring the oppressor, taking revenge on the oppressed, and defending the oppressed.

Fourth: He should be one who is not affected by tenderness in implementing the prescribed punishments, nor is he afraid of beheading or cutting off limbs. The evidence for all of this is the consensus of the Companions, may God be pleased with them, because there is no disagreement among them that all of this must be combined in him, and because he is the one who appoints judges and rulers, and he has the right to directly adjudicate and rule, and to examine the affairs of his successors and judges, and none is fit for all of this except one who is knowledgeable in all of it and is responsible for it. And God knows best.

Fifth: He must be free, and there is no secret that he stipulates the freedom of the imam and his Islam, which is the sixth.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:30

And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority." They said, "Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we exalt Your praise and sanctify You?" He said, "Indeed, I know that which you do not know."

Seventh: That he be a male, with healthy limbs, which is the eighth. They agreed that a woman may not be an imam, even though they differed on the permissibility of her being a judge in matters in which her testimony is permissible.

Ninth and tenth: He must be mostly sane, and there is no disagreement about that.

Eleventh: He must be just, because there is no disagreement among the nation that it is not permissible to appoint an imam to a corrupt person, and he must be one of the best of them in knowledge, because of his saying, peace be upon him:

Your leaders are your intercessors, so consider whom you seek as intercession. In the revelation describing Talut, it is stated: God has chosen him over you and has increased him abundantly in knowledge and body. So He began with knowledge, then mentioned what indicates strength and soundness of limbs. His statement, has chosen him, means He has selected him, and this indicates the condition of lineage. It is not a condition that he be infallible and free from error, nor that he be knowledgeable of the unseen, nor that he be the most chivalrous or bravest of the nation, nor that he be from Banu Hashim only and not from others of Quraysh, for the consensus has been reached on the Imamate of Abu Bakr, Umar, and Uthman, and they are not from Banu Hashim.

Twelfth: It is permissible to appoint someone who is less fortunate while someone who is better is present for fear of sedition and that the affairs of the nation will not be set straight. This is because the Imam is appointed to repel the enemy, protect the people, fill the gaps, extract rights, establish the limits, collect money for the public treasury and distribute it among its people. So if appointing someone who is better is feared to cause chaos and corruption and to disrupt the matters for which the Imam is appointed, then this is a clear excuse for moving away from someone who is more fortunate to someone who is less fortunate. This is also indicated by the knowledge of Umar and the rest of the nation at the time of the consultation that among the six there was someone who was more fortunate and someone who was less fortunate, and he permitted the contract for each one of them if the interest led to that and they agreed on it without anyone objecting to them. And God knows best.

Thirteenth: If the Imam is appointed and then commits an immoral act after the conclusion of the contract, the majority said: His imamate is annulled and he is removed due to the apparent and known immorality, because it has been proven that the Imam is only appointed to implement the prescribed punishments, fulfill rights, protect the wealth of the known orphans and the insane, and look into their affairs, and other things that have been mentioned above, and the immorality in him prevents him from carrying out these matters and fulfilling them. So if we allow that he is immoral, it leads to the invalidation of what he was appointed for, do you not see that in the beginning it is not permissible to make a contract for the immoral person because it leads to the invalidation of what he was appointed for, and this is similar to it. Others said: He is not removed except by disbelief or abandoning the establishment of prayer or abandoning its supplication or something from the Shari'ah, due to his saying, peace be upon him, in the hadith of Ubadah:

And that we do not dispute the matter with its people. He said: Unless you see clear disbelief for which you have proof from God. And in the hadith of Awf bin Malik:

No, as long as they establish prayer among you. The hadith. Narrated by Muslim. On the authority of Umm Salamah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said:

"He will appoint rulers over you, and you will recognize and disapprove. Whoever dislikes is innocent, and whoever disapproves is safe. But whoever is satisfied and follows - they said: O Messenger of God, should we not fight them? He said: No, as long as they pray." That is, whoever dislikes in his heart and disapproves in his heart. Also narrated by Muslim.

Fourteenth: He must abdicate if he finds in himself a deficiency that affects the imamate. But if he does not find a deficiency, does he have the right to abdicate and appoint someone else? People differed about this. Some of them said: He does not have the right to do that, and if he does, his imamate will not be abdicated. Some of them said: He has the right to do that. The evidence that if the imam abdicates himself, he is abdicated is the statement of Abu Bakr al-Siddiq may God be pleased with him: Absolve me, absolve me. And the statement of the companions: "We will not abdicate you, nor will we ask you to resign. The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) brought you forward for our religion, so who would delay you? The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was pleased with you for our religion, so we will not be pleased with you!" If he did not have the right to do that, the companions would have disapproved of it and said to him: You do not have the right to say this, and you do not have the right to do it. When the companions approved of that, it was known that the imam has the right to do that, and because the imam oversees others, his ruling must be the ruling of a ruler or an agent if he abdicates himself. The Imam is the representative and deputy of the nation. Since it is agreed that the representative, the ruler, and anyone who represents someone else in something has the right to remove himself, the Imam must be like him. And God knows best.

Fifteenth: If the Imamate is established by agreement of the people of influence and contract or by one person as mentioned above, it is obligatory for all people to pledge allegiance to him to hear and obey, and to establish the Book of God and the Sunnah of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. Whoever refuses the pledge of allegiance for an excuse has an excuse, and whoever refuses for no excuse will be forced and coerced, lest the word of the Muslims be divided. If allegiance is pledged to two caliphs, then the first caliph and the other are killed, and there is disagreement about whether his removal is tangible or implied, in which case his removal is his killing and death. The first is more apparent. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

If allegiance is given to two caliphs, kill the other one of them. Narrated by Abu Saeed Al-Khudri, narrated by Muslim. In the hadith of Abdullah bin Amr, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he heard him say:

"Whoever pledges allegiance to an imam, giving him the clasp of his hand and the fruit of his heart, let him obey him if he is able. But if another comes to dispute him, then strike the neck of the other." Narrated by Muslim also, and from the hadith of Urfajah:

Strike him with the sword, whoever he may be. This is the clearest evidence of the prohibition of establishing two imams, because that leads to hypocrisy, opposition, discord, the occurrence of seditions, and the loss of blessings. However, if the countries are far apart and divergent, such as Andalusia and Khurasan, then that is permissible, as will come, God willing.

Sixteenth: If a Kharijite rebels against an Imam who is known for his justice, it is obligatory for the people to fight him. If the Imam is corrupt and the Kharijite appears to be just, the people should not rush to support the Kharijite until his affair becomes clear in what he appears to be just, or the group agrees to depose the former. This is because everyone who seeks such a matter shows righteousness from himself until, when he is able, he returns to his habit of being contrary to what he showed.

Seventeenth: As for appointing two or three Imams in one era and one country, it is not permissible by consensus for what we have mentioned. Imam Abu al-Ma'ali said: Our companions have prohibited the contract of Imamate for two people in two ends of the world, then they said: If the contract of Imamate is spent for two people, it is considered as if two guardians marry one woman to two husbands without one of them knowing about the contract of the other. He said: What I have in it is that the contract of Imamate for two people in one region with narrow plans and differences is not permissible, and there has been consensus on it. However, if the distance is far and there is wide space between the two Imams, then there is room for speculation in that and it is outside the conclusive evidence. Professor Abu Ishaq permitted that in two regions that are extremely far apart so that the rights and rulings of the people are not neglected. The Karamiyyah have permitted the appointment of two Imams without detail, and they are obligated to permit that in one country, and they have come to the conclusion that Ali and Mu'awiyah were Imams. They said: If there were two people in two countries or regions, each one of them would be more upright in what he had and more accurate in what was next to him. And because it was permissible for two prophets to be sent for one reason and that did not lead to the invalidation of prophethood, then the imamate was more appropriate, and that does not lead to the invalidation of the imamate. The answer is that this is permissible if the law did not forbid it, because it says:

So kill the other of them, because the nation is against him. As for Muawiyah, he did not claim the Imamate for himself, but rather claimed the governorship of the Levant by appointing the Imams before him. What indicates this is the consensus of the nation in their time that the Imam is one of them, and neither of them said that I am an Imam and my opponent is an Imam. If they say: Reason does not make that impossible, and there is nothing in the hearing that prevents it. We say: The strongest hearing is consensus, and it has been found to prevent it.

God the Almighty said: "They said: 'Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein?'" We know for certain that the angels do not know except what they are informed of and do not speak before them. This is general for all the angels, because His statement: They do not speak before Him was made to praise them. So how did they say: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? It was said: The meaning is that when they heard the word caliph, they understood that among the children of Adam there is someone who will cause corruption, since the caliph is meant to reform and leave corruption. However, they generalized the ruling to include everyone with disobedience. So the Almighty Lord explained that among them there is someone who will cause corruption and someone who will not cause corruption. So He said, to comfort their hearts: Indeed, I know. And He confirmed that by teaching Adam the names and revealing to them the hidden meaning of His knowledge. It was said: The angels saw and knew what had happened of the corruption of the jinn and their shedding of blood. This is because the earth was inhabited by the jinn before the creation of Adam, so they caused corruption and shed blood. So God sent Iblis to them with an army of angels, so he killed them and sent them to the seas and mountaintops. From that moment on, glory entered him. Their statement: Will You place therein? came as a purely questioning question: Will this caliph follow the path of the jinn who came before him or not? Ahmad ibn Yahya Tha'lab said this. Ibn Zayd and others said: God the Almighty informed them that the caliph would be from his descendants a people who would spread corruption on earth and shed blood. So they said this statement, either as a way of astonishment at God's appointing someone as a caliph who disobeys Him or at the disobedience of God to someone He appoints as a caliph on earth and bestows His blessings upon him, or as a way of glorifying and magnifying both aspects: the appointment and disobedience. Qatada said: God the Almighty informed them that if He appointed a people on earth, they would spread corruption and shed blood. So when God the Almighty said: Indeed, I will place a caliph on earth, they asked whether He was the one who informed them or someone else.

This is a good statement. It was narrated by Abd al-Razzaq who said: Muammar told us on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? He said: God had informed them that if there were people on the earth, they would cause corruption therein and shed blood. That is why they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? There is an omission in the statement according to his school of thought, and the meaning is that I am placing on the earth a successor who will do such and such. So they said: Will You place therein the one You have informed us of, or someone else? The first statement is also very good, because it involves extracting knowledge and deducing it from the implications of the words, and that can only be done by scholars. What is between the two statements is good, so ponder it. It has been said that God's question to the angels in His statement:

How did you leave My servants - as proven in Sahih Muslim and others - is only a rebuke to the one who said: Will You make it so? And a manifestation of what was previously known when He said to them: Indeed, I know what you do not know.

His saying: Whoever corrupts therein "whoever" is in the accusative case as the direct object of make it and the second direct object takes its place in it. He corrupts is in the wording, and it is permissible in other than the Qur'an to say he corrupts in the meaning. In the revelation: And among them are those who listen to you is in the wording, And among them are those who listen in the meaning. And he sheds is in apposition to it, and both interpretations are permissible for it. Asid narrated on the authority of Al-A'raj that he read and he sheds blood in the accusative case, making it the answer to the question with the letter and, as he said:

Was I not your neighbor, and was there not love and brotherhood between me and you?

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty informs of His gratitude to the children of Adam by mentioning them in the highest assembly before their creation, so the Almighty said: And when your Lord said to the angels meaning, remember, O Muhammad, when your Lord said to the angels and tell your people about that. Ibn Jarir narrated from some of the Arab scholars, namely Abu Ubaidah, that he claimed that when here is redundant and that the meaning of the speech is your Lord said, and Ibn Jarir rejected it. Al-Qurtubi said: And all the commentators rejected it as well, until Al-Zajaj said: This is an audacity from Abu Ubaidah. Indeed, I am placing a successor on the earth, meaning a people who will succeed one another, century after century and generation after generation, as the Almighty said: It is He who made you successors on the earth, and He said: And He will make you successors on the earth, and He said: And if We willed, We could have made from you angels on the earth, succeeding one another, and He said: Then after them came a successor, and it was read in the anomalous: Indeed, I am placing a successor on the earth, narrated by Al-Zamakhshari and others. Al-Qurtubi narrated from Zayd ibn Ali, and what is meant here by the Caliph is not only Adam, peace be upon him, as a group of commentators say, and Al-Qurtubi attributed it to Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, and all the people of interpretation, and there is a view on that, rather the disagreement on that is much, as Al-Razi narrated in his interpretation and others, and it appears that he did not mean Adam specifically, because if that was the case, then the words of the angels would not have been good, because they meant that there would be someone from this type who would do that, and it is as if they knew that with special knowledge or by what they understood from human nature, because he informed them that he would create this type from clay from black mud, or they understood from the Caliph that he is the one who separates between people from injustices that occur between them and deters them from forbidden things and sins, Al-Qurtubi said: Or they compared them to those who came before, as we will mention the words of the commentators on that, and the words of the angels are not in the way of objecting to God nor in the way of envy of the children of Adam, as some commentators may imagine, and God Almighty described them as not preceded Him in speech, meaning they do not ask Him for anything that He did not permit them to do. In it, and here when He informed them that He would create on the earth a creation, Qatada said: It had been presented to them that they would corrupt it, so they said: Will You place therein those who will corrupt therein and shed blood? The verse, but it is a question of inquiry and exploration about the wisdom in that, they say: O our Lord, what is the wisdom in creating these people when among them are those who will corrupt on the earth and shed blood, so if what is meant is Your worship, then we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, that is, we pray to You as will come. That is, nothing of that will come from us, and why was it not limited to us? God the Almighty said in answer to their question: Indeed, I know what you do not know. That is, I know of the greater benefit in creating this type over the harms you mentioned, which you do not know. I will make prophets among them and send messengers among them, and among them will be the truthful, the martyrs, the righteous, the worshippers, the ascetics, the saints, the pious, the close ones, the scholars, the workers, the humble, and those who love Him, the Blessed and Exalted, and those who follow His messengers, may the prayers and peace of God be upon them. It has been proven in the Sahih that when the angels ascend to the Lord Almighty with the deeds of His servants, He asks them, and He is All-Knowing: How did you leave My servants? They say: We came to them while they were praying and we left them while they were praying. This is because they take turns among us and gather in the morning prayer and the afternoon prayer, so these remain and those ascend with their deeds as the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: The deeds of the night are raised to Him before those of the day and the deeds of the day before those of the night. So their saying: We came to them while they were praying and left them while they were praying is an interpretation of His saying to them: Indeed, I know what you do not know. It was said that the meaning of the Almighty's saying in response to them: Indeed, I know what you do not know is that I have a detailed wisdom in creating these people and the situation you mentioned is one that you do not know. It was said that it is an answer to And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You. So He said: Indeed, I know what you do not know, meaning that Iblis is among you and he is not as you described yourselves. It was said that their saying: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You included a request from them to inhabit the earth instead of the children of Adam, so God the Almighty said to them: Indeed, I know what you do not know, that your remaining in the heaven is better for you and more appropriate for you. Al-Razi mentioned it with other answers, and God knows best.

Mentioning the sayings of the commentators, explaining what we have mentioned.

Ibn Jarir said: Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told me: Al-Hussein told us: Al-Hajjaj told me on the authority of Jarir bin Hazim and Mubarak on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: God said to the angels: I am going to make a successor on earth. He said to them: I am going to do it. This means that he informed them of that. Al-Suddi said: He consulted the angels about the creation of Adam. It was narrated by Ibn Abi Hatim. He said: A similar version was narrated on the authority of Qatadah. This expression, even if it does not refer to the meaning of informing, then it is lenient. The expression of Al-Hasan and Qatadah in the narration of Ibn Jarir is better, and God knows best: on earth. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abu Salamah told us, Hammad told us, Ata bin Al-Sa'ib told us on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Sabit that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The earth was spread out from Mecca, and the first to circumambulate the House were the angels. God said: I am going to place a successor on earth, meaning Mecca. This is a mursal hadith, and its chain of transmission is weak, and there is an interpolation in it, which is that what is meant by the earth is Mecca. And God knows best, for it appears that what is meant by the earth is more general than that, a successor. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions that God the Most High said to the angels: I am going to place a successor on earth. They said: Our Lord, what will that successor be? He said: He will have offspring who will cause corruption on earth, envy one another, and kill one another. Ibn Jarir said: The interpretation of the verse according to this is that I will place on the earth a successor from Me who will succeed Me in ruling with justice among My creation, and that successor is Adam and whoever takes his place in obeying God and ruling with justice among His creation. As for corruption and shedding blood unjustly, it is from other than his successors. Ibn Jarir said: The meaning of the succession that God mentioned is only the succession of a generation of them, a generation after another. He said: The active successor is from your saying that someone succeeded someone in this matter if he took his place in it after him, as God Almighty said: Then We made you successors on the earth after them to see how you will act. And from that, the greatest sultan was called a successor because he succeeded the one who was before him, so he took over the matter and was a successor from him. He said: Muhammad ibn Ishaq used to say regarding God Almighty's saying: I will place on the earth a successor, he means a resident and a builder who will populate it and inhabit it with a creation that is not from you. Ibn Jarir said: Abu Kuraib told us, Uthman bin Saeed told us, Bishr bin Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The first to inhabit the earth were the jinn, and they corrupted it, shed blood, and killed one another. Then God sent Iblis to them, and Iblis and those with him killed them until he made them reach the islands of the seas and the edges of the mountains. Then He created and made him inhabit them. For this reason He said: I am going to place a successor on the earth. Sufyan Ath-Thawri said, on the authority of Ata bin As-Sa'ib, on the authority of Ibn Sabit: I am going to place a successor on the earth. They said: Will You place on it someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? He said: They mean the children of Adam. Abdur-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: God said to the angels: I want to create a creation on the earth and place a successor on it. God, the Almighty, has no creation except the angels and the earth, and there are no creations on it. They said: Will You place on it someone who will corrupt it? Al-Suddi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud and others from the Companions: that God informed the angels of what the descendants of Adam would do, so the angels said that. Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that the jinn caused corruption on earth before the children of Adam, so the angels said that, so they compared these to those. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Ali ibn Muhammad al-Tanafisi told us, Abu Muawiyah told us, al-A'mash told us, Bakr ibn al-Akhns told us, Mujahid told us, Abdullah ibn Umar said: The jinn, the sons of the jinn, were on earth two thousand years before Adam was created, so they caused corruption on earth and shed blood, so God sent an army of angels who struck them until they reached the islands of the seas. Then God said to the angels: I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. They said: Will You place on it someone who will cause corruption on it and shed blood? He said: I know what you do not know. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding the words of God Almighty: Indeed, I am going to place a successor on earth to His words: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: God created the angels on Wednesday and created the jinn on Thursday and created Adam on Friday. Then a group of jinn disbelieved, so the angels would descend to them on earth and fight them for their transgression, and corruption was on earth. So they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption in it as the jinn caused corruption and shed blood as they shed? Ibn Abi Hatim said: Al-Hasan bin Muhammad bin

Al-Sabah told us, Saeed bin Sulaiman told us, Mubarak bin Fadala told us, Al-Hasan told us: God said to the angels: I am going to place a successor on earth. He said to them: I will do so, so they believed in their Lord, so He taught them knowledge and concealed knowledge that He knew but they did not know. So they said with the knowledge that He taught them: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption in it and shed blood? He said: I know that which you do not know. Al-Hasan said: The jinn were on earth, causing corruption and shedding blood, but God put in their hearts that this would happen, so they said what He taught them. Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah regarding His statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? God had informed them that if there were people on earth, they would cause corruption therein and shed blood, so that was when they said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Hisham al-Razi told us, Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Maruf, meaning Ibn Kharbudh al-Makki, on the authority of someone who heard Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn 'Ali say: The scroll was an angel, and Harut and Marut were among his helpers. He had three glimpses every day in the Mother of the Book, so he looked at a glance that he had not had before, so he saw in it the creation of Adam and what was in it of matters, so he whispered to Harut and Marut, who were among his helpers, and said: Indeed, I am going to place upon the earth a successive authority. They said: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? He said that to be arrogant towards the angels. This is a strange trace, and if it is believed to be authentic, it goes back to Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn 'Ali ibn al-Husayn al-Baqir, as he transmitted it from the People of the Book, and there is something strange in it that requires its rejection, and God knows best. Its implication is that those who said that were only two, and it is contrary to the context. Stranger than that is what Ibn Abi Hatim also narrated, where he said: My father told us, Hisham ibn Abi 'Ubayd God told us, 'Abdullah ibn Yahya ibn Abi Katheer told us, he said: I heard my father say that the angels who said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? were ten thousand, so a fire came out from God and burned them. This is also an Israelite denial like the one before it, and God knows best. Ibn Jarir said: And some of them said: The angels only said what they said: Will you place therein someone who will corrupt therein and shed blood? Because God permitted them to ask about that after He informed them that it would be from the children of Adam. So the angels asked Him and said, in astonishment: How can they disobey You, O Lord, when You are their Creator? Their Lord answered them, I know what you do not know, meaning that this will happen from them even if you do not know it, and from some of what you see as obedient to Me. He said: And some of the angels said that in order to seek guidance from what they did not know of that, so it was as if they said, O Lord, inform us - a question of inquiry from them, not in order to deny it - and Ibn Jarir chose it. Saeed said on the authority of Qatadah regarding the words of God Almighty: And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I am going to place upon the earth a successive authority, he said, He consulted the angels about the creation of Adam, and they said, Will You place upon it someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? - and the angels knew that there is nothing more hateful to God than the shedding of blood and corruption on earth - while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You. He said, Indeed, I know what you do not know. So it was in God's knowledge that from that successive authority there would be prophets, messengers, righteous people, and inhabitants of Paradise. He said, and it was mentioned to us on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he used to say: When God began to create Adam, peace be upon him, the angels said, God has not created a creation more honorable to Him than us, nor more knowledgeable than us, so they were tested. By creating Adam, and every creation is tested just as the heavens and the earth were tested with obedience, so God the Almighty said: "Come willingly or unwillingly. They said, "We come willingly." And His Almighty saying: And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You. Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, he said: Tasbih is glorification and sanctification is prayer. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, he said they say we pray to You. Mujahid said, And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, he said we magnify You and magnify You. Ad-Dahhak said, sanctification is purification. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said, And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, he said: We do not disobey nor do you do anything that You dislike. Ibn Jarir said, sanctification is glorification and purification. And from this is their saying, Glory be to God, the Holy, meaning by their saying, Glory be to Him, they glorify Him, and by their saying, Holy, they purify and magnify Him. Likewise, the earth is called a holy land, meaning purified. So the meaning of the angels' saying, And we glorify You with Your praise, is that we glorify You and declare You innocent of what the polytheists attribute to You, and we sanctify You, we attribute to You what is from Your attributes of purity from impurities and what the disbelievers attribute to You. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abu Dharr, may God be pleased with him, "that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was asked, 'Which speech is best?' He said, 'What God has chosen for His angels: Glory be to God and His praise.'" Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Qart that on the night of his ascension, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, heard glorification in the highest heavens, Glory be to the Most High, glory be to Him, the Most High. He said, Indeed, I know that which you do not know. Qatadah said, It was in God's knowledge that in that caliphate there would be prophets, messengers, righteous people, and inhabitants of Paradise. And I will say about Ibn Masoud, Ibn Abbas, and more than one of the Companions and Followers, regarding the wisdom of the Almighty's saying: He said, 'Indeed, I know that which you do not know.'

Al-Qurtubi and others have used this verse as evidence for the necessity of appointing a caliph to adjudicate between people in matters of disagreement, to resolve their disputes, to support the oppressed against their oppressors, to implement the prescribed punishments, to deter the commission of indecencies, and other important matters that cannot be established except by the imam. Whatever is not necessary for an obligation is itself obligatory. The imamate is attained by a text, as a group of the Sunnis say about Abu Bakr, or by alluding to it, as others say, or by appointing another caliph after him, as Abu Bakr did with Umar ibn al-Khattab, or by abandoning a consultation among a group of righteous people, as Umar did, or by the people of influence and contract coming together to pledge allegiance to him, or by one of them pledging allegiance to him, so it must be adhered to according to the majority of scholars. Imam al-Haramayn reported consensus on this. And God knows best. Or by one person forcing people to obey him, so it is obligatory lest that lead to discord and disagreement. Al-Shafi'i stated this. Is it obligatory to have witnesses to the appointment of an imam? There is a difference of opinion about this. Some of them said that it is not a condition, and it was said that it is, and two witnesses are sufficient. Al-Jubba'i said that four witnesses are required, as well as a contractor and the one for whom the contract is made, just as 'Umar, may God be pleased with him, left the matter to consultation among six, so the matter fell upon a contractor, namely 'Abd al-Rahman ibn 'Awf, and the one for whom the contract is made, namely 'Uthman. The necessity of the four witnesses was deduced from the remaining four, and there is a view on this, and God knows best.

He must be a free, adult, sane, Muslim, just, diligent, insightful, knowledgeable, sound of body, knowledgeable about wars and opinions, and a Qurayshite according to the correct view. It is not a condition that he be a Hashemite or infallible, contrary to the extremist Rafidis. If the imam becomes corrupt, is he removed or not? There is a difference of opinion on this, and the correct view is that he is not to be removed because of his statement, peace and blessings be upon him, unless you see clear blasphemy for which you have proof from God. Is it permissible for him to remove himself? There is a difference of opinion on whether he removes himself. Al-Hasan ibn Ali, may God be pleased with him, removed himself and handed over the matter to Muawiyah, but this was for an excuse and he was praised for that. As for appointing two or more imams on earth, this is not permissible because of his statement, peace and blessings be upon him:

Whoever comes to you and your matter is united, wanting to divide you, kill him, whoever he is. This is the opinion of the majority. More than one of them, Imam al-Haramayn, reported the consensus on this. The Karamiyyah said that two or more are permissible, just as Ali and Muawiyah were two imams whose obedience was obligatory. They said that if it is permissible to send two prophets at one time and more, then this is permissible for the imam because prophethood is of a higher rank without any difference of opinion. Imam al-Haramayn reported on the authority of Professor Abu Ishaq that he permitted appointing two or more imams if the countries were far apart and the regions expanded between them, and Imam al-Haramayn hesitated about that. I said: This is similar to the situation of the Abbasid caliphs in Iraq, the Fatimids in Egypt, and the Umayyads in Morocco. Let us establish all of this in Another place in the book of rulings, God willing.

Fath al-Qadir

30- Idh is one of the circumstances used for timing, and it is for the future, and idha is for the past, and one of them may be used in place of the other.

Al-Mubarrad said: It is with the future for the past and with the past for the future. Abu Ubaidah said: It is redundant here. Al-Zajaj and Ibn Al-Nahhas narrated it and said: It is a circumstance of time, not one of the things that are added, and here it is in the accusative case with the estimation of remember or they said. It was said: It is related to create for you, and it is not apparent. The angels are the plural of king with the weight of fa', said Ibn Kaysan, and it was said, like mulaka with the weight of muf'al, said Abu Ubaidah, from la'ak: if he sent, and alukah: the message. Labid said:

And a boy whose mother sent him to Aluk, so we gave him what he asked for.

Adi bin Zaid said:

Al-Nu'man informed Malik about me that my imprisonment and waiting had been prolonged.

It is said: Alkani, meaning you sent. Al Nadr bin Shumayl said: There is no derivation for the word king among the Arabs, and the ha in al-Malaikah is to emphasize the femininity of the plural, and the same is true for al-Saladamah and al-Saladam, the strong horses, the singular of which is saldam. It was also said: It is for emphasis like alama and nasaba, and ja'il here is from ja'ala which is transitive to two objects. Al-Mutarrazi mentioned that it means Creator, and that requires that it is transitive to one object, and the land here is this dust, and that is not specific to one place rather than another. It was also said: It is Mecca. The word caliph here means the one who succeeds the angels who came before him. It is also possible that it means the one who is created, meaning someone else succeeds him. It was said that it is Adam. It was said that it is everyone who has a caliphate on earth. The first is strengthened by his saying: a caliph without caliphs. Adam is sufficient without mentioning what comes after him. It was said that God addressed the angels with this address not for consultation but to extract what they have. It was said that He addressed them with this so that they would ask that question and they would be answered with that answer. It was said that it is in order to teach His servants the legitimacy of consulting them. As for their saying: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? It appears that they denounced the succession of the children of Adam on earth because they are [a source of] corruption on earth. They only said this statement before they had any knowledge of the children of Adam, rather before the existence of Adam, let alone his offspring, because they knew it from God Almighty in one way or another because they do not know the unseen. A group of commentators said this. Some commentators said: There is an ellipsis in the speech, and the meaning is: I am going to make a successor on earth who will do such and such, so they said: Will you make therein someone who will corrupt therein? His saying: corrupts takes the place of the second object. Corruption is the opposite of goodness, and bloodshed is pouring it out, Ibn Faris and Al-Jawhari said: Spilling is only used for blood, and the singular of blood is blood, and its origin is my blood, with its lam deleted, and the phrase and we glorify your praise is a circumstantial phrase. And glorification in the speech of the Arabs is sanctification and worship from evil in a manner of glorification. Al-A'sha said:

I say when his pride came to me, Glory be to the one who made Alqamah proud.

And with Your praise is in the place of the state: that is, praising You, and the meaning of praise has already been mentioned. And sanctification: purification, that is, and We purify You from what is not befitting of You, which the atheists have attributed to You and the deniers have fabricated. It was mentioned in Al-Kashshaf that the meaning of glorification and sanctification is one, which is to worship God from evil, and that they are from glorifying on earth and in water and sanctifying on earth if he went into it and went far. In the dictionary and other books of language there is what guides to what we have mentioned, and establishing is better than emphasizing, especially in the speech of God, the Most High. And since their question was based on a description that requires attesting to some knowledge for themselves, God, the Most High, answered them by saying: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. And in this summary there is what suffices from detail, because whoever knows what the one being addressed does not know, it is appropriate for him to submit to what he does, and whoever does not know must acknowledge to the one he knows that his actions are based on what knowledge requires and what the prevailing interest and perfect wisdom demand. He did not mention the relation of his saying: You know to indicate generalization, and the listener then goes to every direction and admits his inability and acknowledges his shortcomings. Abd al-Razzaq, Abd ibn Hamid and Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: God expelled Adam from Paradise before He created him, then he recited: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority. Al-Hakim narrated something similar and authenticated it on his authority and added: And there were in it two thousand years before he was created, the jinn, the sons of jinn, so they corrupted the earth and shed blood. When they corrupted the earth, God sent against them soldiers of angels who struck them until they drove them to the islands of the seas. When God said: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority, they said: Will You place upon it one who will corrupt therein and shed blood? as those jinn did. God said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Amr. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas a longer version than it. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions that he said: When God finished creating what He loved, He ascended to the Throne and made Iblis the king of the lowest heaven. He was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, and they were called the jinn because they were the treasurers of Paradise. Iblis was a treasurer with his kingdom, so arrogance entered his chest and he said: God did not give me this except for my own advantage. God saw that from him and said to the angels: Indeed, I am going to place a successor on earth. They said: Our Lord, what will that successor be? He said: He will have offspring who will cause corruption on earth, envy one another and kill one another. They said: Our Lord, Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding the verse: The angels and God know that there is nothing more hateful to God than the shedding of blood and corruption on earth. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: Beware of opinion, for God has returned opinion to the angels. God said: Indeed, I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. The angels said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Abu Sabit that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The earth was spread out from Mecca and the angels used to circumambulate the House. It was the first to circumambulate it and it is the land about which God said: Indeed, I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. Ibn Kathir said: This is a weak mural in its chain of transmission, and it contains an interpolation, which is that what is meant by the earth is Mecca, and it appears that what is meant by the earth is more general than that. End quote. Abd al-Razzaq, Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada who said: The glorification and sanctification mentioned in the verse refers to prayer. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya narrated in the Book of Repentance on the authority of Anas who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "The first to respond were the angels, God the Most High said: 'Indeed, I am going to place a successor on earth.' They said: 'Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?' They said: 'So they turned him away, but he turned away from them.' They circled the Throne for six years saying: 'At Your service, at Your service, we apologise to You. At Your service, at Your service, we ask Your forgiveness and we repent to You.” It is proven in Sahih from the hadith of Abu Dharr that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: “The most beloved speech to God is that which He has chosen for His angels: ‘Glory be to my Lord and praise be to Him.’” Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions regarding His statement: And we sanctify You, he said: We pray to You. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: Sanctification means purification. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding His statement: And we sanctify You, he said: We magnify You and magnify You. They narrated on the authority of Abu Salih who said: We magnify You and glorify You. Abdul Razzaq, Saeed bin Mansour, Abdul bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding his statement: I know what you do not know, he said: He knew from Iblis the sin and his creation of it. Abdul bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding its interpretation, he said: It was in the knowledge of God that there would be prophets, messengers, righteous people and inhabitants of Paradise from the caliphate. Ahmad, Abdul bin Hamid, Ibn Hibban in his Sahih and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Sha'b narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Omar that he heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: “When God sent Adam down to the earth, the angels said: O Lord, ‘Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood?’ They said: Our Lord, we are more obedient to You than the children of Adam. God said to His angels: Bring two angels from the angels so that they may descend to the earth so that We may see how they act. They said: Our Lord, Harut and Marut. He said: So descend to the earth, and Venus appeared to them as a woman from the most beautiful of people.” And he mentioned the story. It has been proven in the reliable books of hadith that there are hadiths from a group of the Companions regarding the description of His creation of Adam, and they are present, so we will not go on mentioning them at length.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

29. The Almighty said: And when your Lord said meaning, and your Lord said. When is redundant and it was said that its meaning is, And remember when your Lord said. And likewise everything that is mentioned in the Qur'an of this type, this is its path. When and when are letters of timing, except that when is for the past and when is for the future, and one of them may be put in place of the other. Al-Mubarrad said: If when comes with the future, its meaning is past, like the Almighty's saying: And when those who plotted against you 30-Al-Anfal, meaning when they plotted. And if when comes with the past, its meaning is future, like his saying: So when the disaster comes 34-Al-Nazi'at, When the victory of God comes 1-Al-Nasr, meaning it comes. To the angels is the plural of king and its origin is malak from malakah and alukah and wawk, which means: the message, so it was reversed and it was said malak, then the hamza was deleted to seek lightness due to its frequent use, and its vowel was transferred to the lam so it was said malak. He meant by them the angels who were on the earth, and that is because God Almighty created the heaven and the earth and created the angels and the jinn, so He settled the angels in the heaven and the jinn in the earth, so they became obsolete and worshipped for a long time on the earth, then envy and oppression appeared among them, so they corrupted and killed, so God sent to them an army of angels called the jinn, and they are the treasurers of Paradise, and He derived for them their head from Paradise, Iblis, who was their leader and guide and the most knowledgeable of them, so they descended to the earth and expelled the jinn to the mountain passes and valleys and the islands of the seas and they settled on the earth and God made worship easier for them, so God gave Iblis the kingdom of the earth, and the kingdom of the lowest heaven and the treasurer of Paradise, and he used to worship God sometimes on the earth and sometimes in the heaven and sometimes in Paradise, so he became amazed and said to himself: God did not give me this kingdom except because I am the most honorable of the angels to Him, so God Almighty said / to him and his army: I am going to make a creator on the earth a successor meaning instead of you and raise you to Me, so they hated that because they were the least worshipped of the angels.

What is meant by the caliph here is Adam, whom he named because he succeeded the jinn, i.e. he came after them. It was also said that someone else would succeed him, but the correct view is that he is God's caliph on His earth to establish His rulings and carry out His commandments. They said, 'Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein?' with sins. And blood is shed unjustly, that is, as the sons of the jinn did, so they compared the witnessed to the absent, otherwise they would not have known the unseen. And we glorify You with praise. Al-Hasan said: We say, Glory be to God and His praise, and it is the prayer of creation and the prayer of animals and others except for humans, and they are provided for by it. Ismail bin Abdul Qahir told us, Abdul Ghafir bin Muhammad told us, Muhammad bin Isa told us, Ibrahim bin Muhammad bin Sufyan told us, Muslim bin Al-Hajjaj told us, Zuhair bin Harb told us, Habbab bin Hilal told us, Wahib told us, Saeed Al-Jariry, on the authority of Abu Abdullah Al-Jisri, on the authority of Ubadah bin Al-Samit, on the authority of Abu Dharr, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was asked, Which speech is best? He said, "What God has chosen for His angels or for His servants: Glory be to God and His praise." It was said, And we pray by Your command. Ibn Abbas said, "Everything in the Qur'an about glorification is intended for prayer. "And we sanctify You," that is, we praise You with holiness and purity. It was said, "And we purify ourselves for Your obedience. It was said, And we glorify You." The lam is a connection. It was said: This was not in the case of the angels as a way of objection and astonishment at the work, but rather as a way of astonishment and seeking the face of wisdom in it. "God said: 'Indeed, I know that which you do not know'" of the benefit in it. It was said: I know that among his descendants there are those who obey Me and worship Me from the prophets, saints, and scholars. It was said: I know that among you there are those who disobey Me, and he is Iblis. It was said: I know that they sin and I forgive them. The people of Hijaz and Basra read Indeed, I know with the opening of the ya', and likewise every ya' of addition that is preceded by an open alif except in a few places. They open it in some places with the damma and kasra alif and with other than the alif. There is a difference among the reciters in its details.

And when your Lord said to the angels, "Indeed, I will place upon the earth a successive authority." They said, "Will You place upon it one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we exalt Your praise and sanctify You?" He said, "Indeed, I know that which you do not know."

Tafsir al-Baidawi

30 "And when your Lord said to the angels, 'I am going to place a vicegerent on earth.'" This is an enumeration of a third blessing that includes all people. The creation of Adam, his honor, and his preference over his angels by commanding them to prostrate to him is a blessing that includes his descendants. And if: it is an adverb of time that is used for a past relative clause in which another occurred, just as it is used for a future relative clause in which another occurs, and therefore they must be added to sentences like where in place, and they are built to liken them to relative pronouns, and we used them for explanation and recompense, and their place is always the accusative with the adverbial, because they are from the indeclinable adverbs for what we mentioned, and as for the saying of the Most High: "And remember the brother of Aad when he warned his people in Al-Ahqaf" and the like, then it is based on the interpretation: remember the incident if it was such and such, so the incident was deleted and the adverb was used in its place, and its factor in the verse is they said, or remember according to the mentioned interpretation because it came as an explicit agent for it in the Qur'an a lot, or implied indicated by the content of the previous verse, like and He began your creation when He said, and based on this the sentence is conjoined to your creation and is included in the rule of the relative clause. And from Muammar that it is added. Angels are the plural of malāk, as ash-Shama'il is the plural of shama'al, and the ta' is for the feminine of the plural. It is the reversed ma'alik from al-alūkah, which means: the message, because they are intermediaries between God the Most High and the people, so they are the messengers of God, or like the messengers to them. Rational people differed about their reality after agreeing that they are entities that exist and exist by themselves. Most Muslims went to the view that they are subtle and capable of taking on different forms, citing as evidence that the messengers saw them thus. A group of Christians said: They are the virtuous human souls that are separate from bodies. The sages claimed that they are abstract substances that differ from the rational souls in reality, divided into two sections: A section whose concern is to be absorbed in knowing the Truth, may He be glorified and exalted, and to be free from being occupied with anything other than Him, as He described them in His perfect revelation, as God the Most High said: "They glorify Him night and day, never slackening." They are the Most High and the angels brought near. A section manages the matter from heaven to earth according to what was previously decreed and what was written by the divine pen: They do not disobey God in what He commands them and do what they are commanded. They are the ones who manage the matter, so some of them are heavenly and some of them are earthly, according to the details that I have established in the Book of Ascendants.

And it is said to them: All the angels, due to the generality of the wording and the lack of a specification. It was also said: The angels of the earth. It was also said: Iblis and those who were with him in fighting the jinn, for God Almighty first settled them on the earth and they corrupted it, so He sent Iblis to them in the army of the angels and he destroyed them and scattered them in the islands and mountains. And the maker: from the verb ja'ala which has two objects and they are in the earth a successor and it works on them, because it means the future and depends on the predicate. And it is permissible for it to mean the creator. The caliph is the one who succeeds another and takes his place. The letter ha in it is for emphasis. What is meant by it is Adam, peace be upon him, because he was the caliph of God on earth. Likewise, every prophet whom God appointed as his caliph in the development of the earth, the governance of the people, the perfection of their souls, and the implementation of His command over them, not because God Almighty needs someone to take his place, but because the one he is appointed as a caliph is unable to accept His grace and receive His command without an intermediary. This is because he did not appoint an angel, as God Almighty said: And if We had made him an angel, We would have made him a man. Do you not see that when the strength of the prophets was exceeded, and their genius was ignited to the point that its oil would almost glow even if no fire had touched it, the angels and whoever was of higher rank were sent to them, speaking to them without an intermediary, as He spoke to Moses, peace be upon him, at the appointed time, and to Muhammad, peace be upon him, on the night of the Ascension? The equivalent of this in nature is that when the bone was unable to accept nourishment from the flesh due to the distance between them, the Almighty, in His wisdom, made between them the cartilage suitable for them to take from this and give from that. Or a successor to those who inhabited the earth before him, or he and his descendants because they succeed those before them, or some of them succeed each other. The singular use of the word is either to dispense with mentioning him instead of mentioning his sons, as the mention of the father of the tribe was dispensed with in their saying: Mudar and Hashim. Or on the interpretation of those who succeed you, or a successor who succeeds you. The benefit of the Almighty's saying this to the angels is to teach consultation, and to magnify the status of the one who was made, by the Almighty giving good tidings of the existence of the inhabitants of His kingdom, and His title as the successor before His creation, and to show his superiority over what is in it of corruption by asking them, answering them, and clarifying that wisdom requires creating what its goodness outweighs, for abandoning much good for the sake of little evil is much evil, and so on.

They said, Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? They were astonished that He would appoint someone to inhabit and reform the earth who would cause corruption therein, or that He would appoint people of disobedience in place of the people of obedience. They were exploring the wisdom that dazzled and nullified those corruptions, and inquiring about what would guide them and remove their doubts, like a student asking his teacher about what is in his chest. It was not an objection to God Almighty, may His power be glorified, nor was it an attack on the children of Adam in the absence of knowledge, for they are above being suspected of that, according to the Almighty's saying: "Rather, they are honored servants. They do not precede Him in speech, and they act by His command." They only knew that through information from God Almighty, or it was received from the Tablet, or it was deduced from what was fixed in their minds that infallibility is among their special characteristics, or it was an analogy between one of the two weighty things and the other. Spilling, casting, pouring, and shen are types of pouring. Spilling is said of blood and tears, casting of molten gems, pouring from above, shen of pouring from the mouth of a water skin and the like, and so is tooth. It was read yasfik in the passive form, so the referent is to min whether it is made a relative pronoun or an omitted description, meaning: he sheds blood among them.

"And we glorify You with praise and sanctify You" is a state established for the purpose of difficulty, like saying: Are you doing good to your enemies, while I am the old needy friend? The meaning is: Are you appointing sinners as successors, while we are infallible and deserving of that? The intended meaning is to inquire, along with what is expected of them, about the infallible angels in the succession, not to be amazed or boastful. It is as if they knew that the one appointed as successor has three powers around which his affair revolves: lust and anger, which lead him to corruption and bloodshed, and reason, which calls him to knowledge and obedience. They looked at them individually and said: What is the wisdom in appointing him as successor? Considering those two powers does not require his creation, let alone appointing him as successor. As for considering the rational power, we establish what is expected of it, free from opposition to those corruptions. They overlooked the virtue of each of the two powers if it becomes refined, obedient to reason, and trained in goodness, such as chastity, courage, struggling against desires, and fairness. They did not know that the structures provide what the individual cannot provide, such as encompassing the particulars, deducing industries, and extracting the benefits of beings from potential to action, which is the purpose of succession, and to which the Almighty referred in summary by saying:

He said, 'Indeed, I know that which you do not know.'

And glorification is distancing God Almighty from evil, as well as sanctification, from glorifying God on earth and in water, and sanctifying God on earth if he went into it and went far, and it is said that he sanctified if he purified because the purifier of something distances it from filth. And with Your praise is in the place of the state, meaning: clothed in Your praise for what Your knowledge inspired us with and guided us to glorify You, they made up for by it what made them think that glorification was attributed to themselves, and we sanctify You, we purify our souls from sins for Your sake, as if they responded to the corruption explained by polytheism among some people with glorification, and the shedding of blood, which is the greatest of reprehensible actions, with purifying the souls from sins. And it was said: We sanctify You, and the lam is added.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:31

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:31

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

)And He taught Adam the names) meaning the names of the things named all of them by casting their knowledge into his heart then He presented them meaning the things named, and in this is the predominance of rational beings to the angels and said to them as a rebuke Inform Me tell me the names of these the things named if you are truthful in that I do not create anyone more knowledgeable than you or that you are more deserving of the caliphate, and the answer to the condition is indicated by what preceded it.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Muhammad bin Jarir narrated to us, he said: Muhammad bin Hamid narrated to us, he said: Yaqub al-Qummi narrated to us, on the authority of Ja'far bin Abi al-Mughira, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The Lord of Glory sent the Angel of Death, and he took from the earth's surface, from its fresh and salty water, and created Adam from it, and from that he was called Adam, because he was created from the earth's surface.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Amr bin Thabit told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ali, who said: Adam was created from the earth's crust, in which there is good, righteous, and bad. You see all of that in his offspring, the righteous and the bad.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad told us: Misa'ar told us, on the authority of Abu Haseen, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, who said: Adam was created from the skin of the earth, and he was named Adam.

Ibn Al-Muthanna told us: Abu Dawud told us: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Abu Hasin, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, who said: He was called Adam because he was created from the skin of the earth.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When the Angel of Death was sent to take the soil of Adam from the earth, he took from the surface of the earth and mixed it, so he did not take from one place, but took from red, white, and black soil. That is why the children of Adam came out different. That is why he was called Adam, because he took from the surface of the earth.

It was narrated from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, a report that confirms what was said by the one we narrated regarding the meaning of Adam. This is what: Yaqub bin Ibrahim narrated to me, he said: Ibn Ulayyah narrated to us, on the authority of Awf, and Muhammad bin Bashir and Umar bin Shabah narrated to us, they said: Yahya bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Awf narrated to us, and Ibn Bashir narrated to us, he said: Ibn Abi Uday, Muhammad bin Ja'far, and Abdul Wahhab Al-Thaqafi narrated to us, they said: Awf narrated to us, Muhammad bin 'Amara Al-Asadi narrated to us, he said: Ismail bin Abaan narrated to us, he said: Anbasa narrated to us, on the authority of Awf Al-A' rabi, on the authority of Qassama bin Zuhair, on the authority of Abu Musa Al-Ash'ari, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God created Adam from a handful which He took from all the earth, and the children of Adam came according to the earth, and among them came the red, the black, the white, and those in between, and the plain and the rough, and the wicked and the good."

According to the interpretation that Adam interpreted, meaning that he was created from the surface of the earth, the origin of Adam must be an action by which the father of mankind was named, just as Ahmad was named after the action of praising, and Asaad from happiness, so that is why it was not used. And its interpretation then would be: Adam, the king of the earth, meaning by it he reached its surface and its surface: its surface that is visible to the eye, just as the skin of every person with skin has surface. And from that the surface was called idman, because it became like the upper skin of what it is from, then it was transferred from the action and made a name for the person in particular.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: All the names

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed regarding the names that God taught Adam and then presented to the angels.
