Muhammad bin Jarir told us: Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And He taught Adam the names - all of them, he said: The names of all his descendants.

The first of these sayings to be correct, and the most similar to what is indicated by the apparent meaning of the recitation, is the saying of the one who said about His statement: And He taught Adam the names - all of them, that they are the names of his descendants and the names of the angels, not the names of the rest of the kinds of creation. This is because God, the Most High, said: Then He showed them to the angels, meaning by that the individuals named by the names that He taught Adam. The Arabs hardly use pronouns with the ha' and the mim except for the names of the sons of Adam and the angels. However, if it is about the names of beasts and the rest of creation other than those we have described, then they use the ha' and the alif or the ha' and the nun, so they say: 'ardhunna or 'ardha.' And the same is done if it is about kinds of creation such as beasts and birds and the rest of the kinds of nations and in them are the names of the sons of Adam and the angels, then they use the pronouns with the ha' and the nun or the ha' and the alif as we have described. Perhaps, if that is the case, you would have referred to it with the letter ha' and the letter meem, as God the Most High said: "And God created every living creature from water. Among them are those that crawl on their bellies, and among them are those that walk on two legs, and among them are those that walk on four" (al-Nur 24:45). So He referred to it with the letter ha' and the letter meem, and they are different types, including humans and others. And even if that is permissible, then the most prevalent thing in the speech of the Arabs is what we have described, of them using the word ha' and alif as a metaphor for the names of the races of nations when they are mixed with the letter ha' and alif or the letter ha' and the letter noon. Therefore, I said: It is more appropriate to interpret the verse that the names that Adam was taught are the names of the people of Adam and the names of the angels, even if what Ibn Abbas said is permissible based on the example of what came in the Book of God in His saying: "And God created every living creature from water. Among them are those that crawl on their bellies" (al-Nur 24:45) and the verse. It was mentioned that in the letter of Ibn Mas'ud it is: Then he presented them, and that in the letter of Abu it is: Then he presented them. Perhaps Ibn Abbas interpreted what he interpreted from his statement: He taught him the name of everything, even the faswa and the fasiyya, according to the reading of Abi, because as far as we have been informed, he used to read Abi. And the interpretation of Ibn Abbas according to what was reported from Abi regarding his reading is not objectionable, rather it is correct and widespread in the speech of the Arabs, in the manner described above. The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's statement: Then He presented them to the angels.

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Abu Ja'far said: We have already mentioned the interpretation that is most appropriate for the verse, according to our reading and the script of our Qur'an, and that His saying, Then He presented them, with reference to the children of Adam and the angels, is more appropriate than it is with reference to all kinds of creation, even though it is not corrupt for it to be indicative of all kinds of nations, for the reasons that we have described.

And what He, the Most High, means by His saying: Then He presented them, is that He presented the people of names to the angels.

The commentators differed in their interpretation of his statement: Then He showed them to the angels, similar to their difference in his statement: And He taught Adam all the names. I will mention the statement of the one who has reached us regarding it.

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us: Uthman ibn Saeed told us: Bishr ibn Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Then He showed them to the angels, then He showed these names, meaning all the things, that He taught Adam from the categories of all creation.

Musa told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Then He presented them, then He presented creation to the angels.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said: The names of all his descendants, he took them from his back, he said: Then he presented them to the angels.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Then He showed them, he said: He taught him the name of everything, then he showed those names to the angels.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Then He presented them, He presented the owners of the names to the angels.

Ali bin Al-Hassan told us: Muslim told us: Muhammad bin Mus'ab told us, on the authority of Qais, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid: Then he showed them to the angels, meaning he showed the names, the dove and the crow.

Al-Qasim told us: Al-Hussein told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Jarir ibn Hazim and Mubarak, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, who said: He taught him the name of everything: these horses, these mules, and the like. And he began to name each thing by its name, and nation after nation was presented to him.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Then he said, 'Inform me of the names of these, if you are truthful.'

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of his saying, Inform me is: tell me, as Abu Kurayb told us, he said: Uthman told us, he said: Bishr told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Inform me, he says: tell me the names of these people.

And from it is the saying of the genius of Banu Dhubyan:

The prophet informed him that a tribe of haram or leprosy had come to him.

He means by his saying: He informed him: He informed him and made him aware.

The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: By the names of these.

Abu Ja'far said: Muhammad ibn 'Amr told me, he said: Abu 'Asim told us, he said: 'Isa told us, and Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Najeh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: By the names of these, he said: By the names of these that I told Adam.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Husayn told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful. He said: The names of these that I told Adam. The statement on the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: If you should be truthful.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed on that. Abu Kurayb told us, he said: Uthman bin Sa'id told us, he said: Bishr bin 'Amara told us on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: If you are truthful, if you know that I have not placed a caliph on earth.

Musa bin Harun told us: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: If you are truthful, that the children of Adam spread corruption on earth and shed blood.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Jarir bin Hazim and Mubarak, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful. I did not create a creation except that you were more knowledgeable than it, so inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful.

Abu Ja'far said: The most correct of these sayings in interpreting the verse is the interpretation of Ibn 'Abbas and those who said the same. The meaning of that is: He said, "Inform Me of the names of those whom I have presented to you, O angels, who say: 'Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood from other than us, or from among us, so that we may glorify You with praise and sanctify You?' If you are truthful in what you say, that if I make My successor on earth from other than you, his offspring will disobey Me and cause corruption therein and shed blood, and if I place you therein, you will obey Me and follow My command by glorifying Me and sanctifying Me. If you do not know the names of those whom I have presented to you from among My creation, and they are created and existing, you see them and witness them, and the knowledge of others is due to My teaching them, then you, with regard to the non-existent matters that have not yet come into existence, and with regard to the matters that are hidden from your eyes, it is more likely that you are not knowledgeable. So do not ask Me about that of which you have no knowledge, for I know what is good for you and what is good for My creation."

This action of God, the Most High, through His angels who said to Him: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? is from the aspect of His rebuke to them, the Most High, similar to His saying, the Most High, to His Prophet Noah, peace be upon him, when he said: My Lord, indeed my son is of my family, and indeed, Your promise is true, and You are the Most Just of judges. (Hud 11:45): "So do not ask about that of which you have no knowledge. Indeed, I advise you, lest you be among the ignorant." (Hud 11:45). Likewise, the angels asked their Lord to be His successors on earth, so that they would glorify and sanctify Him therein, since they were the offspring of the one He had informed them that He would place on earth as a successor, who would cause corruption therein and shed blood. So He, the Most High, said to them: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. Meaning by that: I know that some of you are the initiator and the sealer of sins, and he is Iblis, thereby denying their saying, the Most High, the Most High. Then He made them aware of their error in what they said of that, by informing them of the inadequacy of their knowledge of what they witnessed with their own eyes, so how about what they did not see and were not informed about? By showing them what was shown to them from His creation who were present on that day, and saying to them: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful, that if I make you successors on My earth, you will glorify and sanctify Me, and if I make someone other than you successor on it, his offspring will disobey Me, corrupt and shed blood. So when the place of their mistake became clear to them, and the lapse of their error became apparent to them, they turned to God in repentance and said: Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. So they hastened to return from the lapse, and hastened to return from the slip, as Noah said when he was rebuked for his question and it was said to him: Do not ask for that of which you have no knowledge: "My Lord, indeed I seek refuge in You from asking You for that of which I have no knowledge. And unless You forgive me and have mercy upon me, I will be among the losers." (Hud 11:47). And so does every one who is guided to the truth and is successful, whose return to the truth is quick and close to it.

Some of the grammarians of Basra claimed that his saying: Tell me the names of these people if you are truthful

It was not because the angels claimed something, but God informed about their ignorance of the knowledge of the unseen, and His knowledge of it and His grace, so He said: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful, just as a man says to a man: Inform me of this if you know, and he knows that he does not know, meaning that he is ignorant.

This is a statement which, if a contemplator ponders it, will realize that some of it corrupts some of it. That is because its speaker claimed that God, the Most High, said to the angels when He presented to them the people of names: Inform Me of the names of these people, and He knew that they did not know, nor did they claim to know anything that would require them to be rebuked for this statement.

He claimed that his saying: If you are truthful is similar to a man saying to a man: Tell me this if you know.

He knows that he does not know, he wants to say that he is ignorant.

There is no doubt that the meaning of his statement: If you are truthful is: If you are truthful, either in your words or in your actions. Because truthfulness in the speech of the Arabs is only truthfulness in reporting, not in knowledge. This is because it is not reasonable in any language to say: A man is truthful in the sense of knowledge. Since this is the case, then it is necessary that God, the Most High, said to the angels, according to the interpretation of the statement of the one whose statement we have narrated in this verse: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful, and He knows that they are not truthful, meaning by that that they are liars. This is exactly what he denied, because he claimed that the angels did not leave anything, so how could it be permissible to say to them: If you are truthful, then inform Me of the names of these? This is despite the fact that this statement that we have narrated from its owner is outside the statements of all the earlier and later scholars of interpretation and exegesis.

It has been narrated from some of the commentators that he interpreted his statement: If you are truthful to mean: if you are truthful.

If in had the meaning of idh in this position, it would have had to be read with a fatha on its alif, because if idh is preceded by a future verb, it becomes the cause and reason for the verb. This is like someone saying: I stand when I stand. Its meaning is I stand because you stood. The imperative is in the future, so the meaning of the statement, if in had the meaning of idh, would be: Inform me of the names of these people because you are truthful. So if in is put in its place, it would be said: Inform me of the names of these people if you are truthful, with a fatha on the alif. The consensus of all the readers of the people of Islam on the kasra on the alif of in is clear evidence of the error of interpretation of those who interpret in to mean idh in this position.

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And He taught Adam the names - all of them - then He showed them to the angels and said, 'Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful.'

It has seven issues:

First: The Almighty's statement: And He taught Adam the names - all of them. The meaning of knowledge is to know. And teaching him here is inspiration, which he learned by necessity. It is possible that it was through an angel, namely Gabriel, peace be upon him, as will come. And it was read: And He taught an unnamed agent. The first is more apparent, as will come. The Sufi scholars said: He learned them by the Truth teaching him and preserved them by Him preserving them for him, and he forgot what He entrusted him with, because He entrusted him with it, so He said: And We had already made a covenant with Adam before, but he forgot, and We found on his part no firm will. Ibn Ata' said: If the knowledge of those names had not been revealed to Adam, he would have been more helpless than the angels in informing about them. And this is clear.

Adam, peace be upon him, is called the father of mankind. It was also said: Abu Muhammad, he was called Muhammad, the Seal of the Prophets, may God's prayers be upon them, as Al-Suhayli said. It was also said: His nickname in heaven is Abu Muhammad, and on earth is Abu Al-Bashar. Its origin is with two hamzas, because it is Af'al, except that they softened the second one, so if you need to move it, you make it a waw and say: Awadam in the plural, because it does not have a known origin in the ya', so you make the most prevalent one for it a waw, and from Al-Akhfash.

There is a difference of opinion about its derivation. It was said that it is derived from the earth's surface and its face, so it was named after what it was created from, as Ibn Abbas said. It was also said that it is derived from the dark brown color. They differed about the dark brown color. Ad-Dahhak claimed that it is the dark brown color, and An-Nadr claimed that it is the white color, and that Adam, peace be upon him, was white, taken from their saying: a she-camel is dark, if it is white. Based on this derivation, its plural is Adam and Awadam, like Hamra and Ahamar, and it is not declined in any way. Based on its being derived from the dark brown color, the plural is Adamoon, and those who say this statement must decline it.

I said: The correct view is that it is derived from the earth's surface. Saeed bin Jubair said: He was called Adam because he was created from the earth's surface, and he was called insan because he forgot. Ibn Saad mentioned this in Al-Tabaqat. Al-Suddi narrated on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani on the authority of Ibn Masoud in the story of the creation of Adam, peace be upon him, he said: So God sent Gabriel, peace be upon him, to the earth to bring him some clay from it, and the earth said: I seek refuge in God from you that you diminish me or disfigure me, so he returned without taking anything and said: O Lord, it sought refuge in you so grant it refuge. So He sent Michael and it sought refuge from him so He granted it refuge, so he returned and said as Gabriel said, so He sent the Angel of Death and it sought refuge from him and he said: As for me, I seek refuge in God from returning and not carrying out His command. So He took from the face of the earth and mixed it, and did not take from one place, and He took from red, white and black soil, and that is why the children of Adam came out different - and that is why Adam was named because he took from the surface of the earth - and He ascended with him, and God the Most High said to him: Did you not have mercy on the earth when it supplicated to you? He said: I saw that your command is more obligatory than its saying. So he said: You are fit to take the souls of his children, so he wet the soil until it became sticky clay, sticky is that which sticks together, then he left it until it stinks, and that is where He says: From black mud molded into shape. He said: Stinking. Then He said to the angels: Indeed, I am going to create a human being from clay. "So when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] soul, then fall down to him in prostration." So God created him with His hand so that Satan would not be arrogant towards him. He said: Are you arrogant towards what I created with My hand and I did not become arrogant towards him! So He created him as a human being, and his body was made of clay for forty years, the length of a Friday. The angels passed by him and were terrified by him when they saw him. The one who was most terrified by him was Satan. He would pass by him and his body would strike him like a potter's drum, and that is why when He says: From clay like pottery, and he says: For what reason have I been created? And it entered through his mouth and exited through his anus. Satan said to the angels: Do not be afraid of this one, for he is hollow, and if I were to give him power over him, I would destroy him. It is said that when he passed by him with the angels, he would say: Have you seen this one whom you have not seen among the creatures resemble? If he is superior to you and you are commanded to obey him, what will you do? They said: We obey the command of our Lord. So Iblis whispered to himself: If he is superior to me, I will not obey him, and if I am superior to him, I will destroy him. When the time came for him to breathe the soul into him, he said to the angels: When I breathe into him from My spirit, then prostrate to him. When he breathed the soul into him and the soul entered his head, he sneezed. The angels said to him: Say: Praise be to God. He said: Praise be to God. Then God said to him: May your Lord have mercy on you. When the soul entered his eyes, he looked at the fruits of Paradise. When it entered his stomach, he desired food, so he jumped up before the soul reached his feet, hurrying to the fruits of Paradise. That is when He says: Man was created of haste. "Then all the angels prostrated together," except Iblis, who refused to be with those who prostrated. And he mentioned the story. At-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abu Musa al-Ash'ari, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say:

"God the Almighty created Adam from a handful which He took from all the earth. Then the children of Adam came according to the earth. Among them came the red, the white, the black, and in between, the plain and the rough, the bad and the good." Abu Isa said: This is a good and authentic hadith. Adeem: the plural of Adam. The poet said:

People are different in nature and characteristics, but they all have one common face.

Adam is derived from adeem and adam not edema, and God knows best. It is possible that it is from both of them. This chapter will be further explained in the creation of Adam in livestock and other things, God willing.

Adam is not declined. Abu Jaafar al-Nahhas said: Adam is not declined in the definite form according to the consensus of grammarians, because it is on the pattern of fa'al, which is definite. Nothing is prevented from being declined according to the Basrans except for two reasons. If you make it indefinite and it is not an adjective, al-Khalil and Sibawayh do not decline it, and al-Akhfash Saeed declines it because it is an adjective on the pattern of fa'l. If it is not an adjective, he declines it. Abu Ishaq al-Zajaj said: The statement is the statement of Sibawayh, and there is no difference between an adjective and something else because it is that very same thing.

The second: The Almighty's saying: The names, all of them. The names here mean phrases, for the name may be used to mean the named, like when you say: Zaid is standing, and the lion is piercing. It may also mean the name itself, like when you say: A lion, three letters. In the first case, it is said: The name is the named, meaning that the named is meant by it. In the second case, the named is not meant by it. A name may run in the language like the phrase itself, which is its most common usage, and from this is the Almighty's saying: And He taught Adam the names, all of them, according to the most famous interpretations, and from this is the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

God has ninety-nine names. They are similar to the essence, and it is said: essence, soul, eye, and name, which have the same meaning. This is how most scholars interpret the words of God the Almighty: Glorify the name of your Lord, the Most High, "Blessed be the name of your Lord," They are only names you have named.

Third: The people of interpretation differed about the meaning of the names that He taught to Adam, peace be upon him. Ibn Abbas, Ikrimah, Qatada, Mujahid, and Ibn Jubayr said: He taught him the names of all things, both great and small. Asim bin Kulayb narrated on the authority of Sa'd, the freed slave of al-Hasan bin Ali, who said: I was sitting with Ibn Abbas and they mentioned the name of the vessel and the name of the whip. Ibn Abbas said: And He taught Adam all the names.

I said: This meaning has been narrated with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet, as follows, and it is what is required by the word all of it, as it is a noun used to describe comprehensiveness and generality. In Bukhari, from the hadith of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said:

"The believers will gather on the Day of Resurrection and say, 'If only we could intercede with our Lord.' They will go to Adam and say, 'You are the father of mankind. God created you with His own hand, and His angels prostrated to you, and He taught you the names of all things.'" The hadith. Ibn Khuwaiz Mandat said: This verse is evidence that language was acquired through divine revelation, and that God taught it to Adam, peace be upon him, in general and in detail. Ibn Abbas also said: He taught him the names of all things, even the bowl and the milking pot.

Shaiban narrated on the authority of Qatada who said: He taught Adam the names of His creation that He did not teach the angels, and He named each thing by its name and attributed the benefit of each thing to its kind. An-Nahhas said: This is the best that has been narrated on this subject. The meaning is that He taught him the names of the kinds and made him aware of their benefits. This is such and such, and it is suitable for such and such. At-Tabari said: He taught him the names of the angels and his offspring, and he chose this and preferred it with his saying: Then He showed them to the angels. Ibn Zayd said: He taught him the names of all his offspring. Ar-Rabi' ibn Khathim said: The names of the angels in particular. Al-Qutbi said: The names of what He created on earth. It was also said: The names of the kinds and species.

I said: The first statement is more correct, for what we mentioned earlier and for what we will explain, God willing.

Fourth: The commentators also differed as to whether the names of people were presented to the angels or the names without the people. Ibn Masoud and others said: The people were presented, based on the Almighty's statement: He presented them, and His statement: Inform me of the names of these. The Arabs say: I presented the thing, so it was presented, meaning I showed it and it was shown. And from this: I presented the thing for sale. And in the hadith:

He presented them like ants. Ibn Abbas and others said: He presented the names. In the letter of Ibn Masoud: He presented them, so he repeated it for the names and not the people, because the ha and the nun are more specific to the feminine. In the letter of Abi: He presented them. Mujahid: The owners of the names. So whoever said about the names: They are the names, then he followed the reading of Abi, He presented them. And you say in the reading of whoever read their presentation: The word heaven indicates people, so it is permissible to say with names: He presented them. And he said about these what is meant by the reference: to the people of the names, but even if they were absent, what is from them was present because of it, and that is their names. Ibn Atiyyah said: What appears is that God, the Most High, taught Adam the heavens and presented them to him with those kinds with their people, then He presented those to the angels and asked them about their names that he had learned, then Adam said to them: This one's name is such and such, and this one's name is such and such. Al-Mawardi said: The most correct thing was to direct the presentation to those who were named. Then at the time of their presentation there are two opinions: One of them is that He presented them after He created them. Second: He depicted them in the hearts of the angels and then presented them.

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Fifth: There is a difference of opinion about the first person to speak the Arabic language. It was narrated on the authority of Ka'b al-Ahbar that the one who established the Arabic script, the Syriac script, and all the books and spoke all the languages was Adam, peace be upon him. Others than Ka'b al-Ahbar said the same.

If it is said: It has been narrated on the authority of Ka'b al-Ahbar from a good source, who said: The first to speak Arabic was Gabriel, peace be upon him, and he is the one who cast it on the tongue of Noah, peace be upon him, and Noah cast it on the tongue of his son Sam. And it was narrated by Thawr ibn Yazid on the authority of Khalid ibn Ma'dan on the authority of Ka'b. And it was narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

The first to speak clear Arabic was Ishmael, when he was ten years old. It has also been narrated that the first to speak Arabic was Ya'rub bin Qahtan, and other reports have been narrated. We say: The correct view is that the first human to speak all languages was Adam, peace be upon him, and the Qur'an bears witness to that. God Almighty said: And He taught Adam the names - all of them. All languages are names, so they are included under it, and this is how the Sunnah came. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

And He taught Adam the names - all of them, even the bowl and the bowlful. What they mentioned may mean that the first one to speak Arabic from the descendants of Abraham, peace be upon him, was Ishmael, peace be upon him. Likewise, if what is other than that is correct, then it is understood that the one mentioned was the first one from his tribe to speak Arabic, based on what we mentioned, and God knows best. Likewise, Gabriel was the first of the angels to speak it and he cast it on the tongue of Noah after God taught it to Adam or Gabriel, based on what was mentioned above, and God knows best.

The Almighty's saying: These is a word built on the kasra. The language of Tamim, some of Qais and Asad is short. Al-A'sha said:

These, then these, each was given a pair of sandals, following an example.

Some Arabs say: these, omitting the alif and the hamza.

Sixth: The Almighty's statement: If you are truthful is a condition, and the answer is omitted, meaning: If you are truthful that the children of Adam are corrupting the earth, then inform me, said Al-Mubarrad. The meaning of truthful is knowledgeable, and therefore the angels were not permitted to exert themselves and said: Glory be to You! Al-Naqqash narrated it, he said: If He had not stipulated upon them anything but truthfulness in informing, then it would have been permissible for them to exert themselves, just as it was permissible for the one whom God caused to die for a hundred years when He said to him: How long did you remain? He did not stipulate that he be right, so he said and he was not right and he was not harsh, and this is clear and there is no ambiguity in it. Al-Tabari and Abu Ubaid narrated that some of the commentators said that the meaning of if you are is: when I was, and they said: This is a mistake. And inform me means inform me. And the report is the report, and from it the prophet with the hamza, and its explanation will come, God willing.

Seventh: Some scholars said: From this command to inform comes the imposition of an unbearable burden, because He knew that they did not know. The investigators among the people of interpretation said: This is not in the form of a burden, but rather in the form of confirmation and suspension. The discussion of the imposition of an unbearable burden - whether it was imposed or not - will come at the end of the surah, God willing.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is a position in which God Almighty mentioned Adam's honor over the angels by what He distinguished him from knowing the names of everything without them, and this was after their prostration to him. Rather, this chapter was presented before that because of the connection between the position and their lack of knowledge of the wisdom of creating the caliph when they asked about that, so God Almighty informed them that He knows what they do not know. For this reason, God mentioned this position after this to show them Adam's honor by what He preferred over them in knowledge, so God Almighty said: And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the names of his children, human by human, and the animals, so it was said: This is the donkey, this is the camel, this is the horse. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: They are the names that people know each other by: human, animal, sky, earth, plain, sea, horse, donkey, and the like from the nations and others. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated from the hadith of Asim bin Kulayb on the authority of Saeed bin Ma'bad on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the name of the page. And the destiny, he said yes even the faswa and the fasiyya, and Mujahid said And He taught Adam the names - all of them he said He taught him the name of every beast and every bird and every thing, likewise it was narrated from Saeed bin Jubair and Qatadah and others from the Salaf that he taught him the names of everything, and Al-Rabi' said in a narration about the names of the angels. And Hamid Al-Shami said the names of the stars. And Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid said He taught him the names of all his offspring, and Ibn Jarir chose that He taught him the names of the angels and the names of the offspring because he said Then He presented them and this is an expression of what is rational and what he preferred is not necessary, because it does not negate that others are included with them, and everyone is expressed in the form of those who are rational for the sake of emphasis as God Almighty said "And God created every animal from water. And among them is he who crawls on his bellies and among them is he who walks on two legs and among them is he who walks on four. God creates what He wills. Indeed, God is over all things competent." And Abdullah bin Masoud recited then he presented them, and Ubay bin Ka'b recited then he presented them, meaning the named things. The correct view is that He taught him the names of all things, their essences, attributes and actions, as Ibn Abbas said, even faswa and fasiya, meaning the names of the essences and actions, both large and small. For this reason, Al-Bukhari said in his interpretation of this verse in the Book of Interpretation of his Sahih: Muslim bin Ibrahim told us, Hisham told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Khalifa told me: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "The believers will gather on the Day of Resurrection and say, 'If only we could intercede with our Lord.' So they will go to Adam and say, 'You are the father of mankind, God created you with His hand, and His angels prostrated to you, and He taught you the names of everything, so intercede for us with your Lord so that He may relieve us from this place of ours.' He will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his sin and he will feel shy. 'Go to Noah, for he was the first Messenger whom God sent to the people of the earth.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his asking his Lord for something of which he had no knowledge, and he will feel shy. So he will say, 'Go to the Friend of the Most Merciful.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there.'" There, he says: Go to Moses, a servant to whom God spoke and gave the Torah. He says: I am not there. He mentions killing a soul without a soul, so he feels shy before his Lord. He says: Go to Jesus, the servant of God and His Messenger, the Word of God and His Spirit. So they come to him, and he says: I am not there. Go to Muhammad, a servant whose past and future sins have been forgiven. So they come to me, and I go until I seek permission to see my Lord, and He gives me permission. Then when I see my Lord, I fall down in prostration, and He leaves me as God wills. Then it is said: Raise your head and ask, and it will be given to you. Say, and He hears. Intercede, and your intercession will be accepted. So I raise my head and praise Him with praise that He teaches me. Then I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return to Him. Then when I see my Lord like him, I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return a third time, and I return a fourth time, and I say: No one remains in the Fire except he who was detained by the Qur'an and for whom eternity is obligatory. This is how Al-Bukhari narrated this hadith here. Muslim and Al-Nasa'i narrated it from the hadith of Hisham, who is Ibn Abi Abdullah Al-Dastawai, from Qatadah, and it was transmitted by him. Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah from the hadith of Saeed, who is Ibn Abi Arubah, on the authority of Qatada. The reason for including it here is that what is meant by it is his saying, may God's prayers and peace be upon him: They will come to Adam and say: You are the father of mankind. God created you with His hand, made His angels prostrate to you, and taught you the names of everything. This indicates that He taught him the names of all the creatures, and for this reason He said, Then He showed them to the angels, meaning the things named, as Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, he said, Then He showed those names to the angels, and said, 'Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful.' Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the Companions, And He taught Adam the names, all of them, then He showed creation to the angels. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid, then He showed the owners of the names to the angels. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Al-Hajjaj told me on the authority of Jarir ibn Hazim and Mubarak ibn Fadala on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: He taught him the name of everything, and he began to name everything by its name, and nation by nation were shown to him. And with this chain of transmission on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah in the words of God Almighty, If you should be truthful, "I have not created a creation except that you are more knowledgeable than it, so inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful." Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, If you should be truthful, if You knew that I had not appointed a successor on earth. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, if you are truthful, the children of Adam will cause corruption on earth and shed blood. Ibn Jarir said, "The best of the sayings on that is the interpretation of Ibn Abbas and those who said what he said, and the meaning of that is that he said, 'Tell me the names of those whom I have presented to you, O angels who say, "Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? From other than us or from us?" So we glorify You with praise and sanctify You.'" If you are truthful in what you say, that if I appoint my successor on earth from someone other than you, he and his descendants will disobey me and cause corruption and shed blood, and if I appoint you on it, you will obey me and follow my command to glorify and sanctify me, then if you do not know the names of those whom I have presented to you and you are watching them, then you are more likely to be ignorant of the things that do not exist, which did not exist. "They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.'" This is sanctification and exoneration from the angels of God Almighty, that no one can encompass anything of His knowledge except what He wills, and that they know nothing except what God Almighty has taught them. For this reason they said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise." That is, the Knower of everything, the Wise in Your creation and command, in Your teaching whomever You will and in Your preventing whomever You will. You have wisdom in that and perfect justice. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Saeed Al-Ashji told us, Hafs bin Ghiyath told us, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Glory be to God, he said God is free from evil, then Umar said to Ali and his companions who were with him, there is no god but God, we know it, but what is glory be to God? Ali said to me: it is a word that God loves for Himself and is pleased with and loves to be said, he said: My father told us, Ibn Nufayl told us, Al-Nadr bin Arabi told us: a man asked Maymun bin Mihran about glory be to God, he said: it is a name by which God is glorified and protected from evil.

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

God the Almighty said: "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' And when he had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal?'" Zayd ibn Aslam said, You are Gabriel, you are Michael, you are Israfil, until he listed all the names until he reached the raven. Mujahid said about God's statement, He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' He said the name of the dove, the raven, and the name of everything. It was narrated from Saeed ibn Jubayr, Al-Hasan, and Qatadah something similar to that. So when Adam, peace be upon him, appeared to the angels, peace be upon them, in his narration of what God the Almighty had taught him of the names of things, God the Almighty said to the angels, Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? That is, did I not tell you that I know the unseen, the apparent and the hidden, as God the Almighty said, And if you speak aloud, then indeed He knows the secret and what is more hidden. And as He said, informing about the hoopoe that he said to Solomon, That they should not prostrate to God, Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and the earth and knows what is hidden. "You conceal and what you declare. God - there is no god but He, Lord of the Mighty Throne." It was said about the words of God the Most High: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, other than what we mentioned. Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: He says: I know the secret as I know the public, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance and conceit. As-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, he said: Their statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? This is what they revealed. And what you concealed, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance. Saeed bin Jubayr, Mujahid, As-Suddi and Ad-Dahhak Ath-Thawri said the same. Ibn Jarir chose that, and Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Al-Hasan and Qatadah said that it is their saying: Our Lord did not create a creation except that We were more knowledgeable than it and more honorable to Him than it. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal. So what they revealed was their saying: Will You place therein someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? And what they concealed among themselves was their saying: Our Lord will not create a creation except that We are more knowledgeable than it and more honorable. So they knew that God had favored Adam over them in knowledge and honor. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus told us, Ibn Wahb told us on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam in the story of the angels and Adam, so God said to the angels: Just as you did not know these names, you have no knowledge. I only wanted to make them so that they would corrupt it. This is with Me, I know it, and therefore I concealed from you that I will place therein those who disobey Me and those who obey Me. He said: And it had already been decreed by God: I will fill Hell with jinn and people all together. He said: And the angels did not know that and did not realize it. So he said: So when they saw what God gave Adam knowledge, and they acknowledged his merit. Ibn Jarir said: The most correct of the sayings in this regard is the saying of Ibn Abbas, which is that the meaning of the words of God the Almighty: And I know what you reveal is: "And I know, along with My knowledge, the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and what you reveal with your tongues and what you conceal within yourselves. Nothing is hidden from Me, whether your secrets or your public affairs. What they revealed with their tongues was their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? And what they concealed was what Iblis had concealed of dissent against God in His commands and arrogance in obeying Him." He said: This is correct, as the Arabs say: The army was killed and defeated, but only one or some were killed and one or some were defeated, so the report is given about the defeated and killed from it, as the report is given about all of them, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, those who call to you from behind the chambers He mentioned that the one who called was only one of Banu Tamim. He said: And likewise His saying: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal.

Fath al-Qadir

31- Adam is originally A'adam with two hamzas, except that they softened the second one and if it is moved it is changed to a waw, as they said in the plural Awadam, as Al-Akhfash said. There is disagreement about its derivation, some say: from the surface of the earth - and some say: from the skin which is the brown color. He said in Al-Kashaf: Adam is nothing but a foreign name, and it is most likely to be on the pattern of Fa'il like Azar and Azar and Aaber and Shalakh and Faligh and the like, and names are expressions and what is meant are the names of the named, most scholars said: This is the true meaning of the name. The emphasis by saying: all of them indicates that He taught him all the names and nothing of them was excluded from this, whatever it was. Ibn Jarir said: They are the names of the angels and the names of the descendants of Adam, then he preferred this, but it is not preferred. Ibn Jarir said: They are the names of the angels and the names of the descendants of Adam, then he preferred this, but it is not preferred. Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: The names of the offspring. Al-Rabi bin Khaitham said: The names of the angels. The scholars differed as to whether the names or the things were presented to the angels. The first is apparent because the presentation of the names themselves is not clear. Presenting something means showing it, and from this is presenting something for sale. The pronoun of those presented was mentioned to give precedence to rational beings over others. Ibn Masoud read: He presented them, and Abi read: He presented them. The pronoun of their presentation refers to the things named without mentioning them, because what indicates them, which is their names, had already been mentioned. Ibn Atiyyah said: What appears is that God taught Adam the names and presented to him along with that the species as individuals, then He presented those to the angels and asked them about the names of those named that Adam had learned, so Adam said to them: This one's name is such and such and this one's name is such and such. Al-Mawardi said: The most correct view was that the presentation was directed to those named. Then at the time of their presentation there are two opinions: One of them is that He presented them after He created them. The second is that He formed them for the hearts of the angels and then presented them. As for His command to the angels, Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful, this is from Him, the Most High, to rebuke them, even though He knows that they are incapable of doing so. What is meant by if you should be truthful is that the children of Adam are corrupting the earth, so inform Me. This is what Al-Mubarrad said. Abu Ubaid and Ibn Jarir said: Some of the commentators said: The meaning of if you should be truthful is if you were. They said: This is a mistake. The meaning of inform Me is tell me.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

31. His saying: And He taught Adam all the names. Adam was named so because He created the surface of the earth, and it was said: because he was Adam in color and his nickname was Abu Muhammad and Abu al-Bashar. So when God the Most High created him, He taught him the names of things. This is because the angels said: When God the Most High said: (Indeed, I will place a vicegerent on the earth): Let our Lord create whatever He wills, for He will not create a creation more honorable to Him than us, and if He did, then we are more knowledgeable than him because we were created before him and saw what he did not see. So God the Most High showed His superiority over them with knowledge. And in it is evidence that the prophets are better than the angels, even if they were messengers, as the people of the Sunnah and the Community went to. Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, and Qatadah said: He taught him the name of everything, even the bowl and the bowl. And it was said: the name of what was and what will be until the Day of Resurrection. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: The names of the angels, and it was said: The names of his offspring, and it was said: The creation of everything. The people of interpretation said: God Almighty taught Adam all languages, then each of his children spoke a language, so they dispersed in the lands, and each group of them had a special language. Then he showed them to the angels. He said he showed them and did not say he showed them because when the named things are gathered, whether they have a mind or not, they are referred to by the word who has a mind, just as males and females are referred to by the word masculine. Muqatil said: God created everything, animals and inanimate objects, then he showed those individuals to the angels, so the reference goes back to the individuals, so he said he showed them. "Then he said: Inform Me," tell me the names of these, if you should be truthful, in that I do not create a creation except that you are better and more knowledgeable than it. So the angels said, acknowledging their inability.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

31 And He taught Adam all the names either by creating necessary knowledge of them in him, or by instilling in his mind, and it does not need a previous term for it to be sequenced. Teaching is an action that often results in knowledge, and therefore it is said I taught him but he did not learn. Adam is a foreign name like Azar and Shalakh, and its derivation is from the skin or the nation with the fat-ha meaning the example, or from the earth's surface as narrated from him, peace and blessings be upon him, that the Almighty took a handful from all the earth, its plains and its valleys, and created Adam from it so his sons come as Akhyaf, or from the skin or the skin meaning familiarity, arbitrarily like the derivation of Ildris from the lesson, and Jacob from the heel, and Iblis from the Iblas. The name, in terms of derivation, is that which is a sign of a thing and an indication that raises it to the mind along with words, attributes and actions. Its use is divided into words that are used for a meaning, whether they are compound or singular, informing or connecting them. Technically: in singular indicating a meaning that necessitates the first, because knowledge of words in terms of indication depends on knowledge of meanings. The meaning is that the Most High created it from different parts and diverse powers, prepared to perceive the types of perceptions from the intelligibles and the sensibles, the imaginary and the illusory. And He inspired it with knowledge of the essences of things, their properties and names, the principles of sciences, the laws of industries and the nature of their tools.

And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed them to the angels and said, "Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful."

Then He presented them to the angels. The pronoun in it refers to the names implicitly indicated, since the meaning is the names of the named things, so the complement was deleted because the complement indicated it, and the letter lam was substituted for it, like the Most High's saying: And the head was filled with white hair. Because the presentation is for asking about the names of the presented things, so the presented things themselves are not, especially if what is meant by it are the words, and what is meant by it are the essences of the things, or the meanings of the words, and it is masculine to make it more prevalent what it includes of rational beings, and their presentation was read with the meaning of presenting their names or their names.

He said, 'Inform me of the names of these.' This was a rebuke to them and a warning of their inability to carry out the matter of the caliphate, because acting and managing to establish justice before achieving knowledge, and standing on the levels of preparation and the extent of rights is impossible, and it is not a duty to be considered a duty to do the impossible. Informing is informing in which there is information, and therefore it is like each one of them.

If you are truthful in your claim that you are worthy of the caliphate due to your infallibility, or that their creation and their succession, which is their description, is not befitting of the wise, and even if they did not state it explicitly, it is necessary in their statement. And belief, just as it is pertinent to speech in consideration of its explicit meaning, may be sought after by assuming what is necessary for its meaning from the report, and in this regard it affects the constructions.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:32

They said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

(They said: Glory be to You) in exaltation of You from objecting to You We have no knowledge except what You have taught us of it Indeed, You are an emphasis on the Kaf the Knowing, the Wise from whose knowledge and wisdom nothing is outside.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: This is report from God, may He be glorified, about His angels, about returning to Him, and submitting to Him the knowledge of what they did not know, and their exoneration from knowing or teaching anyone anything except what He, may He be glorified, knew.

In these three verses there is a lesson for those who consider, a reminder for those who remember, and a clarification for those who have a heart or who listen attentively, about what God Almighty has deposited in the verses of this Qur'an of subtle wisdom that tongues are incapable of describing.

That is: God, the Most High, argued in it for His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, against those Jews of the Children of Israel who were among him, by informing him of the knowledge of the unseen, which God, the Most High, did not inform of among His creation except a special one, and his knowledge was not comprehended except through revelation and report, so that the truth of his prophethood would be established for them, and they would know that what he brought to them was from Him. And He indicated in it that every informant of report about what had been or about what will be of what had not been, and he did not bring report about it, and no proof was given to him for its truth, then he says something that he deserves punishment from his Lord. Do you not see that God, the Most High, responded to His angels when they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. And He informed them that saying that was not permissible for them, because He informed them of the deficiency of their knowledge when He presented to them what was presented to them from the people of names, so He said: Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful. They had no refuge but to admit their inability and to seek His forgiveness for not knowing anything except what He taught them, saying: Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. This was the clearest indication and most evident proof of the falsehood of the statement of all those who claimed any knowledge of the unseen, such as fortune-tellers, soothsayers, fortune-tellers, and astrologers. He reminded those of the People of the Book whose affairs we have described of His past blessings upon their fathers and His favors upon their forefathers, when they turned to Him and turned to His obedience, appealing thereby to their guidance and seeking their repentance through Him for salvation. He warned them that if they persisted and persisted in transgression and misguidance, punishment would befall them, similar to what He brought upon His enemy, Satan, when he persisted in error and loss.

He said: As for the interpretation of His statement: Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us, it is as Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Uthman ibn Sa'id narrated to us, he said: Bishr ibn `Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn `Abbas: "They said: Glory be to You," declaring God free from having anyone who knows the unseen other than Him. We repent to You. We have no knowledge except what You have taught us, disavowing them of knowledge of the unseen, except what You have taught us, as You taught Adam.

Subhan is an indeclinable verbal noun. Its meaning is: We glorify You, as if they said: We glorify You with glorification, and we sanctify You with sanctity, and we declare You innocent of knowing anything other than what You have taught us.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Indeed, You are the Knowing, the Wise.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of that is: That You are our Lord, the All-Knowing without being taught of all that has been and will be, and the All-Knowing of the unseen without all of Your creation. That is because they denied of themselves by saying: We have no knowledge except what You have taught us, that they have knowledge except what their Lord taught them, and they affirmed what they denied of themselves for their Lord by saying: Indeed, You are the All-Knowing, meaning by that the All-Knowing without being taught, since no one other than You knows anything except through the teaching of another to it. And the Wise is the One with wisdom. As Al-Muthanna narrated to me, he said: Abdullah bin Salih narrated to us, he said: Mu'awiyah narrated to me, on the authority of Ali, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The All-Knowing is the One who has perfected His knowledge, and the Wise is the One who has perfected His judgment.

It has been said that the meaning of wise is judge, just as knowledgeable means scholar, and expert means expert.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty said: "They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.'"

The Almighty's saying: They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us.' There are three issues in this:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:32

They said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise."

The first: The Almighty's saying: Glory be to You, meaning that You are far removed from anyone knowing the unseen except You. This is their response to His saying: Inform Me. They responded that they only know what He has informed them of, and they did not engage in what they have no knowledge of, as the ignorant among us do. And ma in ma 'alamtana means that, meaning except that which You have taught us. It is also permissible for it to be a source meaning except Your teaching us.

Second: It is obligatory for the one who is asked about knowledge to say, if he does not know: God knows best, and I do not know, following the example of the angels, prophets, and virtuous scholars. However, the Truthful One has informed us that with the death of scholars, knowledge is taken away, and ignorant people remain who are asked for fatwas and they issue fatwas based on their opinions, so they go astray and are led astray. As for what was reported from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, his companions, and the followers after them regarding the meaning of the verse, Al-Basti narrated in his Sahih Musnad on the authority of Ibn Umar, "A man asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: Which places are worst? He said: I do not know until I ask Gabriel. So he asked Gabriel, and Gabriel said: I do not know until I ask Michael. Then he came and said: The best places are the mosques, and the worst are the markets." And the Truthful One said to the grandmother: Go back so that I may ask the people. And Ali used to say: And it is the coolest on the liver, three times. They said: What is that, O Commander of the Faithful? He said: That a man is asked about something he does not know and he says: God knows best. And Ibn Umar asked a man about a matter, and he said: I have no knowledge of it, so when the man turned away... Ibn Omar said: Yes, what Ibn Omar said, he was asked about something he did not know, so he said I have no knowledge of it! Al-Darimi mentioned it in his Musnad. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Ibn Aqil Yahya bin Al-Mutawakkil, the companion of Bahiya, he said: I was sitting with Al-Qasim bin Ubaidullah and Yahya bin Saeed, and Yahya said to Al-Qasim: O Abu Muhammad, it is very ugly for someone like you to be asked about something related to this religion and you do not find knowledge or relief from it, or knowledge or a way out? Al-Qasim said to him: And why is that? He said: Because you are the son of the two Imams of guidance: the son of Abu Bakr and Umar. Al-Qasim said to him: What is more ugly than that for one who has reason from God is that I speak without knowledge or take from someone who is not trustworthy. So he remained silent and did not answer him. Malik bin Anas said: I heard Ibn Hormuz say: The scholar should leave his companions after him with I do not know so that it becomes a foundation in their hands, and if one of them is asked about something he does not know, he says: I do not know. Al-Haitham bin Jameel said: I witnessed Malik bin Anas on forty-eight issues, and he said on thirty-two of them: I do not know.

I said: And there are many similar examples from the Companions, the Followers, and the jurists of the Muslims. Rather, what leads to abandoning that is leadership and lack of fairness in knowledge. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: Among the blessings of knowledge and its etiquette is fairness in it, and whoever is not fair will not understand and will not be understood. Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la narrated that he heard Ibn Wahb say: I heard Malik ibn Anas say: There is nothing in our time less than fairness.

I said: This was during the time of Malik, so how about our time today when corruption has become widespread and the rabble has multiplied! Knowledge is sought for leadership, not for knowledge, but rather to appear in this world and to prevail over one's peers through argumentation and debate that hardens the heart and generates resentment, which leads to a lack of piety and abandonment of the fear of God Almighty. Where is this in comparison to what was narrated on the authority of Umar may God be pleased with him when he said: Do not increase the dowries of women to more than forty ounces, even if she is the daughter of a male relative - meaning Yazid ibn al-Husayn al-Harithi - and whoever increases it will have his excess thrown into the treasury. Then a tall woman with a snub nose stood up from the women's quarters and said: What is that for you? He said: Why? She said: Because God Almighty says: And if you have given one of them a great amount, do not take from it anything al-Baqarah 2:177. Umar said: A woman is right and a man is wrong! And Wakee' narrated on the authority of Abu Ma'shar on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi who said: A man asked Ali may God be pleased with him about a matter and he said something about it. The man said: It is not like that, O Commander of the Faithful, but rather such and such. Ali said: You are right and wrong, and above every knowledgeable person is the All-Knowing. And Abu Muhammad mentioned Qasim ibn Asbagh who said: When I traveled to the East, I stopped in Kairouan and studied the hadith of Musaddad with Bakr ibn Hammad. Then I traveled to Baghdad and met the people. When I returned, I returned to him to complete the hadith of Musaddad. One day I read to him the hadith of the Prophet (may God bless him and grant him peace):

A group of people from Mudar from Mujtaba al-Namar came to him. He said: It is Mujtaba al-Thamar. I said: It is Mujtaba al-Namar. This is how I read it to everyone I read it to in Andalusia and Iraq. He said to me: By entering Iraq, you are contradicting us and boasting to us! Or something like that. Then he said to me: Let's go to that Sheikh - a Sheikh who was in the mosque - for he has knowledge of the same. So we went to him and asked him about it. He said: It is Mujtaba al-Namar, as I said. They were people who used to wear torn clothes, with their pockets in front. Namar is the plural of namrah. Bakr ibn Hammad said, grabbing his nose: Despite my nose for the truth, despite my nose for the truth. And he left. Yazid ibn al-Walid ibn Abd al-Malik said well:

If I speak in a council, my talk reaches what I know

I did not return my knowledge to anyone else, and when it reached its end, I was silent.

The second: The Almighty's saying: Glory be to You. Glory is an accusative in the source according to Al-Khalil and Sibawayh, conveying the meaning of We glorify You with glorification. Al-Kisa'i said: It is an accusative as a call with an addition. Al-'Aleem is a fa'il for exaggeration and multiplication of information in the creation of God Almighty. Al-Hakeem means the ruler, and there is further exaggeration between them. It was said that its meaning is the decisive, and Al-Hakeem comes in this way from the attributes of the verb, it was changed from ma'fal to fa'il, just as it was changed from musma' to sami' and mol'im to aleem, as Ibn Al-Anbari said. Some people said: Al-Hakeem is the one who prevents corruption, and from it the wisdom of the bridle is named, because it prevents the horse from running and going without intent. Jarir said:

My son Hanifa, judge your fools, for I fear that I will anger you.

That is, prevent them from corruption. Zuhair said:

The leader of the horses, whose backs are afflicted, has perfected the wisdom of the old and the old

Al-Qad: the skin. Al-Abq: the hemp. The Arabs say: He has forbidden the orphan from such and such, meaning he has prevented him. The decisive surah is the one that is forbidden from being changed or altered, and that anything that is outside of it be added to it, and that something that is not from it be added to it. The wisdom behind this is that it prevents its owner from ignorance. It is said: He has made something perfect if he has mastered it and prevented it from going as he wants. So it is decisive and wise in abundance.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is a position in which God Almighty mentioned Adam's honor over the angels by what He distinguished him from knowing the names of everything without them, and this was after their prostration to him. Rather, this chapter was presented before that because of the connection between the position and their lack of knowledge of the wisdom of creating the caliph when they asked about that, so God Almighty informed them that He knows what they do not know. For this reason, God mentioned this position after this to show them Adam's honor by what He preferred over them in knowledge, so God Almighty said: And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the names of his children, human by human, and the animals, so it was said: This is the donkey, this is the camel, this is the horse. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: They are the names that people know each other by: human, animal, sky, earth, plain, sea, horse, donkey, and the like from the nations and others. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated from the hadith of Asim bin Kulayb on the authority of Saeed bin Ma'bad on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the name of the page. And the destiny, he said yes even the faswa and the fasiyya, and Mujahid said And He taught Adam the names - all of them he said He taught him the name of every beast and every bird and every thing, likewise it was narrated from Saeed bin Jubair and Qatadah and others from the Salaf that he taught him the names of everything, and Al-Rabi' said in a narration about the names of the angels. And Hamid Al-Shami said the names of the stars. And Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid said He taught him the names of all his offspring, and Ibn Jarir chose that He taught him the names of the angels and the names of the offspring because he said Then He presented them and this is an expression of what is rational and what he preferred is not necessary, because it does not negate that others are included with them, and everyone is expressed in the form of those who are rational for the sake of emphasis as God Almighty said "And God created every animal from water. And among them is he who crawls on his bellies and among them is he who walks on two legs and among them is he who walks on four. God creates what He wills. Indeed, God is over all things competent." And Abdullah bin Masoud recited then he presented them, and Ubay bin Ka'b recited then he presented them, meaning the named things. The correct view is that He taught him the names of all things, their essences, attributes and actions, as Ibn Abbas said, even faswa and fasiya, meaning the names of the essences and actions, both large and small. For this reason, Al-Bukhari said in his interpretation of this verse in the Book of Interpretation of his Sahih: Muslim bin Ibrahim told us, Hisham told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Khalifa told me: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "The believers will gather on the Day of Resurrection and say, 'If only we could intercede with our Lord.' So they will go to Adam and say, 'You are the father of mankind, God created you with His hand, and His angels prostrated to you, and He taught you the names of everything, so intercede for us with your Lord so that He may relieve us from this place of ours.' He will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his sin and he will feel shy. 'Go to Noah, for he was the first Messenger whom God sent to the people of the earth.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his asking his Lord for something of which he had no knowledge, and he will feel shy. So he will say, 'Go to the Friend of the Most Merciful.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there.'" There, he says: Go to Moses, a servant to whom God spoke and gave the Torah. He says: I am not there. He mentions killing a soul without a soul, so he feels shy before his Lord. He says: Go to Jesus, the servant of God and His Messenger, the Word of God and His Spirit. So they come to him, and he says: I am not there. Go to Muhammad, a servant whose past and future sins have been forgiven. So they come to me, and I go until I seek permission to see my Lord, and He gives me permission. Then when I see my Lord, I fall down in prostration, and He leaves me as God wills. Then it is said: Raise your head and ask,

and it will be given to you. Say, and He hears. Intercede, and your intercession will be accepted. So I raise my head and praise Him with praise that He teaches me. Then I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return to Him. Then when I see my Lord like him, I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return a third time, and I return a fourth time, and I say: No one remains in the Fire except he who was detained by the Qur'an and for whom eternity is obligatory. This is how Al-Bukhari narrated this hadith here. Muslim and Al-Nasa'i narrated it from the hadith of Hisham, who is Ibn Abi Abdullah Al-Dastawai, from Qatadah, and it was transmitted by him. Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah from the hadith of Saeed, who is Ibn Abi Arubah, on the authority of Qatada. The reason for including it here is that what is meant by it is his saying, may God's prayers and peace be upon him: They will come to Adam and say: You are the father of mankind. God created you with His hand, made His angels prostrate to you, and taught you the names of everything. This indicates that He taught him the names of all the creatures, and for this reason He said, Then He showed them to the angels, meaning the things named, as Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, he said, Then He showed those names to the angels, and said, 'Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful.' Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the Companions, And He taught Adam the names, all of them, then He showed creation to the angels. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid, then He showed the owners of the names to the angels. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Al-Hajjaj told me on the authority of Jarir ibn Hazim and Mubarak ibn Fadala on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: He taught him the name of everything, and he began to name everything by its name, and nation by nation were shown to him. And with this chain of transmission on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah in the words of God Almighty, If you should be truthful, "I have not created a creation except that you are more knowledgeable than it, so inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful." Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, If you should be truthful, if You knew that I had not appointed a successor on earth. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, If you are truthful, the children of Adam will cause corruption on earth and shed blood. Ibn Jarir said, "The best of the sayings on that is the interpretation of Ibn Abbas and those who said what he said, and the meaning of that is that he said, 'Tell me the names of those whom I have presented to you, O angels who say, "Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? From other than us or from us?" So we glorify You with praise and sanctify You.'" If you are truthful in what you say, that if I appoint my successor on earth from someone other than you, he and his descendants will disobey me and cause corruption and shed blood, and if I appoint you on it, you will obey me and follow my command to glorify and sanctify me, then if you do not know the names of those whom I have presented to you and you are watching them, then you are more likely to be ignorant of the things that do not exist, which did not exist. "They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.'" This is sanctification and exoneration from the angels of God Almighty, that no one can encompass anything of His knowledge except what He wills, and that they know nothing except what God Almighty has taught them. For this reason they said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise." That is, the Knower of everything, the Wise in Your creation and command, in Your teaching whomever You will and in Your preventing whomever You will. You have wisdom in that and perfect justice. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Saeed Al-Ashj told us, Hafs bin Ghiyath told us, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Glory be to God, he said God is free from evil, then Umar said to Ali and his companions who were with him, there is no god but God, we know it, but what is glory be to God? Ali said to me: it is a word that God loves for Himself and is pleased with and loves to be said, he said: My father told us, Ibn Nufayl told us, Al-Nadr bin Arabi told us: a man asked Maymun bin Mihran about glory be to God, he said: it is a name by which God is glorified and protected from evil.

God the Almighty said: "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' And when he had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal?'" Zayd ibn Aslam said, You are Gabriel, you are Michael, you are Israfil, until he listed all the names until he reached the raven. Mujahid said about God's statement, He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' He said the name of the dove, the raven, and the name of everything. It was narrated from Saeed ibn Jubayr, Al-Hasan, and Qatadah something similar to that. So when Adam, peace be upon him, appeared to the angels, peace be upon them, in his narration of what God the Almighty had taught him of the names of things, God the Almighty said to the angels, Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? That is, did I not tell you that I know the unseen, the apparent and the hidden, as God the Almighty said, And if you speak aloud, then indeed He knows the secret and what is more hidden. And as He said, informing about the hoopoe that he said to Solomon, That they should not prostrate to God, Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and the earth and knows what is hidden. "You conceal and what you declare. God - there is no god but He, Lord of the Mighty Throne." It was said about the words of God the Most High: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, other than what we mentioned. Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: He says: I know the secret as I know the public, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance and conceit. As-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, he said: Their statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? This is what they revealed. And what you concealed, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance. Saeed bin Jubayr, Mujahid, As-Suddi and Ad-Dahhak Ath-Thawri said the same. Ibn Jarir chose that, and Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Al-Hasan and Qatadah said that it is their saying: Our Lord did not create a creation except that We were more knowledgeable than it and more honorable to Him than it. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal. So what they revealed was their saying: Will You place therein someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? And what they concealed among themselves was their saying: Our Lord will not create a creation except that We are more knowledgeable than it and more honorable. So they knew that God had favored Adam over them in knowledge and honor. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus told us, Ibn Wahb told us on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam in the story of the angels and Adam, so God said to the angels: Just as you did not know these names, you have no knowledge. I only wanted to make them so that they would corrupt it. This is with Me, I know it, and therefore I concealed from you that I will place therein those who disobey Me and those who obey Me. He said: And it had already been decreed by God: I will fill Hell with jinn and people all together. He said: And the angels did not know that and did not realize it. So he said: So when they saw what God gave Adam knowledge, and they acknowledged his merit. Ibn Jarir said: The most correct of the sayings in this regard is the saying of Ibn Abbas, which is that the meaning of the words of God the Almighty: And I know what you reveal is: "And I know, along with My knowledge, the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and what you reveal with your tongues and what you conceal within yourselves. Nothing is hidden from Me, whether your secrets or your public affairs. What they revealed with their tongues was their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? And what they concealed was what Iblis had concealed of dissent against God in His commands and arrogance in obeying Him." He said: This is correct, as the Arabs say: The army was killed and defeated, but only one or some were killed and one or some were defeated, so the report is given about the defeated and killed from it, as the report is given about all of them, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, those who call to you from behind the chambers He mentioned that the one who called was only one of Banu Tamim. He said: And likewise His saying: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal.

Fath al-Qadir

When he said that to them, they admitted their inability and deficiency. 32- They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us.' Glory be to You: is an accusative of source according to Al-Khalil and Sibawayh. Al-Kisa'i said: It is an accusative of a vocative with an addition, and this is very weak. Al-'Aleem: is for exaggeration and to indicate the abundance of information. Al-Hakim is an exaggerated form of affirming His wisdom. Then God, the Almighty, commanded Adam to teach them by their names after He presented them to the angels, but they were unable and admitted their deficiency.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

32. They said, 'Glory be to You,' as a sign of Your glorification. We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Meaning, You are too exalted for us to encompass anything of Your knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, You are the All-Knowing of Your creation. The Wise in Your command. Wise has two meanings: One is the ruler, who is the just judge, and the second is the one who establishes the matter so that corruption does not enter it. The origin of wisdom in the language is prevention, so it prevents its owner from falsehood. From this comes the wisdom of the beast, because it prevents it from becoming crooked. So when their inability became apparent...

Tafsir al-Baidawi

32- They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us.' This is an admission of inability and deficiency, and a notification that their question was an inquiry and not an objection, and that what was hidden from them of the grace of man and the wisdom in his creation had become clear to them, and a demonstration of gratitude for His blessings by making them aware and revealing to them what was hidden from them, and observing etiquette by entrusting all knowledge to Him. Glory be to You is a verbal noun like forgiveness and is rarely used except as an object in the accusative case with an implied verb, like God forbids. It was made a noun for glorification in the sense of sanctification, as an anomaly in His statement: Glory be to Him who has bestowed His blessings upon me. And introducing it with it is an apology for inquiry and ignorance of the true state of affairs, and for this reason it was made the key to repentance, so Moses, peace be upon him, said: Glory be to You! I repent to You. And Yunus said: Glory be to You! Indeed, I was among the wrongdoers.

You are the All-Knowing from whom nothing is hidden, the All-Wise the One who rules over His creations, who does nothing except what contains the utmost wisdom, and You is a separation. It was said: an emphasis on the kaf as in your saying: I passed by you, even though it is not permissible to say: I passed by you, because what is permissible in the dependent is not permissible in the independent. Therefore it is permissible to say: O this man, but it is not permissible to say: O man. It was said: a subject whose predicate is what comes after it, and the sentence is the predicate of in.

They said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:33

He said, "O Adam, inform them of their names." And when he had informed them of their names, He said, "Did I not tell you that I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?"

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

He the Most High said O Adam, inform them meaning the angels of their names the things named, so He named each thing by its name and mentioned the wisdom for which He created it So when he informed them of their names, He said the Most High rebuked them Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth what is hidden in them and I know what you reveal what you show of your saying, Will you place in it, etc. and what you conceal what you conceal of your saying, No one will be created more honorable to Him than us, and I do not know.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: God, the Most High, knew that His angels who asked Him to make them successors on earth, and described themselves as obedient to Him and submissive to His command, unlike others who corrupt and shed blood, were ignorant of the locations of His management and the location of His judgment before He informed them of it, in the same way that they were ignorant of the names of those He presented to them, since that was something He did not teach them so that they would know it, and that they and others among the servants do not know of knowledge except what their Lord taught them, and that He grants whatever knowledge He wills to whomever He wills of creation, and withholds it from whomever He wills, just as He taught Adam the names of what He presented to the angels, and withheld their knowledge from them except after He taught them.

As for the interpretation of His statement: He said, 'O Adam, inform them,' he says: He informed the angels, and the ha and mim in His statement inform them refer to the angels, and His statement: by their names means by the names of those whom He presented to the angels, and the ha and mim in their names are a metaphor for mentioning these in His statement: Inform Me of the names of these. "So when he informed them," he says: So when Adam informed the angels of the names of those whom He presented to them, they did not know their names, and they were certain of the error of what they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You, and that they had erred in that and said what they did not know how the decree of their Lord would occur in that if it had occurred, according to what they had uttered, their Lord said to them: Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth? The unseen is that which is hidden from their sight so that they did not witness it? A rebuke from God Almighty to them for what they had said previously and for their error in their question. As:

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' narrated to us, saying: Uthman ibn Saeed narrated to us, saying: Bishr ibn Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' " He said: Tell them their names. "So when he had informed them of their names, He said: Did I not tell you, O angels in particular, 'Indeed, I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth,' and no one else knows it."

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said, in the story of the angels and Adam: So God said to the angels: Just as you do not know these names, you have no knowledge. I only wanted to make them so that they may cause corruption therein. This is with Me, and I know it. So I have hidden from you that I will make therein those who disobey Me and those who obey Me. He said: And it was previously stated by God: I will fill Hell with jinn and people all together (Hud 11:119) (Sajdah: 13). He said: And the angels did not know that and did not realize it. He said: So when they saw what God had given Adam of knowledge, they acknowledged Adam's superiority. The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of that. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas regarding that: Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: 'Uthman ibn Sa'id narrated to us, he said: Bishr ibn 'Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: And I know what you reveal meaning: what you show, and what you conceal meaning: I know the secret as I know the public. Meaning: what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance and deception.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: Their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? This is what they revealed, and what you concealed, meaning what Satan concealed in his soul of arrogance.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Amr bin Thabit told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, regarding his statement: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: What Satan concealed in his soul.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad told us: Sufyan told us regarding his statement: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: What Satan concealed in his soul out of arrogance was not to prostrate to Adam.

He said, "O Adam, inform them of their names." And when he had informed them of their names, He said, "Did I not tell you that I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?"

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Al-Hajjaj Al-Anmati told us: Mahdi bin Maimun told us: I heard Al-Hasan bin Dinar say to Al-Hasan while we were sitting with him in his house: O Abu Saeed, what do you think of the words of God to the angels: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, what did the angels conceal? Al-Hasan said: When God created Adam, the angels saw a wondrous creation, and it was as if something had entered them because of that, so some of them turned to one another and whispered that to each other, and they said: What do you care about this creation! God will not create a creation except that we are more honorable to Him than it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: They kept it secret among themselves and said: God creates whatever He wills to create, so He will not create a creation except that we are more honorable to Him than it.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq told us: Abdullah bin Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal. So what they revealed was when they said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? And what they concealed among themselves was their saying: Our Lord will not create a creation except that we are more knowledgeable and more generous than it. So they knew that God had favored Adam over them in knowledge and generosity.

Abu Ja'far said: The most correct of these sayings in interpreting the verse is what Ibn 'Abbas said, which is that the meaning of his saying: And I know what you reveal, and I know, along with My knowledge of the unseen of the heavens and the earth, what you reveal with your tongues, and what you conceal, and what you conceal in your souls, nothing is hidden from Me, whether your secrets or your public. And what they revealed with their tongues is what God, the Most High, informed us that they said, which is their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? And what they concealed was what Iblis had hidden of dissension with God in His command, and arrogance in obeying Him. Because there is no disagreement among all the people of interpretation that the interpretation of that does not come out of one of the two aspects that I have described, which is what we have said, and the other is what we have mentioned from the saying of al-Hasan and Qatadah, and whoever said that the meaning of that is the concealment of the angels among themselves, God will not create a creation except that we are more honorable to Him than it. So since there is no statement in the interpretation of that except one of the two statements that I have described, and then there is no evidence for the correctness of one of them from the aspect that must be accepted, then the other statement is correct. So what was narrated from Al-Hasan and Fatadah and those who said what they said in the interpretation of that, there is no evidence for its correctness from the Book, nor from a report that must be used as evidence. And what Ibn Abbas said indicates its correctness from the report of God, may He be praised, about Iblis and his disobedience to Him, when He called him to prostrate to Adam but he refused and was arrogant, and his revealing to the rest of the angels his disobedience and arrogance, which he had concealed before that.

If someone thought that the report about the angels concealing what they were concealing, since it was outside the scope of the report about everyone, it is not permissible for what was narrated in the interpretation of that from Ibn Abbas and whoever said with his saying: that it is report about Satan concealing arrogance and disobedience to be correct, then he thought incorrectly. That is because it is the custom of the Arabs, when they report about some of a group without naming a specific person, to bring out the report about him in the scope of the report about all of them, and that is like their saying: The army was killed and defeated, when only one or some of them were killed, and one or some were defeated. So the report about the defeated and killed among them is brought out in the scope of the report about all of them, as God, the Most High, said: Indeed, those who call to you from behind the chambers, most of them do not reason (al-Hujurat 49:4). It was mentioned that the one who called out to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and this verse was revealed about him was a man from the group of Banu Tamim, who had come to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. So he brought out the report about him in the scope of the report about the group. Likewise, his statement: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he brought out the report as report about all of them, and what is meant by it is one of them.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty said: "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' And when he had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth, and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?'"

The Almighty's saying: He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' There are five issues in this:

The first: The Almighty's saying: Inform them of their names. God commanded him to teach them their names after he presented them to the angels so that they would know that he is more knowledgeable about what he asked them about, as a reminder of his superiority and high status. He was better than them because he presented him to them and made them prostrate to him and made them his students and commanded them to learn from him. So he attained the rank of majesty and greatness by making him prostrated to, specializing in knowledge.

Second: In this verse there is evidence of the virtue of knowledge and its people, and in the hadith:

The angels lower their wings in satisfaction for the seeker of knowledge, meaning they submit and are humble. They only do that for the people of knowledge in particular from among the rest of God's family, because God the Most High obligated them to do that in Adam, peace be upon him, and so they were disciplined by that discipline. So whenever knowledge appeared to them in a human being, they would submit to him, be humble, and humble themselves out of respect for knowledge and its people, and out of satisfaction from them seeking it and occupying themselves with it. This is the case with the students among them, so how about the scholars and rabbis among them! May God make us among them and with them, for He is the Possessor of great bounty.

Third: Scholars differed on this matter, who is better, the angels or the sons of Adam, with two opinions: Some people said that the messengers from among humans are better than the messengers from among angels, and the saints from among humans are better than the saints from among angels. Others said that the highest angels are better. It was argued from the superiority of the angels that they are honored servants * They do not precede Him in speech and they act by His command. "They do not disobey God in what He commands them and do what they are commanded." And His statement: The Messiah would not disdain to be a servant of God, nor would the angels brought near. And His statement: Say, 'I do not tell you that I have the treasures of God, nor do I know the unseen, nor do I tell you that I am an angel.' And in Bukhari:

God Almighty says:

Whoever mentions Me in an assembly, I will mention him in an assembly better than them. This is a text. He argued for the superiority of the children of Adam by saying, Indeed, those who have believed and done righteous deeds - those are the best of creation, with a hamza, from God created creation. And his saying, peace be upon him:

The angels lower their wings in satisfaction with the seeker of knowledge. Narrated by Abu Dawud, and what came in the hadiths that God the Almighty boasts about the people of Arafat to the angels, and He only boasts about the best, and God knows best. Some scholars said: There is no way to be certain that the prophets are better than the angels, nor is there any way to be certain that the angels are better than them, because the way to that is the report of God the Almighty and the report of His Messenger or the consensus of the Ummah, and there is nothing of that here, contrary to the Qadarites and Judge Abu Bakr may God have mercy on him who said the angels are better. He said: As for those of our companions and the Shiites who said: The prophets are better because God the Almighty ordered the angels to prostrate to Adam, it is said to them: The one who is prostrated to is not better than the one who prostrates, do you not see that the Kaaba is prostrated to and the prophets and creation prostrate towards it, then the prophets are better than the Kaaba by consensus of the Ummah. And there is no disagreement that prostration is only for God the Almighty, because prostration is better than the Kaaba by consensus of the Ummah. There is no disagreement that prostration is only for God Almighty, because prostration is an act of worship, and worship is only for God. If this is the case, then prostration being towards a direction does not indicate that the direction is better than the prostrating worshipper, and this is clear. More clarification will come in the verse after this.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: Indeed, I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth is evidence that no one knows of the unseen except what God has taught him, such as the prophets or those whom God has taught. Astrologers, soothsayers, and others are liars. This will be explained in Al-An'am, God willing, when God Almighty says: And with Him are the keys of the unseen; none knows them except Him.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: And I know what you reveal, meaning their saying: Will you place therein one who will cause corruption therein? This was narrated by Makki and Al-Mawardi. Al-Zahrawi said: What they revealed was in dirhams by prostrating to Adam. And what you concealed, Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, and Saeed bin Jubair said: What is meant is what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance and disobedience. Ibn Atiyyah said: "And 'taktamoon' came for the group, and the concealer is one in this saying according to the Arabs' exaggeration and breadth, as it is said to a group of people who have committed a sin: You did such and such. That is, one of you did it, and this is with the intention of rebuking, and from this is the Almighty's saying: "Indeed, those who call to you from behind the chambers, most of them do not reason," and 'Uyaynah called him from among them, and it was said Al-Aqra'. A group said: The revelation and the concealed mean the generality in knowing their secrets and their outward appearances as a whole. Mahdi bin Maymun said: We were with Al-Hasan, and Al-Hasan bin Dinar asked him: What did the angels conceal? He said: When God, the Almighty, created Adam, the angels saw a wondrous creation, and it was as if something had entered them because of that. He said: Then some of them turned to one another and whispered that to each other, and they said: What concerns you about this creation! God did not create a creation except that we were more honorable to Him than it. And what is in His statement, What you show may be in the accusative case with I know as a verb, and it may be in the meaning of knower and with it the accusative case of what so that it would be like the necessities of the House of God, and this has been mentioned previously.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is a position in which God Almighty mentioned Adam's honor over the angels by what He distinguished him from knowing the names of everything without them, and this was after their prostration to him. Rather, this chapter was presented before that because of the connection between the position and their lack of knowledge of the wisdom of creating the caliph when they asked about that, so God Almighty informed them that He knows what they do not know. For this reason, God mentioned this position after this to show them Adam's honor by what He preferred over them in knowledge, so God Almighty said: And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the names of his children, human by human, and the animals, so it was said: This is the donkey, this is the camel, this is the horse. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: They are the names that people know each other by: human, animal, sky, earth, plain, sea, horse, donkey, and the like from the nations and others. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated from the hadith of Asim bin Kulayb on the authority of Saeed bin Ma'bad on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. He said: He taught him the name of the page. And the destiny, he said yes even the faswa and the fasiyya, and Mujahid said And He taught Adam the names - all of them he said He taught him the name of every beast and every bird and every thing, likewise it was narrated from Saeed bin Jubair and Qatadah and others from the Salaf that he taught him the names of everything, and Al-Rabi' said in a narration about the names of the angels. And Hamid Al-Shami said the names of the stars. And Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid said He taught him the names of all his offspring, and Ibn Jarir chose that He taught him the names of the angels and the names of the offspring because he said Then He presented them and this is an expression of what is rational and what he preferred is not necessary, because it does not negate that others are included with them, and everyone is expressed in the form of those who are rational for the sake of emphasis as God Almighty said "And God created every animal from water. And among them is he who crawls on his bellies and among them is he who walks on two legs and among them is he who walks on four. God creates what He wills. Indeed, God is over all things competent." And Abdullah bin Masoud recited then he presented them, and Ubay bin Ka'b recited then he presented them, meaning the named things. The correct view is that He taught him the names of all things, their essences, attributes and actions, as Ibn Abbas said, even faswa and fasiya, meaning the names of the essences and actions, both large and small. For this reason, Al-Bukhari said in his interpretation of this verse in the Book of Interpretation of his Sahih: Muslim bin Ibrahim told us, Hisham told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Khalifa told me: Yazid bin Zurai' told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "The believers will gather on the Day of Resurrection and say, 'If only we could intercede with our Lord.' So they will go to Adam and say, 'You are the father of mankind, God created you with His hand, and His angels prostrated to you, and He taught you the names of everything, so intercede for us with your Lord so that He may relieve us from this place of ours.' He will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his sin and he will feel shy. 'Go to Noah, for he was the first Messenger whom God sent to the people of the earth.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there,' and he will mention his asking his Lord for something of which he had no knowledge, and he will feel shy. So he will say, 'Go to the Friend of the Most Merciful.' So they will go to him and he will say, 'I am not there.'" There, he says: Go to Moses, a servant to whom God spoke and gave the Torah. He says: I am not there. He mentions killing a soul without a soul, so he feels shy before his Lord. He says: Go to Jesus, the servant of God and His Messenger, the Word of God and His Spirit. So they come to him, and he says: I am not there. Go to Muhammad, a servant whose past and future sins have been forgiven. So they come to me, and I go until I seek permission to see my Lord, and He gives me permission. Then when I see my Lord, I fall down in prostration, and He leaves me as God wills. Then it is said: Raise your head and ask, and it will be given to you. Say, and He hears. Intercede, and your intercession will be accepted. So I raise my head and praise Him with praise that He teaches me. Then I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return to Him. Then when I see my Lord like him, I intercede, and He sets a limit for me, and I admit them into Paradise. Then I return a third time, and I return a fourth time, and I say: No one remains in the Fire except he who was detained by the Qur'an and for whom eternity is obligatory. This is how Al-Bukhari narrated this hadith here. Muslim and Al-Nasa'i narrated it from the hadith of Hisham, who is Ibn Abi Abdullah Al-Dastawai, from Qatadah, and it was transmitted by him. Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah from the hadith of Saeed, who is Ibn Abi Arubah, on the authority of Qatada. The reason for including it here is that what is meant by it is his saying, may God's prayers and peace be upon him: They will come to Adam and say: You are the father of mankind. God created you with His hand, made His angels prostrate to you, and taught you the names of everything. This indicates that He taught him the names of all the creatures, and for this reason He said, Then He showed them to the angels, meaning the things named, as Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, he said, Then He showed those names to the angels, and said, 'Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful.' Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the Companions, And He taught Adam the names, all of them, then He showed creation to the angels. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid, then He showed the owners of the names to the angels. Ibn

He said, "O Adam, inform them of their names." And when he had informed them of their names, He said, "Did I not tell you that I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?"

Jarir said: Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Al-Hajjaj told me on the authority of Jarir ibn Hazim and Mubarak ibn Fadala on the authority of Al-Hasan and Abu Bakr on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, they said: He taught him the name of everything, and he began to name everything by its name, and nation by nation were shown to him. And with this chain of transmission on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah in the words of God Almighty, If you should be truthful, "I have not created a creation except that you are more knowledgeable than it, so inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful." Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, If you should be truthful, if You knew that I had not appointed a successor on earth. Al-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, If you are truthful, the children of Adam will cause corruption on earth and shed blood. Ibn Jarir said, "The best of the sayings on that is the interpretation of Ibn Abbas and those who said what he said, and the meaning of that is that he said, 'Tell me the names of those whom I have presented to you, O angels who say, "Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? From other than us or from us?" So we glorify You with praise and sanctify You.'" If you are truthful in what you say, that if I appoint my successor on earth from someone other than you, he and his descendants will disobey me and cause corruption and shed blood, and if I appoint you on it, you will obey me and follow my command to glorify and sanctify me, then if you do not know the names of those whom I have presented to you and you are watching them, then you are more likely to be ignorant of the things that do not exist, which did not exist. "They said, 'Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.'" This is sanctification and exoneration from the angels of God Almighty, that no one can encompass anything of His knowledge except what He wills, and that they know nothing except what God Almighty has taught them. For this reason they said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise." That is, the Knower of everything, the Wise in Your creation and command, in Your teaching whomever You will and in Your preventing whomever You will. You have wisdom in that and perfect justice. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Saeed Al-Ashj told us, Hafs bin Ghiyath told us, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Abi Malekah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Glory be to God, he said God is free from evil, then Umar said to Ali and his companions who were with him, there is no god but God, we know it, but what is glory be to God? Ali said to me: it is a word that God loves for Himself and is pleased with and loves to be said, he said: My father told us, Ibn Nufayl told us, Al-Nadr bin Arabi told us: a man asked Maymun bin Mihran about glory be to God, he said: it is a name by which God is glorified and protected from evil.

God the Almighty said: "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' And when he had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal?'" Zayd ibn Aslam said, You are Gabriel, you are Michael, you are Israfil, until he listed all the names until he reached the raven. Mujahid said about God's statement, He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.' He said the name of the dove, the raven, and the name of everything. It was narrated from Saeed ibn Jubayr, Al-Hasan, and Qatadah something similar to that. So when Adam, peace be upon him, appeared to the angels, peace be upon them, in his narration of what God the Almighty had taught him of the names of things, God the Almighty said to the angels, Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? That is, did I not tell you that I know the unseen, the apparent and the hidden, as God the Almighty said, And if you speak aloud, then indeed He knows the secret and what is more hidden. And as He said, informing about the hoopoe that he said to Solomon, That they should not prostrate to God, Who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and the earth and knows what is hidden. "You conceal and what you declare. God - there is no god but He, Lord of the Mighty Throne." It was said about the words of God the Most High: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, other than what we mentioned. Ad-Dahhak narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, he said: He says: I know the secret as I know the public, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance and conceit. As-Suddi said on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions, he said: Their statement: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein and shed blood? This is what they revealed. And what you concealed, meaning what Satan concealed in himself of arrogance. Saeed bin Jubayr, Mujahid, As-Suddi and Ad-Dahhak Ath-Thawri said the same. Ibn Jarir chose that, and Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Al-Hasan and Qatadah said that it is their saying: Our Lord did not create a creation except that We were more knowledgeable than it and more honorable to Him than it. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal. So what they revealed was their saying: Will You place therein someone who will corrupt it and shed blood? And what they concealed among themselves was their saying: Our Lord will not create a creation except that We are more knowledgeable than it and more honorable. So they knew that God had favored Adam over them in knowledge and honor. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus told us, Ibn Wahb told us on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam in the story of the angels and Adam, so God said to the angels: Just as you did not know these names, you have no knowledge. I only wanted to make them so that they would corrupt it. This is with Me, I know it, and therefore I concealed from you that I will place therein those who disobey Me and those who obey Me. He said: And it had already been decreed by God: I will fill Hell with jinn and people all together. He said: And the angels did not know that and did not realize it. So he said: So when they saw what God gave Adam knowledge, and they acknowledged his merit. Ibn Jarir

He said, "O Adam, inform them of their names." And when he had informed them of their names, He said, "Did I not tell you that I know the unseen [aspects] of the heavens and the earth and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?"

said: The most correct of the sayings in this regard is the saying of Ibn Abbas, which is that the meaning of the words of God the Almighty: And I know what you reveal is: "And I know, along with My knowledge, the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and what you reveal with your tongues and what you conceal within yourselves. Nothing is hidden from Me, whether your secrets or your public affairs. What they revealed with their tongues was their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? And what they concealed was what Iblis had concealed of dissent against God in His commands and arrogance in obeying Him." He said: This is correct, as the Arabs say: The army was killed and defeated, but only one or some were killed and one or some were defeated, so the report is given about the defeated and killed from it, as the report is given about all of them, as God the Almighty said: Indeed, those who call to you from behind the chambers He mentioned that the one who called was only one of Banu Tamim. He said: And likewise His saying: And I know what you reveal and what you conceal.

That is why God the Almighty said: 33- Did I not tell you the verse. He said previously: I know what you do not know then He said here: I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth gradually from the general to what is partly clarified and partly expanded. And in His exclusive knowledge of the unseen of the heavens and the earth, there is a response to what many servants take upon themselves to know something of the knowledge of the unseen of the heavens and the earth, a response to what many servants take upon themselves to know something of the knowledge of the unseen, such as astrologers, soothsayers, geologist, magicians and sorcerers. What is meant by what they reveal and what they conceal: what they show and conceal, as the meaning of that indicates to the Arabs. Whoever interprets it as something specific, that is not accepted from him except with evidence. Al-Faryabi, Ibn Sa'd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Hakim narrated - and authenticated it - on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: He was only called Adam because he was created from the surface of the earth. And Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Sa'd bin Jubayr. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And He taught Adam the names - all of them, he said: He taught him the name of a page, a destiny and everything. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on his authority. Abd Ibn Hamid and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority regarding his interpretation of the verse: He showed him the names of his children, human by human, and the animals, and it was said: This is the camel, this is the donkey, this is the horse. Al-Hakim narrated in his history, Ibn Asakir and Al-Daylami on the authority of Atiyah Ibn Bishr, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, regarding his statement: And He taught Adam the names - all of them, he said: God taught Adam a thousand letters among those names and said to him: Say to your children and your descendants, if you cannot be patient about the world, then seek it with these letters and do not seek it with religion, for religion is purely for Me. Woe to he who seeks the world with religion, woe to him. Al-Daylami narrated on the authority of Abu Rafi' who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: My nation was represented to me in water and clay, and I was taught all the names, just as Adam was taught all the names. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Zayd in his interpretation of the verse, he said: The names of all his descendants. Then He displayed them, he said: He took them from his back. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the verse, he said: These are the names that people know each other by. Then He displayed them, meaning He displayed the names of all the things that Adam was taught from the types of creation. "Then He said: Inform Me," he said: Tell Me, the names of these, if you should be truthful, if you know that I have not made a vicegerent on earth. "They said: Glory be to You," declaring God free from having anyone other than Him know the unseen. We have no knowledge," they disavowed them from knowledge of the unseen, except what You have taught us, just as You have taught Adam. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: The owners of the names were displayed to the angels. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Indeed, it is You who are the Knowing, the Wise, he said: The Knowing is He who is perfect in His knowledge, and the Wise is He who is perfect in His judgment. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions, regarding his statement: If you are truthful, that the children of Adam corrupt the earth and shed blood, And I know what you reveal, he said: their statement, Will You place therein one who causes corruption therein? "And what you conceal," meaning: what Satan concealed in his soul of arrogance. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: What you reveal, what you show, and what you conceal, he said: I know the secret as I know the public.

33. "God Almighty said:

O Adam, inform them of their names. He informed them of their names, so Adam named each thing by its name and mentioned the wisdom for which it was created. So when he informed them of their names, God the Most High said, 'Did I not tell you, O My angels, that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth?' What was of them and what will be, because He had said to them, Indeed, I know that which you do not know. 30 - Al-Baqarah And I know that which you reveal. Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: He meant their saying, Will you place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? "And that which you have been concealing." Your saying, God will not create a creation more honorable to Him than us. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, said that it was that Satan passed by Adam's body while it was lying between Mecca and Taif, with no soul in it, and said, For what reason was this created? Then he entered his mouth and exited from his anus, and said, It is a creation that cannot hold together because it is hollow. Then He said to the angels who were with him, Do you see that if this one is preferred over you and you are commanded to obey him, what will you do? They said: We obey the command of our Lord. Then Satan said to himself: By God, if I am given power over him, I will destroy him, and if I am given power over him, I will disobey him. Then God Almighty said: And I know what you reveal meaning what the angels reveal of obedience and what you conceal meaning Satan of disobedience.

33- "He said, 'O Adam, inform them of their names.'" That is, teach them. It was read by changing the hamza to a ya' and deleting it by breaking the ha' in both of them.

So when he informed them of their names, he said, 'Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and that I know what you reveal and what you conceal?' This is an invocation of the Almighty's saying, Indeed, I know that which you do not know. However, He brought it in a simpler way to be like an argument against him, for when the Almighty knew what was hidden from them of the affairs of the heavens and the earth, and what was apparent to them of their apparent and hidden conditions, He knew what they did not know. In it is an allusion to their reproach for abandoning what is best, which is that they should stop and wait for Him to explain to them. It was said: What you reveal is their saying: Will You place therein someone who will cause corruption therein? And What you conceal is their inner meaning that they are more deserving of the caliphate, and that the Almighty will not create a creation better than them. It was said: What they revealed of obedience, and what Satan concealed from them of disobedience, and the hamza is for denial, and the letter of denial entered, so it indicates affirmation and confirmation.

Know that these verses indicate the honor of man, the superiority of knowledge and its superiority over worship, and that it is a condition for the caliphate, indeed the mainstay of it, and that teaching can be attributed to God Almighty, even if it is not correct to call him a teacher because it is specific to those who practice it, and that languages are divinely ordained, as names indicate words specifically or generally, and teaching is apparent in giving them to the learner, explaining their meanings to him, and that requires a previous placement, and the origin denies that this placement was from those who were before Adam, so it would be from God Almighty, and that the concept of wisdom is additional to the concept of knowledge, otherwise His statement would have been repeated: Indeed, You are the Knowing, the Wise, and that the knowledge of the angels and their perfections accept increase, and the wise prevented that in the highest class of them, and they attributed it to His statement, Almighty: And there is none of us but has a known station, and that Adam is better than these angels because he is more knowledgeable than them, and the more knowledgeable is better because of His statement, Almighty: Are those who know equal to those who do not know? And that Almighty God knows things before they happen.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:34

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:34

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And mention when We said to the angels, Prostrate to Adam a prostration of greeting by bowing and they prostrated except for Iblis he is the father of the jinn, he was among the angels he refused he refrained from prostrating and was arrogant he was arrogant towards him and said: I am better than him and he was among the disbelievers in the knowledge of God

Abu Ja'far said: As for his statement: And when We said, it is connected to his statement: And when your Lord said to the angels, as if He, the Most High, said to the Jews who were among the emigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Children of Israel, enumerating His blessings upon them and reminding them of His favors, in the manner that we described before: Remember My action toward you when I bestowed favor upon you, and created for you all that is on the earth, and when I said to the angels, Indeed, I am going to place a vicegerent on the earth, so I honored your father Adam with what I gave him of My knowledge, grace, and honor, and when My angels prostrated to him and they prostrated to him. Then He excepted Iblis from all of them, and by His exclusion of him from them He indicated that he was one of them, and that he was among those who were commanded to prostrate with them, as He, the Most High, said: "Except Iblis, he was not of those who prostrated. He said, 'What prevented you from prostrating when I commanded you?'" (al-A'raf 7:11-12). So He, the Most High, informed that He had commanded Iblis among those angels whom He commanded to prostrate to Adam. Then He, the Most High, excluded him from what He informed about them that they did of prostrating to Adam, so He removed him from the description with which He described them of obedience to His command, and He denied from him what He had confirmed for His angels of prostrating to His servant Adam.

Then the people of interpretation differed about him: Is he from the angels, or from others? Some of them said what Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, on the authority of Bishr bin Ammarah, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Iblis was from a tribe of the angels called Al-Han, they were created from the poisonous fire from among the angels. He said: So his name was Al-Harith.

He said: And he was a treasurer from the treasurers of Paradise.

He said: The angels were created from a light other than this living being. He said: The jinn mentioned in the Qur'an were created from a flame of fire, which is the tongue of fire that is at its edge when it flares up.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Khallad, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Tawus, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Before he committed the sin, Iblis was one of the angels whose name was Azazel. He was one of the inhabitants of the earth, and he was one of the most diligent of the angels and the most knowledgeable of them. This led him to arrogance, and he was from a tribe called jinn.

Ibn Hamid told us about it again. He said: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Khallad, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Tawus, or Mujahid Abu al-Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Abbas and others, in a similar manner, except that he said: There was an angel from among the angels whose name was Azazel, and he was one of the inhabitants of the earth and its inhabitants, and the inhabitants of the earth were among them who were called the jinn from among the angels.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Iblis was appointed king of the lowest heaven, and he was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, and they were called the jinn because they were the treasurers of Paradise. Iblis was a treasurer with his kingdom.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Hussain told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ibn Abbas said: Iblis was one of the noblest of the angels and the most honorable of them in tribe. He was the keeper of Paradise, and he had authority over the lowest heaven, and he had authority over the Earth. He said: Ibn Abbas said: And His statement: He was of the jinn (al-Kahf 18:55) is only called Paradise because he was its keeper, just as a man is called a Meccan, a Medinan, a Kufan, or a Basran.

Ibn Jurayj said, and others said: They are a tribe of angels, a tribe, so the name of his tribe was the jinn.

Al-Qasim told us: Al-Husayn told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Salih, the client of Al-Tawamah, and Sharik ibn Abi Namir, one of them or both of them, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Among the angels was a tribe of jinn, and Iblis was among them, and he governed what was between heaven and earth.

And he narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Al-Faraj, who said: I heard Abu Muadh Al-Fadl bin Khalid, who said: Ubaid bin Sulaiman told us, who said: I heard Ad-Dahhak bin Muzahim say regarding His statement: "So they prostrated, except Iblis. He was one of the jinn" (al-Kahf 18:50), he said: Ibn Abbas used to say: Iblis was one of the noblest of the angels and the most honorable of them in tribe. Then he mentioned something similar to the first hadith of Ibn Jurayj.

Muhammad bin Al-Muthanna told us: Shaiban told me: Salam bin Maskeen told us, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Saeed bin Al-Musayyab, who said: Iblis was the chief angel of the lowest heaven.

And Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said: Yazid told us, he said: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, his statement: "And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam,' and they prostrated, except for Iblis. He was one of the jinn." (al-Kahf 18:50) He was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, and Ibn Abbas used to say: If he had not been one of the angels, he would not have been commanded to prostrate, and he was in charge of the treasury of the lowest heaven. He said: And Qatada used to say: He was a jinn who refused to obey his Lord.

Al-Husayn bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Except Iblis, he was from the jinn, he said: He was from a tribe of angels called the jinn.

Ibn Humayd told us: Salamah told us: Muhammad ibn Ishaq told us: As for the Arabs, they say: The jinn are all those who have been circumcised and have not been seen. As for His statement: Except Iblis, he was from the jinn (al-Kahf 18:50), meaning he was from the angels who were circumcised and have not been seen. And God, the Most High, said: "And they made between Him and the jinn a relationship. And the jinn know that they will be brought forth" (Al-Saffat: 158), and that is because the Quraysh say: The angels are the daughters of God, so God says: If the angels are My daughters, then Iblis is from them, and they have made between Me and Iblis and his offspring a relationship. He said: And Al-A'sha, the blind of Banu Qays ibn Tha'labah Al-Bakri, said, while mentioning Solomon, son of David, and what God gave him:

If anything were eternal or long-lived, it would be Solomon, who was innocent of time.

He is God, and His servants chose him, and His kingdom is between the Pleiades and Egypt.

And He made nine jinn angels stand by Him, working without pay.

He said: The Arabs refused in their language to say that the jinn are all that have gathered. He said: God did not call the jinn except that they gathered and were not seen, and He did not call the sons of Adam humans except that they appeared and did not gather. So whatever appeared is human, and whatever gathered and was not seen is a wild animal.

Others said: Muhammad bin Bashir told us, he said: Ibn Abi Uday told us, on the authority of A'waf, on the authority of Al-Hasan, he said: Iblis was never among the angels for even a moment, and he is the origin of the jinn, just as Adam is the origin of mankind.

And Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said: Yazid bin Zari' told us, he said: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said: Al-Hasan used to say regarding His statement: Except Iblis, he was of the jinn, he forced him to refer to his lineage, so God said: Will you then take him and his descendants as allies instead of Me while they are enemies to you? An evil exchange for the wrongdoers (al-Kahf 18:50), and they reproduce just as the children of Adam reproduce.

Ibn Hamid told us: Yahya bin Wadh told us: Abu Saeed Al-Yahmadi told us: Ismail bin Ibrahim told us: Suwar bin Al-Ja'd Al-Yahmadi told us, on the authority of Shahr bin Hawshab, regarding his statement: of the jinn, he said: Iblis was one of the jinn whom the angels expelled, so some of the angels captured him and took him to heaven.

Ali bin Al-Hussein told me, he said: Abu Nasr Ahmad bin Muhammad Al-Khalal told me, he said: Sanid bin Dawud told me, he said: Hisham told us, he said: Abd Al-Rahman bin Yahya told us, on the authority of Musa bin Numayr,

And Uthman bin Saeed bin Kamil, on the authority of Saad bin Masoud, said: The angels were fighting the jinn, and Iblis was taken captive when he was young, so he was with the angels and worshipped with them. Then when they were commanded to prostrate to Adam, they prostrated, but Iblis refused. Therefore, God said: Except Iblis, he was from the jinn.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us: Al-Mubarak ibn Mujahid Abu al-Azhar told us, on the authority of Sharik ibn Abdullah ibn Abi Namir, on the authority of Salih, the freed slave of al-Taw'amah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Among the angels is a tribe called the jinn, and Iblis was among them. Iblis used to rule what was between heaven and earth, but he disobeyed, so God transformed him into a cursed devil.

He said: Yunus told us, on the authority of Ibn Wahb, who said: Ibn Zayd said: Iblis is the father of the jinn, just as Adam is the father of mankind.

The reason for those who said this statement is that God Almighty stated in His Book that He created Iblis from poisonous fire and from a smokeless flame of fire, and He did not state that He created the angels from any of that, and that God Almighty stated that he was from the jinn. So they said: It is not permissible to attribute him to anything other than what God attributed him to. They said: Iblis has offspring and descendants, and the angels do not reproduce or give birth.

Muhammad ibn Sinan al-Qazzaz narrated: Abu Asim narrated from Sharik from a man from Ikrimah from Ibn Abbas, who said: God created a creation and said: Prostrate to Adam. They said: We will not do that. So God sent fire upon them to burn them. Then He created another creation and said: I am creating a human being from clay; prostrate to Adam. They refused, so God sent fire upon them and burned them. He said: Then He created these people and said: Prostrate to Adam. They said: Yes. And Iblis was among those who refused to prostrate to Adam.

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

Abu Ja'far said: These are reasons that indicate the weakness of their people's knowledge. That is because it is not strange that God, the Most High, created the types of His angels from various types of His creation. He created some from light, some from fire, and some from whatever He willed from other than that. And in God, the Most High, omitting the information about what He created His angels from, and His information about what He created Iblis from, there is nothing that necessitates that Iblis be outside their meaning. For it was permissible that He created a type of His angels from fire, including Iblis, and that He singled out Iblis by creating him from the fire of poison, without the rest of His angels. Likewise, it is not possible that he was from the angels in that he had offspring and descendants, because of the desire and pleasure that was removed from the rest of the angels, because of what God wanted for him of disobedience. As for God's report that he is from the jinn, it is not rejected that all things that are hidden from sight are called jinn, as we mentioned before in the poetry of Al-A'sha, so Iblis and the angels are from them, because they are hidden from the sight of the children of Adam.

Saying about the meaning of Satan.

Abu Ja'far said: "Iblis is a verbal noun from the root 'iblas', which means despair of goodness, regret and sadness. As Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Uthman ibn Sa'id narrated to us, he said: Bishr ibn 'Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, he said: "Iblis, God made him despair of all goodness, and made him a cursed devil as punishment for his disobedience."

Musa bin Harun told us: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, who said: Iblis's name was Al-Harith, and he was only called Iblis when he was confused.

Abu Ja'far said: As God Almighty said: Then they are in despair (Al-An'am: 44), meaning that they are hopeless of goodness and regretful and sad, as Al-'Ajjaj said:

Hey dude, do you know a consecrated drawing? He said: Yes, I know it! And Abelsa

Ru'bah said:

On Thursday, the fifts were present, and the faces were yellow and pale.

It means depression and eclipse.

If someone were to say: If Iblis, as you said, is an if'il from iblas, why was it not declined and inflected? It is said: It was not inflected because it was too heavy, since it was a name that had no equivalent among the names of the Arabs, so the Arabs likened it, since it was like that, to the names of the non-Arabs that are not inflected. They said: I passed by Isaac, but they did not inflect it. It is from Ashaquhu God Ishaqan, since it was the subject of a name for a non-Arab, then the Arabs named themselves with it and it followed its path, and it is one of the names of the non-Arabs in inflection, so it was not inflected. The same is true for Ayyub, it is in fact a fa'il from Ab Ya'ub.

The interpretation of His statement: He refused, meaning that Iblis, may He be glorified, refused to prostrate to Adam and did not prostrate to him. And he was arrogant, meaning that he was too proud and haughty to obey God in prostrating to Adam. And even though this is from God, may He be glorified, about Iblis, it is a rebuke to his peers from among God's creation who are too proud to submit to God's command, and to obey Him in what He commanded them to do and what He forbade them from doing, and to surrender to Him in what He made obligatory for some of them upon others of the truth. Among those who were too proud to submit to God's command, and to humble themselves to obey Him, and to surrender to His judgment in what He made obligatory for them of the rights of others were the Jews who were among the immigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their rabbis who knew the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his attributes, and who were knowledgeable about him and that he was a Messenger of God. Then they were too proud, despite their knowledge of this, to acknowledge his prophethood and to submit to his obedience, out of envy and spite towards him. God struck them with His report about Satan, who acted in his arrogance and refusal to prostrate to Adam out of envy and malice, similar to their act of arrogance in refusing to submit to Muhammad, the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his prophethood, when he came to them with the truth from their Lord, out of envy and malice.

Then He described Iblis with the same description of those whom He gave as an example of arrogance, envy, and refusal to submit to the one to whom God commanded him to submit. So He, the Most High, said: And he was, meaning Iblis, of the disbelievers, of those who denied God's blessings upon him and His favors to him, by disobeying Him in what He commanded him to do of prostrating to Adam, just as the Jews disbelieved in the blessings of their Lord that He gave to them and their fathers before them: of God feeding their ancestors with manna and quails, and the shade of clouds over them, and the countless blessings that were given to them, especially those who had known Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, by knowing him and witnessing God's proof against them, so they denied his prophethood after knowing him and recognizing his prophethood out of envy and malice. So God, the Most High, attributed him to the disbelievers, and made him count among them in religion and creed, even though he differed from them in kind and lineage. Just as He made the hypocrites from one another, because they agreed upon hypocrisy, even though their lineages and races differed, He said: The hypocrites, men and women, are from one another (al-Tawbah 9:67), meaning that some of them are from one another in hypocrisy and misguidance. Likewise, His statement about Iblis: He was from the disbelievers, he was from them in his disbelief in God and his disobedience to His command, even though his race was different from their races and his lineage was different from theirs. The meaning of His statement: And he was from the disbelievers is that when he refused to prostrate, he was from the disbelievers at that time.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-A'aliyah, that he used to say in his interpretation of His statement: And he was among the disbelievers, in this place: And he was among the disobedient.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam Al-Asqalani told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And he was among the disbelievers, meaning the disobedient.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', similarly.

This is similar to the meaning of what we said about it.

The angels' prostration to Adam was an honor to Adam and an obedience to God, not an act of worship to Adam, as Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid ibn Zurai' told us, he said: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, his statement: And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam,' so the obedience was to God, and the prostration was to Adam. God honored Adam by having His angels prostrate to him.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam,' they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers."

It has ten issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: And when We said meaning, remember. As for the saying of Abu Ubaidah: When We said is redundant, it is not permissible, because when is a circumstance, which has already been mentioned. He said: We said and did not say I said because the Almighty, the Great, speaks about Himself through the actions of the group, glorifying and praising His mention. Angels is the plural of angel, which has already been mentioned. The statement about Adam and its derivation has also been mentioned, so there is no point in repeating it. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Ja'far ibn al-Qa'qa' that he added a damma to the feminine ta' of angels in imitation of the damma of the jim in prostrate. Similar to it is al-Hamdulillah.

Second: The Almighty's saying: Prostrate. Prostration in the speech of the Arabs means humility and submission. The poet said:

By collecting the falcons in its chambers, you will see the hills prostrating to the hooves.

Akm: small mountains. He made them a place of prostration for the hooves to subdue them and that they do not prevent them. And a prostrating eye, meaning one that is inactive from looking, and its ultimate purpose is to place the face on the ground. Ibn Faris said: He prostrated when he humbled himself, and everything that prostrated has been humbled. And al-Sajdah 32: is to continue looking. Abu Amr said: And prostrate if he lowered his head, he said.

Curiosity crisis prostrated Christians to their rabbis

Abu Ubaidah said: An Arab from Banu Asad recited to me:

And they said to him, Prostrate to Layla, so they prostrated.

Meaning the camel when it lowers its head and the dirhams of al-Sajdah 32: dirhams that had pictures on them that they used to prostrate to. He said:

He brought it as a dirham for the carpet

Third: The superiority of Adam and his children was proven by the words of God Almighty to the angels: Prostrate to Adam. They said: This indicates that he was better than them. The answer is that the meaning of Prostrate to Adam is Prostrate to Me while facing Adam. It is like the words of God Almighty: Establish prayer at the decline of the sun, meaning at the decline of the sun, and like His words: And I breathed into him of My spirit, so fall down to him in prostration, meaning fall down to Me when his creation is completed and you face him in prostration. We have already explained that prostrating to him is not better than prostrating, based on the evidence of the qiblah.

If it is said: If He is not better than them, then what is the wisdom in commanding them to prostrate to Him? It is said: When the angels were magnified by their glorification and sanctification, He commanded them to prostrate to someone other than Him to show them that He is independent of them and their worship. Some of them said: They mocked Adam and thought him small and did not know the characteristics of His creation with him, so they were commanded to prostrate to Him out of respect. It is possible that God Almighty commanded them to prostrate to Him as a punishment for their saying: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein? When He said to them: Indeed, I am placing a successor on the earth. And He knew from them that if He addressed them that they would say this, He said to them: Indeed, I am creating a human being from clay and making him a successor, so when I breathe into him of My spirit, then fall down in prostration to him. The meaning is: So that this would be a punishment for you at that time for what you are saying to Me now.

If it is said: Ibn Abbas provided evidence for the superiority of mankind by the fact that God the Almighty swore by the life of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, saying: By your life, indeed, in their intoxication, they are wandering blindly. And He secured him from punishment by saying: That God may forgive you your sin, past and future. And He said to the angels: And whoever among them should say, 'I am a god besides Him,' We will recompense him with Hell. It is said to him: He did not swear by the life of the angels just as He did not swear by His own life, glory be to Him, so He did not say: By my life. And

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

He swore by the heaven and the earth, and He did not indicate that they are of a higher status than the Throne and the seven Paradises. And He swore by the fig and the olive. As for His statement, glory be to Him: And whoever among them should say, 'I am a god besides Him,' it is similar to His statement to His Prophet, peace be upon him: If you associate others with God, your work will surely become worthless, and you will surely be among the losers. So there is no evidence in it, and God knows best.

Fourth: People differed about how the angels prostrated to Adam after agreeing that it was not a prostration of worship. The majority said: This was an order to the angels to place their foreheads on the ground, like the usual prostration in prayer, because it is the apparent form of prostration in custom and law. Based on this, it was said: That prostration was to honor Adam and show his virtue, and in obedience to God Almighty. Adam was like the Qiblah to us. The meaning of to Adam is: to Adam, as it is said he prayed towards the Qiblah, meaning towards the Qiblah. Some people said: This was not the usual prostration today, which is placing the forehead on the ground, but it remained according to the original language, as it is from humility and submission, meaning they submitted to Adam and acknowledged his virtue. So they prostrated means they complied with what they were commanded to do.

There is also a difference of opinion as to whether this prostration was specific to Adam, peace be upon him, so that it is not permissible to prostrate to anyone else in the world except God Almighty, or whether it was permissible after him until the time of Jacob, peace be upon him, based on the Almighty's saying: And he raised his parents upon the throne and they fell down before him in prostration. So it was the last of the prostrations to created beings that were permitted? What the majority of scholars agree on is that it was permissible until the time of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and that his companions said to him when the tree and the camel prostrated to him: We are more deserving of prostrating to you than the tree and the stray camel, so he said to them:

It is not permissible to prostrate to anyone except God, the Lord of the Worlds. Ibn Majah narrated in his Sunan and Al-Basti in his Sahih: "On the authority of Abdullah bin Abi Awfa, who said: When Muadh bin Jabal came from Ash-Sham, he prostrated to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: What is this? He said: O Messenger of God, I came to Ash-Sham and saw them prostrating to their patriarchs and bishops, so I wanted to do that to you. He said: Do not do that, for if I were to command anything to prostrate to anything, I would command a woman to prostrate to her husband. A woman does not fulfill her duty to her Lord until she fulfills her duty to her husband. Even if he asked her for herself while she was on a camel saddle, she would not refuse him." The wording of Al-Basti. The meaning of qatb is that the Arabs found it difficult to find a birth seat, so they would carry their women on a camel saddle when giving birth. In some versions of Muadh: He forbade prostrating to humans, and commanded shaking hands.

I said: This forbidden prostration has been adopted by ignorant Sufis as a habit in their listening and when they enter upon their sheikhs and seek their forgiveness. So one of them, if the situation takes him, as he claims, prostrates to the feet due to his ignorance, whether it is to the qiblah or something else, out of ignorance on his part, their efforts are lost and their work is in vain.

Fifth: His statement: Except Iblis is in the accusative case as a connected exception, because he was one of the angels according to the majority of scholars. Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud, Ibn Jurayj, Ibn al-Musayyab, Qatada and others. This is the choice of Sheikh Abu al-Hasan, and it was preferred by al-Tabari, and it is the apparent meaning of the verse. Ibn Abbas said: His name was Azazel, and he was one of the noble angels and had four wings, then he became Iblis later. Samak ibn Harb narrated on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Iblis was one of the angels, but when he disobeyed God, He became angry with him and cursed him, so he became a devil. Al-Mawardi narrated on the authority of Qatada that he was one of the best kind of angels who were called jinn. Saeed ibn Jubayr said: The jinn are a tribe of angels created from fire, and Iblis is one of them, and the rest of the angels were created from light. Ibn Zayd, al-Hasan and Qatada also said: Iblis is the father of the jinn, just as Adam is the father of mankind, and he was not an angel. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: His name is al-Harith. Shahr bin Hawshab and some of the scholars of the principles of jurisprudence said: He was one of the jinn who were on earth and the angels fought him, so they took him captive when he was young and he worshipped with the angels and was addressed. Al-Tabari narrated it on the authority of Ibn Masoud. The exception to this is discontinuous, like the Almighty's saying: They have no knowledge of it except following, and His saying: Except what you have slaughtered in one of the two opinions. The poet said:

You are neither thirsty nor hungry, except for sleeping, and sleeping is forbidden.

Some of the proponents of this view argued that God, the Almighty, described the angels, saying: They do not disobey God in what He commands them, but they do what they are commanded, and that He, the Almighty, said: "Except Iblis. He was one of the jinn," and the jinn are not angels. The proponents of the first view responded that it is not impossible for Iblis to be excluded from the group of angels, because God had previously known of his misery, out of justice from Him, and he is not questioned about what he does, and there is no fire in his creation or in the composition of desire when He was angry with him, that would prevent him from being one of the angels. As for the view of those who said that he was one of the jinn of the earth and was taken captive, it was narrated in contrast that Iblis was the one who fought the jinn on earth with an army of angels, as narrated by Al-Mahdawi and others. Al-Tha'labi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Iblis was from a tribe of angels called the jinn. They were created from poisonous fire, and the angels were created from light. His name in Syriac was Azazel, and in Arabic, Al-Harith. He was one of the treasurers of Paradise and the chief of the angels of the lowest heaven. He had authority over it and over the earth. He was one of the most diligent and most knowledgeable angels. He ruled what was between heaven and earth, and he saw honor and greatness in that. That is what led him to disbelief, so he disobeyed God, so He transformed him into a cursed devil. So if a man's sin is due to arrogance, do not expect him to do so. But if his sin is due to disobedience, expect him to do so. The sin of Adam, peace be upon him, was a disobedience, and the sin of Iblis was arrogance. The angels are called jinn because of their concealment. In the revelation: And they made a relationship between him and the jinn. The poet said in mentioning Solomon, peace be upon him:

And he mocked the nine jinn angels who stood by him and worked without pay.

Also, since he was one of the treasurers of Paradise, he was attributed to it, so his name was derived from its name, and God knows best. Iblis, its weight is if il, derived from iblas, which means despair of the mercy of God Almighty. It was not declined, because it is a definite noun and has no equivalent among names, so it was likened to a foreign word, as stated by Abu Ubaidah and others. It was said: It is foreign and has no derivation, so it was not declined because of its foreignness and definiteness, as stated by al-Zajaj and others.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: He refused means he refrained from doing what he was commanded to do. This is indicated by the authentic hadith on the authority of Abu Hurairah on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

When the son of Adam recites a verse of prostration and prostrates, Satan withdraws, weeping, saying, 'Woe to me!' - and in another narration: "Woe to me! The son of Adam was commanded to prostrate, so he prostrated, so Paradise is for him. I was commanded to prostrate, but I refused, so Hell is for me." Narrated by Muslim. It is said: 'Abā ya'bā ibā'an, which is a rare letter that comes in the form fa'il ya'alu, and does not contain a throat letter. It has been said that the alif is similar to the throat letters. Al-Zajaj said: I heard Isma'il ibn Ishaq al-Qadi say: The opinion in my opinion is that the alif is similar to the throat letters. Al-Nahhas said: I do not know that Abu Ishaq narrated from Isma'il something other than this letter.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: And he was arrogant. Arrogance means to be too great, so it is as if he hated to prostrate in his right and thought it too great in the right of Adam, so not prostrating to Adam was belittling the command of God and His wisdom. And the peace be upon him expressed this arrogance by saying:

He who has in his heart the weight of a mustard seed of arrogance will not enter Paradise. In another narration, "A man said: 'A man likes his clothes and shoes to be nice.' He said: 'God is beautiful and loves beauty. Arrogance is rejecting the truth and belittling people.'" Narrated by Muslim. The meaning of rejecting the truth is belittling and invalidating it. To belittle people is to despise and disdain them. It is also narrated: Ghams with a silent sad, but the meaning is the same. It is said: Ghamsahu yaghmasuhu ghmansan and Ightamasuhu, meaning he belittled it and did not see it as anything. Someone ghams a blessing if he does not thank for it. Ghamsat 'alaihi means he blamed him for something he said. The accursed one clearly stated this meaning when he said: I am better than him; You created me from fire and created him from clay. "Should I prostrate to one whom You created from clay?" "He said: 'I would never prostrate to a human being whom You created from clay from altered black mud.'" So God disbelieved him for that. Whoever belittles any of the commands of God Almighty or the command of the Messenger, peace be upon him, his judgment will be the same, and there is no disagreement about this. Ibn al-Qasim narrated on the authority of Malik that he said: It has reached me that the first sin was envy and arrogance. Iblis envied Adam, and Adam was stingy in eating from the tree. Qatada said: Iblis envied Adam for the honor God had given him, so he said: I am fire and this is clay. The beginning of sins was arrogance, then greed until Adam ate from the tree, then envy when a son of Adam envies his brother.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: And he was among the disbelievers. It was said: He was here means He became, and from this is the Almighty's saying: And he was among the drowned. And the poet said:

In a deserted wilderness, the mounts were like sad cats, their eggs were chicks.

That is, it became. Ibn Furak said: Kan here means became, which is an error that is rejected by the fundamentals. The majority of commentators said: The meaning is that it was in God Almighty's knowledge that he would disbelieve, because the disbeliever is in reality and the believer is in reality the one from whom God knows that he will be faithful.

I said: This is correct, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said in Sahih Bukhari:

Actions are judged by their endings. It was said that Iblis worshipped God for eighty thousand years, and was given leadership and a treasury in Paradise by enticement, just as the hypocrites were given the testimony that there is no god but God on the tips of their tongues, and just as Balaam was given the Greatest Name on the tip of his tongue, so he was in his leadership and arrogance was entrenched in his soul. Ibn Abbas said: He saw himself as having superiority over the angels because of what he had, so he said: I am better than him, and for this reason God the Almighty said: What prevented you from prostrating to that which I created with My hands? Were you arrogant or were you among the exalted? That is, you were arrogant and you had no arrogance, and I did not act arrogantly when I created him with My hands and arrogance was mine! So he said: And he was among the disbelievers. His original creation was from the fire of glory, and for this reason he swore by glory and said: Then by Your glory, I will mislead them all. So glory made him arrogant until he saw superiority over Adam, peace be upon him. And on the authority of Abu Salih, he said: The angels were created from the light of glory and Iblis was created from the fire of glory.

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

Ninth: Our scholars - may God have mercy on them - said: If God the Almighty manifests miracles and supernatural events through his hands, who is not a prophet, this does not indicate his guardianship, contrary to some Sufis and Rafidis who said: This indicates that he is a saint, because if he were not a saint, God would not have manifested through his hands what He manifested. Our evidence is that knowing that one of us is a saint of God the Almighty is not valid except after knowing that he will die as a believer, and if it is not known that he will die as a believer, we cannot be certain that he is a saint of God the Almighty, because a saint of God the Almighty is one whom God the Almighty knows will not come to life except with faith. Since we agreed that we cannot be certain that this man will come to life with faith, we know that this does not indicate his sainthood of God. They said: We do not prevent God from informing some of His saints of his good end and the conclusion of his work and other things with him, as stated by Sheikh Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari and others. Al-Tabari believed that God Almighty wanted, through the story of Iblis, to rebuke those like him among the children of Adam, namely the Jews who disbelieved in Muhammad, peace be upon him, despite their knowledge of his prophethood and despite the antiquity of God's blessings upon them and their ancestors.

Tenth: There is a difference of opinion as to whether Iblis was a disbeliever before or not. It was said: No, and that Iblis was the first to disbelieve. It was said: There were a people of disbelievers before him, and they were the jinn, and they were the ones who were on earth. There is also a difference of opinion as to whether Iblis disbelieved out of ignorance or stubbornness, according to two opinions among the people of Sunnah. There is no disagreement that he had knowledge of God before his disbelief. So whoever said that he disbelieved out of ignorance said: He was stripped of knowledge when he disbelieved. And whoever said that he disbelieved out of stubbornness said: He disbelieved while still having knowledge. Ibn Atiyyah said: Disbelief out of stubbornness while still having knowledge is unlikely, except that in my opinion it is permissible and not impossible, with God letting down whomever He wills.

This is a great honor from God Almighty to Adam, with which He bestowed upon his descendants, as He informed us that He Almighty commanded the angels to prostrate to Adam. This is also indicated by many hadiths, including the hadith of intercession mentioned above, and the hadith of Moses, peace be upon him: My Lord, show me Adam, who brought us and himself out of Paradise. So when he met him, he said: You are Adam, whom God created with His hand and breathed into him of His spirit, and His angels prostrated to him. And he mentioned the hadith as will come, God willing. Ibn Jarir said: Abu Kurayb told us, Uthman bin Saeed told us, Bishr bin Ammarah told us on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Iblis was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, who were created from the fire of the poisonous winds from among the angels, and his name was Al-Harith, and he was a treasurer of the treasurers of Paradise. He said: And all the angels were created from light other than this tribe. He said: And the jinn who were mentioned in the Qur'an were created from a flame of fire, which is the tongue of fire in which its edge is when it is ignited. He said: And man was created from clay, and the first to inhabit the earth were the jinn, and they corrupted it, and shed blood, and killed one another. He said: So God sent Iblis to them with an army of angels, and they are this tribe called the jinn, and Iblis and those with him killed them until he caught up with them on the islands of the seas and the edges of the mountains. When Iblis did that, he became deceived and said: I have done something that no one else has done. He said: So God saw that from his heart, but the angels who were with him did not see it, so God said to the angels who were With him: I am going to place a vicegerent on earth. The angels said: Will You place on it someone who will cause corruption and shed blood as the jinn caused corruption and shed blood, and You have only sent us against them for that purpose? Then God the Most High said: I know what you do not know. He said: I have seen in the heart of Iblis what you have not seen, of his arrogance and conceit. He said: Then he ordered the soil of Adam to be taken up, so God created Adam from sticky clay, and sticky, viscous, solid clay is from moldy, stinking black mud. It was moldy black mud after the soil, so He created Adam from it with His hand. He said: So he remained forty nights as a lying body, and Iblis would come to him and strike him with his foot, so he would make a clanging sound, and this is the saying of God the Most High: From clay like pottery. He says like something that has been split apart and is not solid. He said: Then it enters his mouth and exits from his anus, and exits from his mouth, then he says: You are nothing for the clanging and for nothing I was created, and if I am given power over you, I will destroy you, and if you are given power over me, I will disobey you. He said: So when God breathed his soul into him, the breath came from the front of his head, so nothing of it would flow in his body except that it became flesh and blood. When the breath reached He looked at his body and was pleased with what he saw of his body, so he went to get up but could not, so it is the saying of God Almighty: And man is ever hasty, he said, impatient, he has no patience for ease or hardship. He said: Then when the breath was blown into his body, he sneezed and said: Praise be to God, Lord of the worlds, by God's inspiration, so God said to him: May God have mercy on you, O Adam. He said: Then God Almighty said to the angels who were with Satan specifically, not to the angels who are in the heavens. Prostrate to Adam, so they all prostrated except Iblis, who refused and was arrogant because of the arrogance and conceit that had occurred to him, so he said: I will not prostrate to him while I am better than him, older in age and stronger in creation. You created me from fire and created him from clay, saying that fire is stronger than clay. He said: So when Iblis refused to prostrate, God made him despair, meaning He made him despair of all good and made him a cursed devil as a punishment for his disobedience. Then He taught Adam all the names, and they are these names that people know: human, beast, earth, plain, sea, mountain, donkey and similar nations and others. Then He presented these names to those angels, meaning the angels who were with Iblis who were created from the fire of poison, and He said to them: Inform Me of the names of these, meaning He says, Inform Me of the names of these, if you are truthful, if you know, I have not made a vicegerent on earth. He said: So when the angels knew God's anger towards them for what they spoke of of the knowledge of the unseen that no one else knows, of which they have no knowledge, "they said: Glory be to You," glorifying God from being No one knows the unseen except Him. We turn to You. We have no knowledge except what You have taught us, disowning them from knowing the unseen except what You have taught us, just as You have taught Adam. He said, O Adam, inform them of their names. He said, He informed them of their names. "So when he had informed them of their names, He said, 'Did I not tell you,' 'O angels in particular, 'Indeed, I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth,' and no one else knows. 'And I know what you reveal,' he said, and what you conceal. He said, "I know the secret as I know the open," meaning what Iblis concealed in himself out of arrogance and conceit. This is a strange context and there are things in it that are questionable and would take too long to discuss. This chain of transmission to Ibn Abbas is narrated by a famous interpretation. Al-Suddi said in his interpretation on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When God finished creating what He loved, He rose above the Throne. Then he made Iblis the king of the lowest heaven, and he was from a tribe of angels called the jinn, and they were called the jinn because they were the treasurers of Paradise, and Iblis was a treasurer with his kingdom, so arrogance entered his heart and he said, God has not given me this except to distinguish me from the angels, so when that arrogance entered his soul, God revealed that to him, so God said to the angels, "I am going to place a successor on earth." They said, Our Lord, what will that successor be? He said: He will have offspring who will corrupt the earth and envy each other and kill each other. They said: Will You place therein one who will cause corruption therein and shed blood, while we glorify You with praise and sanctify You? He said: Indeed, I know that which you do not know. That is, regarding the affair of Satan. So God sent Gabriel to the earth to bring him some clay from it. The earth said: I seek refuge in God from You lest You diminish me or disgrace me. So he returned and did not take anything, and said: O Lord, it sought refuge in You, so grant it refuge. So He sent Michael, and it sought refuge from him, so He granted it refuge. So he returned and said as Gabriel said. Then He sent the Angel of Death, and it sought refuge from him, and he said: And I seek refuge in God or I return, and I did not carry out his command. So he took from the face of the earth and mixed it, and did not take from one place. He took from red, white, and black soil, and for this reason the children of Adam came out different. So he ascended with it and soaked the soil until it became sticky clay, and sticky is that which sticks together. Then He said to the angels: "Indeed, I am going to create a human being from clay. So when I have proportioned him, And I breathed into him of My spirit, so fall down to him in prostration." So God created him with His hand so that Satan would not be arrogant towards him, so that he would say to him, You are arrogant about what I have done with My hands, and I am not arrogant towards him by creating him as a human being. So he was a body of clay forty years, the length of a Friday. The angels passed by him and were terrified by him when they saw him, and the most terrified of them was Satan. He would pass by him and strike him, and the body would make a sound like pottery, making a clanging sound. That is when he would say, From clay like pottery, saying, For a matter I have created. And it entered his mouth and exited from his anus, and he said to the angels, "Do not be afraid of this, for your Lord is steadfast, and this is hollow. If I have power over it, I will destroy it." So when the time came when God Almighty wanted to breathe the spirit into him, the angels said, When I breathe into him of My spirit, then prostrate to him. So when He breathed the spirit into him and the spirit entered his head, he sneezed, and the angels said, Say, 'Praise be to God.' So he said, Praise be to God. So God said to him, May God have mercy on you, your Lord. So when the spirit entered his eyes, he looked at the fruits of the earth. Paradise, and when the spirit entered his body, he desired food, so he jumped before the spirit reached his feet, in haste to the fruits of Paradise. That is when God Almighty says, Man was created in haste. So all the angels prostrated together except Iblis, who refused to be with those who prostrated. He refused and was arrogant and was among the disbelievers. God said to him: What prevented you from prostrating when I commanded you to what I created with My hands? He said, "I am better than him. I would not prostrate to a human being whom You created from clay." God said to him, Then get down from it, for it is not for you meaning it is not appropriate for you "to be arrogant therein. So get out, for you are among the debased." Debased means humiliation. He said, And He taught Adam the names - all of them. Then He showed creation to the angels and said, Inform Me of the names of these, if you should be truthful. That the children of Adam would corrupt the earth and shed blood, they said, "Glory be to You! We have no knowledge except what You have taught us. Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise." God said, O Adam! Inform them of their names. And when he had informed them of their names, He said, Did I not tell you that I know the unseen of the heavens and the earth, and I know what you reveal and what you conceal? He said, Will You place therein one who causes corruption therein? This is what they revealed. And I know what you reveal and what you conceal, meaning what Satan concealed in his soul of arrogance. This chain of transmission to these Companions is well-known in Al-Suddi's Tafsir, and it contains many Isra'iliyyat, so perhaps some of them are inserted and not from the words of the Companions, or that they were taken from some books. The advanced, and God knows best. Al-Hakim narrates in his Mustadrak with this same chain of transmission and says things and says according to Al-Bukhari's conditions.

The point is that when God the Most High ordered the angels to prostrate to Adam, Iblis entered into their address because even though he was not of their race, he had resembled them and had imitated their actions, so he entered into their address and was blamed for disobeying the order. We will elaborate on the issue, God willing, when He says: "Except Iblis. He was of the jinn and disobeyed the command of his Lord." Therefore, Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Khallad on the authority of Ata' on the authority of Tawus on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Iblis was named Azazel before he committed the sin, and he was one of the inhabitants of the earth. He was one of the most diligent angels and the most knowledgeable of them, so that led him to arrogance, and he was from a tribe they called jinn. In a narration on the authority of Khallad on the authority of Ata' on the authority of Tawus or Mujahid on the authority of Ibn Abbas or someone else, something similar. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Saeed ibn Sulayman told us, Ibad told us, meaning Ibn al-Awwam, on the authority of Sufyan ibn Husayn on the authority of Ya'la ibn Muslim on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Iblis's name was Azazel, and he was one of the most noble angels of those with... The four wings, then Iblis after that, and Sanid said, on the authority of Hajjaj on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ibn Abbas said: Iblis was one of the noblest of the angels and the most honorable of them in tribe, and he was the keeper of Paradise, and he had the authority of the lowest heaven, and he had the authority of the earth, and thus Ad-Dahhak and others narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas equally. And Salih, the client of Al-Tawamah, said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Indeed, among the angels is a tribe called the jinn: and Iblis was among them, and he ruled what is between the heaven and the earth, so he disobeyed, so God transformed him into a cursed devil, narrated by Ibn Jarir, and Qatada said on the authority of Saad bin Al-Musayyab: Iblis was the chief of the angels of the lowest heaven, and Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad bin Bashar told us, Adi bin Abi Adi told us on the authority of Awf on the authority of Al-Hasan, he said: Iblis was never among the angels for the blink of an eye, and he is the origin of the jinn just as Adam is the origin of mankind, and this chain of transmission is authentic on the authority of Al-Hasan, and thus Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said equally. Shahr bin Hawshab said: Iblis was one of the jinn who were expelled by the angels, so some of the angels captured him and took him to heaven. Narrated by Ibn

Jarir. Sanid bin Dawud said: Hisham told us, Abd al-Rahman bin Yahya told us, on the authority of Musa bin Numayr and Uthman bin Saeed bin Kamil, on the authority of Saad bin Masoud, who said: The angels were fighting the jinn, and Iblis was taken captive while he was young, so he was with the angels worshipping with them. When they were ordered to prostrate to Adam, they prostrated, but Iblis refused. That is why God the Almighty said: Except Iblis, he was of the jinn. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad bin al-Qazzaz told us, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Sharik, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: God created a creation and said: Prostrate to Adam. They said: We will not do so, so God sent fire upon them and burned them. Then He created another creation and said: I am going to create a human being from clay. Prostrate to Adam. They refused, so God sent fire upon them and burned them. Then He created these and said: Prostrate to Adam. They said: Yes. Iblis was among those who refused to prostrate to Adam. This is strange, and its chain of transmission is hardly sound, as it contains an unknown man, and the likes of him cannot be used as evidence. And God knows best. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Saeed Al-Ashja told us: Abu Usama told us: Salih bin Hayyan told us: Abdullah bin Buraidah said: The Almighty's statement: And he was among the disbelievers is among those who refused, so the fire burned them. Abu Jaafar, may God be pleased with him, said on the authority of Al-Rabi' on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah: And he was among the disbelievers means among the disobedient. Al-Suddi said: And he was among the disbelievers is those whom God had not created on that day, but they would be after that. Muhammad bin Ka'b Al-Qurazi said: God began the creation of Iblis upon disbelief and misguidance, and he did the work of the angels, so God made him what He had created upon, upon disbelief. God Almighty said: And he was among the disbelievers. Qatada said regarding the Almighty's statement: And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam,' so obedience to God and prostration to Adam was, God honored Adam by having His angels prostrate to him. Some people said that this was a prostration of greeting, peace, and honor, as God Almighty said: "And he raised his parents to the throne, and they fell down before him in prostration. And he said, 'O my father, this is the interpretation of my vision of before.'" My Lord made it a right. This was permissible in the past nations, but it was abrogated in our religion. Muadh said: I came to Ash-Sham and saw them prostrating to their bishops and scholars, so you, O Messenger of God, are more deserving of prostration. He said: No, if I were to command a human being to prostrate to a human being, I would have commanded a woman to prostrate to her husband because of the greatness of his right over her. Al-Razi preferred this view, and some of them said that prostration was to God and Adam was a qiblah in it, as God the Almighty said: Establish prayer at the decline of the sun. There is a problem with this analogy, and it is more apparent that the first view is more appropriate. Prostration to Adam is an act of honor, respect, and peace, and it is an act of obedience to God the Almighty because it is compliance with His command. Al-Razi strengthened it in his interpretation and weakened the other two views, which are that it was made a qiblah, since no honor is apparent in it, and the other is that what is meant by prostration is submission, not bowing and placing the forehead on the ground, which is weak, as he said. Qatada said about God the Almighty's statement: "So they prostrated, except Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers." The enemy of God, Iblis, envied Adam, peace be upon him. Peace be upon him, what he gave of dignity, and he said: I am fire and this is clay, and the beginning of sins was arrogance, the enemy of God was arrogant to prostrate to Adam, peace be upon him, I said, and it has been established in the Sahih, He who has in his heart the weight of a mustard seed of arrogance will not enter Paradise, and in Iblis there was arrogance, disbelief, and stubbornness that necessitated his expulsion and banishment from the side of mercy and the presence of the Holy One, some of the Arabizers said, and he was among the disbelievers, meaning he became among the disbelievers because of his refusal, as he said, So he was among the drowned, and he said, So you will be among the wrongdoers, and the poet said:

In a deserted wilderness, the mounts, like the sad cat, were laying their eggs.

That is, it has become. Ibn Furak said: Its meaning is that he was among the disbelievers in the knowledge of God, and Al-Qurtubi preferred it. He mentioned here an issue and said: Our scholars said that whoever God manifests through his hands who is not a prophet, miracles and supernatural events, then that does not indicate his guardianship, contrary to some of the Sufis and Rafidis, this is his wording. Then he provided evidence for what he said: That we do not confirm that this supernatural event occurred through his hands that he will meet God with faith, and he does not confirm that for himself, meaning the saint who confirms that for him in the same matter. I said: Some of them provided evidence that the supernatural event may be at the hands of someone other than the saint, rather it may be at the hands of the wicked and the disbeliever as well, based on what was proven from Ibn Sayyad that he said: It is the smoke when the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, hid for him, So await the Day when the sky will bring forth a visible smoke, and based on what was issued from him that he would fill the road when he became angry until Abdullah bin Omar struck him, and based on what was proven in the hadiths about the Antichrist, based on what will be at his hands of the many supernatural events, that he will command the sky to rain and it will rain, and the earth to grow and it will grow, and it will follow him. The treasures of the earth are like dragonflies, and that he kills that young man and then revives him, and other terrifying matters. Yunus bin Abdul A'la Al-Sadfi said: I said to Al-Shafi'i: Al-Layth bin Sa'd used to say: If you see a man walking on water and flying in the air, do not be deceived by him until you compare his matter to the Book and the Sunnah. Al-Shafi'i said: Al-Layth, may God have mercy on him, was short. Rather, if you see a man walking on water and flying in the air, do not be deceived by him until you compare his matter to the Book and the Sunnah. Al-Razi and others have narrated two opinions of the scholars: Is the command to prostrate to Adam specific to the angels of the earth or general to the angels of the heavens and the earth? A group preferred both opinions, and the apparent meaning of the noble verse is generality: So the angels prostrated, all of them together, except Iblis. These are four aspects that strengthen the generality, and God knows best.

34- ٣/ is related to an omitted word, the meaning of which is: And remember when we said. Abu Ubaidah said that ٣/ is redundant, but it is weak. We have already discussed the angels and Adam. The meaning of prostration in Arabic is: humility and submission. Its ultimate purpose is to place the face on the ground. Ibn Faris said: He prostrated means to humble himself, and whoever prostrates has been humbled. Isjad means to continue looking. Abu Omar said: He prostrated means to lower his head. In this verse there is a great virtue for Adam, peace be upon him, as God made His angels prostrate to him. It was said that the prostration was to God and not to Adam, but rather they were facing him when prostrating, and there is no excuse for this, as prostration to humans may be permissible in some laws according to what interests require. This verse indicates that prostration was for Adam, as well as the other verse, I mean His statement: So when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] spirit, then fall down to him in prostration. And God the Almighty said: And he raised his parents upon the throne and they fell down before him in prostration. So its prohibition for anyone other than God in the law of our Prophet Muhammad (peace be upon him) does not necessarily mean that it is the same in all other laws. The meaning of prostration here is placing the forehead on the ground, and this is what the majority of scholars have said. Some people have said: It is merely humility and submission. There has been a dispute over whether the angels prostrated to Adam before or after teaching him the names. Al-Baq'a'i has discussed this at length in his interpretation. The context clearly indicates that the teaching took place, followed by the command to prostrate, followed by his being settled in Paradise, then his being expelled from it and settled on the earth. His statement: Except Iblis is a connected exception because he was from the angels according to what the majority of scholars have said. Shahr ibn Hawshab and some of the scholars of the principles of jurisprudence have said: He was from the jinn who were on the earth. So the exception in this case is disconnected. They provided evidence for this with the words of God the Almighty: They do not disobey God in what He commands them and do what they are commanded and His words: "Except Iblis. He was of the jinn" and the jinn are not angels. The first ones responded that it is not impossible for Iblis to be excluded from the group of angels, because God had previously known of his misery as justice from Him. He will not be questioned about what he does and there is no fire in his creation nor the composition of lust in him when He was angry with him that would prevent him from being one of the angels. Also, assuming that, it is not impossible for the exception to be connected, giving precedence to the angels, who are thousands in number, over Iblis, who is one individual among them. The meaning of refused is that he refused to do what he was commanded to do. Arrogance is to be proud of oneself. It has been proven in the Sahih from him, may God bless him and grant him peace, that Arrogance is rejecting the truth and belittling people. In another narration, ghams with a silent sad "and he was of the disbelievers" meaning of their kind. It was said: If it is here in the sense of became. Ibn Furak said: It is a mistake that is refuted by the fundamentals. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas who said: Prostration was for Adam and obedience was for God. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Al-Hasan who said: They prostrated as an honor from God with which He honored Adam. Ibn Asakir narrated from Ibrahim Al-Muzani who said: God made Adam like the Kaaba. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya, Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Al-Anbari narrated from Ibn Abbas who said: Iblis's name was Azazel, and he was one of the noble angels with four wings, then he became hopeless later. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from him who said: He was called Iblis because God made him hopeless of all good, meaning he despaired of it. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Al-Anbari narrated from him who said: Before Iblis committed the sin, his name was Azazel from the angels, and he was one of the inhabitants of the earth, and he was one of the most diligent angels and the most knowledgeable of them, so that led him to arrogance, and he was from a tribe called Jinn. Ibn Al-Mundhir and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Al-Shu'ab from him who said: Iblis was one of the treasurers of Paradise, and he managed the affairs of the lowest heaven. Muhammad ibn Nasr narrated on the authority of Anas that he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God commanded Adam to prostrate, so he prostrated. Then He said: Paradise is for you and for whoever of your descendants prostrates. And He commanded Iblis to prostrate, but he refused to prostrate. Then He said: Hell is for you and for whoever of your descendants refuses to prostrate." Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His statement: and he was among the disbelievers, that he said: God made him a disbeliever who was unable to believe. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurtubi that he said: God began the creation of Iblis in disbelief and misguidance, and he did the work of the angels, so He made him what his creation began with, which was disbelief. God said: and he was among the disbelievers.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

34. And the Almighty's saying: And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam.' Abu Ja'far read (to the angels, prostrate) with a damma on the ta' next to the alif of isjdū. He also read, He said, 'My Lord, judge with truth.' 112-Al-Anbiya' with a damma on the ba'. Grammarians considered it very weak and attributed it to a mistake in it. They differed as to which of the angels this address was. Some of them said: with those who were inhabitants of the earth. The most correct opinion is that it was with all the angels, based on the Almighty's statement: Then the angels prostrated, all of them together 30-Al-Hijr. His statement: Prostrate has two opinions: The most correct opinion is that the prostration was for Adam in reality, and it included the meaning of obedience to God Almighty by complying with His command, and that was a prostration of glorification and greeting, not a prostration of worship, like the prostration of Joseph's brothers to him in the Almighty's statement: And they fell down before him in prostration 100-Yusuf. It did not involve placing the face on the ground, but rather bowing, and when Islam came, it nullified that with the greeting of peace.

It was said: The meaning of his saying, Prostrate to Adam is to Adam as a qiblah, and prostration is to God Almighty, just as the Kaaba was made a qiblah for prayer and prayer is to God Almighty.

So they prostrated themselves meaning: the angels except Iblis. His name in Syriac was Azazel, and in Arabic: Al-Harith. When he disobeyed, his name and image were changed and it was said: Iblis, because he despaired of the mercy of God Almighty, meaning he despaired.

They differed about it. Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with him and most of the commentators said: Iblis was one of the angels. Al-Hasan said: He was one of the jinn and not one of the angels, because God the Almighty said: "Except Iblis. He was one of the jinn and disobeyed the command of his Lord" Al-Kahf 50. He is the origin of the jinn just as Adam is the origin of mankind. He was created from fire and the angels were created from light, and because he had offspring and the angels do not have offspring. The first is more correct because the address of prostration was with the angels, and His saying: He was one of the jinn means one of the angels who are the guardians of Paradise. Saeed bin Jubair said: One of those who work in Paradise. He said: A group of angels who make the jewelry of the people of Paradise. It was said: A group of angels were created from fire and were called jinn because they are hidden from the eyes, and Iblis was one of them. The evidence for this is the Almighty's saying: And they made a relationship between him and the jinn 158-Al-Isafaat, which is their saying: The angels are the daughters of God, and when God brought him out from the angels, He gave him offspring.

His saying: He refused means he refrained and did not prostrate, and was arrogant means he was too arrogant to prostrate to Adam, and was means he became one of the disbelievers. Most of the commentators said: He was, in God's foreknowledge, one of the disbelievers for whom misery was due.

I am Abu Bakr Muhammad ibn Abd al-Samad al-Turabi. I am Ibn al-Hakim Abu al-Fadl Muhammad ibn al-Husayn al-Haddadi. I am Abu Yazid Muhammad ibn Yahya ibn Khalid. I am Ishaq ibn Ibrahim al-Hanthali. I am Jarir, Waki' and Abu Mu'awiyah, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu

Salih, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "When the son of Adam recites a verse of prostration and prostrates, Satan withdraws, weeping and saying: Woe to him! The son of Adam was commanded to prostrate, and he prostrated, so Paradise is his. I was commanded to prostrate, but I disobeyed, so Hell is mine."

Tafsir al-Baidawi

34- And when We said to the angels, 'Prostrate to Adam,' when He informed them of their names and taught them what they did not know, He commanded them to prostrate to him, acknowledging his grace, fulfilling his right, and apologizing for what they said about him. It was said: He commanded them to do so before He perfected his creation, as the Almighty said: And when I have proportioned him and breathed into him of My [created] soul, then fall down to him in prostration, as a test for them and a demonstration of His grace. The conjunction is the conjunction of the adverb to the previous adverb if you make it an implied noun, otherwise it is conjunction with what is estimated to be an agent in it on the previous sentence, rather the entire story is conjunction to the other story, and it is a fourth blessing that He counted for them. And prostration is originally humiliation with submission, as the poet said:

You see the hills in it prostrating to the hooves

Another said:

And they said to him, Prostrate to Layla, so he prostrated.

It means the camel when it lowers its head. In the Sharia: placing the forehead with the intention of worship, and what is commanded is either the legal meaning, so the one to whom prostration is in reality is God the Most High, and He made Adam a qiblah for their prostration to magnify his status, or a reason for its obligation, so it is as if God the Most High, when He created him so that he would be a model for all creations, indeed all existences, and a copy of what is in the spiritual and physical world and a means for the angels to fulfill what was destined for them of perfections, and a connection to the appearance of what they differed in of ranks and degrees, He commanded them to prostrate in humility to what they saw in it of His great power and dazzling signs, and in gratitude for what He bestowed upon them through Him, so the lam in it is like the lam in the saying of Hassan, may God be pleased with him:

Was he not the first to pray towards your Qiblah and the most knowledgeable person about the Qur'an and Sunnah?

Or in the Almighty's saying: Establish prayer at the decline of the sun.

As for the linguistic meaning, which is humility to Adam as a greeting and reverence for him, like the prostration of Joseph's brothers to him, or submission and obedience by striving to obtain what is connected to their livelihood and through which their perfection is completed. The discussion about the one commanded to prostrate is all the angels, or a group of them, as mentioned above.

"So they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant." He refused what he was commanded to do, out of arrogance that he would not take him as a link in the worship of his Lord, or glorify him and greet him, or serve him and strive for what is good for him and right for him. Refusal means abstention by choice. Indefiniteness means that a man sees himself as greater than others. Arrogance means seeking that by satiation.

And he was among the disbelievers meaning in the knowledge of God the Most High, or he became one of them by his revulsion at God's command to him to prostrate to Adam, believing that he was better than him, and it is not appropriate for the better to be ordered to submit to the lesser and to be excessive in it as indicated by his saying: I am better than him in response to his saying: What prevented you from prostrating to that which I created with My hands? Were you arrogant or were you among the exalted?

Not by abandoning the obligation alone. The verse indicates that Adam, peace be upon him, is better than the angels who were ordered to prostrate to him, even if only in one way, and that Iblis was among the angels, otherwise their command would not have included him and it is not correct to exclude him from them, and the saying of God the Most High: Except Iblis, he was from the jinn does not contradict that because it is permissible to say that he was from the jinn in fact and from the angels in kind, and because Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, narrated: That among the angels there is a type that reproduces and they are called the jinn and among them is Iblis. And for those who claim that he was not one of the angels, he can say: He was a jinn who grew up among the angels, and was deceived by thousands of them, so they overcame him, or the jinn were also commanded with the angels, but he dispensed with mentioning the angels instead of mentioning them, because if he knows that the great ones are commanded to humble themselves before someone and to seek intercession through him, he knows that the lesser ones are also commanded to do so. The pronoun in they prostrated refers to the two tribes, as if he said, so those commanded to prostrate prostrated except Iblis, and that among the angels there are those who are not infallible, even though infallibility is the majority among them, just as there are infallible among humans, but infallibility is the majority among them. Perhaps there is a type of angels that does not differ from the devils in themselves, but differs from them in accidents and attributes, like the righteous and the wicked among humans and jinn, which includes them. And Iblis was of this type, as Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with them both said. Therefore, it is correct for him to change from his state and descend from his place, as indicated by the words of God the Almighty: "Except Iblis. He was one of the jinn and disobeyed the command of his Lord." It should not be said: How is that correct when the angels were created from light and the jinn from fire? Because Aisha may God be pleased with her narrated that the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: The angels were created from light, and the jinn were created from a smokeless flame of fire. This is like a metaphor for what we mentioned, for what is meant by light is the luminous substance and so is fire, except that its light is cloudy and immersed in smoke, and it is forbidden because of the excessive heat and burning that accompanies it. So when it becomes refined and purified, it is pure light, and when it reverses, it returns to its original state as a young tree and continues to increase until its light is extinguished and pure smoke is avoided. This is more likely to be correct and more appropriate for reconciling the texts, and knowledge is with God the Almighty.

And when We said to the angels, "Prostrate to Adam," they prostrated, except for Iblis. He refused and was arrogant and became of the disbelievers.

Among the benefits of the verse is the ugliness of arrogance and that it may lead its owner to disbelief, and the urging to obey his command and not delve into his secret, and that the command is for obligation, and that the one whose condition God Almighty knows will die in disbelief is the disbeliever in reality, since the point is in the endings even if he is by virtue of the condition a believer, which is the fulfillment attributed to our Sheikh Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari, may God Almighty have mercy on him.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:35

And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And We said, O Adam, dwell, you confirming the hidden pronoun to connect it and your wife Eve with the extension, and He created her from his left rib in Paradise and eat from it eating in abundance spacious with no stones in it (where you both wish. But do not approach this tree) by eating from it, which is wheat or grapes or other than them lest you be so you become among the wrongdoers the disobedient. [The most likely opinion according to Sheikh Mahmoud Al-Rankousi is that the Paradise they were in was on Earth and is not the eternal Paradise, Dar Al-Hadith]

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: In this verse there is clear evidence of the correctness of the statement of those who said: Iblis was expelled from Paradise after he was too arrogant to prostrate to Adam, and Adam inhabited it before Iblis descended to Earth. Do you not hear God, the Most High, say: "And We said, O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers. * But Satan caused them to slip therefrom and removed them from that in which they were." It has become clear that Iblis only caused them to slip away from the obedience of God after he cursed and showed arrogance, because the prostration of the angels to Adam was after the soul was breathed into him, and at that time Iblis refused to prostrate to him, and when he refused to do so, the curse was placed upon him. Also: Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: That the enemy of God, Satan, swore by the glory of God to mislead Adam and his descendants and his wife, except for His sincere servants among them, after God cursed him, and after he was expelled from Paradise, and before he descended to Earth. And God taught Adam all the names.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, who said: When God finished with Iblis and his rebuke, and he refused to do anything but disobey and cursed him, then expelled him from Paradise, He turned to Adam and taught him all the names, and said: O Adam, inform them of their names until His saying: Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise.

Then the people of interpretation differed about the state in which Adam's wife was created, and the time in which she was made a dwelling for him.

Ibn Abbas said: Musa bin Harun narrated to me, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Then Satan was expelled from Paradise when he was cursed, and Adam was settled in Paradise. He used to walk in it like a wild beast, with no wife to live with. Then he slept and woke up, and behold, at his head was a woman sitting, whom God had created from his rib. He asked her: Who are you? She said: A woman. He said: Why were you created? She said: She lives with me. The angels, looking at what he had learned, said to him: What is her name, O Adam? He said: Eve. They said: Why was she called Eve? He said: Because she was created from a living thing. Then God said to him: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish. So this report indicates that Eve was created after Adam had settled in Paradise, and she was made a dwelling for him.

Others said that it was created before Adam settled in Paradise. Those who said that were:

Ibn Humayd narrated: Salamah narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, who said: When God finished rebuking Satan, He turned to Adam and taught him all the names and said: O Adam, inform them of their names until His saying: Indeed, it is You who is the Knowing, the Wise. He said: Then He gave Adam the Sunnah, as we have heard from the People of the Book, the People of the Torah, and others from the people of knowledge, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas and others. Then He took a rib from his left side and filled it with flesh. Adam was asleep and did not wake up from his sleep until God created from that rib his wife Eve, and made her a woman for him to live with. When He removed the Sunnah from him and he woke up from his sleep, he saw her beside him, so he said, as they claim - and God knows best - My flesh and blood and my wife, and he lived with her. When God, the Blessed and Exalted, married him and made for him a place of rest from Himself, He said to him in the morning: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers.

Abu Jaafar said: The word wife is used for a man's wife. Wife with the letter ha is more common in Arabic than without it. Wife without the letter ha is said to be a dialect of Azd Shanu'ah. As for the word husband about which there is no difference among the Arabs, he is the woman's husband.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And eat from it in abundance wherever you wish.

Abu Jaafar said: As for raghad, it is a spacious and comfortable life that does not concern its owner. It is said: someone is raghad, if he attains a spacious and comfortable life, as Imru' al-Qais ibn Hajar said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:35

And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."

While one sees him soft, safe from events, living a comfortable life

And as Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and eat from it abundantly, he said: Abundance is bliss.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us: Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: abundantly, he said: They will not be held accountable.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Ibn Hamid told us: Hakam told us, on the authority of Ansaba, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abd al-Rahman, on the authority of al-Qasim ibn Abi Bazza, on the authority of Mujahid: And they will eat from it abundantly, meaning they will not be held accountable.

And it was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And eat from it in abundance wherever you wish. He said: Abundance is the abundance of living.

The meaning of the verse is: And We said, O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise, and eat from Paradise ample provision, pleasant to live wherever you wish.

As Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said: Yazid bin Zari' told us, he said: Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, his saying: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish. Then the trial that was written for creation was written for Adam, as He had tested creation before him, that God, may He be glorified and praised, made lawful for him what was in Paradise, that he could eat from it in abundance as he wished, except for one tree that he was forbidden from, and it was presented to him in it, so the trial continued with him until he fell into that which he was forbidden from.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And do not approach this tree.

Abu Jaafar said: "A tree in the speech of the Arabs is everything that stands on a stalk. From this is the saying of God Almighty: 'And the star and the tree prostrate themselves' (al-Rahman 55:6). By the star, he means what grows from the earth of plants, and by the tree, what stands on a stalk."

Then the people of interpretation differed about the specific tree whose fruit Adam was forbidden to eat. Some of them said: It is the ear of corn. Those who said that mentioned: Muhammad bin Ismail Al-Ahmasi told me, he said: Abdul Hamid Al-Hamani told us, on the authority of Al-Nadr, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The tree whose fruit Adam was forbidden to eat is the ear of corn.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me, Hisham told us, and Ibn Wakee' told us, he said: Imran bin Utaybah told us, all on the authority of Hisin, on the authority of Abu Malik, regarding his statement: And do not approach this tree, he said: It is the ear of corn.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Ibn Mahdi told us, and Ahmad bin Ishaq al-Ahwazi told us: Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us. They both said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Hisin, on the authority of Abu Malik, the same.

Abu Kuraib and Ibn Wakee' told us: Ibn Idris told us: I heard my father, on the authority of Atiyyah, regarding his statement: And do not approach this tree, he said: The ear of corn.

Bishr bin Muadh told us: Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, who said: The tree from which Adam was forbidden was the ear of corn.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Muslim bin Ibrahim told us: Al-Qasim told us: A man from Banu Tamim told me that Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu Al-Jild asking him about the tree from which Adam ate, and the tree at which he repented. Abu Al-Jild wrote to him: You asked me about the tree from which Adam was forbidden, which is the spikenard, and you asked me about the tree at which Adam repented, which is the olive tree.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of a man of knowledge, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he used to say: The tree from which Adam was forbidden was wheat.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Ibn Uyaynah and Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of al-Hasan ibn Amara, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Amr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The tree that God forbade Adam and his wife from was the ear of corn.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of some of the people of Yemen, on the authority of Wahn ibn Munabbih al-Yamani, that he used to say: It is wheat, but a grain of it in Paradise is like the kidney of a cow, softer than butter and sweeter than honey. And the people of the Torah say: It is wheat.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us: Muhammad ibn Ishaq told me, on the authority of Yaqub ibn Utbah: He was told that it is the tree that the angels rub against for immortality.

Ibn Wakee' told us: Ibn Yaman told us, on the authority of Jaber bin Yazid bin Rafa'a, on the authority of Muharrib bin Dithar, who said: It is the spike.

Ibn Wakee' told us: Abu Usamah told us, on the authority of Yazid bin Ibrahim, on the authority of Al-Hasan, who said: It is the ear of corn that God made a provision for His children in this world.

Abu Jaafar said: Others said: It is the vine. Mention those who said that.

Ibn Wakee' told us: Abdullah told us, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of someone who told him, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is the vine.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: And do not approach this tree, he said: It is the vine, and the Jews claim that it is wheat.

Ibn Wakee' told us: Amr ibn Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, who said: The tree is the vine.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Hisham told us, on the authority of Mughirah, on the authority of Al-Sha'bi, on the authority of Ja'dah bin Hubayrah, who said: It is the grapes in His statement: And do not approach this tree.

Ibn Wakee' told us: My father told me, on the authority of Khallad al-Saffar, on the authority of Bayan, on the authority of al-Sha'bi, on the authority of Ja'dah ibn Hubayrah: And do not approach this tree, he said: the vine.

Ibn Al-Muthanna told us: Al-Hussein told us: Khalid Al-Wasiti told us, on the authority of Bayan, on the authority of Al-Sha'bi, on the authority of Ja'dah bin Hubayrah: And do not approach this tree, he said: the vine.

Ibn Hamid and Ibn Wakee' told us: Jarir told us, on the authority of Mughira, on the authority of Al-Sha'bi, on the authority of Ja'dah ibn Hubayrah, who said: The tree from which Adam was forbidden was the wine tree.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us: Ibad bin Al-Awam told us: Sufyan bin Hussein told us, on the authority of Ya'la bin Muslim, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr, regarding his statement, And do not approach this tree, he said: the vine.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us: Abu Ahmad told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, who said: Grapes.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Qais, he said: Grapes.

Others said: It is the fig tree. Those who said that mentioned: Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: A fig tree. Abu Ja'far said: The statement in that, according to us, is that God, the Most High, informed His servants that Adam and his wife ate from the tree that their Lord forbade them from eating from, so they committed the sin that He forbade them from committing by eating what they ate from it, after God, the Most High, explained to them the exact tree that He forbade them from eating from, and pointed to it to them by saying: And do not approach this tree. God, the Most High, did not provide His servants addressed by the Qur'an with an indication of which trees of Paradise He forbade Adam from approaching, by stating it by name, nor by indicating it. If God had been pleased with the knowledge of which of those, He would not have failed to provide His servants with an indication of it by which they would arrive at knowing its exact nature, so that they would obey Him with their knowledge of it, as He did with everything that He was pleased with by knowledge of it.

The correct thing to say is that God, the Most High, forbade Adam and his wife from eating from a specific tree of the trees of Paradise, to the exclusion of the other trees. They disobeyed God's prohibition and ate from it as God, the Most High, described them. We do not know which tree it was specifically, because God did not provide His servants with evidence for that in the Qur'an or in the authentic Sunnah. How can that come about? It has been said that it was the tree of barley, and it has been said that it was the grape tree, and it has been said that it was the fig tree. It is possible that it was one of them. This is knowledge that, if known, does not benefit a scholar in his knowledge, and if an ignorant person is ignorant of it, his ignorance of it does not harm him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers.

Abu Jaafar said: The Arab scholars differed in their interpretation of his statement: And do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers.

Some of the Kufi grammarians said: The interpretation of that is: And do not approach this tree, for if you approach it, you will be among the wrongdoers. So the second is in the position of the answer to the condition. And the answer to the condition works on its first, like when you say: If you stand, I will stand, so the second is made jussive by the jussive of the first. Likewise, his saying: Then you will be, when the fa' occurred in the position of the condition of the first, it was made accusative by it, and it was made like ki in its accusative of future verbs, because they must be future, since the origin of the condition was future.

Some of the grammarians of Basra said: The interpretation of that is, let neither of you come near this tree, lest you both be among the wrongdoers. However, he claimed that it is not permissible to make an explicit an with la, but rather it is implied and must be used, so that the speech is correct by conjoining a noun, which is an, with the noun. Just as it is not permissible in their saying: Perhaps he will do, "Perhaps the action." Nor in your saying: He was not able to do, "He was not able to do."

This second statement is invalidated by the consensus of all of them on the error of the one who says: I am pleased that you stand up, O man, meaning I am pleased that you stand up. Likewise, according to this school of thought, it must be an error for the one who says: Do not stand up, if the meaning is: Do not stand up. And in the consensus of all of them on the validity of the one who says: Do not stand up, and the error of the one who says: I am pleased that you stand up, meaning I am pleased that you stand up, there is clear evidence of the error of the claimant's claim that with la in his statement: And do not approach this tree, is the pronoun that and the correctness of the other statement.

In His saying, Then you will be among the wrongdoers, there are two interpretations:

One of them is that fatakuna is intended to be in conjunction with his statement and do not approach, so its interpretation then would be: and do not approach this tree and do not be among the wrongdoers. So fatakuna then would be in the sense of the jussive mood, jussive with what and do not approach was jussive with, just as the speaker says: do not speak to Amr and do not harm him, as Imru' al-Qais said.

I said to him: Aim and do not strain it, lest you be struck by the other side of the quail and slip.

So he decided to leave you with what he decided to do, do not exhaust him, as if he repeated the prohibition.

The second is that then you will be among the wrongdoers, meaning the answer to the prohibition. Its interpretation then would be: Do not approach this tree, for if you approach it, you will be among the wrongdoers. Just as you say: Do not insult Umar, lest he insult you, as a retribution.

Then fatakuna is in the accusative case, since it is a conjunction that is not in its proper form, since in do not come close there is a conjunction that acts on it, and it is not appropriate to repeat it in fatakuna, so it is in the accusative case as I explained at the beginning of this question.

As for the interpretation of his statement, Then you will be among the wrongdoers, he means by it that you will be among those who transgress against what I have permitted and made permissible for them. Rather, what he meant by that is that if you approach this tree, you will be on the path of those who transgress My limits, disobey My command, and make permissible what I have forbidden, because the wrongdoers are allies of one another, and God is the ally of the righteous. The root of injustice in the speech of the Arabs is to put something in the wrong place, and from that is the saying of Nabigha of Banu Dhubyān:

Except that I hide it for no reason, and distance is like a pool that covers the skin of the oppressed.

So he made the land oppressed, because the one who dug the well in it dug in the wrong place. So he made it oppressed, because the hole was placed in it in the wrong place. And from that is what Ibn Qami'ah said in describing the rain:

The valleys were oppressed, and the rivers were swollen with greed, and the sperm became pure for him, far from the quarry.

And his injustice to him: his coming at the wrong time, and his pouring out in the wrong place. And from this: the man wronged his camel, which is his slaughtering it without a reason. And that, among the Arabs, is placing the slaughter in the wrong place.

Injustice may branch out into meanings that would take a long time to list in this book, and we will explain them in their proper places when we reach them, God willing. The origin of all of this is what we described of putting something in the wrong place.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty said: And We said, 'O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers.'

It contains thirteen issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And We said, 'O Adam, dwell.' There is no dispute that God Almighty expelled Iblis when he disbelieved and banished him from Paradise. After expelling him, He said to Adam: Dwell, meaning, remain in residence and make it a dwelling place, which is a place of dwelling. And dwelling in it means dwelling in a dwelling place. And dwelling is the fire. The poet said:

I have settled and painted

And dwelling: is everything that is calmed by. The knife is well-known, it was named thus because it calms the movement of the slaughtered animal, and from it comes the poor, because of his little movement and handling. And the inhabitants of the ship are Arabic, because they calm it from disturbance.

Second: In his saying: Dwell, there is a warning about leaving, because dwelling is not ownership, and for this reason some of the gnostics said: Dwelling is for a period of time and then it ends, so their entry into Paradise was an entry of dwelling, not an entry of residence.

I said: If this is the case, then it is an indication of what the majority of scholars say: If someone houses a man in a house that he owns, he does not own it by living in it, and he has the right to evict him if the period of housing expires. Al-Sha'bi used to say: If a man says, My house is yours to live in until you die, then it is his for his life and death. If he says, This is my house, live in it until you die, then it returns to its owner when he dies. And similar to the life-span residence, except that the disagreement over life-span is stronger than over living. We will discuss life-span in Huw, God willing. Al-Harbi said: I heard Ibn al-A'rabi say: The Arabs did not differ that these things are the property of their owners and their benefits are for the one for whom life-span, slavery, poverty, destitution, gift, nakedness, living, and being without a home are given. This is the argument of Malik and his companions that he does not own anything from the gifts except the benefits without slavery, and this is the saying of Al-Layth bin Sa'd, Al-Qasim bin Muhammad, and Yazid bin Qusayt.

The life estate: is that you house a man in a house for you for the duration of your life or his life. The same applies to the ruqba. It is to say: If I die before me, it will return to me, and if I die before you, it will be yours. It is from the word muraqabah. Muraqabah means that each of them watches the death of the other, and for this reason they differed in permitting or prohibiting it. Abu Yusuf and al-Shafi'i permitted it, and it is as if it were a will according to them. Malik and the Kufians prohibited it, because each of them intends compensation that he does not know if he will get, and each of them wishes for the death of the other. There are also two hadiths on this topic regarding permission and prohibition, mentioned by Ibn Majah in his Sunan. The first was narrated by Jabir ibn Abdullah, who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'The life estate is permissible for the one who lives in it, and the ruqba is permissible for the one who watches over it.'" In this hadith, there is equality between the life estate and the ruqba in ruling. The second was narrated by Ibn Umar, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

No neck, whoever has a slave, it is his life and his death. He said: The neck is when he says to another: From me and from you, death. So his saying: No neck is a prohibition indicating prevention, and his saying: Whoever has a slave, it is his indicates permissibility. Al-Nasa'i also included them both. It was mentioned on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: The life and the neck are the same. Ibn al-Mundhir said: It was proven that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

A life estate is permissible for the one who lives in it, and a slave estate is permissible for the one who is assigned a guardianship over it. Ibn al-Mundhir authenticated the hadith, and it is an argument for those who say that a life estate and a slave estate are the same. It was narrated on the authority of Ali, and al-Thawri and Ahmad said the same, and that it never returns to the first, and Ishaq said the same. Tawus said: Whoever assigns a guardianship over something, it is a way of inheritance.

Impoverishment is derived from the word faqarah back pain. My camel impoverished you. Its vertebrae made you proud so that you could ride it. The game impoverished you if you were able to sever it so that you could shoot it. The same is true of ikhbal. It is said: I lent someone a camel to ride or a horse to raid on. Zuhair said:

If you ask for money, they will be fooled, if you ask for it, they will give, and if you are given it, they will be expensive.

Al-Manha: the gift. Al-Manha: the gift of milk.

Al-Maniha: the she-camel or sheep that a man gives to another to milk and then returns it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The loan must be repaid, the gift must be returned, the debt must be settled, and the guarantor must pay.

Narrated by Abu Umamah, and included by Al-Tirmidhi, Al-Darqutni, and others, and it is authentic.

And to lend a stallion: to lend a stallion. Someone asked for a stallion to mate with his camels, so he let him mate with him. It is also said: your stallion has loaned me, meaning your stallion has honored me so that he may mate with my camels. The stallion has mated with the female camel, meaning he has sat on her. And the stallion has mated with his female camel. It is said: a female camel that has reached the age where the stallion has mated with her.

Third: The Almighty's saying: You and your wife. You is an emphasis on the pronoun in the verb, and similar to it is Then go, you and your Lord. It is not permissible to say I live and your wife, or I go and your Lord, except in cases of poetic necessity, as he said:

I said, when you come, the flowers will sway like the sheep of the angels, raking the sand.

So, the word flower is connected to the pronoun in came to and the pronoun is not emphasized. It is permissible in other than the Qur'an, but at a distance: Get up and Zaid.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: And your wife. The language of the Qur'an is zawj without the ha, and we have already discussed it. It was mentioned in Sahih Muslim: Zawjhu, Abdullah bin Muslimah bin Qanab told us, Hammad bin Salamah told us, on the authority of Thabit al-Banani, on the authority of Anas:

"The Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was with one of his wives when a man passed by him and he called him. He came and said: 'O so-and-so, this is my wife so-and-so.' He said: 'O Messenger of God, who did I think I did not think you were?' The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: 'The devil runs through a person as blood runs through him.'" And the husband of his mother (peace be upon him) was Eve (peace be upon her), and he was the first to call her that when she was created from his rib without Adam (peace be upon him) realizing it. Had he known that, no man would have been kind to his wife. When he woke up, he asked him: Who is this? He said: Woman. It was said: What is her name? He said: Eve. It was said: Why was she called woman? He said: Because she was taken from man. It was said: Why was she called Eve? He said: Because she was created from a living being. It was narrated that the angels asked him about that to test his knowledge, and that they said to him: Do you love her, O Adam? He said: Yes. They said to Eve: Do you love him, O Eve? She said: No, and in her heart was many times more love for him than in his heart. They said: If a woman were to be truthful in her love for her husband, Eve would be truthful. Ibn Masoud and Ibn Abbas said: When Adam was made to dwell in Paradise, he walked in it feeling lonely. When he slept, Eve was created from his short rib on his left side so that he could live with her and be comforted by her. When he woke up, he saw her and said: Who are you?! She said: A woman was created from your rib so that she could live with me. This is the meaning of the Almighty's saying: It is He who created you from one soul and created from it its mate that he might dwell in security with her. The scholars said: This is why the woman was crooked, because she was created from a crooked part, which is the rib. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"Woman was created from a rib - in another narration: And the most crooked part of the rib is its top - it will not be straight for you in one way. If you enjoy her, you will enjoy her even though she is crooked. If you try to straighten her, you will break her, and breaking her means divorcing her." And the poet said:

It is the crooked rib, you cannot straighten it unless straightening the ribs is their breaking Weakness and power combined in the young man. Isn't it strange how weak and powerful she is?

From this chapter, scholars have deduced the inheritance of the hermaphrodite who has the same characteristics as men and women, such as a beard, breasts, and urethra, but lacks organs. If his ribs are less than those of a woman, he is given the share of a man - this was narrated on the authority of Ali, may God be pleased with him - because Eve was created from one of his ribs. This will be explained in the chapter on inheritance, God willing.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: Paradise. Paradise means the garden, and we have already discussed it. No attention should be paid to what the Mu'tazila and Qadariyya have said, that it was not in the Garden of Eternity, but rather in a Garden in the land of Eden. They based their innovation on the fact that if it were the Garden of Eternity, Satan would not have reached it, because God says: There is no idle talk therein nor sinning. And He says: They will hear therein no idle talk nor lying. And He says: They will hear therein no idle talk nor sinning. And that its people will not leave it, because He says: And they will not be expelled from it. Also, the Garden of Eternity is the abode of holiness, sanctified from sins and transgressions as a purification for it. Satan spoke idle talk therein and lied, and Adam and Eve were expelled from it because of their disobedience.

They said: How can it be permissible for Adam, with his status with God and his perfect intellect, to ask for the tree of eternity while he is in the abode of holiness and the kingdom that does not decay? The answer is: God Almighty defined Paradise with the definite article, and whoever says: I ask God for Paradise, does not understand from it in the acquaintance of creation anything but asking for the Paradise of eternity. It is not impossible in the mind that Satan entered Paradise to deceive Adam, and Moses met Adam, peace be upon them, and Moses said to him:

You made your offspring miserable and expelled them from Paradise. So the definite article was inserted to indicate that it is the well-known Paradise of Eternity, but Adam did not deny that. If it were something else, it would have been rejected by Moses. So when Adam remained silent about what Moses had decided, it was true that the house from which God Almighty expelled them was different from the house to which they were expelled. As for the verses they used as evidence, God only made it in it after its people entered it on the Day of Resurrection. It is not impossible that it is the house of eternity for whomever God wants to make eternal in it, and he who has been destined to perish may be expelled from it. The people of interpretation have agreed that the angels enter Paradise with the people of Paradise and leave it, and its keys were in the hand of Satan and then were taken away from him after the sin. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, entered it on the Night of the Isra and then left it and informed about what was in it and that it is truly the eternal Paradise. As for their saying that Paradise is the abode of holiness and God the Most High purified it from sins, this is ignorance on their part, because God the Most High commanded the Children of Israel to enter the holy land, which is Ash-Sham. The people of the laws have agreed that God the Most High sanctified it and sins, disbelief and lying were seen in it, and its sanctification is not something that prevents sins in it, and the same is true of the abode of holiness. Abu Al-Hasan Ibn Battaal said: Some of the sheikhs have narrated that the people of the Sunnah have agreed that the eternal Paradise is the one from which Adam, peace be upon him, descended, so there is no meaning to the saying of those who disagreed with them. And their saying: How could it be permissible for Adam, with his perfect mind, to ask for the tree of eternity when it is the abode of eternity? It is reflected back to them and it is said: How could it be permissible for Adam, with his perfect mind, to ask for the tree of eternity in the abode of annihilation! This is not permissible for anyone with the slightest bit of intelligence, so how about Adam, who is the most intelligent of creation, according to what Abu Umamah said, as will come.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: And eat from it in abundance wherever you wish. The majority of people read raghad with a fatha on the ghayn. Al-Nakha'i and Ibn Waththab read it with a sukoon on it. And raghad is a comfortable, easy life without any hardship. He said:

While you see a person soft, safe from events, living a comfortable life

It is said: their life was comfortable and comfortable with the letter ghain with a damma or a kasra. And the people became fertile and lived in comfort. It is accusative as an adjective for a deleted source. And where and where and where and where and how and how and how are all languages, he mentioned them.

Copper and others.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: And do not approach this tree meaning do not approach it by eating, because it was permitted. Ibn al-Arabi said: I heard al-Shashi in the assembly of al-Nadr ibn Shumayl say:

If it is said do not approach with the fat-ha on the ra', it means do not wear it by action, and if it is with the damma on the ra', it means do not come near it. In al-Sahah: To approach something means to draw near. To approach it with the kasra means to bring it near, meaning to approach it. To approach closer means to draw near - like I wrote, I write, I write - if you walk to the water and there is only one night between you and it, and the noun is proximity. Al-Asma'i said: I asked a Bedouin: What is proximity? He said: Walking at night to drink tomorrow. Ibn 'Atiyyah said: Some of the experts said: When God Almighty wanted to prohibit eating from the tree, He prohibited it with a word that implies eating and what the Arabs call for, which is proximity. Ibn 'Atiyyah said: This is a clear example of blocking the means. Some of the masters of meaning said that his saying: And do not come near indicates that he will fall into sin and leave Paradise, and that his dwelling therein will not last, because the one who is immortal will not be prohibited from anything, nor will he be commanded or forbidden. The evidence for this is the saying of God Almighty: Indeed, I will place upon the earth a vicegerent, which indicates that he will leave it.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: This tree. The indefinite noun is described by what contains the definite article and nothing else, such as when you say: I passed by this man, this woman, and this tree. Ibn Muhaysat read: This tree with a ya', which is the original, because the ha' in this is a substitute for a ya', and therefore what precedes it was broken. There is no feminine ha' in speech that is preceded by a kasra other than it, and that is because its original is a ya'.

Al-Shajara, al-Shajara and al-Shirah are three languages. Al-Shajara is read with a kasra on the shin. Al-Shajara and al-Shajara: what is on a stalk of the plant of the earth. A land of shrubs and trees means a land with many trees, and a valley of shrubs, but it is not said: a valley of trees. The singular of al-Shajara is a tree, and only a few letters have come from the plural in this example: tree and shajara, and reed and reed, and tarfa and tarfa, and halfa and halfa. Al-Asma'i used to say about one of the halfa: halfa, with a kasra on the lam, an alliance with its sisters. Sibawayh said: Al-Shajara is singular and plural, and that is al-Qasba, al-Tarfa and al-Halafa. Al-Mashjara: a place of trees. And a land of trees, and this land is more tree-rich than this, meaning more trees, as al-Jawhari said.

Ninth: The people of interpretation differed in identifying this tree that he was forbidden from and from which he ate. Ibn Masoud, Ibn Abbas, Saeed bin Jubair, and Ja'dah bin Hubayrah said: It is the vine, and that is why wine was forbidden to us. Ibn Abbas, Abu Malik, and Qatada also said: It is the ear of corn, and its seed is like the kidney of a cow, sweeter than honey and softer than butter, said Wahb bin Munabbih. When God accepted Adam's repentance, He made it food for his children. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of some of the Companions: It is the fig tree, and Saeed narrated the same on the authority of Qatada, and that is why it is expressed in the vision as regret for the one who ate it because of Adam's regret for eating it, mentioned by Al-Suhayli. Ibn Atiyyah said: There is no hadith to support this identification, but rather the correct thing is to believe that God Almighty forbade Adam from a tree, but he disobeyed it and disobeyed in eating from it. Al-Qushayri Abu Nasr said: And my father, Imam, may God have mercy on him, used to say: It is known in general that it was the tree of trial.

Tenth: They differed on how he ate from it with the threat associated with proximity, which is the Almighty's saying: So you will be among the wrongdoers. Some people said: He ate from something other than what was indicated, so they did not interpret the prohibition to apply to all of its kind, as if Satan deceived him by taking the apparent meaning. Ibn al-Arabi said: It is the first sin that God was disobeyed with according to this statement. He said: And in it is evidence that whoever swears not to eat from this bread and then eats from its kind has broken his oath. The investigation of the schools of thought on it is that most scholars said: There is no breaking of the oath in it. Malik and his companions said: If the basis of the oath requires specifying what is indicated, he does not break his oath by eating its kind, but if the basis of the oath or its reason or intention requires the kind, it is carried on that and he breaks his oath by eating something other than it. The story of Adam, peace be upon him, was carried on this, as he was prohibited from a tree that was specified for him and its kind was intended, so the statement was carried on the wording and not the meaning.

Our scholars have differed on a branch of this, which is that if he swore not to eat this wheat and then ate bread from it, according to two opinions, he said in the book: He has broken his oath, because this is how it is eaten. Ibn Al-Mawaz said: There is nothing wrong with him, because he did not eat wheat, but rather bread, so he took into account the name and description. If he said in his oath, I will not eat from this wheat, he would have broken his oath by eating bread made from it. There is a difference of opinion regarding the food he bought with its price and regarding what it grew. Others said: They interpreted the prohibition as a recommendation. Ibn Al-Arabi said: Although this was a matter of the principles of jurisprudence, it was dropped here, because of His statement: So you will be among the wrongdoers, so He coupled the prohibition with the threat, and likewise His statement, the Most High: So let him not expel you from Paradise and you will be miserable. Ibn Al-Musayyab said: Adam ate only after Eve gave him wine to drink, so he became drunk and was out of his mind. Yazid bin Qusayt said the same, and they swore by God that he did not eat from this tree while he was sane. Ibn al-Arabi said: This is invalid in terms of transmission and reason. As for transmission, it is not valid in any way. God Almighty described the wine of Paradise, saying: There is no ghoul therein. As for reason, it is because the prophets after prophethood are infallible from anything that leads to failure to fulfill obligations and committing crimes.

I said: Some scholars have deduced the prophethood of Adam, peace be upon him, before he was settled in Paradise from the Almighty's saying: So when he informed them of their names, so God Almighty commanded him to inform the angels of what they did not have of the knowledge of God Almighty. And it was said: He ate it forgetfully, and it is possible that they forgot the threat.

And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."

I said: This is correct, because God Almighty has definitely and definitely informed us of this in His Book, saying: And We had already made a covenant with Adam before, but he forgot, and We found on his part no firm will. However, since the prophets, peace be upon them, are required to be cautious and vigilant due to their vast knowledge and high status, which is not required of others, his being distracted from reminding them of the prohibition was a waste, and he became a disobedient, i.e., a transgressor. Abu Umamah said: If the dreams of the children of Adam, from the time God created creation until the Day of Resurrection, were put on one side of the scale and Adam's dream was put on the other side, they would outweigh them, and God Almighty has said: And We found on his part no firm will.

I said: This statement of Abu Umamah is general for all the children of Adam. It may be possible that this is specific to our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, for he was the most patient and intelligent of people. It may also be possible that the meaning is if the dreams of the children of Adam were not among the prophets. And God knows best.

I said: The first statement is also good, as we thought that what was meant was the object and what was meant was the type, like the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he took gold and silk and said: These two are forbidden to the males of my nation. And he said in another report:

These two are the destroyers of my nation. He meant the species, not the entity.

Eleventh: It is said that the first person to eat from the tree was Eve, after Satan tempted her - as will be explained - and that his first words were with her because she was a whisper from the pillow, and she was the first temptation that entered men from women, so he said: What prevented you from this tree was nothing but the tree of immortality, because he knew from them that they loved immortality, so he came to them from where they loved.

Love of something blinds and deafens - so when Eve said to Adam, deny it to her and mention the covenant, he insisted with Eve and Eve insisted with Adam, until she said: I eat before you so that if something happens to me you are safe, so she ate and it did not harm her, so she came to Adam and said: Eat, for I have eaten and it did not harm me, so he ate and their private parts became apparent to them and they were subject to the ruling of sin, because God the Most High said: And do not approach this tree He includes them in the prohibition, therefore the punishment did not come down on them until the prohibited thing was found in both of them, and this issue was hidden from Adam, and for this reason some scholars said: If someone says to his two wives or his two female slaves: If you enter the house then you are divorced or free, the divorce and emancipation do not occur by the entry of one of them. Our scholars differed on that with three opinions, Ibn al-Qasim said: They are not divorced or emancipated except by their coming together, based on this principle and taking what is required by the absolute wording. And Sahnun said the same. Ibn Al-Qasim said again: They are both divorced and freed together, with the presence of consummation by one of them, because some of the oath is a breach, as if he swore not to eat these two loaves of bread, then he breaks his oath if one of them eats a bite of them. Ashhab said: The one who has consummated the marriage alone is freed and divorced, because the consummation of each of them is a condition for her divorce or emancipation. Ibn Al-Arabi said: This is far-fetched, because some of the conditions are not a condition by consensus.

I said: The first is correct, and if the prohibition is conditional on two actions, then the opposition cannot be realized except by them, because if you say: Do not enter the house, and one of them enters, you will not find opposition from them, because the statement of God the Most High: And do not approach this tree is a prohibition to them, lest you be among the wrongdoers is its response, so they will not be among the wrongdoers until they do it. So when she ate, nothing happened to her, because what is prohibited is what is found complete. This meaning was hidden from Adam, so he became greedy and forgot this ruling, and it is the meaning of the statement of God the Most High: And We had already made a covenant with Adam before, but he forgot. It was said: He forgot His statement: This is an enemy to you and to your wife, so let him not expel you from Paradise, and you become miserable. And God knows best.

Twelfth: The scholars differed on this matter as to whether the prophets - may God's prayers be upon them all - committed minor sins for which they would be held accountable and rebuked or not - after agreeing that they are infallible from major sins and from every vice that contains shame and deficiency, unanimously according to Judge Abu Bakr, and according to Professor Abu Ishaq that this is required by the evidence of the miracle, and according to the Mu'tazila that this is required by the evidence of reason according to their principles - so Al-Tabari and other jurists, theologians and hadith scholars said: Minor sins occur from them. This is in contrast to the Rafidah, who said: They are infallible from all of that, and they argued with what occurred of that in the revelation and what was proven from their disavowal of that in the hadith, and this is clear and there is no concealment in it. A group of jurists from the followers of Malik, Abu Hanifa and Al-Shafi'i said: They are infallible from all minor sins, just as they are infallible from all major sins, because we were ordered to follow them in their actions, their effects and their conduct in an absolute manner without any evidence. If we permitted minor sins for them, it would not be possible to follow their example, because not every action of theirs has a distinct purpose of seeking closeness to God, permission, prohibition or disobedience. It is not correct for a person to be ordered to obey an order that may be a disobedience, especially for those who believe that action should be given precedence over speech if they conflict among the scholars of the principles of jurisprudence. Professor Abu Ishaq Al-Asfarayni said: They differed regarding minor sins, and the majority are of the opinion that this is not permissible for them, and some of them were the first to permit it, and there is no basis for this statement. Some of the later scholars who adopted the first view said: What should be said is that God Almighty informed of the occurrence of sins by some of them and attributed them to them and rebuked them for them, and they informed about them about themselves and disavowed them and feared them and repented, and all of that was mentioned in many places that do not accept interpretation as a whole, even if it accepts individual interpretations, and all of that does not detract from their positions, but rather those matters that occurred from them in a rare manner and by mistake and forgetfulness, or an interpretation that called for that, are good deeds in relation to others and bad deeds in relation to them, in relation to their positions and high status, since the minister may be held accountable for what the ruler is rewarded for, so they feared that in the situation of the Resurrection despite their knowledge of security, safety and peace. He said: This is the truth. Al-Junayd did well when he said: The good deeds of the righteous are the bad deeds of those brought near. They - may God's prayers be upon them - even though the texts testify to the occurrence of sins on their part, this does not detract from their positions nor does it detract from their ranks. Rather, He has taken care of them and chosen them, guided them, praised them, purified them, selected them and chosen them, may God's prayers and peace be upon them.

Thirteenth: The Almighty's saying: Then you will be among the wrongdoers. Injustice originally means putting something in the wrong place. And the wronged land is the land that was never dug and then was dug. Al-Nabigha said:

I stood there in the evening, not asking her questions, but she couldn't give me an answer, and there was no one in the quarter

Except for the graves, how clear they are, and the distance is like a basin for the oppressed.

This is called dark soil. The poet said:

So he became in the dust after turning away from life, and her injustice was returned to her

If a camel is slaughtered without any disease, then he has committed an injustice.

Darkness to the islands

It is said: He gave us a good drink of milk, if he gave them milk before it was ripe. And he wronged and spoiled it, if he gave them some of it to drink before it curdled and produced its butter. And the milk is wronged and spoiled. He said:

And she said: I have wronged you with my water-drawing. Is the injustice hidden from the oppressed?

A very unjust man. Injustice is polytheism. God Almighty said: Indeed, polytheism is a great injustice.

God the Almighty said: And eat from it abundantly. The letter nun was deleted from kula because it is an imperative, and the letter hamza was deleted due to frequent use. Its deletion is irregular. Sibawayh said: Some Arabs say: I will eat, and it is completed. It is said: I ate the food, eating and eating. The word aklah with the fat-ha means one time until you are full. The word aklah with the damma means a morsel. You say: I ate one morsel, meaning a morsel, which is also a loaf of bread. This thing is aklah lak, meaning food for you. Eating is also what is eaten. It is said: So-and-so is dhu akal, if he has a share of this world and ample provision. Akal is an adjective for a deleted verbal noun, meaning they ate abundantly. Ibn Kaysan said: It is permissible for it to be a verbal noun in the place of a state. Mujahid said: Akal means they are not held accountable. In the language, arghd means a lot that does not concern you. It is also said: arghd al-qawm if they find themselves in abundance and plenty. The meaning has already been mentioned. Where is built on the damma, because it differs from its sister adverbs in that it is not added, so it resembles before and after if they are singular then it is damma. Al-Kisa'i said: The language of Qais and the euphemism of damma, and the language of Tamim is the fatha. Al-Kisa'i said: Banu Asad lower it in the place of lowering, and lower it in the place of lowering. God the Most High said: We will gradually lead them on from where they do not know. And it is damma and fatha. And do not approach this tree The ha' of this is instead of the ya' of the original, because the original is this. Al-Nahas said: I do not know in Arabic a feminine ha' with a kasra before it except the ha' of this. Some Arabs say: Hata Hind, and some say: Haati Hind. Sibawayh narrated: This is Hind, with a sukoon on the ha'. Al-Kisa'i narrated from the Arabs: Do not approach this tree. And from Shibl ibn Abbad, he said: Ibn Kathir and Ibn Muhaisin did not establish the ha' in this throughout the Qur'an. The reading of the group is raghada with a fatha on the ghayn. It was narrated on the authority of Ban, Thabit and Al-Nakha'i that they both made the ghayn quiescent. Salamah narrated on the authority of Al-Farra' that he said: It is said: this one did and this one did, with the addition of a ya' after the dhal. And this one did, with the kasra of the dhal without adding a ya' or a ha'. And these two did. Hisham said: It is also said: tafa'alt. And he recited:

My friend, if it weren't for the inhabitant of the house, I would not have stayed in the house except as a wayfarer.

Ibn al-Anbari said: Ta' without dropping the ha' is like dhi without dropping the ha' from hadi, and like dha without dropping the ha' from hadi. Al-Farra' said: Whoever says hadi qamat does not drop the ha', because the noun cannot be on one dhal.

Fatakuna is in apposition to taqaraban, so the nun was deleted. Al-Jarmi claimed that the fa is the nasb, and both are permissible.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says, telling of what He honored Adam with: After He ordered the angels to prostrate to him, they prostrated except for Iblis, and that He permitted him Paradise to dwell wherever he wished and eat from it as much as he wished, in abundance, that is, in a spacious and good manner: Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr bin Mardawayh narrated from the hadith of Muhammad bin Isa Al-Damaghani, Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, from Mikail, from Laith, from Ibrahim Al-Taimi, from his father, from Abu Dharr, who said: I said, O Messenger of God, did you see that Adam was a prophet? He said: Yes, a prophet and a messenger, God spoke to him before - meaning clearly - and said: You and your wife dwell in Paradise. There is a difference of opinion about the Paradise that Adam was made to dwell in, is it in the heavens or on Earth? Most of them are of the first opinion. Al-Qurtubi narrated from the Mu'tazila and the Qadariyya the saying that it was on the earth. This will be confirmed in Surat Al-A'raf, God willing. The context of the verse requires that Eve was created before Adam entered Paradise. Muhammad ibn Ishaq stated this explicitly when he said: When God finished rebuking Satan, he turned to Adam and taught him all the names. He said: O Adam, tell them their names until His saying: Indeed, You are the Knowing, the Wise. He said: Then the Sunnah was cast upon Adam, as we have heard from the People of the Book, the People of the Torah, and others from the people of knowledge, from Ibn Abbas and others. Then he took a rib from his left side and filled its place with flesh. Adam was asleep and did not wake up from his sleep until God created from that rib his wife Eve, and made her a woman for him to dwell in. When the Sunnah was removed from him and he woke up from his sleep, he saw her beside him and said, as they claim, God knows best, my flesh and blood and my wife, so he settled in her. When God married him and made for him a dwelling place from Himself, He said to him beforehand: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise. And eat from it in abundance wherever you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers." It is said that the creation of Eve was after entering Paradise, as al-Suddi said in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra and on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: Satan was expelled from Paradise and Adam was settled in Paradise, so he walked in it in a state of slumber, and he had no wife to comfort him. Then he slept and woke up and at his head was a woman sitting whom God had created from his rib. He asked her: Who are you? She said: A woman. He said: Why were you created? She said: To comfort me. The angels said to him, looking at how much knowledge he had attained, What is her name, O Adam? He said: Eve. They said: Why was she called Eve? He said: She was created from a living thing. God said: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance wherever you wish.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:35

And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."

As for his saying: And do not approach this tree, it is a test from God Almighty and an examination of Adam. There is a difference of opinion as to what this tree is. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The tree that Adam, peace be upon him, was forbidden from is the vine.

This is what Saeed bin Jubair, Al-Suddi, Al-Sha'bi, Ja'dah bin Hubayrah, and Muhammad bin Qais said. Al-Suddi also said in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrah on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the Companions: And do not approach this tree, it is the vine. The Jews claim that it is wheat. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim said: Muhammad ibn Ismail ibn Samurah al-Ahmasi told us, Abu Yahya al-Hammani told us, al-Nadr Abu Umar al-Kharraz told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The tree from which Adam, peace be upon him, was forbidden is the ear of corn. Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn Uyyaynah and Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of al-Hasan ibn Amara, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Umar, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is the ear of corn. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said, on the authority of a man of Ikrimah, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is wheat. Ibn Jarir said: al-Muthanna ibn Ibrahim told me, Muslim ibn Ibrahim told us, al-Qasim told us, a man from Banu Tamim told me that Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu al-Jild asking him about the tree from which Adam ate and the tree at which Adam repented. Abu al-Jild wrote to him: You asked me about the tree from which Adam was forbidden, which is the ear of corn, and you asked me about the tree at which Adam repented, which is the olive tree. This is how al-Hasan al-Basri, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Atiyah al-Awfi, Abu Malik, Muharrir ibn Dithar, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Abi Layla, and Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of some of the people of Yemen on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih that he used to say it is wheat, but the grain of it in Paradise is like the kidney of a cow and softer than butter and sweeter than honey, and Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Hisin on the authority of Abu Malik, And do not approach this tree, he said the palm tree, and Ibn Jarir said on the authority of Mujahid, And do not approach this tree, he said the fig tree, and Qatada and Ibn Jurayj said the same, and Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, the tree was such that whoever ate from it would break his ablution, and there should not be a break in Paradise, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: 'Umar bin 'Abd al-Rahman bin Mihran told us, he said: I heard Wahb bin Munabbih say: When God settled Adam and his wife in Paradise and forbade him from eating from the tree, and it was a tree with branches branching out from each other, and it had fruit that the angels would eat for their immortality, and it is the tree that God forbade Adam and his wife from.

These are six sayings in interpreting this tree. Imam Abu Ja'far ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: The correct thing to say is that God Almighty forbade Adam and his wife from eating from a specific tree of the trees of Paradise, not from the rest of its trees, so they ate from it, and we do not know which tree it was specifically, because God did not provide evidence for His servants for that in the Qur'an or the authentic

Sunnah. It has been said: It was the tree of barley, and it has been said: It was the grape tree, and it has been said: It was the fig tree, and it is possible that it was one of them, and that is knowledge that if it is known, it does not benefit the scholar in his knowledge of it, and if an ignorant person is ignorant of it, his ignorance of it does not harm him, and God knows best. This is also what Al-Razi and others preferred in his interpretation, and this is correct. God Almighty's statement: So Satan caused them to slip from it It is correct that the pronoun in His statement from it refers to Paradise, so the meaning of the statement is as 'Asim ibn Bahdalah, who is the son of Abi Al-Najud, read: So he caused them to slip meaning he pushed them away. It is also correct that it refers to the closest of the two mentioned, which is the tree, so the meaning of the statement is as Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: So he caused them to slip meaning from before the slip. So on this basis, the meaning of the statement is: Then Satan caused them to slip from it meaning because of it, as God Almighty said: He turns away from it whoever is turned away meaning he turns away because of it whoever is turned away. That is why God Almighty said: Then He removed them from what they were in meaning of clothing, spacious home, pleasant provision and comfort. "And We said, 'Go down, some of you as enemies to others. And you will have upon the earth a place of settlement and provision for a time'" meaning a settlement, provisions and terms - for a time - meaning until a specific time and amount, then the Resurrection will take place. The commentators from the Salaf, such as al-Suddi with his chains of transmission, Abu al-Aaliyah, Wahb ibn Munabbih and others, mentioned here Israelite accounts about the story of the serpent and Satan, and how Satan entered Paradise and whispered to him. We will elaborate on that, God willing, in Surat al-A'raf, for there the story is simpler than it is here. And God is the Grantor of success. Ibn Abi Hatim said here: Ali ibn al-Hasan ibn Ishkab told us, Ali ibn Asim told us, on the authority of Sa'id ibn Abi 'Aruba, on the authority of Qatadah, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Ubayy ibn Ka'b, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God created Adam as a man. Long and hairy, like a date palm tree. When he tasted the tree, his clothing fell off him, and the first thing that appeared of him was his private parts. When he looked at his private parts, he began to struggle in Paradise, and a tree took hold of his hair, so he struggled with it. The Most Merciful called out to him: O Adam, do you flee from me? When he heard the words of the Most Merciful, he said: O Lord, no, but out of shyness. He said: Ja'far bin Ahmad bin Al-Hakam Al-Qurashi told me in the year two hundred and fifty-four, Sulayman bin Mansur bin Ammar told us, Ali bin Asim told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Ubayy bin Ka'b, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When Adam tasted of the tree, he fled, fleeing, and a tree caught his hair, so he was called: O Adam, are you fleeing from Me? He said: Rather, out of shyness from you. He said: O Adam, leave My vicinity, for by My glory, no one who disobeys Me shall live in it. And if I created the likes of you to fill the earth, and they disobeyed Me, I would make them dwell in the abode of the disobedient." This is a strange hadith, and in it there is an interruption, or rather a rupture, between Qatada and Ubayy bin Ka'b, may God be pleased with them. Al-Hakim said: Abu Bakr bin Baluyah told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ahmad bin Al-Nadr, on the authority of Mu'awiyah bin Amr, on the authority of Za'idah, on the authority of Ammar bin Abi Mu'awiyah Al-Bajali, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Adam was not made to dwell in Paradise except between the afternoon prayer and sunset. Then he said: It is authentic according to the conditions of the two sheikhs, but they did not include it. Abdul bin Hamid said in his interpretation: Ruh narrated to us from Hisham from Al-Hasan, who said: Adam stayed in Paradise for an hour of the day of that hour, one hundred and thirty years of the days of the world. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said, from Al-Rabi bin Anas, who said: Adam left Paradise at the ninth or tenth hour, so Adam brought out with him a branch from the trees of Paradise on his head, a crown from the trees of Paradise, which is a wreath of leaves from Paradise. Al-Suddi said: God the Almighty said: Descend from it, all of you, so they descended and Adam descended to India, and the Black Stone and a handful of leaves from Paradise descended with him, so he spread it in India and the tree of perfume grew, so the origin of the perfume that is brought from India is from the handful of leaves that Adam descended with, and Adam only took it out of grief for Paradise when he was expelled from it. Imran bin Uwaynah said, from Ata bin Al-Saib, from Saeed bin Jubair, from Ibn Abbas, who said: Adam descended from Paradise by rolling the land of India. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Zur'ah told us, Uthman ibn Abi Shaybah told us, Jarir told us, Ata' told us, Saeed told us, Ibn Abbas said: Adam, peace be upon him, descended to a land called Dahna, between Mecca and Taif. And Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: Adam descended in India, and Eve in Jeddah, and Satan in Dastamisan, miles from Basra, and the serpent descended in Isfahan. Narrated by Ibn Abi Hatim. Muhammad ibn Abi Hatim said: Muhammad ibn Ammar ibn Al-Harith told us, Muhammad ibn Sabeq told us, Umar ibn Abi Qais told us, on the authority of Al-Zubayr ibn Adi, on the authority of Ibn Umar, who said: Adam descended at Al-Safa and Eve at Al-Marwah. Raja bin Salamah said: Adam, peace be upon him, lowered his hands to his knees, bowing his head, and Iblis descended, interlacing his fingers and raising his head to the sky. Abdul Razzaq said: Muammar said: Aouf told me, on the authority of Qasama bin Zuhair, on the authority of Abu Musa, who said: When God sent Adam down from Paradise to Earth, He taught him how to make everything and provided him with fruits of Paradise. These fruits of yours are from the fruits of Paradise, except that some change and others do not change. Al-Zuhri said, on the authority of Abdul Rahman bin Harmaz Al-Araj, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, who said: The Messenger of God, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "The best day on which the sun has risen is Friday. On it Adam was created, on it he entered Paradise, and on it he was expelled from it." Narrated by Muslim and Al-Nasa'i. Al-Razi said: I know that in this verse there is a great threat against all sins from several aspects. The first is that whoever imagines what happened to Adam because of his committing this small mistake will be extremely afraid of sins. The poet said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:35

And We said, "O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers."

O you who look with the eyes of one asleep and observe the matter without seeing it

Sins lead to sins and you hope to reach the level of Paradise and attain the victory of the worshipper.

Did you forget your Lord when He brought Adam out of it into the world for one sin?

Ibn Al-Qasim said:

But we are the enemy's captives, so do you think we will return to our homelands and surrender?

Al-Razi said on the authority of Fath al-Mawsili that he said: We were a people from the people of Paradise, then Satan took us to the world, so we have nothing but worry and sadness until we return to the home from which we were expelled. If it is said: If the Paradise from which Adam was expelled was in heaven, as the majority of scholars say, then how was Satan able to enter Paradise, when he was expelled from there by a predestination, and the predestinationist does not contradict or prevent? The answer is: This is exactly what was used as evidence by those who say that the Paradise in which Adam was on earth, not in heaven, as we have explained in detail at the beginning of our book Al-Bidayah wa al-Nihayah. The majority responded with answers, one of which is: He was prevented from entering Paradise with honor, but as for theft and humiliation, he is not prevented. For this reason, some of them said: As it came in the Torah that he entered Paradise through the mouth of the snake. Some of them said: It is possible that he whispered to them while he was outside the gate of Paradise. Some of them said: It is possible that he whispered to them while he was on earth, and they were in heaven. This was mentioned by al-Zamakhshari and others. Al-Qurtubi mentioned here hadiths about snakes and killing them and explaining the ruling on that, and he did a good job and was useful.

Fath al-Qadir

35- Iskn means he took Paradise as a dwelling place, which is a place of dwelling. As for what some commentators said that in his saying: Iskn there is an indication of leaving because dwelling is not ownership, and this was taken from the saying of a group of scholars that whoever houses a man in his home does not own him thereby, and he has the right to evict him from it, it is a conventional meaning, and it is obligatory to take the Arabic meaning if the wording does not prove a legal reality. And you is an emphasis on the pronoun hidden in the verb so that it is correct to connect it, as it is established in the science of grammar that it is not permissible to connect it to the raised pronoun hidden except after confirming it with a separate one. And the connection may come rarely without emphasis, like the saying of the poet:

I said, as you approached, and the flowers swayed like the sheep of the angels, raking the sand.

And his saying: And your wife meaning Eve, and this is the eloquent language, wife without the ha, and it was mentioned a little as in Sahih Muslim from the hadith of Anas "that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was with one of his wives, and a man passed by him and he called him and said: O so-and-so, this is my wife so-and-so" the hadith, and from it the saying of the poet:

He who seeks to corrupt my wife is like one who seeks to win her over to a lion.

Raghdan with the opening of the voiced letter, and Al-Nakha'i and Ibn Wathab read it with the sukoon, and Raghd is the comfortable life that is free of effort, and it is accusative as an adjective for a deleted source. Hayt is built on the damma and there are many languages for it mentioned in Arabic books. And nearness is closeness. It says in Al-Sahah: The thing is near with the damma, it is near, and I approached it with the kasra, I approached it, I approached it, I approached it, like I wrote, I write: if you walk to the water and there is a night between you and it, and the noun is nearness. Al-Asma'i said: I said to a Bedouin: What is nearness? He said: Walking at night to come tomorrow. The prohibition of nearness in it blocks the means and cuts off the means, and that is why it was used instead of eating, and it is clear that the prohibition of nearness does not entail the prohibition of eating, because someone who is far from it may eat from the fruit of the tree if it is carried to it, so it is better to say: the prohibition of eating is derived from the situation. Tree: is that which has a stem from the plants of the earth and the singular is tree and it was read with a kasra on the shin and with a double ya from below instead of the jim. Ibn Muhaisin read this with a ya instead of the ha and it is the original. The scholars differed in the interpretation of this tree, it was said: it is the vine and it was said: the ear of corn, and it was said: the fig, and it was said: the wheat, and what was narrated from the companions and those after them in identifying it will come. His saying: Fatakuna is conjoined with Taqaraban in Al-Kashshaf, or it is accusative in response to the prohibition and it is more apparent. The origin of injustice is: putting something in the wrong place, and the oppressed land: is that which was never dug and then dug, and a man is oppressive: is extremely oppressive. What is meant here is Fatakuna from the oppressors to themselves by disobeying, and the speech of the scholars about the infallibility of the prophets and the differences in their schools of thought on that is recorded in its places, and Al-Razi discussed that at length in his interpretation in this place so let him refer to it because it is useful.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

35. The Almighty said: And We said, O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise. That is because Adam did not have anyone in Paradise who could be his equal, so he slept, so God created his wife Eve from a small part of his left side. She was called Eve because she was created from a living creature, God Almighty created her without Adam feeling it or experiencing any pain from it. If he had experienced any pain, no man would have ever sympathized with a woman. When he awoke from his sleep, he saw her sitting at his head like the best of God's creation, so he said to her: Who are you? Your wife said: God created me for you, so that you may dwell in me and I may dwell in you. And eat from it in abundance spacious and abundant wherever you wish how you wish, whenever you wish, and wherever you wish and do not approach this tree meaning to eat. Some scholars said: The prohibition was applied to a type of tree. Others said: On a specific tree, and they differed about that tree. Ibn Abbas, Muhammad ibn Ka'b and Muqatil said: It is the spike of wheat. Ibn Mas'ud said: It is the grape tree. Ibn Jurayj said: The fig tree. Qatada said: The tree of knowledge, and in it is everything. Ali, may God be pleased with him, said: The camphor tree. So you will be "so you will become" among the wrongdoers meaning: those who harm yourselves with disobedience. The root of injustice is putting something in the wrong place.

an answer to it. The tree is wheat, or the vine, or the fig, or a tree from which eating from it causes an infection. It is better not to specify without a definite reason, just as it was not specified in the verse due to the lack of dependence on what is intended. It was read with a kasra on the sheen, and taqariban with a kasra on the ta', and hadhi with a ya'.

35- And We said, O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise. Dwelling is from stillness because it is stability and a stay, and you is an emphasis with which He emphasized the hidden so that the conjunction would become with it, and He did not address them first to indicate that he is the intended one by the ruling and the conjunction is subordinate to him. And Paradise is the abode of reward, because the lam is for the covenant and there is no covenant other than it. And whoever claims that it was not created yet said that it was a garden that was in the land of Palestine, or between Persia and Kerman, which God Almighty created as a test for Adam, and he carried the descent to the transition from it to the land of India as in His Almighty saying: Go down to Egypt "and eat therefrom in abundance" spacious and luxurious, an attribute of a deleted source.

Wherever you wish means wherever you wish in Paradise. The matter was made easy for them, removing the burden, and the excuse for eating from the forbidden tree from among its trees is too great for the sake of limitation.

And do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers. There are exaggerations in this, linking the prohibition to proximity, which is one of the preliminaries to eating, exaggerating its prohibition and the obligation to avoid it, and drawing attention to the fact that proximity to something creates a desire and an inclination that takes hold of the heart and distracts it from what is required by reason and the Shari'ah, as it was narrated, Loving something blinds and deafens. So they should not hover around what God has forbidden them for fear that they will fall into it, and make it a reason for being among the wrongdoers who wronged themselves by committing sins, or by reducing their share by doing what detracts from dignity and bliss, because the fa indicates causality, whether it is used to connect with the prohibition or as

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:36

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Then Satan caused them to slip Iblis, that is, he made them go away. In another reading, {So he made them slip}, he removed them from it meaning Paradise by saying to them: Shall I guide you to the tree of eternity? And he swore to them by God that it was for them among the sincere advisors, so they ate from it. Then he brought them out of what they were in of bliss (and We said: Go down) to the earth, that is, you and what you contain of your offspring some of you some of your offspring are enemies to each other from the oppression of some of you by others and for you on the earth is a place of settlement a place of settlement and provision from what you enjoy of its plants for a time at the time of the expiration of your terms.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The readings differed in this. The majority of them read it as fa'azlahuhuma with a shaddah on the lām, meaning: he made them slip, from your saying a man slipped in his religion if he erred in it and made a mistake, so he did something he should not have done in it. And azaluhu ghayruhu if he caused him something that would increase his status in his religion or his worldly life. Therefore, God, the Most High, attributed to Iblis the expulsion of Adam and his wife from Paradise, and said: fa'azlahuhuma meaning Iblis from what they were in, because he was the one who caused them the sin for which God punished them by expelling them from Paradise.

Others read it: He removed them, meaning he removed something from something, meaning he moved it away from it.

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas in the interpretation of his saying: Then remove them, what:

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ibn Abbas said in his interpretation of the Almighty's statement: Then Satan caused them to slip, he said: He led them astray.

The more correct of the two readings is the reading of the one who reads fa-azlahu-huma, because God, the Most High, has informed us in the letter that follows it that Satan removed them from what they were in. This is the meaning of His statement fa-azlahu-huma.

There is no reason, since the meaning of removal is the meaning of removal and expulsion, to say: Then Satan removed them from it and removed them from what they were in, which would be like His statement: Then Satan removed them from what they were in. But the meaning is to say: Then Satan caused them to slip from the obedience of God, as God, the Most High, said: Then Satan caused them to slip, and the reciters read it as He caused them to slip by causing them to slip from Paradise.

If someone were to say to us: How did Satan lead Adam and his wife astray, so that their expulsion from Paradise was attributed to him?

It was said: Scholars have said things about this, and we will mention some of them:

It was narrated on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih regarding this matter:

Al-Hasan bin Yahya narrated to us, saying: Abd al-Razzaq informed us, saying: Umar bin Abd al-Rahman bin Muharrab informed us, saying: I heard Wahb bin Munabbih say: When God made Adam and his offspring or his wife inhabit the doubt of Abu Ja'far: and it is in the origin of his book and his offspring and he forbade him from the tree, and it was a tree whose branches were intertwined with each other, and it had fruit that the angels would eat for their immortality, and it is the fruit that God forbade Adam and his wife from. When Satan wanted to make them slip, he entered the belly of the snake. The snake had four legs, like a camel, the best creature that God had created. When the snake entered Paradise, Satan came out of its belly. He took from the tree that God had forbidden Adam and his wife to eat. He brought it to Eve and said: Look at this tree, how pleasant its smell is, how pleasant its taste is, and how beautiful its color is. Eve took it and ate from it. Then she went with it to Adam and said: Look at this tree, how pleasant its smell is, how pleasant its taste is, and how beautiful its color is. Adam ate from it, and their private parts became apparent to them. Adam entered the belly of the tree, and his Lord called out to him: O Adam, where are you? He said: I am this one, O Lord. He said: Will you not come out? He said: I am ashamed before You, O Lord. He said: Cursed is the ground from which you were created, a curse whose fruit will turn into thorns. He said: There was no tree in Paradise or on Earth that was better than the Talh and Sidr trees. Then He said: O Eve, you are the one who deceived My servant, for you do not bear a pregnancy except that you bear it unwillingly, and when you want to give birth to what is in your womb, you are on the verge of death many times. And He said to the serpent: You are the one into whose belly the cursed one entered until he deceived My servant. You are cursed with a curse that will cause your legs to move in your womb, and you will have no provision except dust. You are the enemy of the children of Adam and they are your enemies. Wherever you meet one of them, you seize his heel, and wherever he meets you, he smashes your head.

Umar said: It was said to Wahb: What did the angels eat? He said: God does what He wills.

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas something similar to this story:

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: When God Almighty said to Adam: "Dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance as you wish. But do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers," Satan wanted to enter Paradise with them, but the guards prevented him. So he came to the serpent, which was a four-legged creature like a camel, and it is the most handsome of beasts, and he spoke to it to put him in its mouth so that it could enter with him to Adam, so it put him in its mouth. Abu Ja'far said: The mouth is the side of the jaw, so the serpent passed by the guards and entered, and they did not know what God intended of the matter. So he spoke to him from her place, but he did not care about his words. So he came out to him and said: O Adam, shall I direct you to the tree of immortality and a kingdom that will not decay? (Ta-Ha 20:120) He said: Shall I direct you to a tree from which if you eat you will be a king like God, the Almighty, or you will be among the immortals, so you will never die? And he swore to them by God, I am among your sincere advisors. He only wanted to show them what had been hidden from them of their private parts by tearing off their clothing. He had known that they had private parts, because he had read from the books of the angels, but Adam did not know that. Their clothing was nails. Adam refused to eat from it, so Eve came forward and ate, then she said: O Adam, eat, for I have already eaten and it has not harmed me. So when Adam ate, their private parts became apparent to them, and they began to fasten together over themselves from the leaves of Paradise.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', who said: A narrator narrated to me: The devil entered Paradise in the form of a beast with legs, and he thought that he was a camel. He said: So he was cursed, and his legs fell off and he became a snake.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar, he said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ar-Rabi', he said: Abu Al-'Aliyah narrated to me that among the camels was one that was first from the jinn, he said: So all of Paradise was made permissible for him except the tree, and it was said to them: Do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers. He said: So Satan came to Eve and began with her, and said: Did you two forbid anything? She said: Yes, from this tree. He said: Your Lord did not forbid you from this tree except that you should become angels or become of the immortals. (Al-A'raf: 120) He said: So Eve began and ate from it, then she ordered Adam to eat from it. He said: And it was a tree from which anyone who ate from it would have an impurity. He said: And there should not be an impurity in Paradise. He said: So Satan removed them from it and took them out of what they were in, he said: So Adam was taken out of Paradise.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us: Ibn Ishaq told us, on the authority of some of the people of knowledge: When Adam entered Paradise and saw the honor it contained and what God had given him of it, he said: If there had been eternity and Satan had made a mistake in it, he would not have heard it from him, so he came to him from the direction of eternity.

Ibn Humayd narrated: Salamah narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq: I was told that the first thing he did to them of his plot against them was to wait over them in a way that saddened them when they heard it, so they said: What makes you cry? He said: I am crying over you, you will die and be separated from the blessings and honor you are in. So that resonated with them. Then he came to them and whispered to them, saying: O Adam, shall I guide you to the tree of immortality and a kingdom that will not decay? And he said: Your Lord did not forbid you from this tree except that you should become angels or be among the immortals. And he swore to them, Indeed, I am to you one of the sincere advisers. (Al-A'raf: 21-25) That is, you would become angels, or be immortal, if you were not angels in the blessings of Paradise and would not die. God the Almighty says: So he led them astray with deception. (Al-A'raf: 22)

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said: Satan whispered to Eve in the tree until he brought her to him, then he made her look beautiful in Adam's eyes. He said: Adam called her for his need, she said: No, unless you come here. When he came, she said: No, unless you eat from this tree. He said: So they ate from it and their private parts became apparent to them. He said: Adam went running away in Paradise, then his Lord called to him: O Adam, are you fleeing from me? He said: No, O Lord, but out of shyness before You. He said: O Adam, how did you come? He said: From Eve, O Lord. So God said: Then she has a right over me that I make her bleed once a month, as I made this tree bleed, and that I make her foolish, for I created her patient, and that I make her conceive with difficulty and give birth with difficulty, for I made her conceive with ease and give birth with ease. Ibn Zayd said: If it were not for the calamity that befell Eve, the women of this world would not menstruate, but they would be patient, and they would conceive easily and give birth easily.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Yazid ibn Abdullah ibn Qusayt, on the authority of Saeed ibn al-Musayyab, who said: I heard him swear by God that he did not exclude what Adam ate from the tree while he was sane, but Eve gave him wine to drink, until he became drunk and she led him to it and he ate.

Ibn Humayd narrated: Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Layth ibn Abi Salim, on the authority of Tawus al-Yamani, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The enemy of God, Iblis, offered himself to the beasts of the earth, asking which of them would carry him so that he could enter Paradise with them and speak to Adam and his wife.

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

All the beasts refused him, until he spoke to the serpent and said to it: I forbid you from the son of Adam, for you are under my protection if you allow me to enter Paradise. So it placed him between two of its fangs, then entered with him, and he spoke to them from inside it. It was clothed and walked on four legs, but God stripped it and made it walk on its belly. He said: Ibn Abbas said: Kill it wherever you find it, break the protection of the enemy of God regarding it.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us: Ibn Ishaq said: The people of the Torah study: The serpent spoke to Adam. And they did not interpret it like Ibn Abbas did.

Al-Qasim narrated to us, saying: Al-Husayn narrated to us, saying: Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Qays, who said: God forbade Adam and Eve from eating from one tree in Paradise, and they could eat from it freely wherever they wanted. Then Satan came and entered the belly of the serpent, and spoke to Eve. Satan whispered to Adam and said: "Your Lord did not forbid you from this tree except that you should become angels or become of the immortals. And he swore to them, 'Indeed, I am to you one of the sincere advisers.'" (Al-A'raf: 20-21). He said: So Eve cut down the tree, and the tree bled. The feathers that were on them fell off, and they began to sew together leaves from Paradise. Their Lord called out to them, Did I not forbid you from that tree and tell you that Satan is to you a clear enemy? (Al-A'raf: 22). Why did you eat it when I forbade you from it? He said: O Lord, Eve fed me. He said to Eve: Why did you feed it? She said: The serpent commanded me. He said to the serpent: Why did you command it? She said: Satan has commanded me. He said: Cursed and rejected. As for you, Eve, just as you bled the tree, you will bleed at every new moon. As for you, snake, I will cut off your legs so that you will run on your face, and whoever meets you will smash your head against a stone. Go down, some of you enemies to one another.

Abu Ja'far said: These reports have been narrated from those from whom we narrated them from among the Companions, the Followers, and others, regarding the description of Satan, the enemy of God, who led Adam and his wife astray until he expelled them from Paradise. The most truthful of that, in our view, is that which is in agreement with the Book of God. God, the Most High, has informed us about Satan, that he whispered to Adam and his wife to show them what was hidden from them of their private parts, and that he said to them: Your Lord did not forbid you from this tree except that you should become angels or become of the immortals, and that he swore to them, 'Indeed, I am to you one of the sincere advisers' (Al-A'raf: 20), deceiving them. In His, the Most High, informing us about the enemy of God, that he swore to Adam and his wife by saying to them: Indeed, I am to you one of the sincere advisers, there is clear evidence that he addressed them directly: either openly to their eyes, or implicitly in something else. This is because it is unreasonable in the speech of the Arabs to say:

So-and-so swore to so-and-so in such-and-such, if he gave him a reason to reach him without swearing to him. An oath cannot be made by causing a cause. Likewise, his statement, Then Satan whispered to him, if that had been the case, it would have been from him to Adam in the same way as it was from him to his offspring, by making the eating of what God forbade Adam from eating from the tree attractive, without directly addressing him with what he made him slip by in words and tricks, because God Almighty would not have said: And he swore to them both, 'I am indeed a sincere adviser to you.' Just as it is not permissible for someone who has committed a sin to say today: Satan swore to me that he is a sincere adviser to me in what he made attractive to me of the sin that I committed. Likewise, what was from Adam and his wife, if it had been in the same way as it is between Satan today and the offspring of Adam, God Almighty would not have said: And he swore to them both, 'I am indeed a sincere adviser to you.' But that was, God willing, in the manner that Ibn Abbas and those who said what he said said.

As for the reason for his arrival to Paradise so that he could speak to Adam after God had expelled him from it and banished him, there is no meaning in what was narrated from Ibn Abbas and Wahb ibn Munabbih regarding that which a person of understanding could argue against, since that was a statement that could not be refuted by reason or by report that would require its confirmation from an argument to the contrary, and it is one of the possible matters. So the statement regarding that is that he arrived at their address according to what God, the Most High, has informed us? And it is possible that he arrived at that in the manner that the interpreters have said, rather that is, God willing, so, because the statements of the interpreters have continued to correct that. And even though Ibn Ishaq said regarding that what:

Ibn Humayd narrated to us, saying: Salamah narrated to us, saying: Ibn Ishaq said about that, and God knows best, as Ibn Abbas and the people of the Torah said: That he reached Adam and his wife with his authority that God gave him to test Adam and his offspring with, and that he comes to the son of Adam in his sleep and in his wakefulness, and in every state of his affairs, until he reaches what he wanted from him, until he calls him to disobedience, and causes lust to fall into his soul without him seeing it. God the Almighty said: Then Satan caused them to slip therefrom and removed them from that in which they were, and He said: "O children of Adam, let not Satan tempt you as he removed your parents from Paradise, stripping them of their clothing to show them their private parts. Indeed, he sees you, he and his tribe, from where you do not see them. Indeed, We have made the devils allies to those who do not believe." (al-A'raf 7:27) And God said to His Prophet, peace be upon him: "Say: I seek refuge in the Lord of mankind, the King of mankind." (Al-Nas: 1-2) to the end of the surah. Then he mentioned the narrations that were narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: Satan flows through the son of Adam as blood flows. Then Ibn Ishaq said: The command of the son of Adam between him and the enemy of God was like his command between him and Adam, so God said: "Descend from it, for it is not for you to be arrogant therein, so get out. Indeed, you are among the debased." (al-A'raf 7:13). Then he reached Adam and his wife until he spoke to them, as God told us about their story, saying: Then Satan whispered to him, saying, 'O Adam, shall I direct you to the tree of eternity and possession that will not decay?' (Ta-Ha 20:120), so he reached them as he reached his offspring from where they did not see him, and God knows which of them it was, so they repented to their Lord.

Abu Ja'far said: It is not certain in Ibn Ishaq's mind that if he had been certain in his heart that Satan did not reach Adam and his wife by addressing them in the manner that God informed him that he had said to them and addressed them with, it would not be permissible for a person of understanding to object to what has been widely reported from the people of knowledge, with the evidence of the Book on the correctness of what has been widely reported among them. So how about his doubt? And we ask God for success.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So He brought them out of that in which they were.

Abu Ja'far said: As for the interpretation of his statement, So he expelled them, it means: So Satan expelled Adam and his wife, from what they were, meaning from what Adam and his wife were of the comfortable life in Paradise, and the vastness of its bliss in which they were. We have already explained that God, may He be glorified and exalted, attributed their expulsion from Paradise to Satan, even though God was the one who expelled them, because their expulsion from it was due to a cause from Satan, so that was attributed to him because of his causing it, just as someone says to a man who has been harmed by him until he moved from a place where he used to live: No one moved me from the place where I was except You, and there was no moving from Him for him, but since his moving was due to a cause from Him, it is permissible for him to attribute his moving to Him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And We said, 'Go down, being enemies to one another.'

Abu Jaafar said: It is said that someone has settled in such-and-such a land or such-and-such a valley, if he has settled there, as the poet said:

I keep watching them, until the passengers' hands drop them from the raqs

This statement by God, the Most High, has demonstrated the truth of what we have said, that it was God, the Most High, who brought Adam out of Paradise, and that God's addition to Satan of what He added to him of their expulsion was as we have described. It also indicates that the descent of Adam, his wife, and their enemy Satan was at the same time, with God gathering them together in the story of their descent, after what happened from the sin of Adam and his wife, and Satan causing that for them, as our Lord, the Most High, described about them.

Abu Jaafar said: The people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning of his saying: Descend, although they agreed that Adam and his wife were among those meant by it.

Sufyan bin Wakee' told us: Abu Usamah told us, on the authority of Abu Awana, on the authority of Ismail bin Salem, on the authority of Abu Salih: Go down, some of you enemies to others, he said: Adam, Eve, Satan, and the serpent.

Ibn Wakee' and Musa ibn Harun told us: Amr ibn Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi: Go down, some of you enemies to others. He said: So he cursed the snake and cut off its legs and left it walking on its belly, and made its sustenance from dust. And Adam, Eve, Satan, and the snake were sent down to earth.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding God's statement: Go down, some of you enemies to others, he said: Adam, Satan, and the serpent.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Go down, some of you enemies to others, Adam, Iblis, and the serpent, their offspring, some of them enemies to others.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Some of you are enemies to others, he said: Adam and his offspring, and Iblis and his offspring.

Al-Muthanna told us: Adam bin Abi Iyas told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Some of you are enemies to others, he said: He means Satan and Adam.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Ubaidullah bin Musa told us, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of someone who told him, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Go down, some of you are enemies to others, he said: Some of you are enemies to others: Adam and Eve, Satan and the serpent.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Abdul Rahman bin Mahdi told me, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Ismail Al-Suddi, who said: Someone who heard Ibn Abbas say: Go down, some of you enemies to others, said: Adam, Eve, Satan, and the serpent.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: Go down, some of you enemies to others, he said: To them and their offspring.

Abu Jaafar said: If someone says: What was the enmity between Adam and his wife, and Satan and the serpent?

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

It was said: As for the enmity of Iblis towards Adam and his offspring, it was due to his envy of him and his arrogance in disobeying God in prostrating to him when he said to his Lord: "I am better than him. You created me from fire and created him from clay" (Sad: 76). As for the enmity of Adam and his offspring towards Iblis, it was due to the enmity of the believers towards him because of his disbelief in God and his disobedience to his Lord in his arrogance towards him and his opposition to His command. This is from Adam and the believers of his offspring, out of belief in God. As for the enmity of Iblis towards Adam, it was disbelief in God.

As for the enmity between Adam and his descendants and the serpent, we have mentioned what was narrated about that on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Wahb ibn Munabbih, and that is the enmity between us and it, as it was narrated on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: We have not made peace with them since we fought them, so whoever abandons them for fear of their revenge is not one of us.

Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Abdul Hakam told me: Hajjaj bin Rushdin told me: Haywa bin Shureih told us, on the authority of Ibn Ajjan, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: We have not made peace with them since we fought them, so whoever leaves any of them out of fear, is not one of us.

Abu Ja'far said: I think that the war between us was originally what our scholars, from whom we have presented the narration, mentioned about Satan entering Paradise after God had expelled him from it, until he made him slip away from obeying his Lord by eating what he was forbidden to eat from the tree.

Abu Kuraib told us: Muawiyah bin Hisham told us, and Muhammad bin Khalaf al-Asqalani told me: Adam told me, all of them, on the authority of Shaiban, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was asked about killing snakes, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: They and man were created, each one of them an enemy to the other. If he sees it, it frightens him, and if it bites him, it hurts him, so kill it wherever you find it.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And you will have on earth a place of settlement.

Abu Jaafar said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of that, and some of them said what:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam Al-Asqalani told us: Abu Ja'far Al-Razi told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement. He said: It is his statement: Who has made the earth a bed for you (al-Baqarah 2:22).

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, he said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding his statement: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement, he said: It is his statement: He has made the earth a place of rest for you (Ghafir 40:64). And others said: The meaning of that is and for you on the earth is a place of rest in the graves. Mention of those who said that:

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement, meaning the graves.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abd al-Rahman ibn Mahdi told me, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Ismail al-Suddi, he said: Someone who heard Ibn Abbas say: And for you on earth is a place of settlement, he said: the graves.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement, he said: Their place of residence in it.

Abu Ja'far said: In the speech of the Arabs, the settled place is the place of settlement. So if that is the case, then wherever he is on earth, that place on earth is his settled place. And what God Almighty meant by that is that they have a settled place and a home on earth, in their places and their settled place in Paradise and the sky. And likewise His saying: and provision, means by it: that they have provision therein with their provision in Paradise.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And provision for a time.

Abu Jaafar said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of that. Some of them said: And in it you will be delivered until death. Those who said that mentioned:

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, regarding his statement: And provision for a time, he said: He says: A provision until death.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Abd al-Rahman ibn Mahdi told us, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Ismail al-Suddi, he said: Someone who heard Ibn Abbas told me: And provision for a time, he said: Life.

Others said: He meant by his saying and provision for a time, until the Day of Resurrection. Those who said that mentioned:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And provision for a time, he said: until the Day of Resurrection, until the end of the world.

Others said: Until a time, he said: Until a term. Those who said that were mentioned:

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': And provision for a time, he said: for a term.

And enjoyment, in the speech of the Arabs, is everything that is enjoyed from something, from the livelihood that he enjoyed or the luxury or the adornment or the pleasure or the other. So since that is the case and God Almighty has made the life of every living being an enjoyment for it to enjoy during its life, and made the earth for man an enjoyment during its life, by his settling on it, and his nourishment with what God brought forth from it of food and fruits, and his enjoyment with what He created in it of pleasures, and made it after his death for his body as a receptacle, and for his body a home and resting place, and the name enjoyment includes all of that, then the interpretation of the verse is more appropriate since God Almighty did not place an indication that He intended by His saying: And enjoyment for a time some without others, and a specific without a general in the mind or report that it is in the meaning of the general, and that the report is also like that, for a time when the children of Adam and the children of Satan enjoy it for a long time, and that is until the earth is replaced by another earth. Since this is the most appropriate interpretation of the verse for what we have described, then the interpretation of the verse must be: And for you on the earth are mansions and dwellings in which you will settle as you settled in the heavens and in the gardens in your mansions therein, and enjoyment from you of it and what I have brought forth for you from it, and what I have made for you in it of livelihood and luxury and adornment and pleasure, and what I have given you on its back during the days of your life and after your death for your ashes and graves to be buried in it, and you will reach by your enjoyment of it until I replace it for you with another.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been. There are ten issues in this:

The first: The Almighty's saying: So Satan caused them to slip therefrom. The group read fa-azla-u-huma without an alif, from zala which means sin, meaning he caused them to slip and fall into it. Hamza read fa-azla-u-huma with an alif, from tanhiha, meaning he removed them. It is said az-zalathu I removed him and he departed. Ibn Kaysan said: fa-azla-u-huma from zawal, meaning he turned them away from what they were doing of obedience to disobedience.

I said: According to this, the two readings have the same meaning, except that the reading of the group is more likely in meaning. It is said from it: Azallatuhu fazal. And the evidence for this is the saying of God the Almighty: The devil only caused them to slip because of some of what they had earned, and His saying: Then Satan whispered to them, and whispering is only making them slip through sin, and the devil does not have the ability to move someone from one place to another, his ability is only to make him slip, so that is a reason for his moving from one place to another because of his sin. It has been said: The meaning of Azallatuhu is from zala 'an kan if he moved away, so it is in meaning like the reading of Hamza from zawal. Al-Mur'u' al-Qais said:

The boy slips the shoe off his back and twists the clothes of the heavy-laden violent one.

He also said:

A dead person whose hair slips from his back, just as the pure stone slips from the one who descends.

The second: The Almighty's saying: So He removed them from that in which they were. If He made removed from the place, then His saying: So He removed them is an emphasis and clarification of the removal, since it is possible that they would move from the place they were in to another place in Paradise, but that is not the case. Rather, their removal from Paradise to Earth was because they were created from it, and for Adam to be a caliph on Earth. And Satan, may God curse him, did not intend to remove him from it, but rather he intended to drop him from his rank and distance him as he was distanced, so he did not achieve his goal nor attain his desire, rather his eyes grew hotter, his soul more angry, and his expectations became disappointed. God Almighty said: Then his Lord chose him and turned to him in forgiveness and guided him. So he, peace be upon him, became the caliph of God on His Earth after he had been His neighbor in His house. How great is the difference between the caliph and the neighbor! May God's prayers and peace be upon him. And this was attributed to Satan, because it was because of him and his seduction. There is no disagreement among the people of interpretation and others that Iblis was in charge of tempting Adam, and they differed on how. Ibn Masoud, Ibn Abbas and the majority of scholars said that he tempted them verbally, and the evidence for that is the statement of God the Almighty: And he swore to them, 'Indeed, I am to you both of you, among the sincere advisers.' The apparent meaning of swearing is verbal. Some of them said, and Abd al-Razzaq mentioned it on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih: He entered Paradise through the mouth of a snake, and it was a quadruped like a camel, one of the most beautiful creatures that God the Almighty created, after he had exposed himself to many animals, but none entered him except the snake. When he entered Paradise with him, Iblis came out of its belly and took from the tree that God had forbidden Adam and his wife from, and he brought it to Eve and said: Look at this tree, how pleasant its scent, how pleasant its taste and how beautiful its color! He continued to tempt her until Eve took it and ate it. Then Adam was tempted, and Eve said to him: Eat, for I have eaten and it has not harmed me. So he ate from it, and their equality became apparent to them and they were deemed guilty. Then Adam entered the tree, and his Lord called to him: Where are you? He said: I am this, O Lord. He said: Will you not come out? He said: I am ashamed of You, O Lord. He said: Go down to the land from which you were created. And the serpent was cursed and their vomit was returned to its belly and enmity was made between it and the children of Adam. Therefore, we were commanded to kill it, as will be explained. And it was said to Eve: Just as you made the tree bleed, so will the blood befall you every month, and you will conceive and give birth reluctantly, and you will be on the verge of death many times. At-Tabari and Al-Naqqash added: And you will be foolish, although you were forbearing. A group said: Satan did not enter Paradise to Adam after he was expelled from it, but rather he tempted with his devil, his authority, and his whispers that God the Most High gave him, as the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said:

Satan runs through the son of Adam as blood runs through him. And God knows best. It will be mentioned in Al-A'raf that when he ate, he remained naked and sought shelter, but the trees moved away from him and rebuked him for his sin. Then the fig tree took pity on him, so he took some of its leaves and covered himself with them. So he was afflicted with nakedness, but not the trees. And God knows best. It was said that the wisdom behind Adam's expulsion from Paradise was to populate the world.

Third: It is mentioned that the snake was the servant of Adam, peace be upon him, in Paradise, so it betrayed him by giving the enemy of God access to itself and showing enmity towards him there. When they were sent down, the enmity was confirmed and its sustenance was made dust, and it was told: You are the enemy of the children of Adam and they are your enemies, and wherever one of them meets you, he will smash your head. Ibn Omar narrated on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said:

Five things that a person in ihram can kill. He mentioned the snake among them. It was narrated that Satan said to it: Enter Paradise while you are under my protection. Ibn Abbas used to say: Break the protection of Satan. Sakina bint al-Ja'd narrated on the authority of Sara bint Nabhan al-Ghanawiyah, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say:

Kill snakes, small and large, black and white, for whoever kills them will have a ransom from the Fire, and whoever kills them will be a martyr. Our scholars said: They will have a ransom from the Fire because they participated with Satan and helped him harm Adam and his children. Likewise, whoever kills a snake is as if he killed an unbeliever. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

An unbeliever and his killer will never meet in Hell. Narrated by Muslim and others.

Fourth: Ibn Jurayj narrated on the authority of Amr ibn Dinar on the authority of Abu Ubaidah on the authority of Abdullah ibn Masoud who said: "We were with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in Mina when a snake passed by. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Kill it.' It got to a rock before us and entered it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Bring a palm frond and fire and set it on fire.'" Our scholars said: This hadith specifically concerns his, may God bless him and grant him peace, prohibition of mutilation and of anyone being punished with the punishment of God Almighty. They said: So this enemy had no sanctity left since it had escaped him until it had brought him destruction from where it was destined.

If it is said: It has been narrated on the authority of Ibrahim al-Nakha'i that he disliked burning a scorpion with fire, and he said: It is mutilation. It is said to him: It is possible that this trace did not reach him from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he acted on the trace that came:

Do not be tormented by the torment of God, for this was the way of working with Him.

If it is said: Muslim narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud, who said:

"We were with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in a cave and the verse 'By the messengers sent forth in gusts' had been revealed to him. We were taking them from their mouths while they were still moist. Then a snake came out to us. He said: Kill it. We rushed to kill it but it beat us to it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: May God protect it from your evil as He protected you from its evil." So he did not light a fire or use any tricks to kill it. It was said to him: It is possible that he did not find a fire and left it, or that the hole was not in a position to benefit from the fire there, given the harm of the smoke and its not reaching the animal. And God knows best.

And his saying: May God protect it from your evil meaning your killing of it, just as He protected you from its evil meaning its sting.

Fifth: The command to kill snakes is a form of guidance to repel the hidden and feared snakes. If there is any harm, it is obligatory to kill it immediately, because He said:

Kill snakes, and kill those with two stripes and those with one tail, which take away the sight and cause the rope to fall. He mentioned them specifically, although they were included in the generality, and he drew attention to that because of the great harm they cause. And if their harm is not proven, then those that are not in houses should also be killed, because of the apparent general command, and because the type of snake is most harmful, so that is continued in it, and because all of them are terrifying in their appearance and because of the aversion to them in people, and for that reason the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

God loves courage, even if it involves killing a snake. So he encouraged killing it. He said in what Abu Dawud narrated from the hadith of Abdullah bin Masoud, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet:

Kill all the snakes, and whoever fears their revenge is not of me. And God knows best.

Sixth: Any snakes in the houses should not be killed until three days have passed, based on the saying of the Prophet, peace be upon him:

There are jinn in Madinah who have converted to Islam, so if you see any of them, warn them for three days. Some scholars have applied this hadith to Madinah alone because of the jinn converting to Islam there. They said: We do not know whether any jinn converted to Islam outside Madinah or not. This was said by Ibn Nafi'. Malik said: He forbade the killing of house jinn in all countries. This is correct, because God the Almighty said: And when We directed to you a company of the jinn, listening to the Qur'an (al-Baqarah 2:14). In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said:

A caller from the jinn came to me, so I went with them and recited the Qur'an to them. It says: They asked him for provisions, and they were from the jinn of the peninsula. The hadith. It will be mentioned in full in Surat al-Jinn, God willing. If this is proven, then none of them should be killed until they are warned and warned, as will be explained, God willing.

Seventh: The Imams narrated on the authority of Abu al-Sa'ib, the client of Hisham bin Zuhra.

He entered upon Abu Saeed Al-Khudri in his house and said:

I found him praying, so I sat waiting for him to finish his prayer. I heard a stirring in the palm branches on the side of the house, so I turned and saw a snake. I jumped up to kill it, but he motioned to me to sit down, so I sat down. When he had finished, he pointed to a house in the house and said: Do you see this house? I said: Yes. He said: There was a young man from among us who had recently gotten married in it. He said: We went out with the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) to the Trench, and that young man would ask the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) for permission to return to his family at noon. One day he asked his permission, and the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said to him: Take your weapon, for I fear for you from Qurayzah. So the man took his weapon and went back, and his wife was standing between the two doors, so he aimed at her with the spear to stab her with it, but he was overcome with jealousy, so she said to him: Hold back your spear, and enter the house until you see what brought me out! So he entered and saw a huge snake curled up on the bed. He struck it with the spear and tied it up with it. Then he went out and stuck it in the house and it shook on him. He did not know which of them died faster, the snake or the boy! He said: So we came to the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and mentioned that to him and said: Ask God to revive him for us. He said: Ask forgiveness for your companion. Then he said: There are jinn in Madinah who have become Muslims. If you see any of them, give it three days' warning. If it appears to you after that, kill it, for it is a devil. In another narration, the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: These houses have inhabitants. If you see any of them, attack it for three days. If it goes away, well and good, otherwise kill it, for it is an unbeliever. And he said to them: Go and bury your companion. Our scholars, may God have mercy on him, said: It is not understood from this hadith that this jinn whom this young man killed was a Muslim and that the jinn killed him in retaliation, because if we assume that retaliation is permissible between us and the jinn, it would only be for pure deliberate killing. This young man did not intend or deliberately kill a Muslim soul, as he had no knowledge of that. Rather, he intended to kill what the law permits killing of its kind. This is an accidental killing and there is no retaliation for it. So it is better to say: The disbelieving jinn or their evil ones killed the young man because of their companion out of enmity and revenge. And Sa'd ibn 'Ubadah, may God be pleased with him, was killed. He was found dead in his bath and his body was brought, and they did not know of his death until they heard someone say, and they did not see anyone:

We killed the master of Khazraj, Saad bin Ubadah.

We shot him with my arrow, but we did not hit his heart

The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Indeed, in Madinah there are jinn who have become Muslims to show a way to avoid killing a Muslim among them and to gain control over killing a disbeliever among them. It was narrated from various sources that Aisha, the wife of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, killed a jinn and was shown in a dream that someone said to her: You have killed a Muslim. She said: If he had been a Muslim, he would not have entered upon the wives of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. He said: He did not enter upon you except while you were wearing your clothes. So she woke up and ordered twelve thousand dirhams to be given in the way of God. In another narration: He did not enter upon you except while you were covered, so you gave charity and freed slaves. Al-Rabi' ibn Badr said: The jinn are among the snakes that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, forbade killing. They are the ones that walk and do not twist. Something similar was narrated from Alqamah.

Eighth: Regarding the description of the warning, Malik said: I prefer that they vow for three days. And Isa bin Dinar said the same, even if he appears several times in a day. And he should not limit his warning to three times in one day so that it is in three days. And it was said: Three times is sufficient, based on the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): Then let him warn him three times. And his saying: They made him angry three times. And because three is for the feminine number, it became clear that what was meant was three times. And Malik's saying is more appropriate, based on the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him): Three days. And it is a correct text restricting those absolutes, and three is taken to mean the nights of the three days, so the night was predominant according to the custom of the Arabs in the chapter on dates, as the feminine is predominant in them. Malik said: And it is sufficient in the warning to say: I make you angry by God and the Last Day, do not appear to us or harm us. Thabit Al-Bunani reported on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Abi Laila on the authority of his father, "That the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, mentioned the snakes in his presence and said: If you see any of them in your homes, then say: I call upon you by the covenant that Noah, peace be upon him, took from you, and I call upon you by the covenant that Solomon, peace be upon him, took from you. If you see any of them after that, then kill it."

I said: This apparently indicates that giving permission once is sufficient, and the hadith refutes it. And God knows best. Ibn Habib narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

"I ask you by the covenant that Solomon, peace be upon him, took from you, not to harm us and not to prevail over us."

Ninth: Jubayr narrated on the authority of Nafeer on the authority of Abu Tha'bah al-Khushani - whose name is Jarthum - "that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The jinn are divided into three thirds. A third have wings and fly in the air, a third are snakes and dogs, and a third settle down and move about." Abu al-Darda' narrated - whose name is Uwaimir - who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"God created the jinn in three thirds. One third is dogs, snakes, and vermin of the earth. One third is a gentle wind. One third is like the children of Adam. They will have reward and will be punished. God created mankind in three thirds. One third has hearts with which they do not understand, eyes with which they do not see, and ears with which they do not hear. They are only like livestock, nay, they are more astray in way. One third of their bodies are like the bodies of the children of Adam, and their hearts are the hearts of devils. One third will be in the shade of God on the Day when there will be no shade except His."

Tenth: Any animal that is originally harmful is killed initially in order to destroy it, without dispute, such as snakes, scorpions, mice, geckos, and the like. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Five pests are to be killed in the sacred precincts and outside of it... and he mentioned the hadith.

The snake revealed its evil essence when it betrayed Adam by letting Satan enter Paradise between its jaws. If it had brought him out, Ridwan would not have let it enter with him. Satan said to it, You are under my protection. So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, ordered it to be killed and said:

Kill them even if you are praying meaning snakes and scorpions.

The gecko blew on the fire of Abraham, peace be upon him, from among all the animals, so it was cursed. This is of the same type as what is narrated about the snake. It was narrated on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

Whoever kills a gecko is as if he has killed an unbeliever. In Sahih Muslim, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

Whoever kills a gecko with the first strike, one hundred good deeds will be recorded for him, and with the second strike less than that, and with the third strike less than that. In another narration, he said: With the first strike, seventy good deeds.

The mouse showed its essence by going to Noah's Ark's ropes and cutting them. Abd al-Rahman ibn Abi Na'im narrated on the authority of Abu Saeed al-Khudri that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The pilgrim kills snakes, scorpions, kites, wild beasts, rabid dogs, and hyenas. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, woke up and found a wick being taken to burn down the house, so the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, ordered that it be killed.

The raven revealed its essence when the Prophet of God, Noah, peace be upon him, sent it from the ship to bring him report of the earth, but it abandoned its matter and turned to its corpse. All of this is in the meaning of the snake, and that is why we mentioned it. More explanation of this matter will come in the explanation in Al-Ma'idah and elsewhere, God willing.

The Almighty said: And We said, 'Go down, some of you as enemies to others.' There are seven issues in this:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And We said, 'Go down.' The alif was deleted from ahbatu in the wording because it is an alif of connection. The alif was deleted from qulna in the wording because it is sukoon and the ha' after it is sukoon. Muhammad bin Musaffa narrated on the authority of Abu Haywah that the ba' in ahbatu was damma, which is a language that strengthens it because it is intransitive and most intransitive verbs come with the form yaf'al. The address is to Adam and Eve, the serpent, and Satan, according to Ibn Abbas. Al-Hasan said: Adam and Eve and the whisperer. Mujahid and Al-Hasan also said: The sons of Adam and the sons of Satan. Descending is coming down from above to below, so Adam descended in Serendib in India on a mountain called Budh, and with him the scent of Paradise, so it clung to its trees and valleys, and everything there was filled with perfume, and from there the perfume was brought from the scent of Adam, peace be upon him. The clouds used to stroke his head, so he became bald, and he caused baldness to his children. In Bukhari, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said:

God created Adam and his height was sixty cubits.

The hadith. It was narrated by Muslim and will be mentioned later. Eve descended in Jeddah, Satan in Ablah, and the serpent in Baysan, and it was said: in Sijistan.

Sistan is the land of God with the most snakes, and if it were not for the wild beasts that eat it and destroy many of it, Sistan would have been evacuated because of the snakes, as Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari mentioned.

Second: The Almighty's saying: Some of you are enemies to one another. Some of you is the subject, enemy is its predicate, and the sentence is in the accusative case as a state, and the meaning is this is your state. The waw was deleted from some of you because there is a referent in the speech, as one says: I saw the sky raining on you. The enemy is the opposite of the friend, and it is from the verb ada if he wronged. A wolf is an enemy: he attacks people. Aggression is blatant injustice. It was said: it is taken from mujawazah, from your saying: this matter does not exceed you, meaning it does not go beyond you. And he exceeded it if he went beyond it, so he was called an enemy for going beyond the limit in what is disliked by his companion, and from it the enemy with the foot for going beyond something, and the two meanings are close, for whoever is unjust has transgressed.

I said: Some scholars have interpreted the Almighty's statement: Some of you are enemies to others to refer to the human being himself, and there is some distance in it, even if it is correct in meaning. This is indicated by his statement, peace be upon him:

When the servant wakes up, his limbs say to his tongue, 'Fear God with regard to us, for if you are upright, we will be upright, and if you are crooked, we will be crooked.' If it is said, How did he say 'enemy' and not 'enemies?' There are two answers to this. One is that 'some' and 'all' are referred to by the singular form in both the wording and the meaning, and this is in the Qur'an. God the Almighty said, And all of them will come to Him alone on the Day of Resurrection, in the wording, and He the Almighty said, And all of them will come to Him humbled, in the meaning. The other answer is that 'enemy' is used singularly in the plural form, as God the Almighty said, "And they are your enemies. What an evil substitute for the wrongdoers," in the sense of enemies. God the Almighty also said, "They think that every shout is against them. They are the enemy." Ibn Faris said, Enemy is a collective noun for one, two, three, and the feminine, and it may be pluralized.

Third: God's expulsion of Adam from Paradise and his being cast down from it was not a punishment for him, because He cast him down after he had accepted his repentance and repented. Rather, He cast him down either as a discipline or to make the ordeal more severe. The correct view regarding his casting down and his dwelling on Earth is what has become apparent from the eternal wisdom in that, which is to spread his offspring therein so that He might charge them and test them, and arrange their reward and punishment in the Hereafter based on that, since Paradise and Hell are not places of charge. So that meal was the reason for his casting down from Paradise. And God can do whatever He wills. He said: Indeed, I will place a vicegerent on the earth. This is a great virtue and a noble and honorable virtue, and we have already referred to it, even though he was created from the Earth. We only said that He cast him down after He had accepted his repentance because of His second statement: We said, 'Descend,' which will come.

Fourth: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement. Subject and predicate, meaning a place of settlement. This was said by Abu Al-Aaliyah and Ibn Zayd. Al-Suddi said: Settled means the graves.

I said: God Almighty's statement: He has made the earth a resting place for you has two possible meanings. And God knows best.

I said: The statement of God Almighty: And enjoyment enjoyment is what is enjoyed of food, clothing, life, conversation, companionship, and other things. And from this, it was named pleasure marriage because it is enjoyed. And Sulayman ibn Abd al-Malik recited when he stood at the grave of his son after his burial:

I stood on a strange grave in a desert, with few possessions from a departed lover

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: for a time. The interpreters differed on the word for a time. One group said: for death. This is the saying of those who say: The settled place is the place of residence in this world. It was said: until the Day of Resurrection. This is the saying of those who say: The settled place is the graves. Al-Rabi' said: for a time, until a term. And for a time means a distant time. So, then, it is a distancing from your saying now. Khuwaylid said:

The ash-bearer is of great value. His lid in winter is like a spring of water.

The basin became wide and swollen from below. They may have added the letter taa to it. Abu Wijza said:

The sentimental ones are no longer sentimental, and the ones who feed are no longer there.

Al-Hayn also means the period, and from it the Almighty's saying: Has there not come upon man a period of time? Al-Hayn is the hour, God the Almighty said: Or will you say when you see the punishment? Ibn Arafah said: Al-Hayn is a part of time like an hour or what is above it. And His saying: So leave them in their immersion for a time means until their appointed times are over. And the Almighty's saying: It yields its fruit at all times means every year, and it was said: Rather every six months, and it was said: Rather morning and evening. Al-Azhari said: Al-Hayn is a name like time that is suitable for all times, whether long or short. The meaning is that it is benefited from at all times and its benefit is never cut off. He said: Al-Hayn is the Day of Resurrection. Al-Hayn is the morning and evening, God the Almighty said: So glory be to God when you reach the evening and when you reach the morning. It is said: I treated Him in a time, from Al-Hayn. And I stayed in a place: if I stayed in it for a while. And it was the time of such a thing, meaning it was closer. Buthayna said:

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

If Salwa is consoled by Jameel for an hour of time, it has not come and its time has not come yet

Seventh: Since the people of the language differed about the time, our scholars and others also differed about it. Al-Farra' said: There are two types of time: a time when its limit is not determined, and the time that God the Most High mentioned: It yields its fruit at all times by permission of its Lord is six months. Ibn al-Arabi said: The unknown time is not related to a ruling, and the known time is that to which rulings are related and obligations are connected, and the most of the known is a year. Malik sees in rulings and oaths the most general of names and times. Al-Shafi'i sees the least. Abu Hanifa took a middle position and said: six months. His statement has no meaning, because the estimated times, according to him, are not proven by analogy, and there is no text from the author of the Shari'ah. Rather, what is relied upon is the meaning after knowing the linguistic implications of the word. So whoever vows to pray for a while, it is considered one rak'ah according to Al-Shafi'i, because it is the least of the voluntary prayer, by analogy to the rak'ah of Witr. Malik and his companions said: The least of the voluntary prayer is two rak'ahs, so the time is estimated according to the amount of the action. Ibn Khuwaiz Mandad mentioned in his rulings: If someone swears not to speak to someone for a while or not to do something for a while, then that time is a year. He said: They agreed in the rulings that if someone swears not to do something for a while or not to speak to someone for a while, then more than a year is not included in his oath.

I said: This agreement is only the doctrine. Malik, may God have mercy on him, said: Whoever swears not to do something until a certain time, or a certain period, or an age, then all of that is a Sunnah. Ibn Wahb said about him: He doubted whether an age is a Sunnah. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated from Yaqub and Ibn al-Hasan: That an age is six months. Ibn Abbas, the people of opinion, Ikrimah, Saeed bin Jubayr, Amir al-Shaabi, and Ubaydah, regarding the words of God Almighty: It yields its fruit at all times by permission of its Lord, that it is six months. Al-Awza'i and Abu Ubayd said: A time is six months. Al-Shafi'i does not have a specific time for a time, nor does it have an end. A time for him may be the duration of the world. He said: We will never renounce it, and piety is to fulfill it before the end of a day. Abu Thawr and others said: A time and an age are according to what the language implies. It is said: I came from a certain time, but perhaps he did not come from half a day. Al-Kiya al-Tabari al-Shafi'i said: In short, the word now has many meanings, and al-Shafi'i did not see a specific meaning for it, because it is general and was not used in the language for a specific meaning. Some scholars said that the Almighty's statement, for a time, is a good omen for Adam, peace be upon him, so that he may know that he will not remain in it and will move to the Paradise to which he was promised to return, and for other than Adam it only indicates the Resurrection, and God knows best.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says, telling of what He honored Adam with: After He ordered the angels to prostrate to him, they prostrated except for Iblis, and that He permitted him Paradise to dwell wherever he wished and eat from it as much as he wished, in abundance, that is, in a spacious and good manner: Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr bin Mardawayh narrated from the hadith of Muhammad bin Isa Al-Damaghani, Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, from Mikail, from Laith, from Ibrahim Al-Taimi, from his father, from Abu Dharr, who said: I said, O Messenger of God, did you see that Adam was a prophet? He said: Yes, a prophet and a messenger, God spoke to him before - meaning clearly - and said: You and your wife dwell in Paradise. There is a difference of opinion about the Paradise that Adam was made to dwell in, is it in the heavens or on Earth? Most of them are of the first opinion. Al-Qurtubi narrated from the Mu'tazila and the Qadariyya the saying that it was on the earth. This will be confirmed in Surat Al-A'raf, God willing. The context of the verse requires that Eve was created before Adam entered Paradise. Muhammad bin Ishaq stated this explicitly when he said: When God finished rebuking Satan, he turned to Adam and taught him all the names. He said: O Adam, tell them their names until His saying: Indeed, You are the Knowing, the Wise. He said: Then the Sunnah was cast upon Adam, as we have heard from the People of the Book, the People of the Torah, and others from the people of knowledge, from Ibn Abbas and others. Then he took a rib from his left side and filled its place with flesh. Adam was asleep and did not wake up from his sleep until God created from that rib his wife Eve, and made her a woman for him to dwell in. When the Sunnah was removed from him and he woke up from his sleep, he saw her beside him and said, as they claim, God knows best, my flesh and blood and my wife, so he settled in her. When God married him and made for him a dwelling place from Himself, He said to him beforehand: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise. And eat from it in abundance wherever you wish, but do not approach this tree, lest you be among the wrongdoers." It is said that the creation of Eve was after entering Paradise, as al-Suddi said in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik and Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on Marra and on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: Satan was expelled from Paradise and Adam was settled in Paradise, so he walked in it in a state of slumber, and he had no wife to comfort him. Then he slept and woke up and at his head was a woman sitting whom God had created from his rib. He asked her: Who are you? She said: A woman. He said: Why were you created? She said: To comfort me. The angels said to him, looking at how much knowledge he had attained, What is her name, O Adam? He said: Eve. They said: Why was she called Eve? He said: She was created from a living thing. God said: O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise and eat from it in abundance wherever you wish.

As for his saying: And do not approach this tree, it is a test from God Almighty and an examination of Adam. There is a difference of opinion as to what this tree is. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The tree that Adam, peace be upon him, was forbidden from is the vine. This is what Saeed bin Jubair, Al-Suddi, Al-Sha'bi, Ja'dah bin Hubayrah, and Muhammad bin Qais said. Al-Suddi also said in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Murrâh on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and on the authority of some of the Companions: And do not approach this tree, it is the vine. The Jews claim that it is wheat. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim said: Muhammad ibn Ismail ibn Samurah al-Ahmâsi told us, Abu Yahya al-Hammani told us, al-Nadr Abu Umar al-Kharraz told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The tree from which Adam, peace be upon him, was forbidden is the ear of corn. Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn Uyaynah and Ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of al-Hasan ibn Amara, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Umar, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is the ear of corn. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said, on the authority of a man of knowledge, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It is wheat. Ibn Jarir said: al-Muthanna ibn Ibrahim told me, Muslim ibn Ibrahim told us, al-Qasim told us, a man from Banu Tamim told me that Ibn Abbas wrote to Abu al-Jild asking him about the tree from which Adam ate and the tree at which Adam repented. Abu al-Jild wrote to him: You asked me about the tree from which Adam was forbidden, which is the ear of corn, and you asked me about the tree at which Adam repented, which is the olive tree. This is how al-Hasan al-Basri, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Atiyah al-Awfi, Abu Malik, Muharrir ibn Dithar, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Abi Layla, and Muhammad bin Ishaq said on the authority of some of the people of Yemen on the authority of Wahb bin Munabbih that he used to say it is wheat, but the grain of it in Paradise is like the kidney of a cow and softer than butter and sweeter than honey, and Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Hisin on the authority of Abu Malik, And do not approach this tree, he said the palm tree, and Ibn Jarir said on the authority of Mujahid, And do not approach this tree, he said the fig tree, and Qatada and Ibn Jurayj said the same, and Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, the tree was such that whoever ate from it would break his ablution, and there should not be a break in Paradise, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: 'Umar bin 'Abd al-Rahman bin Mihran told us, he said: I heard Wahb bin Munabbih say: When God settled Adam and his wife in Paradise and forbade him from eating from the tree, and it was a tree with branches branching out from each other, and it had fruit that the angels would eat for their immortality, and it is the tree that God forbade Adam and his wife from.

These are six sayings in interpreting this tree. Imam Abu Ja'far ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: The correct thing to say is that God Almighty forbade Adam and his wife from eating from a specific tree of the trees of Paradise, not from the rest of its trees, so they ate from it, and we do not know which tree it was specifically, because God did not provide evidence for His servants for that in the Qur'an or the authentic Sunnah. It has been said: It was the tree of barley, and it has been said: It was the grape tree, and it has been said: It was the fig tree, and it is possible that it was one of them, and that is knowledge that if it is known, it does not benefit the scholar in his knowledge of it, and if an ignorant person is ignorant of it, his ignorance of it does not harm him, and God knows best. This is also what Al-Razi and others preferred in his interpretation, and this is correct. God Almighty's statement: So Satan caused them to slip from it It is correct that the pronoun in His statement from it refers to Paradise, so the meaning of the statement is as 'Asim ibn Bahdalâh, who is the son of Abi Al-Najud, read: So he caused them to slip meaning he pushed them away. It is also correct that it refers to the closest of the two mentioned, which is the tree, so the meaning of the statement is as Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: So he caused them to slip meaning from before the slip. So on this basis, the meaning of the statement is: Then Satan caused them to slip from it meaning because of it, as God Almighty said: He turns away from it whoever is turned away meaning he turns away because of it whoever is turned away. That is why God Almighty said: Then He removed them from what they were in meaning of clothing, spacious home, pleasant provision and comfort. "And We said, 'Go down, some of you as enemies to others. And you will have upon the earth a place of settlement and provision for a time" meaning a settlement, provisions and terms - for a time - meaning until a specific time and amount, then the Resurrection will take place. The commentators from the Salaf, such as al-Suddi with his chains of transmission, Abu al-Aaliyah, Wahb ibn Munabbih and others, mentioned here Israelite accounts about the story of the serpent and Satan, and how Satan entered Paradise and whispered to him. We will elaborate on that, God willing, in Surat al-A'raf, for there the story is simpler than it is here. And God is the Grantor of success. Ibn Abi Hatim said here: Ali ibn al-Hasan ibn Ishkab told us, Ali ibn Asim told us, on the authority of Sa'id ibn Abi 'Aruba, on the authority of Qatadah, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Ubayy ibn Ka'b, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God created Adam as a man. Long and hairy, like a date palm tree. When he tasted the tree, his clothing fell off him, and the first thing that appeared of him was his private parts. When he looked at his private parts, he began to struggle in Paradise, and a tree took hold of his hair, so he struggled with it. The Most Merciful called out to him: O Adam, do you flee from me? When he heard the words of the Most Merciful, he said: O Lord, no, but out of shyness. He said: Ja'far bin Ahmad bin Al-Hakam Al-Qurashi told me in the year two hundred and fifty-four, Sulayman bin Mansur bin Ammar told us,

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

Ali bin Asim told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Ubayy bin Ka'b, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "When Adam tasted of the tree, he fled, fleeing, and a tree caught his hair, so he was called: O Adam, are you fleeing from Me? He said: Rather, out of shyness from you. He said: O Adam, leave My vicinity, for by My glory, no one who disobeys Me shall live in it. And if I created the likes of you to fill the earth, and they disobeyed Me, I would make them dwell in the abode of the disobedient." This is a strange hadith, and in it there is an interruption, or rather a rupture, between Qatada and Ubayy bin Ka'b, may God be pleased with them. Al-Hakim said: Abu Bakr bin Baluyah told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ahmad bin Al-Nadr, on the authority of Mu'awiyah bin Amr, on the authority of Za'idah, on the authority of Ammar bin Abi Mu'awiyah Al-Bajali, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Adam was not made to dwell in Paradise except between the afternoon prayer and sunset. Then he said: It is authentic according to the conditions of the two sheikhs, but they did not include it. Abdul bin Hamid said in his interpretation: Ruh narrated to us from Hisham from Al-Hasan, who said: Adam stayed in Paradise for an hour of the day of that hour, one hundred and thirty years of the days of the world. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said, from Al-Rabi bin Anas, who said: Adam left Paradise at the ninth or tenth hour, so Adam brought out with him a branch from the trees of Paradise on his head, a crown from the trees of Paradise, which is a wreath of leaves from Paradise. Al-Suddi said: God the Almighty said: Descend from it, all of you, so they descended and Adam descended to India, and the Black Stone and a handful of leaves from Paradise descended with him, so he spread it in India and the tree of perfume grew, so the origin of the perfume that is brought from India is from the handful of leaves that Adam descended with, and Adam only took it out of grief for Paradise when he was expelled from it. Imran bin Uyyaynah said, from Ata bin Al-Saib, from Saeed bin Jubair, from Ibn Abbas, who said: Adam descended from Paradise by rolling the land of India. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Zur'ah told us, Uthman ibn Abi Shaybah told us, Jarir told us, Ata' told us, Saeed told us, Ibn Abbas said: Adam, peace be upon him, descended to a land called Dahna, between Mecca and Taif. And Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: Adam descended in India, and Eve in Jeddah, and Satan in Dastamisan, miles from Basra, and the serpent descended in Isfahan. Narrated by Ibn Abi Hatim. Muhammad ibn Abi Hatim said: Muhammad ibn Ammar ibn Al-Harith told us, Muhammad ibn Sabeq told us, Umar ibn Abi Qais told us, on the authority of Al-Zubayr ibn Adi, on the authority of Ibn Umar, who said: Adam descended at Al-Safa and Eve at Al-Marwah. Raja bin Salamah said: Adam, peace be upon him, lowered his hands to his knees, bowing his head, and Iblis descended, interlacing his fingers and raising his head to the sky. Abdul Razzaq said: Muammar said: Aouf told me, on the authority of Qasama bin Zuhair, on the authority of Abu Musa, who said: When God sent Adam down from Paradise to Earth, He taught him how to make everything and provided him with fruits of Paradise. These fruits of yours are from the fruits of Paradise, except that some change and others do not change. Al-Zuhri said, on the authority of Abdul Rahman bin Harmaz Al-Araj, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, who said: The Messenger of God, peace and blessings be upon him, said: "The best day on which the sun has risen is Friday. On it Adam was created, on it he entered Paradise, and on it he was expelled from it." Narrated by Muslim and Al-Nasa'i. Al-Razi said: I know that in this verse there is a great threat against all sins from several aspects. The first is that whoever imagines what happened to Adam because of his committing this small mistake will be extremely afraid of sins. The poet said:

O you who look with the eyes of one asleep and observe the matter without seeing it

Sins lead to sins and you hope to reach the level of Paradise and attain the victory of the worshipper.

Did you forget your Lord when He brought Adam out of it into the world for one sin?

Ibn Al-Qasim said:

But we are the enemy's captives, so do you think we will return to our homelands and surrender?

Al-Razi said on the authority of Fath al-Mawsili that he said: We were a people from the people of Paradise, then Satan took us to the world, so we have nothing but worry and sadness until we return to the home from which we were expelled. If it is said: If the Paradise from which Adam was expelled was in heaven, as the majority of scholars say, then how was Satan able to enter Paradise, when he was expelled from there by a predestination, and the predestinationist does not contradict or prevent? The answer is: This is exactly what was used as evidence by those who say that the Paradise in which Adam was was on earth, not in heaven, as we have explained in detail at the beginning of our book Al-Bidayah wa al-Nihayah. The majority responded with answers, one of which is: He was prevented from entering Paradise with honor, but as for theft and humiliation, he is not prevented. For this reason, some of them said: As it came in the Torah that he entered Paradise through the mouth of the snake. Some of them said: It is possible that he whispered to them while he was outside the gate of Paradise. Some of them said: It is possible that he whispered to them while he was on earth, and they were in heaven. This was mentioned by al-Zamakhshari and others. Al-Qurtubi mentioned here hadiths about snakes and killing them and explaining the ruling on that, and he did a good job and was useful.

And He removed them from the slip, which is the sin, meaning He caused them to slip and make them fall into it. Hamza read Faazalahuma with the confirmation of the alif from the removal, which is the lower one: meaning He removed them - and the rest read without the alif. Ibn Kaysan said: It is from the removal: meaning He turned them away from what they were doing of obedience to disobedience. Al-Qurtubi said: According to this, the two readings have the same meaning, except that the reading of the group is more possible in meaning. It is said from it: I caused him to slip, so he slipped. 36- From it is related to His saying: I removed them, on the basis of its including the meaning of issued: meaning the devil caused their slip from it, meaning because of it, meaning the tree. It was said: The pronoun refers to Paradise, and according to this, the verb includes the meaning of He removed them: meaning He removed them from Paradise. And his saying: So he expelled them is an emphasis on the meaning of the first sentence: that is, he removed them, if its meaning is that they were removed from the place, and if its meaning is not that, then it is an establishment, because expulsion is more than just being turned away and removed and the like, because turning away from the tree and removing from it may be with remaining in Paradise, unlike their being turned away from the bliss and honor they were in or from Paradise. And this is attributed to Satan because he is the one who led Adam astray until he ate from the tree. And the people of knowledge differed about the manner in which Satan did this in causing them to slip, so it was said: that it was through his speaking to them, and the majority went to this and they used as evidence for that God the Almighty says: And swear to them, 'I am to you both a sincere adviser.' The apparent meaning of swearing is verbal exchange. It has been said that nothing came from him except a mere whisper, and other things have been said that will come in what has been narrated from the predecessors. His statement: Descend is addressed to Adam and Eve, and they were addressed in the same way as a group because two is the smallest group according to some of the scholars of Arabic. It has been said that it is addressed to them and their descendants, because since they were the origin of this human species, they were made to be in its place. This is indicated by His statement: Some of you are enemies to one another. This sentence, which is a state explaining the fixed state of those ordered to descend, indicates that. The enemy is the opposite of the friend, and it is from 'ada if he wrongs. It is said: a wolf is 'adwan, meaning he attacks people. 'Adwan is blatant injustice. It has been said that it is taken from 'amajawazah, it is said 'adahu if he exceeded it, and the two meanings are close, for whoever wrongs has exceeded. Rather, He reported His statement, some of you, by saying, enemy, even though it is singular, because the word some, even though its meaning is likely to be plural, is a singular branch of the word, and He reported about it with the singular. The meaning may be taken into consideration and He reported about it with the plural. It may be answered that enemy, even though it is singular, may be used in the place of the plural, like the statement of the Most High, And they are an enemy to you, and His statement, "They think that every shout is against them. They are the enemy." Ibn Faris said: The enemy is a comprehensive name for one, two, and three.

What is meant by settled is the place of settlement, and from it The companions of Paradise, that Day, will be the best settlement. So the verse is open to both meanings, and similar to it is His statement: He has made the earth a resting place for you. And enjoyment: what is enjoyed of food, drink, clothing, and the like. The commentators differed regarding His statement: for a time. Some said: until death, and some said: until the Day of Resurrection. The original meaning of time in the language is: distant time, and from it is Has there not been over man a period of time? and from it is So leave them in their distress until a time meaning until their appointed times are over, and it is used for a year, and some said: for six months, and from it is It yields its fruit every time and it is used for the evening and morning, and from it is when you go to bed and when you wake up. Al-Farra' said: "Time is of two types: a time when its limit is not determined, then he mentioned the other time and its difference according to the different situations as we mentioned. Ibn al-Arabi said: The unknown time is not subject to a ruling, and the known time is a year. The meaning of Adam receiving the words: his taking them and accepting what was in them and acting upon them. It was said: his understanding of them and his intelligence regarding what they contained. The original meaning of receiving is reception: that is, he received the words revealed to him. Whoever reads Adam with the accusative case makes it mean that the words received him. It was said: the meaning of receiving is being taught, but there is no basis for this in Arabic. The predecessors differed in identifying these words and it will come. Repentance: returning. It is said that the servant repented: if he returned to the obedience of his Lord, and a servant who repents often: he returns, so the meaning of repented upon him: returned upon him with mercy, so it was said that his repentance or his success in repentance. And the mention of repentance was limited to Adam and not Eve despite their sharing in the sin, because the discussion is from the beginning of the story with him, so it continued on that and the repentance upon him dispensed with mentioning repentance upon her because she was subordinate to him, just as the attribution of the sin to him dispensed with attributing it to her in His statement: "And Adam disobeyed his Lord and went astray." As for His statement: We said, 'Go down,' after His statement: We said, 'Go down,' He repeated it for emphasis and emphasis. It was said: When a ruling other than the first ruling was attached to it, it was repeated and there was no conflict between the requirements. Repetition may be for both matters together. The answer to the condition in His statement: If there comes to you guidance from Me is the second condition with its answer, as Sibawayh said. Al-Kisa'i said: The answer to the first and second conditions is His statement: Then there is no fear. They differed in the meaning of the guidance mentioned. It was said: It is the Book of God, and it was said: Success in guidance. Fear is panic, and it only occurs in the future. Al-Zuhri, Al-Hasan, Isa bin Ammar, Ibn Abi Ishaq, and Ya'qub read Then there is no fear with the opening of the fa'. Al-Huzn is the opposite of joy. Al-Yazidi said: Haznahu is the language of Quraysh, and ahznahu is the language of Tamim. They have been read with both. And the company of the people of Hell has the meaning of coupling and adherence. The interpretation of eternity has been mentioned above.

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

Abu Al-Shaykh and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Abu Dharr who said: "I said, 'O Messenger of God, was Adam a prophet?' He said, 'Yes, he was a prophet and a messenger to whom God spoke and said to him: 'O Adam, dwell, you and your wife, in Paradise.'" Ibn Abi Shaybah and Al-Tabarani narrated on the authority of Abu Dharr who said: I said, 'O Messenger of God, who was the first prophet?' He said, 'Adam.' I said, 'A prophet?' He said, 'Yes.' I said, 'Then who?' He said, 'Noah, and between them were ten fathers.' Ahmad, Al-Bukhari in his History, and Al-Bayhaqi in Al-Shu'ab narrated something similar from the hadith of Abu Dharr with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, and he added, How many were the messengers? He said, Three hundred and fifteen, a great multitude. Ibn Abi Hatim, Ibn Hibban, Al-Tabarani, Al-Hakim who authenticated it and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abu Umamah Al-Bahili, "A man said: O Messenger of God, was Adam a prophet? He said: Yes. He said: How long was the period between him and Noah? He said: Ten centuries. He said: How long was the period between Noah and Abraham? He said: Ten centuries. He said: O Messenger of God, how many prophets were there? He said: One hundred thousand and twenty-four thousand. He said: O Messenger of God, how many messengers were there? He said: Three hundred and fifteen, a great multitude." Ahmad, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Al-Tabarani and Ibn Mardawayh narrated a similar hadith from Abu Umamah, and he stated that the questioner was Abu Dharr. Abd bin Hamid and Al-Hakim narrated who authenticated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Adam did not inhabit Paradise except between the afternoon prayer and sunset. Abd Al-Razzaq, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on his authority that he said: The sun did not set on that day until he was sent down from Paradise. Al-Faryabi, Ahmad in Az-Zuhd, Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan who said: Adam stayed in Paradise for one hour of a day, that hour was one hundred and thirty years of the days of this world. The estimation of the stay in Paradise was narrated on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, which is similar to what was mentioned above on the authority of Ibn Abbas, as Ahmad narrated it in Az-Zuhd. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Al-Bayhaqi and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions who said: When Adam inhabited Paradise, he was walking around in it like a wild animal, and he had no wife to live with. He slept and woke up to find a woman sitting at his head whom God had created from his rib. Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Treat women well, for women were created from a rib, and the most crooked part of the rib is its top. If you try to straighten it, you will break it, and if you leave it, you will leave it crooked." Abu

Al-Shaykh and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: She was called Eve because she is the mother of all living things. Ibn Adi and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Al-Nakha'i who said: When God created Adam and created his wife for him, He sent an angel to him and commanded him to have intercourse, so he did. When he finished, Eve said to him: O Adam, this is good, give us more of it. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions who said: Pleasure is good. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: Pleasure is ample living. They narrated on his authority regarding His statement: And eat from it in abundance as you wish, he said: There is no reckoning upon you. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Abu Al-Shaykh and Ibn Asakir narrated through various chains of narration on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: The tree from which God forbade Adam was the spike of wheat, and in another version: wheat. Abd Ibn Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority who said: It is the vine. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud. Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on his authority who said: It is the almond. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of some of the Companions who said: It is the fig tree. Abu Al-Shaykh narrated something similar on the authority of Mujahid and Ibn Abi Hatim on the authority of Qatadah. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih who said: It is the wheat. Abu Sheikh narrated on the authority of Abu Malik who said: It is the palm tree. Abu Sheikh narrated on the authority of Yazid ibn Abdullah ibn Qusayt who said: It is the citron. Ahmad narrated in Az-Zuhd on the authority of Shuaib Al-Jubbai who said: It resembles the wheat and is called the Da'ah. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, So he led them astray, he said: So he led them astray. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Asim ibn Bahdalah who said: So he led them astray, he said: So he removed them. Abu Dawud narrated in Al-Masahif on the authority of Al-A'mash who said: Our reading in Al-Baqarah instead of So he led them astray, is: So he whispered. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud and some of the Companions who said: Satan wanted to enter Paradise with them, but the guards prevented him. So he came to a serpent, which was a four-legged creature like a camel and the most beautiful of beasts. He spoke to it to put him in its mouth so that it could take him to Adam. So it put him in its mouth, and the serpent passed by the guards and entered, and they did not know what God intended of the matter. So it spoke to him from its mouth, but he did not care about what it said. So it came out to him and said: O Adam, Shall I guide you to the tree of eternity and a kingdom that will not decay? And he swore to them by God, Indeed, I am to you among the sincere advisors. But Adam refused to eat from it, so Eve came forward and ate, then she said: O Adam, eat, for I have already eaten and it did not harm me. So when they had eaten, their private parts became apparent to them, and they began to fasten over themselves from the leaves of Paradise. The story of the serpent and Satan entering with it was narrated by Abd al-Razzaq and Ibn Jarir on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Ibn Sa'd, Ahmad in Az-Zuhd, Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Al-Hakim who authenticated it, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abi ibn Ka'b on the authority of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) who said: "Adam was a tall man like a palm tree, sixty cubits tall, with much hair on his head. When he committed the sin, his private parts became apparent to him." The hadeeth was narrated by Ibn Mani', Ibn Al-Mundhir, Abu Al-Shaykh, Al-Hakim who authenticated it, and Al-Bayhaqi in Ash-Shu'ab on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: God said to Adam: What made you eat from the tree which I forbade you from? He said: O Lord, Eve made it seem good to me. He said: Then I punished her by making her conceive with difficulty and give birth with difficulty, and I caused her to bleed twice a month. Al-Bukhari and Al-Hakim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah on the authority of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) who said: Had it not been for the Children of Israel, meat would not have been deceived, and had it not been for Eve, no woman would have been deceived by her husband. Many hadiths have been proven from a group of the Companions in the two Sahihs and others about the argument between Adam and Moses. Adam argued with Moses by saying: Do you blame me for something that God decreed for me before I was created?

Tafsir al-Baghawi

36. So he made them slip Satan made Adam and Eve slip, that is, he invited them to slip. Hamza read: So he made them slip, that is, Satan removed them, from the root word shatna, meaning: far away. He was named thus because of his distance from goodness and mercy, from it from Paradise. So he expelled them from what they were in of bliss. This is because Satan wanted to enter to whisper to Adam and Eve, but the guards prevented him, so he came to the snake, which was a friend of Satan and was one of the most beautiful beasts. It had four legs like the legs of a camel, and it was one of the guards of Paradise. Then Satan asked them to put him in their mouths, so they put him in and passed by the closet without him knowing, so they brought him into Paradise. Al-Hasan said: He saw them at the door of Paradise because they were leaving it. When Adam entered Paradise and saw the bliss in it, he said: If only I were immortal. Satan took advantage of that and came to him from the direction of immortality. When he entered Paradise, he stood before Adam and Eve, and they did not know that he was Satan. He cried and wailed in a way that saddened them, and he was the first to wail. They said to him: What makes you cry? He said: I am crying for you, you will die and be separated from the bliss you are in. That fell on their souls and they were saddened, and Satan went away. Then he came to them after that and said: O Adam, shall I guide you to the tree of immortality? But he refused to accept it from him, and he swore to them by God that he was one of their sincere advisors. They were deceived and did not think that anyone would swear falsely by God. So Eve hastened to eat from the tree and then she gave it to Adam until he ate it.

Saeed bin Al-Musayyab swore by God that Adam did not eat from the tree while he was sane, but Eve gave him wine to drink until he became drunk and then led him to eat.

Ibrahim bin Adham said: That meal caused us long-lasting sadness. Ibn Abbas and Qatada said: God the Almighty said to Adam: Was there not in what I permitted you of Paradise an alternative to the tree? He said: Yes, O Lord, by Your glory, but I did not think that anyone would swear by You falsely. He said: By My glory, I will surely send you down to the earth, and you will not attain life except with toil. So they were sent down from Paradise and they ate therein in abundance. He learned the craft of iron and was commanded to plow. So he plowed therein, planted, then watered until it ripened and harvested. Then he trampled it, winnowed it, ground it, kneaded it, baked it, then ate it. But he did not reach it until he had reached what he wanted of it. Saeed bin Jubair said: On the authority of Ibn Abbas: When Adam ate from the tree that he was forbidden from, God Almighty said: What made you do what you did? He said: O Lord, Eve has made it pleasing to me. He said: Then I made her not to conceive except with difficulty and not to give birth except with difficulty, and I gave birth twice a month. Eve was frightened at that, and it was said: You and your daughters are to be frightened. When they ate, their clothes fell off them and their private parts became visible, and they were expelled from Paradise. This is what God Almighty said: "And We said: Descend" meaning bring him down to the earth, meaning Adam, Eve, Satan, and the serpent. So Adam descended in Serendib in the land of India on a mountain called Nud, and Eve in Jeddah, Satan in Ayla, and the serpent in Isfahan. Some of you are enemies to one another meaning the enmity between the offspring of Adam and the serpent, and between the believers from the offspring of Adam and Satan. God Almighty said: Indeed, Satan is to you both a clear enemy 22-Al-A'raf.

I am Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Salihi, I am Abu Al-Hasan bin Bishran, I am Ismail bin Muhammad Al-Saffar, I am Ahmad Muhammad Al-Saffar, Mansour Al-Ramadi told us, I am Abdul-Razzaq, I am Muammar, on the authority of Ayoub, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both. Ikrimah said: I do not know of it except that he raised the hadith, that he used to order the killing of snakes and said: Whoever leaves them out of fear or dread of a rebel is not one of us. And Musa bin Muslim added on the authority of Ikrimah in the hadith: We have not made peace with them since we fought them [and it was narrated that he forbade those with houses, and Abu Saeed Al-Khudri narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: In Medina there are jinn who have become Muslims, so if you see one of them, give it warning for three days, and if it appears to you after that, kill it, for it is a devil.]

God Almighty says: And for you on the earth is a place of settlement a place of settlement and provision in language and enjoyment for a time until the end of your terms.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:36

Then Satan caused them to slip from it and removed them from that in which they had been, and We said, "Go down, one of you an enemy to the other. And for you upon the earth is a place of settlement and provision for a time."

Tafsir al-Baidawi

36- So Satan caused them to slip from it He caused them to slip from the tree and made them slip because of it, and a similar thing about this is in the Almighty's saying: And I did not do it of my own accord. Or he caused them to slip from Paradise meaning he made them go away, and this is supported by the reading of Hamza, So he caused them to slip and they are close in meaning, except that slipping requires a stumble with the disappearance, and his causing them to slip is his saying: Shall I guide you to the tree of eternity and a kingdom that will not decay? and his saying: Your Lord did not forbid you from this tree except that you should become angels or become of the immortals and his sharing it with it by his saying: Indeed, I am to you both among the sincere advisors. And there is disagreement as to whether he appeared to them and said that to them, or he threw it to them by way of whispering, and how he reached their humiliation after it was said to him: Get out of it, for indeed, you are expelled. It was said: He was prevented from entering as a sign of honor, as he used to enter with the angels, but he was not prevented from entering to tempt Adam and Eve as a test. It was also said: He stood at the door and called them. It was also said: He took the form of a beast and entered, but the guards did not recognize him. It was also said: He entered the mouth of the snake until it entered with him. It was also said: He sent some of his followers and they slipped, and knowledge is with God, the Most High, the Most Great.

He brought them out of what they were in, meaning of honor and comfort.

And We said, 'Descend,' is addressed to Adam, peace be upon him, and Eve, as God Almighty says: He said, 'Descend from it, all of you.' The pronoun is plural because they are originally the same species, so it is as if they were all of humanity. Or they and Satan were taken out of it a second time after he had entered it to whisper, or he entered it stealthily or from the sky.

Some of you are enemies to others is a state in which the waw is dispensed with by the pronoun, and the meaning is that you are enemies, some of you seeking to mislead others.

And you have on earth a place of settlement is a place of settlement, or stability.

Enjoyment means enjoyment. For a time means the time of death or resurrection.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:37

Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, and He accepted his repentance. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Then Adam received from his Lord words He inspired him with them, and in a reading with Adam in the accusative and nominative cases the words, meaning they came to him and they are {Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves} the verse - so he called upon them and He accepted his repentance before his repentance He is the Acceptor of Repentance to His servants the Most Merciful to them.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: As for the interpretation of his saying: So Adam met, it was said that he took and accepted. Its origin is the verb to meet from the verb to meet, as a man meets another man who is facing him when he returns from his absence or travel, so it is as if that is the case in his saying So he met, as if he welcomed him and received him with acceptance when he was inspired or informed about it. So the meaning of that is: So God met Adam with words of repentance, so Adam received them from his Lord and took them from him repentant, so God accepted his repentance by saying them and accepting them from his Lord. Like:

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words (al-A'raf 7:23). He said: He received this verse from them: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers.

Some of them read: Then Adam received from his Lord words, making the words the recipient, Adam. This, although it is permissible from the Arabic perspective, since everything that a man receives is his recipient, and whatever he encounters, he has encountered, so it became for the speaker to direct the action to whichever he wishes, and to exclude from the action whichever he loves, so it is not permissible in my view in the reading except to raise Adam as the recipient of the words, due to the consensus of the proof from the reciters and the people of interpretation from the scholars of the predecessors and successors, on directing the reception to Adam and not the words. And it is not permissible to object to it in what it was agreed upon, by the saying of one who is allowed to make mistakes and forgetfulness.

The people of interpretation differed regarding the specifics of the words that Adam received from his Lord. Some of them said what: Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Ibn Atiyah narrated to us, on the authority of Qais, on the authority of Ibn Abi Laila, on the authority of Al-Munhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance. He said: O Lord, did You not create me with Your hand? He said: Yes. He said: O Lord, did You not breathe into me of Your spirit? He said: Yes. He said: O Lord, did You not inhabit Your Paradise? He said: Yes. He said: O Lord, did Your mercy not precede Your wrath? He said: Yes. He said: Tell me, if I repent and reform, will You return me to Paradise? He said: Yes.

He said: It is his saying: Then Adam received from his Lord words.

Ali bin Al-Hussein told me, he said: Muslim told us, he said: Muhammad bin Mus'ab told us, on the authority of Qais bin Al-Rabi', on the authority of Asim bin Kulayb, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, something similar.

Muhammad bin Saad told me: My father told me: My uncle told me: My father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance, he said: Adam said to his Lord when he disobeyed Him: Lord, what if I repent and reform? His Lord said to him: I will take you back to Paradise.

Bishr bin Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid bin Zari' narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, he mentioned to us that he said: O Lord, what if I repent and reform? He said: Then I will return to You in Paradise. He said: Al-Hasan said: They both said: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers (al-A'raf 7:23).

Al-Muthanna told me: Adam Al-Asqalani told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement, Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, he said: When Adam committed the sin, he said: O Lord, what if you repent and reform? God said: Then I will return you to Paradise. So it is from the words. And from the words also: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. (Al-A'raf: 23)

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words. He said: My Lord, did you not create me with your hand? He was told: Yes. He said: And did you breathe into me of your spirit? He was told: Yes. He said: And did your mercy precede your wrath? He was told: Yes. He said: My Lord, did you write this for me? He was told: Yes. He said: My Lord, if I repent and reform, will you return to Paradise? He was told: Yes. God Almighty said: Then his Lord chose him and turned to him in forgiveness and guided him. (Ta-Ha: 122)

Others said: Muhammad bin Bashir narrated to us, he said: Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi narrated to us, he said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:37

Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, and He accepted his repentance. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful.

Sufyan narrated to us, on the authority of Abd al-Aziz bin Rafi', he said: He who heard Ubayd bin Umair say: Adam said: O Lord, was my sin that I committed something that You wrote for me before You created me, or something that I innovated for myself? He said: Yes, something that I wrote for You before I created you. He said: As You wrote it for me, forgive me for it. He said: This is the saying of God: Then Adam received from his Lord words.

Ibn Sinan told us: Muammil told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Rafi', who said: I was told by someone who heard Ubayd bin Umair, something similar.

Ibn Sinan told us: Waki' ibn al-Jarrah told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abd al-Aziz ibn Rafi', on the authority of someone who heard Ubayd ibn Umair say: Adam said? Then he mentioned something similar.

Al-Muthanna told us: Abu Naim told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Rafi', who said: He told me, from someone who heard Ubayd bin Umair, something similar.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Al-Thawri told us, on the authority of Abd al-Aziz, on the authority of Ubayd bin Umair, something similar.

Others said:

Ahmad bin Othman bin Hakim Al-Awdi narrated to me, he said: Abd Al-Rahman bin Sharik narrated to us, he said: My father narrated to us, he said: Hiseen bin Abd Al-Rahman narrated to us, on the authority of Hamid bin Nabhan, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Yazid bin Muawiyah, that he said: His statement: Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance, Adam said: O God, there is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, I seek Your forgiveness and I repent to You, accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Abu Ghassan told us, he said: Abu Zuhair informed us, and Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us, he said: Abu Ahmad informed us, he said: Sufyan and Qais both told us on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [some] words, he said: His statement: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us (al-A'raf 7:23), until he finished it.

Al-Muthanna told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shibl told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who used to say regarding the statement of God: Then Adam received from his Lord words, the words: O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You. My Lord, I have wronged myself, so forgive me, for You are the best of forgivers. O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You. My Lord, I have wronged myself, so have mercy on me, for You are the best of the merciful. O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You.

My Lord, I have wronged myself, so accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful.

Ibn Wakee' narrated: My father narrated:

An-Nadhriban Arabi narrated: Mujahid said: Then Adam received from his Lord [some] words, meaning His statement: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us (al-A'raf 7:23). Al-Qasim narrated: Al-Husayn narrated: Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Then Adam received from his Lord [some] words, meaning: O Lord, will You accept my repentance if I repent? He said: Yes. So Adam repented, and his Lord accepted his repentance.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us: Abd al-Razzaq told us: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, he said: They are his statement: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. (al-A'raf 7:23)

Yunus told me, he said Ibn Wahb told us, he said Ibn Zayd said: It is His saying: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers (al-A'raf 7:23).

These sayings that we have narrated from those from whom we have narrated them, even though their wording is different, their meanings are in agreement, in that God, may He be glorified, spoke words to Adam, and Adam received them from his Lord, so he accepted them and acted upon them, and repented to God for his sin by saying and doing them, confessing his guilt, absolving himself before his Lord of his sin, regretting what had happened from him of disobeying His command, so God repented of him by accepting the words that he received from him, and his regret for his previous sin.

What the Book of God indicates is that the words that Adam received from his Lord are the words that God informed us that he said, evading having said them to his Lord, confessing his sin, which is his saying: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers (al-A'raf 7:23). What was said by the one who contradicted our statement is not among the statements that we have narrated with his statement being refuted, but it is a statement that has no supporting evidence that must be accepted, so it is permissible for us to attribute it to Adam, and that it is among what he received from his Lord when he repented to Him for his sin. This report that God told about Adam from what he said to him, so he said it repenting to Him for his sin, is a definition from Him, the Most High, to all those addressed by His Book, how to repent to Him for sins, and a warning to those addressed by His saying: How do you disbelieve in God when you were dead and He gave you life? (al-Baqarah 2:28), on the subject of repentance from what they are upon of disbelief in God, and that their salvation from what they are continuing upon of misguidance, is similar to the salvation of their father Adam from his sin, along with His reminding them of the blessings that preceded them with which He singled out their father Adam and others of their fathers.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Then He accepted his repentance.

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, So He accepted his repentance, means: to Adam. The ha in upon him refers back to Adam. His statement, So He accepted his repentance, means that He granted him repentance from his sin. Repentance means turning to God and returning to His obedience from what one dislikes of disobeying Him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: "Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. We said, 'Descend from it, all of you.'"

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of His statement, Indeed, He is the Forgiving, the Most Merciful, is that God, the Most High, is the Forgiving of repentance for whoever of His sinful servants repents to Him from his sins, abandoning his punishment by returning to His obedience after his disobedience due to his previous sin. We have already mentioned that the meaning of repentance from the servant to his Lord is his return to His obedience, and his return to what pleases Him by abandoning what angers Him from the matters that he was doing that his Lord hates. Likewise, God's repentance for His servant is that He provides him with that, and returns him from His anger with him to His pleasure with him, and from punishment to pardon and forgiveness for him.

As for his saying: The Most Merciful, it means that He is the One who bestows His knowledge upon him along with His mercy upon him. His mercy upon him is the forgiveness of his missteps and His pardon of the punishment of his crime.

Abu Ja'far said: We have already mentioned the interpretation of His statement: We said, 'Go down from it, all of you,' previously, so we have no need to repeat it, since its meaning in this place is the same as its meaning in that place.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me: Hisham told us: Ismail bin Salem told us, on the authority of Abu Saleh, regarding his statement: Descend from it, all of you, he said: Adam, Eve, the serpent, and Satan.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So if there comes to you guidance from Me.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of his statement: If they come to you, is: If they come to you. And what with in is an emphasis of the speech, and because it is included with in, the doubled nun was inserted in they come to you, to differentiate by its inclusion between what which comes with the meaning of emphasis of the speech, which the Arabs call connection and stuffing, and what which comes with the meaning of who, so it indicates its inclusion in the verb, that what with in which means reward, is an emphasis, and what is not in the meaning of who.

Some of the grammarians of Basra said: "If 'in' is added to it, and the verb that follows it is with a light or heavy 'nun', it may be without a 'nun'. The 'nun' is made good in it because 'ma' enters it, because 'ma' negates, so it is not obligatory, and it is the letter that negates an obligation, so the 'nun' is made good in it, like their saying: 'Bi-ayn ma 'arinikka' I see you, when 'ma' is added to it, the 'nun' is made good in what is here."

A group of Arabists denied the claim of the author of this article: that what is with, with the eye of what I showed you, means denial, and they claimed that it means emphasis of the speech.

Others said: Rather, it is an overload in the speech, and its meaning is deletion. Rather, the meaning of the speech is: with the eye of arak, and it is not permissible to make it, with the difference in it, a basis by which others are measured.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: "From Me is guidance. So whoever follows My guidance will have no fear, nor will they grieve."

Abu Ja'far said: Guidance, in this context, means clarification and right guidance. Like:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim narrated: Adam Al-Asqalani narrated: Abu Ja'far narrated, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement: Then if there comes to you guidance from Me, he said: Guidance is the prophets, messengers and explanation. If what Abu Al-'Aliyah said about that is as he said, then the address in His statement: Descend, even if it was to Adam and his wife, then it must have been intended to be Adam, his wife and their offspring. That would then be similar to His statement: Then He said to it and to the earth, 'Come in, willingly or by compulsion.' They said, 'We have come in obedience.' 41:11, meaning we have come with what is within us of creation in obedience. It is similar to His statement in the recitation of Ibn Mas'ud: "Our Lord, and make us Muslims [in submission] to You and from our descendants a Muslim nation [in submission] to You. And show us our rites." 2:128 So He made the plural before it was descendants, and in our recitation it is and show us our rites. As one person says to another: It is as if you got married and had children, and you became numerous and powerful, and so on.

We only said that this is what is required according to the interpretation that we mentioned from Abu Al-Aaliyah, because Adam was the prophet during his life after he was sent down to Earth, and the messenger from God, may He be glorified, to his son. So it is not permissible that he is meant to be the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, in His saying: So if there comes to you guidance from Me, addressing him and his wife, So if there comes to you prophets and messengers from Me, except according to the interpretation that I have described.

And the statement of Abu Al-Aaliyah in that, even if it was a possible interpretation of the verse, is closer to being correct than it is in my opinion and more similar to the apparent meaning of the recitation, that its interpretation is: So either there comes to you, O

group of those who have descended to the earth from My heaven, and they are Adam, his wife, and Iblis, as we mentioned before in the interpretation of the verse before it, “or there comes to you from Me a clarification of My command and My obedience, and guidance to My path and My religion, then whoever among you follows it, there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve,” even if there had been before that from them disobedience to Me and opposition to My command and My obedience. He, the Most High, knows that He is the One who repents to those who repent to Him for their sins, and the Most Merciful to those who turn to Him, as He described Himself in His saying: Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful (al-Baqarah 2:37, 54). This is because the apparent address in this is only to those to whom He, the Most High, said: Descend from it, all of you, and those who were addressed by it are those we named in the statement of the proof from the Companions and Followers, from whom we have already presented the narration of it. And even though it was an address from God, the Most High, to those who were sent down from heaven to earth at that time, it is God’s way with all of His creation, and His allusion to that is to those He spoke about at the beginning of this surah with what He spoke about in His saying: Indeed, those who disbelieve - it is all the same to them whether you warn them or do not warn them - they will not believe (al-Baqarah 2:6) and in His saying: And among the people are those who say, ‘We believe in God and the Last Day,’ but they are not believers (al-Baqarah 2:28). And His judgment on them is if they repent to Him and turn back and follow the explanation that He has given them from God has said on the tongue of His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, that they will be with Him in the Hereafter among those who will have no fear and will not grieve, and that if they perish in their disbelief and misguidance before repenting and turning to God, they will be among the people of Hell, abiding therein forever.

And His statement: So whoever follows My guidance, means: So whoever follows My explanation that I gave through the tongues of My messengers, or with My messengers. As Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja’far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi’, on the authority of Abu Al-’Aliyah: So whoever follows My guidance, meaning My explanation.

His statement: There is no fear for them, means that they are safe from the horrors of the Day of Resurrection from God’s punishment, not fearing His torment, because they obeyed God in this world and followed His command, guidance and path, nor will they grieve on that day for what they left behind after their death in this world. Like:

Yunus bin Abdul A’la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said: There is no fear for them, meaning: There is no fear for you in front of you.

There is nothing greater in the heart of the dying than what comes after death. So He reassured them of it and consoled them about the world, saying: Nor will they grieve.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: “Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful.”

The first: The Almighty’s saying: Then Adam received from his Lord words contains eight issues. It was said that it means: he understood and was perceptive. It was also said that it means: he accepted and took. The Prophet, peace be upon him, used to receive revelation, meaning he would receive it, take it, and grasp it. You say: We went out to receive the pilgrims, meaning we would welcome them. It was also said that the meaning of receive is received. This is correct in meaning, but it is not permissible for received to be from received in the original, because one of the two letters is only changed to a ya if they are similar, such as tazzana from tazzannna and taqassa from taqassa. The same applies to tasrayt from tasarat, and amlayt from amalallat, and the like. For this reason, it is not said taqba from taqbal, nor taqlaq from talaqan, so fa’lam. Makki narrated that he inspired it and benefited from it. Al-Hasan said: Receiving it means learning it and acting upon it.

Second: The people of interpretation differed regarding the words. Ibn Abbas, Al-Hasan, Saeed bin Jubair, Ad-Dahhak and Mujahid said that they are His saying: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. Mujahid also said: “Glory be to You, O God! There is no god but You, my Lord! I have wronged myself, so forgive me. Indeed, You are the Forgiving, the Merciful.” A group said: He saw written on the leg of the Throne, Muhammad is the Messenger of God, so he interceded with that, so they are the words. A group said: What is meant by the words is crying, modesty and supplication. It was also said: Regret, seeking forgiveness and sadness. Ibn Atiyyah said: This necessitates that Adam, peace be upon him, did not say anything except the usual seeking forgiveness. Some of the predecessors were asked about what a sinner should say, so he said: He should say what his parents said: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves (al-Baqarah 2:17). And Moses said: My Lord! I have wronged myself, so forgive me. And Yunus said: There is no god but You! Glory be to You! Indeed, I was among the wrongdoers. On the authority of Ibn Abbas and Wahb bin Munabbih: The words: Glory be to You, O God, and praise be to You, there is no god but You, I have done wrong and wronged myself, so forgive me, for You are the best of those who forgive. Glory be to You, O God, and praise be to You, there is no god but You, I have done wrong and wronged myself, so accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. Muhammad bin Kaab said: They are His saying: There is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, I have done wrong and wronged myself, so accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. There is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, I have done wrong and wronged myself, so have mercy on me, for You are the Forgiving, the Most Merciful. There is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, I have done wrong and wronged myself, so have mercy on me, for You are the Most Merciful of the merciful. It was said: The words are his saying when he sneezed: Praise be to God. Words: the plural of word, and the word can be used for little or much. It has been mentioned before.

Third: The Almighty's saying: Then He accepted his repentance, meaning He accepted his repentance, or guided him to repentance. This was on the day of Ashura, which was a Friday, as will be explained, God willing. The servant repented: he returned to obeying his Lord. A servant who frequently returns to obedience. The root of repentance is returning. It is said: he repented, returned, returned, or turned back: he returned.

Fourth: If it is said: Why did He say upon him and not upon them both, and Eve shared with him in the sin by consensus, and He said: And do not approach this tree and They said, "Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves"? The answer is: When Adam, peace be upon him, was addressed at the beginning of the story with His saying: Dwell, He singled him out for mention in the reception, so the story was completed by mentioning him alone. Also, because the woman is sacred and covered, God wanted to cover her, so He did not mention her in the sin in His saying: And Adam disobeyed his Lord and went astray. Also, since the woman is subordinate to the man in most matters, she was not mentioned, just as the servant of Moses was not mentioned with Moses in His saying: Did I not tell you? It was said: By mentioning repentance upon him, he indicated that He repented upon her since He commanded them both equally, said Al-Hasan. It was said: It is like the saying of God Almighty: And when they see a transaction or amusement, they disperse to it meaning the transaction because it was the intention of the people, so He repeated the pronoun upon her and did not say upon them both, and the meaning is close. The poet said:

He accused me of something that my father and I were innocent of, and he accused me of something that was beyond belief.

In the revelation: And God and His Messenger are more deserving that they should be pleased with Him. So it was omitted for the sake of brevity and abbreviation.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. He described Himself, glory be to Him, as the Acceptor of Repentance, and it was repeated in the Qur'an in the definite and indefinite forms, as a noun and a verb. The servant may also be called the Acceptor of Repentance, as God, glory be to Him, said: Indeed, God loves those who repent and loves those who purify themselves. Ibn al-Arabi said: Our scholars have three opinions regarding describing the Lord as the Acceptor of Repentance, the first of which is that it is permissible for the Lord, glory be to Him, to be called by it as in the Qur'an and Sunnah and not to be interpreted. Others said: It is a true description of God, glory be to Him, and God's repentance of the servant is his return from a state of disobedience to a state of obedience. Others said: God's repentance of the servant is His acceptance of his repentance, and this may refer to His saying, glory be to Him: I have accepted your repentance, and that it refers to His creation, repentance and turning in the heart of the wrongdoer and performing acts of obedience with his apparent limbs.

Sixth: It is not permissible to say about God the Most High: Ta'ib, an active participle from the verb taaba yatoob, because we are not to give Him names and attributes other than what He gave Himself, His Prophet, peace be upon him, or the group of Muslims, even if it is linguistically possible and permissible. This is the correct view in this regard, as we have explained in The Most Sublime Book in Explaining the Beautiful Names of God. God the Most High said: God has accepted the repentance of the Prophet, the Muhajireen, and the Ansar. And He said: And it is He who accepts repentance from His servants. God the Most High was called Ta'ib, to emphasize the action and to frequently accept the repentance of His servants due to the large number of those who repent to Him.

Seventh: Know that no one has the power to create repentance, because God, the Most High, is the only One who creates actions, contrary to the Mu'tazilah and those who say what they say. Likewise, no one has the right to accept the repentance of one who has transgressed against himself, nor to forgive him. Our scholars said: The Jews and Christians have disbelieved in this great principle in religion: They have taken their rabbis and monks as lords besides God, the Most High, the Most Great. And they made it possible for anyone who sins to come to the rabbi or monk and give him something and remove his sins, "a forgery against God. They have gone astray and were not [rightly] guided."

Eighth: Ibn Kathir read: Then Adam received from his Lord words. The rest raised Adam and lowered words. Both readings go back to a meaning, because when Adam received words, they received him. It was said: Since the words were the ones that saved Adam by God's guidance for him to accept them and pray for them, the words were the subject, and it seems that the original reading of this reading was Then Adam received from his Lord words. However, since there was distance between the feminine and its verb, it was good to delete the feminine marker. This is a principle that runs throughout the Qur'an and speech when the feminine verb comes without a marker, such as their saying: A woman attended the judge today. It was said: Since the words were not truly feminine, they were taken to mean words, so they were masculine. Al-A'mash read: Adam from his Lord with an assimilation. Abu Nawfal ibn Abi Aqrab read: that with a fat-ha on the hamza, meaning because, and the rest broke it to resume. Abu Amr, Isa, and Talhah assimilated the ha' into the ha', according to what Abu Hatim narrated from them. It was said: It is not permissible, because there is a waw between them in pronunciation but not in writing. Al-Nahhas said: Sibawayh permitted the deletion of this waw, and he recited:

Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, and He accepted his repentance. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful.

He has a high-pitched voice when he asks for a document or a flute.

Therefore, assimilation is permissible, which is raising at the beginning. At-Tawab is its predicate, and the sentence is the predicate of in. It is also permissible for it to be an emphasis of the ha', and it is permissible for it to be a separator, as mentioned above.

Saeed bin Jubair said: When Adam was sent down to Earth, there was nothing on it except the eagle on land and the whale in the sea. The eagle would take refuge with the whale and spend the night with it. When the eagle saw Adam, he said: O whale, today something has been sent down to Earth that walks on its feet and strikes with its hands! The whale said: If you are truthful, then I have no escape from it in the sea, and you have no escape from it on land!

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

It was said that these words are explained by the Almighty's saying: They said, 'Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers.' This was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, Abu al-'Aliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, al-Hasan, Qatadah, Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi, Khalid ibn Ma'dan, Ata' al-Khurasani, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam. Abu Ishaq al-Subai'i said on the authority of a man from Banu Tamim who said: I came to Ibn Abbas and asked him what were the words that Adam received from his Lord? He said: He knew about the Hajj. Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abd al-'Aziz ibn Rafi', he told me who heard Ubayd ibn Umair, and in another narration he said: Mujahid told me on the authority of Ubayd ibn Umair that he said: Adam said: O Lord, was my mistake that I made something that You wrote for me before You created me or something that I innovated on my own? He said: Rather, it is something I wrote for you before I created you. He said: So as You wrote it for me, forgive me. He said: So that is the saying of God Almighty: Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance. Al-Suddi said on the authority of someone who told him on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Then Adam received words from his Lord. He said: Adam, peace be upon him, said: O Lord, did you not create me with Your hand? It was said to him: Yes, and breathed into me of Your spirit? It was said to him: Yes, and I sneezed and said, May God have mercy on you, and did Your mercy prevail over Your wrath? It was said to him: Yes, and You wrote for me to do this? It was said to him: Yes. He said: Tell me, if I repent, will you return to Paradise? He said: Yes. And thus Al-Awfi, Saeed bin Jubair, and Saeed bin Ma'bad narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas in a similar manner. Al-Hakim narrated it in his Mustadrak from the hadith of Ibn Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and he said: Its chain of transmission is authentic, but they did not include it. Al-Suddi and Atiyah Al-Awfi interpreted it in this way. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated a hadith similar to this here, and he said: Ali bin Al-Hussein bin Ishkab narrated to us, Ali bin Asim narrated to us on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Arubah on the authority of Qatadah on the authority of Al-Hasan on the authority of Abi bin Ka'b, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Adam, peace be upon him, said: 'O Lord, what if I repent and return to Paradise?' He said: 'Yes.' This is what God said: 'Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words.'" This hadith is strange from this aspect and it has an interruption. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abi Al-Aliyah regarding God's statement: 'Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, and He turned to him in forgiveness.' He said: When Adam committed the sin, he said: 'O Lord, what if I repent and reform?' God said: Then I will admit you to Paradise. These are the words. Among the words is also: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. Ibn Abi Nujayh said on the authority of Mujahid that he used to say regarding the words of God the Most High: Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance. He said: Words: O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You. My Lord, I have wronged myself, so forgive me, for You are the best of forgivers. O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You. My Lord, I have wronged myself, so have mercy on me, for You are the best of the merciful. O God, there is no god but You, glory and praise be to You. My Lord, I have wronged myself, so accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. And the Almighty's saying, Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful, meaning that He accepts the repentance of whoever repents to Him and returns to Him, as in His saying, Do they not know that it is God who accepts repentance from His servants? and His saying, And whoever does evil or wrongs himself, and His saying, And whoever repents and does righteousness, and other verses indicating that the Almighty forgives sins and accepts the repentance of whoever repents. This is from His kindness to His creation and His mercy to His servants. There is no god but He, the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful.

37- "Then Adam received from his Lord words, and He accepted his repentance. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful."

Tafsir al-Baghawi

37. Fataqalah He received Taqalah He received means acceptance with intelligence and understanding. It was said that it means learning. Adam received from his Lord words The general reading is: Adam with the raising of the mim and Kalimat with the lowering of the ta. Ibn Kathir read: Adam with the accusative, Kalimat with the raising of the ta meaning that the words came to Adam from his Lord, and they were the reason for his repentance. They differed regarding those words. Saeed bin Jubair, Mujahid, and Al-Hasan said: They are His saying, Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves verse.

Mujahid and Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi said: It is His saying, "There is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, my Lord. I have done evil and wronged myself, so forgive me. Indeed, You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful." There is no god but You, glory be to You and praise be to You, my Lord. I have done evil and wronged myself, so have mercy on me. Indeed, You are the Most Merciful of the merciful. Ubayd ibn Umair said: It is that Adam said, O Lord, have you seen what I have done? Is it something I have innovated of my own accord, or something You decreed for me before You created me? God the Almighty said, Rather, it is something I decreed for you before I created you. He said, O Lord, just as You decreed for me before You created me, then forgive me.

It was said: They are three things: modesty, supplication, and weeping. Ibn Abbas said: Adam and Eve wept over the pleasures of Paradise that they missed for two hundred years, and they did not eat or drink for forty days, and Adam/Eve did not come near for one hundred years. Al-Mas'udi narrated on the authority of Yunus bin Khabab and Alqamah bin Marthad that they said: If the tears of the people of the Earth were collected, the tears of David would be more when he committed the sin. If the tears of David and the tears of the people of the Earth were collected, the tears of Adam would be more when God expelled him from Paradise. Shahr bin Hawshab said: It has reached me that when Adam descended to the Earth, he remained for three hundred years without raising his head out of modesty before God Almighty.

His saying: Then He accepted his repentance means He forgave him. He is the Acceptor of Repentance means He accepts the repentance of His servants. The Most Merciful to His creation.

37-Adam received from his Lord words which he accepted and acted upon when he learned them. Ibn Kathir read Adam with the accusative and the nominative as the words received it and conveyed to him, and they are the words of God Almighty: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves. It was also said: Glory be to You, O God, and praise be to You, and blessed be Your name, and exalted be Your majesty. There is no god but You. I have wronged myself, so forgive me, for no one forgives sins except You. And on the authority of Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, he said: O Lord, did You not create me with Your hand? He said: Yes. He said: O Lord, did You not breathe into me the spirit from Your spirit? He said: Yes. He said: O

Lord, did Your mercy not precede Your wrath? He said: Yes. He said: Did You not inhabit Your Paradise? He said: Yes. He said: O Lord, if I repent and reform, will You return me to Paradise? He said: Yes. The root of the word is the word, which is the effect perceived by one of the two senses, hearing and sight, such as speech, surgery, and movement.

So He turned to him in forgiveness means He returned to him with mercy and accepted his repentance. The reason for using the letter fa in order to receive the words is because it includes the meaning of repentance: which is acknowledging the sin, regretting it, and resolving not to return to it. He was satisfied with mentioning Adam because Eve was subordinate to him in the ruling, and for this reason the mention of women was omitted in most of the Qur'an and Sunnah.

He is the Acceptor of Repentance is the One who returns to His servants with forgiveness, or the One who helps them to repent. The root of repentance is: returning, so if the servant is described with it, it is a return from sin, and if the Almighty Creator is described with it, it is intended to mean returning from punishment to forgiveness.

The Most Merciful is the most merciful, and in combining the two descriptions, He promises the repentant goodness and forgiveness.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:38

We said, "Descend from it, all of you. And if there comes to you guidance from Me - whoever follows My guidance - there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:38

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

We said, Descend from it from Paradise (all of you He repeated it to connect it to it and if in it there is an assimilation of the nun of the conditional in into the redundant ma there comes to you guidance from Me a Book and a Messenger then whoever follows My guidance believes in Me and acts in obedience to Me there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve in the Hereafter that they will enter Paradise.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

"We said, 'Descend from it, all of you. And if there comes to you guidance from Me - whoever follows My guidance - there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.'"

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: We said, 'Descend.' The command was repeated for emphasis and emphasis, as you would say to a man: Get up, get up. It was said: The command was repeated because each command was subject to a ruling other than the ruling of the other, so enmity was attached to the first, and guidance was attached to the second. It was said: The first descent was from Paradise to the heaven, and the second was from the heaven to the earth. Based on this, it is evidence that Paradise is in the seventh heaven, as indicated by the hadith of the Night Journey, as will come.

All together is in the accusative case as a state. Wahn ibn Munabbih said: When Adam, peace be upon him, descended to earth, Satan said to the wild beasts: This is an enemy to you, so destroy him. So they gathered and assigned their affair to the dog and said: You are the bravest of us, and they made him their chief. When Adam, peace be upon him, saw that, he was confused about it. So Gabriel, peace be upon him, came to him and said: Wipe your hand over the dog's head. So he did. When the wild beasts saw that the dog had become accustomed to Adam, they dispersed. The dog asked him for protection, so Adam gave him protection, and he remained with him and his children.

Al-Tirmidhi Al-Hakim said something similar to this, and that when Adam, peace be upon him, was sent down to earth, Satan came to the wild beasts and made them attack Adam to harm him, and the most severe of them against him was the dog, so he killed his heart. It was narrated in the hadith that Gabriel, peace be upon him, ordered him to put his hand on his head, so he did so and felt reassured by him and became familiar with him, so he became one of those who guard him and his children and become familiar with them. And with the death of his heart, he is terrified of humans, so if he were to be thrown with a stick, he would run away and then return familiar with them. So in it is a branch of Satan, and in it is a branch of Adam's trait, so with the branch of Satan he barks and growls and attacks humans, and with the trait of Adam his heart died until he was humbled and submitted and became familiar with him and his children, guarding them, and his panting in all his states is from the death of his heart, and for this reason God, the Most High, likened the evil scholars to the dog, as will be explained in Al-A'raf, God willing. And that staff was sent down to him, which God made a sign for Moses, so he used it to drive away the wild beasts from himself.

The Almighty said: But if there comes to you guidance from Me, there is a difference of opinion regarding the meaning of His statement: guidance. Some say it is the Book of God, as al-Suddi said. Others say it is the success of guidance. A group said: guidance is the messengers, and it was sent to Adam from the angels, and to his children from among the humans, as came in the hadith of Abu Dharr, and al-Ajurri included it. In His statement: from Me, there is an indication that the actions of the servants are created by God Almighty, contrary to the Qadarites and others, as mentioned above. Al-Jahdary read it as guidance, which is the language of Hudhayl, they say: guidance, asi, and muhyi. The grammarians recited for Abu Dhu'ayb, mourning his children:

They preceded my passion and embraced their passion, so they were destroyed, and every side has its fate.

Al-Nahhas said: The reason for this language according to Al-Khalil and Sibawayh is that the sibool of the ya' of addition is to break what precedes it, so since it is not permissible for the alif to move, it was replaced with a ya' and assimilated. And what is in his saying: either is additional to in which is for the condition, and the answer to the condition is the fa' with the second condition in his saying: whoever follows. And whoever is in the nominative case as the beginning, and followed is in the jussive case as the condition. So there is no fear in its answer. Sibawayh said: The second condition and its answer are the answer to the first. Al-Kisa'i said: There is no fear in them as the answer to both conditions.

God the Almighty said: So there will be no fear upon them, nor will they grieve. Fear is panic and only occurs in the future. So-and-so frightened me, so I feared him, meaning I was more afraid than we were. Fear is diminishment, and from this is the saying of God the Almighty: Or He seizes them in fear. Al-Zuhri, Al-Hasan, Isa bin Amr bin Abi Ishaq, and Yaqoub read:

So there is no fear with the opening of the fa to indicate innocence. The choice among grammarians is to raise and add tanween to the beginning, because the second is a definite noun that can only be raised, because la does not work on a definite noun, so they chose to raise it in the first as well so that the speech would be from one perspective. It is permissible for la in your saying: So there is no fear, to mean not.

Sadness and grief. The opposite of happiness, and it is only in the past. A man was sad with a kasra, so he is sad and sad, and someone else made him sad and saddened him as well, like aslaka and salka, and mahzun is built upon it. Al-Yazidi said: Hazanahu is the language of Quraysh, and ahzanahu is the language of Tamim, and they have been read with both. And ahtazaan and tahzan have the same meaning. The meaning of the verse: They will have no fear in what is before them of the Hereafter, nor will they grieve over what they have missed of this world. It was said: There is no evidence in it to deny the terrors of the Day of Resurrection and its fear for the obedient, because of what God and His Messenger described of the hardships of the Resurrection, except that He makes it easier for the obedient, and when they reach His mercy, it is as if they did not fear. And God knows best.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, informing about what He warned Adam, his wife, and Iblis when He sent them down from Paradise, and what is meant is the offspring, that He will send down the books and send the prophets and messengers, as Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Guidance: the prophets, messengers, clear proofs, and explanation. Muqatil bin Hayyan said: Guidance: Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Hasan said: Guidance: the Qur'an. These two statements are correct, and Abu Al-Aaliyah's statement is more general: So whoever follows My guidance, meaning whoever accepts what the books were sent down with and the messengers were sent with, there will be no fear concerning them, meaning in what they will face in the Hereafter, nor will they grieve, for what they have missed of worldly matters, as He said in Surat Taha, "He said, 'Descend from it, all of you, as enemies to one another. But if there comes to you guidance from Me, then whoever follows My guidance will neither go astray nor suffer.'" Ibn Abbas said: He will neither go astray in this world nor suffer in the Hereafter. But whoever turns away from My remembrance - indeed, he will have a depressed life, and We will gather him on the Day of Resurrection blind, as He said. Here, And those who disbelieved and denied Our verses - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally. That is, they will abide therein eternally, with no escape or way out. Ibn Jarir included here a hadith that he narrated through two chains of transmission on the authority of Abu Salamah Sa'id ibn Yazid on the authority of Abu Nadhra al-Mundhir ibn Malik ibn Qata'ah on the authority of Abu Sa'id, whose name was Sa'd ibn Malik ibn Sinan al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"As for the people of the Fire who are its people, they will neither die therein nor live, but they are people whom the Fire afflicted with their sins, so it caused them to die a death until, when they became charcoal, intercession was permitted." Muslim narrated it from the hadith of Shu'bah on the authority of Abu Salamah. He mentioned this second descent because of the meaning that follows it, which is different from the first. Some of them claimed that it is an emphasis and repetition, as one says: Get up, get up. Others said: Rather, the first descent is from Paradise to the lowest heaven, and the second is from the lowest heaven to the earth. The first is correct, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

And Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: 38- "We said, 'Go down, some of you as enemies to others.'" He said: Adam, Eve, Satan and the serpent. And for you on the earth is a settlement. He said: the graves. And provision for a time. He said: life. Something similar to that was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Abu Salih and Qatadah, as Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of the first and second, and on the authority of Abd bin Hamid on the authority of Ibn Masoud regarding his statement: And for you on the earth is a settlement. He said: the graves. And provision for a time. He said: until the Day of Resurrection. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar, who said: Adam descended to Al-Safa and Eve to Al-Marwah. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Hakim narrated, and authenticated it, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The first thing that God sent down was Adam to the land of India. And in another version: He brought me to the land of India. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority that he descended to a land between Mecca and Al-Taif. Ibn Jarir, Al-Hakim who authenticated it and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on his authority that he said: Ali ibn Abi Talib said: The most pleasant scent on earth is India. Adam descended there and its trees were fragrant with the scent of Paradise. Ibn Saad and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Adam descended in India and Eve in Jeddah. He came in search of her until he came to a gathering place, and Eve approached him, and that is why it was called Muzdalifah. They met at a gathering place. At-Tabarani and Abu Nu'aym narrated in Al-Hilyah on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: "Adam descended in India and felt lonely, so Gabriel descended and called the call to prayer. When he heard the mention of Muhammad, he said to him: Who is this Muhammad? He said: This is the last of your descendants from the prophets." It has been narrated on the authority of a group of the Companions that Adam descended to the land of India, among them Jabir, as narrated by Ibn Abi Al-Dunya, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Asakir, and among them Ibn Umar, as narrated by At-Tabarani. Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ali that the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "When God created the world, He did not create gold or silver in it. When He sent Adam and Eve down, He sent down with them gold and silver, which flowed through the earth as a benefit for their children after them, and He made that a dowry for Eve. No one should marry without a dowry." Ibn Asakir narrated with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Anas that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "Adam and Eve came down naked, both of them wearing the leaves of Paradise. He sat crying and said to her: 'O Eve, the heat is bothering me.' Then Gabriel brought him cotton and ordered her to spin and taught her. He ordered Adam to weave and taught him." Al-Daylami narrated in Musnad al-Firdaws on the authority of Anas, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him): "The first person to weave was Adam, peace be upon him." Stories have been narrated on the authority of a group of the Companions, the Followers, and those who came after them about the description of Adam's descent from Paradise, what he was brought down with, and what he did when he arrived on Earth. We do not need to elaborate on all of that. Al-Faryani, Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Abi Al-Dunya, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Al-Hakim who authenticated it, and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the statement of God, Then Adam received from his Lord words, He said, O Lord, did you not create me with Your hand? He said, Yes. He said, O Lord, did You not breathe into me Your spirit? He said, Yes. He said, O Lord, did You not precede me with Your mercy before Your wrath? He said, Yes. He said, O Lord, did You not inhabit Your Paradise? He said, Yes. He said, O Lord, tell me, if I repent and reform, will You return me to Paradise? He said, Yes. At-Tabarani narrated in Al-Awsat and Ibn Asakir with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Aisha on the authority of the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him), who said, When God sent Adam down to earth, he stood facing the Kaaba and prayed two rak'ahs. A similar hadith has been narrated with an acceptable chain of transmission. It was narrated by Al-Azraqi in Tarikh Makkah, At-Tabarani in Al-Awsat, Al-Bayhaqi in Ad-Du'aa', and Ibn Asakir on the authority of Buraydah, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him). Al-Tha'labi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, he said: His statement: Our Lord, we have wronged ourselves, and if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Jarir on his authority something similar. Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab al-Iman narrated on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord [certain] words, something similar. Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid something similar. Abd ibn Humayd narrated on the authority of al-Hasan and al-Dahhak something similar. Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas. It was said to him: What are the words that Adam received from his Lord? He said: He knows the matter of Hajj, so they are the words. And Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Zaid regarding his statement: Then Adam received from his Lord words, he said: There is no god but You, glory and praise be to You, my Lord, I have done evil and wronged myself, so have mercy on me, for You are the Most Merciful of the merciful. There is no god but You, glory and praise be to You, my Lord, I have done evil and wronged myself, so accept my repentance, for You are the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. Al-Bayhaqi narrated something similar in Shu'ab al-Iman and Ibn Asakir narrated something similar here and in al-Zuhd on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr. Ibn Asakir narrated something similar on the authority of Juwaybir on the authority of al-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Al-Daylami narrated something similar in Musnad al-Firdaws with a weak chain of transmission on the authority of Ali, with a chain of transmission traceable back to the Prophet. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar on the authority of Abu al-Aliyah regarding his statement: Then if there comes to you guidance from Me, he said: Guidance means the prophets, messengers, and explanation. Ibn al-Anbari narrated in al-Masahif on the authority of Abu al-Tufayl who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, recited: So whoever follows My guidance, with a heavy ya' and a fatha on it. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair regarding his statement: There is no fear for them, meaning in the Hereafter, nor will they grieve, meaning they will not grieve over death.

38. And the Almighty's saying: We said, 'Descend from it, all of you.' He means these four. It was said that the first descent from Paradise to the lowest heaven and the last descent from the lowest heaven to the earth. Then if there comes to you from Me guidance, meaning right guidance and an explanation of the law, and it was said that it was a book and a messenger. So whoever follows My guidance, there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve. Yaqub read: There will be no fear with the fat-ha in all of the Qur'an, and the others with the damma and tanween, There will be no fear concerning them in what [they will face], "nor will they grieve, over what they left behind. It was said: There will be no fear upon them in this world, nor will they grieve in the Hereafter.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

38- We said, 'Descend from it, all of you.' It was repeated for emphasis, or because the intended meaning was different. The first indicated that their descent was to a house of calamity in which they would be hostile to one another and would not remain eternally. The second indicated that they were sent down for a duty, so whoever was guided to guidance would be saved and whoever was led astray would perish. The warning is that disobeying the descent coupled with one of these two matters alone is sufficient for the decisive person to prevent him from disobeying the ruling of God, the Most High, the Most Great. So how about when it is coupled with both of them? But he forgot and we did not find him determined. Each one of them is sufficient as a punishment for whoever wanted to remember. It was said that the first is from Paradise to the lowest heaven, and the second is from it to the earth, and it is as you see. And all together is a state in the wording, emphasizing the meaning, as if it were said: Descend, all of you. Therefore, it does not require their coming together to descend at one time, as you say: They came all together. So if there comes to you guidance from Me, whoever follows My guidance, there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve. The second condition with its answer is the answer to the first condition, and what is added confirms it with in, and therefore it is good to emphasize the verb with the letter nun even if it does not have the meaning of a request. The meaning is: If there comes to you guidance from Me by sending down or sending, whoever follows it will be saved and will succeed. The letter of doubt was brought, and the coming of something that will inevitably happen because it is possible in itself, but it is not obligatory rationally. The word guidance was repeated and was not implied because he intended by the second something more general than the first, which is what the messengers came with and reason required, meaning: whoever follows what came to him, observing what reason testifies to, there will be no fear upon them, let alone that something bad will happen to them, nor will they miss out on something beloved and grieve over it. So fear for what is expected and sadness for what is real negates punishment from them and confirms reward for them for what is expected. The most emphatic and eloquent face. It was read as guidance in the language of Hudhayl and no fear with the fat-ha.

And those who disbelieve and deny Our signs - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:39

And those who disbelieve and deny Our signs - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And those who disbelieved and denied Our signs We wrote they are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally remaining forever, never perishing or coming out.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

It means: And those who denied My signs and belied My messengers. And the signs of God: His arguments and proofs of His Oneness and Lordship, and what the messengers brought of signs and evidence of that, and of their truthfulness in what they informed about their Lord. And we have explained that the meaning of disbelief is covering up something.

Those are the companions of the Fire, meaning: its people who are its people and no one else, who will remain in it forever and ever without end or limit. As: Uqbah ibn Sinan al-Basri narrated to us, he said: Ghassan ibn Mudar narrated to us, he said: Saeed ibn Yazid narrated to us, and Suwar ibn Abdullah al-Anbari narrated to us, he said: Bishr ibn al-Mufaddal narrated to us, he said: Abu Muslimah Saeed ibn Yazid narrated to us, and Yaqub ibn Ibrahim and Abu Bakr ibn Awn narrated to us, they said: Ismail ibn Ulayyah narrated to us, on the authority of Saeed ibn Yazid, on the authority of Abu Nadrah, on the authority of Abu Saeed al-Khudri, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "As for the people of the Fire who are its people, they will neither die in it nor live, but they will be people who were afflicted by the Fire because of their sins or their transgressions, so it caused them to die a complete death, until when they became charcoal, intercession will be permitted."

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And those who disbelieved meaning associated partners with God, because He said: And denied Our signs - those are the companions of the Fire. Companionship: is the association with something in a certain state, at a certain time. If it is constant association and mixing, then it is the perfection of companionship, and thus is the companionship of the people of the Fire with it. With this statement, we resolve the disagreement over naming the companions, may God be pleased with them, since their ranks differ, as we will explain in Bara'ah, God willing. The meaning of the rest of the words of the verse has been presented, and praise be to God.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, informing about what He warned Adam, his wife, and Iblis when He sent them down from Paradise, and what is meant is the offspring, that He will send down the books and send the prophets and messengers, as Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Guidance: the prophets, messengers, clear proofs, and explanation. Muqatil bin Hayyan said: Guidance: Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Hasan said: Guidance: the Qur'an. These two statements are correct, and Abu Al-Aaliyah's statement is more general: So whoever follows My guidance, meaning whoever accepts what the books were sent down with and the messengers were sent with, there will be no fear concerning them, meaning in what they will face in the Hereafter, nor will they grieve, for what they have missed of worldly matters, as He said in Surat Taha, "He said, 'Descend from it, all of you, as enemies to one another. But if there comes to you guidance from Me, then whoever follows My guidance will neither go astray nor suffer.'" Ibn Abbas said: He will neither go astray in this world nor suffer in the Hereafter. But whoever turns away from My remembrance - indeed, he will have a depressed life, and We will gather him on the Day of Resurrection blind, as He said. Here, And those who disbelieved and denied Our verses - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally. That is, they will abide therein eternally, with no escape or way out. Ibn Jarir included here a hadith that he narrated through two chains of transmission on the authority of Abu Salamah Sa'id ibn Yazid on the authority of Abu Nadrha al-Mundhir ibn Malik ibn Qata'ah on the authority of Abu Sa'id, whose name was Sa'd ibn Malik ibn Sinan al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "As for the people of the Fire who are its people, they will neither die therein nor live, but they are people whom the Fire afflicted with their sins, so it caused them to die a death until, when they became charcoal, intercession was permitted." Muslim narrated it from the hadith of Shu'bah on the authority of Abu Salamah. He mentioned this second descent because of the meaning that follows it, which is different from the first. Some of them claimed that it is an emphasis and repetition, as one says: Get up, get up. Others said: Rather, the first descent is from Paradise to the lowest heaven, and the second is from the lowest heaven to the earth. The first is correct, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

39- And those who disbelieved and denied Our verses - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

39. And those who disbelieved meaning denied and denied Our signs the Qur'an they are the companions of the Fire on the Day of Resurrection therein they will abide eternally they will not emerge from it and they will not die in it.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

39- And those who disbelieved and denied Our signs - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally. This is in apposition to So whoever follows until the end, which is a division of it, as if he said: And whoever follows, rather they disbelieved in God and denied His signs, or they disbelieved in the signs with their hearts and denied them with their tongues, so the two verbs are directed to the preposition and its object. The sign is originally the apparent sign, and it is said of manufactured things because they indicate the existence of the Creator, His knowledge and His power, and every group of words in the Qur'an is distinguished from others by a separation, and its derivation is from aya because it clarifies ayah from ay or man to ayah, and its origin is ayah or awyah like thamara, so its ayn was replaced with an alif in an irregular manner, or ayah or awyah like maka, so it was made high, or ayyah like qaylah, so the hamza was deleted for ease. What is meant by Our verses are the revealed verses, or what includes them and the rational. The literalists have held fast to this story on the infallibility of the prophets, peace and blessings be upon them, for several reasons:

First: Adam, peace be upon him, was a prophet, and he committed what was forbidden, and the one who committed it was a sinner.

The second: that he committed it among the oppressors, and the oppressor is cursed, as God Almighty says: Unquestionably, the curse of God is upon the oppressors.

The third: God Almighty attributed disobedience to him, saying, And Adam disobeyed his Lord and went astray.

Fourth: God Almighty taught him repentance, which is turning away from sin and regretting it.

The fifth: His admission that he is a loser were it not for God Almighty's forgiveness of him, as He says: And if You do not forgive us and have mercy upon us, we will surely be among the losers. The loser is the one who has committed a major sin.

The sixth: If he had not sinned, what happened would not have happened to him. The answer has several aspects.

First: He was not a prophet at that time, and the claimant is required to provide clarification.

Second: The prohibition is for the sake of glorification, and he was called a wrongdoer and a loser because he wronged himself and lost his share by abandoning what was best for him. As for attributing error and disobedience to him, the answer to that will come in its place, God willing. He was only commanded to repent to make up for what he missed, and what happened to him happened as a reproach to him for abandoning what was best, and fulfilling what he said to the angels before his creation.

The third: That he did it forgetfully, according to the words of God the Most High: Then he forgot, and We found on his part no firm resolve. But he was rebuked for not taking precautions against the causes of forgetfulness. Perhaps, even if it was reduced for the nation, it was not reduced for the prophets due to their great status, as the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: The people most severely tested are the prophets, then the saints, then the next best and then the next best. Or his action led to what happened to him by way of the estimated causality without being held accountable for taking it, like taking poison when ignorant of its matter. It cannot be said that it is invalid, according to the words of God the Most High: What your Lord has forbidden you, and He divided it between them, because there is nothing in them that indicates that he took it when Satan said it to him, so perhaps his words created a natural inclination in him, then he restrained himself from it out of consideration for the ruling of God the Most High until he forgot it, and the obstacle was removed, so nature carried him to it.

Fourth: He, peace be upon him, did it because of an erroneous interpretation, as he thought that the prohibition was for the sake of purification, or a reference to the essence of that tree, so that it could be taken from others of its kind, and what was meant by it was a reference to the kind, as it was narrated that he, peace be upon him, "took silk and gold in his hand and said: These two are forbidden for the males of my nation, but permissible for its females." Rather, what he did was to magnify the importance of sin so that his children would avoid it. And in it is evidence that Paradise was created and that it is in a high place, and that repentance is accepted, and that the follower of guidance is safe from the outcome, that the torment of Hell is permanent, and that the disbeliever is eternal in it, and that others will not be eternal in it, according to the meaning of the Almighty's saying: They will abide therein eternally.

And know that when He, glory be to Him, mentioned the proofs of monotheism, prophethood, and resurrection, and followed them with an enumeration of the general blessings as a confirmation and affirmation of them, then in terms of them being precise events they indicate a wise Creator who alone has creation and command, with no partner for Him, and in terms of the fact that informing about them as is established in the previous books by someone who did not learn them, and did not practice any of them, informing about the unseen is a miracle that indicates the prophethood of the one informing about them, and in terms of their inclusion of the creation of man and his origins and what is greater than that, they indicate that He is able to restore as He was able to create, He addressed the people of knowledge and the Book among them, and commanded them to remember the blessings of God Almighty upon them, and to fulfill His covenant in following the truth and following the proofs so that they would be the first to believe in Muhammad,

And those who disbelieve and deny Our signs - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally.

may God bless him and grant him peace, and what was revealed to him, so He said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:40

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant; I will fulfill My covenant with you, and fear only Me.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

O Children of Israel the children of Jacob remember My favor which I bestowed upon you that is, upon your fathers, of salvation from Pharaoh, the splitting of the sea, the shading of the clouds, and other things, by thanking Me for it through obedience to Me and fulfill My covenant which I enjoined upon you of belief in Muhammad I will fulfill your covenant which I enjoined upon you of the reward for it of entering Paradise and fear Me fear in not fulfilling it, rather than anyone else.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: What He means by His saying, may His praise be exalted: O Children of Israel, is that Jacob, son of Isjaq, son of Abraham, was born the friend of the Most Merciful. Jacob was called Israel, meaning servant of God and the chosen one of His creation. And El is God, and Isra is the servant, just as it was said: Gabriel means servant of God. And as:

Ibn Hamid told us, Jarir told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Ismail bin Raja', on the authority of Umair, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: That Israel is like your saying: Abdullah.

Ibn Hamid told us: Jarir told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Abdullah bin Al-Harith, who said: El is God in Hebrew.

God, the Most High, addressed the Jewish rabbis from the Children of Israel, who were among the immigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, by saying: O Children of Israel, so He, the Most High, attributed their lineage to Jacob, just as He attributed the descendants of Adam to Adam, saying: O Children of Adam, take your adornment at every mosque (al-A'raf 7:31) and the like. He specifically addressed them in this verse and the verses that follow it in which He mentioned His blessings, even though what was revealed about them and others at the beginning of this surah has already been mentioned, that what He used as evidence of the proofs and verses that contain report of their ancestors, stories of their forefathers, and stories of matters that they are specifically known to, unlike other nations, no one else has the same knowledge of its truth and reality as they do, except for those who acquire knowledge of that from them. So he made them aware of Muhammad's knowledge of it, despite the fact that his people and clan were far from knowing it, and Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, did not study the books that contained the report of that, because Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, did not reach knowledge of that except through revelation from God and His sending it down to him, because they are the ones who know the truth of that in a place that no other nation has, so that is why He, may His praise be exalted, specifically addressed them with His saying: O Children of Israel. Likewise:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: O Children of Israel, he said: O People of the Book, referring to the rabbis from among the Jews.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you.

Abu Ja'far said: His blessing that He bestowed upon the Children of Israel, may He be glorified, was His choosing from among them messengers, sending down to them books, and rescuing them from the affliction and distress they were in from Pharaoh and his people, to empowering them in the land, and causing springs of water to gush forth from the rock, and feeding them manna and quails. So He, may He be glorified, commanded their descendants that what He had done to their fathers should be remembered, and that they should not forget what He had done to their ancestors and fathers, lest the punishments befall them as befell those among them who forgot His blessings to Him and were ungrateful for them, and denied His favors to Him. Like:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you, meaning My favors upon you and upon your fathers, because of what He did to save them from Pharaoh and his people.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement: Remember My favor, he said: His favor is that He made among them prophets and messengers, and sent down to them the books.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you, meaning His favor which He bestowed upon the Children of Israel, in what he named and in other than that: He caused the stone to gush forth for them, and sent down upon them manna and quails, and saved them from the slavery of the people of Pharaoh.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said about His statement: My favor which I have bestowed upon you, he said: A general favor, and there is no favor better than Islam, and the favors that follow it. And he recited the statement of God: "They do you a favor by becoming Muslims. Say: Do not do me a favor by your Islam. Rather, God has conferred a favor upon you by guiding you to the faith, if you should be truthful.” (al-Hujurat 49:17)

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant; I will fulfill My covenant with you, and fear only Me.

And God reminding those whom He, the Most High, mentioned with this verse of His blessings through the tongue of His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, is similar to the reminder of Moses, may God bless him and grant him peace, to their ancestors during his time, about whom God informed that he said to them, and that is His saying: “And when Moses said to his people, ‘O my people, remember the favor of God upon you when He made among you prophets and made you kings and gave you that which He had not given to anyone in the worlds.’” (al-Ma'idah 5:20)

Surah Al-Baqarah/ Verse: 45

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant.

Abu Ja'far said: We have already explained the meaning of the covenant in this book of ours, and the differences of opinion among those who differ in its interpretation, and what is correct in our view of what we say about it. And in this context it is: God's covenant and commandment that He took from the Children of Israel in the Torah, that they should explain to the people the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he is a messenger, and that they should find it written with them in the Torah that he is a prophet of God, and that they should believe in him and in what he brought from God.

Fulfill your covenant: His covenant with them is that if they do that, He will admit them into Paradise, as He, the Most High, said: “And God had already taken a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up from among them twelve leaders. And God said, ‘Indeed, I am with you. If you establish prayer and give zakah and believe in My messengers and support them and loan God a good loan, I will surely remove from you your misdeeds and admit you into gardens beneath which rivers flow. But whoever disbelieves after that among you has certainly strayed from the right path.’” (al-Ma'idah 5:12), and as He said: “Then I will prescribe it for those who fear God and give zakah and those who believe in Our verses. * Those who follow the Messenger, the unlettered prophet, whom they find written down in what they have of the Torah and the Gospel. He enjoins upon them what is right and forbids them what is wrong and makes lawful for them the good things and prohibits for them the evil and relieves them of their burden and the shackles which were upon them. So those who believe in him, support him, aid him, and follow the light which has been sent down with him - it is those who will be the successful.” (al-A'raf 7:12) 156, 157).

And as Ibn Hamid told us, he said: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And fulfill My covenant which I took upon your necks for the Prophet Muhammad when he came to you, I will fulfill your covenant, meaning I will fulfill for you what I promised you to believe in him and follow him, by removing the burdens and shackles that were upon you because of your sins that were from your youth.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant, he said: His covenant to His servants, the religion of Islam, is that they follow Him, Fulfill your covenant, meaning Paradise.

Musa bin Harun told us: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Fulfill My covenant, and I will fulfill your covenant. As for Fulfill My covenant, it is what I have enjoined upon you in the Book. As for Fulfill your covenant, it is Paradise. I have enjoined upon you that if you act in obedience to Me, I will admit you into Paradise.

Al-Qasim told me, he said: Al-Husayn told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant, he said: That is the covenant that was taken from them in al-Ma'idah 5: And God had already taken a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up among them twelve leaders to the end of the verse (al-Ma'idah 5:12). So this is the covenant of God that He made with them, and it is the covenant of God with us, so whoever fulfills the covenant of God, God will fulfill His covenant to him.

Al-Munjab narrated: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement, And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant, he says: Fulfill what I have commanded you to do in obedience to Me and what I have forbidden you from disobeying Me in the case of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in others. I will fulfill your covenant, he says: I will be pleased with you and admit you into Paradise.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant, he said: Fulfill My command, I will fulfill what I promised you. And he recited: Indeed, God has purchased from the believers their lives and their properties, until he reached And who is more faithful to his covenant than God? (al-Tawbah 9:111), he said: This is His covenant that He made with them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And fear Me.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of His statement: And fear Me is: “And fear Me and be wary of Me, you who have neglected My covenant from among the Children of Israel, and who have denied My Messenger, with whom I took a covenant in what I revealed of the books to My prophets, that you should believe in him and follow him, that I will bring upon you from My punishment, if you do not repent and turn to Me by following him and acknowledging what I revealed to him, what I brought upon those who disobeyed My command and denied My messengers from among your predecessors. Like:

Muhammad ibn Hamid told me: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: "And fear Me," lest I bring down upon you what I brought down upon those of your fathers before you of the punishments that you have known, of transformation and other things.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told us: Adam Al-Asqalani told us: Abu Jaafar told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, regarding his statement: And fear Me, he said: So be afraid.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And fear Me, meaning: And be in awe of Me.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: O Children of Israel is a vocative with the accusative case ending in it, and the letter nun was deleted from it for the addition. The singular is ibn, and its original form is bani, and it was said: banu, so whoever said that the deleted letter is waw used as evidence their saying: al-banwah. This is not an argument in this, because they said: al-futuwwa, and its original form is ya. Al-Zajaj said: In my opinion, the deleted letter is ya as if it is from bina. Al-Akhfash chose that the deleted letter is waw, because its deletion is more common due to its weight. It is also said: ibn bain al-banwah, and the diminutive is bani. Al-Farra' said: It is said: Ya Bani and Ya Bani are two dialects, like ya abt and ya abt, and they were read with them. It is derived from bina which means placing something on something, and the son is a branch of the father and is placed on him.

Israel is Jacob, son of Isaac, son of Abraham, peace be upon them. Abu al-Faraj al-Jawzi said: There is no prophet who has two names other than him, except our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, for he has many names. He mentioned this in his book Fahum al-Athar.

I said: It has been said about the Messiah that it is a proper noun for Jesus, peace be upon him, not derived, and God called him a spirit and a word, and they used to call him Abel Abelin, as mentioned by Al-Jawhari in As-Sahah. Al-Bayhaqi mentioned in Dalil Al-Nubuwwah on the authority of Al-Khalil bin Ahmad: Five of the prophets have two names, Muhammad and Ahmad, our prophet, peace be upon him, Jesus and the Messiah, Israel and Jacob, Jonah and Dhul-Nun, Elias and Dhul-Kifl, peace be upon them.

I said: We mentioned that Jesus has four names, but our Prophet has many names, which will be explained in their proper places.

Israel: a foreign name, and therefore it is not declined, and it is in the position of a genitive addition. It has seven languages: Israel, which is the language of the Qur'an. Israel, with a long, stolen hamza, narrated by Shanbudh from Warsh, and Isra'il, with a long, broken ya' without a hamza, which is the reading of Al-A' mash and Isa bin Omar, and Al-Hasan and Al-Zuhri read without a hamza or extension. Isra'il, without a ya' with a broken hamza. Isra'il with an open hamza. Tamim say: Isra'iyyin, with a noon. The meaning of Israel is: Abdullah. Ibn Abbas said: Isra in Hebrew means servant, and El is God. It was said: Isra is the chosen one of God, and El is God. It was said: Isra from the strength, so it is as if Israel is the one who strengthened God and perfected His creation, as mentioned by Al-Mahdawi. Al-Suhayli said: He was called Israel because he was taken prisoner one night when he migrated to God Almighty, so he was called Israel meaning he was taken prisoner to God and the like, so some of the name is Hebrew and some of it is in accordance with the Arabs. God knows best.

God the Almighty said: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you. Remembrance is a common noun, so remembrance with the heart is the opposite of forgetfulness, and remembrance with the tongue is the opposite of listening. I mentioned something with my tongue and heart, remembrance. And make it from you on remembrance with a dhammah on the dhal, meaning do not forget it. Al-Kisa'i said: Whatever is in the pronoun has a dhammah on the dhal, and whatever is in the tongue has a kasrah on the dhal. Another said: They are two languages, it is said: dhikr and dhikr, and their meaning is the same. Dhikr with a fathah on the dhal is the opposite of feminine. Remembrance is also honor, and from this is His statement: And indeed, it is a reminder for you and your people. Ibn al-Anbari said: The meaning of the verse is remember and be grateful for My favor, so gratitude was omitted as mentioning the favor is sufficient. It was said: He meant remembrance with the heart, which is what is required, meaning do not neglect My favor which I have bestowed upon you and do not forget it, and this is good. The word blessing here is a generic noun, it is singular in meaning plural. God Almighty said: And if you should count the favors of God, you could not enumerate them. That is, His favors. Among His favors upon them was that He saved them from the people of Pharaoh, made prophets among them, sent down to them the Book, manna, and quails, and caused water to gush forth for them from rocks, in addition to what He entrusted to them of the Torah, which contains the description, attributes, and message of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And the favors upon the fathers are also favors upon the children, because they are honored by the honor of their fathers.

Note: The masters of meanings said: God Almighty linked the Children of Israel to the mention of the blessing and dropped it from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and called them to remember Him, so He said: So remember Me and I will remember you, so that the nations would look from the blessing to the benefactor, and the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, would look from the benefactor to the blessing.

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant; I will fulfill My covenant with you, and fear only Me.

God the Almighty said: And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant. It is a command and its answer. Az-Zuhri read: Awf with a fat-ha on the waw and a shaddah on the fa for emphasis. There is a difference of opinion about what this covenant is. Al-Hasan said: His covenant is His statement: Take what We have given you with strength, and His statement: And God took a covenant from the Children of Israel and raised up from among them twelve leaders. It was said that it is His statement: And when God took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture to make it clear to the people and not to conceal it. Az-Zajjaj said: And fulfill My covenant which I enjoined upon you in the Torah to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. I will fulfill your covenant is what I have guaranteed to you for that. If you fulfill it, then Paradise is yours. It was said: And fulfill My covenant in performing the obligatory duties according to the Sunnah and sincerity. Awf is in accepting them from you and rewarding you for them. Some of them said: Fulfill my covenant in worship, I will fulfill your covenant meaning I will bring you to the stations of care. It was said: Fulfill my covenant in preserving the outward manners, I will fulfill your covenant by beautifying your inner selves. It was said: It is general in all of His commands, prohibitions, and commandments, so it includes the mention of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the Torah and elsewhere. This is the opinion of the majority of scholars, and it is correct. His covenant, glory be to Him, is that He will admit them to Paradise.

I said: What is required of them in terms of fulfilling the covenant is required of us. God Almighty said: Fulfill contracts, "And fulfill the covenant of God," and it is abundant. Their fulfillment of the covenant of God is a sign of God Almighty's fulfillment of them, without any reason, rather it is a favor from Him to them.

God the Almighty said: And fear Me meaning fear. Fear, dread, and awe mean fear. The command to do so includes the meaning of threat. The ya was dropped after the nun because it is the beginning of a verse. Ibn Abi Ishaq read: Farhabooni with the ya, and likewise Fataqooni, according to the original. And Iyā is accusative with an implied verb, and so is the choice in the command, prohibition, and interrogation. The estimate is: And fear Me, so fear Me. And it is permissible to speak Fanī li-l-I and Ana fa-r-Habūn, as the subject and the predicate. And Farhaboon is the predicate according to the estimate of the deletion, the meaning is: And I am your Lord, so fear.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, commanding the Children of Israel to enter Islam and follow Muhammad, upon whom be the best prayers and peace from God, and encouraging them by mentioning their father Israel, who is the Prophet of God Jacob, peace be upon him, and his interpretation is O sons of the righteous servant obedient to God, be like your father in following the truth as you say O son of the generous one do such and such, O son of the brave one confront the heroes, O son of the scholar seek knowledge, and so on. And from that also is the saying of the Almighty: "The descendants of those We carried with Noah. Indeed, he was a grateful servant." So Israel is Jacob, as evidenced by what Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi narrated. Abdul Hamid bin Bahram told us on the authority of Shahr bin Hawshab, who said: Abdullah bin Abbas told me: "A group of Jews attended the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said to them: Do you know that Israel is Jacob? They said: By God, yes. So the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God bear witness." And al-A'mash said on the authority of Ismail bin Raja' on the authority of Umair, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas: That Israel is like your saying Abdullah and the saying of the Almighty: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you. Mujahid said: The favor of God that He bestowed upon them in what He named, and in other than that, is that He caused the stone to gush forth for them and sent down upon them manna and quails and saved them from the slavery of the people of Pharaoh. And Abu al-A'lya said: His favor is that He made among them prophets and messengers, and sent down upon them the books. I said: This is like the saying of Moses, peace be upon him, to them: O my people, remember the favor of God upon you when He made among you prophets and made you kings. And He gave you what He had not given to anyone in the worlds," meaning in their time. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God Almighty: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you, meaning My affliction with you and with your fathers when He saved them from Pharaoh and his people. And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant, he said: My covenant that I took upon you to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he comes to you, I will fulfill for you what I promised you of believing in him and following him by removing the burdens and shackles that were upon you because of your sins that were of your own making. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: It is the saying of God Almighty: "And God took a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up from among them twelve leaders. And God said, 'Indeed, I am with you. If you establish prayer and give zakah and believe in My messengers and support them and loan God a good loan, I will surely remove from you your misdeeds and admit you to gardens beneath which rivers flow.' " The verse. Others said: It is what God took from them in the Torah that He would send from the children of Ishmael a great prophet whom all people would obey, and what is meant by that is Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Whoever follows him, God will forgive his sin and admit him to Paradise and give him two rewards. Al-Razi mentioned many tidings from the prophets, may God bless him and grant him peace, about

Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And fulfill My covenant. He said: His covenant to His servants is the religion of Islam and that they follow Him. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Will I fulfill your covenant? He said: Be pleased with you and admit you into Paradise. This is what As-Suddi, Ad-Dahhak, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said. The Almighty's statement, And fear Me, means be in awe. This was said by Abu Al-Aaliyah, As-Suddi, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, and Qatadah. Ibn Abbas said regarding the Almighty's statement, And fear Me, that is, if what I have sent down upon those who came before you from your fathers of the punishments that you have known of, such as transformation and other things, befalls you. This is a transition from encouragement to intimidation, so He called them to it with desire and intimidation so that they might return to the truth and follow the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and take heed of the Qur'an and its prohibitions, obey its commands, and believe in its report. God guides whom He wills to a straight path. For this reason, He said, And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, meaning the Qur'an that was sent down to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, the unlettered Arab prophet, as a bearer of good tidings and a warner, and a shining lamp containing the truth from God Almighty, confirming what came before it of the Torah and the Gospel. Abu Al-Aaliyah, may God have mercy on him, said regarding the Almighty's statement, And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you. He says: O group of People of the Book, believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you. He says because they find Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, written with them in the Torah and the Gospel. Something similar was narrated from Mujahid, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas and Qatadah. His statement: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it. Some Arabists said: The first group to disbelieve in it or something like that. Ibn Abbas said: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it while you have knowledge of it that no one else has. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: He says: And do not be the first to disbelieve in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, meaning from your kind, the People of the Book, after hearing about his mission. This is what Al-Hasan, As-Suddi and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said. Ibn Jarir chose that the pronoun in his statement in it refers to the Qur'an that was mentioned earlier in his statement in what I have revealed. Both statements are correct because they are interconnected, because whoever disbelieves in the Qur'an has disbelieved in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and whoever disbelieves in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, has disbelieved in the Qur'an. As for his statement the first to disbelieve in it, he means the first of those who... He disbelieved in it from the Children of Israel, because many of the disbelievers of Quraysh and other Arabs had preceded them. Rather, what is meant is the first of the Children of Israel to disbelieve in it directly, for the Jews of Medina were the first Children of Israel to be addressed with the Qur'an, so their disbelief in it necessitates that they were the first of their kind to disbelieve in it. And the Almighty's statement: And do not exchange My verses for a small price means: Do not exchange faith in My verses and belief in My Messenger for the world and its desires, for it is small and fleeting, as Abdullah bin Mubarak said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Jabir informed us on the authority of Harun bin Yazid who said: Al-Hasan, meaning Al-Basri, was asked about the statement of the Almighty: A small price. He said: The small price is the world in its entirety. Ibn Lahi'ah said: Ata bin Dinar told me on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr regarding the statement of the Almighty: And do not exchange My verses for a small price that His verses are His Book that He sent down to them, and the small price is the world and its desires. Al-Suddi said: And do not exchange My verses for a small price means: Do not take a small greed, and do not conceal the name of God. That greed is the price. Abu Ja'far said on the authority of al-Rabi' bin Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah regarding the words of God Almighty: And do not exchange My revelations for a small price, meaning: Do not take a wage for it. He said: It is written in their first book: O son of Adam, learn for free. I have learned for free. It was said: Its meaning is: Do not compensate for clarification, explanation, and spreading beneficial knowledge with concealment and confusion in order to continue your leadership in this small, insignificant, and soon-to-be-vanished world. In Sunan Abi Dawud on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever learns knowledge by which he seeks the face of God, and does not learn it except to gain some worldly gain, will not smell the fragrance of Paradise on the Day of Resurrection. As for teaching knowledge for a wage, if it is required of him, it is not permissible for him to take a wage for it. It is permissible for him to take from the public treasury what will sustain his condition and his dependents for a wage. If he does not obtain anything from it and teaching prevents him from earning a living, then it is as if it was not required of him. If it is not required of him, then it is permissible for him to take a wage for it according to Malik, al-Shafi'i, Ahmad, and the majority of scholars, as in Sahih al-Bukhari on the authority of Abu Sa'id in The story of the bitten man: The most deserving of payment for which you have taken a reward is the Book of God. And his saying in the story of the fiancée: I have married her to you for what you have of the Qur'an. As for the hadith of Ubadah ibn al-Samit, that he taught a man from the people of the Suffah something of the Qur'an and gave him a bow as a gift. He asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about it and he said: If you would like to be encircled by a bow of fire, then accept it. So he left it. It was narrated by Abu Dawud, and a similar hadith was narrated on the authority of Ubayy ibn Ka'b with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. If its chain of transmission is sound, then it is understood by many scholars, including Abu Umar ibn Abd al-Barr, that since he taught it for the sake of God, it was not permissible after that to substitute that bow for the reward of God. However, if it was from the beginning for teaching for a fee, then it is valid, as in the hadith of the bitten man and the hadith of Sahl regarding the fiancée. And God knows best. And His statement, And fear Me, Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Omar al-Duri told us, Abu Ismail al-Mu'addab told us, on the authority of Asim al-Ahwal, on the authority of Abu al-Aaliyah, on the authority of Talq ibn Habib, who said: Piety is to act in obedience to God, hoping for God's mercy, with a light from God, and to leave disobedience to God, with a light from God, fearing God's punishment. The meaning of His statement, And fear Me, is that God Almighty is threatening them with what they deliberately conceal of the truth, show the opposite of it, and oppose the Messenger, may God's prayers and peace be upon him.

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant; I will fulfill My covenant with you, and fear only Me.

Know that many of the commentators have come with forced knowledge, and have waded into a sea they were not required to swim in, and have wasted their time in an art that does not bring them any benefit, rather they have caused themselves to speak with purely forbidden opinion in matters related to the Book of God, the Most High, and that is because they wanted to mention the connection between the Qur'anic verses narrated in this order found in the copies of the Qur'an, so they came with forced and arbitrary things that fairness disavows, and the speech of the eloquent is free from, let alone the speech of the Lord, the Most High, until they singled that out for classification, and made it the most important purpose of the composition, as al-Baqaa'i did in his interpretation and those who came before him according to what he mentioned in his sermon, and this is one of the most amazing things that can be heard by someone who knows that this Qur'an has continued to be revealed in parts according to the events that necessitated its revelation since the revelation came down to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, until God, the Most High, took him to Himself, and every rational person, let alone a scholar, does not doubt that these events that necessitated the revelation of the Qur'an are different. Considering itself, it may even be contradictory, such as forbidding something that was permissible, permitting something that was forbidden, and proving something for a person or people that contradicts what was proven for them before it. Sometimes the speech is with Muslims, sometimes with unbelievers, sometimes with those who have passed, sometimes with those who are present, sometimes in worship, sometimes in dealing, sometimes in encouragement, sometimes in intimidation, sometimes in good tidings, sometimes in warning, sometimes in a worldly matter, sometimes in a matter of the Hereafter, sometimes in coming obligations, and sometimes in past stories. If the reasons for revelation were so different and so varied that it is not possible to agree, then the Qur'an revealed in them is, in itself, different as they are. So how can a rational person seek a connection between the lizard and the letter nun and the water and the fire and the sailor and the guide? Is this not from opening the doors of doubt and expanding the circle of suspicion for someone whose heart is sick, or whose illness is merely ignorance and deficiency? For if he finds the people of knowledge speaking about the connection between all the verses of the Qur'an and singling that out in a classification, it is decided for him that this is a necessary matter, and that the Qur'an is not eloquent and miraculous unless the aspect requiring the connection becomes apparent, and the matter requiring the connection becomes clear. If he finds a difference between the verses and returns to what the theologians said about that, and finds it to be pure affectation and clear arbitrariness, what was in his heart was sparked by what was in good health and safety. This is on the assumption that the revelation of the Qur'an was based on this arrangement found in the Mushaf. So how can anyone who has the slightest knowledge of the Book and the easiest share of its knowledge know with certainty that it was not like that? And whoever doubts this, even if he does not... It is not something that the people of knowledge have doubts about, so he should refer to the words of the people of knowledge who are knowledgeable about the reasons for revelation and who are informed about the incidents of prophethood, for his heart will be comforted and his doubts will be removed by looking at a medium-sized surah, let alone a long one, because he will inevitably find that it contains verses that were revealed in different incidents and at different times, with no agreement between their reasons and what was revealed in the order. Rather, it is sufficient for the negligent person to know that the first thing that was revealed was Read in the name of your Lord who created, and after it was O you who are wrapped up in a cloak, "O you who are wrapped up in a cloak," and he should look at where these verses and surahs are located in the order of the Qur'an. If this is the case, then what is the meaning of seeking a connection between verses when we know for certain that what God revealed later came first in the order of the Qur'an, and what God revealed later came first? This is an action that does not go back to the order in which the Qur'an was revealed, but rather to the arrangement that occurred when it was collected by those who undertook this from among the Companions. How little is the benefit of such a thing, how little is its fruit, and how insignificant is its benefit. Rather, for those who understand what they are saying and what is being said to them, it is a waste of time and spending hours on a matter that does not bring any benefit to the one who does it or to those who come across it from among the people. And you know that if a man of knowledge were to undertake to seek a connection between what an eloquent man said in his sermons, letters, and compositions, or what a poet said in poems that are sometimes praise and other times satire, and sometimes erotic and other times lamentation, and other than that from different types, then this person would take that collection and make a connection between its paragraphs and its sections, then he would take another effort and make a connection between the sermon he delivered on jihad. The sermon on Hajj and the sermon he gave on marriage and the like, and he made a connection between the composition in condolence and the composition in congratulations and the like, because the one who undertakes such a thing is not mentally afflicted, playing with his time and fooling around with his age, which is his capital. If such a thing is of this status, which is riding the foolishness in the speech of humans, then how do you think it would be in the speech of God, the Most High, whose eloquence has overwhelmed the eloquent of the Arabs, and whose eloquence has silenced the eloquent of Adnan and Qahtan? And every negligent and perfect person knows that God, the Most High, described this Qur'an as Arabic, and revealed it in the language of the Arabs, and followed in it their paths in speech, and followed their ways in discourse. And we know that their orator would perform the same position and come up with different arts and varied methods, let alone the two positions, let alone the positions, let alone everything he said as long as he was alive, and the same goes for their poet. Let us suffice with this warning about this corruption in which many investigators stumble. We have only mentioned this research in this place because the speech here was transmitted with the Children of Israel after it had been before it with the father of mankind, Adam, peace be upon him. So if someone is forced to say: How did this fit with what came before it? We say: No, how?

So leave the loot that was shouted at in his rooms and bring up a story that is not the story of the camels

His saying: 40- O Children of Israel The commentators agreed that Israel is Jacob, son of Isaac, son of Abraham, peace be upon them, and its meaning is the servant of God, because Isr in their language means the servant and El is God. It was said that he has two names, and it was said that Israel is a title for him, and it is a non-declinable foreign name, and it has seven languages: Israel with the weight of Ibrahim, and Israel with a long, hamzat, different, narrated by Ibn Shanbudh from Warsh, and Israel with a long, hamzat after the ya without a hamza, and this is the reading of Al-A'mash and Isa bin Omar, and Al-Hasan read without a hamzat or extension, and Israel with a broken hamza. And Isra'il with an open hamza, and Tamim say Isra'ayin. And remembrance is the opposite of listening, and some linguists made it common between remembrance of the heart and the tongue. Al-Kisa'i said: What is in the heart has a dhamma on the dhal, and what is in the tongue has a broken dhal. Ibn al-Anbari said: The meaning of the verse is: Remember to be grateful for My blessings. So gratitude was omitted, as the blessing was mentioned only as a generic noun, and among its components is that He made prophets from among them and sent down to them the Book, manna, and quails, and brought forth water from the rock for them, and saved them from the people of Pharaoh, and other things. The covenant has been explained above. The scholars differed about the covenant mentioned in this verse, what is it? It was said: It is what is mentioned in the Almighty's saying: Take what We have given you with strength. It was said: It is what is in His saying: And God took a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up from among them twelve leaders. It was said: It is His saying: And when God took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture. Al-Zajaj said: It is what He took from them in the Torah to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. It was said: It is the performance of the obligatory duties, and there is nothing wrong with interpreting it as all of that. The meaning of His saying: Fulfill your covenant is what I have guaranteed you of reward. Terror and awe: fear, and the command to do so includes the meaning of threat, and presenting the object of the verb indicates specificity as mentioned previously in You alone we worship. If the presentation is in the manner of concealment and explanation, such as I struck Zaid and fear Me alone, it is more emphatic in indicating specificity, and for this reason the author of Al-Kashshaf said: It is more emphatic in indicating specificity than You alone we worship.

40. The Almighty's saying: O Children of Israel O children of Jacob. The meaning of Israel is: servant of God, (and El) is God Almighty, and it was said the chosen one of God, and Abu Jaafar read: Israel without a hamza Remember memorize, and remembrance: can be in the heart and on the tongue, and it was said: He meant by it gratitude, and he mentioned with the wording of remembrance because in gratitude there is remembrance and in ingratitude there is forgetfulness, Al-Hasan said: Remembrance of a blessing is thanking for it My blessing meaning: My blessings, its wording is one and its meaning is plural like the Almighty's saying: And if you should count the favors of God, you could not enumerate them 34- Ibrahim which I have bestowed upon you meaning upon your forefathers and ancestors. Qatada said: They are the blessings that were bestowed upon the Children of Israel: the splitting of the sea, their rescue from Pharaoh by drowning him, the clouds shading them in the wilderness, the sending down of manna and quails, and the sending down of the Torah, among countless blessings. Another said: They are all the blessings that God Almighty has bestowed upon His servants. And fulfill My covenant, meaning by obeying My command, I will fulfill your covenant, with acceptance and reward.

Qatada and Mujahid said: By this covenant he meant what was mentioned in Surat al-Ma'idah 5: And God had taken a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up from among them twelve leaders until He said: I will surely remove from you your misdeeds 12-Al-Ma'idah. So this is His saying: Fulfill your covenant.

Al-Hasan said: It is His statement: And when We took your covenant and raised the Mount above you, [saying], 'Take what We have given you with strength' 63-Al-Baqarah. It is the law of the Torah. Muqatil said: It is His statement: And when We took a covenant from the Children of Israel, 'Worship none but God' 83-Al-Baqarah. Al-Kalbi said: God's covenant with the Children of Israel on the tongue of Moses: I am sending from the children of Ishmael an unlettered prophet. Whoever follows him and believes in the light that he brings, I will forgive his sin and admit him into Paradise and give him two rewards. It is His statement: And when God took a covenant from those who were given the Scripture, 'You shall make it clear to the people' 187-Al-Imran. He means the command of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

And fear Me. So fear Me in breaking the covenant. And Ya'qub confirmed the deleted ya's in the script, such as fear Me, "fear Me," and fear Me. And the others delete them in the script.

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant; I will fulfill My covenant with you, and fear only Me.

40- O children of Israel meaning the children of Jacob, and the son is from the building because he is the building of his father, and therefore the created is attributed to its maker and it is said: the father of war, and the daughter of thought. And Israel is the title of Jacob, peace be upon him, and its meaning in Hebrew is: the chosen one of God, and it was said: the servant of God, and Israel was read without the ya' and Israal without them, and Israel by changing the hamza to a ya'.

Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you, meaning by thinking about it and giving thanks for it, and restricting the favor to them because man is jealous and envious by nature. So if he looks at what God has bestowed upon others, jealousy and envy will lead him to ingratitude and discontent. But if he looks at what God has bestowed upon him, his love of the favor will lead him to contentment and gratitude. It was said that he meant by it what God bestowed upon their fathers of salvation from Pharaoh and drowning, and forgiveness for taking the calf, and for them of living in the time of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. It was read remember, and the original is idhkaru. And na'mati with a sukoon on the ya' when stopping and dropping it in stages is the doctrine of those who do not move the kasra ya' before it.

And fulfill my covenant with faith and obedience.

Fulfill your covenant with good reward. The covenant is added to the covenant and the covenant, and perhaps the first is added to the subject and the second to the object, for God Almighty has entrusted them with faith and righteous deeds by establishing proofs and sending down books, and He promised them reward for their good deeds, and fulfilling them is a broad offer. The first level of fulfillment from us is to come with the two words of testimony, and from God Almighty is to protect blood and money, and the last from us is to be immersed in the sea of monotheism, neglecting himself, let alone others, and from God Almighty is the victory of the eternal meeting. What was narrated from Ibn Abbas, may God Almighty be pleased with them both: Fulfill my covenant in following Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, I will fulfill your covenant in removing the Ansar and the shackles. And from others: Fulfill the performance of the obligatory duties and abandon the major sins, I will fulfill forgiveness and reward. Or fulfill the steadfastness on the straight path, I will fulfill the dignity and eternal bliss, so with regard to the intermediaries. It was said that both are added to the object and the meaning is: Fulfill what you have pledged to me of faith and commitment to obedience, I will fulfill what I have pledged to you of good reward. The details of the two covenants are in Surat Al-Ma'idah, in the Almighty's saying: And God took a covenant from the Children of Israel until His saying:

And I will surely admit you to gardens beneath which rivers flow. And Awf was read with emphasis for emphasis.

And fear Me in what you do and leave, especially in breaking a covenant. It is more emphatic in indicating specificity than You alone we worship because it contains, along with the presentation, the repetition of the object, and the conditional fa indicating that the statement includes the meaning of a condition, as if it were said: If you fear something, then fear. Fear is: fear with caution. The verse includes a promise and a threat, indicating the obligation of gratitude and fulfilling a covenant, and that the believer should not fear anyone except God Almighty.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:41

And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, and do not exchange My verses for a small price, and fear Me only.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And believe in what I have revealed of the Qur'an confirming what is with you of the Torah in agreement with it in monotheism and prophethood and do not be the first to disbelieve in it of the People of the Book because your descendants will follow you, so their sin is upon you and do not exchange exchange for My verses which are in your Book describing Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace for a small price a small gain from this world, meaning do not conceal it for fear of losing what you take from your predecessor and fear Me fear Me in that and not anyone else.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying, Believe, is that they believed, as we have previously explained. What He means by His saying, in what I have revealed, is what was revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, of the Qur'an. What He means by His saying, confirming what is with you, is that the Qur'an confirms what the Jews of the Children of Israel had of the Torah. So He commanded them to believe in the Qur'an, and He, the Most High, informed them that in their belief in the Qur'an, they are confirming the Torah, because what is in the Qur'an of the command to acknowledge the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to believe in him and follow him, is similar to what is in the Torah and the Gospel. So in their belief in what was revealed to Muhammad, they are confirming what they have of the Torah, and in their denial of him, they are denying what they have of the Torah. And His saying, confirming, is a break from the ha' that was left out in Anzaltuhu from the mention of what. The meaning of the words and believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you, O Jews, and what is with them is the Torah and the Gospel. Likewise:

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told us: Abu Asim told us: Isa bin Maimun told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding God's statement: And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you, he said: I only revealed the Qur'an confirming what is with you, the Torah and the Gospel.

Al-Muthanna told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Adam told us, he said:

Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you, meaning: O people of the Book, believe in what I have revealed to Muhammad, confirming what is with you. He said: Because they find Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, written with them in the Torah and the Gospel.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How is it said: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it, while the address is to all, and His saying: disbeliever is one? And would we permit, if that is permissible, for someone to say: And do not be the first man to rise up?

It was said to him: It is only permissible to make unified what Af'al is added to, and it is the predicate of all, if it is a noun derived from Fa'al and Yafa'il, because it conveys the meaning that is omitted from the speech, which is Min, and takes its place in conveying the meaning of what Min used to convey from the plural and feminine, and it is in one word. Do you not see that you say: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it? Min means all, and it is not inflected like nouns for dual, plural and feminine. So if the noun derived from Fa'al and Yafa'il is put in its place, it follows its unified course in conveying what Min used to convey from the meaning of the plural and feminine, like your saying: The army is defeated, and the soldiers are coming, so the verb is made unified because of the unification of the wording of the army and the soldiers. It is not permissible to say: The army is a man, and the soldiers are a young man, so that you say: The soldiers are young men and the army is men. Because one of the number of nouns that are not derived from Fa'al and Yafa'il does not convey the meaning of a group of them, and from that is the saying of the poet:

And if they eat, then the mother is the eater, and if they are hungry, then the worst of the hungry.

So he used it once in a singular form based on what I described of the intention of from, and establishing the apparent meaning of the noun that is derived from fa'ala and yafi'ul in its place, and he used it in a plural form another time based on the number of names reported about. If he used it in a singular form where he used it in a plural, or used it in a plural form where he used it in a singular form, it would be correct and permissible.

As for the interpretation of that, it means: O group of rabbis of the People of the Book, believe in what I revealed to My Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, of the Qur'an, which confirms your Book and what you have of the Torah and the Gospel, in which it is entrusted to you that he is My Messenger and Prophet sent with the truth, and do not be the first of your nation to deny it and deny that it is from Me, and that you have knowledge of it that no one else has.

Their disbelief in it: their denial that it is from God. The ha in it is from the mention of ma with His saying and believe in what was revealed. Like:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:41

And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, and do not exchange My verses for a small price, and fear Me only.

Al-Qasim told me, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told us, he said: Ibn Jurayj said, in his statement: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it, in the Qur'an.

Abu Jaafar said: It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding this, what:

Al-Muthanna told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And do not be the first to disbelieve in him, meaning: Do not be the first to disbelieve in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Some of them said: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it, meaning: in your book. And it is interpreted that in their denial of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they are denying their book, because in their book there is the command to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

These two statements are far from what the recitation indicates. That is because God, the Most High, commanded those addressed by this verse at the beginning to believe in what was revealed to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, as He, the Most High, said: And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you. It is reasonable that what God revealed in the era of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was the Qur'an, not Muhammad, because Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was a sent messenger, not a revealed revelation, and what was revealed is the Book. Then He forbade them from being the first to disbelieve in what He commanded them to believe in at the beginning of the verse. Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was not explicitly mentioned in this verse, so it is repeated by mentioning him implicitly in His statement: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it, even though it is not impossible in speech to mention implicitly a name that was not explicitly mentioned in speech.

Likewise, there is no meaning in the statement of those who claim that the referent of the mention in it is what in His statement, for what is with you. Because even if that is possible according to the apparent meaning of the speech, it is far from what is indicated by the apparent meaning of the recitation and revelation, because of what we described before, that what is commanded to be believed in at the beginning of the verse is the Qur'an. Likewise, what is forbidden to disbelieve in at the end of it must be the Qur'an. As for what is commanded to be believed in and not what is forbidden to disbelieve in, in one statement and one verse, that is not the most famous and apparent in the speech. This is despite its meaning being far from interpretation.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, and you have knowledge of it that others do not have.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And do not exchange My verses for a small price.

Abu Jaafar said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of that:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And do not exchange My verses for a small price, meaning: Do not take a fee for it. He said: And it is written in their first book: O son of Adam, learn for free as I was taught for free.

Others said:

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And do not exchange My verses for a small price, meaning: Do not take a small price and conceal the name of God, and that price is greed.

The interpretation of the verse is: Do not sell what I have given you of knowledge of My Book and its verses for a cheap price and a small worldly gain. And their selling it is their failure to explain to the people what is in their Book about the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and that it is written in it that he is the prophet whom they find written about in their Torah and Gospel for a small price, and it is their satisfaction with leadership over their followers from the people of their religion and faith, and their taking a reward from those to whom they explained that for what they explained to him from it.

We said in the meaning of that do not sell, because the buyer of the small price with the verses of God is the seller of the verses for the price, so each one of the price and the one being sold is sold to its owner, and its owner is the buyer with it. The meaning of that, as Abu al-Aaliyah interpreted it, is: Explain to the people the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and do not seek payment from them for it. So his prohibition of taking payment for explaining it is the prohibition of buying the small price with his verses.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And fear Me.

Abu Ja'far said: He says: So beware of selling My verses for a low price, and buying with them a small amount of merchandise, and your disbelief in what I revealed to My Messenger and your denial of the prophethood of My Prophet, lest I bring upon you what I brought upon your predecessors who followed your path of punishments and vengeance.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And believe in what I have revealed meaning they believed, meaning the Quran.

Confirming is a state of the pronoun in I have revealed, the meaning is in what I have revealed, and the factor in it is I have revealed. It is also permissible for it to be a state of what, and the factor in it is they believed, the meaning is they believed in the Quran, confirming. It is also permissible for it to be a source, the meaning is: they believed in the revelation of what is with you, meaning of the Torah.

The Almighty said: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it. The pronoun in it is said to refer to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Ibn Jurayj said: It refers to the Qur'an, as it is included in His statement: with what I revealed. And it is said: It refers to the Torah, as it is included in His statement: with what is with you.

If it is said: How did he say: disbeliever and not two disbelievers? It is said: The meaning is: Do not be the first group to disbelieve in him. Al-Akhfash and Al-Farraa claimed that it is based on the meaning of the verb, because the meaning is the first to disbelieve in him. Sibawayh narrated: He is the most charming and handsome of the young men, and the apparent meaning of the statement was: He is the most charming and handsome of the young men. He said: The first to disbelieve in him and the disbelievers of Quraysh had disbelieved before them, so its meaning is from the People of the Book, since they are the ones who are looked at in such a case, because they are an authority who are suspected of knowledge. And first according to Sibawayh is in the accusative case as the predicate of was. And it is from what was not pronounced as a verb, and it is on the pattern of af'al, its 'ayn and its fa' are a waw. And the verb was not pronounced as a verb so that it would not be defective from two aspects: the 'ayn and the fa', and this is the doctrine of the Basrans. The Kufians said: It is from wa'al if he escaped, its separator is awal, then the hamza was lightened and replaced with a waw and assimilated, so it was said first, just as the hamza of khati'a is lightened. Al-Jawhari said: The plural of awal and awal is also based on the change. Some people said: Its origin is wawal on faw'al, but the first waw was changed to a hamza. The reason why it was not made plural on awwal is because they found it difficult to have two waws come together between them, the plural alif. It was said: It is af'al from aal ya'ul, so its origin is a'awal, but it was changed and af'al came inverted from af'al, so it was made easier, changed, and assimilated.

Question: There is no argument in this verse for those who prevent the saying of the evidence of the address, and they are the Kufians and those who agreed with them, because the purpose of the speech is to forbid disbelief first and last, and the first was mentioned specifically because it is more severe, so the ruling of what is mentioned and what is not mentioned is one, and this is clear.

The Almighty's saying: And do not exchange My verses for a small price. There are four issues in this:

First: The Almighty's saying: And do not buy is connected to His saying: And do not be. He forbade them from being the first to disbelieve and from taking a price for the signs of God, meaning a bribe for changing the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. The narrators used to do that, so they were forbidden from it, as stated by some of the people of interpretation, including Al-Hasan and others. It was said: They had foods that they would eat for knowledge, like a salary, so they were forbidden from that. It was said: The rabbis used to teach their religion for a fee, so they were forbidden from that. And in their books: O son of Adam, learn for free as you were taught for free, meaning falsely and without a fee, as stated by Abu Al-Aaliyah. It was said: The meaning is: Do not buy My commands, prohibitions, and signs for a small price, meaning the world and its duration and the life that is insignificant and of no value, so what they exchanged for that was called a price, because they made it a substitute, so the name price was applied to it even though it was not a price. This meaning was mentioned earlier. The poet said:

If you have tried to commit a sin or have succeeded in committing it, then you have not suffered any loss by abandoning Hajj.

I said: Even though this verse is specific to the Children of Israel, it includes those who did what they did. So whoever takes a bribe to change or nullify a right, or refuses to teach what is required of him, or to perform what he has learned and it is required of him until he takes a wage for it, then he has entered into the meaning of the verse. And God knows best. Abu Dawud narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Whoever learns knowledge by which he seeks the pleasure of God Almighty, and learns it only to gain worldly gain, will not smell the fragrance of Paradise on the Day of Resurrection, meaning its scent.

Second: The scholars differed about taking payment for teaching the Qur'an and knowledge - because of this verse and what is similar to it - so Al-Zuhri and the people of opinion forbade it and said: It is not permissible to take payment for teaching the Qur'an, because teaching it is an obligation that requires the intention of drawing closer to God and sincerity, so payment is not taken for it like prayer and fasting. God the Almighty said: And do not exchange My verses for a small price. Ibn Abbas narrated that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The teachers of your children are the worst among you, the least merciful to the orphan and the harshest to the poor.

"I said, 'O Messenger of God, what do you say about teachers?' He said, 'Their dirhams are forbidden, their clothing is ill-gotten, and their speech is hypocrisy.'" And "Ubadah ibn al-Samit narrated: 'I taught some people from the people of the Suffah the Qur'an and writing, and one of them gave me a bow as a gift. I said, 'It is not money and I shoot with it in the way of God.' So I asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about it, and he said, 'If you are pleased to be put under a collar of fire with it, then accept it.'" Malik, al-Shafi'i, Ahmad, Abu Thawr, and most scholars permitted taking payment for teaching the Qur'an, based on his, may God bless him and grant him peace, saying in the hadith of Ibn Abbas - the hadith of the ruqyah:

And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, and do not exchange My verses for a small price, and fear Me only.

The most deserving of payment for which you have been paid is the Book of God. Narrated by Al-Bukhari, and it is a text that resolves the dispute, so it should be relied upon.

As for the argument that the opponent used of analogy to prayer and fasting, it is invalid, because it is in opposition to the text, and then there is a difference between them, which is that prayer and fasting are acts of worship specific to the doer, and teaching the Qur'an is an act of worship that extends to other than the teacher, so it is permissible to receive a fee for trying to transmit, such as teaching the writing of the Qur'an. Ibn al-Mundhir said: Abu Hanifa dislikes teaching the Qur'an for a fee, but it is permissible to hire a man to write a tablet, or a poem, or a known song for him, for a known fee, so hiring is permissible in what is an act of disobedience, and it is invalid in what is an act of obedience.

As for the answer to the verse - what is meant by it is the Children of Israel, and the law of those before us is it our law? There is a difference of opinion about it, and he does not say that.

Second answer: The verse is about someone who was appointed to learn and refused until he took a wage for it. But if he was not appointed, then it is permissible for him to take a wage based on the evidence of the Sunnah in that regard. He may be appointed, but if he does not have what he can spend on himself or his family, then teaching is not obligatory for him and he can focus on his craft and trade. The Imam must appoint him to help establish the religion, otherwise it is the Muslims' responsibility, because when Abu Bakr may God be pleased with him assumed the caliphate and was appointed for it, he did not have what he could support his family with, so he took clothes and went out to the market. He was asked about that and he said: How can I spend on my family? They returned him and imposed on him what he needed to live on. As for the hadiths, none of them stand on a straight path, and none of them are authentic according to the scholars of transmission. As for the hadith of Ibn Abbas, it was narrated by Sa'd ibn Tarif on the authority of 'Ikrimah on his authority, and Sa'd is rejected. As for the hadith of Abu Hurairah, it was narrated by Ali bin Asim from Hammad bin Salamah from Abu Jarham from him, and Abu Jarham is unknown and not known, and Hammad bin Salamah did not narrate from anyone called Abu Jarham, but he narrated it from Abu Al-Muhzam, whose hadith is also rejected, and it is a hadith that has no basis. As for the hadith of Ubadah bin As-Samit, it was narrated by Abu Dawud from the hadith of Al-Mughira bin Ziyad Al-Mawsili from Ubadah bin Nassi from Al-Aswad bin Tha'laba from him, and Al-Mughira is well-known among the people of knowledge, but he has some strange narrations, this is one of them, as stated by Abu Omar. Then he said: As for the hadith of the bow, it is well-known among the people of knowledge, because it was narrated from Ubadah from two chains of transmission, and it was narrated from Ubayy bin Ka'b from the hadith of Musa bin Ali from his father from Ubayy, and it is disconnected. There is no hadith in this chapter that must be known from the aspect of transmission, and the hadith of Ubadah and Ubayy is open to interpretation, because it is possible that God taught him and then he took a reward for it. It was narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

"The best people and the best of those who walk on the new earth are the teachers. Whenever a religion is created, renew it. Give to them and do not hire them, for you will be embarrassed by them. For if the teacher says to the boy: Say: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, and the boy says: In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful, God writes a release for the boy, a release for the teacher, and a release for his parents from the Fire."

Third: The scholars differed regarding the ruling on one who prays for a fee. Ashab narrated on the authority of Malik that he was asked about praying behind someone who was hired during Ramadan to lead the people in prayer. He said: I hope there is nothing wrong with that, but it is more disliked for him in the obligatory prayer. Al-Shafi'i and his companions and Abu Thawr said: There is nothing wrong with that or praying behind him. Al-Awza'i said: There is no prayer for him. Abu Hanifa and his companions disliked it, based on what was mentioned above. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: This issue is suspended from the previous one and its origin is the same.

I said: There will be another basis for this in the Book of Innocence, God willing. Ibn al-Qasim disliked taking payment for teaching poetry and grammar. Ibn Habib said: There is nothing wrong with taking payment for teaching poetry, letters, and the days of the Arabs. He dislikes poetry that contains alcohol, obscenity, and satire. Abu al-Hasan al-Lakhmi said: According to his statement, it is necessary for him to permit payment for his books and to permit the sale of his books. As for singing and wailing, they are forbidden in any case.

Fourth: Al-Darimi Abu Muhammad narrated in his Musnad: Yaqub bin Ibrahim told us: Muhammad bin Omar bin Al-Kumait told us: Ali bin Wahb Al-Hamadani told us: Ad-Dahhak bin Musa told us: Sulayman bin Abdul Malik passed by Madinah - on his way to Makkah - and stayed there for a few days, then he said: Is there anyone in Madinah who met any of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace? They said to him: Abu Hazim. So he sent for him, and when he entered upon him he said to him: O Abu Hazim, what is this rudeness? Abu Hazim said: O Commander of the Faithful, what rudeness have you seen from me? He said: The notables of the people of Madinah came to me and you did not come to me! He said: O Commander of the Faithful, I seek refuge in God from you saying what did not happen, you did not know me before this day, nor did I see you! Sulayman turned to Muhammad bin Shihab Az-Zuhri and said: The old man was right and you were wrong. Sulayman said: O Abu Hazim, why do we hate death? He said: Because you have ruined the Hereafter and built up the world, so you hated to go from prosperity to ruin. He said: You are right, Abu Hazim. How will we come to God tomorrow? He said: As for the doer of good, he is like the absent one who returns to his family, and as for the evildoer, he is like the runaway who returns to his master. So Sulayman wept and said: I wonder what we have with God? He said: Show your deeds to the Book of God. He said: Where can I find it? He said: Indeed, the righteous will be in pleasure, and indeed, the wicked will be in Hellfire. Sulayman said: Where is the mercy of God, Abu Hazim? Abu Hazim said: The mercy of God is close to the doers of good. Sulayman said to him: O Abu Hazim, which of God's servants is most honored? He said: Those of chivalry and reason. Salman said to him: Which deeds are best? Abu Hazim said: Performing the obligatory duties while avoiding the forbidden. Sulayman said: Which supplication is best heard? He said: The supplication of the doer of good for the doer of good. He said: Which charity is best? He said: For the poor beggar, and the effort of the poor, there is no harm or harm in it. He said: Which statement is most just? He said: Speaking the truth to someone you fear or hope for. He said: Which of the believers is the most intelligent? He said: A man who acts in obedience to God and guides people to it. He said: Which of the believers is the most foolish? He said: A man who descends in the desires of his brother and is unjust, so he sells his hereafter for the worldly life of another. Solomon said to him: You are right, so what do you say about what we are in? He said: O Commander of the Faithful, will you excuse me? Solomon said to him: No. But give me advice. He said: O Commander of the Faithful, your fathers subjugated the people with the sword, and took this kingdom by force without consulting the Muslims or their consent, until they killed a great number of them, so they departed from it. If you knew what they said and what was said to them! A man sitting with him said to him: What a bad thing you said, O Abu Hazim! Abu Hazim said: You lied. God took a covenant from the scholars to make it clear to the people and not to conceal it. Sulayman said to him: How can we reconcile? He said: You claim arrogance and hold on to chivalry and divide equally. Sulayman said to him: How can we take it? Abu Hazim said: Take it from its place and give it to its people. Sulayman said to him: Would you like to accompany us, Abu Hazim, so that we may take from us and you may take from us? He said: I seek refuge in God! Sulayman said to him: Why is that? He said: I fear that I may rely on you a little, and God will make me taste the weakness of life and the weakness of death. Sulayman said to him: Submit your needs to us. He said: Save me from the fire and admit me into Paradise. Sulayman said to him: That is not up to me! Abu Hazim said to him: I have no other need of you than that. He said: Then pray to me. Abu Hazim said: O God, if Sulayman is your friend, then make him easy for the good of this world and the hereafter, and if he is your enemy, then take him by the forelock to what you love and are pleased with. Sulayman said to him: Stop! Abu Hazim said: I have been brief and at length if you are one of its people, and if you are not one of its people, then it is not appropriate for me to shoot from a bow that has no string. Solomon said to him: Give me advice. He said: I will give you advice and be brief: Magnify your Lord and declare Him far above seeing you where He has forbidden you, or missing you where He has commanded you. When he left him, he sent him one hundred dinars and wrote to him: Spend them and I will have many more like them with me. He said: He returned them to him and wrote to him: O Commander of the Faithful, I seek refuge in God from your asking me in jest or my returning them to you in humiliation. I do not accept that for you, so how can I accept it for myself! When Moses, son of Imran, arrived at the watering place of Madyan, he found shepherds watering their flocks there, and he found two slave girls holding back their flocks, so he asked them, but they said: We will not water our flocks until the shepherds depart, and our father is an old man. So he watered their flocks for them, then he turned to the shade and said: My Lord, indeed I am, for whatever good You send down to me, in need. That was because he was hungry, fearful and not feeling safe, so he asked his Lord and did not ask people. The shepherds did not realize it, but the two maids did. When they returned to their father, they told him the story and what he had said. Their father, Shuaib, peace be upon him, said: This man is hungry. He said to one of them: Go and call him. When she came to him, she honored him and covered her face and said: My father calls you to reward you for having watered our flocks. Moses was upset when she mentioned the reward for having watered our flocks, and he had no choice but to follow her, because he was hungry and lonely among the mountains. When he followed her, the wind blew and she began to flapping her clothes on her back, showing him her buttocks - and she had a buttock - and Moses kept raising her head and lowering it at times, until his patience ran out, he called out to her: O servant of God, stand behind me and show me the way with your words. When he entered upon Shuaib, he saw that dinner was being prepared, so Shuaib said to him: Sit down, young man, and have your dinner. Moses, peace be upon him, said to him: I seek refuge in God! Shuaib said to him: Why! Are you not hungry? He said: Yes, but I fear that this is in exchange for what I watered for them, and I am from a family that does not sell anything of our religion for an earth full of gold. Shuaib said to him: No, young man, but it is my custom and the custom of my fathers: we honor the guest and provide food. So Moses sat and ate. If these one hundred dinars are in exchange for what I did, then carrion, blood, and pork in a state of necessity are more permissible than this. If it is due to the public treasury, then I have equals for it. If you treat us equally, then fine, otherwise I have no need for it.

I said: This is how we should follow the example of the Book and the Prophets. Look at this virtuous Imam and learned scholar, how he did not take compensation for his work, nor a substitute for his will, nor a chain for his advice. Rather, he made the truth clear and clear, and he was not overcome by fear or panic in that. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Let no one be prevented by fear of another from saying or standing up for the truth wherever he may be. And in the revelation: They strive in the cause of God and do not fear the blame of a blamer.

The Almighty said: And fear Me alone. The meaning of fearing Me has already been mentioned. It was also read fâtqûni with the letter ya, and it has already been mentioned. Sahl ibn Abdullah said: His statement: And fear Me alone, he said: He placed My previous knowledge in you. And fear Me alone, he said: It is the place of deception and enticement, because the Almighty said: We will lead them on gradually from where they do not know, and His statement: So none feels secure from the deception of God except the losing people. So He did not exclude a prophet or a friend.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, commanding the Children of Israel to enter Islam and follow Muhammad, upon whom be the best prayers and peace from God, and encouraging them by mentioning their father Israel, who is the Prophet of God Jacob, peace be upon him, and his interpretation is O sons of the righteous servant obedient to God, be like your father in following the truth as you say O son of the generous one do such and such, O son of the brave one confront the heroes, O son of the scholar seek knowledge, and so on. And from that also is the saying of the Almighty: "The descendants of those We carried with Noah. Indeed, he was a grateful servant." So Israel is Jacob, as evidenced by what Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi narrated. Abdul Hamid bin Bahram told us on the authority of Shahr bin Hawshab, who said: Abdullah bin Abbas told me: "A group of Jews attended the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he said to them: Do you know that Israel is Jacob? They said: By God, yes. So the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God bear witness." And al-A'mash said on the authority of Ismail bin Raja' on the authority of Umair, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Abdullah bin Abbas: That Israel is like your saying Abdullah and the saying of the Almighty: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you. Mujahid said: The favor of God that He bestowed upon them in what He named, and in other than that, is that He caused the stone to gush forth for them and sent down upon them manna and quails and saved them from the slavery of the people of Pharaoh. And Abu al-A'lya said: His favor is that He made among them prophets and messengers, and sent down upon them the books. I said: This is like the saying of Moses, peace be upon him, to them: O my people, remember the favor of God upon you when He made among you prophets and made you kings. And He gave you what He had not given to anyone in the worlds," meaning in their time. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God Almighty: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you, meaning My affliction with you and with your fathers when He saved them from Pharaoh and his people. And fulfill My covenant, I will fulfill your covenant, he said: My covenant that I took upon you to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he comes to you, I will fulfill for you what I promised you of believing in him and following him by removing the burdens and shackles that were upon you because of your sins that were of your own making. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: It is the saying of God Almighty: "And God took a covenant from the Children of Israel, and We raised up from among them twelve leaders. And God said, 'Indeed, I am with you. If you establish prayer and give zakah and believe in My messengers and support them and loan God a good loan, I will surely remove from you your misdeeds and admit you to gardens beneath which rivers flow.' " The verse. Others said: It is what God took from them in the Torah that He would send from the children of Ishmael a great prophet whom all people would obey, and what is meant by that is Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Whoever follows him, God will forgive his sin and admit him to Paradise and give him two rewards. Al-Razi mentioned many tidings from the prophets, may God bless him and grant him peace, about Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And fulfill My covenant. He said: His covenant to His servants is the religion of Islam and that they follow Him. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Will I fulfill your covenant? He said: Be pleased with you and admit you into Paradise. This is what As-Suddi, Ad-Dahhak, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said. The Almighty's statement, And fear Me, means be in awe. This was said by Abu Al-Aaliyah, As-Suddi, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, and Qatadah. Ibn Abbas said regarding the Almighty's statement, And fear Me, that is, if what I have sent down upon those who came before you from your fathers of the punishments that you have known of, such as transformation and other things, befalls you. This is a transition from encouragement to intimidation, so He called them to it with desire and intimidation so that they might return to the truth and follow the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and take heed of the Qur'an and its prohibitions, obey its commands, and believe in its report. God guides whom He wills to a straight path. For this reason, He said, And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, meaning the Qur'an that was sent down to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, the unlettered Arab prophet, as a bearer of good tidings and a warner, and a shining lamp containing the truth from God Almighty, confirming what came before it of the Torah and the Gospel. Abu Al-Aaliyah, may God have mercy on him, said regarding the Almighty's statement, And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you. He says: O group of People of the Book, believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you. He says because they find Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, written with them in the Torah and the Gospel. Something similar was narrated from Mujahid, Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas and Qatadah. His statement: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it. Some Arabists said: The first group to disbelieve in it or something like that. Ibn Abbas said: And do not be the first to disbelieve in it while you have knowledge of it that no one else has. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: He says: And do not be the first to disbelieve in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, meaning from your kind, the People of the Book, after hearing about his mission. This is what Al-Hasan, As-Suddi and Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas said. Ibn Jarir chose that the pronoun in his statement in it refers to the Qur'an that was mentioned earlier in his statement in what I have revealed. Both statements are correct because they are interconnected, because whoever disbelieves in the Qur'an has disbelieved in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and whoever disbelieves in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, has disbelieved in the Qur'an. As for his statement the first to disbelieve in it, he means the first of those who... He disbelieved in it from the Children of Israel, because many of the disbelievers of Quraysh and other Arabs had preceded them. Rather, what is meant is the first of the Children of Israel to disbelieve in it directly, for the Jews of Medina were the first Children of Israel to be addressed with the Qur'an, so their disbelief in it necessitates that they were the first of their kind to disbelieve in it. And the Almighty's statement: And do not exchange My verses for a small price means: Do not exchange faith in My verses and belief in My Messenger for the world and its desires, for it is small and fleeting, as Abdullah bin Mubarak said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid bin Jabir informed us on the authority of Harun bin Yazid who said: Al-Hasan, meaning Al-Basri, was asked about the statement of the Almighty: A small price. He said: The small price is the world in its entirety. Ibn Lahi'ah said: Ata bin Dinar told me on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr regarding the statement of the Almighty: And do not exchange My verses for a small price that His verses are His Book that He sent down to them, and the small price is the world and its desires. Al-Suddi said: And do not exchange My verses for a small price means: Do not take a small greed, and do not conceal the name of God. That greed is the price. Abu Ja'far said on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah regarding the words of God Almighty: And do not exchange My revelations for a small price, meaning: Do not take a wage for it. He said: It is written in their first book: O son of Adam, learn for free. I have learned for free. It was said: Its meaning is: Do not compensate for clarification, explanation, and spreading beneficial knowledge with concealment and confusion in order to continue your leadership in this small, insignificant, and soon-to-be-vanished world. In Sunan Abi Dawud on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever learns knowledge by which he seeks the face of God, and does not learn it except to gain some worldly gain, will not smell the fragrance of Paradise on the Day of Resurrection. As for teaching knowledge for a wage, if it is required of him, it is not permissible for him to take a wage for it. It is permissible for him to take from the public treasury what will sustain his condition and his dependents for a wage. If he does not obtain anything from it and teaching prevents him from earning a living, then it is as if it was not required of him. If it is not required of him, then it is permissible for him to take a wage for it according to Malik, al-Shafi'i, Ahmad, and the majority of scholars, as in Sahih al-Bukhari on the authority of Abu Sa'id in The story of the bitten man: The most deserving of payment for which you have taken a reward is the Book of God. And his saying in the story of the fiancée: I have married her to you for what you have of the Qur'an. As for the hadith of Ubadah ibn al-Samit, that he taught a man from the people of the Suffah something of the Qur'an and gave him a bow as a gift. He asked the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about it and he said: If you would like to be encircled by a bow of fire, then accept it. So he left it. It was narrated by Abu Dawud, and a similar hadith was narrated on the authority of Ubayy ibn Ka'b with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. If its chain of transmission is sound, then it is understood by many scholars, including Abu Umar ibn Abd al-Barr, that since he taught it for the sake of God, it was not permissible after that to substitute that bow for the reward of God. However, if it was from the beginning for teaching for a fee, then it is valid, as in the hadith of the bitten man and the hadith of Sahl regarding the fiancée. And God knows best. And His statement, And fear Me, Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Omar al-Duri told us, Abu Ismail al-Mu'addab told us, on the authority of Asim al-Ahwal, on the authority of Abu al-Aaliyah, on the authority of Talq ibn Habib, who said: Piety is to act in obedience to God, hoping for God's mercy, with a light from God, and to leave disobedience to God, with a light from God, fearing God's punishment. The meaning of His statement, And fear Me, is that God Almighty is threatening them with what they deliberately conceal of the truth, show the opposite of it, and oppose the Messenger, may God's prayers and peace be upon him.

Fath al-Qadir

The letter ya was dropped from his statement: FariKhoon because it is the beginning of verse 41 - And believing is a state of ma in his statement: ma anzal or of its implied pronoun after the verb, i.e., I revealed it. And his statement: The first to disbelieve in it he only brought it in the singular form, and did not say disbelievers so that it would match what came before it because it is a description of a deleted described word that is singular in wording, but has multiple meanings, such as a group or a squadron. Al-Akhfash and Al-Farra' said: It is based on the meaning of the verb, because the meaning is the first to disbelieve. It may be from their saying that he is the most charming and handsome of young men, as Sibawayh narrated, so this singular can take the place of the plural. He only said first even though the disbelievers of Quraysh preceded them in disbelief in him, because what is meant is the first disbeliever in him from the People of the Book, because they are the ones who know what is required of the prophets, and what is required of belief. The pronoun in him refers to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: that is, do not be the first to disbelieve in this Prophet, even though you have found him written down among you in the Torah and the Gospel, and given glad tidings of him in the books revealed to you. Al-Razi narrated in his interpretation in this place what he had come across of the glad tidings of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the previous books. It was said that it refers to the Qur'an, which is indicated by His statement: with what I have revealed. It was also said that it refers to the Torah, which is indicated by His statement: for what is with you, and His statement: And do not exchange My verses meaning My commands and prohibitions for a small price meaning a meager livelihood and leadership of no value. He made what they exchanged a price, and he made the purchase based on it, even though the price was the one who bought it, because the purchase here is borrowed for the exchange: that is, do not exchange My verses for a small price, and something like this often occurs in their speech. We have already discussed it in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They have purchased error in exchange for guidance. And from the use of the name price for obtaining a worldly commodity is the saying of the poet:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:41

And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, and do not exchange My verses for a small price, and fear Me only.

If you have tried this world or have achieved it, then you have not gained any price from abandoning Hajj.

Although this verse is addressed to the Children of Israel and a prohibition to them, it is also addressed to this nation in the meaning or tone of the address. Whoever among the Muslims takes a bribe to invalidate a right that God has commanded, or to establish a falsehood that God has forbidden, or refuses to teach what God has taught him and conceals the statement that God has taken a covenant from him, has purchased the verses of God for a small price. His statement, And fear Me is similar to the statement of God Almighty, And fear Me which was mentioned earlier.

41. And believe in what I have revealed meaning the Qur'an confirming what is with you meaning in agreement with what is with you meaning: the Torah, in monotheism, prophethood, report and the description of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. It was revealed about Ka'b ibn al-Ashraf and his companions from the scholars and leaders of the Jews. And do not be the first to disbelieve in it meaning the Qur'an, meaning from the People of the Book, because Quraysh disbelieved before the Jews in Mecca. Its meaning is: Do not be the first to disbelieve in the Qur'an, lest the Jews follow you in that and you bear for your sins and their sins a small price meaning a small amount of this world. This is because the leaders and scholars of the Jews had food that they obtained from their lowly and ignorant people, taking from them every year a known amount from their crops, their udders and their money. They feared that if they explained the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and followed him, they would miss out on that food, so they changed his description and concealed his name, choosing this world over the Hereafter. And fear Me fear Me.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

41- And believe in what I have revealed, confirming what is with you. The belief in it is singled out and the urging to it is because it is the intended purpose and the mainstay for fulfilling covenants, and the revelation is restricted to confirming what is with them of the divine books in that it was revealed according to what was described in it, or in accordance with it in the stories and promises and the call to monotheism and the command to worship and justice among people and the prohibition of sins and immoralities, and in what contradicts it of the details of the rulings due to the differences in the ages in interests in that each one of them is true in addition to its time, taking into account the goodness of the one addressed by it, so that if the earlier one was revealed in the days of the later one, it would have been revealed in accordance with it, and for this reason he, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, said, If Moses were alive, he would have no choice but to follow me, as a reminder that following it does not contradict belief in it, rather it necessitates it, and for this reason he presented it by saying:

And do not be the first to disbelieve in it means that they should be the first to believe in it, and because they were the people who contemplate its miracles and have knowledge of its affairs, and who sought its opening and were given glad tidings of its time. And the first to disbelieve in it is the predicate of a collective pronoun with the estimation: the first group or regiment, or with the interpretation that not every one of you should be the first to disbelieve in it, like your saying He clothed us with a garment. If it is said: How did they forbid us from advancing in disbelief when the polytheists of the Arabs preceded them? I say that what is meant by it is an allusion, not an indication of what the apparent meaning has stated, like your saying: As for me, I am not ignorant, or do not be the first to disbelieve in it. From the People of the Book, or from those who disbelieved in what is with them, because whoever disbelieves in the Qur'an has disbelieved in what confirms it, or like those who disbelieved from the polytheists of Mecca. And first is an af'al, not a verb, and it was said: its origin is or al from wa al, so its hamza was replaced with a waw for non-standard relief, or a first from al, so its hamza was changed to a waw and assimilated.

And do not exchange My verses for a small price. Do not exchange faith in them and following them for worldly gains, for even if they are great, they are small and worthless in addition to the gains of the Hereafter that you miss out on by abandoning faith. It was said: They had leadership over their people and had customs and gifts from them, so they feared for them if they followed the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, so they chose them over him. It was also said: They used to take bribes, distort the truth, and conceal it.

And fear Me by believing, following the truth, and turning away from the world. Since the previous verse included what is like the beginning of what is in the second verse, it was separated by awe, which is the introduction to piety. And because the address to it included the learned imitator, He commanded them with awe, which is the beginning of behavior, and the address to the second, since it was specific to the people of knowledge, He commanded them with piety, which is its end.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:42

And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know [it].

Surat al-Baqarah 2:42

And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know [it].

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And do not mix mix the truth which I have revealed to you with falsehood which you invent, and do not conceal the truth the description of Muhammad while you know that it is the truth.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: What he means by his saying: And do not confuse is do not mix. Confusion is mixing. It is said: I confuse this matter for him, I confuse it: if you mix it up for him. Like:

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, on the authority of Bishr bin Ammarah, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: And We would have confused for them what they were confused with (al-An'am 6:9), he said: We would have mixed for them what they were mixing. And from this is the statement of Al-Ajjaj:

When they dressed up the truth with injustice, they sang and replaced Zaid with me.

He means by his saying: they wore, they mixed. As for wearing, it is said from it: I wore it, I dressed him, wearing and clothing, and that is the clothing that he puts on and wears. And from wearing is the saying of Al-Akhtal:

I have worn this age's tresses until my head is covered with gray hair and it is burning

Among the confusions is the statement of God Almighty: And We would have confused them with that which they were confused with (al-An'am 6:9).

If someone were to say to us: How did they mix truth with falsehood while they were infidels? What right did they have while they were infidels to God?

It was said: There were hypocrites among them who outwardly believed in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, but inwardly disbelieved in him. Most of them used to say: Muhammad is a prophet sent, but he was sent to someone other than us. So the hypocrite among them mixed truth with falsehood, showing the truth with his tongue, and his acknowledgement of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought openly, and mixing that apparent truth with what he concealed. And the confusion of those among them who acknowledged that he was sent to someone other than them, but denied that he was sent to them, was their acknowledgement that he was sent to someone other than them, which is the truth, and their denial that he was sent to them, which is falsehood, and God sent him to all of creation. So that is their mixing truth with falsehood and mixing it with it. Like:

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: And do not mix truth with falsehood, he said: Do not mix truth with falsehood.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And do not mix truth with falsehood, meaning: Do not mix truth with falsehood, and give sincere advice to the servants of God regarding the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, he said: Ibn Jurayj said, Mujahid said: And do not mix truth with falsehood, Judaism and Christianity with Islam.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And do not mix truth with falsehood, he said: The truth is the Torah that God revealed to Moses, and the falsehood is what they wrote with their own hands.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And you conceal the truth while you know.

Abrajafar said: In his saying, and conceal the truth, there are two aspects of interpretation:

One of them: That God, the Most High, forbade them from concealing the truth, just as He forbade them from mixing truth with falsehood. The interpretation of that then would be: Do not mix truth with falsehood, and do not conceal the truth. And His statement, and conceal would then be in the jussive mood with the jussive mood of they were in the jussive mood, in apposition to it.

The other aspect of them: That the prohibition is from God, the Most High, to them from mixing truth with falsehood, and His saying: and conceal the truth is report from Him about them concealing the truth that they know, so His saying: and conceal then is in the accusative case because it is diverted from the meaning of His saying: and do not mix truth with falsehood, since His saying: and do not mix was a prohibition, and His saying: and conceal the truth is report conjoined to it, and it is not permissible to repeat what worked in His saying: they wore from the decisive particle. And that is the meaning that grammarians call inflection. Similar to that in meaning and syntax is the saying of the poet:

Do not forbid a behavior and then do the same yourself. Shame on you if you do it.

The accusative case comes according to the interpretation that we mentioned in His statement: and conceal it, because it did not mean: Do not forbid a behavior and do not do something similar to it, but rather its meaning is: Do not forbid a behavior and you do something similar to it, so the first was a prohibition and the second was a predicate, so the predicate was accusative because it was conjoined to something other than its form. As for the first of these two aspects that we mentioned that the verse can bear both, it is according to the school of Ibn Abbas who:

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, his statement: And conceal the truth, he said: Do not conceal the truth while you know.

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And conceal the truth, meaning do not conceal the truth.

As for the second aspect, it is according to the doctrine of Abu Al-Aaliyah and Mujahid.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And you concealed the truth while you knew, he said: They concealed the mission of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Muhammad bin Amr told us: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

As for the interpretation of the truth that they concealed while knowing it, it is as follows:

Ibn Hamid told us: Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And conceal the truth, meaning: Do not conceal what you have of knowledge of my Messenger and what he brought, and you find it with you in what you know of the books that are in your hands.

Abu Kuraib told us: Uthman bin Saeed told us: Bishr bin Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And you conceal the truth, meaning: You have known that Muhammad is the Messenger of God, so he forbade them from that.

Muhammad bin Amr told me: Abu Asim told us: Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding God's statement: And you conceal the truth while you know, he said: The People of the Book conceal Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, even though they find him written with them in the Torah and the Gospel.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Musa bin Harun told me: Amr bin Hammad told us: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And you conceal the truth while you know it, he said: The truth is Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And you concealed the truth while you knew, he said: They concealed the mission of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, while they found it written down with them.

Al-Qasim told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: You conceal Muhammad while you know, and you find him with you in the Torah and the Gospel.

So the interpretation of the verse is: O rabbis from the People of the Book, do not confuse the people about the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought from his Lord, and claim that he was sent to some races of nations and not others, or be hypocritical about his matter, while you know that he was sent to all of you and all nations other than you, so mix truth with falsehood, and conceal with it what you find in your book of his description and attributes, and that he is My Messenger to all people, and you know that he is My Messenger, and that what he brought to you is from Me, and you know that from My covenant that I took from you in your book is belief in him and in what he brought and confirmation of it.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And do not mix truth with falsehood. Confusion means mixing. I confused the matter for him, if I mixed it with a problem and its truth with its falsehood. God Almighty said: And We would have confused them with that which they confuse. And in the matter is confusion, meaning it is not clear. From this meaning is the saying of Ali, may God be pleased with him, to Al-Harith bin Hawt: O Harith, you are confused, the truth is not known by men, know the truth and you will know its people. And Al-Khansa said:

You see the companion saying the truth, you think it is guidance, but it is not. So look at what is confusing about it.

Believe his words, beware of his enmity, and dress him up in the same manner as he dressed them up.

Al-Ajaj said:

When they dressed up the truth with injustice, they sang and replaced Zaid with me.

Saeed narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And do not mix truth with falsehood, he said: Do not mix Judaism and Christianity with Islam, and you have known that the religion of God - which He does not accept anything other than it and which He does not reward except with it - is Islam, and that Judaism and Christianity are innovations and are not from God. And what is apparent from the statement of

Surat al-Baqarah 2:42

And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know [it].

Antarah:

And a battalion dressed it as a battalion

It is from this meaning, and it is possible that it is from clothing. This has been said in the meaning of the verse, meaning do not cover. And from it is wearing the garment, it is said: I wore the garment, I put it on. And the man's clothing is his wife, and her husband is her clothing. Al-Ja'di said:

If the one lying down bends her neck, she bends back on him and becomes a garment.

Al-Akhtal said:

I wore this garment until my hair turned white and became radiant.

Clothing: everything that is worn from clothes and armor. God Almighty said: And We taught him the making of clothing for you. And I dressed so-and-so until I knew his inner self. And in so-and-so there is clothing, meaning enjoyment. He said:

Indeed, after nothingness, a person finds contentment, and after gray hair, a long life and clothing.

Wearing the Kaaba and the howdah: what they wear of clothing with a kasra on the lam.

God Almighty says: With falsehood. Falsehood in the speech of the Arabs is the opposite of the truth, and its meaning is the vanishing. Labid said:

Everything except God is false

The thing is invalidated, nullified, and lost, and was nullified by someone else. It is said: His blood was nullified, meaning in vain. The false is the devil. The hero is the one who cuts the wounds, and he was called that because he nullifies the courage of his companion. Al-Nabigha said:

They have a banner in the hands of a noble hero, who can only cut off his limbs, Sami.

The woman is a heroine. The man became heroic and idle, meaning he became brave. The hired hand became idle, meaning he was unemployed, so he is idle. The people of interpretation differed about what is meant by his saying: the truth with falsehood. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas and others: Do not mix what you have of the truth in the Book with falsehood, which is changing and altering. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: The Jews said: Muhammad was sent, but to someone other than us. So their acknowledgment of his being sent is true, and their denial that he was sent to them is false. Ibn Zayd said: What is meant by the truth is the Torah, and falsehood is what they changed in it of mentioning Muhammad, peace be upon him, and others. Mujahid said: Do not mix Judaism and Christianity with Islam. Qatada said the same, and it has been mentioned before.

I said: The statement of Ibn Abbas is more correct, because it is general and includes all statements. And God is the source of help.

God the Almighty said: And conceal the truth It is possible that it is connected to they were confused in which case it is in the subjunctive mood, or it is possible that it is in the accusative case with the omission of that, the meaning being: Do not be confused with the truth or conceal it, that is, and conceal it. Ibn Abbas said: It means that they concealed the matter of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, even though they knew him. Muhammad bin Sirin said: A group of the descendants of Aaron settled in Yathrib when the Children of Israel were afflicted with what afflicted them of the enemy's supremacy over them and humiliation, and that group were the bearers of the Torah at that time, so they stayed in Yathrib hoping that Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, would emerge among them, and they were believers who confirmed his prophethood. So those fathers went on as believers and left behind their sons and sons and sons, and they caught up with Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they disbelieved in him even though they knew him, and this is the meaning of His statement: But when there came to them that which they recognized, they disbelieved in it.

The Almighty's saying: And you know is a phrase in the position of a circumstantial, meaning that Muhammad, peace be upon him, is true, so their disbelief was a disbelief of stubbornness, and the Almighty did not testify that they had knowledge, but rather He forbade them from concealing what they knew. This indicates that the sin is more severe for the one who commits it knowingly and that he is more disobedient than the ignorant.

This will be explained when God Almighty says: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people? verse.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, forbidding the Jews from what they were deliberately doing of mixing truth with falsehood, camouflaging it with it, concealing the truth, and making falsehood manifest: And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know. So He forbade them from both things together, and commanded them to make the truth manifest and declare it. For this reason, Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And do not mix truth with falsehood means do not mix truth with falsehood, and truth with lies. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And do not mix truth with falsehood - he says, do not mix truth with falsehood, and give sincere advice to the servants of God from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. It is narrated from Saeed bin Jubair and Al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar. Qatada said: And do not mix truth with falsehood and do not mix Judaism and Christianity with Islam, while you know that the religion of God is Islam, and that Judaism and Christianity are innovations that are not from God. It is narrated from Al-Hasan Al-Basri something similar. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas And conceal the truth while you know meaning do not conceal what you have of knowledge of my Messenger and what he brought while you find it written with you in what you know of the books that are in your hands. It is narrated from Abu Al-Aaliyah something similar. Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Qatada, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: And conceal the truth meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. I said And concealing it is possible that it is in the subjunctive mood, and it is possible that it is in the accusative case, meaning do not combine this and that as it is said: Do not eat fish and drink milk. Al-Zamakhshari said: In the Mushaf of Ibn Masoud, And you conceal the truth, meaning in the state of concealing the truth while you know, is also a state. Its meaning is and you know the truth. It is possible that the meaning is: and you know what great harm there is to people from misleading them from guidance leading them to the Fire until they follow what you show them of falsehood mixed with a type of truth to promote it to them. Explanation is clarification and its opposite is concealment and mixing truth with falsehood. And establish prayer and give zakat and bow with those who bow. Muqatil said: God Almighty's statement to the People of the Book, And establish prayer, He commanded them to pray with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And give zakat, He commanded them to give zakat, meaning to pay it to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And bow with those who bow, He commanded them to bow with those who bow from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. He says: Be with them and from them. Ali bin Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means by zakat obedience to God. And sincerity, and Wakee' said on the authority of Abu Janab on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His statement: And give zakat, he said: What makes zakat obligatory? He said: Two hundred and above, and Mubarak bin Fadal said on the authority of Al-Hasan regarding His statement, the Most High, And give zakat, he said: It is an obligatory duty, and no deeds are of benefit except through it and through prayer, and Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Zur'ah told us, Uthman bin Abi Shaybah told us, Jarir told us, on the authority of Abu Hayyan Al-Taymi, on the authority of Al-Harith Al-Akli regarding His statement, the Most High, And give zakat, he said: Zakat Al-Fitr, and His statement, the Most High, And bow with those who bow, meaning and be with the believers in their best deeds, and the most specific and perfect of that is prayer, and many scholars have used this verse as evidence for the obligation of congregation, and I will explain that in detail in the book Al-Ahkam Al-Kabir, God willing, and Al-Qurtubi spoke about the issues of congregation and leadership and did well.

Fath al-Qadir

And confusion means mixing. It is said: I confused the matter for him, I confused it: if you mixed his right with his wrong and his clear with his difficult. God Almighty said: 42- And We would have confused for them what they were mixing. Al-Khansa' said:

You see the companion saying the truth, you think it is right, but it is not. So look at what is confusing him.

Believe his words, beware of his enmity, and dress him up in the same manner as they dressed him up.

Al-Ajaj said:

When I dressed up the truth with injustice, they blamed me and replaced Zaid with another one.

And from it is the saying of Antarah:

And I wore a battalion with a battalion, until when it became confused, I shook my hand at it

It was said: It is taken from covering: meaning do not cover the truth with falsehood, and from it is the saying of Al-Ja'di:

If the one lying down bends her neck, she bends back on him and becomes a garment.

And Al-Akhtal said:

I wore this matter and squeezed it until my head turned white and became radiant.

The first is more appropriate. In Arabic, falsehood means: the vanishing, and from it is the saying of Labid:

Everything except God is false

The thing is invalidated in length and invalidity, and something else invalidated it. It is said: his blood was shed in vain, meaning in vain. The falsehood is the devil, and the brave man is called a hero because he invalidates the bravery of his companion, and what is meant by it here is the opposite of the truth. The ba' in his statement with falsehood may be a connection or for assistance, its meaning is mentioned in Al-Kashshaf, and Al-Razi preferred the second in his interpretation. His statement: and concealed may be included under the ruling of prohibition, or accusative by the implication of that, and according to the first, each of confusion and concealment is prohibited, and according to the second, what is prohibited is combining the two matters, and from this it becomes clear that it is preferable to include it under the ruling of prohibition and that each of them may not be done separately, and what is meant is the prohibition of concealing the proofs of God that He has obligated them to convey and has taken upon them to explain, and whoever interprets confusion or concealment as something specific and a special meaning has not been wrong if he meant that this is what is meant and not something else, not if he meant that it is something that is true of it. His saying: And you know is a circumstantial clause, and it indicates that their disbelief is disbelief of stubbornness, not disbelief of ignorance, and that is more severe for the sin and more deserving of punishment. This restriction does not indicate the permissibility of confusion and concealment with ignorance, because the ignorant person must not proceed with something until he knows its ruling, especially in matters of religion, because speaking about it and taking on the responsibility of issuing and presenting in its chapters is only permitted by God for the one who is a leader in knowledge and an individual in understanding. What is wrong with the ignorant and entering into what is not their concern and sitting in places other than their places? Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: O Children of Israel, he said to the Jewish rabbis: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you, meaning My affliction with you and with your fathers when He saved them from Pharaoh and his people. And fulfill My covenant, which I took upon you to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he came to you. I will fulfill your covenant, I will fulfill what I promised you by believing in him and following him by removing the burdens and shackles that were upon you. And fear Me, lest I bring down upon you what I brought down upon those of your fathers before you of punishments. And believe in what I have revealed, confirming that which is with you, and do not be the first to disbelieve in it, while you have knowledge of it that no one else has. And conceal the truth while you know, meaning do not conceal what you have of knowledge about My Messenger and what he brought to you, while you find it with you in what you know of the books that are in your hands. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority regarding his statement: Fulfill My covenant. He says: Be pleased with you and admit you into Paradise. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated something similar from Ibn Mas'ud. Ibn al-Mundhir narrated from Mujahid regarding his statement: Fulfill your covenant, he said: It is the covenant that He took from them in Surat al-Ma'idah 5: God took a covenant from the Children of Israel, the verse. 'Abd ibn Humayd narrated something similar from Qatadah. 'Abd ibn Humayd narrated something similar from al-Hasan, he said: Fulfill what I have enjoined upon you, and I will fulfill what I promised you. 'Abd ibn Humayd and Abu al-Shaykh al-Dahhak narrated something similar. Ibn Jarir narrated from Abu al-'Aliyah regarding his statement: So fear Me, he said: So be afraid. 'Abd ibn Humayd and Ibn Jurayj narrated from Mujahid regarding his statement: And believe in what I have revealed, the Qur'an said: Confirming what is with you, he said: the Torah and the Gospel. Ibn Jurayj narrated from Ibn Jarir regarding his statement: The first to disbelieve in it, he said: the Qur'an. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah regarding the verse, he said: He says, O people of the Book, believe in what I have revealed to Muhammad, confirming what is with you, because they find it written with them in the Torah and the Gospel. And do not be the first to disbelieve in it, meaning the first to disbelieve in Muhammad. And do not exchange My signs for anything, he said: He said: And it is written with them in the first book: O son of Umm, learn for free as I was taught for free. Abu Al-Shaykh narrated on his authority that he said: Do not take a reward for what you have learned, for the reward of the scholars, the wise, and the forbearing is from God. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His statement, And do not mix truth with falsehood, he said: Do not mix truth with falsehood. And conceal the truth, he said: Do not conceal the truth while you have known that Muhammad is the Messenger of God. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And do not mix the verse, he said: Do not mix Judaism and Christianity with Islam, and conceal the truth, he said: Conceal Muhammad even though they know that he is the Messenger of God, and they find it written with them in the Torah and the Gospel. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abd al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam, he said: The truth is the Torah, and falsehood is what they wrote with their own hands.

And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know [it].

42. And do not mix truth with falsehood meaning do not mix. It is said: He wore a garment, he wears a confusion, and he mixed up the matter, he wears a confusion, meaning he mixed it. He says: Do not mix the truth that was revealed to you about the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, with the falsehood that you write with your own hands about changing the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Most of them agree that he meant: Do not mix Islam with Judaism and Christianity.

Muqatil said: The Jews acknowledged some of the attributes of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and concealed some in order to be believed in that. So he said: And do not mix the truth that you acknowledge with falsehood, meaning with what you conceal. So the truth is their statement, and falsehood is their concealment. And conceal the truth, meaning do not conceal it, meaning: the attribute of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

And you know that he is a sent prophet.

42-And do not mix truth with falsehood is in apposition to what preceded it. Confusion is mixing and may entail making something look like something else. The meaning is do not mix the revealed truth with the falsehood that you invent and conceal so that one cannot distinguish between them, or do not make the truth ambiguous because of mixing the falsehood that you write in between it, or mention in its interpretation.

And conceal the truth is a jussive mood that falls under the ruling of prohibition, as if they were commanded to believe and abandon misguidance, and were forbidden from misleading by deceiving those who heard the truth and concealing it from those who did not hear it, or it is accusative with the omission of an on the basis that the waw is for the collection in the sense of with, meaning do not combine the confusion of truth with falsehood and concealing it, and this is supported by the fact that in the Mushaf of Ibn Mas'ud, and you conceal means and you conceal in the sense of concealers, and in it is an indication that the ugliness of confusion is due to the concealment of the truth that accompanies it.

And you know knowing that you are wearing and concealing, then it is more ugly, because the ignorant may be excused.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:43

And establish prayer and give zakah and bow with those who bow.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:43

And establish prayer and give zakah and bow with those who bow.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And establish prayer and give zakat and bow with those who bow Pray with the praying Muhammad and his companions, and it was revealed about their scholars and they used to say to their Muslim relatives, Stand firm in the religion of Muhammad, for it is the truth.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: It was mentioned that the Jewish rabbis and hypocrites were ordering people to establish prayer and pay zakat, but they did not do so. So God ordered them to establish prayer with the Muslims who believed in Muhammad and what he brought, and to pay zakat on their wealth with them, and to submit to God and His Messenger as they had submitted.

It was also narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And establish prayer and give zakat, he said: They are two obligatory duties, so perform them to God.

We have already explained the meaning of establishing prayer in the past of this book, so we disliked repeating it. As for giving zakat, it is the performance of the obligatory charity. The origin of zakat is the growth, fruition and increase of wealth. From this it is said: the crops became zaka, if what God brought forth from them increased. And the expenditure became zaka, if it increased. And it is said that the individual became zaka, if it became a pair with the increase of what was added to it until it became even, as the poet said:

They were lost or lost without four who were not created, and the ancestors of people are turbulent

Another said:

Neither loss nor purity, like the sparks of the green leaves at the edges of the stalk.

Abu Jaafar said: The thorn of the beast is the thorn of the beast, and the beast is what is round in the anus. He means by his saying: nor purity, that he did not make them even from odd, by its occurrence in them.

Zakat is called zakat, and it is money that is given from money, so that God may reward it by giving it from what it was given, what remains with the owner of the money from his money. It may be possible that it was called zakat because it purifies what remains of a man's money, and frees him from any injustice to the people of the two shares, as God, the Most High, said, informing about His Prophet Moses, peace be upon him: Have you killed a pure soul? (al-Kahf 18:74), meaning innocent of sins and pure. And as it is said of a man: He is just and pure for this meaning. This interpretation of zakat on money is more pleasing to me than the first interpretation, although the first interpretation is acceptable.

Giving it: giving it to its people.

As for the interpretation of bowing, it is submission to God through obedience. It is said: So-and-so bowed to such-and-such, if he submitted to him. And from this is the saying of the poet:

She was sold in a despicable way, and her father called for help from her emaciation after they had knelt down.

Meaning: after he submitted to the intensity of effort and need.

Abu Ja'far said: This is a command from God, the Most High, to those mentioned from the rabbis and hypocrites of the Children of Israel, to turn to Him and repent to Him, to establish prayer and pay zakat, to enter Islam with the Muslims, and to submit to Him in obedience. It is a prohibition from Him to them from concealing what they have learned of the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, after his proofs have been presented to them, as we have described before in what has passed in this book of ours, and after the excuse and warning to them, and after reminding them of His blessings to them and to their ancestors, out of His compassion for them and to convey His apology.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And establish prayer and give zakat and bow with those who bow.

It contains thirty-four issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: And establish prayer is a command that means obligation, and there is no disagreement about it. We have already discussed the meaning of establishing prayer, its derivation, and a number of its rulings. Praise be to God.

Second: The Almighty's saying: And give zakat is also a command that implies obligation. Giving means bestowing. I gave to him, God Almighty said: If He gives us from His bounty, we will surely give in charity. And I came to him - in the short form without extending - I came to him, so if coming means receiving, extending, and from this is the hadith:

"I will go to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and inform him." And he will come.

Third: Zakat is taken from the word zaka which means that something grew and increased. It is said: Zaka al-Zar' wa al-Mal yazkawa meaning it became plentiful and increased. And jala zaki means excessive goodness. And giving money as zakat is a decrease from it in terms of its growth through blessing or the reward with which the giver of zakat is rewarded. And it is said: Zara' zaka bayn al-zakaa a plant that has grown zakaa. And the she-camel gave birth to her offspring, meaning she threw it from between her legs. And the individual became zakaa if it became a pair with the increase of the one who gave it until it became even. The poet said:

They were lost or pure without four, they were not created and the people's ancestors are turbulent Plural of Jad, which is the line and luck. Ta'ta'tulaj means to rise. The land became tall: its plants grew. Khasa: the individual, and Zaka: the pair.

It was said: Its origin is beautiful praise, and from this the judge praised the witness. So it is as if the one who pays zakat obtains beautiful praise for himself. It was said: Zakat is taken from purification, as it is said: So-and-so purified himself, meaning he was cleansed from the filth of injury and neglect. So it is as if the money that comes out purifies it from the responsibility of the right that God has made for the poor. Do you not see that the Prophet called what comes out of zakat the filth of the people, and God Almighty said: Take from their wealth a charity by which you purify them and sanctify them.

Fourth: There is a difference of opinion regarding what is meant by zakat here. Some say it is the obligatory zakat, because it is compared to prayer. Others say it is the zakat al-fitr. Malik said in the hearing of Ibn al-Qasim:

I said: According to the first opinion - which is the opinion of most scholars - zakat is general in the Book and was explained by the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. The imams narrated on the authority of Abu Saeed Al-Khudri that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

There is no zakat on grain or dates until they reach five awsuq, nor is there zakat on less than five camels, nor is there zakat on less than five ounces. Al-Bukhari said: Five ounces of silver. Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: On that which is watered by the sky or springs or is of a wild origin, the zakat is one-tenth, and on that which is watered by sprinkling, half of one-tenth. This chapter will be explained in Al-An'am, God willing. It will be explained in the innocence of zakat on cash and livestock, and in the explanation of wealth from which zakat is not taken, when God says: Take from their wealth a charity. As for zakat al-fitr, there is no text in the Book about it except what Malik interpreted here, and the words of God, the Most High, He has succeeded who purifies himself, And remembers the name of his Lord and prays. The commentators mention the discussion of it in Surat Al-A'la, and I saw the discussion of it in this surah when we discussed the verses on fasting, because the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Zakat al-Fitr was imposed in Ramadan, the hadith will come, so he added it to Ramadan.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: And bow down. Bowing down in the language means bending over with the person, and everyone who bends over is bowing. Labid said:

Tell the report of the past centuries, as if I am kneeling every time I stand up

Ibn Duraid said: "Ruk'ah is a hollow in the ground, a Yemeni term. It was said: Bowing includes bowing and prostration, and is also used metaphorically to mean lowering one's status." He said:

Do not harm the weak, lest one day you kneel and time will raise him up.

Sixth: People differed about specifying bowing as a remembrance. Some people said: Making bowing as one of the pillars of prayer an expression for prayer.

I said: This is not limited to bowing alone, as the Shari'ah has made recitation an expression of prayer, and prostration an expression of the entire rak'ah, so it said: And the Qur'an of dawn, meaning the dawn prayer, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Whoever catches a prostration in the prayer has caught the prayer. The people of Hijaz call the rak'ah a prostration. It has been said that bowing was mentioned specifically because the Children of Israel did not bow in their prayer. It has also been said that it was more difficult for the people in the pre-Islamic period, to the point that one of those who converted to Islam - I think it was Imran bin Husayn - said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: On the condition that I will not prostrate except while standing. One of the interpretations of this is that I will not bow. When Islam took hold of his heart, his soul was reassured by that and he complied with what he was commanded to do regarding bowing.

Seventh: The legitimate bowing is for the man to bend his back, stretch his back and neck, open his fingers, and clasp his knees, then he calmly bows and says: Glory be to my Lord, the Almighty, three times, and that is the least. Muslim narrated on the authority of Aisha, who said:

"The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, would begin his prayer by saying 'Allahu Akbar' and reciting 'Al-Hamdulillah Rabb al-'Alamin' Praise be to God, Lord of the Worlds. When he bowed, he did not fix his gaze or make it correct, but rather he was in between." Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Abu Humayd al-Sa'idi, who said: "I saw the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he said 'Allahu Akbar', place his hands level with his shoulders, and when he bowed, place his hands on his knees and then bend his back." Hadith.

Eighth: Bowing is obligatory, according to the Qur'an and Sunnah, as is prostration, because God the Almighty said at the end of Hajj: Bow and prostrate. The Sunnah added tranquility in them and separation between them. This has been discussed previously, and we explained the manner of bowing earlier. As for prostration, it was explained in the hadith of Abu Hamid al-Sa'idi: "When the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, prostrated, he would place his forehead and nose on the ground, move his hands away from his sides, and place his palms level with his shoulders." Narrated by al-Tirmidhi, who said: A good and authentic hadith. Muslim narrated on the authority of Anas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Be moderate in prostration and let none of you spread out his arms like a dog. On the authority of Al-Baraa', he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

When you prostrate, place your palms down and raise your elbows. On the authority of Maymunah, the wife of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, she said:

"When the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, prostrated, he would lower his hands - meaning he would lean forward until the width of his armpits could be seen from behind him - and when he sat, he would rest his head on his left thigh."

Ninth: The scholars differed regarding someone who places his forehead in prostration without his nose, or his nose without his forehead. Malik said: He prostrates on his forehead and nose. Al-Thawri and Ahmad said the same, and it is the opinion of Al-Nakha'i. Ahmad said: Prostration on one of them without the other is not sufficient. Abu Khaithama and Ibn Abi Shaybah said the same. Ishaq said: If he prostrates on one of them without the other, his prayer is invalid. Al-Awza'i and Sa'id ibn 'Abd Al-'Aziz said: It was narrated from Ibn 'Abbas, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, 'Ikrimah, and 'Abd Al-Rahman ibn Abi Layla, all of whom were commanded to prostrate on the nose. A group said: It is sufficient to prostrate on his forehead without his nose. This is the opinion of 'Ata', Tawus, 'Ikrimah, Ibn Sirin, and Al-Hasan Al-Basri. Al-Shafi'i, Abu Thawr, Ya'qub, and Muhammad said the same. Ibn Al-Mundhir said: Someone said: If he places his forehead but does not place his nose, or places his nose but does not place his forehead, then he has done wrong and his prayer is complete. This is the opinion of Al-Nu'man. Ibn al-Mundhir said: I do not know anyone who preceded him in this statement or followed him in it.

I said: The correct view in prostration is to place the forehead and nose, based on the hadith of Abu Humayd, which was mentioned earlier. Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'I was commanded to prostrate on seven bones: the forehead - and he pointed to his nose - the hands, the knees, and the tips of the feet, and not to tuck up the clothes or hair.'" All of this is an explanation of the general meaning of the prayer, so it is necessary to say it. And God knows best. It was narrated on the authority of Malik that it is sufficient for him to prostrate on his forehead and not his nose, as was said by 'Ata' and Al-Shafi'i. The preferred view in our view is the first, and it is not sufficient according to Malik if he does not prostrate on his forehead.

Tenth: It is disliked to prostrate on the turban's turban, but if it is one or two turban-like pieces, such as clothes that cover the knees and feet, then there is no problem. It is better to prostrate directly on the ground or what one prostrates on. If there is something that bothers him, he should remove it before entering into prayer. If he does not do that, then he should wipe it once. Muslim narrated on the authority of Mu'aqib that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said about a man who smoothes the ground where he prostrates:

If you are going to do it, then do it once. It was narrated on the authority of Anas bin Malik who said:

We used to pray with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in intense heat. If one of us could not place his hand on the ground, he would spread out his garment and prostrate on it.

Eleventh: When God the Almighty said: Bow down and prostrate, some of our scholars and others said: What is called bowing and prostration is sufficient, as well as standing, and they did not stipulate tranquility in that, so they took the least name in that, and it is as if they did not hear the authentic hadiths about the cancellation of prayer. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: No bowing, prostration, standing after bowing, or sitting between the two prostrations is sufficient until one is upright in bowing, standing, prostrating, and sitting. This is the correct report, and the majority of scholars and people of insight agree with it. It is the report of Ibn Wahb and Abu Mus'ab from Malik. Judge Abu Bakr Ibn al-Arabi said: There have been many reports from Ibn al-Qasim and others about the obligation of separation and the omission of tranquility, and this is a great mistake, because the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) did it, commanded it, and taught it. If Ibn al-Qasim had an excuse that he did not know about it, then what is wrong with you when the knowledge has reached you and the proof has been established against you by it! Al-Nasa'i, Al-Darqutni and Ali bin Abdul Aziz narrated on the authority of Rifa'ah bin Rafi' who said: I was sitting with the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) when a man came to him and entered the mosque and prayed. When he had finished the prayer, he came and greeted the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) and the people. The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: Go back and pray, for you did not pray. The man kept praying and we kept watching his prayer, not knowing what he found fault with in it. When he came and greeted the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) and the people, the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said to him: And you should go back and pray, for you did not pray. Hammam said: We do not know. He ordered him to do that two or three times. The man said to him: I did not fail to do so, and I do not know what you found fault with in my prayer. The Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) said: The prayer of any one of you is not complete until he performs ablution thoroughly as God has commanded him. He washes his face and hands up to the elbows, wipes his head and feet up to the ankles, then glorifies God and praises Him, then recites the opening of the Qur'an and whatever he has been permitted to do and is easy for him. Then he glorifies God and bows, placing his hands on his knees until he is at peace. His joints relax, then he says, God hears whoever praises Him, and he stands up straight until his back is straight and every bone takes its place. Then he says, Allahu Akbar, and prostrates, placing his face - Hammam said: or he may have said: his forehead - on the ground until his joints are at ease, and he relaxes. Then he says, Allahu Akbar, and he sits up straight on his seat and straightens his back. He described the prayer in this way, four rak'ahs until he finished. Then he said, None of you prays in complete prayer until he does that. Similar to it is the hadith of Abu Hurayrah, narrated by Muslim, and it has been mentioned previously.

I said: This is an explanation of the prayer that is summarized in the Book, as taught by the Prophet, peace be upon him, and his conveying it to all of mankind. So whoever does not stop at this explanation and fails to do what the Most Gracious has imposed upon him, and does not comply with what he has conveyed from his Prophet, peace be upon him, is among those who fall under the words of God Almighty: Then there came after them a generation who neglected prayer and pursued desires, as will be explained there, God willing. Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Zaid bin Wahb, who said:

Hudhayfah saw a man who did not complete his bowing or prostration, so he said: You did not pray, and if I died, I would be blamed for not following the nature that God created Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, upon.

Twelfth: The Almighty's saying: With those who bow down implies being with and as a group. For this reason, a group of the people of interpretation of the Qur'an said: The command to pray first did not require the presence of the congregation, so He commanded them with His saying with the presence of the congregation. The scholars differed regarding the presence of the congregation into two opinions. The majority are of the opinion that this is one of the confirmed Sunnahs, and it is obligatory for whoever is habitually absent from it without an excuse to be punished. Some of the people of knowledge have made it obligatory as a communal obligation. Ibn Abd al-Barr said: This is a correct opinion, because they unanimously agreed that it is not permissible to gather to neglect all the mosques from the congregations. So if the congregation is established in the mosque, then the prayer of the individual in his house is permissible, because of the saying of the Prophet, peace be upon him:

Congregational prayer is twenty-seven times better than individual prayer. Narrated by Muslim on the authority of Ibn Umar. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Praying in congregation is twenty-five times better than praying alone. David said that praying in congregation is obligatory for everyone in his own private life, like Friday prayer. He provided evidence for this by saying, peace be upon him:

There is no prayer for a neighbor of a mosque except in the mosque. Narrated by Abu Dawud and authenticated by Abu Muhammad Abd al-Haqq. It is the statement of Ata' ibn Abi Rabah, Ahmad ibn Hanbal, Abu Thawr, and others.

Al-Shafi'i said: I do not permit anyone who is able to attend the congregational prayer to refrain from attending it except for an excuse. This was narrated by Ibn al-Mundhir. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said:

A blind man came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and said: O Messenger of God, I have no guide to lead me to the mosque. So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, asked to be given permission to pray in his house, and he gave him permission. When he turned away, he called him and said: Do you hear the call to prayer? He said: Yes. He said: Then answer it. Abu Dawud said in this hadith:

I do not find any concession for you. He narrated it from the hadith of Ibn Umm Maktum, and he mentioned that he was the questioner. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Whoever hears the call to prayer and is not prevented from coming by an excuse - they said: What excuse? He said: Fear or sickness - the prayer that he prayed will not be accepted from him.'" Abu Muhammad Abdul Haqq said: This was narrated by Mughra' al-Abdi. The correct version is attributed to Ibn Abbas: Whoever hears the call to prayer and does not come, his prayer is not valid. However, Qasim bin Asbagh mentioned it in his book and said: Ismail bin Ishaq al-Qadi narrated to us, he said: Sulayman bin Harb narrated to us, Shu'bah narrated to us, on the authority of Habib bin Abi Thabit, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever hears the call to prayer and does not respond, his prayer is not valid, except for one who has an excuse. This chain of transmission is sufficient for you to know that it is sound. Mughra' al-Abdi was narrated by Abu Ishaq. Ibn Mas'ud said: I saw us and no one stayed away from it except a hypocrite whose hypocrisy was known. And he, peace be upon him, said: Between us and the hypocrites are the witnesses of the night and the morning, which they cannot do. Ibn al-Mundhir said: We have narrated from more than one of the companions of the Prophet, peace be upon him, that they said: Whoever hears the call to prayer and does not respond due to an excuse, then his prayer is not valid, including Ibn Masoud and Abu Musa al-Ash'ari. Abu Dawud narrated from Abu Hurayrah that he said: "The Messenger of God, peace be upon him, said: 'I was thinking of ordering my young men to gather bundles of firewood, then I would come to some people praying in their homes for no reason and burn them down on them.'" This is what was used as evidence by those who made prayer in congregation obligatory, and it is clear that it is obligatory. The majority interpreted it as emphasizing the command to witness prayers in congregation, based on the hadith of Ibn Umar and Abu Hurayrah. They interpreted the statement of the companions and what came in the hadith that he has no prayer as perfection and excellence, and likewise his statement, peace be upon him, to Ibn Umm Maktum: Then make it obligatory as recommended. His saying, peace be upon him: I was about to do it does not indicate a definite obligation, because he was about to do it but did not do it. Rather, it is meant as a threat and warning to the hypocrites who were staying away from the congregation and Friday prayers. This meaning is explained by what Muslim narrated on the authority of Abdullah, who said:

Whoever wants to meet God tomorrow as a Muslim, let him maintain these prayers when they are called for, for God has prescribed for your Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) the ways of guidance, and they are from the ways of guidance. If you were to pray in your homes as this person who stayed behind prays in his home, you would have abandoned the way of your Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him), and if you abandoned the way of your Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him), you would have gone astray. There is no man who purifies himself and does it well, then goes to one of these mosques, but God writes for him for every step he takes a good deed, raises him by it in degree, and removes a bad deed from him by it. I have seen us, and no one stayed behind from them except a hypocrite whose hypocrisy was known. A man would be brought, supported by two men, until he was made to stand in the row. So, may God be pleased with him, explained in his hadith that gathering is from the ways of guidance, and abandoning it is misguidance. For this reason, Judge Abu al-Fadl Iyadh said: There is a difference of opinion about colluding to abandon the outward appearance of the Sunnahs. Should one fight for them or not? The correct view is to fight them, because colluding for them kills them.

I said: According to this, if the Sunnah is established and becomes apparent, the prayer of a person praying alone is permissible and valid. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: A man's prayer in congregation is twenty-odd degrees better than his prayer in his home or his prayer in the marketplace. This is because if one of them performs ablution and does it well, then comes to the mosque, with nothing but prayer as its motive, and he only wants prayer, he does not take a step without being raised a degree for it and a sin being removed from him until he enters the mosque. When he enters the mosque, he is in prayer as long as prayer was holding him back. The angels send blessings upon one of you as long as he remains in the place where he prayed, saying: O God, have mercy on him, O God, forgive him, O God, accept his repentance, as long as he does not cause harm therein and does not relieve himself therein. It was said to Abu Hurairah: What relieves himself? He said: He farts or burps.

Thirteenth: The scholars differed regarding this added virtue for the congregation. Is it only for the congregation wherever it is, or is this virtue only for the congregation that is in the mosque, due to the actions that accompany that which are specific to the mosques as came in the hadith? There are two opinions: The first is more apparent, because the congregation is the description upon which the ruling is based. And God knows best. And whatever is from the frequent steps to the mosques and the intention to come to them and stay in them, that is an additional reward outside of the virtue of the congregation. And God knows best.

Fourteenth: They also differed as to whether a group is superior in number and the imam is superior. Malik said: No. Ibn Habib said: Yes, because the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"A man's prayer with another man is better than his prayer alone, and his prayer with two men is better than his prayer with one man. The more numerous the more beloved to God." Narrated by Abi bin Ka'b and included by Abu Dawud, but its chain of transmission is weak.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, forbidding the Jews from what they were deliberately doing of mixing truth with falsehood, camouflaging it with it, concealing the truth, and making falsehood manifest: And do not mix truth with falsehood or conceal the truth while you know. So He forbade them from both things together, and commanded them to make the truth manifest and declare it. For this reason, Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And do not mix truth with falsehood means do not mix truth with falsehood, and truth with lies. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: And do not mix truth with falsehood - he says, do not mix truth with falsehood, and give sincere advice to the servants of God from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. It is narrated from Saeed bin Jubair and Al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar. Qatada said: And do not mix truth with falsehood and do not mix Judaism and Christianity with Islam, while you know that the religion of God is Islam, and that Judaism and Christianity are innovations that are not from God. It is narrated from Al-Hasan Al-Basri something similar. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair on the authority of Ibn Abbas And conceal the truth while you know meaning do not conceal what you have of knowledge of my Messenger and what he brought while you find it written with you in what you know of the books that are in your hands. It is narrated from Abu Al-Aaliyah something similar. Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Qatada, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: And conceal the truth meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. I said And concealing it is possible that it is in the subjunctive mood, and it is possible that it is in the accusative case, meaning do not combine this and that as It is said: Do not eat fish and drink milk. Al-Zamakhshari said: In the Mushaf of Ibn Masoud, And you conceal the truth, meaning in the state of concealing the truth while you know, is also a state. Its meaning is and you know the truth. It is possible that the meaning is: and you know what great harm there is to people from misleading them from guidance leading them to the Fire until they follow what you show them of falsehood mixed with a type of truth to promote it to them. Explanation is clarification and its opposite is concealment and mixing truth with falsehood. And establish prayer and give zakat and bow with those who bow. Muqatil said: God Almighty's statement to the People of the Book, And establish prayer, He commanded them to pray with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And give zakat, He commanded them to give zakat, meaning to pay it to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And bow with those who bow, He commanded them to bow with those who bow from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. He says: Be with them and from them. Ali bin Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means by zakat obedience to God. And sincerity, and Wakee' said on the authority of Abu Janab on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His statement: And give zakat, he said: What makes zakat obligatory? He said: Two hundred and above, and Mubarak bin Fadal said on the authority of Al-Hasan regarding His statement, the Most High, And give zakat, he said: It is an obligatory duty, and no deeds are of benefit except through it and through prayer, and Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Zur'ah told us, Uthman bin Abi Shaybah told us, Jarir told us, on the authority of Abu Hayyan Al-Taymi, on the authority of Al-Harith Al-'Akli regarding His statement, the Most High, And give zakat, he said: Zakat Al-Fitr, and His statement, the Most High, And bow with those who bow, meaning and be with the believers in their best deeds, and the most specific and perfect of that is prayer, and many scholars have used this verse as evidence for the obligation of congregation, and I will explain that in detail in the book Al-Ahkam Al-Kabir, God willing, and Al-Qurtubi spoke about the issues of congregation and leadership and did well.

We have already discussed the interpretation of establishing prayer and its derivation. What is meant here is the customary prayer, which is the prayer of Muslims, with the definition being for the covenant, and it is permissible for it to be for the genus, and the same applies to zakat. Giving: giving. It is said: I gave it to him. Zakat is taken from zakat, which means growth. Something grew and increased, and a man is pure: meaning more good. Giving a portion of money is called zakat: meaning an increase even though it is a decrease from it, because its blessing increases thereby, or the reward of its owner increases. It is said: Zakat is taken from purification, as it is said: someone was purified: meaning he was cleansed.

It appears that the Shariah has transferred prayer, zakat, pilgrimage, fasting, and the like to legal meanings that are intended by what is mentioned in the Qur'an and Sunnah. The scholars have spoken about this in a manner that there is no room to elaborate on. The scholars have differed about what is meant by zakat here. Some say that it means the obligatory charity due to its association with prayer, and others say that it means zakat al-fitr. It appears that what is meant is something more general than that. In the language, bowing means bending, and everyone who bends is bowing. Labid said:

Tell the report of the past centuries, as if I am kneeling every time I stand up

It was said: Bowing includes kneeling and prostration, and kneeling is also used metaphorically to mean lowering one's status. The poet said:

Do not humiliate the poor, lest one day you kneel and time will raise him up.

The bowing was mentioned specifically here because the Jews did not bow in their prayer. It was also said that it was because it was difficult for the people of ignorance. It was also said that he meant by bowing all the pillars of prayer. The legitimate bowing is that the man bends and stretches his back and neck, opens his fingers and clasps his knees, then he calmly bows, remembering the prescribed remembrance. His statement: 43- with those who bow is guidance to witness the congregation and go out to the mosques. There are authentic hadiths that are well-known in this regard in the two Sahih and others. Some scholars have made attending the congregation obligatory, with a difference of opinion among them as to whether this is an individual or sufficient. The majority of scholars are of the view that it is a confirmed Sunnah that is encouraged and not obligatory. This is the truth, according to the authentic hadiths that are proven from a group of the Companions, that congregational prayer is better than individual prayer by twenty-five or twenty-seven degrees. It is proven in the Sahih from him (peace and blessings of God be upon him) that the one who prays with the imam is better than the one who prays alone and then sleeps. The discussion is long and contains many narrations.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

43. And establish prayer meaning the five daily prayers at their appointed times and limits. And give zakat pay the obligatory zakat on your wealth. Zakat is derived from the zakat of crops if they grow and increase. It was said: from tasaka, meaning purified, and both meanings are present in zakat, because it purifies and increases wealth. And bow with those who bow meaning pray with those who pray: Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions. He mentioned the wording of bowing because it is a pillar of prayer, and because the prayer of the Jews did not include bowing, so it is as if he said: Pray a prayer with bowing. It was said: Repeating it after his saying And establish prayer is for this reason, meaning pray with those who bow in their prayer. The first is absolute for everyone, and this is for a specific group of people. It was said: This is an urging to establish prayer in congregation, as if he said to them: Pray with those who prayed before you in faith.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

43- And establish prayer and give zakat meaning the prayer of the Muslims and their zakat, for the virtue of both of them is prayer and zakat. He ordered them with the branches of Islam after He ordered them with its principles, and in it is evidence that the disbelievers are addressed with it. Zakat comes from the word zaka the zakat of crops, if they grow, then paying it brings blessings in wealth and produces the virtue of generosity in the soul. Or from zakat meaning: purity, for it purifies wealth from filth and the soul from miserliness.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:43

And establish prayer and give zakah and bow with those who bow.

And bow with those who bow, meaning in their group, for the prayer of a group is twenty-seven times better than the prayer of an individual, because of the manifestation of souls in it. And the prayer was expressed by bowing as a precaution against the prayer of the Jews. And it was said that bowing is submission and obedience to what the Lawgiver requires of them. Al-Adbat Al-Sa'di said:

Do not humiliate the weak, lest one day you kneel and time raises him up.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:44

Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves, even though you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Do you enjoin righteousness upon people by believing in Muhammad and forget yourselves you abandon them and do not enjoin them to do so while you recite the Scripture the Torah, which contains the threat for contradicting words and deeds Do you not then understand your evil deeds and return? So the phrase about forgetting is the subject of a rhetorical question.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

The Almighty said: Do you command people to do good? Al-Wahidi and Al-Tha'labi narrated on the authority of Al-Kalbi on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: This verse was revealed about the Jews of Medina. A man among them would say to his in-laws, his relatives, and those Muslims who were related to him by breastfeeding: Stick to the religion that you are upon, and whatever this man commands you to do, for his command is true. And they would command people to do that but they would not do it.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning of righteousness that those addressed by this verse were commanding people to do and forgetting themselves, after they all agreed that every act of obedience to God is called righteousness. It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that:

Ibn Hamid narrated to us, he said: Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Do you not understand? That is, you forbid the people from disbelieving in what you have of prophethood and the covenant of the Torah, and you leave yourselves, that is, while you disbelieve in what is in it of My covenant with you in believing in My Messenger, and you break My covenant, and you deny what you know of My Book.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr bin Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Do you command people to do good? He said: Do you command people to enter the religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and other things that you were commanded to do, such as establishing prayer, and you forget yourselves.

Others said:

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told me, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Do you command people to do good and forget yourselves? He said: They were commanding people to obey God and fear Him, but they disobeyed Him.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people while you forget yourselves? He said: The Children of Israel used to enjoin righteousness upon people, obedience to God, and righteousness, but they disobeyed, so God reproached them.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Al-Hajjaj told us, Ibn Jurayj said: Do you command people to do good? The People of the Book and the hypocrites used to command people to fast and pray, but they neglected to do what they commanded people to do, so God reproached them for that. So whoever commands good should be the most eager of people to do it.

Others said:

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: These are the Jews, if a man came to them and asked them for something that was not right, nor a bribe, nor anything, they would order him to do what is right. So God said to them: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

Ali bin Al-Hassan told me, he said, Muslim Al-Jarmi told us, he said, Mukhallad bin Al-Hussein told us, on the authority of Ayoub Al-Sakhtiyani, on the authority of Abu Qilabah, regarding the statement of God: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? He said, Abu Al-Darda' said: A man does not fully understand until he hates people for the sake of God, then he returns to himself and hates himself even more.

Abu Ja'far said: All of the people who have said in the interpretation of this verse, from what we have mentioned, have similar meanings. Because even though they differed in the description of righteousness that the people were commanding others to do, whom God described with what He described them with, they agreed that they were commanding people to do what would please God in word or deed, and they contradicted what they were commanded to do in that and other things with their actions.

The interpretation that indicates its correctness is the apparent recitation: Do you command people to obey God and leave yourselves to disobey Him? Why don't you command them to do what you command people to do, which is to obey your Lord? He reproached them for that and made ugly what they did.

The meaning of their forgetting themselves in this context is similar to the forgetfulness of which God Almighty said, They forgot God, so He forgot them (al-Tawbah 9:67), meaning: they abandoned the obedience of God, so God forbade them from His reward.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And you recite the Book.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:44

Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves, even though you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

Abu Jaafar said: What he means by his saying: you recite is that you study and read. Like:

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And you recite the Book, he says: You study the Book with that. And by the Book he means the Torah.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Do you not understand?

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: Do you not reason? is: Do you not understand and comprehend the ugliness of what you do in disobeying your Lord, which you command people to do otherwise, and forbid them from doing while you are doing it, and you know that what is upon you from the right of God and His obedience, and following Muhammad and believing in him and in what he brought, is like what is upon the one you command to follow? Like:

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' told us, he said, Uthman ibn Saeed told us, he said, Bishr ibn Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Do you not understand? He said: Do you not understand? He forbids them from this ugly behavior.

Abu Ja'far said: This indicates the correctness of what we said, that the rabbis of the Children of Israel ordered others to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and that they used to say: He was sent to someone other than us, as mentioned before.

It contains nine issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people? This is a question that means rebuke, and what is meant by the people of interpretation is the scholars of the Jews. Ibn Abbas said: The Jews of Medina would say to their in-laws, relatives, and foster Muslims: Stick to what you are doing and what this man is ordering you to do - meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace - for his command is true. So they would order the people to do that but not do it. And from Ibn Abbas also: The rabbis would order their imitators and followers to follow the Torah, and they would contradict it in their denial of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Ibn Jurayj said: The rabbis would urge people to obey God, but they themselves would commit sins. A group said: They would urge people to give charity and be stingy. The meaning is close. Some of the scholars of allusions said: The meaning is: Do you demand from people the true meanings while you contradict their apparent forms?!

The second: In the severity of the torment of one of these descriptions, Hammad bin Salamah narrated on the authority of Ali bin Zaid on the authority of Anas who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: On the night of my ascension, I passed by people whose lips were being cut with scissors of fire. I said, 'O Gabriel, who are these?' He said, 'These are the preachers from the people of this world who command people to do good and forget themselves, and they recite the Book. Do they not understand?'" Abu Umamah narrated that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"Those who enjoin righteousness upon people and forget themselves will be dragged through the fire of Hell with their reeds. It will be said to them, 'Who are you?' They will say, 'We were the ones who enjoined good upon people and forgot ourselves.'"

I said: Even though this hadith contains milk, because in its chain of transmission is Al-Khasib bin Jahdar, whom Imam Ahmad considered weak, as did Ibn Ma'in. He narrated it on the authority of Abu Ghalib on the authority of Abu Umamah Sadi bin Ajlan Al-Bahili, and Abu Ghalib is - according to what Yahya bin Ma'in narrated - Hazur Al-Qurashi, the client of Khalid bin Abdullah bin Asid. It was also said: The client of Bahila. It was also said: The client of Abd Al-Rahman Al-Hadrami. He used to travel to Ash-Sham for his trade. Yahya bin Ma'in said: He is reliable in hadith. Muslim narrated it in his Sahih with the same meaning on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say:

"A man will be brought on the Day of Resurrection and thrown into the Fire, and his stomach lining will spill out, and he will go round with it as a donkey goes round with a millstone. The people of the Fire will gather around him and say, 'O so-and-so, what is the matter with you? Did you not enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong?' He will say, 'Yes, I used to enjoin what is right but not do it, and forbid what is wrong but do it.'"

Qasab with a damma on the qaf: meaning, and its plural is aqsab. Al-aqtāb: the intestines, its singular is qatab. The meaning of fatandalaq: it comes out quickly. We narrated fatanfaqa.

I said: The authentic hadith and the wording of the verse indicate that the punishment of one who is knowledgeable about what is right and what is wrong and the obligation to perform the duties of each of them is more severe than one who does not know them. This is because he is like one who takes the sacred things of God Almighty lightly and belittles His rulings. He is one who does not benefit from his knowledge. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The most severely punished person on the Day of Resurrection will be a scholar to whom God did not benefit from his knowledge. Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunan.

Third: Know, may God Almighty guide you, that the rebuke in the verse is due to abandoning righteous deeds, not due to commanding righteousness. For this reason, God Almighty condemned in His Book a people who commanded righteous deeds but did not do them. He rebuked them with a rebuke that will be recited throughout time until the Day of Resurrection. He said: Do you command righteousness among the people? And Mansour Al-Faqih said it well:

Some people order us to do what we do not do.

Crazy, even if they don't kill us

Abu Al-Atahiya said:

You described piety as if you were pious and the scent of sins shone from your clothes.

Abu Al-Aswad Al-Du'ali said:

Do not forbid a behavior and then do the same. Shame on you if you do it.

Start with yourself and stop it from its error. If it stops, then you are wise.

There, if you preach, people will accept it, follow your words, and teach you well.

Abu Amr bin Matar said: I attended the gathering of Abu Uthman al-Hiri the ascetic. He came out and sat in the place he used to sit in to remind people. He remained silent for a long time. Then a man known as Abu al-Abbas called out to him: Do you think you should say something in your silence? So he began to say:

And a non-pious person orders people to be pious, a doctor treats while the doctor is sick

He said: Then the voices rose in crying and noise.

Fourth: Ibrahim Al-Nakha'i said: I hate stories for three verses: The Almighty's saying: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people? The verse: Why do you say what you do not do? And His saying: And I do not want to go against you in that which I forbid you from. And Salim bin Amr said:

How ugly is the asceticism of a preacher who makes people ascetic but does not himself ascetic

If he was sincere in his asceticism, his house would have become a mosque in the morning and evening.

If he rejects the world, why does he ask people for help and support?

And sustenance is divided among those you see, whether white or black will get it.

Al-Hasan said to Mutraf ibn Abdullah: Advise your companions. He said: I am afraid to say what I do not do. He said: May God have mercy on you! Who among us does what he says! The devil wishes that he could achieve this, so that no one would enjoin what is right or forbid what is wrong. Malik said on the authority of Rabia ibn Abi Abd al-Rahman: I heard Saeed ibn Jubayr say: If a person did not enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong until there was nothing wrong with him, he would not enjoin what is right or forbid what is wrong. Malik said: He spoke the truth. Who is there who has nothing wrong with him?!

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: By righteousness. Righteousness here means obedience and righteous deeds. Righteousness means truthfulness. Righteousness means the fox's offspring. Righteousness means the sheep market, and from this is their saying: He does not know the cat from the wilderness, meaning he does not know the call of the sheep from its market. It is a common denominator, and the poet said:

No, my Lord, if you are not alive, people will curse you and make you explode.

He meant by his saying people obey you: that is, they obey you. It is said that righteousness is the heart in his saying:

I am in a position of righteousness from Him and below Him, and I make what I have below Him and His commands

Al-Birr with a damma on the ba is well-known, and with a fatha on it means reverence and veneration, and from this comes the word birr and birr a righteous child, meaning he venerates and honors his parents.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: And you forget yourselves meaning you abandon. Forgetting with a kasra on the nun can mean abandonment, which is what is meant here, and in the Almighty's saying: They forgot God, so He forgot them, and His saying: So when they forgot that by which they had been reminded, and His saying: And do not forget the favor between you. It is the opposite of remembrance and preservation, and from it the hadith:

Adam forgot, so his descendants forgot. And it will come. It is said: A forgetful man with the opening of the letter noon is someone who forgets a lot about something. And I forgot something, but do not say forgetfulness with the movement, because forgetfulness is the dual of the forgetfulness of the race. And souls: the plural of soul, the plural of paucity. And the soul: the spirit, it is said: his soul left, Abu Kharash said:

Salem escaped with his life in his mouth, and nothing escaped except the eyelid of a sword and a loincloth.

That is, with the scabbard of a sword and a loincloth. And the evidence that the soul is the spirit is the Almighty's saying: God takes the souls at the time of their death, meaning the spirits, according to the saying of a group of the people of interpretation, as will come. And this is clear in the saying of Bilal to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the hadith of Ibn Shihab.

He who took your soul, O Messenger of God, took my soul. And his saying, peace be upon him, in the hadith of Zaid bin Aslam:

God took our souls, and if He had willed, He could have returned them to us at a time other than this. Both were narrated by Malik, and this is the most appropriate thing to say. The soul is also blood, it is said: his soul flowed, the poet said:

Our souls flow on the edge of the clouds, and not on

Surat al-Baqarah 2:44

Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves, even though you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

anything else.

Ibrahim Al-Nakha'i said: What does not have a flowing soul does not make the water impure if it dies in it. The soul is also the body. The poet said:

I was informed that the Banu Suhaim entered their homes into the valley of Al-Mundhir.

Pericardium also: blood:

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: And you recite the Book is a great rebuke to those who understand. You recite means you read. The Book: the Torah. And whoever does what they do is like them. The root of recitation is following, and that is why it is used in reading, because some words follow others in their letters until they come in order. It is said: I recited it if you followed it, and I recited the Qur'an recitation. And I recite the man recitation if you let him down. Recitation and recitation with a damma on the ta': the remainder. It is said: I recited to me from my right recitation and recitation, meaning I remained. And I kept: I preserved. And I recite my right if you followed it until I fulfilled it. Abu Zaid said: The man recite if he was in his last breath.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: Do you not use reason? That is, will you not prevent yourselves from falling into this state that is detrimental to you? Reason means prevention, and from this comes the camel's tether, because it prevents movement. And reason means blood money, because it prevents the guardian of the murdered person from killing the perpetrator. And from this comes the restriction of the stomach and tongue. And from this comes the word for the chaste person: Mu'aqil. And reason means overflowing with ignorance. And reason is a red garment that Arab women wear to cover their howdahs with. Alqamah said:

A mind and a number that birds almost snatch, as if it were filled with blood from the insides

Madmum with a silent dhal: red, which is what is meant here. Madmum: full of fat from camels and others. It is said: they are two types of cloaks. Ibn Faris said: The wise among the clothes is what has a long pattern, and what has a round pattern is the number. Al-Zajaj said: The wise person is the one who does what God has obligated upon him, and whoever does not do it is ignorant.

Ninth: The people of truth agree that the mind is an existing being that is neither eternal nor non-existent, because if it were non-existent, then some entities would not be characterized by it and not others. And if its existence is proven, then it is impossible to say that it is eternal, since the evidence has been established that there is no eternal being except God Almighty, as will be explained in this surah and others, God Almighty willing.

Then the philosophers came to the view that the intellect is ancient, then some of them came to the view that it is a subtle essence in the body, its rays emanating from it like a lamp in a house, by which it separates between the realities of information. Some of them said: It is a simple essence, that is, not compound. Then they differed about its location, so a group of them said: Its location is the brain, because the brain is the location of the senses. Another group said: Its location is the heart, because the heart is the source of life and the substance of the senses. This view about the intellect being a substance is corrupt, in that substances are similar, so if a substance were an intellect, then every substance would be an intellect. It was said: The intellect is the one that perceives things as they are from the realities of meanings. This view, although it is closer than the one before it, is far from the truth in that perception is one of the attributes of the living, and the intellect is an accident from which that is impossible, just as it is impossible for it to be pleasurable and desired. Sheikh Abu al-Hasan al-Ash'ari, Professor Abu Ishaq al-Isfarayini and other scholars said: The mind is knowledge, as evidenced by the fact that it is not said: I understood and I did not know, or I knew and I did not understand. Judge Abu Bakr said: The mind is necessary sciences due to the necessity of obligations, the permissibility of permissibles and the impossibility of impossibles. This is the choice of Abu al-Ma'ali in al-Irshad, and he chose in al-Burhan that it is a quality by which the attainment of knowledge is possible. He objected to the doctrine of the judge and provided evidence for the corruption of his doctrine. He narrated in al-Burhan from al-Muhasibi that he said: The mind is an instinct. Professor Abu Bakr narrated from al-Shafi'i and Abu Abdullah ibn Mujahid that they said: The mind is the instrument of discrimination. It was narrated from Abu al-Abbas al-Qalanisi that he said: The mind is the power of discrimination. It was narrated from al-Muhasibi that he said: The mind is lights and insights. Then he arranged these statements and interpreted them and said: It is better that this transmission from al-Shafi'i or Ibn Mujahid is not correct, because the instrument is only used in the established instrument and its use in accidents is a metaphor. Likewise, the statement of the one who said: It is power, for nothing can be understood from power except ability. Al-Qalansi made what he made general, expanding the expressions, and so did Al-Muhasibi. The mind is not an image nor a light, but lights and insights are gained from it. And in this surah, an explanation of its benefit will come in the verse of monotheism, God willing.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: How is it appropriate for you, O people of the Book, when you command people to do good, which is the sum of goodness, to forget yourselves and not do what you command people to do, while you recite the Book and know what is in it for those who fall short in God's commands? Do you not understand what you are doing to yourselves, so that you may wake up from your slumber and see from your blindness? This is as Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah regarding the words of God the Almighty: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves? He said: The Children of Israel enjoined upon people to obey God and to fear Him and to do righteousness, and they disobeyed, so God the Almighty reproached them. Al-Suddi said the same. Ibn Jurayj said: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people? The People of the Book and the hypocrites enjoined upon people to fast and pray and neglected to do what they enjoined upon people, so God reproached them for that. So whoever enjoins good, let him be the most hasty of people in it. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Sa'id ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And you forget yourselves means you abandon yourselves "while you recite the Scripture. Do you not understand?" meaning you forbid people from disbelieving in what you have of prophethood and the covenant of the Torah and you abandon yourselves, meaning while you disbelieve in what is in it of My covenant. To you in the belief of my messenger and you break my covenant and deny what you know of my book, and Al-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: In this verse he says: Do you command people to enter the religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and other than what you were commanded to do of establishing prayer and you forget yourselves, and Abu Ja'far bin Jarir said: Ali bin Al-Hasan told me, Muslim Al-Jarmi told us, Mukhallad bin Al-Hussein told us on the authority of Ayoub Al-Sakhtiyani. On the authority of Abu Qilabah regarding the statement of God the Almighty: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves, while you recite the Scripture? Abu al-Darda' may God be pleased with him said: A man does not fully understand until he hates people for the sake of God, then he returns to himself and becomes even more hateful towards himself. Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said regarding this verse: These Jews, when a man comes to them and asks them about something in which there is no right or bribery, they enjoin what is right, so God the Almighty said: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves, while you recite the Scripture? Do you not understand? The purpose is that God the Almighty condemned them for this action, and alerted them to their mistake towards themselves, since they were enjoining good but not doing it. The intention is not to condemn them for enjoining righteousness while abandoning it, for enjoining what is right is well-known and is obligatory upon the scholar, but what is obligatory and more appropriate for the scholar is to do it with those who command them to do it and not to shirk from them, as Shu'aib (peace be upon him) said: "And I do not intend to go against you in that which I forbid you. I only desire reform as much as I am able. And my success is not except with God. Upon Him I rely, and to Him I turn." Both enjoining what is right and doing it are obligatory and neither is dropped by abandoning the other, according to the most correct of the two opinions of the scholars of the early and later generations. Some of them said that the one who commits sins should not forbid others from doing so, and this is weak. Even weaker than that is their adherence to this verse, for they have no proof in it. The correct view is that the scholar enjoins what is right even if he does not do it, and forbids what is wrong even if he commits it. Malik said on the authority of Rabi'ah: I heard Sa'id ibn Jubayr say: If a person did not enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong until there was nothing wrong with him, then no one would enjoin what is right or forbid what is wrong. Malik said: And who is the one who has nothing wrong with him? I said But in this case he is blameworthy for abandoning obedience and committing sin because of his knowledge of it and his opposition with insight, for the one who knows is not like the one who does not know, and for this reason the hadiths came in warning against that, as Imam Abu al-Qasim al-Tabarani said in his great dictionary: Ahmad ibn al-Mu'allah al-Dimashqi and al-Hasan ibn Ali al-Umari told us, they said: Hisham ibn Ammar told us, Ali ibn Sulayman al-Kalbi told us, al-A'mash told us, on the authority of Abu Tamimah al-Hujaymi, on the authority of Jundub ibn Abdullah, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The example of the scholar who teaches people good but does not act upon it is like the example of a lamp that gives light to people and burns itself. This is a strange hadith from this aspect. Another hadith Imam Ahmad bin Hanbal said in his Musnad: Waki' narrated to us, Hammad bin Salamah narrated to us, on the authority of Ali bin Zaid, who is Ibn Jud'an, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "On the Night of Ascension, I passed by a people whose lips were being cut with scissors of fire. He said: I said: Who are these? They said: The orators of your nation from the people of this world, who used to command people to do good and forget themselves while they recite the Book. Do they not understand?" And Abd bin Hamid narrated it in his Musnad and his Tafsir on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Musa on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah on his authority. And Ibn Mardawayh narrated it in his Tafsir from the hadith of Yunus bin Muhammad Al-Mu'addib and Al-Hajjaj bin Munhal, both of them on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah on his authority. And Yazid bin Harun narrated it likewise on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah on his authority. Then Ibn Mardawayh said: Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Ibrahim narrated to us, Musa bin Harun narrated to us, Ishaq bin Ibrahim Al-Tastari narrated to us in Balkh, Makki bin Ibrahim narrated to us, Umar bin Qais narrated to us on the authority of Ali bin Zaid on the authority of Thamamah on the authority of Anas, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: God's Messenger (may God's peace and blessings be upon him) said: "On the Night Journey, I passed by people whose lips and tongues were being cut with scissors of fire. I said: Who are these, O Gabriel? He said: These are the preachers of your nation who command people to do good and forget themselves." It was narrated by Ibn Hibban in his Sahih, and by Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Mardawayh as well, on the authority of Hisham al-Dastawai, on the authority of al-Mughira, meaning Ibn Habib, the brother-in-law of Malik ibn Dinar, on the authority of Malik ibn Dinar, on the authority of Thamamah, on the authority of Anas ibn Malik, who said: When the Messenger of God (may God's peace and blessings be upon him) ascended, he passed by people whose lips were being cut. He said: O Gabriel, who are these? He said: These are the preachers of your nation who command people to do good and forget themselves. Do they not understand? Another hadith - Imam Ahmad said: Ya'la ibn Ubayd narrated to us: Al-A'mash narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, who said: It was said to Usamah, while I was riding behind him: Why don't you speak to Uthman? He said: You see that I do not speak to him. Should I not hear you? I speak to him in private without initiating a matter that I do not like to be the first to initiate. By God, I will not say to a man that you are the best of people even if he is my leader after I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: They said: What did you hear him say? He said: I heard him say: "A man will be brought on the Day of Resurrection and thrown into the Fire, and his intestines will spill out of him, and he will circle around in the Fire as a donkey circles around its millstone. The people of the Fire will circle around him and say: O so-and-so, what happened to you? Did you not enjoin us to do good and forbid us from evil? He will say: I enjoined you to do good but did not do it, and forbade you from evil but did it." Narrated by al-Bukhari and Muslim from the hadith of Sulayman ibn Mihran al-A'mash, with a similar wording. Ahmad said: Sayyar bin Hatim told us, Jaafar bin Sulayman told us, on the authority of Thabit, on the authority of Anas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God will forgive the illiterate on the Day of Resurrection in a way that He will not forgive the scholars. It has been reported in some of the narrations that the ignorant will be forgiven seventy times, until the scholar is forgiven once. He who knows is not like he who does not know. God the Almighty said: "Say: Are those who know equal to those who do not know? Only those with understanding will remember." Ibn Asakir narrated in the biography of Al-Walid bin Uqbah on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: "Some of the people of Paradise will look at some of the people of Hell and say: Why did you enter Hell? By God, we did not enter Paradise except because of what we learned from you. They will say: We used to say and not do." Ibn Jarir Al-Tabari narrated it on the authority of Ahmad bin Yahya Al-Khabbaz Al-Ramli on the authority of Zuhair bin Ibad Al-Rawasi on the authority of Abu Bakr Al-Zuhri Abdullah bin Hakim on the authority of Ismail bin Abi Khalid on the authority of Al-Sha'bi on the authority of Al-Walid bin Uqbah, and he mentioned it. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: A man came to him and said: O Ibn Abbas, I want to enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. He said: Have I conveyed that? He said: I hope so. He said: If you do not fear that you will be disgraced by three verses from the Book of God, then do so. He said: What are they? He said: The words of God the Almighty: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves? Have you mastered this? He said: No. He said: What about the second letter? He said: The Almighty's saying: Why do you say what you do not do? Great is hatred in the sight of God that you say what you do not do. Have you mastered this? He said: No. He said: What about the third letter? He said: The saying of the righteous servant Shu'aib, peace be upon him: "And I do not intend to go against you in that from which I forbid you. I only desire reform." Have you mastered this verse? He said: No. He said: Then start with yourself. It was narrated by Ibn Mardawayh in his Tafsir. At-Tabarani said: Abdun ibn Ahmad told us, Zaid ibn al-Harith told us, Abdullah ibn Kharash told us, on the authority of al-Awwam ibn Hawshab, on the authority of al-Musayyab ibn Rafi', on the authority of Ibn Umar, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever calls people to a saying or action and does not act upon it himself will remain in the shade of God's wrath until he refrains or does what he said or called upon to do. Its chain of transmission is weak. Ibrahim al-Nakha'i said: The most hated stories are three verses: God the Almighty's statement: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves? And His statement: O you who have believed, why do you say what you do not do? Great is hatred in the sight of God that you say what you do not do. And His statement, reporting on the authority of Shu'aib: "And I do not intend to differ with you in that from which I have forbidden you. I only desire reform as much as I am able. And my success is not but from God. Upon Him I rely, and to Him I turn."

The hamza in his saying: 44- Do you command people to righteousness? is for questioning with rebuke to those being addressed, and what is meant is not rebuke them for the command to righteousness itself, for it is a good action that is recommended, but rather because of abandoning the act of righteousness that is understood from his saying: And you forget yourselves with purification by purifying the soul and standing in the position of calling people to the truth, deceiving people and confusing them as Abu al-Atahiya said:

You described piety as if you were pious and the scent of sins was shining from your clothes.

Al-Birr: obedience and good deeds, Al-Birr: the abundance of goodness and kindness, Al-Birr: honesty, Al-Birr: the fox's offspring, Al-Birr: the sheep market, and from its application to obedience, the poet said:

They are not worthy of being without you, people bless you and blow you up

That is, they obey you and disobey you. Forgetting with a kasra on the letter noon here means abandonment: that is, you abandon yourselves. Originally, it was the opposite of remembrance and preservation: that is, the disappearance of the image that was preserved from the perceptive and the memorizing. The soul: the spirit, and from it is the saying of God Almighty: God takes the souls at the time of their death, meaning the spirits. Abu Kharash said:

Salim escaped with his life in his mouth

The soul is also the blood. Hence their saying: His soul flowed. The poet said:

Our souls flow on the edges of swords, and not on anything but the spears.

The soul is the body, and from it:

I was informed that the Banu Suhaim brought their houses into the possession of the same Mundhir.

And the commands of the body. And His saying: And you recite the Book is a circumstantial clause that includes the greatest rebuke, the most severe rebuke, and the most eloquent rebuke. That is, how do you abandon the righteousness that you command people to do while you are from the origin of knowledge and know the ugliness of this action and the severity of the threat for it, as you see in the Book that you recite and the verses that you read from the Torah. And recitation: reading, and this is what is meant here and its origin is following. It is said that you recited it: if you followed it, and the reader is called a follower and the reading is recitation because he follows some words with others in the order that they are in. And His saying: Do you not understand? is an interrogative to denounce them and rebuke them, and it is more severe than the first and more severe, and the most severe thing that God rebuked in this place is those who command good and do not do it from the scholars who are not working with knowledge, so He denounced them first for commanding people to be righteous while forgetting themselves in that matter that they carried out in the assemblies and called out in the councils, deluding people that they are conveying from God what they have undertaken of His proofs, and explaining to His servants what He has commanded them to explain, and conveying to His creation what He has entrusted to them and entrusted to them, while they are the people who neglect that and are the most distant from its benefit and the most indifferent to it, then He linked this sentence to another sentence that He made clarifying their condition and revealing their faults and tearing off their veils, which is that they did this heinous act and terrible characteristic with their knowledge and awareness of the Book that was revealed to them and their adherence to its recitation, and they are in that as Al-Ma'arri said:

The reader of the Torah carries the Torah to gain benefits, not to love recitations.

Then he moved with them from one rebuke to another, and from one reproach to another, saying: If you were not among the people of knowledge, and the bearers of the proof, and the people of studying the Books of God, then the mere fact that you are among those who have reason would have been a barrier between you and that, defending you from it and deterring you from it. So how did you neglect what reason requires after you neglected what knowledge requires? Reason in the original language: prevention, and from it is the camel's tether, because it prevents it from moving, and from it is reason in blood money because it prevents the guardian of the murdered from killing the perpetrator. Reason is the opposite of ignorance, and it is correct to interpret what is in the verse here with what is the original meaning of reason according to the people of language: that is, do you not prevent yourselves from falling into this deplorable state? And it is correct for the meaning of the verse to be: Do you not look with your minds that God has given you since you did not benefit from the knowledge that you have?

44. Do you enjoin righteousness upon people? That is, obedience? This was revealed about the Jewish scholars. A man among them would say to his relative and Muslim ally if he asked him about the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Stick to his religion, for his command is true and his word is truthful. It was said: This is addressed to their rabbis when they ordered their followers to adhere to the Torah, then they disobeyed and changed the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And you forget yourselves, that is, you abandon yourselves and do not follow him. And you recite the Book, you read the Torah, in which is his description and attributes. Do you not understand? that it is true so that you follow it?

The mind is taken from the halter of the animal, which is what is used to tie the camel's knee and prevent it from straying. Likewise, the mind prevents its owner from disbelief and denial.

Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Salihi told us, Abu Amr Bakr bin Muhammad Al-Muzni told us, Abu Bakr Muhammad bin Abdullah, the grandson of Al-Abbas bin Hamza told us, Al-Hussein bin Al-Fadl Al-Bajali told us, Affan told us, Hammad bin Salamah told us, Ali bin Zaid, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "On the night of my ascension, I saw men whose lips were being cut with scissors of fire. I said: Who are these, O Gabriel? He said: These are preachers from your nation who command people to righteousness and forget themselves, and they recite the Book."

Abdul Wahid Al-Malhi told us, I told Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Nuaimi, I told Muhammad bin Yusuf, I told Muhammad bin Ismail, I told Ali bin Abdullah, I told Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, who said: Usamah, may God be pleased with him, said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: "A man will be brought on the Day of Resurrection and thrown into the Fire, and his intestines will spill out (i.e. his intestines will be cut off) and he will go round as a donkey goes round its millstone. The people of the Fire will gather around him and say: 'O so-and-so, what is the matter with you? Did you not command us to do good and forbid us from evil?' He will say: 'I used to command you to do good but I did not do it, and forbid you from evil but I did it.'" Shu'bah said on the authority of Al-A'mash: 'He will be ground in it as a donkey grinds in its millstone.'"

Tafsir al-Baidawi

44-Do you command people to do good? A statement with rebuke and astonishment. And goodness is: expanding in goodness, from goodness which is the wide space that includes all goodness, and therefore three things were said: goodness in worshipping God Almighty, goodness in taking care of relatives, and goodness in dealing with strangers.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:44

Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves, even though you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

And you forget yourselves and you abandon them from righteousness as if they were forgotten. On the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, it was revealed about the rabbis of Medina. They were secretly ordering those they advised to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, but they did not follow him.

It was said: They used to command charity but did not give charity themselves. And you recite the Book is a rebuke like His saying: And you know meaning you recite the Torah, and in it is a threat for stubbornness, abandoning righteousness, and contradicting words with deeds.

Do you not understand? The ugliness of your actions prevents you from them, or do you not have a mind that prevents you from what you know is bad? The mind is originally confinement, and human perception is called this because it restrains it from what is ugly and makes it understand what is good, then the power by which the soul perceives this perception. The verse is blaming the one who preaches to others but does not preach to himself for the evil of his actions and the wickedness of his soul, and that his action is the action of the ignorant of the Sharia or the fool who is devoid of mind, for the commonality between them is rejected by his nature, and what is meant by it is urging the preacher to purify the soul and turn to it with perfection so that it may stand and establish others, not preventing the immoral from preaching, for failure to do one of the two commanded matters does not necessitate failure to do the other.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:45

And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

45 - And seek help seek help in your affairs through patience restraining oneself from what one dislikes and prayer He singled it out for mention to magnify its importance. In the hadith, "Whenever a matter troubled him, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would hasten to pray." It was said that the address was to the Jews when greed and the love of leadership prevented them from believing, so they were commanded to be patient, which is fasting, because it suppresses desire, and to pray because it brings about humility and eliminates arrogance and it meaning prayer is great heavy except for the humbly those who are at peace with obedience.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying: And seek help through patience, is seek help to fulfill the covenant you made with Me in your book of obeying Me and following My command, and abandoning what you desire of leadership and love of the world, for what you hate of submitting to My command and following My Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, with patience and prayer.

It has been said that the meaning of patience in this context is fasting, and fasting is one of the meanings of patience. The interpretation of those who interpreted this according to us is that God, the Most High, commanded them to be patient with everything that their souls hated of obeying God and abandoning His disobedience. The root of patience is to prevent the soul from what it loves and to restrain it from its desires. Therefore, the one who is patient with a calamity is called: patient, because he restrains himself from worrying. The month of Ramadan is called the month of patience, because of the patience of those who fast during the day from eating and drinking, and His patience with them from that, His restraining them and restraining them from it, just as a man who is about to kill is patient, so you restrain him until you kill him. Therefore, it is said: So-and-so killed so-and-so patiently, meaning: He restrained him until he killed him. So the one who was killed is patient and the killer is patient.

As for prayer, we have mentioned its meaning previously.

If someone were to say to us: We have learned the meaning of the command to seek help through patience in fulfilling one's covenant and maintaining obedience, so what is the meaning of the command to seek help through prayer in obeying God and abandoning His disobedience, and to be stripped of leadership and abandon the world?

It was said: Prayer includes the recitation of the Book of God, whose verses call for rejecting the world and abandoning its pleasures, entertaining the souls from its adornments and deception, reminding them of the Hereafter and what God has prepared for its people. Considering it helps those who obey God to strive hard in it, as was narrated from our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that if something troubled him, he would resort to prayer.

Ismail bin Musa Al-Fazari told me that, he said, Al-Hussein bin Rataq Al-Hamadani told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ubaid Abi Qudamah, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Al-Yaman, on the authority of Hudhayfah, who said: "Whenever something worried the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would resort to prayer."

Sulayman ibn Abd al-Jabbar told me, he said, Khalaf ibn al-Walid al-Azdi told us, he said, Yahya ibn Zakariya told us, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abd God al-Du'ali, he said, Abd al-Aziz, the brother of Hudhayfah, said, Hudhayfah said: "Whenever something troubled the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would pray."

It was also narrated from him, may God bless him and grant him peace, "that he saw Abu Hurairah lying on his stomach and said to him: 'Ash-Kanb Dard.' He said: 'Yes.' He said: 'Get up and pray, for in prayer there is healing.'"

So God, the Most High, commanded those of the rabbis of the Children of Israel whom He described, to turn their refuge in fulfilling the covenant of God that they had made to seeking help through patience and prayer, just as He commanded His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, to do so, saying to him: So be patient, O Muhammad, "over what they say and exalt [God] with praise of your Lord before the rising of the sun and before its setting, and during the hours of the night and at the ends of the day that you may be satisfied" (Ta-Ha 20:130). So God, the Most High, commanded him in his calamities to seek refuge in patience and prayer. And:

Muhammad ibn al-Ala' and Ya'qub ibn Ibrahim narrated: Ibn Ulayyah narrated: Uaynah ibn Abd al-Rahman narrated on the authority of his father: Ibn Abbas was informed of the death of his brother Qatham while he was on a journey, so he sought refuge in God from the evil of what happened. Then he moved off the road, knelt down, and prayed two rak'ahs in which he sat for a long time. Then he stood up and walked to his mount, saying: And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

As for Abu Al-Aaliyah, he used to say:

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And seek help through patience and prayer, he said, he says: Seek help through patience and prayer to please God, and know that they are from obeying God.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:45

And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

Ibn Jurayj said:

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, he said, Ibn Jurayj said regarding his statement: And seek help through patience and prayer, he said: They are two aids to the mercy of God.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And seek help through patience and prayer the verse, he said: The polytheists said: By God, O Muhammad, you are calling us to a great matter. He said: To prayer and faith in God, may His praise be glorified.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His statement, And it, is the prayer. So the ha' and the alif in And it refer back to the prayer. Some of them said: His statement, And it means: The answer of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And the wording of the answer was not mentioned for that, so the ha' and the alif are made a metaphor for it. And it is not permissible to leave the apparent meaning of the statement for an inner meaning that does not indicate its correctness.

What he means by his saying: big is very heavy, such as:

Yahya bin Abi Talib told me, he said, Ibn Yazid told us, he said, Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, regarding his statement: And indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive, he said: Indeed, it is heavy.

What he means by his saying: except for the humble, is except for those who submit to His obedience, fear His wrath, and believe in His promise and threat. Like:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Abdullah bin Saleh told us, he said, Muawiyah bin Saleh told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Except for the humble, meaning: those who believe in what God has revealed.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam Al-Asqalani told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Except for the humble, he said: He means the fearful.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Mujahid: Except for the humble, he said: the truly faithful.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, the same.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Khushu' is fear and awe of God, and he recited the words of God: Humbled by humiliation (al-Shura 42:45), he said: The fear that descended upon them humiliated them, and they were humbled by it.

The origin of humility is: modesty, submission and submissiveness. From this comes the poet's saying:

When the report of Al-Zubayr came, the city walls and the mountains were humbled.

Meaning: The mountains were humbled and submissive due to the enormity of the calamity of his loss.

The meaning of the verse is: And seek help, O rabbis from the People of the Book, by confining yourselves to the obedience of God, and restraining yourselves from the disobedience of God, and by establishing the prayer that prevents indecency and wrongdoing, brings one closer to the pleasure of God, and is great to establish except for those who are humble before God, submissive to His obedience, and humble out of fear of Him.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

It has eight issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: Seek help through patience and prayer. Patience means confinement in the language. And someone was killed patiently, meaning he held back and confined until he perished. And I kept my soul patient about something: I kept it back.

And the patient woman that he forbade. In the hadith, she is the one who is imprisoned for death, and she is the one who is crouched down. And Antara said:

So I was patient, knowing that I would be free to anchor if the coward's soul came out.

Second: God Almighty commanded patience in obedience and in avoiding disobedience in His Book, saying: And be patient. It is said: So-and-so is patient in avoiding sins, so he was patient in obedience. This is the most correct of what has been said. An-Nahhas said: It is not said of someone who is patient in disobedience: patient. Rather, it is said: patient in such-and-such. So if you say: patient in general, then it is as we mentioned. God Almighty said: Only those who are patient will be given their reward in full, without account.

Third: The Almighty's saying: And the prayer He singled out the prayer for mention among all other acts of worship, highlighting its mention. Whenever something troubled him, peace be upon him, he would resort to prayer. Among the narrations is that Abdullah ibn Abbas was told that his brother Qatham - or it was said his daughter - had died while he was on a journey, so he sought refuge in God and said: A shame that God has covered, a burden that God has spared, and a reward that God has provided. Then he moved away from the road and prayed, then he returned to his mount while reciting: Seek help through patience and prayer. So prayer according to this interpretation is the prescribed one. Some people said: It is supplication according to its linguistic usage, so the verse according to this interpretation is similar to the Almighty's saying: When you meet a company, then stand firm and remember God, because standing firm is patience, and remembrance is supplication. A third statement: Mujahid said: Patience in this verse means fasting, and from this Ramadan was called the month of patience. So fasting and prayer came according to this statement in the verse in a proportional manner in that fasting prevents desires and makes one renounce the world, and prayer prevents indecency and wrongdoing, and brings about humility and the Qur'an is recited in it, which reminds one of the Hereafter. And God knows best.

Fourth: Patience in the face of harm and acts of obedience is a form of jihad against the self and suppressing its desires and preventing them from becoming excessive. It is one of the morals of the prophets and righteous people. Yahya ibn al-Yaman said: Patience is not wishing for a state other than what God has provided for you, and being content with what God has decreed for your worldly and afterlife affairs. Al-Sha'bi said: Ali may God be pleased with him said: Patience is to faith what the head is to the body. Al-Tabari said: Ali may God be pleased with him spoke the truth, because faith is knowledge in the heart, acknowledgment with the tongue, and action with the limbs. So whoever is not patient in acting with his limbs does not deserve faith in general. So patience in acting according to the laws is like the head to the body of a person, who cannot be complete without it.

Fifth: God the Almighty described the reward for deeds and set an end and limit for them, saying: Whoever brings a good deed will have ten times the like thereof. And He made the reward for charity in the way of God higher than this, saying: The parable of those who spend their wealth in the way of God is that of a grain of corn (al-Baqarah 2:17). And He made the reward of the patient without account, and praised the people, saying: Only the patient will be given their reward in full, without account. And He said: And whoever is patient and forgives - indeed, that is of the matters [worthy] of determination. It has been said that what is meant by the patient in His statement: Only the patient will be given their reward in full is the fasting ones, based on the statement of God the Almighty in the Sahih Sunnah on the authority of the Prophet, may God's prayers and peace be upon him:

Fasting is for Me and I will reward for it. He did not mention a specific reward, just as he did not mention it for patience. And God knows best.

Sixth: Among the virtues of patience is that God Almighty described Himself with it, as in the hadith of Abu Musa on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said:

"No one or nothing is more patient with the harm he hears than God, the Most High. They claim to have a son for Him, and yet He heals them and provides for them." Narrated by Al-Bukhari. Our scholars said: Describing God with patience means forbearance, and the meaning of describing Him with forbearance is delaying punishment for those who deserve it. Describing Him with patience was not mentioned in the Qur'an, but rather it was mentioned in the hadith of Abu Musa. The Sunnis interpreted it as the interpretation of forbearance, as stated by Ibn Furak and others. It was mentioned in His names: Al-Sabūr, to exaggerate His forbearance towards those who disobey Him.

Seventh: The Almighty's statement: And indeed, it is a great thing. The interpreters differed regarding the return of the pronoun in His statement: And indeed, it is. It was said: It refers to prayer alone in particular, because it is a great thing for the souls that fasting is not. Patience here is fasting. So prayer is the imprisonment of the souls, and fasting is only preventing desires, so it is not preventing one desire or two desires as preventing all desires. The fasting person is only preventing the desire for women, food, and drink, then he indulges in all desires from speaking, walking, looking, and other things from meeting people, so he is consoled by those things from what he was prevented. The one who prays refrains from all of that, so all of his limbs are restricted by prayer from all desires. If that is the case, then prayer is more difficult for the soul and its struggle is more intense, so that is why He said: And indeed, it is a great thing. It was said: On them both, but he referred to the most common, which is prayer, like his saying: And those who hoard gold and silver and do not spend it in the way of God, and his saying: And when they see a transaction or amusement, they disperse to it. So he referred the writing to silver, because it is the most common and widespread, and to the transaction, because it is the best and most important. And it was said: Since patience was included in prayer, he repeated it, as he said: And God and His Messenger are more deserving that they should please Him, and he did not say: please them, because the pleasure of the Messenger is included in the pleasure of God, the Most High, the Almighty. And from this is the saying of the poet:

The crack of youth and black hair, if not treated, is madness.

He did not say disobeying, but rather referred it to the youth because poetry is included in it. It was said that the metaphor was referred to each of them, but it was omitted for brevity. God Almighty said: And We made the son of Mary and his mother a sign, and He did not say two signs. And from this is the saying of the poet:

Whoever spends the night in the city, then I and Qiyar are strangers there.

Another said:

Every worry has its time, and neither morning nor evening brings success.

He meant: For two strangers, with whom there is no success. It was said: On the worship that is implied in the meaning of mentioning patience and prayer. It was said: On the source, which is the assistance required by his saying: Seek assistance. It was said: On the answer of Muhammad, peace be upon him, because patience and prayer are among what he called for. It was said: On the Kaaba, because the command to pray is only towards it. It is great means heavy and difficult, the predicate of if. It is permissible in other than the Qur'an: And indeed it is great. "Except for the humbly submissive" because it is easy for them. The masters of meanings said: Except for those who were supported in eternity with the characteristics of selection and guidance.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:45

And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: Upon the humble. The humble is the plural of khashi', which means the humble. Humility is a state in the soul from which tranquility and humility appear in the limbs. Qatada said: Humility is in the heart, and it is fear and lowering the gaze in prayer. Al-Zajaj said: The humble is the one who sees the effect of humiliation and humility upon himself, like the humility of a house after it has been strengthened. This is the origin. Al-Nabigha said:

Ashes like kohl for my eyes, O my father, and my back is like the trunk of the basin, hollow and humble.

A place that is humiliated: one cannot find its way to it. The voices became humiliated, meaning they became still. Kharashi's chest became humiliated if he spit out sticky saliva, and he lowered his gaze if he lowered it. Al-Khasha'ah is a soft piece of land. In the hadith:

It was humble on the water, then it spread out later. A humble town: dusty, with no houses. Sufyan al-Thawri said: I asked al-A'mash about humility, so he said: O Thawri, you want to be an imam for the people, but you do not know humility! I asked Ibrahim al-Nakha'i about humility, and he said: Al-A'mash! You want to be an imam for the people and you do not know humility! Humility is not eating rough food, wearing rough clothing, and lowering your head! Rather, humility is to see the noble and the lowly as equal in truth, and to be humble before God in every duty imposed upon you. Omar ibn al-Khattab looked at a young man who had lowered his head and said: Oh man! Raise your head, for humility does not exceed what is in the heart. Ali ibn Abi Talib said: Humility is in the heart, and that your hands are soft towards the Muslim man, and that you do not turn around in your prayer. This meaning will come in detail in the words of God the Almighty: Indeed, the believers have succeeded * Who are humble in their prayers. So whoever shows humility to people beyond what is in his heart, then he is only showing hypocrisy upon hypocrisy. Sahl ibn Abdullah said: He is not humble until every hair on his body is humble, because God the Almighty says: The skins of those who fear their Lord shiver from it.

I said: This is the praiseworthy humility, because when fear settles in the heart, it necessitates outward humility, and its owner cannot control it. You see him lowering his head, polite and humble. The predecessors used to strive to conceal what appeared of that. As for the reprehensible, it is forcing it, weeping, and lowering the head as the ignorant do in order to be seen with the eye of righteousness and reverence. This is a trick from the devil and a suggestion from the human soul. Al-Hasan narrated that a man sighed in the presence of Umar ibn al-Khattab as if he was sighing, so Umar nudged him, or said, Punch him. When Umar may God be pleased with him spoke, he was listened to, when he walked, he hurried, and when he struck, he hurt. He was a true ascetic and truly humble. Ibn Abi Nujayh narrated on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The humble are the true believers.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says, commanding His servants, in what they hope for of the good of this world and the Hereafter, to seek help through patience and prayer, as Muqatil ibn Hayyan said in his interpretation of this verse: Seek help in seeking the Hereafter through patience in performing the obligatory duties and prayer. As for patience, it was said that it means fasting, as Mujahid stated. Al-Qurtubi and others said: This is why Ramadan is called the month of patience, as stated in the hadith. Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abu Ishaq on the authority of Jari ibn Kulayb on the authority of a man from Banu Sulaym on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Fasting is half of patience. It was also said that what is meant by patience is refraining from sins, and this is why He linked it to performing acts of worship, the highest of which is performing prayer. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Ubaydullah ibn Hamza ibn Ismail told us, Ishaq ibn Sulayman told us on the authority of Abu Sinan on the authority of Umar ibn al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, who said: Patience is of two types: patience in the face of calamity is good, and even better than that is patience in abstaining from the prohibitions of God. He said: It was narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri something similar to what Umar said. Ibn Al-Mubarak said on the authority of Ibn Lah'ah on the authority of Malik bin Dinar on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, who said: Patience is the servant's acknowledgment to God of what he has been afflicted with and his seeking reward from God and hoping for His reward. A man may become impatient while he is enduring, but nothing is seen from him except patience. Abu Al-Aaliyah said about the words of God the Most High: And seek help through patience and prayer, he said: To please God, and know that it is from obeying God. As for His words: and prayer, then prayer is one of the greatest aids to steadfastness in a matter, as God the Most High said: "Recite what has been revealed to you of the Book and establish prayer. Indeed, prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing, and the remembrance of God is greater." Imam Ahmad said: Khalaf bin Al-Waleed told us, Yahya bin Zakariya bin Abi Zaida told us, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abdullah Al-Du'ali, who said: Abdul Aziz, the brother of Hudhayfah, said: Hudhayfah, meaning Ibn Al-Yaman, may God be pleased with him, said: Whenever something worried the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would pray. Abu Dawud narrated it on the authority of Muhammad bin Isa, on the authority of Yahya bin Zakariya, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, as will come. Ibn Jarir narrated it from the hadith of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ubayd bin Abi Qudamah, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Al-Yaman, on the authority of Hudhayfah, who said: Whenever something worried the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would resort to prayer. Some of them narrated it on the authority of Abdul Aziz, the nephew of Hudhayfah, and it is said: the brother of Hudhayfah, without a chain of transmission on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Muhammad bin Nasr al-Marwazi said in the Book of Prayer: Sahl bin Uthman al-Askari told us, Yahya bin Zakariya bin Abi Zaida told us, Ikrimah bin Ammar said, Muhammad bin Abdullah al-Du'ali said, Abdul Aziz said: Hudhayfah said: I returned to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, on the night of the Confederates, and he was wrapped in a cloak praying, and whenever something troubled him, he would pray. Abdullah bin Muadh told us, my father told us, Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Abu Ishaq, he heard Haritha bin Mudrib hear Ali, may God be pleased with him, say: I saw us on the night of Badr, and there was none among us but sleeping except the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, praying and supplicating until morning. Ibn Jarir said: It was narrated on his authority, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he passed by Abu Hurayrah while he was lying on his stomach, and he said to him: Ash-Kum Dard, meaning: Does your stomach hurt? He said: Yes. He said: Get up and pray, for prayer is a cure. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn al-Fadl and Yaqub ibn Ibrahim told us: Ibn Ulayyah told us: Uyaynah ibn Abd al-Rahman told us on the authority of his father: Ibn Abbas was informed of the death of his brother Qasim while he was on a journey, so he sought refuge in God and then moved away from the road and knelt down, and prayed two rak'ahs in which he prolonged his sitting, then he stood up and walked to his mount while saying: And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humble submissive. Sunayd said on the authority of Hajjaj on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: And seek help through patience and prayer. He said that they are two aids to the mercy of God. The pronoun in his statement: Indeed, it is a great sin refers to the prayer. This was stated by Al-Mujahid and chosen by Ibn Jarir. It is possible that it refers to what the words indicate, which is the commandment to do so, like the statement of God the Almighty in the story of Qarun: "And those who were given knowledge said, 'Woe to you! The reward of God is better for those who believe and do righteous deeds. And none receives it except the patient.'" And God the Almighty said: "And not equal are the good deed and the bad. Repel [evil] by that which is better, and thereupon he between whom and you there was enmity will become as though he was a devoted friend. And none receives it except those who are patient. And none receives it except one of great fortune." That is, none receives this commandment except those who are patient, and none receives it, that is, is given it and inspired with it, except one of great fortune. In any case, God the Almighty's statement: And indeed, it is a great sin. Any hardship is heavy except for the humble. Ibn Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means those who believe in what God has revealed. Mujahid said: The true believers. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Except for the humble and fearful. Muqatil bin Hayyan said: Except for the humble, meaning the modest. Ad-Dahhak said: And indeed it is great. He said: It is heavy except for those who submit to His obedience, fear His wrath, and believe in His promise and threat. This is similar to what came in the hadith: You have asked about a great matter, and indeed it is easy for whom God makes it easy. Ibn Jarir said: The meaning of the verse: And seek help, O scholars from among the People of the Book, by confining yourselves to the obedience of God and by establishing prayer, which prevents immorality and wrongdoing and brings one closer to the pleasure of God. Its establishment is great except for the humble, meaning the humble, submissive to His obedience, and humbled in fear of Him. This is what he said. And it appears that even though the verse was addressed in the context of warning the Children of Israel, they were not intended specifically, but rather it is general for them and others, and God knows best.

And the Almighty's saying: Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him This is part of the previous statement, meaning that prayer or advice is burdensome except for the humble who believe that they will meet their Lord, meaning they know that they will be gathered to Him on the Day of Resurrection and presented to Him, and that they will return to Him, meaning that their affairs are subject to His will and He will judge them as He wills with His justice. For this reason, when they are certain of the afterlife and the reward, it becomes easy for them to do acts of obedience and abandon evil. As for His saying They believe that they will meet their Lord, Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: The Arabs call certainty assumption and doubt assumption, similar to their calling darkness as a curtain and light as a curtain and the one who seeks help as a cryer and the one who seeks help as a cryer, and other similar names by which a thing and its opposite are called, as Duraid ibn al-Summah said:

I told them they thought that two thousand armed men were their leaders in the Persian armor.

He meant by that: Be certain that two thousand armed men will come to you. Umair bin Tariq said:

If my people cross and I remain among you and make my suspicions unseen and false

Meaning, and He makes certainty a hidden secret. He said: The evidence from the poetry and speech of the Arabs that suspicion in the meaning of certainty is more than can be counted, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for those who are granted understanding. Among them is the saying of God Almighty: And the criminals will see the Fire and will think that they will fall into it. Then Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, Abu Asim told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Mujahid: Every suspicion in the Qur'an is certainty, meaning I thought and they thought.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:45

And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq told us, Abu Dawud al-Jabari told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Every suspicion in the Qur'an is knowledge. This is a sound chain of transmission. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas, on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, regarding the words of God Almighty: Those who think that they will meet their Lord, he said: Suspicion here is certainty. Ibn Abi Hatim said: And it was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, al-Suddi, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Qatadah something similar to what Abu al-'Aliyah said. Sunayd said on the authority of Hajjaj on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: Those who think that they will meet their Lord. They knew that they would meet their Lord, as He said: Indeed, I thought that I would meet My reckoning. He said: I knew, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said the same I said. In the Sahih: That God the Almighty says to the servant on the Day of al-Qiyamah 75: Did I not marry you? Did I not honor you? Did I not subject the horses and camels to you and let you rule and sit on the throne? He says: Yes. God the Almighty says: Did you think that you would meet Me? He says: No. God the Almighty says: Today I will forget you as you forgot Me. And it will come in detail when God the Almighty says: They forgot God, so He forgot them, God willing.

Fath al-Qadir

And his saying: 45- And seek help through patience. Patience in the language means: confinement. I confined myself to something. And from this is the saying of Antarah:

So I was patient, knowing that I would be free to anchor if the coward's soul came out.

What is meant here is: Seek help by restraining yourselves from desires and limiting them to acts of obedience to repel the disliked things that befall you. It has been said that patience here is specific to patience with the obligations of prayer. This speaker provided evidence for this with the words of God the Almighty: And enjoin prayer upon your family and be constant therein. This specific patience in this verse does not negate what the definite article that comes before patience indicates in terms of comprehensiveness, just as what is meant by prayer here is everything that is included in the prescribed prayer, without any distinction between obligatory and voluntary. The commentators differed regarding the pronoun in His words: And indeed, it is a great burden. It was said that it refers to prayer, even though what precedes is patience and prayer. It may be permissible to refer the pronoun to one of the two matters mentioned above. As God the Almighty said: And God and His Messenger are more deserving that they should please Him, if one of them is included under the other in some way. From this is the saying of the poet:

The crack of youth and black hair, if not treated, is madness.

He did not say what was not compensated for, but rather made the pronoun refer to youth, because black hair is included in it. It was said that it refers to prayer without considering the inclusion of patience under it, because patience is upon it, as was said previously. It was said that the pronoun refers to prayer, even though patience is intended with it, but since it is more emphatic and more general in obligation and more rewarding, the pronoun was used as a metaphor for it. From this is His statement: And those who hoard gold and silver and do not spend it in the way of God, thus it was said. It was said that the pronoun refers to the hoarded things, and similar to that is His statement, the Most High: And when they see a trade or amusement, they disperse to it, so the pronoun here was referred to silver and trade because silver is more general in benefit and more present, and trade is what causes the dispersal. The difference between this view and the first view is that patience there was made included under prayer, and here it was not included even though it was intended. It was said that what is meant by patience and prayer, but the pronoun was referred to one of them because it is sufficient for the other. From this is His statement, the Most High: And We made the son of Mary and his mother... Ayah, meaning the son of Mary is a sign and his mother is a sign. And from this the poet said:

And whoever spends the evening in the city, then I and Qiyar are strangers there

Another said:

Every worry has its own scope, and neither morning nor evening brings success.

It was said: The pronoun refers back to them after interpreting them as worship. It was also said: It refers back to the source understood from His statement: And seek help, which is seeking help. It was also said: It refers back to all the matters that the Children of Israel were forbidden from. The major sin is that which is too great and too great for its bearer because of the difficulty he finds when bearing and carrying it out. From this, It is too great for the polytheists what you call them to do. And the humble is the humble, and humility is modesty. He said in Al-Kashshaf: humility and submission. From this, the humble sand is called khasha'a. As for submission, it is softness and obedience. From this, she submitted with her saying: if she softened it. Al-Zajjaj said: The humble is the one who sees the effect of humiliation and humility on him like the humility of a house after the strongest, and a humble place: one that cannot be guided to, and the voices were humbled: meaning they became still, and he lowered his gaze: if he lowered it, and khasha'a is a soft piece of land. Sufyan al-Thawri said: I asked al-A'mash about humility, and he said: O Thawri, you want to be an imam for the people, but you do not know humility? Humility is not eating rough food, wearing rough clothing, and lowering your head. Rather, humility is to see the noble and the lowly as equal in the truth, and to be humble before God in every obligation imposed upon you. End quote. And what is better than what some of the investigators said in explaining its nature: It is a state in the soul from which tranquility and humility appear in the limbs. And God Almighty excepted the humble, although they are, in consideration of using their limbs in prayer, and their adherence to the functions of humility, which is the spirit of prayer, and their tiring themselves greatly in the causes that necessitate presence and submission, because when they know of the multiplication of the reward and the availability of the recompense and the attainment of what God has promised of great reward, those troubles become easy for them, and the difficulties they commit become easy for them, rather that becomes a pure pleasure for them and a pure comfort for them, and for a reason what a people encounter from the heat of swords when the ranks clash, and the wish was for them the taste of death until one of them said:

I do not care when I kill a Muslim, on which side I die in the cause of God

And the assumption here, according to the majority, means certainty, and from it is the saying of God Almighty: Indeed, I thought that I would meet my account and His saying: So they thought that they would meet it and from it is the saying of Duraid bin Al-Summaḥ:

I told them they thought that two thousand armed men were wearing black Persian clothing.

It was said: The assumption in the verse is in its proper form, and it is implied in the speech about their sins, so it is as if they expected to meet Him as sinners, as mentioned by Al-Mahdawi and Al-Mawardi, and the first is better. The origin of assumption is doubt with inclination to one of the two sides, and it may occur in the place of certainty in places, including this verse. The meaning of His statement: They will meet their Lord is they will meet His reward, and the reciprocal here is not in its proper form, and I do not see any harm in carrying it on its original meaning without estimating the added. In this and what follows it from His statement: And that to Him they will return is an acknowledgment of the resurrection and what God has promised on the Last Day. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding His statement: And bow down he said: Pray. Ibn Abi Hatim also narrated on the authority of Muqatil regarding His statement: And bow down with those who bow down he said: He ordered them to bow down with the nation of Muhammad, meaning: Be with them and among them. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding the words of God the Almighty: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people? the verse, he said: Those are the People of the Book who used to enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget themselves, and they used to recite the Book and not benefit from what is in it. Al-Tha'labi and Al-Wahidi narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: This verse was revealed regarding the Jews of Medina. A man among them would say to his in-laws, relatives, and those who were breastfed by the Muslims: Stick to the religion that you are upon and to what this man enjoins upon you, meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, for his command is true. They used to enjoin that upon the people but did not do it. Ibn Jarir narrated on his authority regarding his words: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people? he said: By entering the religion of Muhammad. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority regarding the verse, he said: You forbid people from disbelieving in what you have of prophethood and the covenant from the Torah, while you disbelieve in what is in it of My covenant with you regarding the confirmation of My messengers? Abdul Razzaq, Ibn Abi Shaybah, Ibn Jarir and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Darda' regarding the verse, saying: A man will not fully understand until he hates people for the sake of God, then he turns to himself and hates himself even more. Ahmad, Ibn Abi Shaybah, Abd Ibn Hamid, Al-Bazzar, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, Abu Nu'aym in Al-Hilyah, Ibn Hibban, Ibn Mardawayh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Anas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "On the night of my ascension, I saw men whose lips were being cut with scissors of fire. Every time they were cut, they would come back. I said to Gabriel, 'Who are these?' He said, 'These are preachers from your nation who used to command people to do good but forget themselves. They used to recite the Book. Will they not reason?'" It was proven in the two Sahihis from the hadith of Usamah ibn Zayd, who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: "A man will be brought on the Day of Resurrection and thrown into the Fire, and his intestines will spill out of him, and he will circle around it as a donkey circles around its millstone. The people of the Fire will circle around him and say: 'O so-and-so, what has happened to you? Did you not command us to do good and forbid us from evil?' He will say: 'I used to command you to do good but I did not do it, and I used to forbid you from evil but I did it.'" There are hadiths on this topic, some of which are narrated on the authority of Jabir, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, according to al-Khatib and Ibn al-Najjar, and on the authority of al-Walid ibn Uqbah, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, according to al-Tabarani and al-Khatib, with a weak chain of transmission, and on the authority of Abdullah ibn Ahmad in Zawa'id al-Zuhd, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. All of them mean that a group of the people of Paradise will look at a group of the people of the Fire and say to them: 'Why did you enter the Fire when we entered Paradise only because of your teaching?' They will say: 'We used to command you but we did not do it.'" At-Tabarani, Al-Khatib in Al-Iqtida' and Al-Asbahani in Al-Targheeb narrated with a good chain of transmission on the authority of Jundub bin Abdullah who said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: The example of a scholar who teaches people good but does not act upon it is like a lamp that gives light to people but burns itself. Ibn Abi Shaybah and Abdullah bin Ahmad in Zawa'id Az-Zuhd narrated something similar on his authority. At-Tabarani and Al-Khatib narrated something similar on the authority of Abu Barzah in Al-Iqtida'. Ibn Qani' in his Mu'jam and Al-Khatib in Al-Iqtida' narrated something similar on the authority of Sulayk in Al-Iqtida'. Ibn Sa'd, Ibn Abi Shaybah and Ahmad in Az-Zuhd narrated on the authority of Abu Ad-Darda' who said: Woe to the one who does not know once, and if God had willed, He would have taught him, and woe to the one who knows but does not act seven times. Ahmad narrated something similar in Az-Zuhd on the authority of Abdullah bin Mas'ud. How good is what Ibn Mardawayh, Al-Bayhaqi in Shu'ab Al-Iman and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that a man came to him and said: O Ibn Abbas, I want to enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong. He said: Have I conveyed that? He said: I hope so. He said: If you do not fear that you will be disgraced by three letters in the Book of God, then do so. He said: What are they? He said: The words of God the Almighty: Do you enjoin righteousness upon people and forget yourselves? Have you understood this verse? He said: No. He said: The second letter? He said: The words of God the Almighty: Why do you say what you do not do? Great is hatred in the sight of God that you say what you do not do. Have you understood this verse? He said: No. He said: The third letter? He said: The words of the righteous servant Shu'ayb: I do not wish to go against you in that which I forbid you. Have you understood this verse? He said: No. He said: Then start with yourself. Abd ibn Hamid narrated from Qatadah regarding the words of God the Almighty: And seek help through patience and prayer. He said: They are two forms of assistance from God, so seek help through them. Ibn Abi al-Dunya narrated in his book Patience, Abu al-Shaykh in Thawaab, and al-Daylami in Musnad al-Firdaws from Ali who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Patience is of three types: patience in calamity, patience in obedience, and patience in avoiding disobedience." There are many hadiths praising patience, encouraging it and rewarding the patient, but we did not mention them here because they are not specific to this verse, but rather they are mentioned for patience in general. Al-Suyuti mentioned a good portion of them in Al-Durr Al-Manthur here, and there are many good praises and encouragements for it in the Noble Book. Ahmad, Abu Dawud and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Hudhayfah who said: "Whenever the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) was worried about something, he would resort to prayer." Ahmad, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Hibban narrated on the authority of Suhaib on the authority of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) who said: They meaning the prophets would resort to prayer when they were worried. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya and Ibn Asakir narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Darda' with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) similar to the hadeeth of Hudhayfah. Sa'eed bin Mansour, Ibn Al-Mundhir, Al-Hakim and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shu'ab Al-Iman on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he was on a journey when he heard the report of the death of his son, so he dismounted and prayed two rak'ahs, then he said: We have done as God commanded us. He said: And seek help through patience and prayer. Saeed bin Mansour, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir, and Al-Bayhaqi narrated something similar to this from him when he was informed of the death of his brother Qatham. Something similar to this was narrated from a group of the Companions and Followers. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ad-Dahhak regarding his statement: And indeed, it is difficult, he said: It is heavy. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: Except for the humbly submissive, he said: The truly faithful. Ibn Jarir narrated from Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: Except for the humbly submissive, he said: The truly faithful.

And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive.

45. And seek help against the types of calamity that await you. It was also said: to seek the Hereafter. With patience and prayer. He meant restraining oneself from sins. It was also said: He meant patience in performing the obligatory duties. Mujahid said: Patience is fasting, and from it the month of Ramadan was named the month of patience, because fasting makes one lose interest in this world, and prayer makes one desire the Hereafter. It was also said: The waw means upon, meaning: And seek help with patience in prayer, as God the Most High said: And enjoin prayer upon your family and be constant therein. 132-Taha And indeed it and did not say and both of them referring the metaphor to each one of them, meaning that each characteristic of it. As He said: Both gardens produced their fruit. 33-Al-Kahf, meaning each one of them. It was said: Its meaning is And seek help through patience and that it is a great sin, and through prayer and that it is a great sin. So one of them was deleted for the sake of brevity. Al-Mu'arraj said: The metaphor was returned to prayer because it is more general, like the Almighty's saying: And those who hoard gold and silver and do not spend it 34-At-Tawbah. He returned the metaphor to silver because it is more general. And it was said: The metaphor was returned to prayer because patience is included in it. Just as God Almighty said: And God and His Messenger are more deserving that they should please Him 62-At-Tawbah. He did not say that they should please them because the pleasure of the Messenger is included in the pleasure of God Almighty.

Al-Husayn ibn al-Fadl said: The metaphor refers to seeking help for a great thing meaning: for a heavy thing except for the humble meaning: the believers. Al-Hasan said: the fearful, and it was said: the obedient, and Muqatil ibn Hayyan said: the humble, and the origin of humility is stillness. God Almighty said: And the voices will be hushed before the Most Merciful 108-Taha, so the humble is still in obedience to God Almighty.

45- And seek help through patience and prayer is connected to what preceded it, as if when they were ordered to do what was difficult for them because of the cost and abandoning leadership and turning away from money, they were treated with that, and the meaning is seek help with your needs by waiting for success and relief, relying on God, or by fasting, which is patience from the things that break the fast because of what it contains of breaking desire and purifying the soul. And seeking help through prayer and resorting to it, for it combines the types of psychological and physical worship, from purification and covering the private parts and spending money on them, turning to the Kaaba and devoting oneself to worship, showing humility with the limbs, sincerity of intention in the heart, struggling against Satan, communing with the Truth, reading the Qur'an, uttering the two testimonies of faith and restraining oneself from the two best things until you are answered to achieve your goal and mend your misfortunes. It was narrated that when a matter troubled him, he would resort to prayer. It is permissible to mean supplication.

And it: meaning, seeking help from them or prayer and specifying it by referring the pronoun to it, due to its great importance and its gathering of types of patience. Or the whole of what they were commanded to do and forbidden from doing.

Lakbira means heavy and difficult, as in the Almighty's saying: It is difficult for the polytheists what you are inviting them to.

"Except for the humble," meaning the submissive. Humility is humility, and from it comes the word khasha'a for the humble sand. Submission is softness and obedience, and therefore it is said that humility is with the limbs and submission is with the heart.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:46

Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:46

Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Those who believe are certain that they will meet their Lord in the resurrection and that they will return to Him in the Hereafter, so He will reward them.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How did God, may He be glorified and praised, inform us about someone whom He described as being humble and obedient to Him, that he thinks he will meet Him, and thinking is doubt, and the one who doubts meeting God is, in your view, a disbeliever in God?

It was said to him: The Arabs call certainty an assumption, similar to their calling darkness a curtain, light a curtain, the one who helps screams, the one who seeks help screams, and other similar names that they use to name a thing and its opposite. What indicates that certainty is called by this name is the saying of Duraid ibn al-Samma:

I told them they thought that two thousand armed men were their leaders in the Persian armor.

He meant by that: Be certain that two thousand armed men will come to you. And the words of Umayr bin Tariq:

That you invade my people and I stay among you and make my suspicions unseen and unfounded

Meaning: And make certainty from me a hidden reality. The evidence from the poetry and speech of the Arabs that conjecture has the meaning of certainty is more than can be counted, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for those who are granted understanding. And from this is the saying of God, the Most High: And the criminals will see the Fire and they will think that they will fall into it (al-Kahf 18:53). And the commentators have explained it in a similar way to what we have said about this.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: They think that they will meet their Lord, he said: The thought here is certainty.

Muhammad bin Bashir told us: Abu Asim told us: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Every assumption in the Qur'an is certainty. I assumed, and they assumed.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Ishaq told us, he said: Abu Dawud al-Hafri told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Every conjecture in the Qur'an is knowledge.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Those who believe that they will meet their Lord. As for they believe, they are certain.

Al-Qasim told me: Al-Husayn told us: Hajjaj told me: Ibn Jurayj said: Those who are certain that they will meet their Lord, they know that they will meet their Lord. It is like His saying: Indeed, I have thought that I will meet my account (al-Haqqah 69:20). He says: I knew.

Yunus told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: Those who think that they will meet their Lord, he said: Because they did not see Him, so their thought was certain, not a thought in doubt. And he recited: Indeed, I thought that I would meet my account.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They will meet their Lord.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: How is it said that they will meet their Lord, then the meeting ones are attributed to the Lord, Blessed and Exalted be He, and you know that its meaning is: those who think that they will meet their Lord? Since the meaning is thus, it is from the speech of the Arabs to leave the addition and to prove the nun, and the nun is only dropped and added, in nouns built from verbs, if it has the meaning of fa'ala, but if it has the meaning of yaf'ul and fa'il, then its usual practice is to prove the nun and leave the addition.

It was said: There is no dispute among all those who have knowledge of the Arabic languages and dialects, regarding the permissibility of adding a noun built from fa'ala and yaf'ul and dropping the nun, which has the same meaning as yaf'ul and fa'il, I mean in the sense of the future and the state of the verb and what is invalidated. So there is no point in asking the questioner about that: Why was it said? Rather, the Arabic speakers differed about the reason for which it was added and the nun was dropped.

The grammarians of Basra said that the nun was dropped from they will meet their Lord and similar verbs that are in the form of nouns, and they have the meaning of he does and the meaning of what has not been broken, because it is too heavy for them, and it is intended, as the Most High said: Every soul will taste death (Al Imran 3:185/Al Anbiya: 35/Al Ankabut: 57), and as He said: Indeed, We will send the she-camel as a trial for them (Al Qamar: 27), and because He did not send her, and as the poet said:

Are you sending a dinar for our need or a slave of the brother of Aoun bin Mukhraq?

So he added a motive to the dinar, and to the word lama yubay'ath, and he put the slave of the Lord in the accusative case in apposition to the position of the dinar, because it is in the accusative case even though it is in the genitive case, and as the other said:

They guard the privacy of their relatives, and no sperm comes to them from behind them.

By placing the private parts in the accusative and genitive cases. The genitive case is due to the addition, and the accusative case is due to the deletion of the nun due to heaviness, and it is intended. This is the opinion of the grammarians of Basra.

As for the grammarians of Kufa, they said: It is permissible in the word malaqa to add the addition, and it is in the meaning of yalqunu, and to drop the nun from it, because it is in the wording of nouns, so it has the share of nouns in adding to nouns. And the same is the rule for every noun that has a counterpart. They said: And if you prove the nun in something of that and leave the addition, then you do that with it, because it has the meaning of yaful, which did not exist and was not required yet. They said: So the addition in it is for the wording, and leaving the addition is for the meaning. So the interpretation of the verse then is: And seek help in fulfilling My covenant with patience in it and prayer, and indeed, prayer is difficult except for those who fear My punishment, who are humble before My command, who are certain of meeting Me and returning to Me after their death.

God, the Most High, informed us that prayer is a great burden except for those who have this characteristic, because whoever is not certain of the Hereafter, and does not believe in a return, reward, or punishment, then prayer is a burden and a misguidance for him, because he does not hope to attain benefit or ward off harm by performing it. And it is right for whoever has this characteristic that prayer is a great burden for him, and performing it is burdensome for him and costly for him. Rather, it is feared for the believers who believe in meeting God, who hope for His abundant reward through it, and who fear His painful punishment by neglecting it, because they hope by performing it in their Hereafter to attain what God has promised its people through it, and because they fear by neglecting it what He has threatened its neglecter with. So God, the Most High, commanded the rabbis of the Children of Israel, whom He addressed with these verses, to be among those who perform it and hope for its reward, if they are people of certainty that they will return to God, and will meet Him on the Day of Resurrection.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And to Him they will return.

Abu Jaafar said: The ha' and the mim in his statement, and that they, are from the mention of the humble, and the ha' in to Him is from the mention of the Lord Almighty in his statement, meeting their Lord.

The interpretation of the word is that it is indeed difficult except for the humble and certain that they will return to their Lord.

Then there was a difference of opinion regarding the interpretation of the return in His statement: And to Him they will return. Some of them said, as follows:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam told us: Abu Jaafar told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, regarding His statement: And that to Him they will return, he said: They are certain that they will return to Him on the Day of Resurrection. Others said: The meaning of this is that they will return to Him with their death.

The first of the two interpretations of the verse is the one given by Abu Al-Aaliyah. Because God Almighty said in the verse before it: How can you disbelieve in God while you were dead and He gave you life? Then He will cause you to die, then He will bring you to life, then to Him you will be returned. So God Almighty informed that their return to Him after they are resurrected and brought back to life from their death, and that will undoubtedly be on the Day of Resurrection. So the interpretation of His statement: And that to Him they will return is similar.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him.

The Almighty said: Those who think "those" is in the accusative case as an attribute of the humble, and the nominative case is permissible as a definite noun. And the thought here, according to the majority, means certainty, and from that is the Almighty's saying: Indeed, I thought that I would meet my reckoning and His saying: So they thought that they would fall upon it. Duraid bin al-Summah said:

I told them they thought that two thousand armed men were their leaders in the Persian armor.

Abu Duad said

There are many worries that you relieve with a debtor, and many secrets that you reveal with suspicions.

It has been said that the word suspect in the verse could be used in its proper context, and it is implied in the speech about their sins, as they expect to meet Him as sinners. Al-Mahdawi and Al-Mawardi mentioned. Ibn Atiyyah said: This is an arbitrary statement. Al-Farra' claimed that suspect can mean lying, but the Basrans do not know that. The origin and basis of suspect is doubt with an inclination toward one of its believers. It can also mean certainty, as in this verse and others, but it does not mean what has already been perceived by the senses. The Arabs do not say about a visible and present man: I think this is a human being. Rather, you find it used in what has not yet been perceived by the senses, like this verse and poetry, and the Almighty's saying: So they thought that they would meet it. Certainty can also mean suspect, and its explanation was presented at the beginning of the surah. You can also say: I had a bad opinion of him, and I had a bad opinion of him. They include the alif when they use the alif and lam. The meaning of meeting their Lord is the reward of their Lord. It was said: It came on the basis of reciprocity and it is from one, like may God grant him wellness: and that they with the opening of the hamza devoted themselves to the first, and it is permissible and that they with the breaking of it for the sake of severance. To Him meaning to their Lord, and it was said: to His reward. Returning is an acknowledgment of the resurrection, reward, and presentation to the highest king.

Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says, commanding His servants, in what they hope for of the good of this world and the Hereafter, to seek help through patience and prayer, as Muqatil ibn Hayyan said in his interpretation of this verse: Seek help in seeking the Hereafter through patience in performing the obligatory duties and prayer. As for patience, it was said that it means fasting, as Mujahid stated. Al-Qurtubi and others said: This is why Ramadan is called the month of patience, as stated in the hadith. Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abu Ishaq on the authority of Jari ibn Kulayb on the authority of a man from Banu Sulaym on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Fasting is half of patience. It was also said that what is meant by patience is refraining from sins, and this is why He linked it to performing acts of worship, the highest of which is performing prayer. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Ubaydullah ibn Hamza ibn Ismail told us, Ishaq ibn Sulayman told us on the authority of Abu Sinan on the authority of Umar ibn al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, who said: Patience is of two types: patience in the face of calamity is good, and even better than that is patience in abstaining from the prohibitions of God. He said: It was narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri something similar to what Umar said. Ibn Al-Mubarak said on the authority of Ibn Lahi'ah on the authority of Malik bin Dinar on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, who said: Patience is the servant's acknowledgment to God of what he has been afflicted with and his seeking reward from God and hoping for His reward. A man may become impatient while he is enduring, but nothing is seen from him except patience. Abu Al-Aaliyah said about the words of God the Most High: And seek help through patience and prayer, he said: To please God, and know that it is from obeying God. As for His words: and prayer, then prayer is one of the greatest aids to steadfastness in a matter, as God the Most High said: "Recite what has been revealed to you of the Book and establish prayer. Indeed, prayer prohibits immorality and wrongdoing, and the remembrance of God is greater." Imam Ahmad said: Khalaf bin Al-Waleed told us, Yahya bin Zakariya bin Abi Zaida told us, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Abdullah Al-Du'ali, who said: Abdul Aziz, the brother of Hudhayfah, said: Hudhayfah, meaning Ibn Al-Yaman, may God be pleased with him, said: Whenever something worried the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would pray. Abu Dawud narrated it on the authority of Muhammad bin Isa, on the authority of Yahya bin Zakariya, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, as will come. Ibn Jarir narrated it from the hadith of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ikrimah bin Ammar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ubayd bin Abi Qudamah, on the authority of Abdul Aziz bin Al-Yaman, on the authority of Hudhayfah, who said: Whenever something worried the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would resort to prayer. Some of them narrated it on the authority of Abdul Aziz, the nephew of Hudhayfah, and it is said: the brother of Hudhayfah, without a chain of transmission on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Muhammad bin Nasr al-Marwazi said in the Book of Prayer: Sahl bin Uthman al-Askari told us, Yahya bin Zakariya bin Abi Zaida told us, Ikrimah bin Ammar said, Muhammad bin Abdullah al-Du'ali said, Abdul Aziz said: Hudhayfah said: I returned to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, on the night of the Confederates, and he was wrapped in a cloak praying, and whenever something troubled him, he would pray. Abdullah bin Muadh told us, my father told us, Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Abu Ishaq, he heard Haritha bin Mudrib hear Ali, may God be pleased with him, say: I saw us on the night of Badr, and there was none among us but sleeping except the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, praying and supplicating until morning. Ibn Jarir said: It was narrated on his authority, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he passed by Abu Hurayrah while he was lying on his stomach, and he said to him: Ash-Kum Dard, meaning: Does your stomach hurt? He said: Yes. He said: Get up and pray, for prayer is a cure. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn al-Fadl and Yaqub ibn Ibrahim told us: Ibn Ulayyah told us: Uyaynah ibn Abd al-Rahman told us on the authority of his father: Ibn Abbas was informed of the death of his brother Qasim while he was on a journey, so he sought refuge in God and then moved away from the road and knelt down, and prayed two rak'ahs in which he prolonged his sitting, then he stood up and walked to his mount while saying: And seek help through patience and prayer, and indeed, it is difficult except for the humbly submissive. Sunayd said on the authority of Hajjaj on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: And seek help through patience and prayer. He said that they are two aids to the mercy of God. The pronoun in his statement: Indeed, it is a great sin refers to the prayer. This was stated by Al-Mujahid and chosen by Ibn Jarir. It is possible that it refers to what the words indicate, which is the commandment to do so, like the statement of God the Almighty in the story of Qarun: "And those who were given knowledge said, 'Woe to you! The reward of God is better for those who believe and do righteous deeds. And none receives it except the patient.'" And God the Almighty said: "And not equal are the good deed and the bad. Repel [evil] by that which is better, and thereupon he between whom and you there was enmity will become as though he was a devoted friend. And none receives it except those who are patient. And none receives it except one of great fortune." That is, none receives this commandment except those who are patient, and none receives it, that is, is given it and inspired with it, except one of great fortune. In any case, God the Almighty's statement: And indeed, it is a great sin. Any hardship is heavy except for the humble. Ibn Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means those who believe in what God has revealed. Mujahid said: The true believers. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Except for the humble and fearful. Muqatil bin Hayyan said: Except for the humble, meaning the modest. Ad-Dahhak said: And indeed it is great. He said: It is heavy except for those who submit to His obedience, fear His wrath, and believe in His promise and threat. This is similar to what came in the hadith: You have asked about a great matter, and indeed it is easy for whom God makes it easy. Ibn Jarir said: The meaning of the verse: And seek help, O scholars from among the People of the Book, by confining yourselves to the obedience of God and by establishing prayer, which prevents immorality and wrongdoing and brings one closer to the pleasure of God. Its establishment is great except for the humble, meaning the humble, submissive to His obedience, and humbled in fear of Him. This is what he said. And it appears that even though the verse was addressed in the context of warning the Children of Israel, they were not intended specifically, but rather it is general for them and others, and God knows best.

And the Almighty's saying: Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him This is part of the previous statement, meaning that prayer or advice is burdensome except for the humble who believe that they will meet their Lord, meaning they know that they will be gathered to Him on the Day of Resurrection and presented to Him, and that they will return to Him, meaning that their affairs are subject to His will and He will judge them as He wills with His justice. For this reason, when they are certain of the afterlife and the reward, it becomes easy for them to do acts of obedience and abandon evil. As for His saying They believe that they will meet their Lord, Ibn Jarir, may God have mercy on him, said: The Arabs call certainty assumption and doubt assumption, similar to their calling darkness as a curtain and light as a curtain and the one who seeks help as a cryer and the one who seeks help as a cryer, and other similar names by which a thing and its opposite are called, as Duraid ibn al-Summah said:

I told them they thought that two thousand armed men were their leaders in the Persian armor.

He meant by that: Be certain that two thousand armed men will come to you. Umair bin Tariq said:

If my people cross and I remain among you and make my suspicions unseen and false

Meaning, and He makes certainty a hidden secret. He said: The evidence from the poetry and speech of the Arabs that suspicion in the meaning of certainty is more than can be counted, and what we have mentioned is sufficient for those who are granted understanding. Among them is the saying of God Almighty: And the criminals will see the Fire and will think that they will fall into it. Then Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, Abu Asim told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Mujahid: Every suspicion in the Qur'an is certainty, meaning I thought and they thought. Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq told us, Abu Dawud al-Jabari told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Every suspicion in the Qur'an is knowledge. This is a sound chain of transmission. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas, on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, regarding the words of God Almighty: Those who think that they will meet their Lord, he said: Suspicion here is certainty. Ibn Abi Hatim said: And it was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, al-Suddi, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Qatadah something similar to what Abu al-'Aliyah said. Sunayd said on the authority of Hajjaj on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: Those who think that they will meet their Lord. They knew that they would meet their Lord, as He said: Indeed, I thought that I would meet My reckoning. He said: I knew, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said the same I said. In the Sahih: That God the Almighty says to the servant on the Day of al-Qiyamah 75: Did I not marry you? Did I not honor you? Did I not subject the horses and camels to you and let you rule and sit on the throne? He says: Yes. God the Almighty says: Did you think that you would meet Me? He says: No. God the Almighty says: Today I will forget you as you forgot Me. And it will come in detail when God the Almighty says: They forgot God, so He forgot them, God willing.

Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: Every conjecture in the Qur'an is certainty, but this is not complete in the words of God: Indeed, conjecture is of no avail against the truth and His words: Indeed, some conjecture is sin. Perhaps he meant conjecture related to matters of the Hereafter, as Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah who said: Whatever is of conjecture regarding the Hereafter is knowledge. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah regarding His words: 46- And that to Him they will return, he said: They are certain that they will return to Him on the Day of Resurrection.

46. Those who think are certain [that they will be resurrected, that they will be held accountable, and that they will return to God Almighty, meaning: they believe in resurrection, and He made their return after death to the place of assembly a return to Him].

And the opposites of suspicion can be doubt, certainty, and hope, just as hope can be fear, hope, and security, that they will meet and see their Lord in the Hereafter, which is seeing God Almighty. And it was said: What is meant by the meeting is becoming Him, and that to Him they will return, so He will reward them for their deeds.

46- Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him meaning they expect to meet God Almighty and attain what He has, or they are certain that they will be gathered before God and He will reward them, and this is supported by the fact that in the Mushaf of Ibn Mas'ud they know, and it is as if the assumption, since it resembles knowledge in its preponderance, was applied to it to include the meaning of expectation. Aws bin Hajar said:

So I sent him, certain that the shadow was mixed among the evils, and was scatterbrained.

Those who believe that they will meet their Lord and that they will return to Him.

It is not as heavy for them as it is for others, because their souls are satisfied with similar things, expecting in return something for which they will despise its hardships and enjoy its troubles. Hence, the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, The delight of my eyes has been made in prayer.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:47

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and that I preferred you over the worlds.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I bestowed upon you by thanking Me for it through obedience to Me and that I preferred you meaning your fathers over the worlds the worlds of their time [And from Sheikh Mahmoud Al-Rankousi that their preference over the worlds is due to the large number of prophets among them and in the hadith: The scholars of my nation are like the prophets of the Children of Israel meaning in their large number]

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: The interpretation of this verse is similar to its interpretation in the one before it in His statement: Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and fulfill My covenant. And I mentioned it there.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And I have preferred you over the worlds.

Abu Ja'far said: This is also among what the Most High mentioned of His favors and blessings upon them. What He means by His statement, And that I have favored you over the worlds, is that I have favored your ancestors. He attributed His favors upon their fathers and ancestors to them being favors from Him upon them, since the deeds of the fathers are deeds for the sons, and the favors of the fathers are favors for the sons, since the sons are from the fathers. The Most High brought out His statement, And that I have favored you over the worlds, in a general sense, and He meant by it specifically, because the meaning is: And that I have favored you over the scholar among whom you were and in whose time. Like what: Muhammad ibn 'Abd al-'A'la al-San'ani narrated to us, he said, Muhammad ibn Thawr narrated to us, on the authority of Mu'ammār, and al-Hasan ibn Yahya narrated to us, he said, 'Abd al-Razzaq narrated to us, he said, Mu'ammār informed us, on the authority of Qatada, And that I have favored you over the worlds, he said: He favored them over the scholar of that time.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And I have preferred you over the worlds. He said: With what they were given of kingship, messengers, and books, over the scholar of whoever was at that time, for every time has a scholar.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Mujahid said regarding his statement: And I have preferred you over the worlds, he said: Over those who are among them.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: On those who are among them.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, I asked Ibn Zayd about the statement of God: And that I have preferred you over the worlds, he said: The scholars of that time. And he recited the statement of God: And We have certainly chosen them with knowledge over the worlds (al-Dukhan 44:32). He said: This is for those who obeyed Him and followed His command, and among them were the monkeys, and they were the most hated of His creation to Him. And He said to this nation: You are the best nation produced for mankind (AAI Imran 3:110). He said: This is for those who obeyed God, followed His command, and avoided what He has forbidden.

Abu Ja'far said: The evidence for the correctness of what we have said, that the interpretation of that is in the particular way we have described, is what Ya'qub ibn Ibrahim told me, he said: Ibn 'Ulayyah told us, and al-Hasan ibn Yahya told us, he said: 'Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Mu'ammār told us all, on the authority of Bahz ibn Hakim, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, he said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say: Behold, you have fulfilled seventy nations. Ya'qub said in his hadith: You are the last of them, and al-Hasan said: You are the best of them and the most honored of them to God.

This report from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, informed us that the Children of Israel were not preferred over the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and that the meaning of his saying: And We preferred them over the worlds (al-Jathiyah 45:16), and his saying: And I have preferred you over the worlds, is based on what we have explained of its interpretation.

We have explained the interpretation of his saying: the worlds sufficiently in other places, so there is no need to repeat it.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I bestowed upon you. It was mentioned before. And that I preferred you over the worlds. He means over the worlds of their time, and the people of every time are a world. It was said: over all the worlds because of what He placed among them of prophets. This is specific to them and not to others.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God reminds them of His previous blessings to their fathers and ancestors, and what He bestowed upon them in sending messengers from among them and revealing books to them and to all the nations of their time, as God the Almighty said: And We chose them with knowledge over the worlds. And God the Almighty said: "And when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, remember the favor of God upon you when He made among you prophets and made you kings and gave you that which He had not given to anyone else in the worlds.” Abu Ja’far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi’ ibn Anas on the authority of Abu al-’Aliyah regarding God the Almighty’s statement: And that I have favored you over the worlds, he said: With what they were given of kingship, messengers, and books over the scholars of that time, for every time has a scholar. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, al-Rabi’ ibn Anas, Qatadah, and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, and it must be interpreted as such because this nation is better than them, as God the Almighty said, addressing this nation: “You are the best nation produced for mankind. You enjoin what is right and forbid what is wrong and believe in God. And if the People of the Scripture had believed, it would have been better for them.” In the Musnads and Sunan, on the authority of Muawiyah bin Haidah Al-Qushayri, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: You are the best of seventy nations, and you are the best of them and the most honorable to God. There are many hadiths on this subject that are mentioned in the words of God Almighty: You are the best nation produced for mankind. It was said that what is meant is that they are preferred in some way over all other people, and it is not necessary that they are preferred absolutely. This was narrated by Al-Razi, and there is a problem with this. It was said that they were preferred over all other nations because their nation included prophets among them. This was narrated by Al-Qurtubi in his interpretation, and there is a problem with this, because the worlds are general and include those who came before them and those who came after them from the prophets. So Abraham, the friend of God, was before them and he is better than all of their prophets, and Muhammad is after them and he is better than all of creation and the master of the children of Adam in this world and the hereafter, may God’s prayers and peace be upon him.

O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you and that I preferred you over the worlds.

Fath al-Qadir

His statement: 47- O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you. Its interpretation has already been presented, but He, the Most High, repeated that to emphasize the argument against them and to warn them against abandoning following Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then He coupled it with the threat, which is His statement: And fear a Day. And His statement: And that I have favored you is conjoined with the object of remember: that is, remember My favor and My favoring you over the worlds. It was said: What is meant by the worlds is the world of their time - and it was said: over all the worlds because of what He made among them of prophets. And he said in Al-Kashshaf: over the great multitude of people, like His statement: We blessed it for the worlds. It is said: I saw a great multitude of al-Nas 114: meaning the multitude. End. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: This is weak, because the word world is derived from knowledge, which is evidence, and everything that is evidence of God is knowledge and is from the world. This is the realization of the statement of the theologians: The world is all that exists except God. Based on this, the term world cannot be restricted to some created things. I say that this objection is invalid. Firstly, the claim that it is derived from knowledge has no proof. Secondly, if we accept the validity of this derivation, the meaning is present in a way that obtains the concept of evidence for God, which is valid for the name of knowledge to be applied to it. It is present in every individual of the created beings by which the Creator is inferred. Its ultimate aim is that the collection of the world necessitates that they be preferred over many individuals of the created beings. As for their being preferred over everyone who made the world the people of the age, its ultimate aim is that they be preferred over the people of ages and not over the people of every age. This does not necessitate their being preferred over the people of the age in which our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is present, nor over the ages that came after him. Such a statement should be borne in mind when interpreting the words of God Almighty: When He made prophets among you and made you kings and gave you that which He had not given to anyone in the worlds. And when God Almighty says: And We chose them with knowledge over the worlds. And when God Almighty says: Indeed, God chose Adam and Noah and the family of Abraham and the family of Imran over the worlds. If it is said: The definition in the worlds indicates It includes every scholar. I said: If this were the case, it would not entail that they were better than the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, because God Almighty said: You are the best nation produced for mankind. This verse and others like it would be specific to those verses.

47. O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I bestowed upon you and that I preferred you over the worlds. That is, the worlds of your time, and even though this preference is for the fathers, it is an honor for the sons.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

47- O Children of Israel, remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you. He repeated it to emphasize and remind of the preference which is the most important of all favors, and linked it to the severe threat to frighten those who neglect it and neglect its rights.

And I have favored you is in apposition to My favor.

Over the worlds meaning the worlds of their time. He means by this the preference of their fathers who were in the time of Moses, peace be upon him, and after him, before they were harmed by what God Almighty gave them of knowledge, faith, and righteous deeds, and made them prophets and just kings. He used this as evidence for the preference of humans over kings, and this is weak.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:48

And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:48

And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And fear fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all which is the Day of Resurrection and no intercession will be accepted from it with the letter ta and the letter ya so we have no intercessors (nor will compensation be taken from it) ransom nor will they be aided they will be prevented from the punishment of God.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of his statement: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul at all is: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul at all. It is also possible that its interpretation could be: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul at all, as the rajaz poet said:

Good morning, good morning to her, with a liver mixed with a hump

At the hour he loves food

It means: He loves food therein. So the letter ha' referring to the day was deleted, as it is sufficient for what appeared from His saying: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice, which indicates what was deleted from it for what was deleted, as its meaning was known.

Some Arab scholars have claimed that the only thing that can be omitted in this position is the letter ha.

Others said that the deleted word cannot be except in it. We have previously demonstrated the permissibility of deleting everything that the apparent meaning indicates.

As for the meaning of His statement: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul at all, it is a warning from God Almighty to His servants whom He addressed with this verse of His punishment that will befall them on the Day of Resurrection, which is the Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul at all, and no father shall suffice for his son, nor shall a son suffice for his father at all. As for the interpretation of His statement: No soul shall suffice, it means: it will not avail, as Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi:

And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice: As for suffice, it means avail.

The root of the word jazaa in Arabic is: judgment and compensation. It is said: I rewarded him for his loan and his debt, I rewarded him with a reward, meaning I paid him his debt. It is also said: May God reward so-and-so on my behalf with good or evil, meaning He rewarded him on my behalf, and He paid him on my behalf what I owed him for his actions that he had done to me. Some scholars of the Arabic language have said: It is said 'jazaa' anhu kada' I helped him with such-and-such', and 'jazaa' anka so-and-so' I rewarded someone on your behalf if you repaid him.

Others of them said: Rather, I have been rewarded on your behalf, I have paid for you. And I have been rewarded, I have been sufficient.

Others among them said: Rather, they have one meaning. It is said: A sheep is sufficient for you and I am sufficient, and a dirham is sufficient for you and I am sufficient, and a sheep is not sufficient for you nor is it sufficient, meaning one. However, they mentioned that I am sufficient for you and I am not sufficient for you are from the language of the people of Hijaz, and that I am sufficient and I am sufficient are from the language of others. They claimed that Tamim in particular among the Arab tribes say: A sheep is sufficient for you and it is sufficient for you.

Others claimed that jaza without a hamza means qada. And ajza with a hamza means kafa'a.

The meaning of the statement is: And fear a Day when no soul shall avail another in the least, nor shall any soul avail itself in any way.

If someone asks us: What is the meaning of: No soul can suffice for another soul, nor can it suffice for another soul?

It was said: It is that one of us today may settle the debt of his son, father, or friend or relative. As for the Hereafter, according to what the report has brought us about it, it pleases a man to have a right over his son or father settled. That is because rights will be illuminated on the Day of Resurrection from good deeds and bad deeds, as Abu Kurayb and Nasr bin Abdul Rahman Al-Azdi told us, they said, Al-Maharibi told us, on the authority of Abu Khalid Al-Dalani Yazid bin Abdul Rahman, on the authority of Zaid bin Abi Anisa, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Saeed Al-Maqburi, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, he said, "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: May God have mercy on a servant who has wronged his brother in his honor." Abu Kurayb said in his hadith: "Or wealth, or status, and he forgives him before it is taken from him, and there is no dinar or dirham, so if he has good deeds, they will take from his good deeds, and if he does not have good deeds, they will burden him with their bad deeds."

Abu Uthman al-Muqaddami told us, he said, al-Farawi told us, he said, Malik told us, on the authority of al-Muqbiri, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, something similar.

Khallad bin Aslam told us, he said: Abu Hammam Al-Ahwazi told us, he said: Abdullah bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, something similar.

Musa bin Sahl al-Ramli told me, he said, Naim bin Hammad told us, he said, Abdul Aziz al-Darawardi told us, on the authority of Amr bin Abi Amr, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Let none of you die while he has a debt, for there will be no dinar or dirham there, only good deeds and bad deeds will be divided there. And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, pointed with his hand to the right and to the left.

Muhammad bin Ishaq told me, he said, Salim bin Qadim told us, he said, Abu Muawiyah Hashim bin Isa told us, he said, Al-Harith bin Muslim told me, on the authority of Al-Zuhri, on the authority of Anas bin Malik, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, similar to the hadith of Abu Hurairah.

Abu Ja'far said: This is the meaning of the words of God Almighty: No soul can compensate for another soul at all. Meaning: It cannot pay for another soul what it owes to it, because there is a judgment of good deeds and bad deeds as we have described. How can someone pay for another what he owes to him, if it pleases him to establish a right over his son or father, and it is taken from him and he does not turn away from it?

Some Basra grammarians claimed that the meaning of his saying: A soul does not suffice for another soul in any way is that it does not suffice for it to be in its place.

This is a statement whose apparent meaning in the Qur'an bears witness to its corruption. That is because it is unreasonable in the speech of the Arabs for a speaker to say: You have not availed me anything, meaning You have not availed me anything by being in my place. Rather, if they wanted to report that something is not sufficient for anything, they would say: This does not suffice for that, and they would not consider it permissible to say: This does not suffice for that. So if the interpretation of His statement, No soul shall suffice for another soul at all, was what was said by the one whose statement we have mentioned, he would have said: And fear a Day when no soul shall suffice for another soul, as it is said: No soul shall suffice for another soul, and he would not have said: No soul shall suffice for another soul at all. In the correctness of the revelation in His statement, No soul shall suffice for another soul at all, there is the clearest evidence of the correctness of what we have said, and the corruption of the statement of the one whose statement we have mentioned in that regard.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And no intercession will be accepted from her.

Abu Ja'far said: Intercession is a noun derived from the saying of a man: So-and-so interceded for me with so-and-so, which is his request to him to fulfill his need.

The intercessor is called intercessor and intercessor because he doubled the one being interceded for, so he became an intercessor. So the one in need was an individual before he interceded with him for his need, so his companion became an intercessor for him in it, and his request for him and his need is intercession. That is why the intercessor in the house and on the earth is called an intercessor, because the seller becomes an intercessor with him. So the interpretation of the verse is: And fear a Day when no soul will pay for another a right it owes to God, the Most High, or to anyone else, nor will God accept from it the intercession of an intercessor, so He will leave for it what is owed to it of right.

It was said: God Almighty addressed the people of this verse with what He addressed them with in it, because they were from the Jews of the Children of Israel, and they used to say: We are the sons of God and His beloved and the sons of His prophets, and our fathers will intercede for us with Him. So God Almighty informed them that a soul will not compensate for another soul at all on the Day of Resurrection, and no one's intercession will be accepted from it in it, until everyone who has a right from it has received his right. As:

Abbas bin Abi Talib told me, he said, Hajjaj bin Nusayr told us, on the authority of Shu'bah, on the authority of Al-A'wam bin Marajim, a man from Qays bin Tha'labah, on the authority of Abu Uthman Al-Nahdi, on the authority of Uthman bin Affan: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'The peers will exact retribution from the peers on the Day of Resurrection,' as God Almighty said: 'And We will set up the just scales on the Day of Resurrection, so that no soul will be dealt with unjustly at all. And if there be [the weight of] a mustard seed, We will bring it forth. And sufficient are We as accountants.'" (Al-Anbiya': 47)

So He, the Most High, made them despair of what they had hoped for themselves, of salvation from the punishment of God, while denying what they knew of the truth, and disobeying God's command to follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought to them from Him through the intercession of their fathers and all other people? And He informed them that nothing would benefit them with Him except repentance to Him from their disbelief and turning back from their misguidance. And He made what He had prescribed for them a guide for everyone who was on the same path as them, so that no one who was ungrateful would hope for His mercy.

Although this verse is general in its recitation, its intended meaning is specific in its interpretation, as the reports from the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) are clear, that he said: My intercession is for the major sinners of my nation, and that he said: "There is no prophet who was not given a supplication, and I have saved my supplication as intercession for my nation, and it will be granted, God willing, to those among them who do not associate anything with God." Thus, it is clear that God, the Most High, may pardon His believing servants through the intercession of our Prophet Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) for them from much of the punishment for their crimes between them and Him, and that His statement: And no intercession will be accepted from them, is only for those who died in their disbelief without repenting to God, the Almighty. This is not a place to elaborate on intercession, promise, and threat, so we will examine the arguments for that. We will come to what is sufficient in its proper places, God willing.

And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And no compensation shall be taken from it.

Abu Jaafar said: And justice in the speech of the Arabs? With the opening of the 'ayn, it means ransom, as:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told us: Adam told us: Abu Jaafar told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah: And no ransom shall be taken from it, he said: meaning ransom.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And no compensation shall be taken from her. As for compensation: it is her compensation, from justice. He says that if she came with the earth full of gold to ransom herself with it, it would not be accepted from her.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And no compensation shall be taken from her, he said: If she had brought everything, it would not have been accepted from her.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, he said: Hussain told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Mujahid said: Ibn Abbas said: And no compensation shall be taken from it, he said: A substitute, and the substitute is the ransom.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me: Ibn Wahb told us: Ibn Zayd said: And no ransom shall be taken from her. He said: Even if she had the earth full of gold, no ransom would be accepted from her. He said: Even if she brought everything, no ransom would be accepted from her.

Najih bin Ibrahim told me: Ali bin Hakim told us: Hamid bin Abdul Rahman told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Amr bin Qais Al-Mala'i, on the authority of a man from the Umayyads of the people of Ash-Sham who was praised well. It was said: O Messenger of God, what is justice? He said: Justice is ransom.

The ransom of something and its substitute is called just, because it is equivalent to it, although it is not of the same kind, and its fate is like it, for example, from the aspect of recompense, not from the aspect of similarity in form and creation, as God Almighty said: And if you give every just ransom, nothing will be taken from it (al-An'am 6:75), meaning: And if you give every ransom, nothing will be taken from it.

It is said: This is his justice and his equal. As for justice with a kasra on the 'ayn, it is like a load carried on the back. It is said from that: I have a boy equal to your boy, and a sheep equal to your sheep with a kasra on the 'ayn if a boy is equal to a boy, and a sheep is equal to a sheep. And likewise in every example of a thing of its kind. So if it is meant that he has its value from a different kind, the 'ayn is in the accusative case, so it is said: I have the equivalent of your sheep in dirhams. It has been mentioned from some Arabs that they break the 'ayn of justice which means ransom, to equal what is equal to it in terms of recompense, and that is because the meaning of justice and fairness is similar to them. As for one of the just, nothing has been heard of it except 'adl with a kasra on the 'ayn.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Nor will they be helped.

The interpretation of His statement: nor will they be helped, means that on that day no helper will help them, just as no intercessor will intercede for them, and no compensation or ransom will be accepted from them. There, favoritism will be abolished, bribes and intercessions will be eliminated, cooperation and mutual support will be removed from among the people, and judgment will be given to the Almighty Justice, before whom intercessors and supporters will be of no use, so He will reward the bad with its like and the good with its double. This is similar to His statement, may He be glorified: "Stop them; indeed, they will be questioned. What is the matter with you that you do not help one another? Rather, today they have surrendered." (al-Saffat 37:24-26)

Ibn Abbas used to say about the meaning of you will not be helped, what I was told about Al-Munjab, he said, Bishr bin Ammarah told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Why do you not help? Why do you not protect us? No way, that is not for you today. Some of them said about the meaning of his statement, nor will they be helped, that they will have no helper from God on that day who will take revenge for them from God if He punishes them. It has been said, nor will they be helped, by seeking intercession and ransom for them.

Abu Ja'far said: The first statement is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse, because of what we have described, that God, the Most High, only informed those addressed by this verse that the Day of Resurrection is a day on which there is no ransom for those of His creation who deserved His punishment, nor intercession for them, nor supporter for them. This is because that was for them in this world, so He informed that that on the Day of Resurrection will be non-existent and they will have no way to it.

God Almighty says: And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.

The Almighty's saying: And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all is a command meaning a threat. We have already discussed piety. A Day means its punishment and terror, which is the Day of Resurrection. It is in the accusative case as the object of and fear. It is permissible in other than the Qur'an to say a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, as an addition. There is an omission in the speech, and there is a difference of opinion among grammarians about it. The Basrans said: The meaning is a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, then an omission was omitted in it, as he said:

And a day we saw it safe and prosperous

That is, we witnessed it. Al-Kisa'i said: This is a mistake in which deletion is not permissible, but the meaning is: And fear a day for which no soul will suffice, then the ha' was deleted. The ha' is only permissible to delete because circumstances, according to him, are not permissible to delete. He said: It is not permissible to say: This is a man I intended, nor I saw a man I desired, when you mean I intended to him, I desired him. He said: If that were permissible, then it would be permissible: The one Zayd spoke, meaning I spoke about him Zayd. Al-Farra' said: It is permissible to delete the ha' and in it. Al-Mahdawi narrated that both faces are permissible according to Sibawayh, Al-Akhfash, and Al-Zajaj.

The meaning of No soul shall suffice for another soul in anything is: no soul shall be held accountable for another sin, nor shall anything be paid for it. You say: This matter sufficed for me, just as you say: It was decided for me. And you are satisfied with something if you are content with it. The poet said:

Treachery among people is shameful, and a free man is rewarded with a leg.

That is, he is satisfied with it. And in the hadith of Omar:

If you pour water over water, it will suffice for you. He means if you pour water over urine on the ground and it flows over it, the place will be purified, and you do not need to wash that place and dry the water with a rag or something else as many people do.

In the authentic hadith on the authority of Abu Burdah bin Niyar regarding the sacrifice:

It will not suffice for anyone after you means it will not suffice. The meaning of it will not suffice is: it will not pay off, it will not suffice, and it will not suffice if there is nothing due from her. If it is, then it will suffice, pay off, and suffice, without her choosing from his good deeds what is due from her, as in the hadith of Abu Hurairah that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"Whoever has wronged his brother in his honor or anything else, let him seek his forgiveness today before there will be neither dinar nor dirham. If he has any good deeds, they will be taken from him in proportion to his wrongdoing. If he has no good deeds, some of his companion's bad deeds will be taken and loaded onto him." Narrated by Al-Bukhari. And similar to it is his other hadith:

In Al-Mulfis, and we mentioned it in Al-Tadhkirah, narrated by Muslim. It was read Tajzi' with a damma on the ta' and the hamza. It is said: Jaza' and Ajza' have the same meaning. Some people have differentiated between them and said: Jaza' has the same meaning and compensated. And Ajza' has the same meaning and sufficed. The thing ajza'ani yajzi'ani means it sufficed me. The poet said:

And I have fulfilled the command of the worlds, and none can fulfill it except the perfect and the son of the perfect.

Third: The Almighty's saying: And no intercession will be accepted from her. Al-Shafi'ah is derived from the word shafa', which means both. You say: It was odd, so I interceded for him evenly. Shafa'ah is derived from it, because you add the property of your partner to your property. Al-Shafi'i is the companion of shafa'ah and the owner of intercession. A she-camel is a shafi'i if she has a pregnancy and a child that follows her. You say from it: The she-camel interceded evenly. A she-camel is one that combines two milkings in one milking. I asked him to intercede for me with him. I interceded with him for so-and-so, so he interceded for me with him. So intercession is adding someone else to your ruler and your means. It is, in fact, a manifestation of the status of the intercessor with the one being interceded for, and the delivery of his benefit to the one being interceded for.

Fourth: The doctrine of the people of truth is that intercession is true, and the Mu'tazila denied it and eternalized the believers from the sinners who entered the fire in torment. The reports are consistent that those who were from the sinners, the sinners, the monotheists from the nations of the prophets are the ones who will receive the intercession of the intercessors from the angels, the prophets, the martyrs, and the righteous. The judge held on to two things in his response to them: First: The many reports that were transmitted in succession in the meaning. Second: The consensus of the predecessors on accepting this report, and none of them in any era showed any objection, so the prevalence of its narration and their agreement on its authenticity and their acceptance of it is conclusive evidence of the correctness of the belief of the people of truth and the corruption of the religion of the Mu'tazila.

If they say: Texts have been reported from the Book that require rejecting these reports, such as His statement: For the wrongdoers there will be no intimate friend or intercessor who will be obeyed. They say: And the people of major sins are wrongdoers. And He said: Whoever does evil will be recompensed for it, and: And no intercession will be accepted from them. We say: These verses are not general for every wrongdoer, and generality has no formula, so these verses do not include everyone who does evil equally and every soul, but rather what is meant by them are the disbelievers and not the believers, as evidenced by the reports that have been reported in this regard. Also, God the Most High has confirmed intercession for some people and denied it for others, so He said in describing the disbelievers: So the intercession of intercessors will not benefit them, and He said: And they do not intercede except for him with whom He is pleased, and He said: And intercession does not benefit with Him except for him whom He permits. So we know from this sentence that intercession only benefits the believers and not the disbelievers. The commentators have agreed that what is meant by the Almighty's saying: And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, is the disbelieving soul, not every soul. And even if we say that the punishment is general for every wrongdoer and disobedient, we do not say that they will remain in it forever, based on the evidence of the reports that we have narrated, and based on His saying: And He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills, and His saying: Indeed, no one despairs of relief from God except the disbelieving people.

If they say: God Almighty said: And they do not intercede except for him with whom He is pleased, and the immoral person is not pleased, we say: He did not say for the one with whom He is not pleased, but rather He said: for the one with whom He is pleased. And those whom God is pleased with for intercession are the monotheists, as evidenced by His saying: They do not possess intercession except for one who has taken a covenant with the Most Merciful. And "It was said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: What is God's covenant with His creation? He said: That they believe and do not associate anything with Him." And the commentators said: Except for the one who says there is no god but God.

If they say: The one who is approved is the one who repents and has made a covenant with God to return to Him, as evidenced by the fact that the angels asked forgiveness for them, and He said: So forgive those who repent and follow Your way. And likewise the intercession of the prophets, peace be upon them, is only for the people of repentance and not the people of major sins. We say: According to you, it is obligatory for God the Most High to accept repentance, so if God accepts the repentance of the sinner, then he does not need intercession or asking forgiveness. The scholars of interpretation agreed that what is meant by His saying: So forgive those who repent is from polytheism, and follow Your way is the way of the believers. They asked God the Most High to forgive them for their sins less than polytheism, as He the Most High said: He forgives what is less than that for whom He wills.

If they said: The entire nation desires the intercession of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, so if it were only for those who committed major sins, their question would be invalid.

We said: Every Muslim seeks the intercession of the Messenger and desires from God that he may attain it, because he believes that he is not free from sins and does not fulfill for God Almighty all that He has enjoined upon him. Rather, every one acknowledges his own shortcomings, so he fears punishment and hopes for salvation. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

No one will be saved except by the mercy of God

Almighty. It was said: Not even you, O Messenger of God? He said: Not even me, unless God covers me with His mercy.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: And does not accept. Ibn Kathir and Abu Amr read it is accepted with a ta', because intercession is feminine. The rest read it with a ya' for the masculine, because it means intercession. Al-Akhfash said: It is good to make it masculine, because you have differentiated, as mentioned previously in His saying: Then Adam received from his Lord words.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: And no ransom shall be taken from it meaning a ransom. The word adl with the fatha on the 'ayn means ransom, and with the kasra on it means the equivalent. It is said: adl and adeel for the one who is similar to you in weight and amount. It is said that the adl of something is the one who is equal to it in value and amount even if it is not of the same kind. The word adl with the kasra is the one who is equal to the thing of the same kind and in its mass. Al-Tabari narrated: Some Arabs pronounce the ain with the kasra from the meaning of ransom. As for the singular of a'dal, it is with the kasra only.

God Almighty says: Nor will they be aided. That is, they will suffer. Victory means help. Ansar means supporters. Hence His statement: Who will be my helpers to God? That is, who will add his support to my support. The man took revenge: he took revenge. Victory means coming. It is said: I came to the land of Banu Fulan. The poet said:

When the sacred month comes, say farewell to the land of Tamim and support the land of Amer.

Victory means rain. It is said: The land was granted al-Nasr 110: it rained. Victory means giving. He said:

I and Astar wrote a line for the one who says, Oh victory, victory, victory.

The reason for this verse, as they mentioned, was that the Children of Israel said: We are the sons of God, His beloved, and the sons of His prophets, and our fathers will intercede for us. So God Almighty informed them about the Day of Resurrection, that intercessions will not be accepted on it, and no ransom will be taken on it. He only mentioned intercession, ransom, and victory specifically because these are the meanings to which the children of Adam were accustomed. For the one who is in hardship cannot be relieved except by interceding for him, or by being victorious, or by being ransomed.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

When God Almighty first reminded them of His blessings, He followed that with a warning of the length of His punishment on the Day of Resurrection, saying: And fear a Day meaning the Day of Resurrection when no soul will suffice for another soul at all meaning no one will avail another, just as He said:

And no bearer of burdens will bear the burden of another and He said: Every person on that Day will have enough to make him independent and He said: O mankind, fear your Lord and fear a Day when no father will suffice for his son, nor will a son suffice for his father at all This is the most eloquent of positions, that neither the father nor his son will suffice for the other at all. God Almighty's saying: And no intercession will be accepted from them means from the disbelievers, just as He said: So the intercession of intercessors will not benefit them and just as He said about the people of Hell: For us there are no intercessors * nor a close friend and God Almighty's saying: And no compensation will be taken from them meaning no ransom will be accepted from them, just as God Almighty said: Indeed, those who disbelieve and die while they are disbelievers - never will an earth full of gold be accepted from one of them. And if he ransomed himself with it, He said: "Indeed, those who disbelieved, if they had all that is in the earth and as much more with it to ransom themselves thereby from the punishment of the Day of Resurrection, it would not be accepted from them, and they will have a painful punishment." And God Almighty said: And if you offer every ransom, no ransom will be accepted from you. And He said: "So today no ransom will be accepted from you, nor from those who disbelieve. Your refuge is the Fire; it is your protector." The verse. So the Almighty informed us that if they do not believe in His Messenger and follow him in what He sent him with and meet God on the Day of Resurrection as they are, then neither the kinship of a relative nor the intercession of a powerful person will benefit them, and no ransom will be accepted from them even if it is worth the earth full of gold, as the Almighty said: Before there comes a Day in which there will be no trading nor friendship nor intercession. And He said: There will be no trading nor friendship. Sunayd said: Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj told me, Mujahid said: Ibn Abbas said: And no compensation will be taken from her. He said: A substitute, and the substitute is the ransom. Al-Suddi said: As for a just thing, it is equivalent to it from the just, he said: If she came with the earth full of gold as ransom, it would not be accepted from her. And Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said the same. Abu Ja'far al-Razi said on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah regarding His statement: And no compensation will be accepted from her, meaning a ransom. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Something similar was narrated on the authority of Abu Malik, al-Hasan, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, Qatadah, and al-Rabi' ibn Anas. Abd al-Razzaq said: Ath-Thawri informed us on the authority of al-A'mash on the authority of Ibrahim al-Taimi, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ali, may God be pleased with him, in a long hadith, said: And spending and justice are voluntary and obligatory, and Al-Walid bin Muslim said the same on the authority of Uthman bin Abi Al-Atika on the authority of Umair bin Hani'. This statement is strange here, and the first statement is more apparent in the interpretation of this verse, and a hadith has been reported that strengthens it, which is what Ibn Jarir said: Najih bin Ibrahim told me, Ali bin Hakim told us, Hamid bin Abdul Rahman told us on the authority of his father on the authority of Amr bin Qais Al-Mala'i on the authority of a man from the Umayyads of the people of Ash-Sham who praised him well, he said: It was said, O Messenger of God, what is justice? He said: Justice is ransom. And the Almighty's saying: Nor will they be helped. That is, no one will be angry for them and help them and save them from the punishment of God, as was mentioned earlier that no relative or influential person will be kind to them, and no ransom will be accepted from them. All of this is from the aspect of kindness, and they have no helper from themselves or from others, as He said: So he has no power or helper. That is, the Almighty does not accept ransom or intercession for those who disbelieve in Him, and no one will save anyone from His punishment, and no one will be saved from Him, and no one will be protected from Him, as the Almighty said: And He protects, but no one can protect against Him. And He said: So on that Day no one will punish with His punishment, nor will anyone bind with His bond. And He said: What is the matter with you that you do not help each other? Rather, today they are submissive. And He said: Why did not those who took other than God as deities help them? Rather, they have gone astray from them. And Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the Almighty's saying: What is the matter with you that you do not help each other? What is the matter with you today that you do not protect us? No way, that is not so. Today, Ibn Jarir said: The interpretation of his statement: nor will they be aided means that on that day no helper will aid them, just as no intercessor will intercede for them, and no compensation or ransom will be accepted from them. There, favoritism will be abolished, bribes and intercessions will be eliminated, and mutual support and cooperation will be removed from the people, and judgment will go to the Just Compeller, with whom intercessors and supporters will be of no use, so He will reward the bad with the like of it, and the good with multiples of it. This is similar to the statement of God Almighty: "Stop them, for they will be questioned. What is the matter with you that you do not aid one another? Rather, today they are surrendering."

Fath al-Qadir

And his saying: 48- And fear a Day is a command meaning a threat, and the meaning of piety has already been mentioned. What is meant by the Day is the Day of al-Qiyamah 75: that is, its punishment. And his saying: No soul shall suffice for another soul at all is in the accusative case as an attribute of the Day, and the pronoun is omitted. The Basrans said about this and similar examples that it is estimated in it. Al-Kisa'i said that this is a mistake, rather the estimate is it does not suffice him. Because deleting the circumstance is not permissible, and deleting the pronoun alone is permissible. It has been narrated from Sibawayh, Al-Akhfash, and Al-Zajaj that both matters are permissible. The meaning of does not suffice is does not suffice and makes up. It is said: This matter sufficed for me means it was completed, and I was satisfied with the thing means I was satisfied. And from this is the saying of the poet:

Treachery among people is shameful, and the free man is rewarded with a slap in the face.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:48

And fear a Day when no soul will suffice for another soul at all, nor will intercession be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it, nor will they be aided.

What is meant is that on this day no soul will pay for another soul anything nor will it suffice for it. The meaning of the indefinite article is belittling: i.e. something small and insignificant. It is accusative as a direct object or as an attribute of a deleted source: i.e. a small recompense. Intercession is taken from the word shafa' which means two. You say: I asked him to intercede for me: i.e. add his ignorance to your position with the one being interceded for so that the benefit reaches the one being interceded for. It is called shafa' because you add the property of your partner to your property. Ibn Kathir and Abu Omar read it with the doubled dot above because intercession is feminine. The rest read it with the lower ya because it means the intercessor. Al-Akhfash said: It is better to use the masculine form. The pronoun of minha refers to the soul mentioned secondly: i.e. if it comes with the intercession of an intercessor, it is permissible for it to refer to the soul mentioned first: i.e. if it intercedes, it will not be accepted from it. Justice with the fatha on the 'ayn: redemption and with the kasra on it: the equivalent. It is said: 'Adl' meaning if it intercedes, it will not be accepted from it. Justice with the fatha on the 'ayn: redemption and with the kasra on it: the equivalent. It is said: Adl and Adil for the one who is similar in weight and value. Ibn Jarir narrated that some Arabs break the 'ayn in the meaning of ransom. al-Nasr 110: help, and supporters: assistants, and the man took revenge, and the pronoun, i.e. they, refers to the souls that are discussed in the indefinite form in the context of negation, and the soul is masculine and feminine.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

48. And fear a Day and fear the punishment of a Day when no soul shall suffice no soul shall pay for any soul i.e. a right that is binding on it. It was said: it does not suffice, and it was said: it does not suffice for any of the hardships. nor shall intercession be accepted from it. Ibn Kathir and Yaqub read with the ta' to feminize intercession, and the rest read with the ya' because intercession and intercession have the same meaning as preaching and preaching, so the masculine is based on the meaning, and the feminine is based on the wording, like the Almighty's saying: There has come to you an admonition from your Lord 57-Yunus. And He said in another place: But whoever has received an admonition from his Lord 275-Al-Baqarah, i.e. no intercession shall be accepted from her if she is a disbeliever. nor shall compensation be taken from her i.e. ransom. And it was called thus because it is like the ransomed. And justice is the example. nor shall they be aided they are prevented from the punishment of God.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

48- And fear a Day meaning the Day of Reckoning and Punishment.

No soul shall suffice for another soul in anything does not pay for it any of the rights, or any of the recompense, so its accusative is in the source, and it was read no "suffice from suffice" if it enriched, and on this it must be a source, and its inclusion in the indefinite with the indefiniteness of the two souls is for generalization and total despair, and the sentence is an attribute of a day, and the antecedent in it is deleted, its estimate is "no suffice in it", and whoever does not allow the deletion of the antecedent in the accusative said: it was expanded: in it, so the preposition was deleted from it and it was made like the direct object, then it was deleted as it was deleted from his saying: or money they hit.

And no intercession will be accepted from it, nor will compensation be taken from it. That is, from the disobedient soul, or from the first, and it is as if the verse was intended to negate that anyone can avert punishment from anyone in every possible way, for it is either by force or otherwise, and the first is victory, and the second is either for free or otherwise. The first is that he intercedes for him, and the second is either by performing what he owed, which is to compensate for him, or otherwise, which is to give him compensation. Intercession is from the word shafa', as if the one for whom intercession was made was an individual, so the intercessor made him an intercessor by adding himself to him, the compensation is the ransom. It was said: The substitute, and its origin is equality, and the ransom was named thus because it was named the ransomed, and Ibn Kathir and Abu Amr read it and it is not accepted with the ta'.

"Nor will they be helped" they will be prevented from the punishment of God, and the pronoun refers to what the second soul, the unknown soul, which occurs in the context of the soul, from the many souls, and its reminder is in the meaning of servants or people, and help is more specific than assistance because it is specific to repelling harm. The Mu'tazila held fast to this verse to deny intercession for the people of major sins, and it was answered that it is specific to the infidels due to the verses and hadiths that were mentioned about intercession, and it supports that the address is with them, and the verse was revealed in response to what the Jews claimed that their fathers interceded for them.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:49

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And remember when We delivered you meaning your fathers, and the address with it and what follows it is to those who were present at the time of our Prophet with what God bestowed upon their fathers, reminding them of the grace of God Almighty so that they would believe from the people of Pharaoh, who subjected you made you taste the worst of the torment the most severe, and the sentence is a state of the pronoun of We delivered you slaughtering an explanation of what came before it your sons those who were born and sparing they kept your women because some of the priests said to him that a child born among the Children of Israel would be a reason for the loss of your kingdom and in that the torment or the deliverance is a trial a trial or a blessing from your Lord, a great one

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

As for the interpretation of his saying: And when We saved you, it is an extension of his saying: O Children of Israel, remember My favor.

It is as if he said: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you, and remember Our favor upon you when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh by saving you from them.

As for the family of Pharaoh, they are the people of his religion, his followers and his supporters.

The root of al is ahl, the ha was replaced with a hamza, just as they said ma, so they replaced the ha with a hamza. Then, if they make it diminutive, they say muwayh, so they put the ha back in the diminutive, and they take it as it was. Likewise, if they make al diminutive, they say ahil. It has been reported that the Arabs heard the diminutive of al as awil. It has been said: So-and-so is from the al of women, meaning that he was created from them. It is also said in the sense that he wants them and loves them, as the poet said:

You are from the family of women, and it is only for the lowest, not for the absent

The best place for Al is to pronounce it with famous names, such as when they say: the family of the Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, the family of Ali, the family of Abbas, and the family of Aqeel. It is not recommended to use it with the unknown and in the names of lands and the like. It is not recommended by those who know the Arabic language to say: I saw the family of the man and the family of the woman saw me, nor: I saw the family of Basra and the family of Kufa. It has been reported that some Arabs hear that they say: I saw the family of Mecca and the family of Medina. This is not common and commonly used in their speech.

As for Pharaoh, it is said that it was the name that the kings of the giants in Egypt were called by, just as the kings of the Romans were called, some of them Caesar, and some of them Heraclius, and just as the kings of Persia were called the Chosroes, one of whom was Khosrau, and the kings of Yemen were called the Tubbas, one of whom was Tubba.

As for the Pharaoh of Moses, whom God Almighty told about the Children of Israel that He saved them from him, it is said that his name was Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, and Muhammad bin Ishaq also mentioned that he was informed of his name.

Muhammad bin Hamid told us that, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq: His name is Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan.

Rather, it is permissible to say: And when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh, and the address is to those who did not realize Pharaoh or those who were saved from him, because those addressed by that were the sons of those whom He saved from Pharaoh and his people, so He attributed to them what was of His blessings upon their fathers, and likewise what was of their fathers' ingratitude by way of attribution, just as someone says to another: We did such and such to you and we did such and such to you, and we killed you and took you captive, and the informant either means his people and clan by that, or the people of his country and homeland, whether the one to whom that was said realized what was done to them of that or did not realize it, just as Al-Akhtal said, satirizing Jarir ibn Atiyah:

And the Hudhayl tribe has exalted you and has overtaken you in Irab, where the spoils of war are divided.

In a legion, he calls the numbers, his knights were neither unarmed nor dependent.

Jarir did not catch up with Hudhayl nor did he reach them, nor did he reach Irab nor witness him. But when it was one of the days of the people of Al-Akhtal over the people of Jarir, he added the address to him and to his people. Likewise, when God Almighty addresses the one he addressed with His saying: And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, when his action was what he did to the people of the one he addressed with the verse and their fathers, he added his action that which he did to their fathers, to those addressed with the verse and their people.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They subject you to the worst torment.

There are two interpretations of His statement: They subject you to torment. The first is that it is a new report about what Pharaoh did to the Children of Israel, and its meaning then is: And remember My favor upon you when I saved you from the people of Pharaoh, and before that they subjected you to terrible torment. Since that is its interpretation, the position of they subject you to torment is in the nominative case.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:49

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

The second aspect: That they were subjecting you to a state of torment, so its interpretation then would be: And when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh who were subjecting you to a terrible torment, so it would be a state of the people of Pharaoh.

As for the interpretation of his saying: They subject you to it, it means that they bring you to the table, make you taste it, and give you authority. It is said: He subjected him to a grievance, if he gave him that and made him taste it, as the poet said:

If he is humiliated, his face will be covered with dust

As for the interpretation of his saying: the worst of the torment, it means the torment that was bad for them. Some of them said: the most severe torment. If that was its meaning, it would have been said: the worst of the torment.

If someone says to us: What is that punishment that they were subjecting to, that was making them feel bad?

It was said: It is what God Almighty described in His Book, saying: They slaughter your sons and keep your women alive. Muhammad bin Ishaq said about that:

Ibn Humayd narrated to us, saying: Salamah narrated to us, saying: Ibn Ishaq informed us, saying: Pharaoh used to torture the Children of Israel, making them servants and slaves, and he divided them into his jobs. One group built, and one group plowed, and one group farmed for him, so they were in his jobs. And whoever among them was not in a craft of his, he had to pay the jizya, so he made them suffer, as God Almighty said, the worst of torment.

Al-Saddi said: He made them do dirty work, and made them kill their sons and take their women captive.

Musa bin Harun told me that, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They slaughter your sons and spare your women.

Abu Ja'far said: God, the Most High, attributed what the people of Pharaoh did to the Children of Israel, such as their inflicting terrible torture on them, slaughtering their sons, and keeping their women alive, to them, not to Pharaoh, even though what they did was by the power of Pharaoh and by his command, as they directly did it themselves. Thus, He made it clear that anyone who directly kills a soul or tortures a living person himself, even if it was by the command of someone else, then the one who does it is the one who deserves to have it attributed to him, even if the one who gives the command is a powerful force, the one who is commanded to do so is a sultan, a thief, or a wicked oppressor. Likewise, the Most High attributed the slaughter of the children of the Children of Israel and keeping their women alive, to the people of Pharaoh, not to Pharaoh, even though they were by the power of Pharaoh and his command to do so, and they did what they did, despite his dominance and subjugation of them. Likewise, anyone who kills a soul by the command of someone else unjustly, he is the one who is killed in retaliation, according to us, even if he killed her by the compulsion of someone else to kill him.

As for the interpretation of their slaughtering the sons of the Children of Israel and keeping their women alive, it was mentioned to us on the authority of Ibn Abbas and others, as in:

Al-Abbas ibn al-Walid al-Amli and Tamim al-Muntasir al-Wasiti narrated to us: Yazid ibn Harun narrated to us: al-Asbagh ibn Zayd al-Juhani narrated to us: al-Qasim ibn Abi Ayyub narrated to us: Saeed ibn Jubayr narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Pharaoh and his companions discussed what God had promised His friend Abraham: that He would make prophets and kings among his descendants. They conspired and agreed that he would send men with knives to go around among the Children of Israel. They would not find a male child without slaughtering him. So they did. When they saw that the adults among the Children of Israel were dying at their appointed times and the young were being slaughtered, he said: You are about to annihilate the Children of Israel, and you will reach a point where you will be engaged in work and service that would suffice you. So kill every male child one year, and their children will be few, and leave another year. So Moses' mother became pregnant with Aaron in the year in which boys were not slaughtered, and she gave birth to him openly and safely. Then, when the next year came, she became pregnant with Moses.

Abdul Karim bin Al-Haitham told us: Ibrahim bin Bashar Al-Ramadi told us: Sufyan bin Uyaynah told us: Abu Saeed told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The priests said to Pharaoh: A child will be born this year who will take away your kingdom. So Pharaoh appointed a hundred men for every thousand women, ten for every hundred, and a man for every ten. He said: Look at every pregnant woman in the city, and when she gives birth, look at her. If it is a boy, slaughter him, and if it is a girl, leave her alone. This is what He said: "They slaughter your sons and keep your women alive. And in that is a great trial from your Lord."

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement: And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh who were afflicting you with the worst of torment, he said: Pharaoh ruled over them for four hundred years, and the soothsayers said that a boy would be born in Egypt this year at whose hands they would be destroyed. So he sent midwives among the people of Egypt, and whenever a woman gave birth to a boy, he would be brought to Pharaoh, who would kill him and spare the female slaves.

Al-Muthanna told me: Ishaq bin Al-Hajjaj told us: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding His statement: And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh verse, he said: Pharaoh ruled over them for four hundred years, and someone came to him and said: A boy from the Children of Israel will arise in Egypt, and he will prevail over you, and your destruction will be at his hands. So he sent women to Egypt. He mentioned something similar to the hadith of Adam.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: It was the case of Pharaoh that he saw in his dream that a fire came from Jerusalem until it encompassed the houses of Egypt, and it burned the Copts and left the Children of Israel, and it destroyed the houses of Egypt. So he called the magicians, the priests, the soothsayers, and the fortune-tellers and asked them about his dream, and they said to him: From this country from which the Children of Israel came, meaning Jerusalem, a man will emerge whose face will be the destruction of Egypt. So he ordered the Children of Israel that no boy should be born to them without slaughtering him, and no girl should be born to them without leaving her. And he said to the Copts: Look at your slaves who work outside and bring them in, and make the Children of Israel do those dirty jobs. So he made the Children of Israel do the jobs of their boys, and they brought in their boys. That is when God the Blessed and Exalted says: Indeed, Pharaoh exalted himself in the land meaning: he was tyrannical in the land and made its people into factions meaning the Children of Israel, when he made them do filthy deeds he oppressed a party of them, slaughtering their sons (al-Qasas 28:4). So no child was born to the Children of Israel except that he slaughtered them, so the young ones did not grow up. And God cast death into the elders of the Children of Israel, and it hastened them. So the leaders of the Copts came to Pharaoh and spoke to him, and they said: Indeed, death has befallen these people, and soon the work will befall our young men, we will slaughter their sons, so the young ones will not reach maturity and the old ones will perish. So if you could spare some of their children, he ordered that they slaughter one year and leave another year. So when it was the year in which they did not slaughter, Aaron was born and was left. So when it was the year in which they were to slaughter, she became pregnant with Moses.

Muhammad bin Hamid narrated: Salamah narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq: It was mentioned to me that when the time of Moses drew near, Pharaoh's astrologers and fortune tellers came to him and said to him: Know that we find in our knowledge that a child from the Children of Israel has come to you at the time of his birth, who will take away your kingdom, overpower you in your authority, expel you from your land, and change your religion. When they said that to him, he ordered that every child born from the Children of Israel be killed, and he ordered that the women be kept alive. So he gathered the midwives from the women of his kingdom and said to them: Do not let a child from the Children of Israel fall into your hands unless you kill him. So they did that. He also slaughtered some of the boys and ordered that pregnant women be tortured until they miscarried.

Ibn Humayd narrated: Salamah narrated on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: It was mentioned to me that he used to order that reeds be cut until they were made like razors, then he would line them up next to each other, then he would bring pregnant women from the Children of Israel and make them stand on them, and he would cut off their feet. So much so that a woman would suckle her child and it would fall between her legs, and she would keep stepping on it to protect herself from the edge of the reed on her foot, because of how exhausted she was, until he went too far in that and almost destroyed them. So it was said to him: You have destroyed the people and cut off the offspring, and they are your servants and workers. So he ordered that the boys be killed one year and kept alive another year. So Aaron was born in the year in which the boys were kept alive, and Moses was born in the year in which they were killed.

Abu Ja'far said: What was said by those we mentioned from the people of knowledge: The slaughter of the sons of the Children of Israel by the family of Pharaoh and their keeping their women alive, so the interpretation of his statement is what those we mentioned interpreted their statement: and they keep your women alive, meaning they keep them alive and do not kill them.

It may be necessary to interpret the statement of those who said the statement we mentioned from Ibn Abbas, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, and Al-Suddi in interpreting His statement: and keep your women alive, that they leave the females from being killed when they give birth to them, that it is permissible to call a female child in her childhood and after her birth: woman, and the young girls while they are children: women. Because they interpreted the statement of God Almighty: and keep your women alive, that they keep the female children at birth and do not kill them.

Ibn Jurayj denied this of their statement, saying:

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us: Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us: Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: And they keep your women as slaves, he said: They enslave your women.

Ibn Jurayj, by saying this, deviated from what was said by the one we mentioned, his saying in his statement: And they keep your women as shy: that it is keeping young girls as shy, since he did not find them to be called women. Then he entered into what is greater than what he denied, by interpreting and they keep as shy as enslaving them. This is an interpretation that does not exist in any Arabic or foreign language. This is because istihaa is a verb from the root of life, similar to istibaqa from al-baqaa, and istisqaa from al-saqee. It is from the meaning of enslavement separately.

Others interpreted his statement, They slaughter your sons, to mean: They slaughter your men, the fathers of your sons. They denied that the slaughtered were children, although women were linked to them. They said: In God's statement, may He be glorified and exalted, that the ones who were slaughtered were women, there is clear evidence that those who were slaughtering were men, not boys, because if the ones slaughtered were children, then the ones who were slaughtered would have to be girls. They said: In God's statement, may He be glorified and exalted, that they were women, He made it clear that the ones slaughtered were men.

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

Abu Ja'far said: Those who said this statement, while departing from the interpretation of the people of interpretation from the Companions and the Followers, have overlooked the correct place. That is because God, the Most High, has informed us about His revelation to the mother of Moses that He commanded her to breastfeed Moses, and if she feared for him, to throw him in the chest, then to throw him in the river. It is known from this that if the people were only killing the men and leaving the women, the mother of Moses would not have needed to throw Moses in the river, or if Moses had been a man, his mother would not have put him in the chest.

But according to us, it is according to what Ibn Abbas interpreted and what we have mentioned before: From the slaughter of the children by the people of Pharaoh and their leaving the young girls from killing. And it was said: And they spare your women because the young girls were included with their mothers, and their mothers were undoubtedly women in terms of being spared, because they did not kill young women or old women. So it was said: And they spare your women, meaning by that the mothers and the newborns, as it is said: The men have come, even if there were young boys among them. So too is his saying: And they spare your women. As for the males, since only newborns were slaughtered, it was said: They slaughter your sons, and it was not said: They slaughter your men.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord.

As for his saying: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord, he means: And in what We did to you, in saving you from the torment of Pharaoh's people upon you, as I described, there is a great trial for you from your Lord.

By his saying plague he means: a blessing, as in:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me: Abu Saleh told us: Muawiyah bin Saleh told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: A great trial from your Lord, he said: A blessing.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, regarding his statement: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord, as for the trial, it is the blessing.

Sufyan told us, he said, my father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord, he said: A great blessing from your Lord.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, like the hadith of Sufyan.

Al-Qasim told me, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord, he said: A great blessing.

The root of the word balaa in Arabic is test and examination. It is then used for both good and evil. Because the test and examination can be good or evil, as our Lord, the Most High, said: And We tested them with good and evil that perhaps they would return. (al-A'raf 7:168), meaning: We tested them. And as He, the Most High, said: And We test you with evil and good as trial. (al-Anbiya 21:35). Then the Arabs call good a balaa' and evil a balaa'. However, it is more common for evil to say: I tested him, I tested him with balaa', and for good, I afflicted him, I afflicted him with iblan' and balaa'. From this is the saying of Zuhair ibn Abi Salma:

May God reward them for what they did to you and give them the best of trials.

He combined the two languages because he meant: God bestowed upon them the best blessings with which He tests His servants.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

It contains thirteen issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh "when" is in the accusative case in apposition to Remember My favor. This and what follows it are a reminder of some of the favors that He had upon them, meaning remember My favor in saving you from your enemy and making prophets among you. The address is to those who are present and what is meant are those who came before from among the fathers, as He said: When the water overflowed, We carried you in the moving ship meaning We carried your fathers. It was said: He only said We saved you because the salvation of the fathers was the reason for the salvation of these present people. The meaning of We saved you is that We cast you on a high place on the earth, which is a part of it that is elevated. This is the original, then every winner is called a survivor. So the survivor is the one who comes out of distress to spaciousness. It was read: And when I save you on monotheism.

Second: The Almighty's saying: Of the family of Pharaoh The family of Pharaoh are his people, followers and people of his religion. That is the family of the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, whoever followed his religion and faith in his time and all other times, whether he was related to him or not. And whoever did not follow his religion and faith is not from his family or people, even if he was his relative or close relative. This is contrary to the Rafidah who said: The family of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, is only Fatima, al-Hasan and al-Husayn. Our evidence is the Almighty's saying: And We drowned the family of Pharaoh "Enter the family of Pharaoh into the severest punishment" meaning the family of his religion, since he had no son or daughter, no father, no uncle, no brother or agnates. And because there is no dispute that whoever is not a believer or a monotheist is not from the family of Muhammad, even if he is a close relative to him, and for this reason it is said: Abu Lahab and Abu Jahl are not from his family or people, even if there was a kinship between them and the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and for this reason God Almighty said about the son of Nuh 71: "Indeed, he is not of your family. Indeed, his work is not righteous." In Sahih Muslim, it is narrated on the authority of Amr ibn al-'As who said: I heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, say openly and not secretly: Verily, the family of my father - meaning so-and-so - are not my guardians. My guardians are God and the righteous believers. A group said: The family of Muhammad are his wives and descendants in particular, based on the hadith of Abu Humayd al-Sa'idi that they said: O Messenger of God, how should we send blessings upon you? He said: Say: O God, send blessings upon Muhammad and upon his wives and descendants as You sent blessings upon the family of Abraham, and bless Muhammad and upon his wives and descendants as You blessed the family of Abraham, for You are indeed Praiseworthy and Glorious. Narrated by Muslim. A group of scholars said: The family is known, and the family means the followers. The first is more correct based on what we have mentioned, and based on the hadith of Abdullah ibn Abi Awfa: When people brought the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would say: O God, send blessings upon them. My father brought him his charity and he said: O God, send blessings upon the family of Abi Awfa.

Third: Grammarians differed as to whether the family is added to countries or not. Al-Kisa'i said: It is only said the family of so-and-so and the family of so-and-so, and it is not said in countries that he is from the family of Homs or from the family of Medina. Al-Akhfash said: It is only said of the greatest leader, and the likes of the family of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the family of Pharaoh because he is their leader in misguidance. He said: We have heard it said in countries: the people of Medina and the family of Medina.

Fourth: The grammarians also differed as to whether the definite article al should be added to the pronoun or not. Al-Nahhas, Al-Zubaidi, and Al-Kisa'i prohibited this, so one should only say O God, bless Muhammad and the family of Muhammad, and one should not say and his family. The correct thing to say is his family. Another group went to the view that this should be said, including Ibn Al-Sayyid, and this is correct, because the correct hearing supports it, as it came in the saying of Abdull Muttalib:

Don't worry, if the servant prevents his journey, then prevent your lawful one.

And be victorious over the family of the cross and its worshippers today, your family

Nadba said:

I am the knight who protects the truth of my father and my machine as it protects the truth of Alka.

Truth with two qafs: What a person has the right to protect, i.e. what he must protect.

Fifth: They also differed on the origin of Al. An-Nahhas said: Its origin is Ahl, then the Ha was replaced with an Alif. If you make it diminutive, you return it to its origin, so it was killed: Ahil. Al-Mahdawi said: Its origin is Awal. It was said: Ahl, the Ha was changed to a Hamza, then the Hamza was replaced with an Alif. Its plural is Alun, and its diminutive is Awil, according to what Al-Kisa'i reported. Others reported Ahil, and we have mentioned it from An-Nahhas. Abu Al-Hasan bin Kaysan said: If you pluralize Al, you say Alun. If you pluralize Al, which is the mirage, you say Awal, like Mal and Amwal.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: Pharaoh. Pharaoh is said to be the name of that particular king. It is also said that it is the name of every king of the giants, such as Kisra for the Persians, Caesar for the Romans, and Negus for the Abyssinians. The name of Moses' Pharaoh was Qabus, according to the People of the Book. Wahb said: His name is Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, and his nickname is Abu Marra, and he is from Banu Amalek bin Lawdh bin Iram bin Sam bin Noah, peace be upon him. Al-Suhayli said: And everyone who ruled the Copts and Egypt is a Pharaoh. He was a Persian from the people of Istakhr. Al-Mas'udi said: There is no known explanation for Pharaoh in Arabic. Al-Jawhari said: Pharaoh is the title of Al-Walid bin Mus'ab, the king of Egypt, and every Aat is a Pharaoh. The Aat are the Pharaohs, and he has become Pharaoh, meaning cunning and wicked. In the hadith:

We seized Pharaoh of this nation. Pharaoh is in the accusative case, but it is not declined because it is foreign.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: They make you taste it. It was said: Its meaning is that they make you taste it and force it upon you. Abu Ubaidah said: They make you take it upon yourselves. It is said: He made him taste a plan of defeat if he made it upon him. From this is the saying of Amr ibn Kulthum:

If the king humiliates the people, we refuse to accept the humiliation among us.

It was said: They will continue to torture you. And the word sawm means continuity, and from it the word sai'at al-ghanam means their continuous grazing. Al-Akhfash said: It is in the nominative case as the subject, and if you wish, it is in the accusative case as a state, meaning they will continue to graze you.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: evil torment is the second object of they subject you and its meaning is the most severe torment. It may also mean the most evil torment. It may also be an adjective, meaning evil torment. It was narrated that Pharaoh made the Children of Israel servants and slaves and divided them into his works, so a group built, a group plowed and planted, and a group served - and his people were soldiers of kings - and whoever among them was not in any of these works was subjected to a tax, and that is why the torment was evil.

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

Ninth: The Almighty's saying: They slaughter your sons. They slaughter without the waw as a substitute for His saying: They treat you with punishment, as he said - Sibawayh recited:

When you come to visit us in our homes, you will find abundant firewood and a blazing fire.

Al-Farra' and others said: They slaughter without the waw is an explanation of the statement: They subject you to the worst torment, just as you say: The people Zayd and Amr came to me, so you do not need the waw in Zayd. Similar to it is: And whoever does that will meet a sin, "The torment will be doubled for him." In Surat Ibrahim, they slaughter is with the waw, because the meaning is that they torment you with slaughter and without slaughter. So his statement: They slaughter your sons is another type of torment, and there is no explanation for what came before it. And God knows best.

I said: It may be possible to say that the waw is redundant, as evidenced by Surat Al-Baqarah, and the waw may be redundant. He did not say:

When we passed the neighborhood square and he went away

That is, he has withdrawn. Another said:

To the venerable king, the son of the hero, and the lion of the battalion in the crowded place

The king wanted the brave son of the lion of the battalion, and he was a lot.

Tenth: The Almighty said: They slaughter The group reading with emphasis on the multiplicity. Ibn Muhaisin read They slaughter with the opening of the ba. And slaughtering: splitting. And slaughtering: the slaughtered. And the slaughtering: a crack in the roots of the fingers. And I slaughtered the world: I uncovered it. And Saad the slaughterer: one of the lucky ones. And the slaughterhouses: the prayer niches. And the slaughterhouses: the plural of a slaughterhouse, and when a flood comes and digs a hole in the ground, then what is the size of a handspan or the like is called a slaughterhouse. So Pharaoh used to slaughter the children and keep the girls, and he referred to them by the name of women with money. A group said: They slaughter your sons, meaning the men, and they were called sons because they were like that, and this speaker provided evidence with his saying: your women. The first is more correct, because it is more apparent, and God knows best.

Eleventh: God Almighty attributed the action to the people of Pharaoh, and they were only doing it by his command and authority, because they were in charge of it themselves, and so that it may be known that the one who directly does it is held accountable for his action. Al-Tabari said: It requires that whoever ordered someone to kill him, the one who was ordered is the one who is held accountable for it.

I said: The scholars differed on this issue with three opinions: They are both to be killed, the one by his order and the one who is ordered to do it directly. This is what Al-Nakha'i said, and Al-Shafi'i and Malik said in detail. Al-Shafi'i said: If the ruler orders a man to kill a man and the one ordered knows that he ordered him to be killed unjustly, then he and the ruler are to be punished as two killers together. If the ruler forces him to do it and knows that he is killing him unjustly, then the ruler is to be punished. There are two opinions regarding the one ordered: One of them is that he is to be punished. The other is that he is not to be punished and he is to pay half the blood money, as narrated by Ibn Al-Mundhir. Our scholars said: The one ordered is either one who is obligated to obey the one who orders and fears his evil, such as the ruler or the master of his slave, in which case the blood money is obligatory for both of them, or he is one who is not obligated to do it, so he is to be killed directly without the one who ordered, such as a father who orders his son, or a teacher who orders some of his children, or a craftsman who orders some of his students if the latter has reached puberty. If he has not reached puberty, then the killing is on the one who ordered, and half the blood money is on the boy's family. Ibn Nafi' said: The master is not to be killed if he orders his slave - even if he is a foreigner - to kill a person. Ibn Habib said: I say with the statement of Ibn Al-Qasim that killing is upon both of them. As for the order of someone who does not fear that the one being ordered may disobey, then it is not considered coercion, rather the one being ordered is to be killed but not the one giving the order, and the one giving the order is to be beaten and imprisoned. Ahmad said about the master who orders his slave to kill a man: The master is to be killed. This statement was narrated on the authority of Ali ibn Abi Talib and Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with them. Ali said: The slave is to be put in prison. Ahmad said: The slave is to be imprisoned, beaten and disciplined. Al-Thawri said: The master is to be disciplined. Al-Hakam and Hammad said: The slave is to be killed. Qatadah said: They are both to be killed. Al-Shafi'i said: If the slave is eloquent, he understands the reason for killing the slave and the master is to be punished. If the slave is a foreigner, then the master is to be punished. Sulayman ibn Musa said: The one who gave the order is not to be killed, but his hands are to be cut off, then he is to be punished and imprisoned - which is the second statement - and the one being ordered is to be killed for directly doing so. Likewise, Ata', Al-Hakam, Hammad, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and Ishaq said about a man who orders another man to kill another man, and Ibn Al-Mundhir mentioned it. Zafar said: Neither of them should be killed - and this is the third opinion - Abu Al-Ma'ali narrated it in Al-Burhan, and he saw that neither the one who orders nor the one who does it should be subject to retaliation, so neither of them should be killed in his view. And God knows best.

Twelfth: The majority read yadhbihun with emphasis for exaggeration. Ibn Muhaisin read yadhbihun with emphasis. The first is more likely because the slaughtering is repeated. According to what was narrated, Pharaoh saw in his dream a fire coming out of Jerusalem and burning the houses of Egypt, so his dream was interpreted for him: a child from the Children of Israel would grow up and his kingdom would be destroyed by his hands. Other than this was said, but the meaning is close.

Thirteenth: The Almighty's saying: And in that refers to the imperative sentence, since it is report, so it is like a present singular, meaning that in their doing that to you there is a trial, meaning a test and examination. And trial is a blessing, and from that is the saying of the Almighty: And that He may test the believers with a good trial. Abu Al-Haitham said: Trial can be good and bad, and its origin is the ordeal, and God the Almighty tests His servant with good deeds to test his gratitude, and tests him with the trial that he dislikes to test his patience, so it is said of good a trial, and of bad a trial, as Al-Harawi narrated. Some people said: The reference in that is to salvation, so the trial according to this is in good, meaning your salvation is a blessing from God upon you. The majority said: The reference is to slaughtering and the like, and the trial here is in evil, and the meaning is: And in slaughtering there is dislike and a test. Ibn Kaysan said: And it is said of good that God tested him and afflicted him, and he recited:

May God reward them for what they did to you and give them the best of trials.

So he combined the two languages. And most of the time, I tested him in goodness, and most of the time, I tested him in evil, and in testing, I tested him and tested him, said Al-Nahas.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: Remember, O Children of Israel, My favor upon you when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh who were subjecting you to the worst of torment, meaning I saved you from them, and rescued you from their hands in the company of Moses, peace be upon him, and they were subjecting you to the worst of torment, meaning they were subjecting you to the worst of torment, and that is because Pharaoh, may God curse him, had seen a vision that terrified him, he saw a fire coming out of the Holy House and entering the homes of the Copts in the land of Egypt except the homes of the Children of Israel, the gist of which was that the end of his kingdom would be at the hands of a man from the Children of Israel, and it is said after his companion spoke to him that the Children of Israel were expecting the emergence of a man from among them who would give them power and elevation, and this is what came in the hadith of the trials as will come in its place in Surat Taha, God willing, then Pharaoh, may God curse him, ordered the killing of every male born after that from the Children of Israel and that the daughters be left, and he ordered the Children of Israel to be employed in the hardest and most degrading jobs, here he interpreted the torment as the slaughter of the sons, and in Surat Ibrahim he connected it as He said: They subject you to the worst torment, slaughter your sons and keep your women alive. The explanation of that will come at the beginning of Surat Al-Qasas, God willing. It means trust, assistance and support. The meaning of they subject you to the worst torment is that they give you authority, Abu Ubaidah said, just as it is said that he gave him a plot of defeat if he gave it to him. Amr ibn Kulthum said:

If the king humiliates the people, we refuse to accept the humiliation among us.

It was said that its meaning is: They perpetuate your torment, as it is said that the sheep are grazing from their continuous grazing. Al-Qurtubi transmitted it. Rather, he said here: They slaughter your sons and spare your women so that this would be an explanation of the blessing upon them in his statement: They subject you to the worst of torment. Then he explained it with this because of his statement here: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you. As for Surat Ibrahim, when he said: And reminded them of the days of God, meaning of His favors and blessings upon them, it was appropriate to say there: They subject you to the worst of torment and slaughter your sons and spare your women. So he connected the slaughtering to it to indicate the multiplicity of the favors and blessings upon the Children of Israel. Pharaoh was a name for every unbeliever who ruled Egypt from the Amalekites and others, just as Caesar was a name for every unbeliever who ruled the Romans with the Levant, and Khosrau for whoever ruled Persia, and Tubba for whoever ruled Yemen as an unbeliever, and the Negus for whoever ruled Abyssinia, and Ptolemy for whoever ruled India. It is said that it was the name of the Pharaoh who was in the time of Moses, peace be upon him. Peace be upon Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, and it was said Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, so he was from the lineage of Amalek bin Al-Awd bin Iram bin Sam bin Noah, and his nickname was Abu Marra, and his origin was Persian from Istakhr, and whoever he was, the curse of God is upon him, and the Almighty said: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord. Ibn Jarir said: And in what We did to you of saving your fathers from the torment of the people of Pharaoh, there is a great trial for you from your Lord, meaning a great blessing upon you in that, and Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The Almighty's saying: A great trial from your Lord he said: A blessing, and Mujahid said: A great trial from your Lord he said: A great blessing from your Lord, and so said Abu Al-'Aliyah, Abu Malik, Al-Suddi and others, and the origin of the trial is the test and it may be with good and evil as the Almighty said: And We test you with evil and good as a trial and He said: And We tested them with good and bad that perhaps they will return Ibn Jarir said: And what is most often said about evil is that We tested it with a trial, and about good, We tested it with a test. And a calamity, Zuhair bin Abi Salma said:

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

May God reward them for what they did to you and give them the best of trials.

He said: He combined the two languages because he wanted, so God bestowed upon them the best of blessings with which He tests His servants. It was said: What is meant by His saying: And in that is a trial for you is a reference to the humiliating torment they were in, such as the slaughter of sons and the enslavement of women. Al-Qurtubi said: This is the saying of the majority, and its wording is after he narrated the first saying, then he said: The majority said: The reference is to slaughter and the like, and the trial here is in evil, and the meaning in slaughter is something hated and tested, and the saying of God Almighty: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on, its meaning is after We saved you from the people of Pharaoh and you went out with Moses, peace be upon him, Pharaoh went out in pursuit of you, so We parted the sea for you as God Almighty informed about that in detail as will come in its places, and one of the simplest of them is what is in Surat Ash-Shu'ara, God willing, So We saved you means We delivered you from them and separated you from them and drowned them while you were looking on, so that this would be more healing for your hearts and more effective in humiliating your enemy. Abdul Razzaq said: Ma'mar informed us on the authority of Abu Ishaq Al-Hamadani on the authority of Amr bin Maymun Al-Adwi regarding the words of God Almighty: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on, he said: When Moses went out with the Children of Israel, report of that reached Pharaoh, so he said: Do not follow them until the roosters crow. He said: By God, no rooster crowed that night until morning came, so he called for a sheep and slaughtered it, then he said: I will not finish its liver until six hundred thousand Copts gather to me. So when Moses reached the sea, a man from his companions called Joshua bin Nun said to him: Where is the command of your Lord? He said: In front of you, pointing to the sea, so Joshua plunged his horse into the sea until he reached the depths, and the depths carried him away, then he returned and said: Where is the command of your Lord, O Moses? By God, I did not lie, nor did I lie. He did that three times, then God inspired Moses to strike the sea with his staff. So he struck it, and it split, and each part was like a great mountain. Then Moses and those with him walked, and Pharaoh followed them on their way until they were all in it, God closed it over them. That is why He said: And We drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on. And more than one of the predecessors said the same, as will be explained in its place. It has been reported that this day was the Day of Ashura, as Imam Ahmad said. Affan told us, Abdul-Warith told us, Ayoub told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina and saw the Jews fasting on the Day of Ashura. He said: What is this day that you are fasting? They said: This is a good day. This is the day on which God Almighty saved the Children of Israel from their enemy, so Moses, peace be upon him, fasted on it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I have more right to Moses than you. So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, fasted on it and ordered its fasting. And this was narrated. The hadith of Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah, through chains of transmission on the authority of Ayoub Al-Sakhtiyani, is similar to what was mentioned above. Abu Ya'la Al-Mawsili said: Abu Al-Rabi' told us, Salam told us, meaning Ibn Salim, on the authority of Zaid Al-Ami, on the authority of Yazid Al-Raqashi, on the authority of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: God split the sea for the Children of Israel on the Day of Ashura. This is weak from this aspect, because Zaid Al-Ami is weak, and his sheikh, Yazid Al-Raqashi, is weaker than him.

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 49- When We saved you is related to His saying: Remember and salvation: is the salvation from the earth and it is what is elevated from it, then every victor was called a survivor. And the family of Pharaoh: his people, and the origin of the family of people is evidenced by its diminutive of Ahel, and other things were said, and it is added to those in danger. Al-Akhfash said: It is only said about the greatest leader like the family of Muhammad. And it is not added to the countries so it is not said from the family of Medina. Al-Akhfash said: We have heard it in the countries they said the family of Medina. And they differed as to whether it is added to the pronoun or not, so some people forbade it and others permitted it and it is the truth, and from it is the saying of Abdul Muttalib:

And grant victory to the family of the cross and its worshippers today, your family.

Pharaoh: It was said that it is the name of that particular king - and it was said that it is the name of every king of the giants, just as the Persian king Khosrau was called, the Roman king Caesar, and the Abyssinian king Negus. The name of the Pharaoh of Moses mentioned here is Qabus according to the People of the Book. Wahb said: His name is Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan. Al-Mas'udi said: There is no known explanation for Pharaoh in Arabic. Al-Jawhari said: Every arrogant person is called Pharaoh, and he has become arrogant and cunning: meaning cunning and deceitful. And he said in Al-Kashaf: Someone became arrogant and haughty. The meaning of his saying: They make you suffer is that they make you give it to them, Abu Ubaidah said, and it was said: They make you taste it and force it upon you, and the origin of saum is continuity, and from it is the grazing of sheep for their constant grazing, and it is said: Samah Khattat Khasf: if he gave it to him. And he said in Al-Kashaf: Its origin is from the word sama al-sal'a if he asked for it, as if it means they want you to suffer the worst punishment and want you to suffer it. And the worst of the torment: its most severe, and it is an attribute of a deleted source: that is, they subject you to a worst of torment, and it is permissible for it to be a second object, and this sentence is in the nominative case as a predicate for an implied subject, and it is permissible for it to be in the accusative case as a state: that is, they subject you to it. And his saying: They slaughter and what follows it is a substitute for his saying: They subject you to it. Al-Farra' said: It is an explanation of what came before it, and the group read it with emphasis, and Ibn Muhaisin read it with emphasis. And slaughtering in origin: is the splitting, and it is the ripping of the jugular vein of the slaughtered. What is meant by the saying of God the Almighty: And they spare your women is that they leave them alive to use them and degrade them, and he only ordered the slaughter of the sons and the spare of the daughters because the priests informed him that a child would be born who would be killed by his hand, and he referred to the daughters with the name of women because it is a genus that applies to girls. A group said: He ordered the slaughter of men and they used his saying: Your women as evidence, and the first is more correct as evidence of the reason, and it is not hidden what is in killing sons and taking daughters as slaves for service and the like of inflicting humiliation upon them and attaching severe insult to all of them because of the shame in that. The reference in his saying: And in that is to the whole of the command. And the trial is sometimes used to mean good, and sometimes to mean evil, so if what is meant here is evil, then the reference in his saying: And in that is a trial is to what befell them of punishment by slaughtering and the like, and that it is from their preference over the worlds. The predecessors and those who came after them differed in the reference of the reference, so the majority preferred the first, and the others preferred the other. Ibn Jarir said: What is said most often about evil is I tested it with a trial, and about good I tested it with testing and a trial. Zuhair said:

May God reward them for what they did to you and give them the best of trials.

He said: He combined the two languages because He wanted to bestow upon them the best of blessings with which He tests His servants.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

49. And when We saved you meaning: your ancestors and forefathers, so He considered it a favor to them because they were saved by their salvation from the people of Pharaoh: his followers and people of his religion, and Pharaoh is Al-Walid Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, and he was from the Copts of the Amalekites and he lived for more than four hundred years They subjected you they burdened you and made you taste the worst of the torment the most severe and worst of the torment. It was said: They sent you through the torment sometimes like this and sometimes like grazing camels in the wilderness, and that is because Pharaoh made the Children of Israel servants and slaves and divided them into jobs, so a group built, a group plowed and planted, and a group served him, and whoever among them was not in work he imposed the jizya on him.

Wahb said: They were divided into groups in Pharaoh's work. The strong ones carved masts out of the mountains until their necks and hands became sore and their backs were turned from cutting and moving them. A group carried stones, a group built palaces for him, a group of them beat bricks and cooked bricks, a group were carpenters and blacksmiths, and the weak ones were subjected to a tax that they paid every day. If the sun set on him before he paid his tax, his right hand would be chained to his neck for a month. The women spun flax and wove. It was said: Its interpretation is the mention of what follows: They slaughter your sons, so it is mentioned in place of his saying: They subject you to the worst torment, "and spare your women," leaving them alive. This is because Pharaoh saw in his dream that a fire came from Jerusalem and surrounded Egypt and burned every Copt in it, but did not attack the Children of Israel. This frightened him and he asked the priests about his vision? They said: A boy will be born among the Children of Israel, at whose hand your destruction and the end of your kingdom will be. So Pharaoh ordered the killing of every boy born among the Children of Israel, and he gathered the midwives and said to them: Do not let a boy from the Children of Israel fall into your hands except that he will be killed, and no girl will fall into your hands except that he will be left alone. He was put in charge of the midwives, and they did that until it was said: Twelve thousand boys were killed among the Children of Israel in pursuit of Moses. Wahb said: It was reported to me that ninety thousand newborns were slaughtered in pursuit of Moses, peace be upon him. They said: Death has hastened the elders of the Children of Israel, so the leaders of the Copts came to Pharaoh and said: Death has befallen the Children of Israel, so will you slaughter their young and their old die, and will the work soon befall us? So Pharaoh ordered that they slaughter one year and leave another year. So Aaron was born in the year in which they did not slaughter, and Moses was born in the year in which they did slaughter.

And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord. It was said: The trial is the ordeal, meaning that in their giving you a terrible punishment is a great trial. And it was said: The trial is the blessing, meaning that in My saving you from them is a great blessing. So the trial can mean the blessing and the hardship, so God Almighty may test you with gratitude for the blessing, and with patience for the hardship. God Almighty said: And We test you with evil and with good as trial 35-Al-Anbiya.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

49- And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh is a detail of what He summarized in His statement: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you. And in conjunction with My favor is the conjunction of Gabriel and Michael with the angels, and it was read I delivered you. The origin of Al is Ahl because its diminutive is Ahil, and it was specific to those of importance like the prophets and kings. And Pharaoh is a title for those who ruled the giants like Khosrau and Caesar for the kings of Persia and Rome. And La'athum is derived from it the man became arrogant and haughty, and the Pharaoh of Moses was Mus'ab bin Rayyan, and it was said his son was from the remnants of Aad. And the Pharaoh of Joseph, peace be upon him, was Rayyan and there were more than four hundred years between them.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:49

And when We delivered you from the people of Pharaoh, who were afflicting you with the worst torment, slaughtering your sons and sparing your women. And in that was a great trial from your Lord.

They seek you means they seek you, from the root word samahu khasfan which means to treat someone unjustly. The root of sawam is to go in search of something.

The worst of the torment is the most terrible, for it is ugly in comparison to the rest of it. Evil is the source of saa'a yusu'u and its accusative is the object of yasuwa'akum. The sentence is a state of the pronoun in Najinakum, or of the family of Pharaoh, or of both of them because it contains the pronoun of each one of them.

They slaughter your sons and keep your women alive. This is a statement that they will make you suffer, and that is why it was not connected, and it was read they slaughter with a light pronunciation. They did that to them because Pharaoh saw in a dream, or the priests told him: One will be born from them who will take away his kingdom, so their efforts did not prevent anything from God's decree.

And in that is a trial for you is a trial, if it refers to their actions, and a blessing if it refers to salvation. Its origin is choice, but since God Almighty's choice of His servants is sometimes a trial and sometimes a test, it is applied to both of them. It is permissible for that to refer to the whole and to mean the common test between them.

From your Lord by giving them power over you, or by sending Moses, peace be upon him, and granting him success in saving you, or both. Great is an attribute of affliction. The verse draws attention to the fact that whatever good or evil befalls the servant is a test from God Almighty, so he must be grateful for his path and be patient with its harm in order to be among the best of those tested.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:50

And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And remember when We parted and threw for you because of you the sea until you entered it fleeing from your enemy and We saved you from drowning and We drowned the people of Pharaoh his people with him while you were looking on at the sea closing over them

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

As for the interpretation of his saying: And when We parted you, it is an appositive to And when We saved you, meaning: And remember My favor that I bestowed upon you, and remember when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh, and when We parted the sea for you.

The meaning of his saying: We divided you is We divided the sea with you. Because they were twelve tribes, He divided the sea into twelve paths, and each tribe of them took one of them. So that is how God Almighty divided the sea with them and separated it with them, by distributing them into His twelve paths, as:

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: When Musa came to the sea, he called it Abu Khalid, and he struck it and it split, and each part was like a huge mountain, so the Children of Israel entered. And there were twelve paths in the sea, and in each path was a tribe.

Some Basra grammarians said: The meaning of his saying: And when We parted the sea for you is that We parted between you and the water.

He means by that: We separated you from him, and kept him where you passed by.

This is contrary to what appears in the recitation, because God, may He be glorified and exalted, only informed us that He parted the sea with the people, and He did not inform us that He parted the people from the sea. So the interpretation is what those who said this statement said. And His parting the sea with the people is only His parting the sea with them, as we described of His parting of the path with them, as the narrations have come.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: So We saved you and drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on.

Abu Jaafar said: If someone asks us, How did God, the Most High, drown the people of Pharaoh and save the Children of Israel?

It was said to him, as:

Ibn Humayd narrated, Salamah narrated, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Shaddad ibn al-Haad, who said: It was mentioned to me that Pharaoh went out in pursuit of Moses with seventy thousand dark horses, in addition to the light horses in his army. Moses went out, and when he faced the sea and there was no way for him to turn away from it, Pharaoh appeared with his army from behind them, And when the two hosts saw each other, the companions of Moses said, 'Indeed, we are to be overtaken.' He said, 'No! Indeed, with me is my Lord; He will guide me.' (Ash-Shu'ara': 61-62), meaning to safety, and He promised me that, and He never breaks His promise.

Ibn Humayd told us, Salamah told us, Ibn Ishaq told me: God revealed to the sea, as I was told: When Moses strikes you with his staff, it will split for him. He said: So the sea spent the night striking each other out of fear of God and waiting for His command. Then God Almighty revealed to Moses: Strike the sea with your staff, so he struck it with it, and in it was the authority of God that He had given him, and it split, and each part was like a huge mountain, that is, like a mountain on a high part of the earth. God said to Moses: "Then strike for them a dry path in the sea. You will not fear being overtaken, nor will you be afraid" (Ta-Ha 20:77). So when the sea settled for him on a dry path, Moses walked through it with the Children of Israel, and Pharaoh followed him with his soldiers.

Ibn Humayd narrated, Salamah narrated, Muhammad ibn Ishaq narrated, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Shaddad ibn al-Haad al-Laythi, who said: I was told that when the Children of Israel entered the sea and not one of them remained, Pharaoh approached on one of his horses until he stopped on the edge of the sea, standing as he was, and the horse was afraid to pass through. Then Gabriel appeared to him on a fine female mare, so he brought her close to him. The stallion smelled her, and when he smelled her, he put her forward, and the horse advanced with her, riding Pharaoh. When Pharaoh's soldiers saw that Pharaoh had entered, they entered with him, and Gabriel was in front of him, and they were following Pharaoh, and Michael was on a horse behind the people leading them, saying: Catch up with your companion. Even when Gabriel separated from the sea with no one in front of him, and Michael stood on the other side, with no one behind him, the sea closed over them, and Pharaoh called out when he saw what he saw of the power and might of God Almighty, and he knew his humiliation, and his soul had let him down: There is no god except the One in whom the Children of Israel believe, and I am of the Muslims (Yunus 10:90).

Al-Hasan bin Yahya narrated, he said: Abdul-Razzaq narrated, he said: Muammar narrated, on the authority of Abu Ishaq Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Amr bin Maymun Al-Awdi, regarding the words of God: {And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on}, he said: When Moses went out with the Children of Israel, report of that reached Pharaoh, so he said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:50

And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on.

Do not follow them until the rooster crows. He said: By God, no rooster crowed that night until morning came. So he called for a sheep and slaughtered it, then he said: I will not finish its liver until six hundred thousand Copts have gathered to him. So he did not finish its liver until six hundred thousand Copts had gathered to him. Then he set out, and when Moses came to the sea, a man from his companions called Joshua bin Nun said to him: Where did your Lord command you, O Moses? He said: In front of you, pointing to the sea. So Joshua plunged his horse into the sea until he reached the depths, and it went with him, then he returned. He said: Where did your Lord command you, O Moses? By God, I did not lie nor did I lie. So he did that three times. Then God, the Most High, inspired Moses: Strike the sea with your staff, and it parted, and each part was like a great mountain. (al-Shu'ara 26:63) He said: Like a mountain. He said: Then Moses and those with him set out, and Pharaoh followed them on their way, until when they had completed it, God closed it over them. That is why He said: And We drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on. Muammar said, Qatadah said: There were six hundred thousand with Moses, and Pharaoh followed him on one million and one hundred thousand horses.

Abdul Karim bin Al-Haitham told me, he said, Ibrahim bin Bashir Al-Ramadi told us, he said, Sufyan told us, he said, Abu Saeed told us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: God, the Almighty, revealed to Moses, Travel with My servants by night, for you will be pursued. He said: So Moses traveled with the Children of Israel by night, and Pharaoh pursued them with a million horses, besides females, and Moses was with six hundred thousand. When Pharaoh saw them, he said: "Indeed, these are but a small band. And indeed, they are a source of anger to us. And indeed, we are all on guard." (Ash-Shu'ara: 54-56) So Moses traveled with the Children of Israel until they attacked the sea, and they turned around and saw the raging beasts of Pharaoh, so they said: O Moses, we were harmed before you came to us and after you came to us. This sea is in front of us, and here is Pharaoh and those with him have overwhelmed us. He said: Perhaps your Lord will destroy your enemy and make you successors on the earth and see how you act. He said: Then God, the Most High, inspired Moses to strike the sea with his staff, and He inspired the sea to listen to Moses and obey when he strikes you. He said: So the sea was trembling for him, meaning: It was trembling and he did not know from which side to strike it. He said: Then Joshua said to Moses: What have you been commanded to do? He said: I have been commanded to strike the sea. He said: Strike it. He said: So Moses struck the sea with his staff, and it split and there were twelve paths in it, each path like a great mountain. So each tribe had a path they would take. When they took the path, some of them said to one another: Why do we not see our companions? They said to Moses: Where are our companions that we do not see them? He said: Go, for they are on a path like yours. They said: We will not be satisfied until we see them.

Sufyan said, Ammar Ad-Dahni said: Moses said: O God, help me with their bad behavior. He said: So God revealed to him: Say with your staff like this. And Abraham motioned with his hand, moving it over the sea. Moses said with his staff on the walls like this, and there were windows in them so that some of them could look at each other.

Sufyan said: Abu Saeed said, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: So they set out until they came out of the sea. When the last of Moses' people crossed, Pharaoh and his companions charged into the sea. Pharaoh was riding a black horse with a fine tail. When he charged into the sea, the horse was afraid to plunge into the sea, so Gabriel appeared to him on a fine female horse. When the horse saw her, he plunged after her. And it was said to Moses: Leave the sea alone. He said: Keep it as it is. He said: And Pharaoh and his people entered the sea. When the last of Pharaoh's people entered, and the last of Moses' people crossed, the sea closed over Pharaoh and his people, and they drowned.

Musa bin Harun narrated to us, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat bin Nasr narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: God commanded Moses to go out with the Children of Israel, and He said: Travel with My servants by night, for you will be pursued. So Moses and Aaron went out with their people, and death was cast upon the Copts, and every firstborn man died. They began burying them, and they were busy from pursuing them until the sun rose. Then God, the Most High, says: Then pursue them at sunrise (Ash-Shu'ara': 60). So Moses was at the rear of the Children of Israel, and Aaron was in front of them, leading them. The believer said to Moses: O Prophet of God, where have you been commanded? He said: The sea. So he wanted to storm in, but Moses stopped him. Moses went out with six hundred thousand and twenty thousand fighters, not counting the twenty-year-old because of his young age, nor the sixty-year-old because of his old age, but they counted those in between, except for the offspring. And Pharaoh followed them, and at his head was Haman with one million seven hundred thousand horses, not including a female, and that is when God the Most High says: "So Pharaoh sent gatherers among the cities. Indeed, these are but a small band" (Ash-Shu'ara': 53-54), meaning the Children of Israel. So Aaron advanced and struck the sea, but the sea refused to open, and he said: Who is this tyrant who is striking me? Until Moses came to it, and he called him Abu Khalid, and struck it, and it split, and each section was like a great mountain, he said: Like a great mountain, so the Children of Israel entered. And there were twelve paths in the sea, and in each path was a tribe, and the paths were split with walls, so each tribe said: Our people have been killed! When Moses saw that, he called upon God, and He made them for them arches like arches, so the last of them looked at the first of them, until they had all come out. Then Pharaoh and his companions approached, and when Pharaoh saw the sea split, he said: Do you not see the sea splitting from me? It has been opened for me so that I may catch up with my enemies and kill them! That is when God, the Most High, says: And We brought near, then the others (Ash-Shu'ara': 64). He says: We brought near, then the others, meaning the people of Pharaoh. So when Pharaoh stood at the mouths of the roads, his horses refused to rush in, so Gabriel descended upon Madhyana, and the fortress was blown by the wind of Madhyana, so he rushed in after it, until when the first of them were about to leave and the last of them had entered, he ordered the sea to take them, so it crashed over them.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: When Pharaoh took the land from them to the sea, Pharaoh said to them: Tell them to enter the sea if they are truthful! When Moses' companions saw them, they said: We will surely be overtaken! He said: No, my Lord is with me, He will guide me. Moses said to the sea: Do you not know that I am the Messenger of God? It said: Yes! It said: Do you know that these are servants of God's servants, and He has commanded me to bring them? It said: Yes. It said: Do you know that this is an enemy of God? It said: Yes. It said: Then separate a path for me and for those with me. It said: O Moses, I am only a slave, and I have no command except that God Almighty commands me. Then God the Almighty inspired the sea: When Moses strikes you with his staff, it will disperse. And He inspired Moses to strike the sea, and he recited the words of God the Almighty: Then strike for them a dry path in the sea, fearing neither overtaking nor being afraid (Ta-Ha 20:77). And he recited His words: And leave the sea as a plain (al-Dukhan 44:24), so it dispersed into twelve groups, and each tribe took a different path. They said to Pharaoh: They have entered the sea! He said: Enter upon them. He said: And Gabriel was at the end of the Children of Israel saying to them: Let the last of you catch up with the first of you. And at the beginning of Pharaoh's family he said to them: Slowly, let the last of you catch up with the first of you. So each tribe in the sea said to the tribe that had entered before them: They are lost! When that entered their hearts, God the Almighty inspired the sea, so it made bridges for them, so that these would look at those, until when the last of these came out and the last of these entered, God commanded the sea to close over those.

What he means by his saying: And you are watching, is that you are watching God's parting of the sea for you, and His destruction of Pharaoh's people in the place where He had forced you to leave, and His great power in what He showed you of the sea's obedience to Him, of its becoming a heap of sand splitting apart like towering mountains, not moving from its limit, in obedience to God's command and submission to His obedience, while it was liquid and melting before that.

Thus, He, the Most High, stops them at the place of His proofs against them, and reminds them of His blessings from their forefathers, and warns them that in their denial of our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, what happened to Pharaoh and his family, in their denial of Moses, may God bless him and grant him peace, will happen to them.

Some Arabists have claimed that the meaning of his statement, And you are watching, is like the meaning of someone saying, I struck and your family is watching, but they did not come to you or help you, meaning: and they are close by, in sight and hearing, and like the statement of God Almighty, Have you not seen how your Lord extended the shadow? (al-Furqan 25:45), and there is no seeing, rather it is knowledge.

Abu Ja'far said: What led him to this interpretation is that he interpreted his statement: And you are watching, meaning while you are watching Pharaoh's drowning. He said: They were too busy to look at what surrounded them from the sea to Pharaoh and his drowning. The interpretation that he interpreted is not the interpretation of speech, rather the interpretation is: And you are watching God part the sea for you as we have described earlier and the waves of the sea crashing against Pharaoh's family, in the place that He made for you a dry path in the sea. And that was, without a doubt, a vision of the eye, not a vision of knowledge, as the one who said the statement that we have recounted thought.

God Almighty says: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on.

God the Almighty said: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you If is in the accusative case. And We parted, so We split, so each part was like a great mountain, meaning a great mountain. The root of parting is separation, and from it is parting of hair, and from it is the furqan, because it separates between the throat and falsehood, meaning it separates, and from it is: So the discriminators are parting meaning the angels descend to distinguish between truth and falsehood, and from it is: The Day of the Criterion meaning the Day of Badr, in which there was a difference between truth and falsehood, and from it is: And a Qur'an We have divided meaning We have separated it and perfected it. Al-Zuhri read: Farqana with a shaddah on the ra', meaning We made it a difference. And the meaning of by you is for you, so the ba' is in the meaning of the lam. It was said: The ba' is in its place, meaning We parted the sea by your entering it. That is, they became between the two waters, so the difference was between them, and this is more appropriate as explained by Fanfaqa.

The Almighty said: The sea. The sea is well-known, and it was named thus because of its vastness. It is said: a seahorse if it has a wide running course, meaning a lot. And from that is "the saying of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, regarding the recommended horse of Abu Talha: If we found it a sea." And the sea is salt water. And it is said: the water is salty, Naseeb said:

The water of the earth has become a sea again, and it has made me sicker to drink fresh water.

The sea: the town. It is said: This is our sea, meaning our town. Al-Umawi said it. The sea: the barrage that befalls a person. They say: I met him in the desert of the sea, meaning exposed and exposed. In the report on the authority of Ka'b al-Ahbar, he said: God has an angel called Sandfa'il, all the seas are in the hollow of his thumb. Abu Na'im mentioned it on the authority of Thawr bin Yazid on the authority of Khalid bin Ma'dan on the authority of Ka'b.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:50

And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on.

The Almighty said: So We saved you meaning We took you out of it. It is said: I was saved from such-and-such with a long salvation and salvation with a short salvation. And truthfulness is salvation. And I saved someone else and I saved him, and it was recited with them both: And when We saved you, so We saved you.

The Almighty said: And We drowned Pharaoh's people. It is said: He drowned in the water, so he is drowned and also drowned. From this is the saying of Ibn al-Najm:

Between the murdered and the drowned

And someone else drowned him and drowned him, so he is drowned and drowned. And a bridle is drowned with silver, meaning decorated. And drowning means killing. Al-A'sha said:

Oh, if only Qais had been drowned by the midwives

This is because the midwife used to drown the newborn in amniotic fluid in the year of drought, whether male or female, until he died. Then he made every killing a drowning, and from this is the saying of Dhu al-Rummah:

If its suburbs are drowned, then the folds of the ball in the wilderness will not become merciful to its robbers.

Arbad: ropes. Bakrah: young female camel. Thaniha: her second belly. She was not attached to her young because of the fatigue she had suffered.

The statement on the scholars' disagreement on how the Children of Israel were saved

Al-Tabari mentioned that it was revealed to Moses, peace be upon him, to travel from Egypt with the Children of Israel. Moses ordered them to borrow jewelry and goods from the Copts, and God permitted that to the Prophet of Israel. Moses traveled with them at the beginning of the night, and informed Pharaoh, who said: No one should follow them until the roosters crow. Not a single rooster was counted in Egypt that night. God caused many of the Copts to die that night, so they were busy burying the dead and went out with the followers at sunrise, as God Almighty said: So they followed them at sunrise. Moses went to the side of the sea until he reached it. The number of the Children of Israel was more than six hundred thousand. Pharaoh's number was one million and two hundred thousand. It was said that Pharaoh followed him with one million horses, in addition to the females. It was said that Israel - that is, Jacob, peace be upon him - entered Egypt with seventy-six souls from his children and his children's children, so God increased their number and blessed his descendants, until they went out to the sea on the day of Pharaoh, and they were six hundred thousand fighters, in addition to the elderly, children, and women. Abu Bakr Abdullah bin Muhammad bin Abi Shaiba said: Shababah bin Suwar narrated to us on the authority of Yunus bin Abi Ishaq on the authority of Abi Ishaq on the authority of Amr bin Maimun on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud that when Moses, peace be upon him, was taken on the night journey with the Children of Israel, he reached Pharaoh and he ordered a sheep to be slaughtered. Then he said: No, by God, I will not finish skinning it until I have six hundred thousand Copts. Moses set off until he reached the sea and said to him: Go away. The sea said to him: You have been arrogant, Moses! Have you ever gone away for anyone from the children of Adam, so that I may go away for you? Moses said: And with Moses was a man on his horse. That man said to him: Where have you been commanded, O Prophet of God? He said: I have only been commanded in this manner. He said: So he charged his horse and it glorified God and came out. He said: Where have you been commanded, O Prophet of God? He said: I have only been commanded in this manner. He said: By God, you have neither lied nor been lied to. Then he charged a second time and glorified God with it until it came out. He said: Where have you been commanded, O Prophet of God? He said: I was only commanded in this manner. He said: By God, I have neither lied nor been lied to. He said: Then God revealed to him: Strike the sea with your staff. So Moses struck it with his staff, and it split, and each part was like a great mountain. So there were twelve parts in it, for twelve tribes, each tribe had a path through which they could see one another. This is because the mountains of water have arches and windows through which they could see one another. When the companions of Moses went out and the companions of Pharaoh stood up, the sea surged over them and drowned them. It is mentioned that the sea is the Sea of Qulzum, and that the man who was with Moses on the horse was his servant Joshua bin Nun. And that God Almighty revealed to the sea to split for Moses when he strikes you, so the sea spent that night in a state of turmoil. When the sea awoke and he called it Abu Khalid, Ibn Abi Shaybah also mentioned it. The commentators have mentioned many stories of this meaning, and what we have mentioned is sufficient. More clarification will come in Surat Yunus and Ash-Shu'ara, God willing.

Chapter: God Almighty mentioned the salvation and drowning, but He did not mention the day on which that happened. Muslim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas:

"The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina and found the Jews fasting on the day of Ashura. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: What is this day that you are fasting? They said: This is a great day on which God saved Moses and his people and drowned Pharaoh and his people, so Moses fasted it in gratitude, so we fast it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: We are more deserving and closer to Moses than you are." So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, fasted it and ordered that it be fasted. Al-Bukhari also narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and "that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to his companions: You are more deserving of Moses than they are, so fast."

Question: The apparent meaning of these hadiths indicates that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, fasted on Ashura and ordered its fasting in imitation of Moses, peace be upon him, as the Jews had told him. But this is not the case, as Aisha, may God be pleased with her, narrated that she said:

"The Quraysh used to fast on the day of Ashura during the pre-Islamic era, and the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to fast on it during the pre-Islamic era. When he came to Medina, he fasted on it and ordered that it be fasted. When Ramadan was made obligatory, fasting on the day of Ashura was abandoned. So whoever wishes may fast it, and whoever wishes may leave it." Narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim.

If it is said: It is possible that the Quraysh fasted it because the Jews informed them, because they used to listen to them, because they were people of knowledge, so the Prophet, peace be upon him, fasted it in the pre-Islamic era, that is, in Mecca. When he came to Medina and found the Jews fasting it, he said: We are more deserving and closer to Moses than you are, so he fasted it in imitation of Moses. And he ordered its fasting, that is, he made it obligatory and emphasized his command, until they used to fast it as children. We say: This is the doubt of those who said: Perhaps the Prophet, peace be upon him, was worshipping according to the law of Moses, and he is not like that, as will be explained in Al-An'am when God Almighty says: So follow their guidance.

Question: There is a difference of opinion regarding the day of Ashura. Is it the ninth of Muharram or the tenth? Al-Shafi'i said that it is the ninth, based on the hadith of Al-Hakam ibn Al-A'raj, who said:

I went to Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with him while he was lying on his cloak in Zamzam, and I said to him: Tell me about fasting on Ashura. He said: When you see the crescent of Muharram, count and fast on the ninth day. I said: Is this how Muhammad (blessings and peace of God be upon him) used to fast? He said: Yes. Narrated by Muslim. Saeed bin Al-Musayyab, Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Malik and a group of the Salaf were of the view that it was the tenth. Al-Tirmidhi mentioned the hadith of Al-Hakam and did not describe it as authentic or good. Then he added: Qutaybah informed us, Abd Al-Warath informed us, on the authority of Yunus, on the authority of Al-Hasan, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said:

The Messenger of God (peace be upon him) ordered fasting on the tenth day of Ashura. Abu Eisa said: The hadith of Ibn Abbas is a good and authentic hadith. At-Tirmidhi said: It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Fast the ninth and tenth and differ from the Jews. Ash-Shafi'i, Ahmad ibn Hanbal and Ishaq said this hadith. Others said: Ibn Abbas's statement to the questioner: So count and fast on the ninth day does not indicate abandoning fasting on the tenth. Rather, he promised to fast the ninth in addition to the tenth. They said: Fasting on the two days reconciles the hadiths. Ibn Abbas' statement to Al-Hakam when he said to him: Is this how Muhammad (peace be upon him) used to fast? He said: Yes. Its meaning is that if he had lived, otherwise the Prophet (peace be upon him) would never have fasted on the ninth. This is explained by what Ibn Majah reported in his Sunan and Muslim in his Sahih on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: The Messenger of God (peace be upon him) said:

If I live until next year, I will fast on the ninth day.

Virtue: Abu Qatada narrated that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Fasting on the day of Ashura, I hope that God will expiate for the sins of the previous year. Narrated by Muslim and Al-Tirmidhi. He said: We do not know of any of the narrations in which he said: Fasting on the day of Ashura is expiation for the sins of the previous year, except in the hadith of Abu Qatada.

God the Almighty said: And you are watching is a phrase in the position of a state, and its meaning is with your eyes, so it is said that the people of Pharaoh floated on the water and they saw them drowning, and themselves being saved, so in this is the greatest favor. It has also been said: They were brought out for them until they saw them. So this is a favor after a favor. It has also been said: The meaning is And you are watching i.e. with your insights, considering, because they were too busy to stand and look with their eyes. It has also been said: The meaning is and you are in a state of looking if he looked, as you say: This matter from you is in sight and hearing, i.e. in a state that you see and hear it if you wish. This statement and the first are more similar to the state of the Children of Israel due to the successive lack of consideration in what the Children of Israel did after they came out of the sea, and that is because when God the Almighty saved them and their enemy drowned, they said: O Moses, our hearts are not reassured that Pharaoh has drowned! Until God ordered the sea to vomit him out and they looked at him.

Abu Bakr bin Abi Shaybah narrated on the authority of Qais bin Abbad that the Children of Israel said: Pharaoh did not die and he would never die! He said: When God heard their denial of His Prophet, peace be upon him, He threw him on the shore of the sea like a red bull that the Children of Israel could see. When they were reassured and sent by land to the cities of Pharaoh until they transported his treasures and were drowned in comfort, they saw a people devoted to their idols. They said: O Moses, make for us a god as they have gods. Until Moses rebuked them and said: Should I seek a god for you other than God while He has favored you over the worlds, meaning the worldly people of his time? Then He ordered them to go to the Holy Land where their fathers lived and to purify themselves from the land of Pharaoh. The Holy Land was in the hands of the tyrants who had overcome it, so they needed to repel them from it by fighting. They said: Do you want to make us flesh for the tyrants? If you had left us in the hands of Pharaoh, it would have been better for us. He said: O my people, enter the

And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on.

Holy Land which God has assigned to you until He said sitting until He invoked curses upon them and called them wicked. So they remained in the wilderness for forty years as punishment, then He had mercy on them and bestowed upon them quails and clouds - as will be explained - then Moses went to Mount Sinai to bring them the Torah, so they took the calf - as will be explained - then it was said to them: "You have reached the Holy House, so enter the gate prostrating and say 'Forgiveness' - as will be explained - and Moses, peace be upon him, was very shy and modest, so they said: He is a leper." So when he washed himself, he put his garment on the stone, so the stone ran with his garment to the gatherings of the Children of Israel, and Moses was following him naked and saying: O stone, my garment! This is what God Almighty said: O you who believe, do not be like those who harmed Moses, but God cleared him of what they said, as will be explained later. Then when Aaron died, they said to him: You killed Aaron and were jealous of him, until the angels descended to his bed while Aaron was dead on it. This will be mentioned in Al-Ma'idah. Then they asked him to teach them a sign for the acceptance of their sacrifice, so a fire began to come from the sky and accept their sacrifice. Then they asked him to explain to us the expiations for sins in this world. So whoever committed a sin, it was written on his door: I did such and such, and its expiation is the cutting off of a limb of yours, naming it for him. And whoever is affected by urine, he is not purified until he cuts it and removes its skin from his body. Then they changed the Torah and fabricated lies about God and wrote with their own hands and bought with it an offering. Then their affair reached the point that they killed their prophets and messengers. This is their treatment of their Lord, their conduct in their religion, and their bad morals. Each of these chapters will be explained in full in its place, God willing. Al-Tabari said: In the Qur'an's accounts on the tongue of Muhammad, peace be upon him, of these unseen matters that were not known to the Arabs and did not occur except to the Children of Israel, there is clear evidence for the Children of Israel that Muhammad, peace be upon him, was a prophet.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: Remember, O Children of Israel, My favor upon you when We saved you from the people of Pharaoh who were subjecting you to the worst of torment, meaning I saved you from them, and rescued you from their hands in the company of Moses, peace be upon him, and they were subjecting you to the worst of torment, meaning they were subjecting you to the worst of torment, and that is because Pharaoh, may God curse him, had seen a vision that terrified him, he saw a fire coming out of the Holy House and entering the homes of the Copts in the land of Egypt except the homes of the Children of Israel, the gist of which was that the end of his kingdom would be at the hands of a man from the Children of Israel, and it is said after his companion spoke to him that the Children of Israel were expecting the emergence of a man from among them who would give them power and elevation, and this is what came in the hadith of the trials as will come in its place in Surat Taha, God willing, then Pharaoh, may God curse him, ordered the killing of every male born after that from the Children of Israel and that the daughters be left, and he ordered the Children of Israel to be employed in the hardest and most degrading jobs, here he interpreted the torment as the slaughter of the sons, and in Surat Ibrahim he connected it as He said: They subject you to the worst torment, slaughter your sons and keep your women alive. The explanation of that will come at the beginning of Surat Al-Qasas, God willing. It means trust, assistance and support. The meaning of they subject you to the worst torment is that they give you authority, Abu Ubaidah said, just as it is said that he gave him a plot of defeat if he gave it to him. Amr ibn Kulthum said:

If the king humiliates the people, we refuse to accept the humiliation among us.

It was said that its meaning is: They perpetuate your torment, as it is said that the sheep are grazing from their continuous grazing. Al-Qurtubi transmitted it. Rather, he said here: They slaughter your sons and spare your women so that this would be an explanation of the blessing upon them in his statement: They subject you to the worst of torment. Then he explained it with this because of his statement here: Remember My favor which I bestowed upon you. As for Surat Ibrahim, when he said: And reminded them of the days of God, meaning of His favors and blessings upon them, it was appropriate to say there: They subject you to the worst of torment and slaughter your sons and spare your women. So he connected the slaughtering to it to indicate the multiplicity of the favors and blessings upon the Children of Israel. Pharaoh was a name for every unbeliever who ruled Egypt from the Amalekites and others, just as Caesar was a name for every unbeliever who ruled the Romans with the Levant, and Khosrau for whoever ruled Persia, and Tubba for whoever ruled Yemen as an unbeliever, and the Negus for whoever ruled Abyssinia, and Ptolemy for whoever ruled India. It is said that it was the name of the Pharaoh who was in the time of Moses, peace be upon him. Peace be upon Al-Walid bin Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, and it was said Mus'ab bin Al-Rayyan, so he was from the lineage of Amalek bin Al-Awd bin Iram bin Sam bin Noah, and his nickname was Abu Marra, and his origin was Persian from Istakhr, and whoever he was, the curse of God is upon him, and the Almighty said: And in that is a great trial for you from your Lord. Ibn Jarir said: And in what We did to you of saving your fathers from the torment of the people of Pharaoh, there is a great trial for you from your Lord, meaning a great blessing upon you in that, and Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The Almighty's saying: A great trial from your Lord he said: A blessing, and Mujahid said: A great trial from your Lord he said: A great blessing from your Lord, and so said Abu Al-'Aliyah, Abu Malik, Al-Suddi and others, and the origin of the trial is the test and it may be with good and evil as the Almighty said: And We test you with evil and good as a trial and He said: And We tested them with good and bad that perhaps they will return Ibn Jarir said: And what is most often said about evil is that We tested it with a trial, and about good, We tested it with a test. And a calamity, Zuhair bin Abi Salma said:

May God reward them for what they did to you and give them the best of trials.

He said: He combined the two languages because he wanted, so God bestowed upon them the best of blessings with which He tests His servants. It was said: What is meant by His saying: And in that is a trial for you is a reference to the humiliating torment they were in, such as the slaughter of sons and the enslavement of women. Al-Qurtubi said: This is the saying of the majority, and its wording is after he narrated the first saying, then he said: The majority said: The reference is to slaughter and the like, and the trial here is in evil, and the meaning in slaughter is something hated and tested, and the saying of God Almighty: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on, its meaning is after We saved you from the people of Pharaoh and you went out with Moses, peace be upon him, Pharaoh went out in pursuit of you, so We parted the sea for you as God Almighty informed about that in detail as will come in its places, and one of the simplest of them is what is in Surat Ash-Shu'ara, God willing, So We saved you means We delivered you from them and separated you from them and drowned them while you were looking on, so that this would be more healing for your hearts and more effective in humiliating your enemy. Abdul Razzaq said: Ma'mar informed us on the authority of Abu Ishaq Al-Hamadani on the authority of Amr bin Maymun Al-Adwi regarding the words of God Almighty: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on, he said: When Moses went out with the Children of Israel, report of that reached Pharaoh, so he said: Do not follow them until the roosters crow. He said: By God, no rooster crowed that night until morning came, so he called for a sheep and slaughtered it, then he said: I will not finish its liver until six hundred thousand Copts gather to me. So when Moses reached the sea, a man from his companions called Joshua bin Nun said to him: Where is the command of your Lord? He said: In front of you, pointing to the sea, so Joshua plunged his horse into the sea until he reached the depths, and the depths carried him away, then he returned and said: Where is the command of your Lord, O Moses? By God, I did not lie, nor did I lie. He did that three times, then God inspired Moses to strike the sea with his staff. So he struck it, and it split, and each part was like a great mountain. Then Moses and those with him walked, and Pharaoh followed them on their way until they were all in it, God closed it over them. That is why He said: And We drowned Pharaoh's people while you were looking on. And more than one of the predecessors said the same, as will be explained in its place. It has been reported that this day was the Day of Ashura, as Imam Ahmad said. Affan told us, Abdul-Warith told us, Ayoub told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina and saw the Jews fasting on the Day of Ashura. He said: What is this day that you are fasting? They said: This is a good day. This is the day on which God Almighty saved the Children of Israel from their enemy, so Moses, peace be upon him, fasted on it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I have more right to Moses than you. So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, fasted on it and ordered its fasting. And this was narrated. The hadith of Al-Bukhari, Muslim, Al-Nasa'i and Ibn Majah, through chains of transmission on the authority of Ayoub Al-Sakhtiyani, is similar to what was mentioned above. Abu Ya'la Al-Mawsili said: Abu Al-Rabi' told us, Salam told us, meaning Ibn Salim, on the authority of Zaid Al-Ami, on the authority of Yazid Al-Raqashi, on the authority of Anas, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: God split the sea for the Children of Israel on the Day of Ashura. This is weak from this aspect, because Zaid Al-Ami is weak, and his sheikh, Yazid Al-Raqashi, is weaker than him.

Fath al-Qadir

And his saying: 50- And when We separated is related to what came before from his saying: Remember. And We separated: We split, and the origin of separation is separation, and from it is the separation of poetry, and Al-Zuhri read Farqana with emphasis, and the Baa in his saying: By you it was said: it is in the meaning of the Laam: meaning for you, and it was said: it is the causal Baa: meaning We separated it because of you, and it was said: the preposition and the noun are in the place of the state: meaning We separated it while it was covered by you, and what is meant here is that the separation of the sea was by them: meaning because of their entry into it: meaning when they were between the two waters, the separation occurred with them. The origin of the sea in the language: vastness, it was applied to the sea that is opposite the land because of its vastness in relation to the river and the gulf, and it is applied to salty water, and from it the sea is salty, Naseeb said:

The water of the earth has become a sea again, and it has made me sicker to drink fresh water.

And His statement: So We saved you means We took you out of it, and We drowned the people of Pharaoh in it. And His statement: And you were looking is in the accusative case as a state: that is, while you were looking at them with your eyes. And it was said that its meaning is: And you were looking: that is, some of you were looking at others of those traveling in the sea. And it was said: They looked at themselves being saved and at the people of Pharaoh being drowned. What is meant by the people of Pharaoh here is him and his people and followers. Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Umar ibn al-Khattab that when he recited Remember My favor which I have bestowed upon you he said: The people have passed away, and what he meant by it is you. And Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Sufyan ibn Uyaynah who said regarding His statement: Remember My favor is the favors of God and His days.

And when We parted the sea for you and saved you and drowned the people of Pharaoh while you were looking on.

And Abd ibn Hamid narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: The favor of God that He bestowed upon the Children of Israel in what He mentioned and in other than that, He caused the stone to flow for them and sent down upon them manna and quails and saved them from the slavery of the people of Pharaoh. Abd al-Razzaq and Abd ibn Humayd narrated from Qatadah regarding his statement: And I have preferred you over the worlds, he said: They were preferred over the world they were in, and every era has a scholar. Abd ibn Humayd narrated something similar from Mujahid. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Jarir narrated from Abu al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: I have preferred you over the worlds, he said: Because of what they were given of kingship, messengers, and books over whoever was in that era, for every era has a scholar. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from al-Suddi regarding his statement: No soul can avail another soul at all, he said: A believing soul can not avail a disbelieving soul at all. Ibn Jarir narrated from Amr ibn Qays al-Mala'i from a man from Banu Umayyah from the people of Ash-Sham, who praised him highly, he said: "It was said: O Messenger of God, what is justice? He said: Justice is ransom." Ibn Jarir and Ibn al-Mundhir narrated something similar from Ibn Abbas. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Something similar was narrated from Abu Malik, al-Hasan, Sa'id ibn Jubayr, Qatadah, and al-Rabi' ibn Anas. Abdul Razzaq narrated on the authority of Ali in the interpretation of Al-Sarf and Al-Adl, he said: Voluntary and obligatory. Ibn Kathir said: This statement is strange here, and the first statement is more evident in the interpretation of this verse. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The priests said to Pharaoh that a child will be born this year who will take away his kingdom, so Pharaoh will appoint a hundred men for every thousand women, ten for every hundred, and a man for every ten. He said: Look at every pregnant woman in the city, and when she gives birth to her child, if it is a boy, slaughter him, and if it is a girl, leave her alone. This is what God says: They slaughter your sons and spare your women. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aliyah in his statement: They subject you to the worst torment, he said: Pharaoh ruled them for four hundred years. The priests said to him: A boy will be born in Egypt this year, and he will destroy you. So he sent midwives among the people of Egypt. When a woman gives birth to a boy, he will be brought to Pharaoh and he will kill him, and he will spare the female slaves. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: A great trial from your Lord, he said: A punishment. Wakee' narrated on the authority of Mujahid something similar. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And when We parted the sea for you, he said: Yes, by God, He parted the sea between them until it became a dry path for them to walk on, so God saved them and drowned the people of Pharaoh, their enemy. It has been proven in the two Sahihs and others from the hadith of Ibn Abbas who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina and saw the Jews fasting on the day of Ashura, so he said: What is this day? They said: This is a good day on which God saved the Children of Israel from their enemy, so Moses fasted on it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: We have more right to Moses than you, so he fasted on it and commanded others to fast on it." Al-Tabarani and Abu Naim in Al-Hilya narrated on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair that Heraclius wrote to Muawiyah asking him about some matters, including the spot that the sun only hit for an hour. Muawiyah wrote to Ibn Abbas, who answered him about those matters and said: As for the spot that the sun only hit for an hour during the day, it is the sea that was released for the Children of Israel. Perhaps there will come, God willing, more to what is here when interpreting the words of God Almighty: Strike the sea with your staff, and it will part, and each portion will be like a great towering mountain.

50. And when We parted the sea for you It was said: its meaning is We parted for you and it was said: We parted the sea by your entering it and the sea was called a sea because of its vastness, and from it the Persians were called: a sea if it expanded in its flow, and that is because when the death of Pharaoh approached, God Almighty commanded Moses, peace be upon him, to travel with the Children of Israel from Egypt at night, so Moses commanded his people to saddle their houses until morning, and God Almighty brought out every fornicating child among the Copts from the Children of Israel to them, and every fornicating child among the Children of Israel/ from the Copts to the Copts until each returned to his father, and God cast death upon the Copts so every firstborn of theirs died and they were busy burying them until morning and the sun rose, and Moses, peace be upon him, went out with six hundred thousand and twenty fighters, not counting the twenty-year-old because of his young age, nor the sixty-year-old because of his old age, and on the day they entered Egypt with Jacob they were seventy-two people between men and women.

On the authority of Ibn Masoud, may God be pleased with him, he said: The companions of Moses were six hundred and seventy thousand.

On the authority of Amr bin Maimon, he said: They were six hundred thousand, and when they wanted to set out, they were struck by wandering, and they did not know where to go. So Moses called the elders of the Children of Israel and asked them about that. They said: When death approached Joseph, peace be upon him, he took a covenant from his brothers that they would not leave Egypt until they took him out with them. That is why the road was blocked for us. So he asked them about the location of his grave, but they did not know. So Moses stood up and called out: I call upon everyone by God who knows where the grave of Joseph, peace be upon him, is, to tell me about it. And whoever does not know, his ears are deaf to my words!

And he passed between the two men calling out, but they did not hear his voice until an old woman of theirs heard him and said: Tell me, if I guide you to his grave, will you give me everything I have asked you for? He refused and said: Until I ask my Lord so God the Most High ordered him to give her her request. She said: I am an old woman who cannot walk, so carry me and take me out of Egypt. This is in this world, but as for the hereafter, I ask you that you do not enter a room in Paradise except that you enter it with you. He said: Yes. She said: It is in the middle of the water in the Nile, so pray to God until the water recedes from it. So he prayed to God the Most High and the water receded from it, and he prayed to delay the rising of the dawn until he finished with the matter of Joseph, peace be upon him. So Moses, peace be upon him, dug that place and extracted him in a marble box, and carried him until he buried him in the Levant. So the road was opened for them, so they set out, with Moses, peace be upon him, at the rear and Aaron at the front. Pharaoh vowed to them, so he gathered his people and ordered them not to go out in pursuit of the Children of Israel until the rooster crowed. By God, the rooster did not crow that night. So Pharaoh went out in pursuit of the Children of Israel, and Haman was at the forefront with one million seven hundred thousand, and among them were sufficiency of thousand black horses, in addition to the rest of the sheep. [Muhammad bin Kaab, may God be pleased with him, said: There were one hundred thousand black horses in Pharaoh's army, in addition to all the other horses.] Pharaoh was in the dark, and it was said: Pharaoh was with seven thousand thousand, and before him were one hundred thousand archers, one hundred thousand spearmen, and one hundred thousand polemen. So the Children of Israel marched until they reached the sea and the water was very abundant, so they looked and saw Pharaoh when the sun rose, so they remained confused and said: O Moses, what should we do? And where is what you promised us? This is Pharaoh behind us, if we catch up with him, we will be killed! And the sea is in front of us, if we enter it, we will drown? God Almighty said: "So when the two hosts saw each other, the companions of Moses said: "Indeed, we are to be overtaken." He said: No! Indeed, my Lord is with me; He will guide me. 61-62 Ash-Shu'ara'.

Then God inspired him to strike the sea with his staff, so he struck it but it did not obey. Then God inspired him to be like him, so he struck it and said: Split, O Abu Khalid, by the permission of God Almighty. So it split and each part was like a huge mountain, and twelve paths appeared in it, one for each tribe, and the water rose between each two paths like a mountain. God sent the wind and the sun on the bottom of the sea until it became dry land. So the sons of Israel waded into the sea, each tribe in a path, and on both sides of them was the water like a huge mountain, and they could not see each other. They were afraid and each tribe said: Our brothers have been killed. Then God Almighty inspired the mountains of water to interlock, so the water became networks like layers, and they could see each other and hear each other's speech until they crossed the sea safely. That is what God Almighty said: And when We parted the sea for you.

"So We saved you" from the people of Pharaoh and drowning and We drowned the people of Pharaoh and that is because when Pharaoh reached the sea and saw it closed, he said to his al-Nas 114: Look at the sea, it split from my awe until it reached my servants who were left. Enter the sea. His people were afraid to enter it. It was said: They said to him, if you are a god, then enter the sea as Moses entered. Pharaoh was on a black horse, and there was no female horse among Pharaoh's horses. Gabriel came on a thin female horse and went ahead of them and waded into the sea. When the black Pharaoh smelled its scent, he stormed into the sea after it while they did not see him. Pharaoh had no control over his matter and he did not see Gabriel's horse. The horses stormed behind him in the sea. Michael came on a horse behind the people, urging them on and leading them so that no one of them would stray and he said to them: Catch up with your companions until they all waded into the sea. Gabriel came out of the sea, and they were the first to come out, so God Almighty commanded the sea to take them, so it crashed over them and drowned them all, and there was between The two ends of the sea are four parasangs, and it is the Sea of Qalzam, one end of the Persian Gulf. Qatada said: A sea beyond Egypt called Isaf, and that is within sight of the Children of Israel. That is what God Almighty said: And you are looking at their deaths, and it was said: at their destruction.

50- And when We parted the sea for you So We poured it over and separated some of it from others until paths were created in it by your walking in it. Or because of your salvation, or mixed with you as in His saying:

Skulls and turban trample us

It was read Faraqna in the form of multiplication because the paths were twelve, the number of the tribes.

So We saved you and drowned Pharaoh's people. He meant Pharaoh and his people, and he limited himself to mentioning them because it was known that he was more deserving of it. It was also said that he was mentioned personally, as it was narrated that Al-Hassan, may God be pleased with him, used to say: O God, bless the family of Muhammad, meaning he was mentioned personally, and mentioning him was sufficient without mentioning his followers.

And you are watching that, meaning their drowning and the sea closing in on them, or the sea splitting apart to reveal dry, accessible paths, or their bodies that the sea cast up on the shore, or some of you looking at others. It was narrated that God Almighty commanded Moses, peace be upon him, to travel with the Children of Israel, so he went out with them and Pharaoh and his soldiers came upon them, and he encountered them on the seashore, so God Almighty inspired him to strike the sea with his staff, so he struck it and twelve dry paths appeared in it, so they took them and said: O Moses, we fear that some of us will drown and we do not know, so God opened windows in them so they could see each other and listen to each other until they crossed the sea, then when Pharaoh reached it and saw it split apart, he and his soldiers rushed into it and it crashed down on them and drowned them all.

Know that this incident is one of the greatest blessings that God bestowed upon the Children of Israel, and one of the signs that compel knowledge of the existence of the Wise Creator and the belief of Moses, peace be upon him. Then, after that, they took the calf and said: We will not believe in you until we see God with our own eyes, and so on. They are isolated in their intelligence, cleverness, soundness of soul, and good following from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, even though what has been transmitted of his miracles are theoretical matters, such as the Qur'an, the challenge with it, and the virtues gathered in it that bear witness to the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, are subtle and understood by intelligent people, and his, may God bless him and grant him peace, telling of them is among his miracles, as was previously explained.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:51

And when We appointed for Moses forty nights, then you took the calf after him while you were wrongdoers.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when We appointed a thousand or less for Moses forty nights We would give him at the end of them the Torah so that you would act upon it then you took the calf which the Samaritan fashioned for you as a god after him that is, after he had gone to Our appointment and you were wrongdoers by taking it because you placed worship in the wrong place.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

The readers differed in reading this, some of them read: Wa'adna meaning that God the Almighty promised Moses to meet the mountain to commune with Him, so the promise was from God to Moses, and from Moses to his Lord. And their argument for choosing the reading Wa'adna over Wa'adna was that they said: Every promise that was between two people to meet and gather, each one of them promises the other that. Therefore, they claimed that it was necessary to decide for the reading of the one who read Wa'adna to be chosen over the reading of the one who read Wa'adna.

Some of them read: We promised, meaning that God is the one who promises and is the only one who can make a promise. Their argument for choosing this was that they said that promises are only made between people, but God, may He be glorified, is the only one who can make promises and threats in all good and evil. They said: This is what the revelation came with in the entire Qur'an, as God, may He be glorified, said: Indeed, God promised you the promise of truth (Ibrahim 14:22) and He said: And when God promised you one of the two parties that it would be yours (al-Anfal 8:7). They said: So it is necessary that He be the only one who can make a promise in His statement: And when We made a promise to Moses.

The correct view in this regard is that they are two readings that the Ummah has brought and that the Qur'an has recited, and that reciting one of them does not invalidate the meaning of the other, even if one of them has an additional meaning over the other in terms of appearance and recitation. As for what is understood from them, they are in agreement. This is because if someone reports that someone promised someone else a meeting in a certain place, it is known that the one promised that promised his companion a meeting in that place, like the one who promised his companion that, if he promised him what he promised him about that based on their agreement on it. It is known that the Lord did not promise Moses, peace be upon him, the Mount except with Moses' approval of that, since there is no doubt that Moses was satisfied with everything that God commanded him, and hastened to His love for him. It is reasonable that God Almighty did not promise Moses that except when Moses responded to it. Since that is the case, it is known that God Almighty promised Moses the Mount, and promised Moses the meeting. So God Almighty promised Moses and promised him the communion on Mount Sinai, and Moses promised his Lord and promised him the meeting. Whichever of the two readings of promised and promised the reader reads, he is correct in that from the point of view of interpretation and language, because of the reasons we described before.

There is no meaning in the statement of the speaker: Promises are only between people, and that God is the only one who makes promises and threats in all good and evil. This is because God's being the only one who makes promises and threats in reward and punishment, good and evil, benefit and harm, which are in His hand and belong to Him, without the rest of His creation, does not change the common speech among people in their use of it from its aspects, nor does it alter its meaning. The common speech among people that is understood is what we have described: that every promise between two people is a promise from each of them to his companion, and a promise between them, and that each of them has made a promise to his companion. The promise that is made by the one who makes the promise and not the one who is promised is only that which has the meaning of the promise, which is the opposite of the threat.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Moses.

Moses, as far as we have been told in Coptic, is two words that mean: water and tree. Fmo is water, and sha is tree. He was called that because his mother, when she put him in the chest when she feared for him from Pharaoh, threw him into the sea, as God had revealed to her. It was said that the sea in which she threw him was the Nile, the waves of the sea pushed him until they brought him in among the trees near Pharaoh's house. Then the maids of Asiya, Pharaoh's wife, went out to wash themselves, and they found the chest and took it. So he was called by the name of the place where he was struck, and that was a place with water and trees, so it was said: Moses, water and tree. Likewise: Moses bin Harun told me, he said Amr bin Hammad told us, on the authority of Asbat bin Nasr, on the authority of Al-Suddi.

Abu Jaafar said: He is Moses, son of Imran, son of Ishhar, son of Qahath, son of Levi, son of Jacob, Israel of God, son of Isaac, the sacrifice of God, son of Abraham, the friend of God, as Ibn Isaac claimed.

Ibn Hamid told me that. He said: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on his authority.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: forty nights.

This means: And when We appointed for Moses forty nights in their entirety. So the forty nights are all included in the appointment.

Some Basran grammarians claimed that its meaning is: And when We appointed for Moses the end of forty nights, i.e. the beginning of forty. And the same is said in His statement: And ask the town (Yusuf 12:82) and in their saying: Today is forty since so-and-so left, and today is two days. That is, today is the completion of two days, and the completion of forty.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:51

And when We appointed for Moses forty nights, then you took the calf after him while you were wrongdoers.

Abu Ja'far said: This is contrary to what the narrations of the people of interpretation have brought, and contrary to the apparent meaning of the recitation. As for the apparent meaning of the recitation, God Almighty has informed us that He promised Moses forty nights, so no one can refer the apparent meaning of His report to its hidden meaning without proof indicating its authenticity.

As for the people of interpretation, they said about that what I will mention, which is:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim narrated to me, he said, Adam narrated to us, he said, Abu Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And when We appointed for Moses forty nights, he said: He means Dhul-Qa'dah and ten days of Dhul-Hijjah. That was when Moses relieved his companions and appointed Aaron as their successor, so he remained on the Mount for forty nights, and the Torah was revealed to him on tablets, and the tablets were of cold, so the Lord brought him close to Him in private and spoke to him, and he heard the scratching of the pen. And it has reached us that he did not do anything during the forty nights until he came down from the Mount.

And I narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', something similar.

Ibn Humayd narrated to us, he said, Salamah ibn al-Fadl narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, he said: God promised Moses when He destroyed Pharaoh and his people, and saved him and his people for thirty nights, then completed it with ten, so the appointed time of his Lord was forty nights, during which his Lord would meet him as He wished. Moses appointed Aaron as his successor over the Children of Israel, and said: I am in haste to meet my Lord, so take my place among my people and do not follow the way of the corrupters. So Moses went out to his Lord, in haste to meet Him, longing for Him, and Aaron remained among the Children of Israel with the Samaritan, walking with them in the footsteps of Moses to catch up with him.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: Moses set out and appointed Aaron as his successor over the Children of Israel, and he appointed them thirty nights, and God completed them with ten.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Then you took the calf after him, while you were wrongdoers.

The interpretation of his statement: Then you took the calf after him, is: Then you took the calf as a god during the days of the appointment with Moses, after Moses had departed from you, heading to the appointment. The ha in his statement: after him refers back to the mention of Moses.

So, the Most High informed the opponents of our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Jews of the Children of Israel, the deniers, who were addressed by this verse, about the actions of their fathers and forefathers, and their denial of their messengers and their opposition to their prophets, despite the succession of His blessings upon them and the prevalence of His favors among them, informing them thereby that they are opponents of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their denial of him and their rejection of his message, despite their knowledge of his truthfulness on the same path as their fathers and forefathers, and warning them of the descent of His wrath upon them, due to their standing in that state of their denial of what descended upon their forefathers who denied the messengers: of transformation, cursing, and various types of punishments.

The reason for their adoption of the calf was: Abdul Karim bin Al-Haitham narrated to me, he said: Ibrahim bin Bashar Al-Ramadi narrated to us, he said: Sufyan bin Uyaynah narrated to us, he said: Abu Saeed narrated to us, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: When Pharaoh and his companions attacked the sea, Pharaoh was riding a black horse with a black tail. When he attacked the sea, the horse was afraid to plunge into the sea, so Gabriel appeared to him on a thin female horse. When the horse saw her, he plunged after her. He said: The Samaritan recognized Gabriel, because when his mother feared that he would be slaughtered, she left him in a cave and closed in on him. Gabriel would come to him and feed him with his fingers, and he would find milk in one of his fingers, honey in the other, and ghee in the other. He continued to feed him until he grew up. When he saw him in the sea, he recognized him, so he took a handful from the trace of his horse. He said: He took a handful from under the hoof. Sufyan said: Ibn Masoud used to recite it: So I took a handful from the traces of the Messenger (Ta-Ha 20:96).

Abu Saeed said, Ikrimah said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And it was thrown into the hand of the Samaritan: You do not throw it at anything and say: Be such and such, but it is. So the handful remained in his hand until he crossed the sea. So when Moses and the children of Israel crossed the sea, and God drowned the people of Pharaoh, Moses said to his brother Aaron: Take my place among my people and do good. And Moses went to meet his Lord. He said: And with the children of Israel were some jewelry from the jewelry of the people of Pharaoh that had been damaged, and it was as if they had sinned because of it, so they took it out so that the fire would descend and consume it. So when they had gathered it, the Samaritan said with the handful that was in his hand like this, so he threw it into it and Ibn Ishaq gestured with his hand like this and said: Be a calf, a body that moos. So it became a calf, a body that moos, and the wind would enter its anus and exit from its mouth, and a sound would be heard from it, so it said: This is your god and the god of Moses. So they devoted themselves to the calf, worshipping it. Then Aaron said, "O my people, you are only being tempted by it. And your Lord is the Most Merciful, so follow me and obey my command." They said, We will not cease to be devoted to it until Moses returns to us.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: When God commanded Moses to leave with the Children of Israel, meaning from the land of Egypt, Moses commanded the Children of Israel to leave, and he commanded them to borrow jewelry from the Copts. When God saved Moses and the Children of Israel with him from the sea, and the people of Pharaoh drowned, Gabriel came to Moses to take him to God. He came on a horse, and the Samaritan saw it and did not recognize it and said: It is the horse of life. So when he saw it, he said: This has something to do with it! So he took some of the dirt from the horse's hoof and Moses set out, and he appointed Aaron as his successor over the Children of Israel, and he appointed them thirty nights, and God completed them with ten. Then Aaron said to them: O Children of Israel, the spoils are not lawful for you, and the jewelry of the Copts is only spoils, so gather them all and dig a hole for them and bury them, and if Moses comes and makes them lawful, you will take them, and if not, it will be something that you will not eat. So they gathered that jewelry in that hole, and the Samaritan brought that handful and threw it, and from the jewelry God brought forth a calf with a body that bellowed. The Children of Israel made an appointment with Moses, so they counted the night as one day and the day as another. When the twenty days were complete, the calf came out to them. When they saw it, the Samaritan said to them: This is your god and the god of Moses, but he forgot, saying that Moses left his god here and went looking for him. So they devoted themselves to worshipping it, and it bellowed and walked. Then Aaron said to them: O Children of Israel, you are only being tested by it, meaning: You are only being tested by it, meaning: by the calf, and your Lord is the Most Merciful. So Aaron and those of the Children of Israel who were with him did not fight them, and Moses went to his god to talk to him. When he spoke to him, he said to him: What made you hasten to leave your people, O Moses? He said: They are following in my footsteps, and I hastened to You, my Lord, so that You may be pleased. He said: We have indeed tested your people after you, and the Samaritan has led them astray. So he told him their story. Moses said: O Lord, this Samaritan commanded them to make the calf. Did you see the spirit that was breathed into it? The Lord said: I did. He said: O Lord, it is you who led them astray.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, he said: It was mentioned to me that Moses said to the Children of Israel, as God had commanded him: Borrow from them, meaning from the people of Pharaoh, goods, jewelry, and clothing, for I will give you their wealth, even though they will perish. So when Pharaoh gave permission to the people, among the things he used to incite against the Children of Israel was that he said: When they set out, they were not satisfied to go out themselves, until they took your wealth with them.

Ibn Humayd narrated, Salamah narrated, Muhammad ibn Ishaq narrated, on the authority of Hakim ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Samaritan was a man from the people of Bajirma, and he was from a people who worshipped cows. He loved the worship of cows in his soul, and he had manifested Islam among the Children of Israel. When Aaron separated among the Children of Israel, and Moses separated to his Lord, Aaron said to them: You have carried burdens of the adornments of the people of Pharaoh, and goods, and jewelry, so purify yourselves from them, for they are impure. And he lit a fire for them and said: Throw whatever you have of that into it. They said: Yes. So they began to bring whatever they had of that goods and jewelry, and throw it into it until the jewelry in it broke. The Samaritan saw the mark of Gabriel's horse, so he took some dirt from the mark of its hoof, then he faced the fire and said to Aaron: O Prophet of God, should I throw what is in my hand? He said: Yes. Aaron thought that it was just like some of the jewelry and goods that others had, so he threw it into it and said: Be a calf with a body that moos, and it was, for the trial and the trial. He said: This is your god and the god of Moses. So they devoted themselves to him and loved him with a love they had never loved anything like him before. God Almighty says: So he forgot (Ta-Ha 20:10) meaning he left what he was upon of Islam, meaning the Samaritan. Do they not see that he does not return to them a word and does not possess for them any harm or benefit? (Ta-Ha 20:89) The name of the Samaritan was Moses bin Thafar and he was in the land of Egypt and entered the Children of Israel. When Aaron saw what they had fallen into, he said: O my people, you are only being tested by it, and your Lord is the Most Merciful, so follow me and obey my command. They said, We will never cease to be devoted to it until Moses returns to us. Taha 20:90-91 So Aaron remained with those Muslims who were with him who had not been tested, and those who worshipped the calf remained on the calf. Aaron feared that if he went with those Muslims who were with him, Moses would say to him: You have divided the Children of Israel and you did not respect my word. But he was fearful and obedient to him.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: When God Almighty saved the Children of Israel from Pharaoh, and drowned Pharaoh and those with him, Moses said to his brother Aaron: Leave my people behind me and reform and do not follow the path of the corruptors. He said: When Moses went out and ordered Aaron to do what he was ordered to do, and Moses went out in a hurry and pleased with God, Moses knew that if a man succeeds in fulfilling his master's need, he is pleased to hasten to him. He said: And when they went out, they borrowed jewelry and clothes from the people of Pharaoh, and Aaron said to them: These clothes and jewelry are not lawful for you, so gather a fire and throw him in it and burn him. He said: So they gathered a fire. He said: And the Samaritan had looked at the trace of Gabriel's mount, and he was on a female horse, and the Samaritan was among the people of Moses. He said: So he looked at its trace and took a handful of it, and his hand dried up on it. When the people of Moses threw the jewelry into the fire, and the Samaritan threw the handful with them, God Almighty made a golden calf for them, and the wind entered it and it moored. They said: What is this? The wicked Samaritan said: This is your god and the god of Moses, but he forgot, the verse until His saying: Until Moses returns to Us (Ta-Ha 20:88-91). He said: Until when Moses came to the appointment, God said: "And what made you leave your people in haste, O Moses? He said: They are on my heels." So he recited until he reached: Has the covenant been prolonged for you? (Ta-Ha 20:84-86).

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Then you took the calf after him. He said: The calf is the offal of a cow. He said: They borrowed it from the people of Pharaoh, so Aaron said to them: Take it out, purify yourselves from it, and burn it. And the Samaritan had taken some of the traces of Gabriel's horse and thrown it into it, and it flowed, and it was like a cavity for him into which the winds blew.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: It was called the calf because they were in a hurry and took it before Moses came to them.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similar to the hadith of al-Qasim on the authority of al-Hasan.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

Interpretation of his saying: And you are wrongdoers.

Meaning: And you are placing worship in the wrong place, because worship is only due to God Almighty, and you worshipped the calf out of injustice on your part, and placing worship in the wrong place. We have demonstrated in other places in our Book that the origin of all injustice is placing something in the wrong place, so that makes it unnecessary to repeat it in this place.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And when We appointed for Moses forty nights, then you took the calf after him while you were wrongdoers.

There are six issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And when We appointed for Moses forty nights. Abu Amr read

Wa'adna without an alif, and Abu Ubaid chose and preferred it and denied Wa'adna. He said: Because the promise is only made to humans, but as for God, the Almighty, He is the One who is unique in the promise and the threat. Based on this, we find the Qur'an, such as His Almighty's saying: He promised you the promise of truth, and His saying: God has promised those among you who believe and do righteous deeds, and His saying: And when God promised you one of the two parties that it would be yours. Makki said: Also, the apparent meaning of the wording in it is a promise from God to Moses, and there is no promise from Moses, so it must be interpreted as one, because the apparent meaning of the text is that the verb is attributed to God alone, and this is the reading of Al-Hasan, Abu Raja', Abu Ja'far, Shaybah, and 'Isa ibn 'Umar, and Qatadah and Ibn Abi Ishaq read it this way. Abu Hatim said: The reading of the general public in our view is Wa'adna without an alif, because the promise is most often between created beings and equals, each one of them promises his companion. Al-Jawhari said: Al-Mi'ad: The appointment, time and place. Makki said: The origin of the word Al-Mu'adah is two, and the reciprocal form may come from one in the speech of the Arabs. They said: I struck the sandal, "I treated the sick," and I punished the thief. The verb is from one. So the word Al-Mu'adah is from God specifically for Moses, as in the meaning of We promised, so the two readings have the same meaning. The preferred reading is Wa'adana with the alif because it means We promised in one of its two meanings, and because Moses must have a promise or acceptance that takes the place of the promise, so the reciprocal form is correct. Al-Nahhas said: The reading Wa'adana with the alif is better and more excellent, and it is the reading of Mujahid, Al-A'raj, Ibn Kathir, Nafi', Al-A'mash, Hamza and Al-Kisa'i. The statement of God Almighty God has promised those among you who believe and do righteous deeds has nothing to do with this, because We promised Moses is from the category of al-Mawafa', and this has nothing to do with the promise or threat, but rather it is from your saying: Your appointment is on Friday, and Your appointment is in such and such a place. The eloquent way in this is to say: I promised him. Abu Ishaq Al-Zajaj said: We promised here with the alif is good, because obedience in acceptance is like a promise. From God Almighty is a promise, and from Moses acceptance and following are like a promise. Ibn Atiyah said: Abu Ubaidah preferred We promised, but it is not correct, because Moses' acceptance of God's promise, his commitment, and his anticipation of it is like a promise.

Second: The Almighty said: Moses. Moses is a foreign name that is not declined because of its foreignness and definiteness. The Copts, according to what is narrated, say for water: Mo, and for trees: Sha. So when Moses was found in the chest near water and trees, he was named Moses. Al-Suddi said: When his mother feared for him, she put him in the chest and threw him into the sea - as God revealed to her - so she threw him into the sea between the trees near the house of Pharaoh. Then the maids of Asiya, Pharaoh's wife, went out to wash themselves and found him, so he was named after the place. Al-Naqqash and others mentioned that the name of the one who found him was Sabaoth. Ibn Ishaq said: Moses is Moses bin Imran bin Yizhar bin Qahath bin Levi bin Jacob Israel God bin Isaac bin Abraham, peace be upon him.

Third: The Almighty's saying: Forty nights. Forty is in the accusative case as the second object, and there is an omission in the speech. Al-Akhfash said: The meaning is, And when We appointed for Moses the completion of forty nights, as He said: And ask the town. And all of forty is included in the appointment.

And the forty, according to most commentators, are: Dhul-Qi'dah and ten of Dhul-Hijjah. This was after he crossed the sea and his people asked him to bring them a book from God, so he went out to the mountain with seventy of the best of the Children of Israel, and they ascended the mountain and he made an appointment with them until forty nights were complete, so they counted - according to what the commentators mentioned - twenty days and twenty nights, and they said we have broken our appointment. So they took the calf, and the Samaritan said to them: This is your god and the god of Moses, so they were reassured by his words. And Aaron forbade them and said: O my people, you are only being tested by it, and your Lord is the Most Merciful, so follow me and obey my command. They said, We will not cease to be devoted to it until Moses returns to us. So none followed Aaron or obeyed him in abandoning the worship of the calf except twelve thousand, according to what was narrated in the hadith. And all of them, more than two thousand thousand, rushed to worship Him. When Moses returned and found them in that state, he threw down the tablets, and six parts were removed from them, and one part remained, which was the lawful and the unlawful and what they needed. He burned the calf and threw it into the sea, and they drank from its water out of love for the calf. A yellowness appeared on their lips and their bellies swelled up. They repented, but their repentance was not accepted unless they killed themselves. This is what God Almighty said: Then repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. So they stood up with daggers and swords, one against the other, from sunrise until high noon, and they killed each other. No father asked about his son, nor son about his father, nor brother about his brother, nor anyone about anyone. Everyone who met him struck him with a sword and another struck him with the same, until Moses cried out to God, O my Lord, the Children of Israel have perished! So God had mercy on them and was generous with them with His grace, so He accepted the repentance of those who remained and made those who were killed among the martyrs, as will come.

Fourth: If it is said: Why did He mention the nights specifically and not the days? It is said to him: Because the night precedes the day, so it precedes it in rank, and therefore the date falls on it, so the nights are the first of the months and the days follow them.

Fifth: Al-Naqqash said: In this verse there is an indication of the connection of fasting, because if God the Almighty had mentioned the days, it would have been possible to believe that he broke his fast at night, but when He mentioned the nights, the strength of the statement required that he, peace be upon him, continued for forty days and their nights. Ibn Atiyah said: I heard my father say: I heard the ascetic Sheikh, the preacher Imam Abu al-Fadl al-Jawhari, may God have mercy on him, preaching to the people about seclusion with God and drawing close to Him in prayer and the like, and that this distracts from all food and drink, and he says: Where is the state of Moses in being close to God! And the connection of eighty days is transmitted from Jinn, who went to al-Khidr and said to his servant in part of a day: Bring us our lunch.

I said: And with this the Sufi scholars have proven the importance of continuous fasting, and that the best time is forty days. We will discuss continuous fasting in the verses of fasting in this surah, God willing. And in Al-A'raf there will be additional rulings for this verse when God Almighty says: And We appointed for Moses thirty nights, and the story of the calf will be explained in its nature and its lowering there and in Ta-Ha, God willing.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: Then you took the calf after him meaning you took it as a god after Moses. The root of I took is 'takhadatum from to take, and its weight is ifta'altum. The second hamza was made easy because two hamzas were not possible, so I took came, and the ya was confused in the inflection, and it came as an alif in yatakhadahu and a waw in mutakhadahu, so it was replaced by a fixed skin letter of the same type as what comes after it, which is the ta, and it was assimilated. Then the alif of connection was brought in for pronunciation. It may be dispensed with if the meaning of the speech is confirmation, like the Almighty's saying: Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God?' So the alif of connection was dispensed with by the alif of confirmation. The poet said:

Did the Lord bring report about their followers or did the heart return from its joy?

And similar to it in the Qur'an: He has revealed the unseen. "He has chosen the daughters." Were you arrogant or were you? The doctrine of Abu Ali al-Farisi is that you took, from the verb takhada not from takhada. "And you are wrongdoers" is a phrase in the place of a circumstantial. The meaning of wrongdoing has already been mentioned. Praise be to God.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in My pardoning you, when you worshipped the calf after Moses went to the appointed time with his Lord at the end of the appointed time, which was forty days and it is mentioned in Al-A'raf in the Almighty's saying: And We appointed for Moses thirty nights and completed them with ten It was said that it was: Dhul-Qa'dah in its entirety and ten of Dhul-Hijjah, and that was after their deliverance from Pharaoh and their rescue from the sea, and the Almighty's saying: And when We gave Moses the Scripture meaning the Torah and the Criterion which is what distinguishes between truth and falsehood and guidance and misguidance that you may be guided This was also

Surat al-Baqarah 2:51

And when We appointed for Moses forty nights, then you took the calf after him while you were wrongdoers.

after their exit from the sea as indicated by the context of the speech in Surat Al-A'raf, and the Almighty's saying: And We had certainly given Moses the Scripture after We had destroyed the former generations as insight for the people and guidance and mercy that they might remember It was said: The waw is redundant, and the meaning is We had certainly given Moses the Scripture, the Criterion, and this is strange, and it was said, it was conjoined with it even though the meaning is the same, as In the words of the poet:

She presented the leather to the reader, but he found her words to be lies and falsehoods.

The other said:

How wonderful is India and a land in which there is India and India from which distance and distance have come

Lying is the oath, and distance is distance. Antara said:

I came back from the ruins of an ancient era, stronger and more desolate than Umm Al-Haitham

So, he linked destitution to strengthening, and that is the same.

Fath al-Qadir

Abu Amr 51 read We promised without an alif, and Abu Ubaidah preferred it and denied We promised saying: Because the promise is only from humans, but from God it is the singularity of the promise. On this we found the Qur'an like His saying We promised you the promise of truth and His saying: And when God promised you one of the two parties and similar to it, Abu Hatim and Makki said, and they only said this in view of the origin of the reciprocal verb that it indicates participation in the origin of the action and is from each of the two promised and the like, but it may come to one in the speech of the Arabs as in their saying: I treated the sick, and I punished the thief, and I knocked on the sandal, and that is common in their speech. The majority read it as wa'adna. An-Nahhas said: This is better and more excellent. His statement, God has promised those who believe, has nothing to do with this, because wa'adna by Moses is from the category of al-mawafa', and it has nothing to do with wa'ad and wa'id promise but rather it is from your saying: Your appointment is on Friday, and Your appointment is in such-and-such a place, and the eloquent way to say this is: I promised him. Az-Zajjaj said: wa'adna with the alif here is good, because obedience in acceptance is like an appointment, so from God, the Exalted, is a promise and from Moses is acceptance. His statement, forty nights, Az-Zajjaj said: The estimate is the completion of forty nights, which according to most commentators are Dhul-Qa'dah and ten days of Dhul-Hijjah. He only mentioned the nights specifically and not the days because the night precedes the day, so it precedes it in rank. The meaning of his statement, Then you took the calf, is that you made the calf a god after him, meaning after Moses had gone to Mount Tur. Some commentators have mentioned that they counted twenty days and twenty nights. They said: Its time has changed, so they have taken the calf. This is not far from them, for they were following methods of obstinacy outside the laws of reason, contrary to what they were addressed with, and even what they saw with their own eyes. So it cannot be said: How do you count the days and nights in that manner, when He had made it clear to them in the promise that it was forty nights? He only called them wrongdoers because they associated partners with God and violated the appointment of their Prophet, peace be upon him. The sentence is in the accusative case as a state.

51. And when we promised is from the reciprocal verb that comes from the singular, like their saying: May God grant you good health, and I punished the thief, and I knocked on the sandal. Al-Zajjaj said: The command was from God and the acceptance was from Moses, so it was mentioned in the wording of the promise, and the people of Basra read and when We promised from the promise Moses an Arabic name, the Arabs (and Mu) in Hebrew means water and (and She) the tree, it was named thus because it was taken from between the water and the tree, then the voiced shin was changed to a seen in Arabic forty nights meaning its expiration: thirty of Dhul-Qi'dah and ten of Dhul-Hijjah, and the date was linked to the night and not the day because the months of the Arabs were based on the course of the moon, and the crescent only appears at night, and it was said: because the darkness is older than the light, and the creation of the night came before the day, God Almighty said: And a sign for them is the night from which We strip the day 37-Ya-Seen, and that is because when the Children of Israel were safe from their enemy and entered Egypt, they did not have a book or a law to which they could turn, so God promised Moses that He would send down to him the Torah, so Moses said to his al-Nas 114: I am going to the appointed time of your Lord, I will bring you a book in which there is an explanation of what you do and what you leave, and He appointed them forty nights, thirty of Dhul-Qi'dah And ten days of Dhul-Hijjah, and he appointed his brother Aaron as his successor over them. When the promise came, Gabriel came on a horse called the Horse of Life, which did not touch anything except that it revived, to take Moses to his Lord. When the Samaritan saw him, and he was a goldsmith from the people of Bajarmi, and his name was Mika - and Saeed bin Jubair said: He was from the people of Kerman, and Ibn Abbas said: His name was Musa bin Muzaffar, and Qatada said: He was from the Children of Israel from a tribe called Samarra - and he was a hypocrite who outwardly embraced Islam, and he was from a people who worshipped cows, so when he saw Gabriel on that horse and saw the places of the horse's feet turning green immediately, he said: This has something to do with it, so he took a handful of dirt from the hoof of Gabriel's horse, peace be upon him. Ikrimah said: It was instilled in his mind that if he threw something at something else, the Children of Israel had borrowed many ornaments from the people of Pharaoh when they wanted to leave Egypt on the pretext of a wedding for them, but God destroyed Pharaoh and those ornaments remained in the hands of the Children of Israel. So when Moses separated, the Samaritan said to the Children of Israel: The ornaments that you borrowed from the dwarf of Pharaoh are spoils of war and are not permissible for you, so dig a hole and bury them in it until Moses returns and decides what he thinks about them.

God.

Al-Suddi said: Aaron, peace be upon him, ordered them to throw it into a pit until Moses returned, so they did. When the ornaments were gathered, the Samaritan fashioned it into a calf in three days, then he threw into it the handful that he had taken from the dust of Gabriel's horse, peace be upon him, and it came out a calf of gold studded with jewels in the most beautiful way, and it bellowed. Al-Suddi said: It bellowed and walked, so the Samaritan said, This is your god and the god of Moses, but he forgot 88-Taha, meaning he left it here and went out looking for it.

The Children of Israel had broken their promise, so they counted the day and night as two days. When twenty days had passed and Moses had not returned, they fell into discord.

It was said: Moses had promised them thirty nights, then ten were added, so their trial was in those ten. When the thirty had passed and Moses had not returned, they thought that he had died, and they saw the calf and heard the Samaritan say that eight thousand of them had devoted themselves to the calf, worshipping it. It was said: All of them worshipped it except Aaron alone, so that is the saying of God Almighty: Then you took the calf meaning a god after him Ibn Kathir and Hafsa made the dhal clear from akhtadha and akhtadha and the others assimilate it. And you are wrongdoers harming yourselves with disobedience and placing worship in the wrong place.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

51- And when We appointed for Moses forty nights when they returned to Egypt after the destruction of Pharaoh, God promised Moses that He would give him the Torah, and He set for him a time of Dhul-Qi'dah and the first ten days of Dhul-Hijjah, and He referred to them as nights because they are the most beautiful months. Ibn Kathir, Nafi', Asim, Ibn Amir, Hamza, and Al-Kisa'i read We appointed because God Almighty promised him the revelation. And Moses, peace be upon him, promised him to come to the time at Mount Tur.

Then you took the calf as a god or an object of worship.

After him means after Moses, peace be upon him, or his passing.

And you are wrongdoers by associating others with

Surat al-Baqarah 2:52

Then We pardoned you after that that you might be grateful.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:52

Then We pardoned you after that that you might be grateful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Then We pardoned you We erased your sins after that the taking that you might be grateful for Our favor upon you

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of his statement: Then We pardoned you after that, is that we stopped hastening to punish you. After that, that is, after you took the calf as a god, as Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me. He said: Adam Al-'Asqalani told us. He said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Then We pardoned you after that, meaning: after you took the calf as a god.

As for the interpretation of his statement: Perhaps you will be grateful, he means by it: so that you will be grateful. The meaning of perhaps in this context is the meaning of so that. I have previously explained that one of the meanings of perhaps is so that, which is sufficient to not repeat it in this context.

The meaning of the statement is: Then We pardoned you after you took the calf as a god, so that you would thank Me for pardoning you, since pardon requires gratitude from people of reason and intelligence.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Then We pardoned you after that so that you might be grateful.

There are four issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: Then We pardoned you. Pardon is the pardon of God, the Almighty, of His creation. It may come after the punishment or before it, unlike forgiveness, which does not come with any punishment at all. Whoever deserves a punishment and it is left to him, he has been pardoned. Pardon is the erasure of the sin, meaning We erased your sins and overlooked you. It is taken from the saying: The wind erased the trace, meaning it made it go away. And the thing became abundant. It is one of the opposites, and from it is the Almighty's saying: until they pardoned.

Second: The Almighty's saying: After that meaning from your worship of the calf. The calf was called a calf because of their haste in worshipping it. And God knows best. The calf is the offspring of a cow. The calves are similar, and the plural is ajajil, and the female is ajalah. On the authority of Abu al-Jarrah.

Third: The Almighty's saying: Perhaps you will be grateful so that you may be grateful for God's forgiveness of you. The meaning of perhaps has already been mentioned. As for gratitude, in the language it means to appear, from His saying: A grateful animal, if fat appears on it more than what it is given of fodder. Its reality is praising a person for a good deed that He bestows upon you. As mentioned in Al-Fatihah. Al-Jawhari said: Gratitude is praising the doer of good for what he bestowed upon you of good. It is said: I thanked him. And with the letter lam it is more eloquent. Gratitude is the opposite of ingratitude. I thanked him like I thanked him. Al-Tirmidhi and Abu Dawud narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah on the authority of the Prophet, may God's prayers and peace be upon him, who said:

He who does not thank people does not thank God.

Al-Khattabi said: This statement has two meanings: One of them is that whoever is naturally ungrateful for people's blessings and does not thank them for their kindness, it is his habit to be ungrateful for God's blessings and not thank Him. The other meaning is that God, the Exalted, does not accept the servant's gratitude for His kindness to him, since the servant does not thank people for their kindness to him and is ungrateful for their kindness, because one of the two matters is connected to the other.

Fourth: In the worship of scholars regarding the meaning of gratitude, Sahl bin Abdullah said: Gratitude is striving to perform acts of obedience while avoiding sin in secret and in public. Another group said: Gratitude is acknowledging one's shortcomings in gratitude to the Benefactor, and for this reason God the Almighty said: Work, O family of David, in gratitude. David said: How can I thank You, O Lord, while gratitude is a blessing from You? He said: Now you have known me and thanked me, since you have known that gratitude from me is a blessing. He said: O Lord, show me the most hidden of Your blessings upon me. He said: O David, breathe. So David breathed. God the Almighty said: Who can count this blessing, night and day? Moses, peace be upon him, said: How can I thank You when the smallest blessing You have placed in my hand from Your blessings cannot be recompensed for all my work! So God revealed to him: O Moses, now you have thanked Me. Al-Junayd said: The true meaning of gratitude is the inability to thank. And from him he said: I was playing in front of Al-Sari Al-Saqti when I was seven years old, and there were a group of people in front of him talking about gratitude, so he said to me: O boy, what is gratitude? I said: Should I not cry over this word that Al-Sarri said to me? Al-Shabli said: Gratitude is humility, maintaining good deeds, opposing desires, performing acts of obedience, and observing the Almighty of the earth and the heavens. Dhu Al-Nun Al-Misri Abu Al-Fayd said: Gratitude is to those above you through obedience, to your equal through reward, and to those below you through kindness and favor.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in My pardoning you, when you worshipped the calf after Moses went to the appointed time with his Lord at the end of the appointed time, which was forty days and it is mentioned in Al-A'raf in the Almighty's saying: And We appointed for Moses thirty nights and completed them with ten It was said that it was: Dhul-Qa'dah in its entirety and ten of Dhul-Hijjah, and that was after their deliverance from Pharaoh and their rescue from the sea, and the Almighty's saying: And when We gave Moses the Scripture meaning the Torah and the Criterion which is what distinguishes between truth and falsehood and guidance and misguidance that you may be guided This was also after their exit from the sea as indicated by the context of the speech in Surat Al-A'raf, and the Almighty's saying: And We had certainly given Moses the Scripture after We had destroyed the former generations as insight for the people and guidance and mercy that they might remember It was said: The waw is redundant, and the meaning is We had certainly given Moses the Scripture, the Criterion, and this is strange, and it was said, it was conjoined with it even though the meaning is the same, as in the words of the poet:

So, he linked destitution to strengthening, and that is the same.

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 52- After that meaning after your worship of the calf, and the calf was called a calf because of their haste in worshipping it, so it was said, and it is nothing because the Arabs give this name to the offspring of a cow. And the Samaritan had made it for them in the form of a calf. And His saying: Perhaps you will be grateful meaning so that you will be grateful for what God has bestowed upon you of forgiveness for your great sin that you committed. The origin of gratitude in the language is: the appearance from their saying a grateful animal if fat appears on it in addition to what it is given of fodder. Al-Jawhari said: gratitude: is praising the benefactor for what he has given you of kindness, it is said: I thanked him and I thanked him, and with the lam it is more eloquent, and its meaning has been presented, and gratitude is the opposite of ingratitude.

52. Then We pardoned you We erased your sins after that "after your worship of the calf that you might be grateful" so that you might be grateful for My pardon of you and My favor to you. It was said: Gratitude is obedience with all the limbs in secret and in public. Al-Hasan said: Gratitude for a blessing is mentioning it. God Almighty said: "And as for the favor of your Lord, proclaim it" 11-Ad-Duha. Al-Fudayl said: Gratitude for every blessing is not to disobey God after that blessing. It was said: The reality of gratitude is the inability to be grateful.

It is narrated that Moses, peace be upon him, said: My God, You have bestowed upon me abundant blessings, and You have commanded me to be grateful, and my gratitude to You is a blessing from You. God Almighty said: O Moses, I have learned the knowledge that no other knowledge surpasses. It is sufficient for Me that My servant knows that whatever blessing he has is from Me. And David, peace be upon him, said: Glory be to Him who made the servant's admission of his inability to thank Him gratitude, just as He made his admission of his inability to know Him knowledge.

52- "Then We pardoned you when you repented, and pardon is the erasure of the crime, from the verb to pardon" if he studied. "After that meaning the adoption so that you may be grateful" meaning so that you may be grateful for His pardon.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:53

And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion that you might be guided.

Tafsir al-Jalalain

And when We gave Moses the Scripture the Torah and the Criterion an explanatory conjunction, meaning the difference between truth and falsehood, lawful and unlawful that you may be guided by it from misguidance.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: And when We gave Moses the Scripture is: And also remember when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion. What he means by the Scripture is the Torah, and by the Criterion is the distinction between truth and falsehood, as:

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion, he said: With it he distinguished between truth and falsehood.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion, he said: The Scripture is the Criterion, the Criterion between truth and falsehood.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told me, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, his statement: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion, he said: The Scripture is the Criterion, the distinction between truth and falsehood.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ibn Abbas said: Al-Furqan is the collective name of the Torah, the Gospel, the Psalms, and Al-Furqan.

Ibn Zayd said about that: Yunus bin Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, I asked him, meaning Ibn Zayd.

Regarding the statement of God the Almighty: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion, he said: As for the Criterion about which God the Almighty said: The Day of Criterion, the day the two armies met (al-Anfal 8:41), that was the Day of Badr, the day God distinguished between truth and falsehood, and the judgment that distinguished between truth and falsehood. He said: Thus God gave Moses the Criterion, God distinguished between them, saved him and delivered him, He distinguished between them with victory. Just as God made that between Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the polytheists, so He made it between Moses and Pharaoh.

Abu Ja'far said: The most appropriate of these interpretations to the interpretation of the verse is what was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Abu al-Ma'ali, and Mujahid: that al-Furqan, which God mentioned that He gave to Moses in this place, is the book by which He distinguished between truth and falsehood, and it is a description of the Torah and a description of it.

The interpretation of the verse then is: And when We gave Moses the Torah which We wrote for him on the tablets and distinguished with it between truth and falsehood.

So the Book is an adjective for the Torah that was used in its place, making it unnecessary to mention the Torah. Then the Criterion was attached to it, since it was one of its adjectives.

We have explained the meaning of book in the previous part of this book, and that it means what is written.

We said that this interpretation is more appropriate for the verse, even though it is possible for another interpretation, because what preceded it mentioned the Book, and that the meaning of the Criterion is the separation, and we have demonstrated that in what has passed in this book of ours, so attaching it, since it was like that, to the description of what preceded it, is more appropriate than attaching it to the description of what came after it.

As for the interpretation of his saying: Perhaps you will be guided, it is similar to the interpretation of his saying: Perhaps you will be grateful, and its meaning is that you will be guided.

It is as if he said: And remember also when We gave Fos the Torah, which distinguishes between truth and falsehood, so that you may be guided by it and follow the truth in it, because I made it thus a guidance for whoever is guided by it and follows what is in it.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty said: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion that you might be guided.

Idh is a name for the past tense. Idha is a name for the future tense. We gave: We gave. All of this has been mentioned before. The Book: the Torah by consensus of the commentators. There is a difference of opinion regarding the Criterion. Al-Farraa and Qatib said: The meaning is We gave Moses the Torah, and Muhammad, peace be upon him, the Criterion.

Al-Nahhas said: This is a mistake in grammar and meaning. As for grammar, what is conjoined to a thing is the same as it, and according to this statement, what is conjoined to a thing is the opposite of it. As for the meaning, God Almighty said: And We gave Moses and Aaron the Criterion. Abu Ishaq Al-Zajaj said: The Criterion is the Book, and it was mentioned again with two names for emphasis. It was narrated from Al-Farraa, and from it the poet said:

She presented the leather to Rahshiya, and he found her words to be lies and falsehoods.

Another said:

How wonderful is India and a land in which there is India and India from which distance and distance have come

So, the word distance is used to mean far, and oath is used to mean lie. There is no contradiction between the two words, for emphasis. From this is the saying of Antarah:

I came back from the ruins of an ancient era, stronger and more desolate than Umm Al-Haitham

An-Nahhas said: This only comes in poetry, and the best thing that has been said about this is the saying of Mujahid: A distinction between truth and falsehood, meaning that which he taught him. Ibn Zayd said: The distinction is the parting of the sea for him until it became a difference, so they crossed over. It was said: The distinction is the relief from distress, because they were enslaved with the Copts, and from this is the saying of God Almighty: If you fear God, He will make for you a distinction, meaning a relief and a way out. It was said that it is the argument and the explanation. Ibn Bahr said this. It was said: The waw is a connection, and the meaning is that we gave Moses the Book of the distinction, and the waw may be added to adjectives, like their saying: So-and-so is handsome and tall, and he recited:

To the venerable king, the son of the hero, and the lion of the battalion in the crowded place

He meant the king, the noble son of the hero, the lion of the battalion. The evidence for this interpretation is the saying of God Almighty: Then We gave Moses the Scripture, perfecting for him who does good, and explaining everything in detail. That is, between what is forbidden and what is permissible, disbelief and faith, promise and threat, and other things. It was said: The Criterion is the difference between them and the people of Pharaoh. He saved these and drowned those. Similar to it is: The Day of Criterion. It was said: He means the Day of Badr, on which God granted victory to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions, and destroyed Abu Jahl and his companions. That you may be guided. So that you may be guided from misguidance. This has been mentioned before.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in My pardoning you, when you worshipped the calf

after Moses went to the appointed time with his Lord at the end of the appointed time, which was forty days and it is mentioned in Al-A'raf in the Almighty's saying: And We appointed for Moses thirty nights and completed them with ten It was said that it was: Dhul-Qa'dah in its entirety and ten of Dhul-Hijjah, and that was after their deliverance from Pharaoh and their rescue from the sea, and the Almighty's saying: And when We gave Moses the Scripture meaning the Torah and the Criterion which is what distinguishes between truth and falsehood and guidance and misguidance that you may be guided This was also after their exit from the sea as indicated by the context of the speech in Surat Al-A'raf, and the Almighty's saying: And We had certainly given Moses the Scripture after We had destroyed the former generations as insight for the people and guidance and mercy that they might remember It was said: The waw is redundant, and the meaning is We had certainly given Moses the Scripture, the Criterion, and this is strange, and it was said, it was conjoined with it even though the meaning is the same, as in the words of the poet:

Fath al-Qadir

53- And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion that you may be guided. The Book is the Torah by consensus of the commentators. They differed about the Criterion, and Al-Farra' and Qutrub said: The meaning is We gave Moses the Torah and Muhammad the Criterion. It has been said: This is a mistake that they made because the Criterion is specific to the Qur'an, and it is not so, as God Almighty said: And We gave Moses and Aaron the Criterion. Al-Zajaj said: The Criterion is the Book, mentioned again for emphasis. Something similar was narrated from Al-Farra', including the saying of Antarah:

I came back from the ruins of an ancient era, stronger and more desolate than Umm Al-Haitham

It was said: The waw is a connection, and the meaning is: We gave Moses the criterion book, and the waw may be added to adjectives, as in the poet's saying:

To the venerable king, the son of the hero, and the lion of the battalion in the crowded place

It was said that the meaning is: That this house combines being a book and distinguishing between truth and falsehood, and it is like His saying: Then We gave Moses the Scripture, concluding for him who does good and detailing all things. It was said that the criterion is the difference between them and the people of Pharaoh, He saved them. Ibn Zayd said: The criterion is the parting of the sea, and it was said that the criterion is the relief from distress, and it was said that it is the argument and the explanation with the signs that God gave him of the staff and the hand and other things, and this is more appropriate and preferable, and the conjunction is in its chapter as if he said: We gave Moses the Torah and the signs with which We sent him were a miracle for him.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:53

And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion that you might be guided.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

53. The Almighty said: And when We gave Moses the Scripture meaning the Torah and the Criterion Mujahid said: It is also the Torah, he mentioned it with two names, and Al-Kisa'i said: The Criterion is an attribute of the Book and the waw is redundant, meaning: the Book that distinguishes between what is lawful and what is unlawful, and Yaman bin Rabab said: He meant by the Criterion the parting of the sea as He said: And when We parted the sea for you and saved you "that you may be guided" by the Torah.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

53- And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion meaning the Torah, which combines being a revealed book and an argument that distinguishes between truth and falsehood. It was said that what he meant by the Criterion were his miracles that distinguished between the one who is right and the one who is wrong in his claim, or between disbelief and faith. It was said that the law is the difference between what is permissible and what is forbidden, or the victory that distinguished between him and his enemy, as God Almighty said: The Day of Criterion meaning the Day of Badr.

Perhaps you will be guided so that you may be guided by contemplating the Book and reflecting on the verses.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:54

And when Moses said to his people, "O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf, so repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator." So He pardoned you. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Merciful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when Moses said to his people who worshipped the calf O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf as a god so repent to your Creator your Creator from worshipping him and kill yourselves that is, let the innocent among you kill the criminal that killing is better. You have a punishment from your Creator. So He enabled you to do that and sent a black cloud upon you so that you would not see one another and have mercy on one another until about seventy thousand of you were killed. Then He turned to you before your repentance. Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

And the interpretation of that: And remember also when Moses said to his people from the Children of Israel: O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves. And their wronging of them was that they did to them what they should not have done to them, which necessitated punishment for them from God Almighty. Likewise, every doer of an action that necessitates punishment from God Almighty, is wronging himself by necessitating punishment for himself from God Almighty. And the action that they did, by which they wronged themselves, was what God informed about them: their apostasy by taking the calf as a god after Moses left them.

Then Moses ordered them to reconsider their sin and return to God from their apostasy, by repenting to Him and submitting to His obedience in what He commanded them to do. He informed them that their repentance was for the sin they committed, which was killing themselves.

We have previously demonstrated that the meaning of repentance is to return from what God dislikes to what He is pleased with in terms of obedience to Him. So the people responded to what Moses commanded them to do, to repent from their sins to their Lord, as He commanded them, as Muhammad ibn al-Muthanna told us, he said, Muhammad ibn Ja'far told us, he said, Shu'bah ibn al-Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Abu Ishaq, on the authority of Abu Abd al-Rahman, that he said regarding this verse: Then kill yourselves, he said: They took out daggers and began stabbing each other.

Abbas bin Muhammad told me, Hajjaj bin Muhammad told us, Ibn Jurayj said, Al-Qasim bin Abi Bazza told me that he heard Saeed bin Jubair and Mujahid say: Some of them rose up against each other with daggers, killing each other, no man showing mercy to another, near or far, until Moses folded his garment, and they threw away what was in their hands, revealing seventy thousand dead. And God revealed to Moses: It is enough for me, for I have had enough, and that was when he folded his garment.

Abdul Karim bin Al-Haitham told me, Ibrahim bin Bashir told us, Sufyan bin Uyaynah told us, Abu Saeed said, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Moses said to his al-Nas 114: "Repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator. So He turned to you in forgiveness. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful." He said: Moses ordered his people, on the command of his Lord, the Almighty, to kill themselves. He said: So those who had devoted themselves to the calf sat down, and those who had not devoted themselves to the calf stood up and took daggers in their hands, and intense darkness overcame them, and they began to kill one another. The darkness lifted from them and they had escaped seventy thousand dead, and everyone who was killed had repented, and everyone who remained had repented.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: When Musa returned to his people, he said: O my people, did not your Lord promise you a good promise? to the words: Thus did the Samiri cast it down (Ta-Ha 20:86-87). So Musa threw down the tablets and took hold of his brother's head, dragging him towards him. "He said: O son of my mother, do not seize me by my beard or by my head. Indeed, I feared that you would say, 'You have caused division among the Children of Israel and did not observe my word'" (Ta-Ha 20:94). So he left Harun and turned to the Samiri and said: What is the matter with you, Samiri? to the words: Then We will surely blow him into the sea like a blast (Ta-Ha 20:95-97). Then he took him and slaughtered him, then burned him with a fire, then scattered him in the sea, and there was not a flowing sea that day except that some of it fell into it. Then Musa said to them: Drink from it. So they drank, and whoever loved it came out with gold on his drinkers. This is when He says: And they made the calf drink into their hearts because of their disbelief (al-Baqarah 2:93). When the children of Israel fell into the hands of Moses when he came, and they saw that they had gone astray, they said: If our Lord does not have mercy on us and forgive us, we will surely be among the losers. But God refused to accept the repentance of the children of Israel except in the way that they hated to fight them when they worshipped the calf, so Moses said to them: O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf as your god, so repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. He said: So they lined up in two rows, then fought with swords. Those who worshipped it and those who did not worship it fought with swords, and whoever was killed from both groups was a martyr, until the killing increased, until they were almost destroyed, until seventy thousand were killed among them, until Moses and Aaron called out: Our Lord, the children of Israel are destroyed! Our Lord, the remnant, the remnant! So

And when Moses said to his people, "O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf, so repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator." So He pardoned you. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Merciful.

He commanded them to lay down their weapons and accepted their repentance. Whoever was killed was a martyr, and whoever remained was forgiven. This is what He said: "Then He turned to you in forgiveness. Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful."

Muhammad ibn Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the words of God Almighty: Because of your taking the calf, he said: Moses had ordered his people, by the command of his Lord, to kill each other with daggers, so a man would kill his father and kill his son, so God accepted their repentance.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Because you took the calf, he said: Moses' command to his people was based on the command of his Lord that they should kill each other, and that a man should not kill his father or his brother. So that reached seventy thousand in one hour of the day.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement: And when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves,' the verse, he said: So they stood in two rows, and they began to kill each other, and the number of those killed reached what God willed. Then it was said to them: The killer and the one killed have repented.

Al-Muthanna told us, Abu Salih told us, Al-Layth told me, Aqil told me, on the authority of Ibn Shihab, who said: When the Children of Israel were ordered to kill themselves, they came out with Moses, and they thrashed each other with swords and daggers, and Moses raised his hands. When he became tired, some of them came to him and said: O Prophet of God, pray to God for us. And they took hold of his arms, supporting his hands. And their situation remained like that, until God accepted their repentance, and He withdrew the hands of some of them from each other, and they laid down their weapons. Moses and the Children of Israel were saddened by what had happened of killing among them, so God, the Most High, revealed to Moses: What saddens you? As for those among you who were killed, are they alive with Me and provided for? As for those who remain, their repentance has been accepted! So Moses gave the Children of Israel good report of that.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of al-Zuhri and Qatadah, regarding his statement: Then kill yourselves, he said: They stood in two rows, killing each other, until it was said to them: Stop! Qatadah said: It was a testimony for the one killed and repentance for the living.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, Al-Hussein bin Dawud told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ata' told me: I heard Ubaid bin Umayr say: Some of them rose up against each other, killing each other. A man did not spare his brother, nor his father, nor his son, nor anyone else, until repentance was revealed.

Ibn Jurayj said, and Ibn Abbas said: Their dead reached seventy thousand, then God Almighty lifted the killing from them and accepted their repentance.

Ibn Jurayj said: They stood in two rows and fought among themselves. God made killing one another a martyrdom, and it was repentance for those who remained. And the reason for some of them killing one another was that God knew that some of them knew that the calf was false, so nothing prevented them from denouncing them except the fear of fighting. Therefore, He commanded that some of them kill one another.

Ibn Humayd narrated that Salamah narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, who said: When Moses returned to his people, burned the calf, scattered it in the sea, and went out to his Lord with those he had chosen from his people, the thunderbolt struck them, and they were sent. Moses asked his Lord for repentance for the Children of Israel from worshipping the calf, and He said: No, unless they kill themselves. He said: It reached me that they said to Moses: We will be patient for the command of God! So Moses ordered those who had not worshipped the calf to kill those who had worshipped it. So they sat in the courtyards, and the people drew their swords upon them, and they began to kill them, and Moses wept, and the women and children came to him, asking for forgiveness for them, so He accepted their repentance and forgave them, and Moses ordered that the swords be lifted from them.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: When Moses returned to his people, and seventy men had avoided the calf with Aaron and did not worship it, Moses said to them: Go to the appointment with your Lord. They said: O Moses, is there no repentance? He said: Yes! "Kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator. So He has turned to you in mercy" (al-Kafi: 1). So they drew swords, spears, daggers, and knives. He said: And He sent a scourge upon them. He said: So they began to touch each other with their hands and kill each other. He said: A man would meet his father or brother and kill him without knowing, and they would call out to each other: May God have mercy on the servant who is patient until God is pleased with him. And he recited the words of God, the Most High: And We gave them signs in which there was clear trial (al-Dukhan: 33). He said: So their dead were martyrs, and He turned to their living ones. He recited: "Then He turned to you in mercy. Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful."

What we mentioned about the one from whom we narrated the report that we narrated was the people's repentance from the sin that they committed between themselves and their Lord, by worshipping the calf, along with their regret for what they had done in the past.

As for the meaning of his saying: Then repent to your Creator, he means by it: Return to the obedience of your Creator, and to what pleases Him about you, as Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Then repent to your Creator, meaning: to your Creator.

It is from the verb bara' God al-khalq which means he clears and it is bari'. And al-bariyyah means creation. It is a verbal noun with the meaning of mafulah, except that it is not hamzated, just as malak is not hamzated and it is from lak, but it is omitted with the hamzah like dhanaka. Nabigha Bani Dhubyah said:

Except for Solomon, when the king said to him: Go into the wilderness and determine its location.

It has been said that the word al-bariyyah was not hamzated because it is a noun derived from al-bari, which means dust. So its interpretation, according to those who interpreted it thus, was that it was created from dust.

Some of them said: The word bariyyah was taken from your saying bariyyat al-oud I broke the stick. That is why it was not hamzated.

Abu Jaafar said: Leaving out the hamza in Bari'kum is permissible, and substituting it is permissible. So since that is permissible in Bari'kum, it is not strange that al-bariyyah is from Bari God al-khalq, by leaving out the hamza.

As for his saying: That is better for you in the sight of your Creator, he means by that: Your repentance by killing yourselves and obeying your Lord is better for you in the sight of your Creator, because you will thereby be saved from God's punishment in the Hereafter for your sin, and you will thereby deserve His reward.

And His statement: Then He turned to you in forgiveness, meaning: because of what you did of what He commanded you to do, killing one another. This is one of the omitted words that are sufficient in appearance, without the omitted word. Because the meaning of the statement is: So repent to your Creator and kill yourselves, that is better for you with your Creator. So you repented, so He turned to you in forgiveness. So He left out mentioning His statement: So you repented, because His statement: Then He turned to you in forgiveness is a clear indication that the statement requires so you repent.

What he means by his saying: Then He turned to you in forgiveness, is that your Lord returned to you to what you loved: forgiveness for your sins and the greatness of what you committed, and pardon for your crime. For He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful, meaning: He returns to those who turn to Him in obedience to what He loves of forgiveness for them.

* By the Most Merciful he means the one to whom He returns with His mercy that saves from His punishment.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty said: And when Moses said to his people The al-Nas 114: the group of men without the women. God Almighty said: Let not a people ridicule another people then He said: Nor let women ridicule other women. Zuhair said:

I don't know, and I will think I know whether it is the Al-Husn family or the women.

God Almighty said: And Lot, when he said to his people, meaning men, not women. People can also refer to both men and women. God Almighty said: Indeed, We sent Noah to his people, and so every prophet is sent to both women and men.

God the Almighty said: O people is a vocative with an added genitive. The ya was deleted in ya qawm because it is a place of deletion and the kasra indicates it, and it is like the tanween, so it was deleted as the tanween is deleted from the singular. It is permissible outside the Qur'an to keep it silent, so you say: Ya qawmi because it is a noun and it is in the place of khafs. If you wish, you can fatha it, or add a ha to it, so you say: Ya qawmiyyah. If you wish, you can replace it with an alif because it is lighter, so you say: Ya qawman, or if you wish, you can say: Ya qawm, meaning O people. If you make them indefinite, you put the ya in the accusative and add a tanween. The singular of qawm is imru' in a different form. You say: qawm and aqwam, and aqawam is the plural of the plural. What is meant here by qawm are the worshippers of the calf, and the Prophet (peace be upon him) was addressing them by command from God the Almighty.

God the Almighty said: Indeed, you have wronged yourselves. The small plural is sufficient for the large, and the large is souls. The large plural may be used in place of the small plural, and the small in place of the large. God the Almighty said: Three menstrual periods. He also said: And therein is whatever the souls desire. And it is said to everyone who does an action that will harm him: You have only wronged yourself. The origin of injustice is putting something in the wrong place. Then God the Almighty said: By your taking the calf. Some of the masters of meanings said: Every person has hastened his soul, so whoever neglects it and goes against its intentions is absolved of his injustice. The correct thing is that here he has hastened in truth, and they worshipped Him as the revelation stated. And praise be to God.

God the Almighty said: Then repent to your Creator. When He said to them: Then repent to your Creator, they said: How? He said: Then kill yourselves. The masters of thoughts said: Humiliate them with obedience and restrain them from desires. The correct view is that it is literally killing here. Killing is the death of movement. And wine killed: its intensity was broken by water. Sufyan ibn Uyaynah said: Repentance is a blessing from God that He bestowed upon this nation and not upon any other nation. The repentance of the Children of Israel was killing. They agreed that not every one of the worshippers of the calf was commanded to kill himself with his own hand. Al-Zuhri said: When it was said to them: Then repent to your Creator and kill yourselves, they stood in two rows and killed each other, until it was said to them: Stop. That was a testimony for the one killed and repentance for the living, as mentioned above. Some of the commentators said: God sent darkness upon them and they did that. It was said: Those who worshipped the calf stood in a row, and those who did not worship it entered upon them with weapons and killed them. It was also said: The seventy who were with Moses stood up and killed - because they did not worship the calf - those who worshipped the calf. It is narrated that Joshua bin Nun came out to them while they were sitting cross-legged and said: Cursed is he who untied his rope or extended his gaze to his killer or protected himself from him with his hand or foot. None of them untied his rope until he killed one of them - meaning the one he killed - and the man came forward to kill the one next to him. This was mentioned by An-Nahhas and others. Those who did not worship the calf were punished by killing themselves - according to the first opinion - because they did not change the evil when they worshipped it, but rather they isolated themselves, and it was obligatory upon them to fight those who worshipped it. This is the way of God with His servants: if evil spreads and is not changed, everyone is punished. Jarir narrated that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

And when Moses said to his people, "O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf, so repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator." So He pardoned you. Indeed, it is He who is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Merciful.

"There are no people among whom sins are committed who are more honorable and more secure than them. They do not change except that God will punish them all." Narrated by Ibn Majah in his Sunan. We will discuss this meaning later, God willing. When the killing became rampant among them and reached seventy thousand, God forgave them. This was said by Ibn Abbas and Ali, may God be pleased with them. God only lifted the killing from them because they gave their efforts in killing themselves. God has not bestowed upon this nation a blessing after Islam that is better than repentance. Qatada read: So accept yourselves - from forgiveness - meaning, accept them from the stumbling block by killing.

God the Almighty said: Your Creator. Al-Bari' means the Creator, and there is a difference between them, as Al-Bari' is the Innovator and Originator. Al-Khaliq is the Determiner who transfers from one state to another. Al-Bariyah means creation, and it is a fa'ilah with the meaning of maf'ulah except that it is not hamzated. Abu Amr read Bari'kum - with a sukun on the hamzah - and yusha'rkum, yansa'rkum, and yuamrukum. Grammarians differed on this, as some of them sukun the damma and kasra in the connection, and that is in poetry. Abu al-Abbas al-Mubarrad said: It is not permissible to sukun with successive vowels in the letter of i'rab in speech or poetry. Abu Amr's reading is a mistake. Al-Nahhas and others said: The ancient grammarians, the Imams, permitted this, and recited:

If they are crooked, I say, The companion of a people with a bent head is like a floating ship.

Imru Al-Qais said:

Today I drink without deserving any sin from God nor being excessive.

Another said:

Salma said buy us some flour

The other said:

You left, and your feet were bare, and your apron was showing.

Whoever denies the sukoon of the letter of i'rab, his argument is that it is not permissible since it is a sign of i'rab. Abu Ali said: As for the vowel of construction, grammarians did not differ on the permissibility of sukoon on it with successive vowels. The root of bara' is from tabara al-shay' min al-shay', which means its separation from it. So creation was separated from nonexistence to existence, and from this comes bara'at min al-marad bara'an with the fat-ha, this is what the people of Hijaz say. And others say bara'at min al-marad bara'an with the damma, and bara'at mink wa min al-din wa al-'ibaa'ah, and from this comes mubara'ah for a woman. And he bara'a his partner and his wife.

The Almighty's saying: Then He turned to you in forgiveness. There is an omission in the speech, the meaning being: So you did it, so He turned to you in forgiveness. That is, He overlooked you, that is, those of you who remained. Indeed, He is the Forgiving, the Most Merciful. Its meaning has been presented previously, and praise be to God.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

This is the description of His repentance to the Children of Israel for worshipping the calf. Al-Hasan Al-Basri, may God have mercy on him, said about the Almighty's statement, And when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf as your god,' He said: That was when their hearts were filled with what they had done regarding their worship of the calf until God Almighty said, And when their hands fell and they saw that they had gone astray, they said, 'If only our Lord had not mercy upon us and forgiven us,' the verse. He said: That was when Moses said, O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf as your god,' Abu Al-Aaliyah, Saeed bin Jubair, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said, Then repent to your Creator, meaning to your Creator. I said: In His statement here, to your Creator, there is an indication of the enormity of their crime, meaning, repent to the One who created you, and you worshipped other than Him. Al-Nasa'i, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from the hadith of Yazid bin Harun, on the authority of Al-Asbagh bin Zaid Al-Warraq, on the authority of Al-Qasim bin Abi Ayoub, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Their repentance is that each one of them should kill whoever he meets of father and son, killing him with the sword, and he does not care who he kills in that place. So those who had been hidden from Moses and Aaron, and what God knew about their sins, repented, so they confessed to them and did what they were commanded to do, so God forgave the killer and the one killed. This is a part of the hadith of the trials, and it will come in its entirety in Surat Taha, God willing. Ibn Jarir said: Abdul Karim bin Al-Haitham told me, Ibrahim bin Bashir told us, Sufyan bin Uyaynah told us, Abu Saeed said, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Moses said to his al-Nas 114: "Repent to your Creator and kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator. So He turned to you in forgiveness. Indeed, He is the Acceptor of repentance, the Most Merciful." He said: Moses ordered his people, on the command of his Lord, the Almighty, to kill themselves. He said: And he informed those who worshipped the calf, so they sat down, and those who had not devoted themselves to the calf stood up and took daggers in their hands, and intense darkness overcame them, so they began to kill one another, and the darkness lifted from them, and they had left seventy thousand dead, and everyone who was killed had repented, and everyone who remained had repented. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Qasim bin Abi Barra informed me that he heard Saeed bin Jubair and Mujahid saying about the words of God Almighty: Then kill yourselves. They said: Some of them rose up against each other with daggers, killing each other, no man showing mercy to near or far, until Moses folded his garment and they threw away what was in their hands, and seventy thousand dead were uncovered. God revealed to Moses: Enough for me, I have had enough. That was when Moses folded his garment. Something similar was narrated from Ali, may God be pleased with him. Qatada said: The people were ordered to do something severe, so they rose up and started to fight with knives, killing each other, until God took His vengeance upon them, and the knives fell from their hands. He refrained from killing them, and made their beards a place of repentance, and the one killed a martyr. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: Darkness befell them, so they killed each other, then He was relieved from them, and He made their repentance in that. Al-Suddi said about His words: Then kill yourselves. He said: Those who worshipped Him and those who did not worship Him fought with swords, and whoever was killed from both groups was a martyr. Until the killing increased until they were almost destroyed until seventy thousand of them were killed and until Moses and Aaron called upon their Lord, Our Lord, You have destroyed the Children of Israel, our Lord, the remnant, the remnant, and He commanded them to lay down their weapons, and He accepted their repentance, so whoever of them was killed from both groups was a martyr, and whoever remained was forgiven, so that is His saying, Then He turned to you in forgiveness, for He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful. Al-Zuhri said: When the Children of Israel were commanded to kill themselves, they came out with Moses and they were disturbed with swords and stabbed each other with daggers, and Moses raised his hands until some of them became tired, they said: O Prophet of God, pray to God for us, and they took hold of his arms to support his hands, and their situation remained like that until God accepted their repentance, He withdrew their hands from each other and they laid down their weapons, and Moses and the Children of Israel were saddened by what had happened of killing among them, so God, the Most High, revealed to Moses, What saddens you? As for those of them who were killed, they are alive with Me and are provided for, and as for those who remained, their repentance has been accepted, so Moses and the Children of Israel were pleased with that, narrated by Ibn Jarir With a good chain of transmission on his authority, Ibn Ishaq said: When Moses returned to his people and burned the calf and scattered it in the sea, he went out to his Lord with whomever he chose from his people, and the thunderbolt struck them, then they were sent, and Moses asked his Lord for repentance for the Children of Israel from worshipping the calf, and He said: No, unless they kill themselves, and it reached me that they said to Moses: We will be patient for the command of God, so Moses ordered those who did not worship the calf to kill those who worshipped it, so they sat in the courtyards, and the people drew swords on them, and they began to kill them, and Moses wept, and the women and children came to him asking for forgiveness for them, so God accepted their repentance and forgave them, and Moses ordered that the swords be lifted from them. And Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said: When Moses returned to his people, and they were seventy men who had separated themselves with Aaron from the calf and did not worship it, so Moses said to them: Go to the appointment with your Lord, and they said: O Moses. There is no repentance. He said: Yes, kill yourselves. That is better for you in the sight of your Creator. So He turned to you in mercy. So they drew swords, spears, daggers, and knives. He said: And He sent a cloud upon them. He said: So they began to touch each other with their hands and kill each other. He said: And a man would meet his father or brother and kill him without knowing. He said: And they would call out to each other, May God have mercy on the servant who is patient until God is pleased with him. He said: So their dead are martyrs, and He turned to their living ones. Then He recited: "Then He turned to you in mercy. Indeed, He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful."

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: 54- O people The word people is sometimes used to refer to men, not women. From this is the saying of Zuhair:

I don't know, and I will think I know whether it is the Al-Husn family or the women.

And from this is the saying of God the Almighty: Let not a people ridicule another people, then He said: Nor women from other women, and from this: And Lot, when he said to his people, meaning men, and it may be applied to all, like the saying of God the Almighty: Indeed, We sent Noah to his people, and what is meant here by the people are the worshippers of the calf. And the Creator is the Creator, and it was said: The Creator here is a reference to the enormity of their crime: that is, so repent to the One who created you, and you worshipped other than Him. And the fa in His saying: So repent is for causality: that is, to cause repentance from injustice, and in His saying: So kill is for consequence: that is, make killing follow repentance. Al-Qurtubi said: And they agreed that not every one of the worshippers of the calf was commanded to kill himself with his own hand. It was said: They stood in two rows and killed each other, and it was said: Those who worshipped the calf stopped and those who did not worship it entered upon them with weapons and killed them. And his saying: And He turned to you It was said: There is an omission in the speech: that is, you killed yourselves, so He turned to you: that is, to those who remained from you. And it was said: It is the answer to an omitted condition, as if he said: If you did, then He turned to you. As for what the author of Al-Kashshaf said: That it is possible that it is an address from God to them in the manner of turning away, so the estimate would be: So you did what Moses commanded you, so your Creator turned to you, this is very far-fetched, as is not hidden. Ibn Jarir narrated from Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding his saying: Forty nights, he said: Dhul-Qadah and ten days of Dhul-Hijjah. Ibn Jarir narrated from him regarding his saying: After that, he said: After you took the calf. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated from Mujahid regarding his saying: And when We gave Moses the Scripture and the Criterion He said: The Book is the Criterion, distinguishing between truth and falsehood. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated from Ibn Abbas, he said: The Criterion is the collective name of the Torah, the Gospel, the Psalms, and the Qur'an. Ibn Jarir narrated on his authority that he said: Moses ordered his people, by the command of his Lord, to kill themselves. Those who had devoted themselves to the calf hid and sat down, and those who had not devoted themselves to the calf rose and took daggers in their hands. They were overcome by intense darkness, and they began to kill each other. The darkness lifted from them, revealing seventy thousand dead. Everyone who was killed had repentance, and everyone who remained had repentance. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ali that he said: They said to Moses, What is our repentance? He said: You kill each other. So they took knives, and a man began to kill his brother, father, and son, not caring who he killed, until seventy thousand of them were killed. Then God revealed to Moses: Order them to raise their hands, for He has forgiven those who were killed and has repented for those who remain. Abd ibn Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah, and Ahmad narrated in Az-Zuhd and Ibn Jarir on the authority of Az-Zuhri something similar to what was mentioned above. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, regarding His statement: To your Creator, he said: Your Creator.

54. And when Moses said to his people, who worshipped the calf, O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves, You have harmed yourselves, by taking the calf" as a god, they said: "Then what should we do?" He said: "Then repent, and return, to your Creator, your Creator." They said: "How can we repent?" He said: "Then kill yourselves," meaning let the innocent among you kill the criminal. "That, meaning killing, is better for you with your Creator." So when Moses ordered them to kill, they said: We will be patient for the sake of God's command. So they sat in the courtyards, sitting cross-legged, and it was said to them: Whoever extends his rope or extends his glance to his killer or protects him with his hand or foot is cursed and his repentance is rejected. The people stabbed them with daggers, and a man would see his son, his father, his brother, his relative, his friend, and his neighbor, but they could not proceed with the command of God Almighty. They said: O Moses, what should we do? Then God Almighty sent upon them a black cloud and mist so that they could not see each other, and they were killing them until the evening. When the killing increased, Moses and Aaron, peace be upon them, called out and cried and supplicated and said: O Lord, the Children of Israel have perished, the remnant, the remnant. Then God Almighty removed the cloud and ordered them to stop killing, and it removed and revealed thousands of dead people.

It was narrated on the authority of Ali, may God be pleased with him, that he said: The number of those killed was seventy thousand, and that was difficult for Moses, so God Almighty revealed to him: Is it not pleasing to you that I admit the killer and the one killed into Paradise, so that whoever was killed would be a martyr, and whoever remained would have his sins forgiven? This is what God Almighty said: Then He turned to you in forgiveness, meaning, you did what you were commanded to do, so He turned to you in forgiveness and forgave you. He is the Acceptor of Repentance, the Acceptor of Repentance, the Most Merciful to His creation.

54- "And when Moses said to his people, 'O my people, indeed you have wronged yourselves by taking the calf, so repent to your Creator.'" So resolve to repent and return to the One who created you free from difference, and distinguished some of you from others with different forms and shapes. The origin of the composition is the purity of a thing from another, either by way of investigation, as in their saying, "The sick person is free from his illness and the debtor is free from his debt, or by creation, as in their saying, God created Adam from clay. So repent.

Kill yourselves" to complete your repentance by squandering, or cutting off desires, as it was said: He who does not torment himself will not enjoy it, and he who does not kill himself will not live it. It was also said that they were ordered to kill each other. It was also said that he who did not worship the calf was ordered to kill the slave. It was narrated that a man could see himself and his relative but was not able to carry out God's command, so God sent a black cloud and mist so that they could not see each other. They began to kill from morning until evening until He called upon Moses and Aaron, and the cloud was removed, and repentance was revealed. The number of those killed was seventy thousand. The first "fa" is for causation, and the second is for consequence.

That is better for you in the sight of your Creator, in that it is a purification from polytheism and a connection to eternal life and everlasting joy.

"So He turned to you in forgiveness" is related to something omitted if you make it from the speech of Moses, peace be upon him, to them, meaning: If you do what you were commanded, then He has turned to you in forgiveness, or it is in apposition to something omitted if you make it an address from God Almighty to them in the manner of turning away, as if he said: So you did what you were commanded, then your Creator turned to you in forgiveness. And mentioning the Creator and arranging the matter according to Him is an indication that they reached the peak of ignorance and stupidity, to the point that they abandoned the worship of their wise Creator for the worship of cows, which is like stupidity, and that whoever does not recognize the right of his benefactor is deserving of not being restored to him, and for this reason they were commanded to be killed and to dismantle the structure.

He is the Forgiving, the Most Merciful to the One who frequently grants repentance, or accepts it from sinners, and is generous with them.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when you said and you went out with Moses to apologize to God for worshipping the calf and you heard his words O Moses, we will not believe you until we see God plainly with your own eyes and the thunderbolt the shout took you and you died while you were looking what happened to you

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of that is: And remember also when you said, O Moses, we will not believe you and we will not acknowledge what you have brought us, until we see God openly and clearly, by lifting the veil between us and Him, and removing the cover between us and Him, until we look at Him with our eyes, as a well is clear, and that is when its water has been covered by mud, then what had covered it is purified until the water appears clear. It is said from this: The well has been clear, he has made it clear and explicit. Therefore it is said: So-and-so has made this matter public and explicit, if he has made it clear and obvious, as Al-Farazdaq bin Ghalib said:

Of those who remain a thousand from him, out of fear of him openly

And as Al-Qasim bin Al-Hassan told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Ibn Abbas said: Until we see God openly, he said: Openly.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': Until we see God clearly, meaning: clearly.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Until we see God clearly, until He appears to us.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: Until we see God clearly, meaning: clearly.

So He, the Most High, reminded them of that, the disagreement of their fathers, and the bad uprightness of their forefathers towards their prophets, despite the many signs and lessons they witnessed from God, the Most High, the Most Great, the most exalted, the most precious ... So our Lord, Blessed and Exalted be He, informed those whom He addressed with these verses from the Jews of the Children of Israel, who were among the immigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that they would not go beyond being in their denial of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their rejection of his prophethood, and their failure to acknowledge him and what he brought, despite their knowledge of him and their awareness of the truth of his matter like their ancestors and fathers, whose stories He detailed for them, in their apostasy from their religion time after time, and their attack on their Prophet Moses, may God bless him and grant him peace, time after time, despite the great affliction of God, the Almighty and Majestic, upon them, and the abundance of His favors upon them. The statement in the interpretation of the words of God Almighty: Then the thunderbolt seized you while you were looking on.

The people of interpretation differed regarding the description of the thunderbolt that struck them. Some of them said what: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Then the thunderbolt struck you, he said: They died.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': Then the thunderbolt struck you, he said: They heard a sound and were struck dumb, he said: So they died.

Others said: Musa bin Harun Al-Hamdani told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Then the thunderbolt took you, and the thunderbolt is fire.

Others said: Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, he said: The earthquake, which is lightning, took them, and they all died.

The root of the word thunderbolt is any terrible event that a person sees, witnesses, or is afflicted with, until its terror and greatness leads to destruction and damage, and to the loss of reason and understanding, or the loss of some of the body's organs, whether it be a sound, fire, earthquake, or tremor. What indicates that a person may be struck by lightning while he is alive and not dead is the statement of God Almighty: And Moses fell unconscious (al-A'raf 7:143), meaning: unconscious. From this is the statement of Jarir ibn Atiyyah:

Was Al-Farazdaq anything but a monkey struck by lightning and turned around?

It is known that Moses was not dead when he fainted and was struck by lightning, because God Almighty informed us that when he regained consciousness, he said: I repent to You (al-A'raf 7:143). Nor did Jarir compare Al-Farazdaq, while he was alive, to a dead monkey. But the meaning of that is what we have described.

What he means by his saying: And you are looking, is that you are looking at the lightning that struck you. He says: The lightning struck you clearly and openly while you were looking at it.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

It has five issues:

First: The Almighty's saying: And when you said is connected. O Moses is a singular address. We will not believe you meaning we will believe you. Until we see God plainly. It was said: They are the seventy whom Moses chose, because when he made them hear the words of God, they said to him afterwards: We will not believe you. Belief in the prophets is obligatory after their miracles appear. So God sent fire from the sky upon them and burned them, then Moses called upon his Lord and He brought them back to life, as God the Almighty said: Then We raised you up after your death. The story of the seventy will come in Al-A'raf, God willing. Ibn Furak said: It is possible that they were punished for removing the request to see God from His path by saying to Moses: Show us God plainly, and that was not within the power of Moses, peace be upon him.

There is a difference of opinion about the permissibility of seeing God Almighty. Most innovators deny it in this world and the hereafter. The Sunnis and the Salaf are of the opinion that it is permissible in both worlds and that it will occur in the hereafter. Based on this, they did not ask for something impossible about seeing God. Moses, peace be upon him, asked for it. We will discuss seeing God in Al-An'am and Al-A'raf, God willing.

Second: The Almighty's saying: Openly is a source in the place of the state, and its meaning is publicly. It was also said: clearly, as Ibn Abbas said. The origin of the word al-jahar is al-zahar, and from it the word al-jaharah in reading is only showing it. And the public display of sins: is demonstrating them. And I saw the prince openly and openly, meaning not hidden by anything. Ibn Abbas read al-jaharah with the opening of the ha. They are two languages, like zahr and zahr. And there are two views regarding the word al-jaharah: The first: It is a description of their address to Moses that they spoke openly and announced it, so there is an inversion in the speech, and the estimate is: And when you said openly, O Moses. The second: It is a description of what they asked of seeing God Almighty that they see Him openly and clearly, so the speech is in its order, with no inversion or inversion. And the emphasis is on the loudness to differentiate between seeing with one's own eyes and seeing in a dream.

Third: The Almighty's saying: So the thunderbolt seized you. The meaning of the thunderbolt was mentioned earlier in the surah. Umar, Uthman, and Ali read the thunderbolt, which is the reading of Ibn Muhaisin throughout the Quran. And you are looking is a phrase in the position of a state. It is said: How can they die while they are looking? The answer is that the Arabs say: The houses of the family of so-and-so are in sight, meaning they face each other. It was said: The meaning is you are looking, that is, at your condition and what has befallen you of death and the effects of the thunderbolt.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in sending you after the eclipse, if you asked to see Me openly and clearly, which is not possible for you or your likes, as Ibn Jurayj said. Ibn Abbas said about this verse, And when you said, O Moses, we will not believe you until we see God, he said: openly. And Ibrahim bin Tahman said the same on the authority of Ibad bin Ishaq on the authority of Abu Al-Huwayrith on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said about God Almighty's statement, We will not believe you until we see God openly, meaning openly, that is, until we see God. Qatada and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said, Until we see God openly, meaning clearly. Abu Ja'far said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: They are the seventy whom Moses chose and they traveled with him. He said: So they heard a speech, so they said, We will not believe you until we see God openly. He said: So they heard a voice, so they swooned, he said, they died. Marwan bin Al-Hakam said, in his sermon on the pulpit of Mecca: Thunderbolt is a cry from the sky. Al-Suddi said about His statement, So the thunderbolt seized you, thunderbolt is fire. Urwah bin Ruwaim said about His statement, And you were watching, he said: Some of them were struck dumb and some were watching. Then these were sent and those were struck dumb. Al-Suddi said, So the thunderbolt seized you, so they died. Then Moses stood up crying and supplicating to God, saying: O Lord, what shall I say to the Children of Israel when I come to them and You have destroyed the best of them? "If You had willed, You could have destroyed them and me before. Will You destroy us for what the fools among us have done?" So God revealed to Moses that these seventy were among those who took the calf, then God revived them and they stood up and lived, man by man, looking at one another to see how they would live. He said: That is what God Almighty said: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas said: Their death was a punishment for them, so they were raised up after death to complete their appointed times. Qatada said the same. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Hamid told us, Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, who said: When Moses returned to his people and saw what they were doing of worshipping the calf, and he said to his brother and to the Samaritan what he said, and burned the calf and scattered it in the sea, Moses chose from among them seventy men, the best of the best, and said: Go to God and repent to God for what you have done, and ask Him for repentance for those of your people whom you have left behind you. Fast, purify yourselves, and purify your clothes. So he went out with them to Mount Sinai for the appointed time that his Lord had set for him, and he would not come to it except with His permission and knowledge. So the seventy said to him, as I have mentioned, when they did what they were commanded to do and went out to meet God, they said: O Moses, ask for us from your Lord so that we may hear the speech of our Lord. So he said: I will do it. So when Moses approached the mountain, the clouds fell upon him until they covered the entire mountain. Moses approached and entered it, and said to the al-Nas 114: Come near. And when God

And when you said, "O Moses, we will not believe you until we see God with our own eyes," then the thunderbolt struck you while you were looking on.

spoke to Moses, a bright light fell upon his forehead that no one among the sons of Adam could look at. So a veil was placed between him, and the people approached until when they entered the clouds, they fell down in prostration and they heard him speaking to Moses, commanding him and forbidding him: Do and do not do. So when he finished with his command to him, the clouds were removed from Moses, and he came to them. So they said to Moses: We will not believe in you until we see God clearly. So the earthquake, which is the thunderbolt, took them, and they all died. And Moses stood up, imploring his Lord and calling upon Him and beseeching Him, and saying: My Lord, if You had willed, You could have destroyed them before. And they have acted foolishly with me. Will you destroy those of the Children of Israel who come after me, because of what the fools among us do? That is, this is their destruction, and I have chosen from among them seventy good men, then the best. I will return to them, and not one man from them is with me. So what will they believe in me and trust me with after this? We have been guided to You. So Moses kept calling upon his Lord, the Almighty, and asking Him until He restored their souls to them, and asked them to repent for the Children of Israel from worshipping the calf, and He said: No, unless they kill themselves. This is the context of Muhammad bin Ishaq. Ismail bin Abdul Rahman Al-Suddi Al-Kabir said: When the Children of Israel repented from worshipping the calf, and God accepted their repentance by killing each other as God commanded them, God commanded Moses to come to Him with every group of the Children of Israel who would apologize to Him for worshipping the calf, and Moses made an appointment with them. Moses chose seventy men in his sight, then he went with them to apologize, and he brought the rest. This context requires that the address was directed to the Children of Israel in His statement: "And when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe in you until we see God with our own eyes.' " What is meant is the seventy chosen from them, and many commentators have not narrated anything other than him. Al-Razi was strange in his interpretation when he narrated in the story of these seventy: that after they were revived, they said: O Moses, you do not ask God for anything except that He gives it to you, so ask Him to make us prophets. So he called for that and God answered his call. This is very strange, since no prophet was known in the time of Moses except for Aaron and then Joshua bin Nun. The People of the Book also made a mistake in their claim that these people saw God Almighty, since Moses, peace be upon him, the one who spoke to God, asked for that and was denied it, so how could these seventy people attain it?

The second statement on the verse: Abd al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said in his interpretation of this verse: Moses said to them when he returned from his Lord with the tablets on which the Torah was written and he found them worshipping the calf, so he ordered them to kill themselves and they did, so God accepted their repentance and said: These tablets contain the Book of God in which is your commands that He ordered you and your prohibitions that He prohibited you from. They said: Who will take it based on what you say? No, by God, until we see God openly until God looks at us and says: This is My Book, so take it. Why does He not speak to us as He speaks to you, O Moses? And he recited the statement of God: We will not believe in you until we see God openly. He said: Then the wrath of God came and a thunderbolt came upon them after their repentance and struck them and they all died. He said: Then God revived them after their death and recited the statement of God: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful. So Moses said to them: Take the Book of God. They said: No. He said: What happened to you? They said: It happened to us that we died and then were brought back to life. He said: Take the Book of God. They said: No. So God sent angels who lifted the mountain above them. This context indicates that they were charged after they were brought back to life. Al-Mawardi mentioned two opinions about this: The first is that the charge was dropped from them because they witnessed the matter openly until they were forced to believe it. The second is that they were charged so that no sane person would be without a charge. Al-Qurtubi said: This is the correct view because their witnessing of terrible things does not prevent them from being charged, because the Children of Israel witnessed great things of the extraordinary, and they were charged in that, and this is clear, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: 55- And when you said This sentence is connected to the one before it, and the context clearly indicates that those who said this statement were the people of Moses - and it was said: they were the seventy whom he chose. This is because when they heard the speech of God, they said this statement after that, so God sent a fire upon them and burned them. Then Moses called upon his Lord, so He revived them as God Almighty said here: Then We raised you up after your death and this will come in Al-A'raf, God willing. And al-Jahra: is witnessing, and its origin is appearance, and from it aloud reading and public display of sins, and I saw the matter aloud and aloud: meaning not hidden by anything, and it is a source that takes the place of the state. Ibn Abbas read al-Jahra with the opening of the ha' and it is two languages like Zahra and Zahra, and it is possible that this reading is the plural of Jaher. And the explanation of the thunderbolt has been presented, and Omar, Othman, and Ali read the thunderbolt and it is the reading of Ibn Muhaisin, and what is meant by taking the thunderbolt is its striking them. And you are looking is in the accusative case as a state, and what is meant by this looking that they did is that they looked at the beginning of the thunderbolt that befell them, not the end of it when they died. It was said that what is meant by the thunderbolt is death, and evidence for that is his statement: Then We raised you up after your death. There is no reason to resort to this interpretation, because the one who is struck down may die as in this verse, and it may be feared for him and then he recovers as in the statement of God Almighty: And Moses fell down unconscious, and when he recovered, and what necessitates that is his statement: And you are looking, for if the thunderbolt were an expression of death, this sentence would not have much meaning. Rather, it may be said that it is not correct for you to look at the death that befell them unless what is meant is looking at the causes that affect death.

55. God the Almighty said: And when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe in you until we see God with our own eyes.' That is because God the Almighty commanded Moses, peace be upon him, to come to Him with some of the Children of Israel who were worshipping the calf. Moses chose seventy men from among his people from among the best of them, and said to them: Fast and purify yourselves and purify your garments. So they did, and Moses went out with them to Mount Sinai for the appointed time with his Lord. They said to Moses: Seek for us to hear the words of our Lord. So he said to them: I will. So when Moses approached Mount Sinai from the mountain, a pillar of cloud fell upon him and covered the entire mountain. So he entered the cloud and said to the al-Nas 114: Come closer. So they came closer until they entered the cloud and fell down in prostration. When his Lord spoke to Moses, a bright light fell upon his face that no one from the children of Adam could look at. So a veil was drawn between them and they heard Him speaking to Moses, commanding and forbidding him, and God made them hear: "I am God, there is no god but Me, the One of Mecca. I brought you out of the land of Egypt with a strong hand, so worship Me and do not worship anyone other than Me." So when Moses finished and the cloud cleared, He came to them and they said to him: (We will not believe until we see God with our own eyes), with our own eyes. This is because the Arabs consider knowledge in the heart to be seeing, so he said with his own eyes so that it would be known that what is meant by it is seeing. Then the thunderbolt seized you meaning death. It was also said: Fire came from the sky and burned them. And you were looking meaning some of you were looking at others when death seized you. It was also said: You were knowing, and looking can mean knowledge. So when they perished, Moses began to cry and implore and say: What shall I say to the Children of Israel when I come to them and I have destroyed the best of them? "If You had willed, You could have destroyed them before, and me. Will You destroy us for what the fools among us have done?" 155-Al-A'raf. So he continued to implore his Lord until God the Most High revived them, man after man, after they had died for a day and a night, looking at each other. How do they revive? That is...

Tafsir al-Baidawi

55- And when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe you,' meaning because of what you said, or we will not acknowledge you.

Until we see God aloud clearly, and it is originally the source of your saying: I read aloud, it was borrowed for seeing, and it is accusative as a source because it is a type of seeing, or a state of the subject, or the object. It was read aloud with the fat-ha as a source like ghalba, or the plural of jahir like scribes, so it is definitely a state of the subject, and the speakers are the seventy whom Moses, peace be upon him, chose for the meeting. It was said ten thousand of his people. And the believer in him: God is the one who gave you the Torah and spoke to you, or you are a prophet.

Then the thunderbolt seized you due to excessive stubbornness, description, and seeking the impossible. They thought that the Almighty resembles bodies, so they sought to see Him as bodies in the directions and spaces opposite to the viewer, which is impossible. Rather, it is possible that He sees a vision free from manner, and that is for the believers in the afterlife and for individuals from the prophets in some states in this world. It was said that a fire came from the sky and burned them. It was said that it was a shout. It was said that soldiers heard its hissing sound and fell unconscious, dead for a day and a night.

And you are watching what happened to you in itself or its effect.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:56

Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:56

Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Then We raised you up We revived you after your death that you might be grateful for Our blessing with that.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

He means by his saying: Then We raised you up, then We brought you back to life.

The root of the word ba'ath is to stir something up from its place. Hence it is said: So-and-so stirred up his camel if he stirred it up from its resting place to set off, as the poet said:

So I send her, and she is a work around the corner of the precipice, a shameless fox

Al-Ra'n: the cut-off point of the mountain's nose, and Al-Dha'laba: the light one. Al-Waqah: the one with strong hoofs or hoofs. From this it is said: I sent so-and-so for my need, if you made him stand up from the place he is in to go about it. From this it is said for the Day of al-Qiyamah 75: the Day of Resurrection, because it is the day on which people will be raised from their graves for the place of reckoning.

What he means by his saying: after your death, is after your death by the thunderbolt that destroyed you.

And His statement: Perhaps you will be grateful, means: We did this to you so that you would thank Me for the blessings I bestowed upon you, by bringing you back to life, as a way for Me to preserve you, so that you would return to repentance from your great sin, after I brought down the punishment upon you with the thunderbolt that I brought down upon you, causing you to die for your great sin that was between you and your Lord. This statement is according to the interpretation of those who interpreted His statement: Then We raised you up, as meaning, Then We brought you back to life.

Others said: The meaning of his saying, Then We sent you, is that We sent you as prophets.

Musa bin Harun told me that, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us on the authority of Al-Suddi.

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of the statement is as al-Suddi interpreted it: Then the thunderbolt took you, then We revived you after your death, and you are looking at Our revival of you after your death, then We sent you as prophets so that you might be grateful.

Al-Saddi claimed that this is from the word muqaddam which means delay and the word muqaddam which means presentation.

Musa told us that, Amr bin Hammad told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi.

This is an interpretation that the apparent meaning of the recitation indicates is contrary to it, despite the consensus of the interpreters that it is wrong. The necessary interpretation of Al-Suddi, which we have narrated from him, is that the meaning of his statement, Perhaps you will be grateful, is that you will thank Me for making you prophets.

The reason for what they said to Moses was what God Almighty informed us about what they said to him, from their saying: We will not believe in you until we see God clearly, what Muhammad bin Hamid told us, he said, Salamah bin Al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ishaq, he said: When Moses returned to his people, and saw what they were doing of worshipping the calf, and he said to his brother and the Samaritan what he said, and burned the calf and scattered it in the sea, Moses chose from them seventy men, the best of the best, and said: Go to God Almighty and repent to Him for what you have done, and ask Him for repentance for those of your people you have left behind, fast and purify your clothes. So he went out with them to Mount Sinai for the appointed time that his Lord had set for him, and he would not come to it except with His permission and knowledge. So the seventy said to him, according to what was mentioned to me, when they did what he commanded them to do, and went out to meet his Lord: O Moses, ask for us from your Lord so that we may hear the words of our Lord, he said: I will. When Moses approached the mountain, a pillar of cloud fell upon him until it covered the entire mountain. Moses approached and entered upon it, and said to the al-Nas 114: Come near. When Moses was spoken to by his Lord, a bright light fell upon his forehead that no human being could look at. Then a veil was drawn before him, and the people approached, until when they entered the cloud, they fell down in prostration. They heard Him speaking to Moses, commanding him and forbidding him: Do and do not do. When He had finished commanding him, the cloud lifted from Moses. He came to them, and they said to Moses: We will not believe you until we see God plainly. Then the earthquake, which is a thunderbolt, seized them and their souls were torn away, and they all died. Moses stood up, imploring his Lord, calling upon Him and beseeching Him, saying: My Lord, if You had willed, You could have destroyed them and me before! They acted foolishly, so will You destroy those of the Children of Israel after me for what the fools among us did? Meaning: This is their destruction. I chose from them seventy men, the best after the best. I am returning to them, and not a single man of them is with me! What will they believe me about or trust me with after this? We have been guided to You. Moses kept imploring his Lord, asking Him and beseeching Him, until He restored their souls to them. He asked Him to grant the Children of Israel repentance from worshipping the calf, but He said: No, unless they kill

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: When the Children of Israel repented from worshipping the calf, and God accepted their repentance by killing each other as He had commanded them, God the Almighty commanded Moses to come to Him with some of the Children of Israel, to apologize to Him for worshipping the calf, and He promised them an appointment. So Moses chose seventy men from his people, and then he went with them to apologize. When they came to that place, they said: We will not believe you until we see God plainly, for you have spoken to Him, so show Him! So the thunderbolt struck them and they died. Then Moses stood up crying and supplicating to God, saying: My Lord, what shall I say to the Children of Israel when I come to them and You have destroyed their best? My Lord, if You had willed, You could have destroyed them and me before. Will You destroy us for what the fools among us have done? So God revealed to Moses that these seventy were among those who worshipped the calf. That is when Moses says: It is only your trial by which you mislead whom you will and guide whom you will until His saying: Indeed, we have turned back to you (al-A'raf 7:155-156). He says we have repented to you. That is His saying: And when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe in you until we see God with our own eyes,' and the thunderbolt seized you. Then God, the Most High, revived them and they rose and lived man by man, looking at each other at how they lived. They said: O Moses, you call upon God and do not ask Him for anything except that He gives it to you, so call upon Him to make us prophets. So he called upon God, the Most High, and He made them prophets. That is His saying: Then We raised you up after your death, but He advanced one letter and delayed another.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Moses said to them when he returned from his Lord with the tablets, on which the Torah was written, and he found them worshipping the calf, so he ordered them to kill themselves, and they did so, and God accepted their repentance: These tablets contain the Book of God, in which is His command that He ordered you to do, and His prohibition that He prohibited you from doing. They said: Who will take it based on what you say? No, by God, until we see God openly, until God looks down upon us and says: This is My Book, so take it. Why does He not speak to us as He spoke to you, O Moses, and say: This is My Book, so take it? And he recited the words of God the Most High: We will not believe in you until we see God openly. He said: Then the wrath of God came, and a thunderbolt came upon them after their repentance, and it struck them down and they all died. He said: Then God revived them after their death, and recited the words of God the Most High: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful. So Moses said to them: Take the Book of God. They said: No. He said: What happened to you? They said: It happened to us that we died and then came back to life! He said: Take the Book of God. They said: No. So God Almighty sent angels who climbed the mountain over them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: "Then the thunderbolt took you while you were looking on. Then We raised you up after your death," he said: The thunderbolt took them, then God Almighty raised them up to complete the rest of their terms.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, regarding His statement: Then the thunderbolt seized you, he said: They are the seventy whom Moses chose and they traveled with him. He said: So they heard a speech, and they said: We will not believe you until we see God plainly. He said: So they heard a voice and were struck dumb. He said: They died, so that is His statement: Then We raised you up after your death, so they were raised up after their death, because that death of theirs was a punishment for them, so they were raised up for the rest of their lives.

This is what was narrated about the reason why they said to Moses: We will not believe you until we see God openly.

We do not have any information about the authenticity of anything that was said by those we mentioned regarding the reason for their saying that to Moses, which would constitute an argument and he would be accepted. It is possible that this was part of what they said. Since there is no information about this that would constitute an argument, the correct thing to say about it is that God, the Most High, has informed us about the people of Moses that they said to him: O Moses, we will not believe in you until we see God clearly, just as He has informed us about them that they said it. God, the Most High, has only informed us about this about those who were addressed by these verses, as a rebuke to them for their disbelief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. His argument has been established against those who used it as evidence against him, and there is no need for those who have reached it to know the reason that led them to say that. Those we have informed us about have said the statements that we have mentioned, and it is possible that some of them are true, as he said.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: Then We raised you up after your death. That is, We brought you back to life. Qatada said: They died and their souls departed, then they were returned to complete their appointed times. An-Nahhas said: This is an argument against those of Quraysh who did not believe in the resurrection, and he argued with the People of the Book when they were informed of this. The meaning is that you may be grateful for what He did to you of the resurrection after death. It was said: They died a death of indolence that others would consider, then they were sent. The origin of resurrection is sending. It was said: Rather, its origin is stirring something from its place. It is said: I stirred

Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful.

the she-camel up ra'tha an-naqah meaning I stirred it up, meaning I moved it. Imru' al-Qais said:

And the young men of truth have been sent as magicians, and they all rose up between Aath and Nashwan.

Antara said

The companions of the Nose-Sniffing, I sent them at night, and sleep had overcome them.

Some of them said: We raised you up after your death, meaning we taught you after your ignorance.

I said: The first is more correct, because the original is the truth, and death was a punishment, and from it is the saying of God Almighty: Have you not considered those who went forth from their homes, and they were thousands, for fear of death? And God said to them, 'Die,' then He brought them to life, as will come.

Fifth: Al-Mawardi said: There is a difference of opinion regarding the continuation of the obligation of the one who was brought back after his death and the meanings of the conditions that compel knowledge into two opinions: One of them: Their obligation remains so that no sane person is devoid of worship. The second: Their obligation falls away, taking into account the inference without compulsion.

I said: The first is more correct, because the Children of Israel saw the mountain in the air falling on them and the fire surrounding them, and that is what forced them to believe, and the obligation remained fixed upon them, and the people of Jonah are like them. It is impossible that they were not obligated. And God knows best.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in sending you after the eclipse, if you asked to see Me openly and clearly, which is not possible for you or your likes, as Ibn Jurayj said. Ibn Abbas said about this verse, And when you said, O Moses, we will not believe you until we see God, he said: openly. And Ibrahim bin Tahman said the same on the authority of Ibad bin Ishaq on the authority of Abu Al-Huwayrith on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said about God Almighty's statement, We will not believe you until we see God openly, meaning openly, that is, until we see God. Qatada and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said, Until we see God openly, meaning clearly. Abu Ja'far said on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: They are the seventy whom Moses chose and they traveled with him. He said: So they heard a speech, so they said, We will not believe you until we see God openly. He said: So they heard a voice, so they swooned, he said, they died. Marwan bin Al-Hakam said, in his sermon on the pulpit of Mecca: Thunderbolt is a cry from the sky. Al-Suddi said about His statement, So the thunderbolt seized you, thunderbolt is fire. Urwah bin Ruwaim said about His statement, And you were watching, he said: Some of them were struck dumb and some were watching. Then these were sent and those were struck dumb.

Al-Suddi said, So the thunderbolt seized you, so they died. Then Moses stood up crying and supplicating to God, saying: O Lord, what shall I say to the Children of Israel when I come to them and You have destroyed the best of them? "If You had willed, You could have destroyed them and me before. Will You destroy us for what the fools among us have done?" So God revealed to Moses that these seventy were among those who took the calf, then God revived them and they stood up and lived, man by man, looking at one another to see how they would live. He said: That is what God Almighty said: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful. Al-Rabi' ibn Anas said: Their death was a punishment for them, so they were raised up after death to complete their appointed times. Qatada said the same. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Hamid told us, Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, who said: When Moses returned to his people and saw what they were doing of worshipping the calf, and he said to his brother and to the Samaritan what he said, and burned the calf and scattered it in the sea, Moses chose from among them seventy men, the best of the best, and said: Go to God and repent to God for what you have done, and ask Him for repentance for those of your people whom you have left behind you. Fast, purify yourselves, and purify your clothes. So he went out with them to Mount Sinai for the appointed time that his Lord had set for him, and he would not come to it except with His permission and knowledge. So the seventy said to him, as I have mentioned, when they did what they were commanded to do and went out to meet God, they said: O Moses, ask for us from your Lord so that we may hear the speech of our Lord. So he said: I will do it. So when Moses approached the mountain, the clouds fell upon him until they covered the entire mountain. Moses approached and entered it, and said to the al-Nas 114: Come near. And when God spoke to Moses, a bright light fell upon his forehead that no one among the sons of Adam could look at. So a veil was placed between him, and the people approached until when they entered the clouds, they fell down in prostration and they heard him speaking to Moses, commanding him and forbidding him: Do and do not do. So when he finished with his command to him, the clouds were removed from Moses, and he came to them. So they said to Moses: We will not believe in you until we see God clearly. So the earthquake, which is the thunderbolt, took them, and they all died. And Moses stood up, imploring his Lord and calling upon Him and beseeching Him, and saying: My Lord, if You had willed, You could have destroyed them before. And they have acted foolishly with me. Will you destroy those of the Children of Israel who come after me, because of what the fools among us do? That is, this is their destruction, and I have chosen from among them seventy good men, then the best. I will return to them, and not one man from them is with me. So what will they believe in me and trust me with after this? We have been guided to You. So Moses kept calling upon his Lord, the Almighty, and asking Him until He restored their souls to them, and asked them to repent for the Children of Israel from worshipping the calf, and He said: No, unless they kill themselves. This is the context of Muhammad bin Ishaq. Ismail bin Abdul Rahman Al-Suddi Al-Kabir said: When the Children of Israel repented from worshipping the calf, and God accepted their repentance by killing each other as God commanded them, God commanded Moses to come to Him with every group of the Children of Israel who would apologize to Him for worshipping the calf, and Moses made an appointment with them. Moses chose seventy men in his sight, then he went with them to apologize, and he brought the rest. This context requires that the address was directed to the Children of Israel in His statement: "And when you said, 'O Moses, we will not believe in you until we see God with our own eyes.' " What is meant is the seventy chosen from them, and many commentators have not narrated anything other than him. Al-Razi was strange in his interpretation when he narrated in the story of these seventy: that after they were revived, they said: O Moses, you do not ask God for anything except that He gives it to you, so ask Him to make us prophets. So he called for that and God answered his call. This is very strange, since no prophet was known in the time of Moses except for Aaron and then Joshua bin Nun. The People of the Book also made a mistake in their claim that these people saw God Almighty, since Moses, peace be upon him, the one who spoke to God, asked for that and was denied it, so how could these seventy people attain it?

The second statement on the verse: Abd al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said in his interpretation of this verse: Moses said to them when he returned from his Lord with the tablets on which the Torah was written and he found them worshipping the calf, so he ordered them to kill themselves and they did, so God accepted their repentance and said: These tablets contain the Book of God in which is your commands that He ordered you and your prohibitions that He prohibited you from. They said: Who will take it based on what you say? No, by God, until we see God openly until God looks at us and says: This is My Book, so take it. Why does He not speak to us as He speaks to you, O Moses? And he recited the statement of God: We will not believe in you until we see God openly. He said: Then the wrath of God came and a thunderbolt came upon them after their repentance and struck them and they all died. He said: Then God revived them after their death and recited the statement of God: Then We raised you up after your death that you might be grateful. So Moses said to them: Take the Book of God. They said: No. He said: What happened to you? They said: It happened to us that we died and then were brought back to life. He said: Take the Book of God. They said: No. So God sent angels who lifted the mountain above them. This context indicates that they were charged after they were brought back to life. Al-Mawardi mentioned two opinions about this: The first is that the charge was dropped from them because they witnessed the matter openly until they were forced to believe it. The second is that they were charged so that no sane person would be without a charge. Al-Qurtubi said: This is the correct view because their witnessing of terrible things does not prevent them from being charged, because the Children of Israel witnessed great things of the extraordinary, and they were charged in that, and this is clear, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

What is meant by his saying: 56- Then We raised you up is to revive them because it occurred after death. The origin of resurrection is to stir up something from its place. It is said: the she-camel was raised up: meaning it left its trace. From this is the saying of Imru' al-Qais:

And the brothers of truth sent magicians, and they all stood up, between Ghath and Nashwan.

And Antara said:

The companions of the Nose-Sniffing, I sent them at night, and sleep had overcome them.

They were punished by being struck by lightning because they asked for something that God had not permitted, namely seeing Him in this world. The Mu'tazila and those who followed them denied seeing Him in this world and the Hereafter, while those who were not like them believed that it was permissible in this world and the Hereafter and that it would occur in the Hereafter. There are many authentic hadiths that the servants will see their Lord in the Hereafter, and this is a clear evidence that no fair-minded person should hold on to in return for it with those theological principles that the early Mu'tazila came up with, and they claimed that reason had ruled on it as a claim based on the edge of a collapsing precipice, and principles that only those who do not have a share of beneficial knowledge would be deceived by. God willing, we will provide you with an explanation of the Qur'anic evidence that they held on to, and all of it is outside the place of dispute and far from the place of proof, and this is not the place to discuss this issue.

56. The Almighty's saying: Then We resurrected you. We revived you, and resurrection is the stirring of something from its place. It is said: I resurrected the camel and I resurrected the sleeper, so he arose. After your death. Qatada said: He revived them so that they might complete the rest of their terms and provisions. If they had died at their terms, they would not have been resurrected until the Day of Resurrection. So that you may be grateful.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

56- Then We raised you up after your death because of the thunderbolt, and the restriction of the raising up because it may be due to fainting or sleep, as God Almighty says: Then We raised them up.

Perhaps you will be grateful for the blessing of resurrection, or you may not have denied it when you saw God's punishment with the thunderbolt.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:57

And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], "Eat from the good things which We have provided for you." And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:57

And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], "Eat from the good things which We have provided for you." And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And We shaded you with clouds We covered you with thin clouds from the heat of the sun in the wilderness And We sent down upon you in it manna and quails they are the tarangbin and the quail bird with a lightened and shortened meem and We said: Eat from the good things which We have provided for you and do not hoard, so they denied the blessing and hoarded, so it was cut off from them And they did not wrong Us in that but they were wronging themselves because its consequences were upon them.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

And We shaded you with clouds is in apposition to His statement: Then We raised you up after your death. The interpretation of the verse is: Then We raised you up after your death and We shaded you with clouds. He enumerated for them all the blessings He bestowed upon them that you might be grateful. Clouds is the plural of ghamama just as sahb is the plural of sahabah. Ghamm is what covers the sky, so it is covered with clouds and darkness, and other things that conceal it from the eyes of onlookers. The Arabs call everything that is covered ghumm. It has been said that the clouds that God shaded the Children of Israel with were not clouds.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us, he said, Abu Ahmad told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: It is not the clouds.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: It is not the clouds, it is the cloud in which God will come on the Day of Resurrection, it was only for them.

Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God, may He be glorified: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: It is like the clouds.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told me, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said:

Ibn Abbas said: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: It is a cloud that is cooler than this and more pleasant, and it is the one in which God Almighty will come on the Day of Resurrection in His statement: In canopies of clouds Al-Baqarah 2:210, and it is the one in which the angels came on the day of Badr. Ibn Abbas said: And it was with them in the wilderness.

If the meaning of clouds is what we have described, that which clouds the sky with something that covers its face from the one looking at it, then what God Almighty shaded the Children of Israel with, and described as being a cloud, is not more likely, by His description of it as such, to be a cloud than it is to be something else that covers the face of the sky with something.

It has been said: It is the white part of the clouds.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And We sent down upon you manna.

The people of interpretation differed regarding the description of manna. Some of them said what: Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God Almighty: And We sent down upon you manna, he said: Manna is gum.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And We sent down upon you manna and quails, he said: The manna would come down upon them like snow.

Others said: It is a drink. Those who said that mentioned: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, he said: Manna is a drink that would come down upon them like honey, so they would mix it with water and then drink it.

Others said: Manna is honey. Those who said that were mentioned: Yunus bin Abd al-A'la told us, Ibn Wahb told us, Ibn Zayd said: Manna is honey that was sent down to them from the sky.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us, Abu Ahmad told us, Israel told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of Amer, who said: Your honey is one part of seventy parts of manna.

Others said: Manna is flat bread. Those who said that: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ismail bin Abdul Karim told us, he said, Abdul Samad told me, he said: I heard Wahba and he was asked: What is manna? He said: Flat bread, like corn and like flour.

Others said: Manna is ginger. Those who said that were mentioned: Musa bin Harun told me, he said: Amr bin Hammad told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Manna used to fall on ginger trees.

Others said: Manna is what falls on trees and is eaten by people. Those who said that were mentioned: Al-Qasim told me, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Ibn Abbas said: Manna would fall on their trees, and they would come to it and eat from it as much as they wanted.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Al-Hammani told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Mujalid, on the authority of Amer, regarding his statement: And We sent down upon you manna, he said: The manna that falls on the trees.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab bin Al-Harith, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: The manna, he said: The manna that falls from the sky onto the trees and people eat it.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us, he said, Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Mujalid, on the authority of Amer, he said: Manna is what falls on trees.

It has been said that manna is turmeric.

Some of them said, Manna is what falls on the thamam and the ash, and it is sweet like honey. Al-A'sha Maymun bin Qais meant it when he said:

If they were fed manna and quails instead of them, people would not have seen any benefit from them.

It was reported that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eyes. Some of them said: Manna is a sweet drink that they would cook and drink.

As for Umayyah ibn Abi al-Salt, he made it honey in his poetry, and he said, describing their situation in the wilderness and what they were provided with in it:

God saw that they were lost, with no farms or inhabited land.

And he forgot about them, going out and passing by, their clouds were empty and weak.

Fresh honey, sweet water, and delicious milk.

Al-Muthmur: pure milk. So He made the manna that was falling on them into dripping honey. And dripping is the dripping.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And the quails.

Abu Jaafar said: Al-Salwa is the name of a bird similar to the quail. Its singular and plural are pronounced the same. Likewise, the plural and singular of the quail are pronounced the same. It has been said that the singular of the quail is Salwa.

Mention of those who said that: Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told me, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, in a report he mentioned on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and on the authority of Marra Al-Hamadani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, and on the authority of some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Al-Salwa is a bird that resembles the quail.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: It was a bird larger than a quail.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said: The quail was a bird that the south wind used to bring to them.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: The quail is a bird.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: The quail is a bird.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ismail bin Abdul Karim told us, he said, Abdul Samad told me, he said: I heard Wahb and he was asked: What is the quail? He said: A fat bird like a pigeon.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: The quail is a bird.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas: The salwa was a bird that would come to them like a quail.

Al-Muthanna told me, Al-Hammani told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Mujalid, on the authority of Amer, he said: The quail is the quail.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Al-Salwa is the quail.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us, he said, Abu Ahmad told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Mujalid, on the authority of Amer, he said: The quail is the quail.

Ibn Bashar told us, Abu Amer told us, Qara told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, who said: The quail is the quail.

If someone says: What is the reason for God Almighty to shade us with clouds and send down manna and quails to these people?

It was said: The scholars differed on this. We will mention what we have of it:

Musa bin Harun narrated to us, he said: Amr bin Hammad narrated to us, he said: Asbat bin Nasr narrated to us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: When God accepted the repentance of the people of Moses, and revived the seventy whom Moses had chosen after He had killed them, God commanded them to march to Jericho, which is the land of Jerusalem. So they marched, and when they were close to them, Moses sent twelve leaders. And what happened to them, and the tyrants, and the people of Moses, was what God has related in His Book. So the people of Moses said to Moses: Go, you and your Lord, and fight. We will remain here. So Moses became angry and supplicated against them, saying: My Lord, I have no control over anyone except myself and my brother, so separate us from the wicked people. So it was a haste on the part of Moses, so God the Most High said: It is forbidden to them for forty years, while they wander in the land. So when the wandering was imposed upon them, Moses regretted it, and his people who had been with him and obeyed him came to him and said to him: What have you done to us, O Moses? When he regretted it, God revealed to him: Do not grieve over the wicked people, meaning do not be sad for the people whom you called wicked. So he did not grieve. They said: O Moses, how can we have water here? Where is the food? So God sent down manna upon them, and it would fall on the tangerine and quail trees, which are birds that resemble quails. One of them would come and look at the bird. If it was fat, he would slaughter it, otherwise he would release it. When it was fat, it would come to him. They said: This is the food, but where is the drink? So Moses commanded that he strike the rock with his staff, and twelve springs gushed forth from it, and each tribe drank from one spring. They said: This is the food and drink, but where is the shade? So the clouds shaded them. They said: This is the shade, but where is the clothing? Their clothes would grow longer with them as they grow with children, and their clothes would not be torn. This is what He said: And We shaded you with clouds and sent down upon you manna and quails. And He said: "And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, 'Strike the rock with your staff.' Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their drinking place." (al-Baqarah 2:60)

And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], "Eat from the good things which We have provided for you." And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves.

Ibn Humayd narrated that Salamah narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, who said: When God, the Almighty, accepted the repentance of the Children of Israel and commanded Moses to lift the sword from them in worshipping the calf, He commanded Moses to go with them to the Holy Land and said: I have written it down for you as a home, a settlement and a place to stay, so go out to it and fight the enemy in it, for I will support you against them. So Moses went with them to the Holy Land by the command of God, the Almighty. When he reached the desert between Egypt and Syria, a land in which there was neither wine nor shade, Moses called upon his Lord when the heat was harming them, so He shaded them with clouds, and he called upon God for provision, so God sent down to them manna and quails.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, he narrated to us from Ibn Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', his saying: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: The clouds shaded them in the wilderness, about the distance of five or six farsakhs, every time they woke up they would set out in the morning, and when they spent the evening they were in the place from which they had departed. And they remained like that until forty years had passed. He said: And while they were in that state, manna and quails would descend upon them, and their clothes would not wear out. And with them was a stone from the stones of Mount Mount that they would carry with them, and when they came down, Moses would strike it with his staff, and twelve springs would gushed forth from it.

Al-Muthanna told me, Ishaq told us, Ismail bin Abdul Karim told us, Abdul Samad told me, I heard Wahb say: When God forbade the Children of Israel from entering the Holy Land for forty years, they wandered in the land, complaining to Moses and saying: What shall we eat? He said: God will bring you what you eat. They said: Where shall we get it from? Unless He rains bread on us! He said: God will send down baked bread upon you. So manna was sent down upon them. Wahb was asked: What is manna? He said: Flat bread like corn or flour. They said: What shall we eat as a condiment? Do we need meat? He said: God will bring it to you. They said: Where shall we get it from? Unless the wind brings it to us! He said: The wind brings it to you. So the wind used to bring them quails. Wahb was asked: What is quail? He said: A fat bird like a pigeon, which would come to them and they would take from it from Saturday to Saturday. They said: What shall we wear? He said: No garment shall be created for any of you for forty years. They said: What shall we wear? He said: None of you will have his lace cut off for forty years. They said: If children are born among us, what shall we clothe them with? He said: A garment for the young one to grow up with. They said: Where will we get water from? He said: God will bring it to you. They said: Where then? Except that it comes out of the rock. So God, the Blessed and Exalted, commanded Moses to strike the rock with his staff. They said: We cannot see, for darkness covers us! So he struck for them a pillar of light in the middle of their camp, which illuminated their entire camp. They said: What shade shall we seek? For the sun is very strong upon us! He said: God will shade you with clouds.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, Ibn Zayd said, and he mentioned something similar to the hadith of Musa bin Harun, on the authority of Amr bin Hammad, on the authority of Asbat, on the authority of Al-Suddi.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told me, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told us, Ibn Jurayj said: Abdullah bin Abbas said: Clothes were created for them in the wilderness that would not wear out or get dirty. He said: Ibn Jurayj said: If a man took from the manna and quails on top of the food of one day, it would spoil, except that they would take on Friday the food of Saturday, and it would not spoil.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Eat from the good things which We have provided for you.

This is something that was sufficient because of its apparent meaning, which was omitted from it. That is because the interpretation of the verse is: And We shaded you with clouds, and sent down upon you manna and quails, and said to you: Eat from the good things with which We have provided you. So He omitted mentioning His statement: And We said to you, because we explained the apparent meaning of the address to it.

And He, the Most High, meant by His saying, Eat from the good things which We have provided for you: Eat from the delicious things of Our provision which We have provided for you.

It has been said: What he meant by his saying: From the good things that We have provided for you, is from what We have made lawful for you and made it a provision for you.

The first of the two statements is more deserving of interpretation, because it describes the people's comfortable life that God gave them, so describing it as good, which means pleasure, is more appropriate than describing it as permissible and lawful.

And what is with Rizqnakum meaning that which. It is as if it was said: Eat from the good things of the provision that We have provided for you.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They did not wrong us, but they were wronging themselves.

This is also one of those who were satisfied with the apparent meaning of what was left out of it. That is because the meaning of the statement is: Eat from the good things that We have provided for you. But they disobeyed what We commanded them to do and disobeyed their Lord, then Our Messenger to them, and they did not wrong Us, so what was apparent was sufficient for what was left out.

And His saying: And they did not wrong us means: And they did not wrong us by doing that and disobeying us, but they were wronging themselves.

What he means by his saying: And they did not wrong us, is that they did not place their action and disobedience to us in a position of harm to us and a shortcoming for us, but they placed it in a position of harm to themselves and a shortcoming for them. As: I was told by Al-Munjab, he said, Bishr told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And they did not wrong us, but they were wronging themselves, he said: they were harming.

We have previously demonstrated that the origin of injustice is: putting something in the wrong place, which is not sufficient, so that it is unnecessary to repeat it.

Likewise, our Lord, may He be glorified, is not harmed by the disobedience of a disobedient person, nor is His treasures diminished by the injustice of an oppressor, nor does the obedience of an obedient person benefit

Him, nor does the justice of a just person increase His kingdom. Rather, He wrongs the unjust person, and His portion diminishes the disobedient person, while He benefits the obedient person, and His portion reaches the just person.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], 'Eat from the good things We have provided for you.' And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves. There are eight issues in it.

First: The Almighty's saying: And We shaded you with clouds, meaning We made it over you like a canopy. Clouds are the plural of ghamama, like sahaba and sahab, as stated by Al-Akhfash Saeed. Al-Farra' said: It is permissible to say ghamama'im, which is the clouds, because they cover the sky, meaning they conceal it, and everything that covers is ghummm, and from this comes the word ghumm over his mind. And the crescent moon is gham if the clouds cover it. And ghayn is like ghaym, and from this comes his saying, peace be upon him:

It is a veil over my heart. The author of Al-Ain said: Ghayn alayhi means to cover it. Ghayn is a dead tree. Al-Suddi said: The cloud is the white cloud. He did this to them to protect them from the heat of the sun during the day, and it clears at the end of it so that they can be illuminated by the moon at night. The commentators mentioned that this happened in the wilderness between Egypt and Syria when they refused to enter the city of the tyrants and fight them, and they said to Moses: Then go, you and your Lord. So they were punished in that examination for forty years wandering in five or six leagues. It was narrated that they used to walk all day and stop to spend the night, and in the morning they would be where they were the morning before. When they were all in the wilderness, they said to Moses: Who will provide us with food? So God sent down upon them manna and quails. They said: Who will provide us from the heat of the sun? So the clouds appeared over them. They said: Where will we wake up? So a pillar of light was set for them in the middle of their camp. Makki mentioned: A pillar of fire. They said: Who will provide us with water? Then Moses ordered that the stone be struck. They said: Who will provide us with clothing? So they were given that their clothing would not wear out, rot, or deteriorate, and that their young would grow as children grow. And God knows best.

The second: The Almighty's saying: And We sent down upon you manna and quails. There is a difference of opinion regarding what manna is and its specification. It was said: Taranjabin - with a shaddah on the ra' and a sukoon on the noon, mentioned by An-Nahhas. It is also said: Taranjabin with a ta' - and this is what most commentators agree with. It was also said: Sweet gum. It was also said: Honey. It was also said: Sweet drink. It was also said: Thin bread, on the authority of Wahb ibn Munabbih. It was also said: Manna is a source that includes everything that God bestows upon His servants without effort or cultivation.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:57

And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], "Eat from the good things which We have provided for you." And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves.

From this is the saying of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in the hadith of Saeed ibn Zayd ibn Nufayl:

Truffles are from the manna that God sent down to the Children of Israel, and their water is a cure for the eyes. In another narration: From the manna that God sent down to Moses. Narrated by Muslim. Our scholars said: This hadith indicates that truffles are from what God sent down to the Children of Israel. That is, from what God created for them in the wilderness. Abu Ubaid said: He only likened it to manna because it does not require the effort of sowing, watering, or treatment, so it is from it. That is, from the same type as the Children of Israel in that it was without difficulty. It was narrated that it would descend upon them from dawn until sunrise like snow, and a man would take what was sufficient for the day. If he saved any of it, it would be spoiled for him, except on Friday, for they would save it for Saturday, and it would not be spoiled for them, because Saturday is a day of worship, and nothing would descend upon them on Saturday.

Third: When peace be upon him stated that:

Truffle water is a cure for the eyes. Some medical scholars said: Either to cool the eyes from some of the heat in them, then it is used alone. Or for something else, then it is combined with something else. Abu Hurairah, may God be pleased with him, used it purely for all eye diseases. This is like Abu Wajzah using honey for all diseases, even as kohl, as will be explained in Surat An-Nahl, God willing. Linguists said: Truffle is one, truffle is two, and truffle is three. If they add more, they say: truffle - with a taa - unlike tree and trees. Mann is a generic noun that has no singular form, like good and evil, as Al-Akhfash said.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: And the quails. There is a difference of opinion about the quails. Some say that it is the quail itself, as Ad-Dahhak said. Ibn Atiyah said: The quails are birds according to the consensus of the commentators. Al-Hudhali made a mistake when he said:

I swear by God that you are sweeter than quails when we resurrect them.

He thought the consolation was honey.

I said: What he claimed of consensus is not correct. Al-Mu'arrarj, one of the scholars of language and interpretation, said: It is honey, and he provided evidence for it with the verse of Al-Hudhali, and he mentioned that it is like that in the language of Kinanah, and it was named thus because it is used to console oneself, and from it is the spring of consolation, and he recited:

If I could drink consolation, I would not be comforted. I have no need for you, even if I were rich.

Al-Jawhari said: And the salwa is honey, and he mentioned the verse of Al-Hudhali:

More delicious than quail when we spread it

He did not mention a mistake. As-Salwana with a dammah: a bead. They used to say that if rainwater was poured over it and the lover drank it, he would be consoled. He said:

I drank the water of a rain shower on Silwana, but the new life, oh water, does not make me forget

The name of that water is Silwan. Some of them said Silwan is a medicine given to the sad to console them, and doctors call it Al-Mufrih. It is said: Salit and Salwat, two languages. And he is in comfort from life, meaning in ease, according to Abu Zaid.

Fifth: There is a difference of opinion about the word salwa as to whether it is plural or singular. Al-Akhfash said: It is a plural that does not have a singular form, like good and evil. It is similar to being a singular word salwa like its plural, as they said: Dafila for the singular and the plural, and Samani and Shaka'i for the singular and the plural. Al-Khalil said: It is a singular word salwa, and he recited:

I am shaken by your remembrance, just as a camel shakes from the wetness of rain.

Al-Kisa'i said: Al-Salwa is singular, and its plural is salwa.

Sixth: Al-Salwa is in apposition to Al-Manna, and the i'rab does not appear in it, because it is shortened. This is required for all shortened words, because they are not free from having an alif at the end. Al-Khalil said: The alif is an airy letter with no fixed position, so it resembles a vowel, so its vowel is impossible. Al-Farra' said: If you move the alif, it becomes a hamza.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: Eat from the good things which We have provided for you. "Eat" is an omission in the phrase and We said eat, so it was omitted for the sake of brevity because the apparent meaning indicates it. And the good things here include the permissible and the delicious.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: And they did not wrong Us means before it they disobeyed and did not respond to the blessings with gratitude. But they were wronging themselves because they responded to the blessings with sins.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

When God Almighty mentioned what He had averted from them of punishments, He also began to remind them of the blessings He had bestowed upon them, so He said: And We shaded you with clouds, which is the plural of cloud, and it was called that because it covers the sky, i.e. conceals it and covers it. It is the white cloud that they shaded themselves with in the wilderness to protect them from the heat of the sun, as narrated by Al-Nasa'i and others on the authority of Ibn Abbas in the hadith of the trials. He said: Then He shaded them with clouds in the wilderness. Ibn Abi

Hatim said: It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Abu Majlaz, Al-Dahhak, and Al-Suddi something similar to what Ibn Abbas said. Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: And We shaded you with clouds, this was in the wilderness, the clouds shaded them from the sun. Ibn Jarir said: Others said: It is a cloud that is cooler than this and more pleasant. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abu Hudhayfah told us, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, And We shaded you with clouds, he said, the clouds are not the clouds in which God will come on the Day of Resurrection, and they were only for them. And this is how Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim on the authority of Abu Hudhayfah, and this is how Al-Thawri and others narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh on the authority of Mujahid. It seems that he meant, and God knows best, that it is not like this cloud, but rather better, more pleasant and more splendid in appearance, as Sunayd said in his interpretation on the authority of Hajjaj bin Muhammad on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Ibn Abbas said, And We shaded you with clouds, he said, a cloud cooler than this and more pleasant, and it is the one in which God will come in His statement, Do they await except that God should come to them in canopies of clouds and the angels? And this is what the angels came in on the day of Badr. Ibn Abbas said, and it was with them in the wilderness. And the statement of God, the Most High, And We sent down upon you manna, the commentators differed in their expressions regarding what manna is? Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Manna would descend upon them on the trees, and they would go to it and eat from it as much as they wanted. Mujahid said: Manna is gum. Ikrimah said: Manna is something that God sent down upon them like dew, like thick syrup. Al-Suddi said: They said: O Moses, how can we have what is here, meaning food? So God sent down manna upon them, and it would fall on a ginger tree. Qatada said: Manna would descend upon them in their place like snow falling, whiter than milk and sweeter than honey. It would fall upon them from sunrise until sunrise. A man would take from it what would suffice him for that day, but if he exceeded that, it would spoil and not remain, until the sixth day was Friday. He would take what would suffice him for the sixth day and the seventh day because it was a day of celebration, in which he would not go out to care for his livelihood or seek it for anything, and all of this was in the wilderness. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: Manna is a drink that would descend upon them like honey, so they would mix it with water and then drink it. Wahb ibn Munabbih said, and he was asked about manna, and he said, thin bread like corn or like flour. Abu Ja'far ibn Jarir said, Muhammad ibn Ishaq told me, Abu Ahmad told us, Israel told us, on the authority of Jabir, on the authority of 'Amir, who is al-Sha'bi, who said: This honey of yours is one part of seventy parts of manna. And 'Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said the same: it is honey. It was found in the poetry of Umayyah ibn Abi al-Salt where he said:

God saw that they were lost, with no crops or fruits.

And its light is upon them, rushing forth, and you see their clouds descending and falling.

Fresh honey, sweet water, and milk full of joy.

The naatif is the liquid and the pure sour milk from it, and the point is that the expressions of the commentators are close in explaining manna, some of them interpreted it as food, and some of them interpreted it as drink, and it appears, and God knows best, that it is everything that God has blessed them with of food and drink and other things for which they have no work or effort, so the well-known manna if eaten alone is food and sweetness, and if mixed with water it becomes a good drink, and if combined with something else it becomes another type, but it is not what is meant by the verse alone, and the evidence for that is the statement of Al-Bukhari: Abu Naim told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abdul Malik, on the authority of Amr bin Harith, on the authority of Saeed bin Zaid, may God be pleased with him, he said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna and their water is a cure for the eye. This hadith was narrated by Imam Ahmad on the authority of Sufyan bin Uyaynah on the authority of Abdul Malik, who is Ibn Umair, on his authority, and the group included it in their books except Abu Dawud through chains of transmission on the authority of Abdul Malik, who is Ibn Umair, on his authority, and Al-Tirmidhi said: Hasan Sahih, and Al-Bukhari and Muslim narrated it from the narration of Al-Hakam on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Arni narrated on the authority of Amr bin Harith, and Al-Tirmidhi said: Abu Ubaidah bin Abi Al-Safar and Mahmoud bin Ghailan narrated to us, they said: Saeed bin Aamer narrated to us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Amr, on the authority of Abu Salamah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Ajwa dates are from Paradise, and in them is a cure for poison, and truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. Al-Tirmidhi was the only one to narrate it, then he said: This is a good, strange hadith, we do not know it except from the hadith of Muhammad bin Amr and from the hadith of Saeed bin Aamer from him, and in this chapter from Saeed bin Zaid, Abu Saeed, and Jabir - this is what he said - and Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr bin Mardawayh narrated it in his interpretation from another chain of transmission from Abu Hurairah, he said: Ahmad bin Al-Hasan bin Ahmad Al-Basri narrated to us, Aslam bin Sahl narrated to us, Al-Qasim bin Isa narrated to us, Talhah bin Abd Al-Rahman narrated to us from Qatadah from Saeed bin Al-Musayyab from Abu Hurairah, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. This is a strange hadith from this aspect. And Talha bin Abdul Rahman, this As-Salami Al-Wasiti, was nicknamed Abu Muhammad, and it was said: Abu Sulayman Al-Mu'addib. Al-Hafiz Abu Ahmad bin Adi said about him: He narrated things from Qatada that are not corroborated. Then Al-Tirmidhi said: Muhammad bin Bashir told us, Muadh bin Hisham told us, my father told us, from Qatada, from Shahr bin Hawshab, from Abu Hurayrah: Some of the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The truffle is the smallpox of the earth. So the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The truffle is from manna and its water is a cure for the eye. And the dates are from Paradise and are a cure for poison. This hadith was narrated by Al-Nasa'i from

And We shaded you with clouds and sent down to you manna and quails, [saying], "Eat from the good things which We have provided for you." And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves.

Muhammad bin Bashir with it, and from him from Ghundar from Shu'bah from Abu Bishr Ja'far bin Ayyas from Shahr bin Hawshab from Abu Hurayrah with it, and from Muhammad bin Bashir from Abdul A'la from Khalid Al-Hadha' from Shahr bin Hawshab with the story of the truffle only. Al-Nasa'i also narrated, and Ibn Majah narrated from the hadith of Muhammad bin Bashir, from Abu Abd al-Samad Abd al-Aziz ibn Abd al-Samad, from Matar al-Warraq, from Shahr: with the story of the 'ajwa dates according to al-Nasa'i, and with the two stories according to Ibn Majah. This chain of transmission is interrupted between Shahr ibn Hawshab and Abu Hurayrah, as he did not hear from him, as evidenced by what al-Nasa'i narrated in al-Waleemah from his Sunan, from Ali ibn al-Husayn al-Darhami, from Abd al-A'la, from Sa'id ibn Abi 'Aruba, from Qatadah, from Shahr ibn Hawshab, from Abd al-Rahman ibn Ghanim, from Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, went out while they were mentioning truffles, and some of them were saying: Smallpox of the earth, so he said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. It was narrated from Shahr ibn Hawshab, from Abu Sa'id and Jabir, as Imam Ahmad said: Asbat ibn Muhammad told us, al-A'mash told us, from Ja'far ibn Iyas, from Shahr ibn Hawshab, from Jabir ibn 'Abdullah and Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure. Al-Nasa'i also said in Al-Waleemah: Muhammad bin Bashir told us, Muhammad ibn Ja'far told us, Shu'bah told us, on the authority of Abu Bishr Ja'far ibn Iyas, on the authority of Shahr ibn Hawshab, on the authority of Abu Sa'id and Jabir, may God be pleased with them both, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. Then Ibn Majah also narrated it through the chains of transmission of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Abu Bishr, on the authority of Shahr, on their authority, on his authority. They both narrated - I mean Al-Nasa'i from the hadith of Jarir and Ibn Majah from the hadith of Sa'id ibn Abi Salamah - both of them from Al-A'mash, on the authority of Ja'far ibn Iyas, on the authority of Abu Nadrah, on the authority of Abu Sa'id. Al-Nasa'i and the hadith of Jabir narrated it from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. Ibn Mardawayh narrated it from Ahmad ibn Uthman, on the authority of Abbas Al-Duri, on the authority of Lahiqa ibn Sawab, on the authority of Ammar ibn Zuraiq, on the authority of Al-A'mash, like Ibn Majah. Ibn Mardawayh also said: Ahmad ibn Uthman told us, Abbas Al-Duri told us, Al-Hasan ibn Al-Rabi' told us, Abu Al-Ahwas told us. On the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal bin Amr, on the authority of Abd Al-Rahman bin Abi Laila, on the authority of Abu Saeed Al-Khudri, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came out to us with truffles in his hand, and he said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eyes.

Al-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Amr bin Mansour, on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Al-Rabi', on his authority: Then Ibn Mardawayh also narrated it on the authority of Abdullah bin Ishaq, on the authority of Al-Hasan bin Salam, on the authority of Ubaidullah bin Musa, on the authority of Shaiban, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on his authority. And likewise Al-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Ahmad bin Uthman bin Hakim, on the authority of Ubaidullah bin Musa. It was narrated from the hadith of Anas bin Malik, may God be pleased with him, as Ibn Mardawayh said: Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Ibrahim told us, Hamdun bin Ahmad told us, Hawthara bin Ashras told us, Hammad told us, on the authority of Shu'ayb bin Al-Habhab, on the authority of Anas: The companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, argued about the tree that had been uprooted from the surface of the earth, and it had no resting place. Some of them said: We think it is a truffle, so the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eyes. And Ajwa dates are from Paradise, and in them is a cure for poison." This hadith is authentic, originally from the narration of Hammad ibn Salamah. Al-Tirmidhi and Al-Nasa'i narrated something of this from his chain of transmission, and God knows best. It was narrated from Shahr from Ibn Abbas, as Al-Nasa'i also narrated in Al-Waleemah from Abu Bakr Ahmad ibn Ali ibn Sa'id from Abdullah ibn Awn Al-Kharraz from Abu Ubaidah Al-Haddad from Abdul Jalil ibn Atiyah from Shahr from Abdullah ibn Abbas from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said, Truffles are from manna, and their water is a cure for the eye. As you can see, there is a difference of opinion regarding Shahr ibn Hawshab, and I think it is possible that he memorized it and narrated it from all of these chains of transmission. I heard it from some of the Companions, and it was transmitted to him from some of them, for the chains of transmission to him are good, and he does not intentionally lie. The origin of the hadith is authentic from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as mentioned previously from the narration of Sa'id ibn Zayd, may God be pleased with him.

As for the quail, Ali bin Abi Talha said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The quail is a bird similar to the quail, and they used to eat from it. Al-Suddi said in his report, he mentioned it on the authority of Abu Malik and on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas and on the authority of Marra on the authority of Ibn Masoud and on the authority of some of the Companions: Al-Salwa is a bird that resembles the quail. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Al-Hasan bin Muhammad bin Al-Sabah told us, Abdul Samad bin Al-Warith told us, Qurra bin Khalid told us on the authority of Jahdam on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Al-Salwa is the quail. And this is what Mujahid, Al-Sha'bi, Al-Dahhak, Al-Hasan, Ikrimah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas, may God Almighty have mercy on them, said. And on the authority of Ikrimah: As for Al-Salwa, it is a bird like a bird that is in Paradise, larger than a sparrow or something like that. Qatada said: Al-Salwa was a bird closer to redness than the south wind would bring upon them, and a man would slaughter from it an amount that would suffice him for that day, but if he exceeded it, it would be spoiled and nothing would remain with him until the sixth day was his Friday, he would take what would suffice him for the sixth day and the seventh day, because it was a day of worship in which he would not set out for anything or seek it. And Wahb bin Munabbih said: Al-Salwa is a fat bird like a dove that would come to them and they would take from it from Saturday to Saturday. And in another narration: On the authority of Wahb, he said: The Children of Israel asked Moses, peace be upon him, for meat, so God said: I will feed them from the least meat known on earth. So He sent upon them a wind that scattered quails, which are quails, about a mile by a mile, the length of a spear, in the sky. So they stored them for the next day, and the meat stank and the bread rotted. Al-Suddi said: When the Children of Israel entered the wilderness, they said to Moses, peace be upon him: How can we have what is here? Where is the food? So God sent down upon them manna, and it would descend upon the ginger tree, and the quail, which is a bird similar to the quail, larger than it. So one of them would come and look at the bird, and if it was fat, he would slaughter it, otherwise he would release it. When it was fat, it would come to him. They said: This is the food, but where is the drink? So Moses commanded that he strike the rock with his staff, and twelve springs gushed forth from it, and each tribe drank from one spring. They said: This is the drink, but where is the shade? So the clouds shaded them, and they said: This is the shade, but where is the clothing? Their clothes would grow longer with them as children grow, and no garment would penetrate their clothing. This is what God Almighty said: And We shaded them with clouds and sent down upon them manna and quails. And His statement: "And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, 'Strike the rock with your staff.' Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Every people knew their drinking place. Eat and drink from the provision of God, and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption." And it was narrated from Wahb ibn Munabbih and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam something similar to what al-Suddi said. Sunayd said from Hajjaj from Ibn Jurayj that Ibn Abbas said that clothes were created for them in the wilderness that would not tear or become dirty. Ibn Jurayj said: So if a man took from the manna and quails on top of the food of one day, it would spoil, except that they would take food on Friday for Saturday, and it would not spoil. Ibn Atiyyah said that the quails are birds by consensus of the commentators, and al-Hudhali made a mistake in saying that it was honey, and he recited in that regard, citing as evidence:

I swear to God, you are sweeter than quails when I see them.

He said, so he thought that the salwa was honey. Al-Qurtubi said: The claim of consensus is not valid because the historian, one of the scholars of language and interpretation, said that it was honey and he cited the verse of Al-Hudhali as evidence. This and he mentioned that it is like that in the language of Kinanah because it consoles people and from it is the spring of Salwan. Al-Jawhari said: The salwa is honey and he cited the verse of Al-Hudhali as evidence as well. The Salwana with the dammah is a bead that they used to say if rainwater was poured on it and the lover drank it, he would be consoled. The poet said:

I drank rainwater from Silwana, but I don't find comfort in life, my mother.

The name of that water is Silwan. Some of them said that Silwan is a medicine that heals the sad, so they are comforted. Doctors call it Mofraj. They said that Salwa is a plural with the singular form also, just as it is said: He named me for the singular and plural, and so is Waly. Al-Khalil said that its singular form is Salwat, and he recited:

I feel a tremor at the memory of you, just as a sandal shakes from the wetness of rain.

Al-Kisa'i said: "Al-Salwa is one and its plural is salawi. Al-Qurtubi transmitted all of it. The Almighty's saying: "Eat from the good things with which We have provided you" is a command of permission, guidance and gratitude. The Almighty's saying: And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves means We commanded them to eat from what We provided them and to worship as He said: Eat from the provision of your Lord and be grateful to Him. But they disobeyed and disbelieved, so they wronged themselves. This is in addition to what they witnessed of clear signs and decisive miracles, and extraordinary events. From here, the virtue of the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, over all the companions of the prophets becomes clear in their patience, steadfastness and lack of stubbornness, despite what they were with him in his travels and conquests, including the year of Tabuk in that intense heat and effort. They did not ask to break a custom or create something, although that was easy for the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. But when hunger exhausted them, they asked him to increase their food, so they gathered what they had with them and there came the amount of a sheep's meat, so he called upon God for it and commanded them. So they filled every vessel they had with them, and when they needed water, they asked God Almighty, and a cloud came to them and rained on them, so they drank and watered the camels and filled their water skins, then they looked and saw that it had not passed the army. This is the most perfect way of following something with God's decree while following the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: 57- And We shaded you with clouds meaning: We made it like a canopy. And clouds are the plural of ghamama like sahaba and sahab, as Al-Akhfash said. Al-Farra' said: And it is permissible to say ghamama. The commentators mentioned that this happened in the wilderness between Egypt and Ash-Sham when they were prevented from entering the city of the tyrants. And manna: It was said that it is taranjin. An-Nahhas said: It is with emphasis on the Ra and a sukoon on the Noon. It is also said: Taranjin with a Ta, and most commentators agree with this. It is dew that descends from the sky on a tree or stone and becomes sweet and forms honey and dries like gum. Its meaning is mentioned in the dictionary. It was said: Manna is honey. It was said: The drink is sweet. It was said: Flatbread. It was said: It is a source that includes all that God bestows upon His servants without effort or cultivation. From this is what was established in Sahih Al-Bukhari and Muslim from the hadith of Abu Saeed bin Zaid from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: The truffle is from the manna that was sent down to Moses. And something similar was established from the hadith of Abu Hurairah with Ahmad and Al-Tirmidhi, and from the hadith of Jabir, Abu Saeed and Ibn Abbas with An-Nasa'i. As-Salwa: It was said that it is the quail, like a houbara, a bird that they slaughter and eat. Ibn Atiyyah said: As-Salwa is a bird by consensus of commentators. Al-Hudhali made a mistake when he said:

I swear to God that I will work hard for you, because you are sweeter than quails when I bite them.

He thought that the quail was honey. Al-Qurtubi said: What he claimed of consensus is not correct. The historian, one of the scholars of language and interpretation, said: It is honey. He cited the verse of Al-Hudhali as evidence, and mentioned that it is like that in the language of Kinanah, and recited:

If I drank the quail, I would not be comforted. I have no need of you, even if I am rich.

Al-Jawhari said: Al-Salwa is honey. Al-Akhfash said: Al-Salwa does not have a singular form of the same word, like good and evil, and it is likely that its singular form is salwa. Al-Khalil said: Its singular form is salwa, and he recited:

I find comfort in your memory, just as comfort is shaken off the rain by its thread.

Al-Kisa'i said: Al-Salwa is singular and its plural is salawi. His statement, Eat means that we said to them, Eat. There is an omission in the speech, and the meaning is: We said, Eat, but they disobeyed and did not respond to the blessings with gratitude, so they wronged themselves and did not wrong Us. This was omitted because but they were wronging themselves indicates it, and presenting the souls here indicates specificity. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement, Until we see God plainly, he said: Openly. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Anas who said: They are the seventy whom Moses chose. Then the thunderbolt seized you, he said: They died. Then We raised you up after your death, he said: They were raised up after death to complete their appointed times. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement, Then We raised you up, something similar. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: A cloud that is cooler than this and more pleasant, and it is the one that God will come on the Day of Resurrection, and it is the one in which the angels came on the day of Badr and was with them in the wilderness. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And We shaded you with clouds, he said: This cloud was in the wilderness, the clouds shaded them from the sun, and fed them manna and quails when they went out into the wilderness, so the manna would fall on them in their place like snow falling, whiter than milk and sweeter than honey, falling on them from sunrise until sunrise, so a man would take as much as would suffice him for that day, but if he exceeded that, what he had left would be spoiled, because it was a day of celebration in which he did not set out for the affairs of livelihood or to seek anything, and all of this was in the wilderness. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, he said: Manna is something that God sent down to them like dew, and quails are birds larger than sparrows. Waki', Abd bin Humayd, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: Manna is gum, and salwa is a bird. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi who said: They said: O Moses, how can we have what is here? Where is the food? So God sent down manna upon them, and it would fall on the taranjan tree. They narrated on the authority of Wahb that he was asked: What is manna? He said: Flat bread like corn or like flour. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas who said: Manna is a drink that would descend upon them like honey, so they would mix it with water and then drink it. Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: Manna would descend upon them at night on the trees, so they would go to it and eat from it as much as they wanted. Salwa is a bird similar to quail, and they would eat from it as much as they wanted. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on his authority. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud and some of the Companions regarding salwa. Something similar to this has been narrated on the authority of a group of the Tabi'un and those who came after them. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And they did not wrong us, he said: We are too powerful to be wronged. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: But they were wronging themselves, he said: They were harming.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

57. And We shaded you with clouds in the wilderness to protect you from the heat of the sun. Clouds come from gloom, and their root is covering and concealment. The clouds were called clouds because they covered the face of the sun. This is because they had nothing to cover them in the wilderness, so they complained to Moses, so God Almighty sent a thin, white cloud, better than rain clouds, and made for them a pillar of light that would light up the night for them if they had no moon. And We sent down upon you manna and quails, meaning in the wilderness. Most of them say that manna is taranjabin. Mujahid said: It is something like gum that used to fall on trees, and its taste is like honey. Wahb said: It is thin bread. Al-Zajjaj said: The sum of manna is what God bestows without effort.

Abdul Wahid Al-Malhi told us, I told Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Naimi, I told Muhammad bin Yusuf, I told Muhammad bin Ismail, I told Abu Naim, I told Abu Sufyan, on the authority of Abdul Malik, he is Ibn Umair, on the authority of Amr bin Harith, on the authority of Saeed bin Zaid, may God be pleased with him, who said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Truffles are from manna and their water is a cure for the eyes.

They said: "Every night, manna fell on their trees like snow, and each person among them had a sa' sa'. They said: 'O Moses, we have killed this manna with its sweetness, so pray to your Lord to feed us meat.' So God sent down upon them quails, which are birds resembling quails. It was also said that they were quails themselves. God sent a cloud that rained quails a mile wide and a spear's length in the sky, one on top of the other. And quails are honey. So God sent down upon them manna and quails every morning from sunrise until sunrise, and each one of them would take what would suffice him for a day and a night. And if it was Friday, each one of them would take what would suffice him for two days, because it did not come down on Saturday."

Eat means: We said to them: Eat of the good things that are lawful that We have provided for you and do not store up for tomorrow, so they did, so God cut that off from them, and what they had stored up was ruined, so God Almighty said: And they did not wrong Us, but they were wronging themselves meaning: And they did not withhold Our right, but they were wronging themselves by accepting My punishment, and cutting off the source of provision that was sent down to them without difficulty in this world or reckoning in the Hereafter.

Hassan bin Saeed Al-Munai'i told us, Abu Tahir Muhammad bin Muhammad bin Mahmash Al-Ziyadi told us, Abu Bakr Muhammad bin Al-Hussein Al-Qattan told us, Ahmad bin Yusuf Al-Salami told us, Abd Al-Razzaq told us, Muammar told us, Hammam bin Munabbih told us, Abu Hurairah said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Were it not for the Children of Israel, food would not have gone bad and meat would not have rotted, and were it not for Eve, no woman would have betrayed her husband for an entire lifetime.

descend upon them like snow from dawn until sunrise, and the south winds would send quails upon them, and at night a pillar of fire would descend and they would walk in its light, and their clothes would not get dirty or wear out.

Eat from the good things which We have provided for you is the intention of the saying.

And they did not wrong us is an abbreviation, and its original form is they wronged us by denying these blessings, and they did not wrong us.

"But they were wronging themselves" by disbelief because its harm did not go beyond them.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

Tafsir al-Tabari

And the village that God Almighty commanded them to enter, and to eat from it freely wherever they wished, as He told us: Jerusalem. The narration mentioned that:

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Enter this city, he said: Jerusalem.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told me, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And when We said, 'Enter this city,' as for the city, it is the city of Jerusalem.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': And when We said, 'Enter this city,' meaning Jerusalem.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said: I asked him, meaning Ibn Zayd, about his saying: Enter this town and eat from it wherever you wish, he said: It is Jericho, and it is close to Jerusalem.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So eat from it wherever you wish in abundance.

He means by this: Eat from this town wherever you wish, a comfortable and abundant life without account. We have explained the meaning of comfort in the previous part of our book, and we have mentioned the statements of the people of interpretation about it.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And enter the gate in prostration.

As for the gate that they were ordered to enter, it was said: It is the Gate of Forgiveness from the Holy House. Mention of those who said that: Muhammad bin Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Enter the gate prostrating, he said: The Gate of Forgiveness, from the Gate of Ilya, from the Holy House.

Al-Muthanna told me: Abu Hudhayfah told us: Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And enter the gate in prostration. As for the gate, it is one of the gates of the Holy House.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: And enter the gate in prostration, that it is one of the gates of the Holy House, and it is called the Gate of Repentance. As for his statement: in prostration, Ibn Abbas interpreted it to mean bowing.

Muhammad bin Bashir told me, he said, Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Enter the gate in prostration, he said: bowing from a small gate.

Al-Hasan bin Al-Zubayr Al-Nakha'i told us, he said, Abu Usamah told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Enter the gate in prostration, he said: They were commanded to enter in bowing.

Abu Jaafar said: The origin of prostration is bowing to the one to whom one prostrates, in order to honor him thereby. So everyone who bows to something in order to honor it is prostrating. And from this is the saying of the poetess:

By collecting the falcons in its chambers, you will see the most of them prostrating to the hooves.

He means by his saying: prostrating in humility and submission. And from that is the saying of A'sha of Banu Qais bin Tha'labah:

He alternates between the prayers of the King, sometimes prostrating and sometimes praying.

This is Ibn Abbas' interpretation of his saying: prostrating as bowing. Because the one who bows is bent over, even though the one who prostrates is bent over more than him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And say, 'Forgive us.'

The interpretation of his saying: remission is a verb, from the saying of the speaker: May God forgive you your sins, so He forgives them, like apostasy, severity, and duration, from hadad and maddat.

The people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of it. Some of them said something similar to what we have said about it. Those who said that: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us: And say, 'Forgive us,' he said: Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: meaning, forgive us our sins.

Yunus told us, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: And say 'forgiveness', with which God will forgive you your sin and your mistakes.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hassan told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, Ibn Abbas said: Say 'Hattah' meaning: He will forgive your sins.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Wakee' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: remission means forgiveness.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding his statement: Hattah, he said: He will remove your sins.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ata' told me regarding his statement: And say, 'Forgive us,' he said: We heard that it means: He forgives them their sins.

Others said: The meaning of this is: Say there is no god but God, as if they directed its interpretation to: Say that which will remove your sins, which is saying there is no god but God. Mention of those who said this: Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim and Saad bin Abdullah bin Abdul Hakam Al-Masry told me, they said, Hafs bin Omar told us, he said, Al-Hakam bin Abaan told us, on the authority of Ikrimah: And say forgiveness, he said: Say, there is no god but God.

Others said something similar to what Ikrimah said, except that they made the statement they were commanded to say: seeking forgiveness. Those who said that: Al-Hasan bin Al-Zubayr Al-Nakha'i told us, Abu Usamah told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And say 'forgiveness', he said: They were commanded to seek forgiveness.

Others said something similar to what Ikrimah said, except that they said: The statement that they were commanded to say is to say: This matter is true as it was said to you. Mention of those who said that: I was told by Al-Munjab, he said: Bishr told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: And say, 'Forgive us,' he said: Say: This matter is true as it was said to you.

The Arab scholars differed on the meaning for which the veil was raised.

Some of the Basran grammarians said: "The word 'al-hatta' was raised, meaning, 'Let there be an expiation from you for our sins,' as one would say to a man: 'I heard you.'"

Others of them said: It is a word that God commanded them to say in the nominative case, and He imposed on them to say it in the same way.

Some Kufi grammarians said: The word hattah was raised with the pronoun this, as if he said: And say: this is a hattah.

Others of them said: It is raised with a pronoun that means report, as if he said: Say what is a sin. So sin would then be report for me what.

Abu Ja'far said: What is closest to the truth in this regard, and most similar to the apparent meaning of the Book, is that the raising of hattah with the intention of a deleted predicate indicated by the apparent meaning of the recitation, which is: Our entering the gate in prostration is hattah. So it is sufficient to repeat it with this wording, what is indicated by the apparent meaning of the revelation, which is His statement: And enter the gate in prostration, as He, the Most High, said: And when a group of them said, 'Why do you preach to a people whom God is about to destroy or punish with a severe punishment?' They said, 'As an excuse before your Lord.' (Al-A'raf: 164), meaning: Our preaching to them is an excuse before your Lord. So it is the same in my opinion in the interpretation of His statement: And say, 'Forgive us,' meaning by that: And when We said, 'Enter this city, and enter the gate in prostration, and say, 'Our entering that in prostration is as an expiation for our sins.' This statement is similar to the interpretation of Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, Ibn Jurayj, and Ibn Zayd, which we mentioned earlier.

Abu Ja'far said: As for the interpretation of the statement of 'Ikrimah, then the reading should be in the accusative case in hattah, because if the people were commanded to say: There is no god but God, or to say: We ask forgiveness of God, then it was said to them: Say this statement, then say it is in this case in hattah, because hattah according to 'Ikrimah is saying: There is no god but God. And if it is saying: There is no god but God, then the statement is in accordance with it, as if a man commanded a man to say something good and said to him: Say something good in the accusative case, and it would not have been correct to say to him: Say something good, except under severe compulsion.

The consensus of the reciters on raising al-hattah is a clear statement of the opposite of what Ikrimah said about the interpretation of his statement: And say 'Hatta'. Likewise, what is required according to the interpretation that we narrated from al-Hasan and Qatadah regarding his statement: And say 'Hatta' is that the recitation of 'Hatta' should be in the accusative case. Because it is the custom of the Arabs, when they put verbal nouns in the place of verbs and delete verbs, to put verbal nouns in the accusative case. As the poet said:

They were destroyed by the hands of a gang, and their swords were striking the heads of the dead with a

Surat al-Baqarah 2:58

And when We said, "Enter this town and eat from it as you wish in abundance and enter the gate bowing down and say, 'Forgive us.' We will forgive you your sins and will increase the doers of good."

Levantine blow.

And as the speaker says to the man: I hear and obey, meaning: I hear and obey, and as the Most High said: God forbid (Yusuf 12:23, 79), meaning: We seek refuge in God.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: We forgive you.

By His saying, We forgive you, He means that We cover your sins with mercy, and conceal them from you, so that We do not disgrace you by punishing you for them. The root of forgiveness is covering and concealing, so whoever conceals something is its forgiver. From this, the iron shell that is used as a shield for the head is called a maghfir, because it covers the head and shields it. The same applies to the scabbard of a sword, which is what you sheathe it with and conceal it. That is why the garment's sheath is called a ghafra, because it covers the garment and turns it between the observer and the one being looked at. From this is the saying of Aws ibn Hajar:

I do not blame my cousin if he is ignorant, and I forgive his ignorance if he is more ignorant.

He means by his saying: And I forgive him for his ignorance, I cover up his ignorance by bearing it on his behalf.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: your sins.

Sins is the plural of sin without a hamza, just as mounts is the plural of mount, and mattresses is the plural of mattress.

The plural of sins was left with a hamza because the hamza is left out in sin more than the hamza, so it was pluralized as khataya, although its singular is not hamza. If sins were pluralized as sin with a hamza, it would have been said khata'i, like qabeelah and qabeel, and sahifa and sahifa'. Sin can also be pluralized with a ta', so it is hamzated and it is said khati'at. Sin is a fa'ila, from khata' a man yakhta'u khata', which is when he deviates from the path of truth. From this is the saying of the poet:

And the immigrants who supported him, by God, have made a mistake and failed.

Meaning: They have deviated from the truth and committed a sin.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And We will increase the reward of the doers of good.

The interpretation of this is what was narrated to us on the authority of Ibn Abbas, which is: Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, he said: Al-Hussein told us, he said: Hajjaj told me, he said: Ibn Jurayj said: Ibn Abbas said: And We will increase the doers of good, whoever among you is a doer of good, his goodness will be increased, and whoever is wrong, We will forgive him his sin.

The interpretation of the verse: And when We said, "Enter this city, where all good things are lawful to you, expanded for you without account. And enter the gate in prostration and say, 'This prostration of ours is to God, as an expiation from our Lord for our sins. We cover for you the sins of the sinner among you and conceal them for him and remove his burdens from him. And We will increase the doer of good among you to Our previous goodness with him, even more good.'

Then God, the Most High, informed us of the greatness of their ignorance, their bad obedience to their Lord, their disobedience to their prophets, and their mockery of His messengers, despite the great blessings of God Almighty upon them, and the wonders of what He showed them of His signs and lessons. Rebuking their sons who were addressed by these verses, and teaching them that if they transgressed in their denial of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their rejection of his prophethood, despite the great kindness of God in sending him to them, and the wonders of the arguments that he showed through his hands among them, then they would be like their ancestors whose characteristics he described and whose report he told us in these verses, so He, may His praise be exalted, said: But those who did wrong changed the statement to another that was said to them, so We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky verse.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

It contains nine issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And when We said, 'Enter this town.' The alif was deleted from We said because it was silent and the dal was silent after it. The alif that begins before the dal is an alif of connection, because it is from enter.

The second: The Almighty's saying: This village meaning the city, it was named thus because it was gathered together, and from this the water was gathered in the basin, meaning it was collected, and the name of that water is Qara with a kasra on the qaf shortened. And the same is what was read to the guest, said Al-Jawhari. And the reading is for the basin. And the qirah is for the watercourse. And the qirah is for the back, and from this his saying:

Fat cow belly

Al-Maqari: The large eyelids. He said:

The bones of the maqari, their guest is not frightened

One of the Maqari is Maqra'ah, and all of it means plural without a hamza. The village with a kasra on the qaf is the language of Yemen. There is disagreement about identifying it. The majority said: It is Jerusalem. It was said: Jericho is from Jerusalem. Omar bin Shabbah said: It was a base and the residence of kings. Ibn Kaysan: Ash-Sham. Ad-Dahhak: Ramla, Jordan, Palestine and Palmyra. This is another blessing, which is that he allowed them to enter the city and removed their confusion.

Third: The Almighty's saying: Eat is permission. Plenty is abundant and ample, and it is an adjective for a deleted source, meaning eat plenty.

It may be in the position of a state, as mentioned above. And it was a blessed land with great yields, so he said: abundantly.

Fourth: The Almighty said: And enter the gate in prostration. The gate is a collection of gates, and they said: its parents for the sake of duality. The poet said:

There are tents where his parents mix with the land, including the grandfather and the young

If he did it alone, it would not be permissible. And similar to that is his saying, peace be upon him:

Welcome to the people - or the delegation - without shame or regret. And I have chosen a gate. And gates are classified, as they say: classified categories. And this is something from your gate, meaning it is suitable for you. The meaning of prostration has been mentioned before, so there is no point in repeating it. And praise be to God.

The door they were ordered to enter is a door in Jerusalem known today as Bab al-Hatta, according to Mujahid and others. It was said: It is the door of the dome towards which Moses and the Children of Israel used to pray. And prostrating, Ibn Abbas said: Bowing in bowing. It was said: Humble and submissive, not in a specific manner.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: And say is in apposition to enter. "Refutation" is in the nominative case, according to the reading of the majority, with an implied subject, meaning our question is refutation, or it could be a narration. Al-Akhfash said: Refutation was read in the accusative case, meaning Remove our sins from us, refusal. Al-Nahhas said: The hadith came from Ibn Abbas that it was said to them: Say there is no god but God, and in another hadith from him it was said to them: Say forgiveness, an explanation of the accusative case, meaning say something that will remove your sins, as one says: Say something good. The imams of the reciters are on the nominative case. It is more appropriate in the language, because it was narrated from the Arabs in the meaning of badala. Ahmad bin Yahya said: It is said badalatuhi, meaning I changed it, but I did not remove its essence. And abadalatuhi means I removed its essence and its person, as he said:

The prince deposed the prince

God the Almighty said: "Those who do not expect to meet Us said: 'Bring a Qur'an other than this or change it.'" And the hadith of Ibn Mas'ud: They said: Hatta is an interpretation of the nominative case. This is all the saying of Al-Nahhas. Al-Hasan and Ikrimah said: Hatta means remove our sins. They were commanded to say: There is no god but God so that their sins would be removed. Ibn Jubayr said: Its meaning is seeking forgiveness. Abaan ibn Taghlib:

repentance. The poet said:

He won the plot that God made forgive the sins of his servant

Ibn Faris said in Al-Mujmal: Hatta is a word that the Children of Israel were commanded to say. If they had said it, their sins would have been removed. Al-Jawhari also said the same in Al-Sahah.

I said: It is possible that they worshipped with this exact wording, which is what is apparent from the hadith. Muslim narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"The Children of Israel were told, 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness,' and your sins will be forgiven you.' But they changed it and entered the gate crawling on their buttocks and said, 'A grain in a hair.'" Narrated by Al-Bukhari, who said, So they changed it and said, 'Forgiveness, a grain in a hair.' In other than the two Sahih: Wheat in a hair. It was also said that they said, Hatha samhatha. It is a Hebrew word, meaning: red wheat. This was narrated by Ibn Qutaybah, and Al-Harawi narrated it from Al-Suddi and Mujahid. Their intention was contrary to what God had commanded them to do, so they disobeyed, rebelled, and mocked, so God punished them with rajz, which is torment. Ibn Zayd said: It was a plague that killed seventy thousand of them. It was narrated that the gate was made short so that they could enter it bowing, but they entered it leaning on their buttocks. And God knows best.

Sixth: Some scholars have used this verse as evidence that changing the statements stipulated in the Shariah is not without the worship being done according to their wording or their meaning. If the worship is done according to their wording, then it is not permissible to change them, because God Almighty has condemned whoever changes what He has commanded with His wording. If it is according to their meaning, then it is permissible to change them with something that leads to that meaning, but it is not permissible to change them with something that deviates from it.

Scholars have differed on this meaning. It was narrated from Malik, Al-Shafi'i, Abu Hanifa and their companions that it is permissible for someone who is knowledgeable in the context of speech and has insight into its individual words to transmit the hadith with its meaning, but on the condition that it matches the meaning in its entirety. This is the opinion of the majority. Many scholars have prohibited this, including Ibn Sirin, Al-Qasim ibn Muhammad and Raja' ibn Haywah. Mujahid said: Omit from the hadith if you wish, but do not add to it. Malik ibn Anas used to be strict in the hadith of the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) regarding the ta' and ya' and the like. On this basis, a group of the imams of hadith do not see the replacement or alteration of the wording, to the extent that they hear someone who is incorrect and know that but do not change it. Abu Majlaz narrated from Qais ibn 'Ibad that 'Umar ibn Al-Khattab said: Whoever hears a hadith and narrates it as he heard it has been saved. Something similar was narrated from 'Abdullah ibn 'Amr and Zaid ibn

And when We said, "Enter this town and eat from it as you wish in abundance and enter the gate bowing down and say, 'Forgive us.' We will forgive you your sins and will increase the doers of good."

Arqam. The same is true of the disagreement over precedence, delay, addition and subtraction. Some of them rely on the meaning and not the wording, and some of them are strict in that and do not depart from the wording. This is the most pious, most pious and most preferable thing in religion, but most scholars disagree with it. The correct view is that it is permissible, God willing. What is known from the conduct of the Companions may God be pleased with them is that they used to narrate similar events with different wordings. This is only because they used to pay attention to the meanings and did not repeat the hadiths or write them down. It was narrated on the authority of Wathilah ibn al-Asqa' that he said: Not everything that the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) told us we conveyed to you; the meaning is sufficient for you. Qatadah said on the authority of Zurarah ibn Awfa': I met several of the Companions of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and they differed with me regarding the wording but agreed regarding the meaning. An-Nakha'i, Al-Hasan and Ash-Sha'bi may God have mercy on them used to narrate hadiths based on their meanings. Al-Hasan said: If you get the meaning right, it is sufficient for you. Sufyan Ath-Thawri may God have mercy on him said: If I tell you that I am narrating to you as I heard it, do not believe me; it is only the meaning. Waki' may God have mercy on him said: If the meaning is not broad, then people are doomed. Scholars agreed that it is permissible to transfer the Sharia to the dictionary in their language and translate it for them, and that is transfer by meaning. God did that in His Book in what He narrated of the report of what came before, so He narrated stories, some of which He mentioned in places with different words but the meaning is the same, and He transferred them from their languages to the Arabic language, which differs from it in terms of precedence and delay, deletion and cancellation, addition and subtraction. If it is permissible to replace Arabic with a foreign language, then it is even more permissible to replace it with Arabic. Al-Hasan and Al-Shafi'i cited this meaning as evidence, and it is the correct one in this regard.

If it is said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

May God bless the man who hears my words and conveys them as he heard them. He mentioned the hadith. And what was proven from him, may God bless him and grant him peace, is that he ordered a man to say, when he went to bed, in a supplication that he knew:

I believe in Your Book which You have revealed and in Your Prophet whom You have sent. The man said: And Your Messenger whom You have sent. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: And Your Prophet whom You have sent. They said: Do you not see that it is not permissible for someone who has been taught a supplication to contradict the wording and say: So he recited it as he heard it? It was said to them: As for his saying: So he recited it as he heard it, what is meant is its ruling, not its wording, because the wording is not valid. What indicates to you that what is meant by the address is its ruling is his saying: There is many a bearer of knowledge who is not a scholar, and there is many a bearer of knowledge to one who is more knowledgeable than him. Then this particular hadith has been transmitted with different wordings, but the meaning is the same. Even though it is possible that all the wordings were the words of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, at different times, it is most likely that it is one hadith transmitted with different wordings, and that is the clearest evidence of its permissibility. As for the man's response, peace be upon him, from his saying: And Your Messenger to his saying: And Your Prophet, because the wording of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, is more praiseworthy, and each of these two descriptions has its place. Don't you see that the name Messenger applies to everyone, while the name Prophet is only deserved by the Prophets, peace be upon them! The Messengers were given preference over the Prophets because they combined Prophethood and Messengership. So when He said, "And your Prophet, He came with the praiseworthy description, then qualified it with the Messengership by saying, Whom you sent. Also, His transfer from His saying, And your Messenger to His saying, And your Prophet" is to combine Prophethood and Messengership. It is ugly in speech to say, "This is the Messenger of so-and-so whom he sent, and this is the slain man of Zayd whom he killed, because your saying, The Messenger of so-and-so," and the slain man of so-and-so would suffice without repeating the sender and the killer, since you would only convey the first meaning by it. Rather, it is better to say, "This is the Messenger of Abdullah whom he sent to Amr, and this is the slain man of Zayd whom he killed yesterday or in such-and-such an incident." And God is the Grantor of success.

If it is said: If it is permissible for the first narrator to change the words of the Messenger, peace be upon him, then it is permissible for the second to change the words of the first, and that leads to the obliteration of the hadith completely due to the subtlety and obscurity of the differences. It is said to him: Permissibility is conditional upon conformity and equality as we mentioned, and if they are absent then it is not permissible. Ibn al-Arabi said: The disagreement on this issue can only be imagined by looking at the era of the Companions and the Followers because of their equality in knowledge of the mountainous language of taste. As for those who came after them, we have no doubt that this is not permissible, because natures have changed, understandings have varied, and customs have differed, and this is the truth. And God knows best.

Some of our scholars said: Ibn al-Arabi, may God have mercy on him, was arrogant. If permissibility is conditional on conformity, then there is no difference between the time of the Companions and the Followers and the time of others. That is why none of the scholars of the principles of jurisprudence or the people of hadith made this distinction. Yes, if he had said: conformity in his time was more distant, it would have been closer. And God knows best.

Seventh: The Almighty's saying: We will forgive you your sins. Nafi' read it with the ya' with a damma. Ibn 'Amir read it with the ta' with a damma, which is the reading of Mujahid. The rest read it with the noon with the accusative, and it is the clearest, because before it was And when We said, 'Enter,' so We forgive was used to inform about God Almighty, and the meaning was: And We said, 'Enter the gate in prostration, We will forgive.' And because after it was And We will increase with the noon. And your sins is in accordance with the generality and that it is in its category. The reason for the one who read it with the ta' is that it is feminine because the word sins are feminine, because it is the plural of sin in the broken form. The reason for the reading with the ya' is that it is masculine because it came between the feminine and its action, as mentioned previously in His saying: Then Adam received from his Lord words. And the ya' and the ta' are good, even though they were before it informing about God Almighty in His saying: And when We said, because He knows that the sins of the sinners are not forgiven except by God Almighty, so He dispensed with the noon and returned the action to the forgiven sins.

Eighth: There is a difference of opinion regarding the origin of the plural of khatā'i with a hamza. Al-Khalil said: The origin of khatā'i is to say khatā'i. Then it was changed and it was said khatā'i with a hamza followed by a ya', then the ya' was replaced by an alif as a necessary replacement, so you say khatā'an. When two alifs come together with a hamza between them, and the hamza is from the same type as the alif, it becomes as if you combined three alifs, so you replace the hamza with a ya' and say khatā'i. As for Sibawayh, his school of thought is that the origin is like the first khatā'i, then it is necessary with this to hamza the ya' as you did in Mada'in, so you say khatā'i, and two hamzas do not come together in a word, so you replace the second with a ya' and say khatā'i, then you do as you did with the first. Al-Farra' said: khatā'i is the plural of khatīyah without a hamza, as you say hadīya and hadīya. Al-Farra' said: If you had pluralized khatā'i with a hamza, you would have said khatā'an. Al-Kisa'i said: If you pluralize it with a hamza, you assimilate the hamza into the hamza, as you say: animals.

Ninth: The Almighty said: And We will increase the doers of good meaning in the good of those who did not worship the calf. It is said: He forgives the sins of those who raised the manna and quails for tomorrow, and We will increase the good of those who were not raised for tomorrow. It is said: He forgives the sins of those who are disobedient, and He will increase the good of those who are doers of good, meaning We will increase their goodness over the goodness that they already have. It is an active participle of the verb to do good. The doer of good is the one who has corrected his belief in monotheism, and has good management of himself, and has devoted himself to performing his duties, and has spared the Muslims his evil. In the hadith of Gabriel, peace be upon him: What is ihsan? He said: That you worship God as if you see Him, and if you do not see Him, then He sees you. He said: You have spoken the truth. Narrated by Muslim.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, blaming them for their refusal to fight and enter the Holy Land when they came from Egypt with Moses, peace be upon him, and they were ordered to enter the Holy Land, which was their inheritance from their father Israel, and to fight the infidel Amalekites in it, but they refused to fight them and became weak and frustrated, so God threw them into the wilderness as a punishment for them, as God Almighty mentioned in Surat Al-Ma'idah. For this reason, the most correct of the two sayings is that this city is Jerusalem, as stated by Al-Suddi, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Qatadah, Abu Muslim Al-Isfahani, and more than one. God Almighty said, narrating from Moses, "O my people, enter the Holy Land which God has assigned to you and do not turn back" verses. Others said it was Jericho, and it was narrated from Ibn Abbas and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd, and this is far-fetched because it was not on their way and they were heading to Jerusalem, not Jericho. Even more distant than that is the saying of those who said it was Egypt, narrated by al-Razi in his interpretation, and the first correct one is that it was Jerusalem, and this was when they came out of the wilderness after forty years with Joshua ibn Nun, peace be upon him, and God opened it for them on the eve of Friday, and the sun was held back for them that day for a little while until the conquest was possible, and when they opened it, they were ordered to enter the gate, the gate of the city, prostrating, meaning in thanks to God Almighty for what He bestowed upon them of conquest and victory and the return of their city to them and their rescue from the wilderness and misguidance. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he used to say in His Almighty's saying and enter the gate prostrating, meaning bowing. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Amr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, in His saying and enter the gate prostrating, he said bowing from a small gate, narrated by Al-Hakim narrated it from the hadith of Sufyan, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it from the hadith of Sufyan, and he is Al-Thawri, and he added, So they entered from the side of their backsides. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said, They were ordered to prostrate on their faces when they entered, and Al-Razi rejected it. It was narrated from some of them that what is meant here by prostration is submission, because it is difficult to take it literally. Khasif said, Ikrimah said, Ibn Abbas said, The door was before the qiblah. Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Qatadah, and Al-Dahhak said, It is the Gate of Forgiveness from the Gate of Ilya, Jerusalem. Al-Razi narrated from some of them that he meant by the gate a direction from the directions of the qiblah. Khasif said, Ikrimah said, Ibn Abbas said, So they entered on a side. Al-Suddi said, from Abu Saeed Al-Azdi, from Abu Al-Kanud, from Abdullah bin Masoud, "It was said to them, 'Enter the gate in prostration,' so they entered with their heads up, meaning raising their heads in opposition to what they were ordered to do. And the Almighty's statement, "And say, 'Forgiveness.'" Al-Thawri said, from Al-A'mash, from Al-Munhal, from Saeed bin Jubair, from Ibn Abbas, And say, 'Forgiveness.' He said, Forgiveness. Ask for forgiveness. It was narrated from Ata', Al-Hasan, Qatadah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar. Ad-Dahhak said from Ibn Abbas, And say 'forgiveness' meaning: Say this command is true as it was said to you. Ikrimah said: Say 'There is no god but God'. Al-Awza'i said: Ibn Abbas wrote to a man whom he named and asked him about the words of God the Almighty: And say 'forgiveness' so he wrote to him that they should confess their sins. Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: That is, forgive us our sins. We will forgive you your sins and increase the doers of good. He said: This is the answer to the command, meaning if you do what we have commanded you, we will forgive your sins and double your good deeds. The gist of the matter is that they were commanded to submit to God the Almighty at the conquest in action and word and to confess their sins and ask forgiveness for them and to be thankful for the blessing at that time and to hasten to do that is beloved to God the Almighty as God the Almighty said: "When the victory of God and the conquest comes * And you see the people entering into the religion of God in multitudes * Then exalt [God] with praise of your Lord and ask His forgiveness. Indeed, He is ever Accepting of repentance." Some of the Companions interpreted it as meaning frequent remembrance and asking for forgiveness at the conquest. And victory, and Ibn Abbas interpreted it as him informing the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, of his death in it and Omar, may God be pleased with him, approved of it, and there is no contradiction between him having ordered that at that time and informing him of his noble soul as well, and for this reason, may God bless him and grant him peace, he appeared to be very submissive at victory as it was narrated that on the day of the conquest of Mecca he was entering it from the upper pass and he was submissive to his Lord to the point that his chin touched the saddle of his saddle in thanks to God for that, then when he entered the city he washed himself and prayed eight rak'ahs and that was at noon, so some of them said: This is the noon prayer, and others said: Rather it is the prayer of conquest, so they recommended for the imam and the prince, if he conquers a city, to pray eight rak'ahs in it upon his first entry as Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas, may God be pleased with him, did when he entered the palace of Kisra and prayed eight rak'ahs in it, and the correct view is that he separates between every two rak'ahs with a salutation, and it was said that he prays them all with one salutation, and God knows best.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:58

And when We said, "Enter this town and eat from it as you wish in abundance and enter the gate bowing down and say, 'Forgive us.' We will forgive you your sins and will increase the doers of good."

And the Almighty's saying: But those who did wrong changed the statement to another one that was said to them. Al-Bukhari said: Muhammad told me, Abd al-Rahman ibn Mahdi told us, on the authority of Ibn al-Mubarak, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Hammam ibn Munabbih, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "It was said to the Children of Israel: Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness.' So they entered crawling on their buttocks, so they changed it and said, 'A grain in a hair.'" Al-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ismail ibn Ibrahim, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman, with a chain of transmission ending with him, and on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ubayd ibn Muhammad, on the authority of Ibn al-Mubarak, with some of it with a chain of transmission, in the words of God Almighty:

Forgiveness. He said: So they changed it and said, 'A grain.' Abd al-Razzaq said: Muammar informed us, on the authority of Hammam ibn Munabbih, that he heard Abu Hurayrah say: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God said to the Children of Israel: 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness.' We will forgive you your sins.'" So they changed it and entered the gate crawling on their buttocks and said, 'A grain in a hair.'" This is an authentic hadith narrated by Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Ishaq bin Nasr, Muslim narrated on the authority of Muhammad bin Rafi', and Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abd bin Hamid, all on the authority of Abd Al-Razzaq, on his authority.

Al-Tirmidhi said: It is good and authentic. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Their substitution was as Salih bin Kaysan narrated to me on the authority of Salih, the freed slave of Al-Tawa'amah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah and on the authority of someone I do not accuse, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: They entered the gate - which they were commanded to enter in prostration - crawling on their buttocks and saying, 'Wheat in barley.' Abu Dawud said: Ahmad bin Salih narrated to us, Sulayman bin Sulayman bin Dawud narrated to us, Abdullah bin Wahb narrated to us, Hisham bin Sa'd narrated to us, on the authority of Zayd bin Aslam, on the authority of Ata bin Yasar, on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "God said to the Children of Israel: 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgive us,' and We will forgive you your sins.'" Then Abu Dawud said: Ahmad bin Musafir narrated to us, Ibn Abi Fadik narrated to us on the authority of Hisham, similarly. This is how he narrated it alone in the book of letters, abbreviated. Ibn Mardawayh narrated to us: Abdullah bin Ja'far narrated to us: Ibrahim bin Mahdi narrated to us: Ahmad bin Al-Mundhir Al-Qazzaz narrated to us: Muhammad bin Ismail bin Abi Fadik narrated to us: Hisham bin Sa'd narrated to us: Zaid bin Aslam narrated to us: Ata bin Yasar narrated to us: Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri said: We traveled with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, until it was the end of the night. We passed a pass called

Dhat Al-Hanzel. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "This pass tonight is like the door to which God said to the Children of Israel: Enter the door in prostration and say: 'Forgiveness,' and we will forgive you your sins." Sufyan Al-Thawri said: Abu Ishaq narrated to us: Al-Bara' said: "The foolish among the people will say: 'The Jews were told: Enter the door in prostration.' He said: Bowing down, and say: 'Forgiveness,' so they entered on their backsides and began to say: 'Red wheat with barley in it.' This is the saying of God, the Most High: 'Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them.'" Al-Thawri said: Al-Suddi narrated to us: Abu Sa'd Al-Azdi narrated to us: Abu Al-Kanud narrated to us: Ibn Mas'ud said: And say, Hatta, and they said, Hanita, a red grain with barley in it. So God revealed: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. Asbat said, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, that he said: They said, Hatta sama'ata azba mazba, so in Arabic it is a red wheat grain with a hole in it and a black hair. So that is the meaning of the Almighty: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. Al-Thawri said, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Sa'id, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: Enter the gate in prostration, he said, bowing from a small door. So they entered from their backsides and said, Hanita, so that is the meaning of the Almighty: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. And thus it was narrated on the authority of Ata', Mujahid, Ikrimah, Ad-Dahhak, Al-Hasan, Qatadah, Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Yahya ibn Rafi'. The gist of what the commentators have mentioned and what the context indicates is that they changed God's command to them from submission in word and deed, so they were commanded to enter prostrating, so they entered crawling on their buttocks from their buttocks, raising their heads, and they were commanded to say Hatta, meaning, Remove our sins and transgressions from us, so they mocked and said, Wheat in barley. This is the most extreme form of disobedience and obstinacy, and for this reason God sent down His wrath and punishment upon them for their immorality, which is their departure from His obedience. And for this reason He said: So We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Everything in the Book of God that refers to punishment means torment. This is how it was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Abu Malik, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah that it is torment. Abu Al-Aaliyah said that the punishment is anger. Al-Sha'bi said: The punishment is either the plague or the cold. Sa'id ibn Jubayr said that it is the plague. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Sa'id Al-Ashja' told us, Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Habib ibn Abi Thabit, on the authority of Ibrahim ibn Sa'd, meaning Ibn Abi Waqqas, on the authority of Sa'd ibn Malik, Usamah ibn Zayd and Khuzaymah ibn Thabit, may God be pleased with them, they said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The plague is a punishment with which those who came before you were punished. This is how An-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Sufyan Ath-Thawri on his authority. The origin of the hadith in the two Sahihs is on the authority of Habib ibn Abi Thabit: If you hear of the plague in a land, do not enter it. The hadith. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus ibn Abd Al-A'la told me on the authority of Ibn Wahb on the authority of Yunus on the authority of Az-Zuhri, he said: Amer ibn Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas, on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: This pain and illness is a punishment with which some of the nations before you were punished. The origin of this hadith is included in the two Sahihs from the hadith of Malik, on the authority of Muhammad bin Al-Munkadir and Salim bin Abi Al-Nadr, on the authority of Amer bin Saad, in a similar manner.

Fath al-Qadir

The majority of commentators said: The village is Jerusalem, and it was said: It is Jericho, a village from the villages of Jerusalem, and it was said: It is from the villages of Ash-Sham. And his saying: 58- "Eat is an order of permission - in abundance - in abundance", and it is an adjective for a deleted source: meaning eating in abundance, and it is possible for it to be in the place of the state, and its explanation has been presented. And the door that they were ordered to enter is a door in Jerusalem known today as the Gate of Repentance, and it was said: It is the door of the Dome that Moses and the Children of Israel used to pray towards. And prostration has been explained previously and it was said: Here it is bowing, and it was said: Humility and submission, and they proved that by saying that if what was meant by true prostration, which is placing the forehead on the ground, then the commanded entry would be prohibited, because it is not possible to enter during true prostration. And he said in Al-Kashshaf: They were ordered to prostrate upon reaching the door, in gratitude to God and in humility. Abu Hayyan objected to him in An-Nahr Al-Mad and said: They were not ordered to prostrate, rather it is a restriction on the occurrence of what was ordered, which is entering, and the conditions are restrictive ratios, and the commands are attributive ratios. The end. The answer to this is that the order to do what is restricted is an order to restrict, so whoever says go out quickly is ordering to go out in this manner, so if he went out not quickly, then according to the people of the language he would be disobeying the order. This does not contradict the conditions being restrictive ratios, because their description as being restrictions that are ordered is something in addition to the mere restriction. His saying: Hattah in the nominative case in the reading of the majority is based on the implication of a subject. Al-Akhfash said: Hattah was read in the accusative case meaning remove our sins from us a remission, and it was said that its meaning is seeking forgiveness, and from this is the saying of the poet:

He won the plan that God ordered, the sin of his servant was forgiven

Ibn Faris said in Al-Mujmal: Hatta is a word that they were commanded to say, and if they said it, their sins would be removed. Al-Razi said in his interpretation:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:58

And when We said, "Enter this town and eat from it as you wish in abundance and enter the gate bowing down and say, 'Forgive us.' We will forgive you your sins and will increase the doers of good."

He commanded them to say what indicates repentance, because repentance is a quality of the heart, and no one else can know about it. If someone becomes known for committing a sin and then repents afterwards, he must tell of his repentance to whoever witnesses his sin, because repentance is not complete without it. End quote. There is no evidence for the fact that repentance is not complete without that, rather merely deciding in the heart to repent is sufficient, whether people know about his sin or not. Perhaps concealing repentance in a way that no one but God knows about it is more beloved to God and closer to His forgiveness. As for removing what people have of their belief that he has remained in sin, that is another matter. Nafi' read it with a damma on the lower ya', Ibn Amir read it with a damma on the upper ta', and the rest read it with a noon, which is more appropriate. Sins is the plural of sin with a hamza, and the scholars of Arabic have spoken about that in what is well-known in the books of morphology. His saying: And We will increase the doers of good is like We will increase their goodness upon their previous goodness, and it is an active participle of the verb to do good. It has been proven in the Sahih that "the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was asked about goodness and he said: It is to worship God as if you see Him, and if you do not see Him, then He sees you."

Tafsir al-Baghawi

58. And when We said, 'Enter this town,' the town was named because it gathers its people, and from it comes the word al-Muqra'ah for the pond, because it gathers water. Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, said: It is Jericho, and it is the town of the giants, in which there were people from the remnants of 'Ad who were called the giants, and their leader was 'Awj bin 'Anq. It was also said: Balqa'. Mujahid said: Jerusalem. Ad-Dahhak said: It is Ramla, Jordan, Palestine, and Palmyra. Muqatil said: Ilya. Ibn Kaysan said: Ash-Sham. So eat from it wherever you wish in abundance, expanded upon you. And enter the gate, meaning a gate of the town's gates, and it had seven gates. Prostrating, meaning bowing, submissive, and bowing. Wahb said: When you enter it, prostrate in gratitude to God Almighty. And say, 'Forgive us our sins.' Qatadah said: Forgive us our sins. They were commanded to seek forgiveness. Ibn Abbas said: There is no god but God, because it forgives sins, and raising it is based on the estimation: Say, Our request is forgiveness. "We will forgive you your sins," from forgiveness, which is covering, so forgiveness. Concealing sins. The people of Medina and Nafi' read it with the letter ya' and with a damma over it and a fatha over the letter fa'. Ibn 'Amir read it with the letter ta' and with a damma over it and a fatha over the letter fa'. In Al-A'raf, all of them read it with Ya'qub with the letter ta' and with a damma over it. The others read it with the letter nun in the accusative and the letter fa' in the genitive case. And We will increase the doers of good in reward from Our bounty.

58- "And when We said, 'Enter this city,' meaning Jerusalem, and it was said that it was Jericho, which they were commanded to do after the wandering."

So eat from it wherever you wish in abundance, and it is in the accusative case as a source, or a state of the waw.

And enter the gate, meaning the gate of the village, or the dome to which they used to pray, for they did not enter the Holy House during the life of Moses, peace and blessings be upon him.

Prostrating in submission, or prostrating to God in thanks for bringing them out of the wilderness.

And say, 'Remove our sins,' meaning, our question, or your command, is Remove, which is a verb from Hat, like Jalsah. It was read in the accusative case based on the original meaning: Remove our sins, remit, or as the object of Say, meaning say this word. It was said that its meaning is Our command is remit, meaning: that we reside in this village and live there.

"We forgive you your sins" by your prostration. Nafi' read it with a ya' and Ibn 'Amir read it with a ta' in the passive form. The root of 'khataya'i is khata'i like khata'i", according to Sibawayh, the extra ya' was replaced with a hamza because it came after an alif, and two hamzas came together so the second was replaced with a ya' then it was changed to an alif, and the hamza was between the two alifs so it was replaced with a ya'. According to Al-Khalil, the hamza was placed before the ya' then he did with them what was mentioned.

And We will increase the reward of the doers of good. He made compliance a repentance for the wrongdoer and a reason for increasing the reward for the doer of good. He took it from the form of an answer to a promise, giving the impression that the doer of good is about to do that even if he does not do it, so how about if he does it, and that the Almighty will inevitably do it.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:59

Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them, so We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

But those who did wrong among them substituted a statement other than that which was said to them so they said: A grain in a hair and they entered crawling on their buttocks So We sent down upon those who did wrong in this the apparent is placed in place of the implicit as an exaggeration of the ugliness of their condition a punishment a torment and plague from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient because of their defiantly disobedient, so seventy thousand of them perished in an hour or less.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

And the interpretation of his saying: So he changed, so he changed, and what he means by his saying: Those who wronged, are those who did what they were not supposed to do. And what he means by his saying: A statement other than that which was said to them, is that they changed a statement other than that which they were commanded to say, so they said the opposite of it. And that is the change and alteration that was from them. And their changing the statement that they were commanded to say with a statement other than it, was what: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Hammam bin Munabbih, that he heard Abu Hurayrah say: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: God said to the Children of Israel: 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgive us,' and We will forgive you your sins, so they changed and entered the gate crawling on their buttocks, and they said, 'A grain in a barley grain.'"

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah and Ali ibn Mujahid told us, they said, Muhammad ibn Ishaq told us, on the authority of Salih ibn Kaysan, on the authority of Salih, the freed slave of Al-Taw'amah, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: And I was told by Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, the freed slave of Zayd ibn Thabit, on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, or on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, "on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: They entered the gate through which they were commanded to enter, prostrating, crawling on their buttocks, saying: Wheat among barley."

Muhammad bin Abdullah Al-Maharbi told me, he said, Abdullah bin Al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Hammam, on the authority of Abu Hurairah, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, regarding his statement: A remission. He said: They changed it and said: A grain.

Ibn Bashar told us, he said, Abd al-Rahman ibn Mahdi told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of al-Suddi, on the authority of Abu Saeed, on the authority of Abu al-Kanud, on the authority of Abdullah: Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgive us.' They said: Red wheat with barley in it. Then God revealed: But those who did wrong substituted another statement that had been said to them.

Muhammad bin Bashar told us, Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Enter the gate in prostration, he said: Bowing through a small door, so they began to enter from their buttocks and say: Wheat. That is what His statement: But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which was said to them.

Al-Hasan bin Al-Zubayrkan Al-Nakha'i narrated to us, he said: Abu Usamah narrated to us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: They were commanded to enter bowing and saying: Hitah. He said: They were commanded to seek forgiveness. He said: So they began to enter from a small door in front of their anus and say: Hintah, mockingly. That is what God said: But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which had been said to them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada and al-Hasan: Enter the gate in prostration. They said: They entered it in a direction other than that in which they were commanded, so they entered it crawling on their haunches, and they changed the statement to something other than what was said to them, so they said: A grain in a barley grain.

Muhammad ibn Amr al-Bahili told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Moses ordered his people to enter the gate prostrating and say: Hattah, and the gate was lowered for them to prostrate, but they did not prostrate, and they entered on their backs, and they said: Hanah.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Moses ordered his people to enter the mosque and say: Hattah. And the door was lowered for them so that they would lower their heads, but they did not prostrate and entered on their backsides to the mountain, which is the mountain to which his Lord revealed Himself, and they said: Huntah. That is the change that God Almighty said: But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which was said to them.

Musa bin Harun Al-Hamdani told me, he said, Amr bin

Surat al-Baqarah 2:59

Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them, so We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

Hammad told me, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Marra Al-Hamdani, on the authority of Ibn Masoud, that he said: They said: Hitta Samqan, O Azba Hazban, and in Arabic it is: a red wheat grain with a hole in it and a black barley. So that is what He said: But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which was said to them.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Sa'id bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And enter the gate prostrating, he said: So they entered on their buttocks with their heads covered.

Sufyan ibn Wakee' told us, he said, my father told us, on the authority of Al-Nadr ibn Adi, on the authority of Ikrimah: And enter the gate in prostration, so they entered with their heads covered, and say, 'Forgive us,' so they said: Red wheat with barley in it. That is what He said: But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which was said to them.

Narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas: And enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgive us.' He said: So the prostration of one of them was on his cheek. And Say, 'Forgive us.' We will forgive you your sins. They said: Wheat. Some of them said: A grain in barley. But those who did wrong substituted another statement that had been said to them.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: And enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness,' with which God will forgive you your sins and errors. He said: So they mocked him, meaning Moses, and said: Moses would not wish to play with us except that he played with us. Forgiveness, Forgiveness, what kind of Forgiveness? And some of them said to one another: Wheat.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hassan told us, Al-Hussein told me, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, and Ibn Abbas said: When they entered, they said: A grain in barley.

Muhammad ibn Saad told me, he said, my father Saad ibn Muhammad ibn al-Hasan told me, he said, my uncle told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: When they entered the door, they said: A grain in barley. But those who did wrong substituted another statement other than that which was said to them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky.

What he means by his saying: So We sent down upon those who did wrong, upon those who did what they should not have done, by changing the statement that God Almighty had commanded them to say with another statement, and by disobeying Him in what He had commanded them to do, and by doing what He had forbidden them to do, a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

In the Arabic language, rajz means torment. It is not the same as rajz. Rajz is a well, and from this comes the report narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about the plague, in which he said: It is a torment with which some of the nations before you were tormented.

Yunus bin Abdul-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Yunus told me, on the authority of Ibn Shihab, he said, Amer bin Saeed bin Abi Waqqas told me, on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: This pain or illness is a punishment with which some of the nations before you were punished.

Abu Shaiba bin Abi Bakr bin Abi Shaiba told me, he said, Umar bin Hafs told us, he said, my father told us, on the authority of Al-Shaibani, on the authority of Riyah bin Ubaidah, on the authority of Amer bin Saad, he said: I witnessed Usama bin Zaid, on the authority of Saad bin Malik, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The plague is a punishment that was sent down upon those who came before you or upon the Children of Israel.

And the people of interpretation said the same as we said in interpreting that. Those who said that mentioned:

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: a punishment, he said: a torment.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam Al-Asqalani told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Then We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky, he said: The punishment is wrath.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: When it was said to the Children of Israel: Enter the gate in prostration, and say: Forgiveness, and those who were unjust among them changed the statement that was said to them - God Almighty sent upon them the plague, and not a single one of them remained. And he recited: Then We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient, he said: And the children remained, and in them was the virtue and worship that is described in the Children of Israel and the goodness, and the fathers were all destroyed, the plague destroyed them.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Rajaz is torment. And everything in the Qur'an that is Rajaz is torment.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: a punishment, he said: Everything in the Book of God that is a punishment, meaning torment.

We have shown that the interpretation of Rajaz is torment. And the torment of God, the Most High, is of different types. God, the Most High, has informed us that He sent down torment from the sky upon those whose situation we have described. It is possible that this is a plague, and it is possible that it is something else. There is no indication in the apparent meaning of the Qur'an or in any proven report from the Messenger, which type it was.

The correct thing to say about this is to say as God Almighty said: So We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

However, it is more likely that what Ibn Zayd said is correct, because of the report that I mentioned from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in his telling of the plague as a punishment, and that it was used to punish people before us. Although I do not say that this is certainly the case, because the report from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, does not state which nation was punished by it. It may be possible that those who were punished by it were not those described by God in His statement: But those who did wrong substituted another statement that was said to them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Because they were wicked.

We have previously demonstrated in this book that the meaning of immorality is to depart from something.

The interpretation of his statement: Because they were wicked is: because they abandoned the obedience of God Almighty, and departed from it to disobey Him and oppose His command.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

There are four issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: So those who did wrong substituted another statement al-thana is in the nominative case, meaning that the wrongdoers among them substituted a statement other than what was said to them. This is because it was said to them: Say Hattah, so they said Hanah, as mentioned above, so they added a letter to the statement and suffered the affliction that they suffered, as a definition that adding to religion and innovating in the Shari'ah is very dangerous and very harmful. This is in changing a word that is an expression of repentance, which necessitated all of this punishment, so what do you think about changing what is from the attributes of the worshipped One! This and the statement is less than the action, so how about changing and altering the action?

Second: The Almighty's saying: So He replaced The meaning of Badal and Abdal was mentioned earlier, and it was read Perhaps our Lord will replace us in both ways. Al-Jawhari said: And I replaced the thing with another. And God replaced it from fear with security. And replacing something also means changing it even if it does not come with a replacement. And he replaced the thing with another, and he replaced it with him if he took its place. And the exchange is the exchange. And the substitutes: a group of righteous people who are not absent from the world, if one of them dies God replaces him with another. Ibn Duraid said: The singular is Badil. And the substitute: the substitute. And the substitute of the thing: its change, it is said: Badal and Badal, two languages, like: Shabah and Shabah, and Mithl and Mithl, and Nakal and Nakal. Abu Ubaid said: He did not hear in Fa'l and Fa'l other than these four letters. And Badal: a pain that occurs in the hands and feet. And Badal with a kasra has been replaced with Badal.

Third: The Almighty's statement: So We sent down upon those who did wrong. He repeated the word wronged without implying it to emphasize the matter. Repetition is of two types, one of which is its use after the completion of the statement, as in this verse and His statement: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands, then He said after that: So woe to them for what their hands have written, and He did not say: for what they wrote. He repeated the woe to emphasize their action, and from this is the statement of Al-Khansa':

Time has made me suffer, and it has hurt me, by knocking and winking.

She wanted time to hurt her with its major and minor misfortunes. The second type: the repetition of the apparent in place of the implied before the speech is complete, like the Almighty's saying: The Inevitable * What is the Inevitable? and The Calamity * What is the Calamity? The analogy would have been, had it not been for what was intended by it of glorification and magnification: The Inevitable, what is it? The Calamity, what is it? And similar to it: Then the companions of the right, what are the companions of the right? And the companions of the left, what are the companions of the left? He repeated Then the companions of the right to magnify the abundant reward that will be attained, and he repeated the phrase the companions of the left because of the painful torment that will befall them. And from this type is the saying of the poet:

If only the crow would caw every morning, it would be a crow that cuts the jugular veins.

Adi bin Zaid combined the two meanings and said:

I do not see death preceded by anything that made death bitter to the rich and the poor

He repeated the word death three times, which is from the first type, and from it the other said:

How wonderful is India and the land in which there is India and India from which distance and distance have come

He repeated the mention of his beloved three times to glorify her.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:59

Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them, so We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: A filth. The reading of the group is rajzān with a kasra on the ra', and Ibn Muhaysin with a damma on the ra'. Rajz means torment with a zay, and with a seen: stench and filth, and from this is the saying of the Almighty: So it increased them in rajzān ila rajsammān meaning stench to stench, as Al-Kisa'i said. Al-Farra' said: Rajz is filth. Abu Ubaid said: Just as it is said sadagh and zadgh, and so is rajs and rajz with the same meaning. Al-Farra' said: Some of them mentioned that rajz with a damma is the name of an idol they used to worship, and it was read that way in the Almighty's saying: And shun rajz. Rajz with a fathah on the ra' and the jīm is a type of poetry, and Al-Khalil denied that it is poetry. It is derived from rajz, which is a disease that afflicts camels in their rumps, so when they are aroused their thighs tremble. Because of their wickedness meaning their wickedness. And wickedness is going out, and this has been mentioned before. Ibn Watthab and Al-Nakha'i read: they sin with a kasra on the seen.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, blaming them for their refusal to fight and enter the Holy Land when they came from Egypt with Moses, peace be upon him, and they were ordered to enter the Holy Land, which was their inheritance from their father Israel, and to fight the infidel Amalekites in it, but they refused to fight them and became weak and frustrated, so God threw them into the wilderness as a punishment for them, as God Almighty mentioned in Surat Al-Ma'idah. For this reason, the most correct of the two sayings is that this city is Jerusalem, as stated by Al-Suddi, Al-Rabi' bin Anas, Qatadah, Abu Muslim Al-Isfahani, and more than one. God Almighty said, narrating from Moses, O my people, enter the Holy Land which God has assigned to you and do not turn back verses. Others said it was Jericho, and it was narrated from Ibn Abbas and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd, and this is far-fetched because it was not on their way and they were heading to Jerusalem, not Jericho. Even more distant than that is the saying of those who said it was Egypt, narrated by al-Razi in his interpretation, and the first correct one is that it was Jerusalem, and this was when they came out of the wilderness after forty years with Joshua ibn Nun, peace be upon him, and God opened it for them on the eve of Friday, and the sun was held back for them that day for a little while until the conquest was possible, and when they opened it, they were ordered to enter the gate, the gate of the city, prostrating, meaning in thanks to God Almighty for what He bestowed upon them of conquest and victory and the return of their city to them and their rescue from the wilderness and misguidance. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he used to say in His Almighty's saying and enter the gate prostrating, meaning bowing. Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Amr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, in His saying and enter the gate prostrating, he said bowing from a small gate, narrated by Al-Hakim narrated it from the hadith of Sufyan, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it from the hadith of Sufyan, and he is Al-Thawri, and he added, So they entered from the side of their backsides. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said, They were ordered to prostrate on their faces when they entered, and Al-Razi rejected it. It was narrated from some of them that what is meant here by prostration is submission, because it is difficult to take it literally. Khasif said, Ikrimah said, Ibn Abbas said, The door was before the qiblah. Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Qatadah, and Al-Dahhak said, It is the Gate of Forgiveness from the Gate of Ilya, Jerusalem. Al-Razi narrated from some of them that he meant by the gate a direction from the directions of the qiblah. Khasif said, Ikrimah said, Ibn Abbas said, So they entered on a side. Al-Suddi said, from Abu Saeed Al-Azdi, from Abu Al-Kanud, from Abdullah bin Masoud, "It was said to them, 'Enter the gate in prostration,' so they entered with their heads up, meaning raising their heads in opposition to what they were ordered to do. And the Almighty's statement, "And say, 'Forgiveness.'" Al-Thawri said, from Al-A'mash, from Al-Munhal, from Saeed bin Jubair, from Ibn Abbas, And say, 'Forgiveness.' He said, Forgiveness. Ask for forgiveness. It was narrated from Ata', Al-Hasan, Qatadah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar. Ad-Dahhak said from Ibn Abbas, And say 'forgiveness' meaning: Say this command is true as it was said to you. Ikrimah said: Say 'There is no god but God'. Al-Awza'i said: Ibn Abbas wrote to a man whom he named and asked him about the words of God the Almighty: And say 'forgiveness' so he wrote to him that they should confess their sins. Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: That is, forgive us our sins. We will forgive you your sins and increase the doers of good. He said: This is the answer to the command, meaning if you do what we have commanded you, we will forgive your sins and double your good deeds. The gist of the matter is that they were commanded to submit to God the Almighty at the conquest in action and word and to confess their sins and ask forgiveness for them and to be thankful for the blessing at that time and to hasten to do that is beloved to God the Almighty as God the Almighty said: "When the victory of God and the conquest comes * And you see the people entering into the religion of God in multitudes * Then exalt [God] with praise of your Lord and ask His forgiveness. Indeed, He is ever Accepting of repentance." Some of the Companions interpreted it as meaning frequent remembrance and asking for forgiveness at the conquest. And victory, and Ibn Abbas interpreted it as him informing the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, of his death in it and Omar, may God be pleased with him, approved of it, and there is no contradiction between him having ordered that at that time and informing him of his noble soul as well, and for this reason, may God bless him and grant him peace, he appeared to be very submissive at victory as it was narrated that on the day of the conquest of Mecca he was entering it from the upper pass and he was submissive to his Lord to the point that his chin touched the saddle of his saddle in thanks to God for that, then when he entered the city he washed himself and prayed eight rak'ahs and that was at noon, so some of them said: This is the noon prayer, and others said: Rather it is the prayer of conquest, so they recommended for the imam and the prince, if he conquers a city, to pray eight rak'ahs in it upon his first entry as Sa'd ibn Abi Waqqas, may God be pleased with him, did when he entered the palace of Kisra and prayed eight rak'ahs in it, and the correct view is that he separates between every two rak'ahs with a salutation, and it was said that he prays them all with one salutation, and God knows best.

And the Almighty's saying: But those who did wrong changed the statement to another one that was said to them. Al-Bukhari said: Muhammad told me, Abd al-Rahman ibn Mahdi told us, on the authority of Ibn al-Mubarak, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Hammam ibn Munabbih, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "It was said to the Children of Israel: Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness.' So they entered crawling on their buttocks, so they changed it and said, 'A grain in a hair.'" Al-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ismail ibn Ibrahim, on the authority of Abd al-Rahman, with a chain of transmission ending with him, and on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ubayd ibn Muhammad, on the authority of Ibn al-Mubarak, with some of it with a chain of transmission, in the words of God Almighty:

Forgiveness. He said: So they changed it and said, 'A grain.' Abd al-Razzaq said: Muammar informed us, on the authority of Hammam ibn Munabbih, that he heard Abu Hurayrah say: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "God said to the Children of Israel: 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgiveness.' We will forgive you your sins.' So they changed it and entered the gate crawling on their buttocks and said, 'A grain in a hair.'" This is an authentic hadith narrated by Al-Bukhari narrated on the authority of Ishaq bin Nasr, Muslim narrated on the authority of Muhammad bin Rafi', and Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abd bin Hamid, all on the authority of Abd al-Razzaq, on his authority.

Al-Tirmidhi said: It is good and authentic. Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Their substitution was as Salih bin Kaysan narrated to me on the authority of Salih, the freed slave of Al-Taw'amah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah and on the authority of someone I do not accuse, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: They entered the gate - which they were commanded to enter in prostration - crawling on their buttocks and saying, 'Wheat in barley.' Abu Dawud said: Ahmad bin Salih narrated to us, Sulayman bin Sulayman bin Dawud narrated to us, Abdullah bin Wahb narrated to us, Hisham bin Sa'd narrated to us, on the authority of Zayd bin Aslam, on the authority of Ata bin Yasar, on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

"God said to the Children of Israel: 'Enter the gate in prostration and say, 'Forgive us,' and We will forgive you your sins.'" Then Abu Dawud said: Ahmad bin Musafir narrated to us, Ibn Abi Fadik narrated to us on the authority of Hisham, similarly. This is how he narrated it alone in the book of letters, abbreviated. Ibn Mardawayh narrated to us: Abdullah bin Ja'far narrated to us: Ibrahim bin Mahdi narrated to us: Ahmad bin Al-Mundhir Al-Qazzaz narrated to us: Muhammad bin Ismail bin Abi Fadik narrated to us: Hisham bin Sa'd narrated to us: Zaid bin Aslam narrated to us: Ata bin Yasar narrated to us: Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri said: We traveled with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, until it was the end of the night. We passed a pass called Dhat Al-Hanzel. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "This pass tonight is like the door to which God said to the Children of Israel: Enter the door in prostration and say: 'Forgiveness,' and we will forgive you your sins." Sufyan Al-Thawri said: Abu Ishaq narrated to us: Al-Bara' said: "The foolish among the people will say: 'The Jews were told: Enter the door in prostration.' He said: Bowing down, and say: 'Forgiveness,' so they entered on their backsides and began to say: 'Red wheat with barley in it.' This is the saying of God, the Most High: 'Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them.'" Al-Thawri said: Al-Suddi narrated to us: Abu Sa'id Al-Azdi narrated to us: Abu Al-Kanud narrated to us: Ibn Mas'ud said: And say, Hatta, and they said, Hanita, a red grain with barley in it. So God revealed: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. Asbat said, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Marra, on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, that he said: They said, Hatta sama'ata azba mazba, so in Arabic it is a red wheat grain with a hole in it and a black hair. So that is the meaning of the Almighty: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. Al-Thawri said, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Munhal, on the authority of Sa'id, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: Enter the gate in prostration, he said, bowing from a small door. So they entered from their backsides and said, Hanita, so that is the meaning of the Almighty: But those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. And thus it was narrated on the authority of Ata', Mujahid, Ikrimah, Ad-Dahhak, Al-Hasan, Qatadah, Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, and Yahya ibn Rafi'. The gist of what the commentators have mentioned and what the context indicates is that they changed God's command to them from submission in word and deed, so they were commanded to enter prostrating, so they entered crawling on their buttocks from their buttocks, raising their heads, and they were commanded to say Hatta, meaning, Remove our sins and transgressions from us, so they mocked and said, Wheat in barley. This is the most extreme form of disobedience and obstinacy, and for this reason God sent down His wrath and punishment upon them for their immorality, which is their departure from His obedience. And for this reason He said: So We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient. Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Everything in the Book of God that refers to punishment means torment. This is how it was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Abu Malik, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah that it is torment. Abu Al-Aaliyah said that the punishment is anger. Al-Sha'bi said: The punishment is either the plague or the cold. Sa'id ibn Jubayr said that it is the plague. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Abu Sa'id Al-Ashja' told us, Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Habib ibn Abi Thabit, on the authority of Ibrahim ibn Sa'd, meaning Ibn Abi Waqqas, on the authority of Sa'd ibn Malik, Usamah ibn Zayd and Khuzaymah ibn Thabit, may God be pleased with them, they said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The plague is a punishment with which those who came before you were punished. This is how An-Nasa'i narrated it on the authority of Sufyan Ath-Thawri on his authority. The origin of the hadith in the two Sahihs is on the authority of Habib ibn Abi Thabit: If you hear of the plague in a land, do not enter it. The hadith. Ibn Jarir said: Yunus ibn Abd Al-A'la told me on the authority of Ibn Wahb on the authority of Yunus on the authority of Az-Zuhri, he said: Amer ibn Sa'd ibn Abi Waqas, on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: This pain and illness is a punishment with which some of the nations before you were punished. The origin of this hadith is included in the two Sahihs from the hadith of Malik, on the authority of Muhammad bin Al-Munkadir and Salim bin Abi Al-Nadr, on the authority of Amer bin Saad, in a similar manner.

Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them, so We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient.

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 59- So those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. It was said that they said: wheat, and it was said otherwise. The correct view is that they said: a grain in a hair, as will come, traced back to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And His saying: So We sent down upon those who did wrong is from placing the apparent in place of the implicit for a reason, as is established in the science of rhetoric, and here it is to magnify the matter upon them and to denounce their action, and from it is the saying of Adi bin Zaid:

Death was repeated in the house three times to exaggerate his matter and magnify his status. And his saying: a punishment with a kasra on the ra' in the reading of everyone except Ibn Muhaisin who read it with a damma on the ra'. And punishment means torment. And the explanation of sin has been presented. Abd al-Razzaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Qatadah regarding his saying: Enter this town he said: Jerusalem. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Zayd he said: It is Jericho, a village in Jerusalem. Abd ibn Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim and al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it from Ibn Abbas regarding his saying: Enter the gate he said: A narrow gate prostrating he said: Bowing. And his saying: Repentance he said: Forgiveness, so they entered from their backsides and said wheat in mockery. He said: So that is the saying of God the Almighty: Then those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Abbas he said: The gate is one of the gates of Jerusalem, and it is called the Gate of Repentance. Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir, Ibn Abi Hatim, al-Tabarani in al-Kabir and Abu al-Shaykh narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud who said: It was said to them: Enter the gate in prostration. So they entered with their heads covered and said: Wheat, a red grain with a barley grain in it. Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ikrimah regarding the statement: Enter the gate in prostration, he said: Lower your heads, "and say: 'Forgive me,'" he said: Say: There is no god but God. Al-Bayhaqi narrated in al-Asma' wa'l-Sifat on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding the statement: "Say: 'Forgive me,'" he said: There is no god but God. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on his authority who said: The gate was facing the Qiblah. Al-Bukhari, Muslim and others narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah on the authority of the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) who said: "The Children of Israel were told: Enter the gate in prostration and say: 'Forgive me,' so they changed it and entered crawling on their buttocks and said: 'A grain in a hair.'" Ibn Jarir and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Abu Hurairah that they said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "They entered the gate through which they were commanded to enter, prostrating, crawling on their buttocks, saying: 'Wheat in barley.'" The first is more correct because it is in the two Sahihs. It was narrated with them by those who narrated this other hadith: I mean Ibn Jarir and Ibn Al-Mundhir. Ibn Abi Shaybah narrated on the authority of Ali that he said: Our example in this nation is like the Ark of Noah and the Kebab of Repentance among the Children of Israel. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: Everything in the Book of God that is a punishment means torment. Muslim and others narrated on the authority of Usamah bin Zaid, Saad bin Malik and Khuzaymah bin Thabit that they said: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said: "This plague is a punishment and a remnant of the torment with which people were tormented before you. So if it is in a land while you are in it, do not leave it, and if you hear that it is in a land, do not enter it."

59. So those who wronged changed themselves and said a statement other than that which was said to them. This is because they changed the statement of hatta with habta, so they said in their tongues: hatana samaqathan meaning red wheat, in contempt of the command of God Almighty. Mujahid said: The door was lowered for them so that they could lower their heads, but they refused to enter it in prostration, so they entered on their backs, contradicting the action, just as they changed the statement and said a statement other than that which was said to them.

Abdul Wahid Al-Malhi told us, I told Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Naimi, I told Muhammad bin Ismail, I told Ishaq bin Nasr, I told Abdul Razzaq, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Hammam bin Munabbih, that he heard Abu Hurairah say: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The Children of Israel were told to enter the gate prostrating and say 'forgiveness', but they changed it and entered crawling on their buttocks and said 'a grain in a hair.'

"So We sent down upon those who did wrong a punishment from the sky." It was said: God sent a plague upon them, and seventy thousand of them perished in one hour. Because they were wicked. They disobeyed and went against the command of God Almighty.

59- So those who did wrong substituted a statement other than that which was said to them. They substituted what they were commanded to do of repentance and seeking forgiveness with seeking whatever they desired of worldly goods.

So We sent down upon those who did wrong. He repeated it to exaggerate the ugliness of their situation and to indicate that the sending down upon them was due to their wrongdoing by putting something other than what was commanded in its proper place, or upon themselves by abandoning what would lead to their salvation for what would lead to their destruction.

A punishment from the sky because they were defiantly disobedient. A punishment from the sky because of their disobedience. Originally, rajz means what is abhorred, and so is rajs. It was read with a dammah, which is a dialect of it, and what is meant by it is the plague. It was narrated that twenty-four thousand died in an hour.

And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, "Strike the stone with your staff." Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their place of drinking. Eat and drink from the provision of God and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:60

And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, "Strike the stone with your staff." Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their place of drinking. Eat and drink from the provision of God and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And mention and when Moses asked for water that is, he asked for water for his people and they were thirsty in the wilderness and We said, Strike the rock with your staff which is the one who fled with his garment, light and square like a man's head, marble or something like that, so he struck it and it burst open it split open. And there flowed from it twelve springs according to the number of the tribes every people a tribe of them had known their drinking place their drinking place so that no one else would share it with them. And We said to them Eat and drink from the provision of God and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption a state emphasizing its agent from 'atha with a kasra on the triangle, corrupted

Tafsir al-Suyuti

He means by his saying: And when Moses asked for water for his people, and when Moses asked us for water for his people, meaning he asked us to provide his people with water. So he left out mentioning the one who was asked for that, and the meaning that Moses asked for, since what was mentioned of the apparent speech indicates the meaning that he left out.

Likewise, his statement, Then We said, 'Strike the stone with your staff.' Then twelve springs gushed forth from it, is something that is sufficient to indicate the apparent meaning of what was omitted from it. That is because the meaning of the statement is: Then We said, 'Strike the stone with your staff.' So he struck it, and springs gushed forth. So he omitted mentioning the report of Moses striking the stone, since what was mentioned indicated what was intended by it.

Likewise, his saying: Every people has known their place of drinking, means: Every people among them has known their place of drinking.

He left out mentioning some of them because the speech indicates this.

We have previously demonstrated that Anas is a plural that does not have a singular form, and that if the word human were to be pluralized according to its form, it would be said: Anasi and Anasiyya.

The people of Moses are the Children of Israel, whose stories God Almighty told in these verses. And his Lord asked for water for them at the time when they were lost in the wilderness, as:

Bishr bin Muadh narrated, Yazid bin Zari' narrated, on the authority of Saeed bin Abi Arubah, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And when Moses asked for water for his people verse, he said: This was when they were in the wilderness, and they complained to their prophet of thirst, so they were ordered to bring a stone of Mount Tur, meaning from the mountain, and Moses would strike it with his staff. So they would carry it with them, and when they came down, Moses would strike it with his staff and twelve springs would gushed forth from it, each tribe having a known spring whose water would flow abundantly for them.

Tamim bin Al-Muntasir told me, he said, Yazid bin Harun told us, he said, Asbagh bin Zaid told us, on the authority of Al-Qasim bin Abi Ayoub, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: That was in the wilderness? He shaded them with clouds, and sent down upon them manna and quails, and made for them clothes that would not wear out or get dirty, and placed a square stone in their midst, and commanded Moses to strike the stone with his staff, and twelve springs gushed forth from it, three springs on each side of it, one spring for each tribe? And they did not move on a journey except that they found that stone with them in the place where it had been with them in the first camp.

Abdul Karim told me, he said, Ibrahim bin Bashar told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Abu Saeed, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: That was in the wilderness, Moses struck the stone for them and there appeared in it twelve springs of water, each tribe of them had a spring from which they could drink.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Then we said, 'Strike the stone with your staff.' Then twelve springs gushed forth from it, one spring for each tribe of them. All of that happened during their wanderings when they went astray.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan narrated to us, he said, Al-Hussein narrated to us, he said, Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: And when Moses asked for water for his people, he said: They feared thirst in their wanderings when they were lost, so the rock burst forth for them into twelve springs, Moses struck it. Ibn Jurayj said: Ibn Abbas said: The tribes are the sons of Jacob, they were twelve men, each one of them gave birth to a tribe, a nation of people.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Moses asked for water for them in the wilderness, and they were given water from a stone the size of a sheep's head. He said: They would throw it on the side of the sacks when they set out, and Moses would strike it with his staff when he descended, and twelve springs would gushed forth from it, one spring for each tribe of them. The Children of Israel would drink from it, until when it was time to set out, the springs would be blocked, and it was said that it was thrown on the side of the sacks. When he descended, he would throw it and strike it with his staff, and a spring would gushed forth from every side like the sea.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told me, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: That was in the wilderness.

As for His statement: Every people knows their drinking place, God only informed about them with that. Because their meaning in what God the Almighty had brought forth for them from the stone, whose description He the Most High described in this verse regarding drinking, was different from the meanings of the rest of creation regarding what God brought forth for them from the waters of the mountains and the earths, which have no owner except God the Almighty. That is because God had made for each of the twelve tribes a spring from the stone whose description He described in this verse, from which they drank, unlike the rest of the tribes, and no tribe of them would enter into the drinking place of another tribe. And with that, for each of those twelve springs, there was a place in the stone that the tribe from which they drank knew. Therefore, God the Most High singled out these people with the information about them: that each of them knew their drinking place, unlike the rest of the people. Since others were partners in the water that no one owned, and its sources and paths. Each tribe of these was unique in drinking from a spring of the Hijr water, to the exclusion of the other springs, which was specific to them and not to the other tribes. Therefore, they were singled out in the report about them: that each of their people knew their drinking place.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Eat and drink from the provision of God.

This is also something that is sufficient to mention what is apparent from it, without mentioning what was left out. That is because the interpretation of the statement: "So We said, 'Strike the rock with your staff.' So he struck it, and twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their drinking place. So it was said to them, 'Eat and drink from the provision of God.'" God, the Most High, informed that He commanded them to eat what He had provided them in the wilderness of manna and quails, and to drink what He had boasted to them in it of water from the rotating rock, which has no bottom in the earth, and no way to it except for its owners, flowing with springs of water, and brimming with fresh, sweet springs, by the power of the Possessor of Majesty and Honor.

Then He, the Most High, proceeded to them, permitting them what He permitted, and bestowing upon them what He bestowed upon them of a comfortable life, by forbidding them from striving to spread corruption on the earth, and from committing arrogance in it, so He, the Most High, said to them: And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

What he means by his saying: Do not commit abuse is do not transgress, and do not seek to spread corruption on the earth. As: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And do not spread corruption on the earth, he says: do not seek to spread corruption on the earth.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption, do not commit abuse, do not transgress.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, Yazid bin Zari' told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption, meaning do not walk on the earth spreading corruption.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And do not spread corruption on the earth, do not spread corruption on the earth.

The root of 'atha is the severity of corruption; in fact, it is the most severe corruption. It is said: 'Atha so-and-so on earth if he goes too far in corruption, he corrupts to the limit, he corrupts 'atha, shortened, and for the group: they are corrupting. There are two other languages for it, one of them is: 'atha ya'athu 'athwan. Whoever reads it in this language should add a damma to the 'tha' of 'aathu, and I do not know of any reader whose reading is followed who reads it in this way. Whoever speaks in this language while describing himself says: 'athwat 'athw, and whoever speaks in the first language says: 'athayt 'atha.

The other of them: 'Aath, ya'ith, 'aythā, 'ayyuthā, and 'aythāna, all of which have the same meaning. And from 'ayth, the saying of Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj:

A corrupt and immoral person has spread corruption among us: a crook or a corrupt trader.

He means by his saying: He caused havoc among us, he corrupted us.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

It contains eight issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And when Moses asked for water for his people, the dhal was broken due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. The seen is the seen of the question, like: ista'lama he asked for water, istakhabar he asked for it, istansur he asked for help, and the like, meaning he asked and asked for water for his people. The Arabs say: saqituhu I watered him and asqituhu I watered him, two languages with the same meaning. He said:

May God give water to my people, Bani Majd, and may He give water to Namir and the tribes from the crescent moon.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:60

And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, "Strike the stone with your staff." Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their place of drinking. Eat and drink from the provision of God and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

It was said: I gave him a drink from the water of the lip, and I gave him a drink, I showed him the water.

Second: Istisqa' only occurs when there is no water and the rain is withheld. If this is the case, then the ruling at that time is to show servitude, poverty, destitution, and humiliation, along with sincere repentance. And our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, prayed for rain:

So he went out to the prayer place, humble, submissive, reverent, and supplicating. That is enough for you! So what about us? There is no repentance with us except stubbornness and disobedience to the Lord of the servants. So how can we drink! But the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said in the hadith of Ibn Omar:

And they did not withhold the zakat of their wealth except that they withheld the rain from the sky, and were it not for the animals, they would not have had rain. The hadith. And it will come in full, God willing.

Third: The Sunnah of Istisqa' is to go out to the prayer place - in the manner we mentioned - and to deliver the sermon and pray. This is what the majority of scholars said. Abu Hanifa held that it is not part of his Sunnah to pray or go out, but rather it is a supplication and nothing else. He provided evidence.

On the authority of Anas: Authentic, narrated by Al-Bukhari and Muslim. He has no proof in it, because that was a supplication whose response was hastened, so he was satisfied with it over everything else, and he did not intend by that to clarify a Sunnah, and when he intended to clarify, he clarified by his action, according to what was narrated by Abdullah bin Zaid Al-Mazini, who said:

The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, went out, felt the heat, turned his cloak around, and then prayed two rak'ahs. Narrated by Muslim.

There will be more rulings on seeking rain in Surat Hud, God willing.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: Then We said, 'Strike the stone with your staff.' The staff is well-known, and it is a feminine shortened noun, and its alif is a change from a waw. He said:

On her stick is a sharp sword

The plural is 'asi and 'asi, which is fa'ool. The 'ayn is broken because of the kasra that follows it. 'A's is also similar to it, like zaman and azman. In the proverb: 'A's is from 'asiya', meaning some of the matter is from some. And their saying: 'He threw his 'asa' means he stayed and stopped traveling, and it is a proverb. He said:

She threw down her staff and settled down, just as a traveler's eyes are comforted by his return.

In the Qur'an: And what is that in your right hand, O Moses? He said, "It is my staff; I lean upon it. And there we will discuss its benefits, God willing. Al-Farra' said: The first mistake heard in Iraq was This is my staff. The staff may also be used to express unity and separation, and from this it is said about the Khawarij: They split the staff of the Muslims, meaning their unity and their coalition. And the staff was split, meaning the disagreement was removed. The poet said:

If there is a battle and the stick splits, then you and Al-Dahhak are enough, the sword of Engineer

That is enough for you and enough for Al-Dahhak. And their saying: Do not raise your stick in front of your family, is intended as a lesson. And God knows best.

The stone is well-known, and the plural of it in the smallest number is stones, and in the largest number it is stones and stones, and stones are rare. It is like our saying: a camel and a camel, and a male and a male, this is what Ibn Faris and Al-Jawhari said.

I said: In the Qur'an, They are like stones. "And indeed, among the stones." Say, 'Be stones.' "Throwing stones at them." And We rained down stones upon them. So how can it be rare, unless they mean that it is rare in analogy but common in usage and eloquent. And God knows best.

The Almighty said: Then it burst forth There is an omission in the speech, the meaning of which is: He struck, so it burst forth. The Almighty was able to cause the water to burst forth and the stone to split without striking, but He wanted to link the causes to the effects as a wisdom from Him for the servants in their reaching the desired goal, and to arrange their reward and punishment in the afterlife based on that. Explosion means splitting, and from it the dawn split. The water burst forth an explosion: it opened. Fajr is the place where the water bursts forth. Anbajas is narrower than anfajar, because it is impure and then becomes an explosion. It was said: anbajas, tabajas, and fattaq have the same meaning, as narrated by Al-Harawi and others.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: Twelve springs Two in the nominative case with burst forth and the sign of the nominative in it is the alif. It is declined unlike its counterparts because the dual is always declined to correct its meaning. Eyna is in the accusative case for clarification. Mujahid, Talha, and Isa read ashara with a kasra on the sheen, which is the language of Banu Tamim, and this is rare in their language because their way is to lighten. The language of the people of Hijaz is ashara and their way is to heavy. All of them said by An-Nahhas. The ain is one of the common nouns, it is said: the ain of water, the ain of man, the ain of the knee, and the ain of the sun. The ain is a cloud that comes from the direction of the qiblah. The ain is rain that lasts for five or six days and does not stop. A country with few al-Nas 114: meaning few people. And it does not have an ain, with a fatha on the ya. The ain is the hole in the waterskin. The ain of water is similar to the ain of animals, because water comes out of it like tears come out of the eye of an animal. It was said: Since the eye of an animal is the most noble thing in it, it was compared to the eye of water, because it is the most noble thing on earth.

Sixth: When Moses, peace be upon him, asked for water for his people, he was ordered to strike a stone with his staff, it was said: a square stone from the mountain the size of a sheep's head, thrown in broken bags and carried with it, and when they dismounted, it was placed in the middle of their camp. It was mentioned that they did not carry the stone, but they would find it at each stage in its place from the first stage, and this is greater in the verse and miracle. It was said: The name of the stone was given to it so that Moses could strike any stone he wanted, and this is more eloquent in the miracle. It was said: God the Most High ordered him to strike a specific stone that He indicated to Moses, peace be upon him, and that is why it was mentioned in the definite article. Saeed bin Jubair said: It is the stone on which Moses placed his garment when he washed himself, and he fled with his garment until God healed him from what his people had accused him of. Ibn Atiyyah said: There is no disagreement that it was a separate, square stone, and three springs would flow from each direction if Moses struck it, and when they no longer needed water and departed, the springs would dry up.

I said: What our Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was given of a spring of water and its gushing forth from his hand and between his fingers is the greatest miracle, for we see water gushing forth from stones during the night and during the day, and the miracle of our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was not for any prophet before our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that water comes out from between flesh and blood! The trustworthy imams and established jurists narrated, "On the authority of Abdullah, who said: We were with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and we did not find any water, so a pot was brought to him and he put his hand in it, and I saw the water gushing forth from between his fingers and he said: Come to purification." Al-A'mash said: Salim bin Abi al-Ja'd told me that he said to Jabir: How many were you that day? He said: One thousand five hundred. Wording by al-Nasa'i.

Seventh: The Almighty's statement: Every people has known their drinking place. This means that each tribe has a spring that they know and do not drink from any other. The drinking place is the place of drinking. It was also said: the place of drinking. The tribes in the Children of Israel are like the tribes in the Arabs, and they are the descendants of the twelve sons of Jacob, peace be upon him. Each tribe had one of those springs that did not go beyond it. Ata' said: The stone had four sides, and three springs came out of each side, and each tribe had a spring that no one else mixed with them. It has been reported to us that there were fifty thousand fighters in each tribe, in addition to their horses and beasts. Ata' said: On every spot where Moses struck the stone, something like a woman's breast would appear, and it would sweat at first and then flow.

Eighth: The Almighty's saying: Eat and drink. There is an omission in the speech, the meaning of which is: We said to them: Eat the manna and quails, and drink the water gushing forth from the separate forest. And do not cause corruption. That is, do not cause corruption. And 'ayth means severe corruption. He forbade them from that. It is said: 'Athā ya'thā 'athan, and 'Athā ya'thu 'athwā, and 'Athā ya'ith 'aythan, 'ayyuthan, and ma'ath. The first is the language of the Qur'an. It is also said: 'Athā ya'th in the doubled form: he corrupted, and from it comes the 'athah, which is the weevil that licks wool. Corrupters is a state, and the meaning is repeated to emphasize the difference in the wording. In these words, there is the permissibility of blessings and their enumeration, and the advancement in sins and the prohibition of them.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in answering your prophet Moses, peace be upon him, when he asked Me for water for you, and making water easy for you and bringing it out for you from a rock with you, and causing water to gush forth for you from twelve springs, for each of your tribes a spring they have recognized, so eat of the manna and the quails and drink from this water which I have gush forth for you without your effort or toil, and worship Him who has subjected that to you: And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption. And do not meet blessings with disobedience, so that you take them away. The commentators have elaborated on this in their speech, as Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, said: He placed a square stone in their midst and ordered Moses, peace be upon him, to strike it with his staff, and twelve springs gushed forth from it, three springs on each side of it, and He informed each tribe of their spring from which they would drink. They would not depart from a place of departure except that they would find that with them in the place where they were in the first place. This is part of the hadith narrated by Al-Nasa'i, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim, which is the long hadith of the trials. Attia Al-Awfi said: And he made for them a stone like a bull's head that was carried on a bull. When they stopped at a place, they would put it down and Moses, peace be upon him, would strike it with his staff and twelve springs would gush out from it. When they moved on, they would carry it on a bull and the water would be held back. Uthman bin Ata Al-Khurasani said on the authority of his father: The Children of Israel had a stone, and Aaron would put it down and Moses would strike it with his staff. Qatada said: It was a mountain stone from the mountain that they would carry with them until they stopped, Moses would strike it with his staff. Al-Zamakhshari said: It was said that it was made of marble and was a cubit by a cubit. It was said that it was like a human head. It was said that it was from Paradise, ten cubits long, the height of Moses, and it had two branches that would burn in the darkness. It was carried on a donkey. He said: It was said that Adam brought it down from Paradise and they inherited it until it fell to Shu'aib, who gave it to him with the staff. It was said that it was the stone on which his garment was placed when he washed himself, and Gabriel said to him: Lift this stone, for in it is power and a miracle for you, so he carried it in his saddlebags. Al-Zamakhshari said: It is possible that the lam is for the genus and not for the covenant, i.e. Strike the thing called the stone, and on the authority of Al-Hasan, he did not command him to strike a specific stone. He said: This is more evident in the miracle and more evident in the ability. So he would strike the stone with his staff and it would burst forth, then he would strike it and it would dry up. They said: If Moses loses this stone, we will be thirsty. So God inspired him to speak to the stones and they will burst forth, and not to touch them with the staff, so that they might acknowledge. And God knows best. Yahya bin Al-Nadr said: I said to Juwaybir: How did each people know where to drink? He said: Moses would place the stone and a man from each tribe would stand up and Moses would strike the stone and twelve springs would burst forth from it and it would sprinkle water from each spring on a man and that man would call his tribe to that spring. Ad-Dahhak said: Ibn Abbas said that when the Children of Israel were in the wilderness, rivers were split for them from the stone. Ath-Thawri said on the authority of Abu Saeed on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He said that in the wilderness, Moses struck the stone for them and twelve springs of water came out of it, for each tribe of them had a spring from which they would drink. Mujahid said something similar to what Ibn Abbas said. This story is similar to the story in Surat Al-A'raf, but that one was Meccan, so the narration about them was in the third person because God the Most High is telling His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, what He did for them. As for this surah - which is Al-Baqarah - it is Medinan, so the address in it is directed to them. There he reported by saying: Then twelve springs gushed forth from it, which is the beginning of the explosion. Here he reported what the situation eventually led to, which is the explosion, so it was appropriate to mention the explosion here and that there, and God knows best. And between the two contexts there is a difference in ten verbal and semantic aspects that Al-Zamakhshari asked about in his interpretation and answered them with what he had, and the matter in that is close. And God knows best.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:60

And when Moses asked for water for his people, We said, "Strike the stone with your staff." Then twelve springs gushed forth from it. Each people knew their place of drinking. Eat and drink from the provision of God and do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption.

Fath al-Qadir

Istisqa' only occurs when there is no water and the rain is withheld. Its meaning in the language is: asking for rain. In Al-Shira', it is proven that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, described it in prayer and supplication. The stone may be a specific stone, so the lam is for the covenant, or it may not be specific, so it is for the genus, which is more evident in the miracle and stronger for the argument. His statement: 60- And it burst forth The fa is based on an omitted word, the meaning of which is he struck, so it burst forth. Explosion means splitting, and the water burst forth, and the dawn is the place where the water bursts forth. Ibn Atiyah said: There is no disagreement that it was a square stone from which three springs came out from each side. If Moses struck it, the springs flowed, and if they no longer needed water, they dried up. The place of drinking is the place of drinking, and it was said: it is the drink itself. And in it is evidence that a group of them drank from each spring and no one else shared with them. It was said: Each tribe had one of those springs that did not extend beyond it to others, and the tribes are the descendants of the twelve sons of Jacob. And His saying: Eat means We said to them: Eat the manna and quails and drink the water that gushes from the rock. And 'atha ya'athi 'athan, and 'atha ya'athu 'athwan, and 'atha ya'ith 'ithan, languages: meaning he spoiled. And His saying: Corrupters is an emphatic state. It says in Al-Qamoos: 'atha karma, and sa'i and radhi, 'atha and 'athyan, and 'atha ya'athu 'athwan: he spoiled. And it says in Al-Kashshaf: 'atha is the most severe corruption. So it was said to them: Do not persist in corruption in your state of corruption, because they were persisting in it.

60. And when Moses asked for water he asked for water for his people because they were thirsty in the wilderness and asked Moses to ask for water for them and he did so God revealed to him as He said: So We said, Strike with your staff and it was from the myrtle of Paradise, its length was ten cubits the length of Moses, peace be upon him, and it had two branches that glowed with light in the darkness, and its name was Aliq. Adam, peace be upon him, carried it from Paradise and the prophets inherited it until it reached Shu'aib, peace be upon him, so he gave it to Moses, peace be upon him.

Muqatil said: The name of the stick is its description. The Almighty said: The Stone They differed about it. Wahb said: It was not a specific stone, but Moses would strike any stone that was on the width of the stones, and springs would gush forth for each tribe, and they were twelve tribes, then each spring would flow in a stream to the tribe that he was commanded to water. The others said: It was a specific stone, as evidenced by its being known by the definite article. Ibn Abbas said: It was a light, square stone, the size of a man's head. He would put it in his bucket, and when they needed water, he would put it down and hit it with his staff. Ata' said: The stone had four faces, each face had three eyes, and each tribe had an eye. It was also said: The stone was made of marble. It was also said: It was made of marble, and it had twelve holes, and a fresh water spring would spring from each hole. When they were finished and Moses wanted to carry it, he would hit it with his staff and the water would go away. It would water six hundred thousand people every day. Sa'id ibn Jubayr said: It is the stone on which Moses placed his garment to wash himself, so he fled with his garment and passed by a group of the Children of Israel when they threw stones at him. When Gabriel came to him, he said: God God the Almighty says: Lift this stone, for I have power over it, and you will have a miracle in it. So he lifted it and put it in his bag. Ata' said: Moses would strike it twelve times, and on each strike a woman's breast would appear, then rivers would gush forth and flow. Most of the commentators say: Anbajasta and Anbajasta are the same. Abu Amr ibn al-Ala' said: Anbajasta and Anbajasta means flowed. This is what God the Almighty says: Then there gushed forth meaning he struck, and there gushed forth from it, meaning flowed. Twelve springs according to the number of the tribes. Each people has known their drinking place their drinking place, no tribe would interfere with another in drinking. Eat and drink from the provision of God meaning and We said to them eat from the manna and quails, and drink from the water, for all of this is from the provision of God that comes to you without difficulty. And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption. Abu 'Amr ibn al-'Ala' said: Anbajasta and Anbajasta are the most severe forms of corruption. It is said, 'atha ya'athi 'ithan and 'atha ya'athu 'athwan and 'atha ya'ith 'ithan.

From what God has provided means what God has provided them of manna, quails, and spring water. It has also been said that it refers to water alone because it is drunk and eaten from what grows on it. And do not commit abuse on the earth, spreading corruption do not transgress while you are corrupting. He only restricted it because even if it is prevalent in corruption, there may be some of it that is not corruption, such as confronting the unjust transgressor with his action, and some of it includes a preponderant goodness, such as Al-Khidr, peace be upon him, killing the boy and puncturing the ship, and corruption is close to it, but it is prevalent in what is perceived by the senses. Whoever denies such miracles does so out of extreme ignorance of God and lack of contemplation of the wonders of His creation. Since it is possible for stones to shave hair, repel vinegar, and attract iron, it is not impossible for God to create a stone that He uses to attract water from under the earth, or to attract air from the sides and turn it into water by the force of cooling and the like.

60- And when Moses asked for water for his people when they were thirsty in the desert.

So We said, 'Strike the stone with your staff.' The lam in it is for the covenant, as narrated, that it was a Tur stone that he carried with him, and three springs flowed from each direction, each spring flowing in a stream to the tribe, and they were six hundred thousand and the camp's capacity was twelve miles, or a stone that Adam brought down from Paradise, and it fell to Shu'aib, upon him be the lam, so he gave it to Moses with the staff, or the stone that fled with his garment when he put it on to wash himself and God cleared him of what they accused him of of filth, so Gabriel, peace be upon him, indicated to him to carry it, or for the type and this is more evident in the argument. It was said that he did not order him to strike a specific stone, but when they said: What would happen to us if we reached a land with no stones? He carried a stone in his saddlebags, and he would strike it with his staff when he descended and it would burst, and he would strike it with it when he set out and it would dry up, so they said: If Moses loses his staff, we will die of thirst, so God revealed to him: Do not strike the stone and speak to it and it will feed you, perhaps they will take heed. It was said that the stone was made of marble and was an arm by an arm, and the staff was ten cubits, the length of Moses, peace be upon him, from the myrtle of Paradise, and it had two branches that burned in the darkness.

Then twelve springs gushed forth from it is related to an omitted word, the meaning of which is: If you struck, then they gushed forth, or if you struck, then they gushed forth, as mentioned in the Almighty's statement: Then He pardoned you. It is read as ashara with a kasra or a fatha on the sheen, and these are two dialects for it.

Every people every tribe has known their drinking place their spring from which they drink. Eat and drink on the assumption of the saying:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when you said, O Moses, we will never be patient with one food, meaning manna and quails, (so call upon your Lord to produce for us something of what the earth grows of for clarification its herbs and cucumbers and garlic its wheat and lentils and onions. He said) to them, Moses Will you exchange that which is better more worthless for that which is lower more degraded for that which is higher. Would you take it in its place? The hamza is for denial, so they refused to return, so God Almighty called Go down descend to a city of the cities for you will have therein what you asked for of plants and humiliation and destitution have been stamped upon them humiliation and disgrace and poverty meaning the effect of poverty from stillness and shame, so it is binding upon them, even if they were rich, as is the case with a minted dirham due to its minting and they incurred they returned (with wrath from God. That) meaning the humiliation and wrath because they meaning because they were disbelieving By the signs of God and they kill the prophets such as Zechariah and John unjustly that is, unjustly that is because they disobeyed and were transgressing they exceeded the limit in sins. He repeated it for emphasis.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

We have previously demonstrated the meaning of patience, which is to restrain the soul and prevent it from something. Since that is the case, then the meaning of the verse is: And remember when you said, O company of Children of Israel: We will not be able to restrain ourselves on one type of food. And that one type of food is what God Almighty informed us that He fed them in their wanderings, and it is the comfort according to some of the people of interpretation, and according to Wahb ibn Munabbih it is pure bread with meat. So ask your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of herbs and cucumbers, and whatever God named along with that, and He mentioned that they asked Him for Moses.

The reason for their asking Moses, as far as we have been informed, is what: Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said: Yazid ibn Zari' told us, he said: Sa'id told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And when you said, 'O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food,' he said: The people were in the wilderness, and the clouds had shaded them, and manna and quails had been sent down to them, so they got tired of that, and remembered the life they had in Egypt, so they asked Moses about it. So God Almighty said: Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: We will never be patient with one kind of food, he said: They got tired of their food, and remembered the life they had had before that, they said: Call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic the verse.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told us, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And when you said, 'O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food,' he said: Their food was quails and their drink was manna, so they asked for what was mentioned, and it was said to them: Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for.

Abu Ja'far said: Qatada said: When they came to the Levant, they missed the foods they used to eat, so they said: Call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its herbs, its cucumbers, its garlic, its lentils, and its onions. The clouds had shaded them, and manna and quails had been sent down to them, so they were tired of that, and remembered the life they had had in Egypt.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Issa told us, he said, I heard Ibn Abi Nujayh regarding the words of God Almighty: We will never be patient with one kind of food, manna and quails, so they replaced it with herbs and what was mentioned with it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: They were given in the wilderness what they were given, but they got tired of that and said: O Musa, we will not be patient with one type of food, so call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its herbs, cucumbers, garlic, lentils, and onions.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd told us, he said: The food of the Children of Israel in the wilderness was one, and their drink was one. Their drink was honey that came down to them from the sky and was called manna, and their food was a bird called the quail. They ate the bird and drank the honey. They did not know bread or anything else. So they said: O Moses, we will not be patient with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its green plants. So he recited until he reached: Go down to Egypt, and you will have what you asked for.

Rather, He, the Most High, said: He brings forth for us from what the earth grows, and He did not mention that they asked Him to call upon His Lord to bring forth for them from the earth. He said: They said, Call upon your Lord to bring forth for us such and such from what the earth grows of its herbs and cucumbers, because min comes with the meaning of partiality for what comes after it, so it was sufficient for Him to mention partiality, since it was known that it entered into the meaning of what was intended by the speech in which it is. Like the saying of the one who says: Today, so-and-so has food at his place, meaning some of it.

Some of them said: From here means cancellation and omission. It is as if the meaning of the statement, according to him, is: He brings forth for us what the earth produces of its herbs. He cited as evidence for that the saying of the Arabs: I have not seen anyone meaning: I have not seen anyone, and the saying of God: And He will expiate for you some of your misdeeds (al-Baqarah 2:271), and their saying: There has been a conversation, so leave me alone until I go, meaning: There has been a conversation.

A group of Arabists denied that min could mean cancellation in any part of speech. They claimed that its use in every place where it is used indicates that the speaker intends some of what it is used in, not all of it, and that it is not used in any place except for an understood meaning.

The interpretation of the statement is as we have described from the command of: So call upon your Lord to bring forth for us some of what the earth grows of its herbs and cucumbers.

And the greens, cucumbers, lentils, and onions are what people have known among themselves from the plants and seeds of the earth.

As for fawm, the people of interpretation differed about it. Some of them said: It is wheat and bread. Those who said that mentioned: Muhammad ibn Bashir told us, he said: Abu Ahmad and Muammal told us, they said: Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Ata', he said: fawm is bread.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told me, he said, Abu Ahmad told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Ata' and Mujahid, regarding his statement: and her mouth, they said: her bread.

Zakariya bin Yahya bin Abi Zaida and Muhammad bin Amr told me, they said: Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa bin Maimun, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And her mouth, he said: bread.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada and Al-Hasan: Foam is the grain that people bake.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada and al-Hasan, something similar.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Hisham told us, he said, Husayn told us, on the authority of Abu Malik, regarding his statement: And its mouth, he said: wheat.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And its mouth means wheat.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Amr bin Awn told us, he said, Hisham told us, on the authority of Yunus, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Hishin, on the authority of Abu Malik, regarding his statement: and its mouth, meaning wheat.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far al-Razi told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said: Foam is the grain from which people bake bread.

Al-Qasim told me, he said, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said: Ata' bin Abi Rabah told me: His statement: and her mouth, he said: her bread, Mujahid said it.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd told me: Foam is bread.

Yahya bin Othman Al-Sahmi told me, he said, Abdullah bin Saleh told us, he said, Muawiyah told me, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: and its people, he said: wheat and bread.

Al-Munjab narrated that Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: And its mouth, he said: It is wheat itself.

Ali bin Al-Hassan told us, he said, Muslim Al-Jarmi told us, he said, Issa bin Yunus told us, on the authority of Rashdin bin Kurayb, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the statement of God Almighty: And its people, he said: The people is wheat in the language of the Banu Hashim.

Abdul Rahman bin Abdullah bin Abdul Hakam told me, he said, Abdul Aziz bin Mansour told us, Nafi bin Abi Naim, that Abdullah bin Abbas was asked about the statement of God: And its people, he said: wheat.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Haven't you heard the statement of Ahyiha bin Al-Jalah when he said:

I was the richest person in the city and I returned to the city about planting foam

Others said: It is garlic. Those who said that were mentioned: Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told me, he said: Abu Ahmad told us, he said: Sharik told us, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: It is this garlic.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Jaafar told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', he said: Foam is garlic.

And in some readings it is called garlic.

It has been mentioned that the name of both wheat and bread is fuma from the ancient language. He narrated what he heard from the people of this language: fuma lana, meaning: bake bread for us.

It was mentioned that this is the reading of Abdullah bin Masoud: thawmah with a thā'. If this is correct, then it is one of the letters that are changed, like their saying: waqa'u fi 'athūr shar they fell into 'athūr shar and 'āfur shar they fell into 'athāfi shar and their saying for the fire-places: athāfi myth, and for the maghāfir: maghāthir maghāthir, and similar to that in which the tha' is changed to a fa' and the fa' to a tha', because the point of articulation of the fa' is close to the point of articulation of the tha'. The maghāfir is similar to something sweet, similar to honey, it descends from the sky sweetly, it falls on trees and the like.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: "He said: 'Would you exchange that which is better for that which is worse?'"

He meant by his saying: "He said: 'Would you exchange that which is better for that which is less?'" Moses said to them: Would you take that which is less worthless in danger, value, and standard of living, in exchange for that which is better in danger, value, and standard of living? And that was the overwhelming worry.

The origin of substitution is: leaving something for another thing in place of what was left.

The meaning of his saying: The lowest is the most contemptible, most lowly, and least important. Its origin is from their saying: This man has come down to lowliness, and He comes down in matters without a slur, if he follows the baseness of them. The slur has been mentioned by some Arabs in this regard, having heard it from them. They say: You were not lowly, and You have come down. Some of our companions recited to me from someone else that he heard some of the Banu Kalb recite the verse of Al-A'sha:

Her clothes are white and her back is clear

With a hamza on the word al-dani', and he heard them say: He is a lowly, vile person, with a hamza. If that is correct from them, then the hamza in it is one language, and leaving it out is another.

There is no doubt that whoever replaces manna and quails with greens, cucumbers, lentils, onions and garlic has replaced the lowly with the noble.

Some of them interpreted his saying: which is closer to mean: which is nearer. The reason for his saying: which is closer is that it is more effective than closeness, which means nearness.

And similar to what we said about the meaning of his statement: that which is lesser, a number of the people of interpretation said about its interpretation. Those who said that mentioned: Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said, Yazid ibn Zari' told us, on the authority of Sa'id, on the authority of Qatada, he said: Would you exchange that which is lesser for that which is better? He said: Would you exchange that which is worse for that which is better than it?

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: which is lower, he said: worse.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for.

The interpretation of that is: So Moses called, and We responded to him, and We said to them: Go down to Egypt. This is one of the omitted words that was sufficed with the apparent meaning of mentioning what was omitted and left out of it.

We have previously demonstrated that the meaning of descending to a place is descending to it and settling in it.

The interpretation of the verse is: "And when you said, 'O Moses, we will never be patient with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs, its cucumbers, its garlic, its lentils, and its onions.'" Moses said to them: Would you exchange that which is worse and worse in life for that which is better? So Moses called upon his Lord to give them what they asked for, and God answered his call and gave them what they asked for. God said to them: Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for.

Then the readers differed in the reading of his saying:

Misra, so the majority of the readers read it Misra with the tanween of Misra and its inclusion. Some of them read it without the tanween and deleting the alif from it. As for those who added the tanween to it and included it, they meant by it a city from the cities, not a specific city. So its interpretation according to their reading is: Go down to a city from the cities, because you are in the deserts, and what you are seeking is not in the deserts and wildernesses, but rather it is in the villages and cities, for when you go down to it you will have what you asked for of livelihood. It may be possible that some of those who read that with the inclusion and tanween, the interpretation of the speech according to them was: Go down to Misra, the town known by this name, which is the city from which they left. However, he included it with the inclusion and tanween in imitation of the script of the Qur'an, because in the Qur'an there is an alif fixed in Misr, so the way of reading it with the inclusion and tanween is the way of those who read Qawarira * Qawarira min faddah (al-Insan 76:15-16) with the tanween, in imitation of the script of the Qur'an. As for the one who did not put a tanween on the word, there is no doubt that he meant Egypt, which is known by this name specifically, and not the other countries.

The people of interpretation differed on this, similar to the difference in the reading of it.

So, Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said, Yazid ibn Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Go down to Egypt, meaning one of the cities, for you will have what you asked for.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Go down to Egypt from the cities, for you will have what you asked for. So when they came out of the wilderness, the manna and quails were removed and they ate the vegetables.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told me, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Go down to Egypt, he said: He means a country from among the countries.

Al-Qasim bin Al-Hasan told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: Go down to Egypt. He said: Egypt from the cities. They claimed that they did not return to Egypt.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: Go down to Egypt, he said: Egypt is one of the cities. And Egypt is not used in speech. So it was said: Which Egypt? So he said: The Holy Land that God has written for them, and he recited the words of God, the Most High: Enter the Holy Land which God has written for you (al-Ma'idah 5:21).

Others said: It is Egypt, where Pharaoh was. Those who said that mentioned:

Al-Muthanna told me, Adam told us, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Go down to Egypt, he said: He meant by it the Egypt of Pharaoh.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

And among the arguments of those who said that God, the Most High, meant by His saying: Go down to Egypt, Egypt from the Egypts, the Egypt of Pharaoh specifically, is that God made the land of Ash-Sham for the Children of Israel to live in after He brought them out of Egypt. And He tested them with the wandering, because of their refusal to Moses in the war of the giants, when He said to them: "O my people, enter the Holy Land which God has assigned to you and do not turn back and become losers. They said, "O Moses, indeed within it is a people of giants, and we will never enter it until they leave it. But if they leave it, then we will enter." Two men from among those who feared, upon whom God had bestowed favor, said, "Enter upon them through the gate, and when you have entered it, then you will be predominant. And upon God rely, if you should be believers." They said, "O Moses, indeed we will never enter it as long as they are within it. So go, you and your Lord, and fight. Indeed, we will remain right here." (al-Ma'idah 5:21-24), so God, the Most High, the Almighty, forbade those who said that, as He told us, from entering it until they perished in the wilderness. And He afflicted them with wandering in the land for forty years, then He sent down their descendants to the Levant, and settled them in the Holy Land, and caused the destruction of the giants to be at their hands with Joshua bin Nun after the death of Moses bin Imran. So we see that God Almighty informed us about them that He wrote the Holy Land for them, and He did not inform us about them that He returned them to Egypt after He expelled them from it, so it is permissible for us to read: Go down to Egypt, and interpret it as meaning that He returned them to it.

They said: If someone argues with the words of God Almighty: "So We brought them out from gardens and springs, and treasures and a noble station. Thus, and We gave them as an inheritance to the Children of Israel" (Ash-Shu'ara': 57-59).

It was said to him: God, may His praise be glorified, only gave them that inheritance, so He made them possess it and did not return them to it, and He made their dwellings in the Levant.

As for those who said: God Almighty meant Egypt by His saying: Go down to Egypt, then one of the proofs they used was the verse in which He said: "So We brought them out from gardens and springs, and treasures and a noble station. Thus, We gave it as an inheritance to the Children of Israel" (Ash-Shu'ara': 57-159) and His saying: "How many gardens and springs did they leave behind, and crops and noble station, and comfort in which they used to rejoice. Thus, We gave it as an inheritance to another people" (al-Dukhan 44:25-28), they said: So God Almighty informed that He had given them that as an inheritance and made it theirs, so they would not inherit it and then not benefit from it. They said: And they would not benefit from it except by some of them going to it, otherwise there is no reason to benefit from it, if they did not go, or some of them go to it. They said: And another, that in the reading of Ubayy ibn Ka'b and Abdullah ibn Mas'ud: Go down to Egypt without an alif.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

They said: In that is clear evidence that it is Egypt itself.

Abu Ja'far said: What we say about this is that there is no evidence in the Book of God for the correctness of these two interpretations, nor is there any report from the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, that would make its coming an excuse. The people of interpretation dispute over its interpretation, so the most correct of the sayings about this, in our view, is to say that Moses asked his Lord to give his people what they asked for from the plants of the earth, as God, the Almighty, the Majestic, explained in His Book, while they were wandering on the earth. So God answered Moses' prayer and commanded him to descend with those of his people who were with him to a settlement in the land that would produce for them what he asked for, since what they asked for was only produced by villages and cities, and that He gave them that when they arrived there. It is possible that that settlement was Egypt, and it is possible that it was Ash-Sham.

As for the reading, it is with the alif and tanween: Ahbtū Misrān. This is the reading that I do not accept other than it, because the lines of the Muslims' Qur'ans are the same, and the reading of the Qur'an is agreed upon. No one read it without the tanween and the alif from it, except for someone who cannot be objected to as an argument, in what it came with of the reading that is widespread among them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying, and imposed, is that he imposed and imposed humiliation on them and forced them to do so. It is from the saying of the speaker: The imam imposed the jizya on the People of the Covenant and the man imposed the kharaj on his slave, meaning by that he imposed it and forced it on him. And from their saying: The prince imposed the expedition on the army, meaning by that: he forced it on them.

As for humiliation, it is the action of the one who says: So-and-so was humiliated, "smallness" is from smallness of the matter, and sitting is from sit.

And humiliation is the humiliation that God Almighty commanded His believing servants not to give them security to decide on what they are upon of their disbelief in Him and His Messenger unless they pay the jizyah for them. So God Almighty said: "Fight those who do not believe in God or the Last Day and do not consider unlawful what God and His Messenger have forbidden and do not adopt the religion of truth from among those who were given the Scripture - until they pay the jizyah with willing submission while they are subdued." (al-Tawbah 9:29) As: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, regarding His statement: and humiliation has been imposed upon them, they said: They pay the jizyah with willing submission while they are subdued.

As for Al-Maskinah, it is the source of Al-Maskin. It is said: There is none among them more submissive than so-and-so, and He was not poor, and he was indeed poor. Some scabies say: He was poor, we were poor. And Al-Maskinah in this context is like Al-Maskinah of poverty and need, and it is its humility and submissiveness, as: Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: And Al-Maskinah, he said: poverty.

Musa told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, regarding his statement: And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them, he said: poverty.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them, he said: These are the Jews of the Children of Israel. I said to him: Are they the Copts of Egypt? He said: What do the Copts of Egypt have to do with these? No, by God, they are not them, but they are the Jews, the Jews of the Children of Israel.

God Almighty informed them that He would replace their honor with humiliation, their blessings with misery, and His pleasure with anger, as a punishment from Him for their disbelief in His signs and their killing of His prophets and messengers, out of aggression and injustice on their part without right, and their disobedience to Him and opposition to Him.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And they incurred the wrath of God.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his statement, And they incurred the wrath of God, is that they turned away and returned. And they incurred is not said except with a relative pronoun: either with good or evil. It is said from this: So-and-so incurred his sin, he incurred it And from this is the statement of God, the Almighty, Indeed, I want you to incur my sin (al-Ma'idah 5:29), meaning: you turn away bearing them and return with them, they have become upon you and not me.

The meaning of the statement is, If they return, bearing the wrath of God, then God's wrath has befallen them, and His displeasure is due to them. As I narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said, Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', regarding his statement, And they incurred the wrath of God, then God's wrath befell them.

Yahya bin Abi Talib told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, regarding his statement: And they incurred the wrath of God, he said: They deserved the wrath of God.

We have presented the meaning of God's anger towards His servant in the previous part of this book, so there is no need to repeat it here.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: That is because they disbelieved in the signs of God and killed the prophets without right.

Abu Ja'far said: By His Most High's saying, That, He meant that He struck them with humiliation and poverty, and brought His wrath upon them. So by His saying, That, He meant what we described, indicating that the saying of the speaker, That, includes many meanings if it is indicated by it.

What he means by his saying: because they were disbelieving, is because they were disbelieving. He says: We did to them by inflicting humiliation, poverty, and wrath upon them because they were disbelieving in the signs of God and killing the prophets without right, as A'sha of Banu Tha'labah said:

A kingdom that lived in Hijaz with hostile people and a vast land.

As the sandgrouse and the sandgrouse have settled, so that they may become

He meant by that: This woman lived in this place, in a land far from his people, because of her proximity to him, his people, and his country, as she was located in the garden of the sandgrouse and the garden of the Tanadub.

Likewise, His statement: "And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them, and they incurred the wrath of God. That was because they disbelieved in the signs of God," means: That was from Us because they disbelieved in Our signs, and a punishment for them for killing Our prophets.

We have previously explained in our book that the meaning of disbelief is to cover and conceal something, and that the verses of God are His arguments, signs, and evidence of His Oneness and the truthfulness of His Messengers.

So the meaning of the words is: We did that to them because they denied God's proofs of His Oneness and belief in His Messengers, rejected their truth, and lied about them.

What he means by his saying: And they kill the prophets unjustly is: And they kill the messengers of God whom He sent to convey what He sent them with from Him to those to whom they were sent.

They are a group, the singular of which is prophet, without a hamza, and its origin is the hamza, because from anba'a 'an God, it is yanba'an 'anhu, but the noun is derived from it, munbi', but it was changed from mufa'il to fa'il, just as sami' was changed to fa'il from musma', and basir from mubsir, and the like. And the hamza of an-nabi' was replaced by a ya', so it was said: nabi. This is also the plural of an-nabi as an-nabi', and they only pluralized it in this way, because they attached an-nabi, by replacing the hamza from it with a ya', to the adjectives that come in the estimation of fa'il from those with ya' and waw. That is because when they pluralize what was from the adjectives in the estimation of fa'il from those with ya' and waw, they pluralize it as af'la' like their saying wali and awliya', and wasi and wasiya', and da'i and da'iya'. If they had collected it according to its original form, which is its original form, and that the singular form is prophet with a hamza, they would have collected it as fa'la', and they would have been called an-Naba', like an-Nabaha', because that is the collection of what was on fa'il from the adjectives with ya' and waw, like their collection: the partner is partners, the knowledgeable is scholars, the wise is wisdom, and the like. It has been reported that the Arabs collected the prophet as an-Naba', and that is from the language of those who add a hamza to an-Nabi', then they collected it as an-Naba', as I have explained. And from that is the saying of Abbas ibn Mirdas in praise of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

O Seal of the Prophets, you are sent with goodness, and you are the guide to all the paths.

He said: O Seal of the Prophets, although one of them is a prophet with a hamza. Some of them said: The prophet and the prophethood, without a hamza, because they are taken from the prophethood, which is like the high place, and he used to say: The origin of the prophet is the road, and he used to cite as evidence for that the verse of Al-Qatami:

When a prophet came and settled there, he became like the lines of a flowing river.

He says: The path was called a prophet because it is apparent and clear from prophecy. And he says: I have not heard anyone pronounce the word prophet with a hamza. He said: We have mentioned what is in that, and explained what is sufficient, God willing.

What he means by his saying: And they kill the prophets without right is that they were killing God's messengers without God's permission to kill them, denying their message and rejecting their prophethood.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: That is because they disobeyed and were transgressors.

His saying: That, is a response to the first that. The meaning of the statement is: And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them, and they incurred the wrath of God because of their disbelief in the signs of God and their killing of the prophets without right, because of their disobedience to their Lord and their transgression of His limits. So He, the Most High, said: That is because they disobeyed, and the meaning is: That is because of their disobedience and their transgression of their faith.

And aggression is exceeding the limit that God has set for His servants to something else, and whoever exceeds the limit of something to something else has transgressed it to what he has exceeded to.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

The meaning of the words: I did to them what I did of that, because they disobeyed my command, and crossed my limits to what I forbade them from.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God the Almighty said: And when you said, 'O Moses, we will never be patient with one kind of food,' This was what they said in the wilderness when they got tired of manna and quails, and remembered their former life in Egypt. Al-Hasan said: They were stinky people of leeks, onions and onions, so they turned to their turbidity, the turbidity of evil, and their natures yearned for what was their custom, so they said: We will never be patient with one kind of food. They referred to manna and quails as one kind of food, although they were two, because they used to eat one with the other, so they said: one kind of food. It was said: Because of their repetition in every day's meal, as you say to someone who is constant in fasting, praying and reading: He is on one thing, because he is constant in that. It was said: The meaning is that we will never be patient with wealth, so that we will all be rich and some of us will not be able to help each other, because each one of us is self-sufficient. And that is how they were, as they were the first to take slaves and servants.

The Almighty says: On food. Food refers to what is eaten and drunk. God Almighty says: And whoever does not eat it, then it is from Me. And He says: There is no blame upon those who believe and do righteous deeds for what they have eaten. That is, what they have drunk of wine, as will be explained. And if the quail is honey - as Al-Mu'arrij narrated - then it is also a drink. And sometimes wheat and dates are specifically referred to as food, as in the hadith of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri, who said:

"We used to give Zakat al-Fitr during the time of the Messenger of God (peace be upon him) as a Sa' of food or a Sa' of barley," the hadith. The common custom is that the one who says: I went to the food market only understands the place where it is sold, not anything else that is eaten or drunk. Taste with the fat-ha is what the taste conveys. It is said: It tastes bitter. Taste is also what is desired. It is said: It has no taste. So-and-so has no taste: if he is tasteless. Taste with the damma is food. Abu Khurash said:

I want to be brave if you know me and prefer others from your children to taste it

And the pure water became clear, and when it was finished, the provisions became tasty for the sluggish.

By the first he meant food, and by the second what is desired of it. He has tasted, he is a eater if he has eaten and tasted. From this is the saying of God Almighty: And whoever does not taste it, then he is of me meaning whoever does not taste it. And He said: So when you have eaten, then disperse meaning eat. And the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said about Zamzam:

It is a food that tastes good and a cure for illness.

So-and-so asked me to talk to him if he wanted me to talk to him. In the hadith:

If the Imam asks you for food, feed him. He says: If he asks for the opening, open it for him. So-and-so does not eat or sleep except while standing. The poet said:

Yellow-cheeked ostrich, which only eats sleep when fasting

God the Almighty said: So call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what it grows. The language of Banu Amir is fad'aa with a kasra on the 'ayn due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. They make the weak verb like the sound verb and do not consider the omitted word. And yakhruj is majzum in the sense of ask him and say to him: bring forth, he will come forth. It was said: it is in the sense of supplication with the estimation of the deletion of the lam, and al-Zajaj weakened it. And min, in his saying minma is redundant according to al-Akhfash's saying to this because it is redundant according to Sibawayh, because the statement is affirmative. An-Nahhas said: Al-Akhfash only called for this because he did not find an object for yakhruj so he wanted to make ma a direct object. It is better for the object to be deleted and the rest of the statement indicates it, the estimation: bring forth for us from what the earth grows as food. So the first min in this is for partiality, and the second is for specification. And min baqlha is a substitute for ma by repeating the letter. Waqtaha is conjoined to it, and so is what comes after it, so know it. And baql is well-known, and it is every plant that does not have a stem. Tree: that which has a stem. The gourd is also well-known, and its qaf may be closed, which is the reading of Yahya bin Waththab and Talha bin Masraf, two dialects, and the kasra is more common. It was said that the plural of qithaa is qithaa'i, like 'albaa' and 'alabi, except that qithaa is one of the words with a waw, you say: aqta'at al-qawm, meaning I fed them that.

And she poured water over the pot and calmed its boiling. Al-Ja'di said:

Their pot boils over us, so we pour it out on them and spit it out on us when it boils over.

Fat'atha' means to break a man's anger by saying something or otherwise and calm his anger. And he returned until he became exhausted and dazed. And the free man became calm and slack. And among their proverbs about a little righteousness is their saying: The poor man became very angry. Its origin is that a man was angry with a people and was hungry along with his anger, so they gave him a drink of a drink and he calmed down and stopped his anger and stopped attacking them. A drink of a drink of a drink is a milk that has been mixed with a sour liquid so that it curdles. You milked the milk with a sour liquid so that it curdled, and the noun is a drink of a drink. And the milk curdled means it curdled.

Ibn Majah narrated: Muhammad ibn Abdullah ibn Numayr told us, Yunus ibn Bakir told us, Hisham ibn Urwah told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Aisha, who said: My mother was treating me for obesity, wanting to bring me to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. But she did not succeed in that until she ate cucumbers with dates and gained the best fat. This is a sound chain of transmission.

God the Almighty said: And its garlic. There is a difference of opinion about the garlic. Some say it is garlic, because it is similar to onions. It was narrated by Juwaybir on the authority of Ad-Dahhak. The letter tha is replaced by the letter fa, as they said: maghafir and maghathir. And jadath and jadaf, for the grave. Ibn Masoud read thawmaha with a triple tha, and this was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Umayyah ibn Abi Al-Salt said:

Their homes at that time were full of paradises, fomans and onions.

Paradise: singular: paradise. A vineyard is a pergola, meaning a trellis. Hassan said:

You are people of low origins, your food is foam and the hymn of There is no power but from God

Meaning garlic and onions, which is what Al-Kisa'i and Al-Nadr bin Shumayl said. It was also said that Al-Fawm is wheat. It was narrated from Ibn Abbas as well and most of the commentators, and An-Nahhas chose it. He said: It is more appropriate, and whoever said it is higher, and its chains of transmission are sound. Juwaybir is not comparable to his narration, even though Al-Kisa'i and Al-Farra' chose the first saying, because the Arabs substituted the Fa' for the Tha', and substitution cannot be used as an analogy, and that is not common in the speech of the Arabs. Ibn Abbas recited to someone who asked him about Al-Fawm and that it is wheat, the saying of Ahyiha bin Al-Jalah:

The richest person in the city was a single person who grew foam.

Abu Ishaq Al-Zajaj said: How can people ask for food that has no wheat in it, when wheat is the origin of food?! Al-Jawhari Abu Nasr said: Al-Fawm is wheat. Al-Akhfash recited:

I thought I was the richest man in town who could not grow foam.

Ibn Duraid said: The ear of corn is the spike, and he recited:

And their Lord said, when he brought us his palm, a mouthful or two mouthfuls

The letter ha in his hand is not saturated. Some of them said: Al-Fawm: chickpeas, a Levantine language. Its seller is Fami, changed from Fumi, because they may change the nisba, as they said: Sahli and Dahri. It is said: Fawmwa lana, meaning they baked. Al-Farraa said: It is an ancient language. Ata and Qatada said: Al-Fawm is every grain that is baked.

Question: Scholars differed regarding eating onions, garlic, and other vegetables that have a bad smell. The majority of scholars are of the opinion that it is permissible, based on the authentic hadiths on this. A group of the apparent scholars, who say that congregational prayer is obligatory, are of the opinion that it is forbidden, and they said: Everything that prevents one from performing an obligatory prayer and performing it is forbidden to do or be occupied with. They argued that the Messenger of God (blessings and peace of God be upon him) called it filthy, and God the Almighty described His Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) as forbidding filthy things. Among the arguments for the majority is what was proven from Jabir:

"The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was brought some green vegetables at Badr and he found them to have a bad smell. He was told what vegetables were in them and he said: 'Bring them near' - to one of his companions who was with him - and when he saw him he was reluctant to eat them. He said: 'Eat, for I am speaking to someone you do not speak to.'" Narrated by Muslim and Abu Dawud. This is clear in its specificity to him and its permissibility for others. Also in Sahih Muslim on the authority of Abu Ayyub:

"The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stayed with Abu Ayyub, and he prepared food for the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, in which there was garlic. When he returned to him, he asked about the place where the Prophet's fingers had been, and he was told: He did not eat. He was alarmed and went up to him and said: Is it forbidden? The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: No, but I hate it. He said: I hate what you hate or what you hate. He said: And the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was brought meaning revelation came to him. This is a text stating that it is not forbidden. Likewise, what Abu Saeed Al-Khudri narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when they ate garlic at the time of Khaybar and its conquest: O people, I do not have the right to forbid what God has made lawful, but it is a tree whose smell I hate." These hadiths indicate that the ruling is specific to him, since he is the one who was specifically mentioned in the conversation with the Angel. However, we have learned this ruling in the hadith of Jabir, which requires that he be treated equally with others in this ruling, where he said:

"Whoever eats this herb, garlic - and he once said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Whoever eats onions, garlic, or leeks - should not come near our mosque, for the angels are harmed by what harms the children of Adam." And Omar ibn al-Khattab, may God be pleased with him, said in a long hadith:

You people, you eat two plants that I see as nothing but bad: onions and garlic. I saw the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he found their odor on a man in the mosque, he would order him to be taken to Al-Baqi'. Whoever eats them should cook them to death. Narrated by Muslim.

The Almighty said: And its udder and its lentils. Lentils are well-known. A lentil is a pimple that appears on a person, and may kill. And lentils is a warning to mules. He said:

Lentils, what do you have to do with the emirate? I escaped and you are carrying a divorce.

Adas: the severity of the tread, and toil as well. It is said: Adasa. And Adas in the land: he went into it. And Al-Fate went towards him, meaning it walked. Al-Kumaith said:

The horror of darkness burdened her, and I still see the night as a brother, trampling on me and coming back to me.

Any left to me at night. And lentils: a dialect for hadith, said al-Jawhari. And it is transmitted from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the hadith of Ali that he said:

Eat lentils, for they are blessed and sacred, and they soften the heart and increase tears, for seventy prophets blessed them, the last of whom was Jesus, son of Mary, mentioned by al-Tha'labi and others. Umar ibn Abd al-Aziz would eat bread with oil one day, and meat with lentils the next day. Al-Hulaimi said: Lentils and oil are the food of the righteous, and if they had no virtue other than that they were the hospitality of Abraham, peace be upon him, in his city, it would have been sufficient. It is one of the things that lightens the body, so it is light for worship, and desires are not aroused by it as they are by meat. Wheat is one of the grains, and it is the same as the foam according to the correct view, and barley is close to it and was the food of the people of Medina, just as lentils were the food of the village of Abraham, peace be upon him, so each of the two grains had a virtue for one of the prophets, peace be upon them. It was narrated that the Prophet, peace be upon him, and his family did not eat their fill of wheat bread for three consecutive days from the time they arrived in Medina until God Almighty took him."

God the Almighty said: "He said: 'Would you exchange that which is better for that which is less?'" Substitution:

putting one thing in place of another, and from it comes the word badal, which has been mentioned before. Adna is taken - according to Al-Zajjaj - from darnu, meaning close in value, and from their saying: a garment of limited price. Ali bin Sulayman said: It is with a hamza from adni' meaning the lowest, except that he lightened the hamza. It was said: It is taken from ad-dan, meaning the lowest, so its root is adun, "af'al," which was changed to af'ala, and the waw was changed to an alif because it is at the end. In the anomalies, it is read as adna'. The meaning of the verse is: Would you exchange the vegetables, cucumbers, lentils, and onions that are less, for manna and quails that are better.

There is a difference of opinion regarding the reasons that necessitate the superiority of manna and quails over the thing they asked for, and they are five:

First: Since legumes are not dangerous compared to manna and quails, they are better, as Al-Zajjaj said.

Second: Since manna and quail were food from God to them and He commanded them to eat it, and it was in the continuity of God's command and gratitude for His blessings and a store for the hereafter, and what they sought was devoid of these characteristics, it was inferior in this respect.

Third: Since what God bestowed upon them was better and more delicious than what they asked for, what they asked for was inevitably less than this aspect.

Fourth: Since what they were given did not require any effort or toil, and what they asked for would only come with plowing, farming, and toil, it was less.

Fifth: Since what was sent down to them was not doubted to be permissible or pure, because it came down from God, and the grains and land were interspersed with sales and usurpations and were subject to doubt, they were less permissible in this respect.

Question: This verse is evidence of the permissibility of eating good and delicious foods. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, loved sweets and honey, and drank cold, fresh water. This meaning will come in full in Al-Ma'idah and Al-Nahl, God willing.

God the Almighty said: Go down to Egypt. The meaning of go down was mentioned earlier, and this is a command that means to make it impossible, like God the Almighty's saying: Say, 'Be stones or iron.' Because they were in the wilderness and this was a punishment for them. It was said that they were given what they asked for. Misr with the tanween is an objection to the reading of the majority, and it is the script of the Mushaf. Mujahid and others said: Whoever inflected it meant a non-specific Egypt.

Ikrimah narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding his saying: Go down to Egypt, he said: A Egypt from these cities. A group of those who inflected it also said: He meant the Egypt of Pharaoh specifically. The first ones cited as evidence what the apparent meaning of the Qur'an required of their command to enter the village, and what the narration clearly showed that they settled in Ash-Sham after the wilderness. The others cited as evidence what is in the Qur'an that God gave the Children of Israel the homes of Pharaoh's family and their traces, and they permitted inflecting it. Al-Akhfash and Al-Kisa'i said: Because of its lightness and its resemblance to Hind and Da'd, and he recited:

Daad was not covered with her apron, nor did she give Daad water in the cans.

So he combined the two languages. Sibawayh, Al-Khalil and Al-Farraa do not allow this, because if you named a woman Zayd, it would not be declined. Other than Al-Akhfash said: He wanted perfection, so he declined. Al-Hasan, Aban bin Taghlib and Talhah recited: Egypt without declension. And it is like that in the Mushaf of Ubayy bin Ka'b and the reading of Ibn Mas'ud. And they said: It is the Egypt of Pharaoh. Ashhab said: Malik said to me: It is, in my opinion, Egypt, your village, the dwelling place of Pharaoh. Ibn Atiyyah mentioned it. The root of Egypt in the language is the border. And the borders of a house are its boundaries. Ibn Faris said: It is said that the people of Hejer write in their conditions: So-and-so bought the house by its borders, meaning its boundaries. Adi said:

And He made the sun a place of refuge, between which there is no concealment, and He has separated the day from the night.

The Almighty said: Then you will have what you asked for. "What" is in the accusative case with in. Ibn Waththab and Al-Nakha'i read you asked with a kasra on the seen. It is said: I asked and I asked without a hamza. It is one of the words with a waw, as evidenced by their saying: they ask each other. The meaning of and humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them is that they were forced to do them and they were decreed to do them. It is taken from strike domes. Al-Farazdaq said about Jarir:

The spider has woven its web over you, and the revealed book has decreed it for you.

The ruler hit the hand, i.e. he carried and obliged. Humiliation: humiliation and smallness. Poverty: poverty. There is no Jew, even if he is rich, who is free from the appearance of poverty, submission and humiliation. It was said: Humiliation is the imposition of the jizya, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatada: And poverty is submission, and it is taken from stillness, i.e. poverty reduced his movement, said Al-Zajjaj. Abu Ubaidah said: Humiliation is smallness. And poverty is the source of the poor. Ad-Dahhak bin Muzahim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And upon them is humiliation and poverty and they afflicted. He said: They are the owners of the kisses.

The Almighty said: And they returned meaning they turned back and returned, meaning that was binding on them. And from this is what he, peace be upon him, said in his supplication and prayer:

I acknowledge your blessings upon me, i.e. I acknowledge them and commit myself to them. Its root in the language is to return. It is said that someone returned to something, i.e. he returned to it. And to return to the home - which is the house - i.e. to return. And to return is to return with the recompense. And in this matter they are equal, i.e. they return to one meaning. And the poet said:

Will you not stop being kings and protect our sacred places, so that blood will not be shed for blood?

That is, blood does not return for blood in retaliation. He said:

They returned with the loot and the captives, and our sons with the kings in chains.

They returned and we returned. The meaning of anger was mentioned previously in Al-Fatihah.

God the Almighty said: That is an explanation. Because they disbelieved that is, they denied the signs of God that is, His Book and the miracles of His prophets, such as Jesus, John, Zechariah and Muhammad, peace be upon them: and killed the prophets is in apposition to disbelieve. It was narrated from Al-Hasan that they kill, and from him also like the group. Nafi' read the prophets with a hamza wherever it occurred in the Qur'an except in two places: In Surat al-Ahzab 33: If she offers herself to the Prophet if he wishes. "Do not enter the houses of the Prophet except" for he read without a long vowel or a hamza. The hamza of these two was left out because two broken hamzas came together. The hamza was left out in all of the rest. As for the one who hamzas it is from anba' if he informs, and its active participle is munbi'. The plural of prophet is anbiya', and it came in the plural of prophet is naba'. Al-Abbas ibn Mirdas As-Sulami said, praising the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him:

O Seal of the Prophets, the Messenger of Truth guided all to the right path. He guided you.

This is the meaning of reading the hamza. Those who say that the hamza should be omitted differed. Some of them derived it from hamza, then made the hamza easy. Some of them said: It is derived from naba' yanbu if it appears. So the prophet is from prophethood which means elevation, so the status of the prophet is high. The prophet, with the hamza omitted, is also the path, so the messenger was called a prophet because the people are guided by him like the path. The poet said:

To become a small gravel instead of the prophet from the writer

To throw something: to break it. It is said: he threw his nose and threw it away, with both the letter taa and the letter thaa. Ratam is also martoom, meaning broken. Al-Katib is the name of a mountain. So the prophets are to us like paths on the earth. It is narrated that a man said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: Peace be upon you, O Prophet of God, and he hummed. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I am not the Prophet of God - and he hummed - but I am the Prophet of God - and he did not hum. Abu Ali said: The chain of transmission of

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

this hadith is weak, and what strengthens its weakness is that the eulogist recited to him, may God bless him and grant him peace:

O Seal of the Prophets... and denial did not affect that

The Almighty's saying: Without right is an emphasis on the heinousness and sin they committed.

If it is said: This is evidence that it is correct that they were killed justly, and it is known that the prophets are infallible from doing something that would kill them. It is said to him: It is not so, but is killed for the sake of out as a description of their killing, that it was injustice and not justly, so this was an emphasis on the heinousness of it upon them, and it is known that a prophet is not killed justly, but is killed for the sake of the right, so his statement: unjustly clearly indicates the heinousness of the sin and its clarity, and no prophet ever came with anything that would necessitate his killing.

If it is said: How is it permissible to leave the unbelievers alone and kill the prophets? It is said: That is an honor for them and an increase in their status, like the example of those believers who are killed in the way of God, and that is not a betrayal of them.

Ibn Abbas and Al-Hassan said: No prophet was ever killed except those who were not ordered to fight, and everyone who was ordered to fight was victorious.

The Almighty said: That is because they disobeyed and were transgressing. That is a response to the first and an emphasis on the reference to it. The ba in because is the ba of the reason. Al-Akhfash said: That is, because of their disobedience. Disobedience is the opposite of obedience. The nucleus became strong when it became intense. Transgression is exceeding the limit in everything, and is known in injustice and sins.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And remember My favor upon you in sending down upon you manna and quails, a good and beneficial food, pleasant and easy. And remember your turning back and your annoyance at what We provided you and your asking Moses to replace that with the vile foods of vegetables and the like that you asked for. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: They were arrogant about that and could not be patient with it. They remembered the life they had been in, and they were a people who ate lentils and onions and legumes and garlic, so they said: O Moses, we will not be patient with one type of food, so call upon your Lord to bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its vegetables and cucumbers and garlic and lentils and onions. They only said about one type of food while they were eating manna and quails because it does not change or alter every day, so it is one type of food: vegetables, cucumbers, lentils and onions are all well-known. As for garlic, the predecessors differed about its meaning, so it occurred in the reading of Ibn Masoud and its garlic with a tha, and Mujahid interpreted it in the narration of Layth bin Abi Salim from him, as garlic. And so did Al-Rabi' bin Anas and Saeed bin Jubair. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Amr bin Rafi' told us, Abu Amara Ya'qub bin Ishaq Al-Basrawi told us on the authority of Yunus, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding His statement: And her mouth, he said: Ibn Abbas said: garlic. He said: In the ancient language: Fawmu lana means they baked. Ibn Jarir said: If that is correct, then it is from the letters that were changed, like their saying: They fell into 'Athur Shar and Afur Shar and Athafi and Athathi and Maghafir and Maghathir and the like, in which the fa' is changed to tha' and the tha' to fa' due to the closeness of their points of articulation. And God knows best. Others said: Al-Fawm is wheat, which is the barley from which bread is made. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Yunus bin Abdul A'la told us, reading, Ibn Wahb told us, reading, Nafi' bin Abi Na'im told me that Ibn Abbas was asked about the statement of God: And her mouth, what is Al-Fawm? He said: wheat. Ibn Abbas said: Have you not heard the statement of Ahiyha bin Al-Julah, when he said:

Ibn Jarir said: Ali bin Al-Hasan told us, Muslim Al-Juhani told us, Isa bin Yunus told us, on the authority of Rashid bin Kurayb, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the Almighty's statement: And its mouth, he said: The mouth is wheat in the language of Banu Hashim. And this is what Ali bin Abi Talhah, Ad-Dahhak, and Ikrimah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The mouth is wheat. And Sufyan Ath-Thawri said on the authority of Ibn Jurayj on the authority of Mujahid and Ata', And its mouth, they said: And its bread. And Hisham said on the authority of Yunus on the authority of Al-Husayn and Hisayn on the authority of Abu Malik, And its mouth, he said: Wheat, and this is the statement of Ikrimah, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan Al-Basri, Qatadah, Abd Al-Rahman bin Yazid bin Aslam, and others. And God knows best. And Al-Jawhari said: The mouth is wheat. And Ibn Duraid said: The mouth is an ear of corn. And Al-Qurtubi narrated on the authority of Ata' and Qatadah: The mouth is every grain that is baked. He said: Some of them said: It is chickpeas, a Levantine dialect, and from it its seller is called: famy, changed from fumi. Al-Bukhari said: Some of them said: The grains that are eaten as a whole are fum. And the Almighty's saying: "He said: 'Will you exchange that which is better for that which is worse?'" is a rebuke and rebuke to them for what they asked for of these vile foods while they are in a comfortable life and delicious, good and beneficial food. And the Almighty's saying: Go down to Egypt is like this, it is inflected and declended, written with an alif in the Uthmanic Imams' copies of the Qur'an, and it is the reading of the majority with declension. Ibn Jarir said: I do not permit reading it otherwise because of the consensus of the Qur'an copies on that. Ibn Abbas said, Go down to Egypt. He said, Egypt is one of the cities. It was narrated by Ibn Abi Hatim from the hadith of Abu Saeed Al-Baqqa' Saeed bin Al-Marzbah from Ikrimah from him. He said, It was narrated from Al-Suddi, Qatadah, and Al-Rabi' bin Anas something similar to that. Ibn Jarir said, it was found in the reading of Abi bin Ka'b and Ibn Mas'ud, 'Go down to Egypt' without a grammatical construction, meaning without a grammatical construction. Then it was narrated from Abu Al-'Aliyah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas that they interpreted that as the Egypt of Pharaoh. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated it likewise from Abu Al-'Aliyah and Al-Rabi' and from Al-A'mash also. Ibn Jarir said, "It is possible that what is meant is the Egypt of Pharaoh according to the grammatical reading as well. And that is from the aspect of following the writing of the Qur'an as in the saying of God the Almighty: 'Qawarirah * Qawarirah.'" Then he hesitated as to what is meant, is it the Egypt of Pharaoh or Egypt among the cities? What he said is questionable. The truth is that what is meant is Egypt from the cities, as narrated by Ibn Abbas and others. The meaning is that Moses, peace be upon him, says to them: What you have asked for is not something difficult, but rather it is abundant in whatever country you enter, you will find it. So it is not worth asking God for it, despite its lowliness and abundance in the cities. For this reason he said: Would you exchange that which is better for that which is worse? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for. That is, what you asked for. And since their question was a matter of arrogance and evil and there was no necessity in it, they were not answered, and God knows best.

And humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them, and they incurred the wrath of God. That was because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressors.

God the Almighty says: And humiliation and wretchedness have been imposed upon them. That is, they have been imposed upon and made to do so by law and decree. That is, they will continue to be humiliated. Whoever finds them will humiliate them, insult them, and impose humiliation upon them. However, they are in themselves humiliated and submissive. Ad-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And humiliation and wretchedness have been imposed upon them. He said: They are the ones who are paid the jizya, meaning the jizyah. Abdur-Razzaq said, on the authority of Mu'ammal, on the authority of Al-Hasan and Qatadah, regarding God the Almighty's statement: And humiliation has been imposed upon them, he said: They pay the jizya willingly while they are humiliated. Ad-Dahhak said: And humiliation has been imposed upon them, he said: Humiliation.

Al-Hasan said: God humiliated them, so they had no protection, and He placed them under the feet of the Muslims. This nation has caught up with them, and the Magians are collecting the jizya from them. Abu Al-'Aliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, and As-Suddi said: Poverty is need. Atiyah Al-Awfi said: The tax. Ad-Dahhak said: The jizya. The Almighty said: And they incurred the wrath of God. Ad-Dahhak said: They deserved the wrath of God. Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said: So the wrath of God befell them. Saeed bin Jubair said: And they incurred the wrath of God means: They deserved wrath. Ibn Jarir said: What he means by his saying: And they incurred the wrath of God is that they turned away and returned. The word baa is not said except when connected to either good or evil. It is said from: So-and-so incurred his sin, he incurs it, bawwan and bawa. From this is the Almighty's saying: Indeed, I want you to incur my sin and your sin. He means that you turn away, bearing them and return with them, having become upon you and not me. The meaning of the words: If they return, bearing the wrath of God, then God's wrath has come upon them, and God's displeasure has become due to them. And the Almighty said: That is because they disbelieved in the signs of God and killed the prophets without right. God the Almighty says: This is what We rewarded them with of humiliation and poverty, and the bringing of wrath upon them of humiliation, because of their arrogance in following the truth and their disbelief in the signs of God, and their humiliation of the bearers of the law, who are the prophets and their followers, so they belittled them until the situation led them to kill them, so there is no greater disbelief than this, they disbelieved in the signs of God, and killed the prophets of God without right, and for this reason it came in the hadith whose authenticity is agreed upon: that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Arrogance is rejecting the truth and belittling people. And Imam Ahmad, may God have mercy on him, said: Ismail told us, on the authority of Ibn Awn, on the authority of Amr ibn Saeed, on the authority of Humayd ibn Abd al-Rahman, who said: Ibn Masoud said: I was not prevented from secret conversations, nor from such and such, so I came to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and with him was Malik ibn Murarah al-Rahawi, so I caught up with him at the end of his conversation and he was saying: O Messenger of God, I have been allotted from the camels what You see, I would not like anyone to give me more than two shoes or more. Isn't that oppression? He said: "No, that is not oppression, but oppression is from arrogance, or he said: foolishness of the truth and oppression of people," meaning rejecting the truth, belittling people, showing contempt for them, and being arrogant towards them. For this reason, when the Children of Israel committed what they committed of disbelief in the signs of God and killing His prophets, God brought down upon them His punishment that cannot be repelled, and clothed them with humiliation in this world connected to the humiliation of the Hereafter as a fitting reward. Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi said: Shu'bah told us, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of Ibrahim, on the authority of Abu Mu'ammal, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Mas'ud, who said: The Children of Israel used to kill three hundred prophets in a day, then they would hold a market for their vegetables at the end of the day. Imam Ahmad said: Abd al-Samad told us, Abaan told us, Asim told us, on the authority of Abu Wa'il, on the authority of Abdullah, meaning Ibn Mas'ud, that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: The people who will be most severely punished on the Day of Resurrection will be a man killed by a prophet or killed a prophet, and a leader of misguidance, and an actor from among the actors. And God Almighty said: That is because they disobeyed and were... They transgress." This is another reason for punishing them with what they permitted, that they were disobedient and transgressing. Disobedience is doing what is forbidden, and transgression is going beyond the limits of what is permitted and commanded, and God knows best.

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: 61- We will not be patient with one type of food. He was annoyed with them for the blessings, good provisions, and pleasant life they had become accustomed to, and he was drawn back to the roughness of life they had become accustomed to before that:

The wretched person is addicted to misery and cannot respond to it if it comes to him.

It is possible that this was not because they longed for what they had been in, and in view of the luxurious life they had reached, but rather it is a door of their stubbornness, and a branch of their haughtiness as is their habit and their migration in most of what we have been told of their stories. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: They were people of leeks, onions and onions, so they turned to their turbidity: that is, their origin was the turbidity of evil, and their natures longed for what their custom was, so they said: We will not be patient with one food. What is meant by one food is manna and quails, and although they were two foods, since they ate one with the other, they made them one food. It was said: because of their repetition every day and the absence of anything else with them or their replacement. And min in His statement: of what grows is excluded. Al-Akhfash said that it is redundant, and Sibawayh disagreed with him because they are not added in affirmative speech. An-Nahhas said: Al-Akhfash called for this because he did not find an object to bring out, so he wanted to make what an object. It would be better for the object to be omitted, as indicated by the context of the speech: that is, it brings out for us something to eat. His saying: from its plants is a substitute for what by repeating the letter. Baq'l is every plant that does not have a stem, and Shajar is that which has a stem. He said in Al-Kashshaf: Baq'l is what the earth produces of greens, and what is meant by it are the delicious vegetables that people eat, such as mint, celery, leeks and the like. End quote. And Qitha with a kasra or fatha on the qaf. The first is the reading of the majority. The second is the reading of Yahya ibn Waththab and Talha ibn Musarraf, and it is well-known. Al-Fawm: It was said that it is garlic, and Ibn Masoud read it with a tha'. Something similar was narrated from Ibn Abbas, and it was said that Al-Fawm is wheat, and most of the commentators agreed with it, as Al-Qurtubi said. Ibn An-Nahhas preferred this. Al-Jawhari said: Al-Fawm is wheat, and among those who said this are Al-Zajaj and Al-Akhfash, and he recited:

I thought I was the richest man who left the city to grow foam.

Al-Kisa'i and Al-Nadr bin Shumayl said the first opinion, and from it is the saying of Umayyah bin Abi Al-Salt:

Their homes at that time were full of paradises, foams and onions.

Any garlic, Hassan said:

You are people of low origins, your food is foam and the hymn of There is no power but from God

Meaning garlic and onions, and it was said: foam: the ear of corn, and it was said: chickpeas, and it was said: foam is every grain that is baked. Lentils and onions are well-known. Substitution: putting one thing in place of another. And nearest Al-Zajaj said: It is taken from nearness: meaning closeness and what is meant is: Do you put these things that are less than the place of manna and quails which are better than them in terms of enjoyment and reaching them from God without the mediation of any of His creation, and the solution that is not subject to doubt and the lack of effort in striving for it and tiring out to obtain it, and His saying: Go down to Egypt means descend, and the meaning of descending has been presented. The apparent meaning of this is that God permitted them to enter Egypt, and it was said: The command is to make it impossible because they were in the wilderness, so it is like His saying: Be stones or iron, and Egypt is declined here with the combination of the proper noun and the feminine because it is a triliteral with a silent middle, and it is permissible to decline it with the occurrence of the two reasons, and Al-Akhfash and Al-Kisa'i said the same. Al-Khalil and Sibawayh said: This is not permissible. They said: There is no scientific proof here because he meant a city from the cities and did not mean the well-known city, which is contrary to the apparent meaning. Al-Hasan, Aban bin Taghlib, and Talha bin Masraf read without the tanween, and it is also in the Mushaf of Abi and Ibn Masoud. The meaning of striking humiliation and poverty is to force them to do that and to decree it upon them in a continuous decree that does not leave them or separate from them, with its indication that it includes them as domes include those in them. From this is the saying of Al-Farazdaq satirizing Jarir:

The spider struck you with its weight, and the revealed book decreed it against you.

It is a type of eloquent satire, and if it is used in praise it is of a high status. From this is the saying of the poet:

Chivalry, courage and generosity are in a dome that was struck on Ibn al-Hashraj

This report that God has informed us of is known in all times. God has made the Jews the most humiliated, the most wretched, and the most contemptible of all groups. They have never had a group organized, nor has a banner fluttered over their heads, nor has a rulership been established for them. Rather, they have always been slaves to the stick in every time, and the prey of every stallion in every era. Whoever among them holds on to a share of money, even if it is an exaggerated amount, is pretending to be poor, wearing the garments of poverty in order to defend himself from the desires of those who covet his money, either rightfully, such as providing what he owes of the jizya, or wrongfully, as many oppressors do, who dare to oppress God by oppressing someone who is unable to defend himself. The meaning of ba'awa is returned. It is said that ba'a bi-kadha means he returned with it. ba'a ila al-maba'ah means he returned to the home. Bawa means returning. It is also said: They are equal in this matter meaning they return to one meaning. Ba'a so-and-so means returned if it is true that he accepts him because he is equal to him. From this is the saying of the poet:

Will you not stop with us, kings, and may our warriors not be afraid, so that blood will not be repaid with blood?

What is meant in the verse is that they returned in anger from God, or they became deserving of His anger. The explanation of anger has been presented above. The reference in His saying: and that is to what came before from the hadith of humiliation and what follows it because of their disbelief in God and their killing of His prophets without right that they should follow and act upon. This was not presented as a restriction so that it could be said that killing the prophets is not right in any case due to infallibility. Rather, what is meant is to condemn this matter against them and magnify it, and that it is pure injustice in itself. It can be said that it is not right in their false belief, because the prophets, may God's prayers and peace be upon them, did not oppose them in wealth or status, rather they guided them to the interests of religion and the world, as was the case with Shu'ayb, Zakariya, and John, for they killed them while they knew and believed that they were unjust. The repetition of the allusion is intended to emphasize and magnify the matter and make it more terrible for them. The sum of what comes after the first allusion and the second allusion is the reason for the humiliation and what comes after it. It has been said: It is possible that the second allusion is to disbelief and killing, so what comes after it is a reason for a reason, and this is very unlikely. And aggression is exceeding the limit in everything.

Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And when Moses asked water for his people, he said: That was in the wilderness. Moses struck the rock for them and there were twelve springs of water in it, for each tribe of them had a spring from which they drank. Abd bin Hamid narrated something similar on the authority of Qatadah, Mujahid and Ibn Abi Hatim on the authority of Juwaybir. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And do not cause corruption on the earth, he said: Do not strive to spread corruption on the earth. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Abu Malik, he said: It means do not walk about in sins. Abd Al-Razzaq and Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah, he said: Do not walk about in the land spreading corruption. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding his statement: We will never be patient with one kind of food, he said: They replaced the manna and quails with herbs and what is related with it. Abd ibn Humayd, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: and its mouth, he said: bread, and in another version: wheat, and in another version: it was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abi Hatim, he said: the mouth is garlic. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of al-Rabi' ibn Anas. Sa'id ibn Mansur and Ibn al-Mundhir narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud that he read: and its garlic. Ibn Abi al-Dunya narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: My reading is the reading of Zayd, and I take a few dozen letters from the reading of Ibn Mas'ud, this is one of them from its vegetables, its cucumbers and its garlic. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding his statement: which is lower, he said: worse. Abd ibn Humayd narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding his statement: Go down to Egypt, he said: a country among the cities. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu al-Aliyah that it was the Egypt of Pharaoh. Ibn Abi Dawud and Ibn al-Anbary narrated something similar on the authority of al-A'mash. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: and humiliation was imposed upon them, he said: they are the people of the jizyah. Abd al-Razzaq and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah and al-Hasan who said: Humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them meaning they would pay the jizyah willingly while they were subdued. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu al-Aaliyah who said: Poverty is want. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of al-Dahhak regarding his statement: And they incurred the wrath of God he said: They deserved the wrath of God. Abd ibn Humayd narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding his statement: And they incurred he said: They turned back. Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud who said: The Children of Israel would kill three hundred prophets in a day and then hold a market for their vegetables at the end of the day.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

61. God the Almighty said: And when you said, 'O

Surat al-Baqarah 2:61

And [mention] when you said, "O Moses, we will never be satisfied with one kind of food, so call upon your Lord to produce for us from what the earth grows of its herbs and its cucumbers and its garlic and its lentils and its onions." He said, "Would you exchange that which is better for that which is lesser? Go down to Egypt, for you will have what you asked for." And humiliation and poverty were stamped upon them, and they incurred wrath from God. That is because they disbelieved in the verses of God and killed the prophets without right. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing.

Moses, we will never be patient with one kind of food, that is because they agreed and were tired of eating manna and quails. He only said on one kind of food, and they were two because the Arabs express two things with the word one, just as they express one thing with the word two, like God the Almighty's saying: From them come forth pearls and coral 22-Ar-Rahman. He only produces salty things, not fresh ones. It was said: They used to eat one with the other, so they were like one kind of food. Abdur-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: They used to knead manna with quails, so they became one. So pray for us, so ask for our sake. Your Lord will bring forth for us from what the earth grows of its herbs, its cucumbers, its garlic, Ibn Abbas said: And garlic is bread. Ata' said: Wheat. Al-Qatibi, may God have mercy on him, said: The grains that are eaten as a whole. Al-Kalbi said: And its lentils and onions. Moses, peace be upon him, said to them: Would you exchange that which is lower, "vile and worse," for that which is better, "more honorable and better," and he made wheat lower in value, even though it was better than manna and quails, or he meant that it was easier. And the existence of the custom, and it is possible that the good is due to God's choice for them and their choice for themselves Go down to Egypt meaning: If you refuse to do otherwise, then go down to Egypt from the cities, and Ad-Dahhak said: It is the Egypt of Moses and Pharaoh, and the first is more correct, because if he had wanted it, he would not have diverted it Then you will have what you asked for from the plants of the earth And I imposed upon them I imposed upon them and they were forced Humiliation humiliation and disgrace. It was said: By the jizya, and Ata' bin As-Sa'ib said: It is the garment and the belt and the clothing of the Jews And poverty poverty, the poor person was called poor because poverty made him inhabited and unable to move, so you see the Jews, even if they were well-off, as if they were poor, and it was said: Humiliation is poverty of the heart, so you do not see among the people of the religions anyone more humble and eager for money than the Jews.

And they incurred the wrath of God. They returned, and it is not said: They incurred except evil. Abu Ubaidah said: They bore it and acknowledged it, and from it is the supplication: I acknowledge to You Your favor upon me and I acknowledge my sin, I acknowledge that meaning the wrath because they disbelieved in the signs of God in the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the verse of stoning in the Torah and they disbelieved in the Gospel and the Qur'an and killed the prophets. Nafi' was unique in using the hamza of the prophet and its chapter, so its meaning is the informant from anba yanbi'u and naba yanbi'u, and the well-known reading is leaving out the hamza, and it has two aspects: One of them is also from anba, the hamza was left out in it to lighten the frequency of use, and the second is in the meaning of the high, taken from prophethood which is the high place, so on this basis the prophets are according to the original without right meaning without crime. If it is said: Why did he say: without right, and killing the prophets can only be without right? It was said that it was mentioned as a description of killing, and killing is sometimes described as unjust, and it is like the Almighty's saying: He said, 'My Lord, judge with truth' 112-Al-Anbiya'. He mentioned truth as a description of the ruling, not that his ruling is divided into injustice and truth. It is narrated that the Jews killed seventy prophets at the beginning of the day and a market was set up to kill them at the end of the day. That was because they disobeyed and were transgressing, they exceeded My command and committed My prohibitions.

61- And when you said, 'O Moses, we will never be patient with one kind of food,' meaning what they were provided with in the wilderness of manna and quails. And by its unity it does not differ or change, like their saying that the food of the prince's table is one, meaning that its colors do not change, and by that they agreed or struck one, because they are the food of the people of pleasure and they were farmers, so they turned to their turbidity and desired what they were accustomed to. So call upon your Lord for us, ask Him for us by your calling upon Him. He will come forth for us, appears and exists, and his assertion that it is an answer, so call upon Him, for calling upon Him is the reason for the answer. From what the earth grows, from the metaphorical attribution, and the placement of the recipient in the place of the subject, and from is for partiality. From its vegetables, its cucumbers, its garlic, its lentils, and its onions, an explanation and clarification that occurred in the place of the state, and it was said that it is a substitute by repeating the preposition. And the green vegetables that the earth produces, and what is meant by it are the delicious foods that are eaten, and the fawm is wheat and it is said for bread and from it fawmwa lana, and it was said garlic and its cucumber was read with the dammah, and it is a dialect for it. He said meaning God, or Moses, peace be upon him.

Would you exchange that which is lower? Closer in status and lower in rank. The root of closeness is nearness in place, so it was used as a metaphor for baseness, just as distance was used as a metaphor for honor and elevation. So, someone far from a place is said to be far away in ambition, and it was read as lower from baseness. "With that which is better" means manna and quails, for it is better in pleasure and benefit and does not need to strive. "Go down to Egypt" means descend to it from the wilderness. It is said that someone descended into the valley if he descended into it, and someone descended from it if he exited from it. It was read with the dammah, and Egypt is the great country, and its root is the boundary between two things. It was said that he meant knowledge by it, but it was declined because its middle was still, or according to the interpretation of the country. This is supported by the fact that it is not definite in the Mushaf of Ibn Mas'ud. It was said that its root is "Misratum", so it was Arabized. "For you shall have what you asked, and humiliation and poverty were imposed upon them." They were surrounded as a dome surrounds those upon whom it is placed, or they were stuck to them, like throwing mud on a wall, as a punishment for their ingratitude. The Jews are mostly humiliated and poor, either in reality or out of pretense for fear that their tax would be doubled. And they incurred the wrath of God means they returned with it, or they became deserving of His wrath, from the word ya for someone with someone if he was deserving of being killed by it, and the root of baw is equality. That is a reference to what came before about the striking of humiliation and poverty and incurring the wrath. Because they disbelieved in the signs of God and killed the prophets without right because of their disbelief in the miracles, which included what was counted against them of the splitting of the sea, the shade of the clouds, the sending down of manna and quails, and the gushing of springs from rocks. Or by the revealed books: such as the Gospel, the Criterion, and the verse of stoning in which Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, is described from the Torah, and their killing of the prophets, for they killed Isaiah, Zachariah, John, and others without right in their view, since they did not see from them what they believed was permissible to kill them, but rather what led them to do that was following their whims and love of this world, as indicated by His statement: That is because they disobeyed and were transgressing. That is, disobedience, persistence, and transgression in it led them to disbelieve in the signs and kill the prophets. For minor sins are a cause that leads to committing major ones, just as minor acts of obedience are causes that lead to seeking out major ones. It was said that the reference was repeated to indicate that what befell them as it was due to disbelief, and the killing is due to their committing sins and transgressing the limits of God Almighty. It was said that the reference is to disbelief and killing, and the ba' means with, and the reference in the singular was only permissible to two or more things based on the interpretation of what was mentioned, or it came before for brevity, and its equivalent in the pronoun is the statement of Ru'bah describing a cow:

It has black and white lines as if there is vitiligo in the skin.

What is good about this is that the dual, plural and feminine forms of implicit and ambiguous nouns are not true, and therefore which came in the sense of plural.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:62

Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - whoever believed in God and the Last Day and did righteousness - will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:62

Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - whoever believed in God and the Last Day and did righteousness - will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Indeed, those who believed in the prophets before and those who were Jews are the Jews and the Christians and the Sabians a group of Jews or Christians whoever believed among them in God and the Last Day in the time of our Prophet and did righteousness according to his law They will have their reward (i.e. the reward for their deeds) with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve. The pronoun aman and the verb min were taken into account, as well as the meaning of ma and ma after it.

The Almighty said: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews, Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Adani narrated in his Musnad on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Salman said: I asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about people of a religion I was with, and I mentioned their prayers and worship, so the verse was revealed: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews, the verse. Al-Wahidi narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Katheer on the authority of Mujahid, who said: When Salman told the Messenger of God the story of his companions,

He said: They are in the Fire. Salman said: So the earth became dark for me, so the verse was revealed: Indeed, those who believe and those who are Jews will grieve. He said: It was as if a mountain had been removed from me. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of al-Suddi that he said: This verse was revealed about the companions of Salman al-Farsi.

Abu Jaafar said: As for those who believe, they are those who attest the veracity of the Messenger of God and the truth that he brought them from God. Their faith in this is their attesting' its veracity, as we have explained previously in this book of ours.

As for those who were Jews, they are the Jews. The meaning of they were Jews is that they repented. It is said: The people were guided by God, meaning they were guided. It was also said that the Jews were called Jews because of their saying: Indeed, we have been guided to You (al-A'raf 7:156).

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: The Jews were called so because they said: Indeed, we have been guided to You (al-A'raf 7:156).

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: and the Christians.

Abu Jaafar said: "The Christians are a plural, and their singular is Nasran, just as the singular of drunkards is Sakran, and the singular of intoxicated people is Nashwan. Likewise, the plural of every adjective whose singular is Fa'lan is Fa'ali. However, what is widely spoken by the Arabs regarding the singular of "Christians" is Nasrani. It has been reported that they heard it say Nasran without the Ya', and from this is the saying of the poet:

You see him when he visits the evening, he is a devout Christian and he sacrifices there.

He heard from them about the female: Christian. The poet said:

Both of them fell down and bowed their heads as a Christian woman who had not become a monotheist would bow down.

It is said: Asgad, if he leaned. It was heard in their gathering Ansar, meaning Christians. The poet said:

When I saw the Nabataeans, I rolled up my izar from my knees.

I was their Christian neighbor

These verses that I mentioned indicate that they were called Christians because they supported each other and helped each other. It has been said that they were called Christians because they settled in a land called Nazareth.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: The Christians were only called Christians because they settled in a land called Nazareth.

Others say, Who are my supporters for God? (As-Saff: 14).

Ibn Abbas mentioned, through a chain of transmission other than Murtada, that he used to say: The Christians were called Christians because the village of Jesus, son of Mary, was called Nazareth, and his companions were called the Nazarenes, and Jesus was called the Nazarene.

I narrated this on the authority of Hisham bin Muhammad, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas.

Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: They were called Christians because they were in a village called Nazareth, where Jesus, son of Mary, would descend. It is a name they were called by, but they were not commanded to use it.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: Those who said, 'We are Christians' Al-Ma'idah 22, he said: They were named after a village called Nazareth, where Jesus, son of Mary, used to reside.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: and the Sabians.

Abu Jaafar said: The Sabians are the plural of Sabeen, which is someone who innovates a new religion other than his religion, like someone who apostatizes from the religion of Islam. And everyone who leaves a religion he was following to another one, the Arabs call him: Sabeen. It is said from it: So-and-so became a Sabeen, yazba saban. And it is said: the stars became Sabeens, if they rose. And so-and-so became Sabeens in such-and-such a place, meaning: he rose.

The people of interpretation differed as to who among the people of religions is subject to this name. Some of them said: It applies to everyone who left one religion to another. They said: Those whom God meant by this name are people who have no religion. Those who said this were mentioned:

Muhammad bin Bashar told us, he said, Abdul Rahman bin Mahdi told us.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us all, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Laith, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The Sabians are neither Jews nor Christians, and they have no religion.

Ibn Bashar told us, he said, Abd al-Rahman told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of al-Hajjaj ibn Artah, on the authority of al-Qasim ibn Abi Bazza, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Hakam told us, on the authority of Anbasa, on the authority of Al-Hajjaj, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The Sabians are between the Magians and the Jews. Their sacrifices are not to be eaten, and their women are not to be married.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Hakam told us, on the authority of Anbasa, on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Qatada, on the authority of Al-Hasan, the same.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh: The Sabians are between the Jews and the Magians, they have no religion.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said: Mujahid said: The Sabians are between the Magians and the Jews, they have no religion. Ibn Jurayj said: I said to Ata': The Sabians they claimed that it is a tribe from the Sawad region, they are not Magians, Jews, or Christians. He said: We have heard that, and the polytheists said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: He has become an apostate.

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement, And the Sabians, he said: The Sabians are a people, a religion from the religions that were in the peninsula of Mosul, they say: There is no god but God, and they have no deeds, no book, and no prophet, except the saying, There is no god but God. He said: And they did not believe in the Messenger of God, so because of that the polytheists used to say to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions: These are the Sabians, likening them to them.

Others said that they are people who worship angels and pray towards the Qiblah. Those who said that were mentioned:

Muhammad bin Abdul A'la told us, he said, Al-Mu'tamir bin Sulayman told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Hasan, he said, Ziyad told me: The Sabians pray towards the qiblah and perform the five prayers. He said: So he wanted to abolish the jizya from them. He said: Then he was informed later that they worship angels.

And Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And the Sabians, he said: The Sabians are a people who worship angels, pray toward the qiblah, and recite the Psalms.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: The Sabians are a group of the People of the Book who recite the Psalms. Abu Ja'far Al-Razi said: It has also reached me that the Sabians are a people who worship angels, recite the Psalms, and pray toward the qibla.

Others said: Rather, they are a group of the People of the Book. Those who said that mentioned:

Sufyan bin Wakee' told us, he said, my father told us, on the authority of Sufyan, he said: Al-Suddi was asked about the Sabians, and he said: They are a group of the People of the Book.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Whoever believes in God and the Last Day and does righteousness will have their reward with their Lord.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying, Whoever believes in God and the Last Day, is whoever is truthful and acknowledges the resurrection after death on the Day of Resurrection, and does righteous deeds and obeys God, then they will have their reward with their Lord. What he means by his saying, Then they will have their reward with their Lord, is that they will have the reward for their righteous deeds with their Lord.

If someone were to say to us: Where is the completion of his statement: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans?

It was said: Its completion is the sentence: Whoever believes in God and the Last Day. Because its meaning is: whoever among them believes in God and the Last Day, so he left out mentioning whom because the speech indicates it, making what was mentioned sufficient instead of what was left out.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:62

Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - whoever believed in God and the Last Day and did righteousness - will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.

If he says: What is the meaning of this statement?

It was said that its meaning is: Those who believed, those who were Jews, Christians, and Sabeans - whoever believes in God and the Last Day - will have their reward with their Lord.

If he says: How does a believer believe?

It was said: The meaning of the believer is not the meaning that you suppose, i.e., of transition from one religion to another, like the conversion of the Jew or Christian to the faith, although it was said that those meant by that were those from the People of the Book who believed in Jesus and what he brought, until they met Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and believed in him and confirmed him. So it was said to those who believed in Jesus and what he brought, when they met Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Believe in Muhammad and what he brought. However the meaning of the belief of him who believes here is his enduring in his faith and renouncing any change in it. As for the faith of the Jews, Christians, and Sabians, it is attesting in the truthfulness of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought. So whoever among them believes in Muhammad and what he brought and the Last Day, and does righteous deeds, and does not change or alter until he dies upon that, then he will have the reward for his deeds and his wages with his Lord, as He, may His praise be exalted, described.

If someone says: How did he say: Then they will have their reward with their Lord, when it is only a single word, and the action with it is unified?

It was said: Min, even if the verb that follows it is unified, has the meaning of one, two, and plural, and masculine and feminine, because in all these cases it is in one form and one image that does not change. So the Arabs unify the verb with it even if it is in the meaning of a plural because of its wording, and they pluralize the verb with it another time because of its meaning, as God, the Most High, said: "And among them are those who listen to you, so can you make the deaf hear, even if they do not understand? And among them are those who look at you, so can you guide the blind, even if they do not see?" (Yunus 10:42-43). So he pluralized the verb with Min once because of its meaning, and he unified the verb with it another time because it is in the wording of one, as the poet said:

Ask Salma about you if you show up, and tell her: Turn to those who stayed behind.

He said: Stay behind, and he made who in the same position as who, and Al-Farazdaq said:

Come on, if you promise me you will not betray me, we will be like two wolves who accompany each other.

So, the two words are used together for the meaning of from. Likewise, His statement, Whoever believes in God and the Last Day and does righteousness, they will have their reward with their Lord. He limited believed and did righteousness to the word from, and mentioned them collectively in His statement, they will have their reward, for its meaning, because it is in the meaning of a collective.

As for his saying: And there is no fear upon them, nor shall they grieve.

For He, the Most High, means by it: They will have no fear regarding the horrors of the Day of Resurrection that they will face, nor will they grieve over what they have left behind of this world and its life, when they witness what God has prepared for them of reward and eternal bliss with Him.

It was mentioned that he said: Whoever believes in God means the believers among the People of the Book who met the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace:

Musa bin Harun told me, Amr told us, Asbat bin Nasr told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Indeed, those who believe and those who are Jews the verse, he said: This verse was revealed about the companions of Salman Al-Farsi. Salman was from Jundishapur, and was one of their nobles, and the king's son was a friend and brother to him, neither of them would decide a matter without the other, and they would both ride together to hunt. While they were hunting, a tent made of cloaks was raised for them, so they went to it, and there they saw a man in it with a Qur'an in front of him, reading from it and crying. They asked him: What is this? He said: The one who wants to know this should not stand in your place, if you want to know what is in it, then come down so that I may teach you. So they came down to it, and he said to them: This is a book that came from God, in which He commands obedience to Him and forbids disobedience to Him. In it: Do not commit adultery, do not steal, and do not take people's money unjustly. So he told them what was in it, and it is the Gospel that God sent down to Jesus. It fell into their hearts, and they followed him and became Muslims. He said to them: The slaughter of your people is forbidden to you.

They continued to do so, learning from him, until it was a feast for the king. He prepared food, then gathered the people and nobles, and sent to the king's son and invited him to join him in eating with the people. The young man refused and said: I am busy with you, so eat you and your companions. When he had sent many messengers to him, he informed them that he would not eat their food. So the king sent to his son and called him and said: What is this order of yours? He said: We do not eat from your slaughtered animals, you are infidels, and your slaughtered animals are not lawful. The king said: Who ordered you to do this? He told him that the monk ordered him to do so. So he called the monk and said: What does my son say? He said: Your son is telling the truth. He said to him: If the blood among us was not great, I would have killed you, but get out of our land. So he gave him a deadline. So Salman said: We stood up and cried over him, and he said to them: If you are truthful, then we are in a covenant in Mosul with sixty men in which we worship God, so come to us.

The monk went out, and Salman and the king's son remained. He said to the king's son: Let's go! The king's son said: Yes. The king's son started selling his goods, wanting equipment. When he was slow to reach Salman, Salman went out until he reached them and stayed with his friend, who was the master of the church. The people of that church were among the best monks, and Salman was with them, striving hard in worship and tiring himself out. The old man said to him: You are a young boy, undertaking more worship than you can bear, and I am afraid that you will grow weary and become unable to do it. So be gentle with yourself and make it easy. Salman said: Do you see what you are ordering me to do, is it better or what I do? He said: Rather, what you do. He said: Then leave me alone.

Then the owner of the pledge called him and said: Do you know that this pledge of allegiance is mine, and I am the most deserving of it? If I wanted to expel these people from it, I could! But I am a man too weak to worship these people, and I want to move from this pledge of allegiance to another pledge of allegiance whose worship is easier than these people. If you want to stay here, then stay, and if you want to go with me, then go. Salman said to him: Which of the two pledges is more deserving? He said: This one. Salman said: Then I will be in this one. So Salman stayed there and the owner of the pledge of allegiance recommended Salman to the scholar of the pledge, so Salman used to worship with them.

Then the learned Sheikh wanted to come to Jerusalem, so he said to Salman: If you want to go with me, go, and if you want to stay, stay. Salman said to him: Which is better, should I go with you or stay? He said: No, you should go with me. So he went with him. They passed by a man lying on the side of the road, and when he saw them, he called: O Master of the monks, have mercy on me, may God have mercy on you! But he did not speak to him nor look at him. They went until they came to Jerusalem, and the Sheikh said to Salman: Go out and seek knowledge, for the scholars of the world attend this mosque. So Salman went out and listened to them, and one day he returned sad, so the Sheikh said to him: What is the matter, Salman? He said: I see that all the good has been taken away by the prophets and their followers who came before us! The Sheikh said to him: O Salman, do not be sad, for there remains a prophet, and he will emerge in the land of the Arabs, so if you reach him, believe in him and follow him. Salman said to him: Tell me something about his sign. He said: Yes, he is sealed on his back with the seal of prophethood, and he eats gifts but does not eat charity.

Then they returned until they reached the place of the seat, and he called out to them and said: O master of the monks, have mercy on me, may God have mercy on you! So he turned his donkey towards him, took him by the hand and lifted him up, and he struck the ground with him, and prayed for him and said: Get up, by God's permission, so he got up healthy and strong. So Salman was amazed as he watched him get strong. The monk walked and disappeared from Salman, and Salman did not know.

Then Salman was alarmed and looked for the monk. He was met by two Arab men from Kalb, so he asked them: Have you seen the monk? One of them made his camel kneel and said: Yes, this is the shepherd of the herd! So he carried him and set off with him to the city.

Salman said: I was overcome with grief such as I had never felt before. A woman from Juhayna bought him, and he and a slave of hers used to tend the sheep, one day and the other day. Salman used to collect money, waiting for the emergence of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. One day, while he was tending his sheep, his companion who was following him came and said: Did you know that a man claiming to be a prophet has come to Madinah today? Salman said to him: Stay with the sheep until I come to you.

Salman came down to Madinah. He looked at the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and circled around him. When the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) saw him, he knew what he wanted. He lowered his garment until his ring came out. When he saw him, he came to him and spoke to him. Then he went and bought a sheep for a dinar and bread for a dinar. He brought it to him. Salman said: This is charity. He said: "I have no need for it. So take it out and let the Muslims eat it." Then he went and bought bread and meat for another dinar. He brought it to the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him). He said: What is this? He said: This is a gift. He said: Sit down and let me eat. So he sat down and they all ate from it. While he was talking to him, he mentioned his companions and told him about them. He said: They used to fast and pray and believe in you and testify that you will be sent as a Prophet. When Salman finished praising them, the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said to him: O Salman, they are from the people of the Fire. This was very difficult for Salman, and Salman had said to him: If they had caught up with you, they would have believed you and followed you. Then God revealed this verse: Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - those who believe in God and the Last Day.

The belief of the Jews was that whoever adhered to the Torah and the Sunnah of Moses, until Jesus came. When Jesus came, whoever adhered to the Torah and took the Sunnah of Moses and did not abandon it or follow Jesus was doomed. The belief of the Christians was that whoever adhered to the Gospel and the laws of Jesus was a believer and accepted from him, until Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, came. So whoever did not follow Muhammad and did not abandon the Sunnah of Jesus and the Gospel that he was upon was doomed.

Al-Qasim narrated, Al-Husayn narrated, Hajjaj narrated, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews the verse, he said: Salman Al-Farsi asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about those Christians and what he saw of their deeds, he said: They did not die as Muslims. Salman said: The earth became dark for me, and I remembered their striving, so this verse was revealed: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews. So he called Salman and said: This verse was revealed about your companions. Then the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever dies on the religion of Jesus and dies as a Muslim before hearing about me, is he on a good path? And whoever hears about me today and does not believe in me has perished.

Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - whoever believed in God and the Last Day and did righteousness - will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.

Ibn Abbas said: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Salih told us, he said, Muawiyah bin Salih told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans to His statement: nor will they grieve. Then God Almighty revealed after this: And whoever desires other than Islam as religion - never will it be accepted from him, and he, in the Hereafter, will be among the losers (Al Imran 3:85).

This report ofcicates that Ibn Abbas believed that God Almighty had promised those who did good deeds among the Jews, Christians, and Sabians, Paradise in the Hereafter, then He abrogated that by saying: And whoever desires other than Islam as religion - never will it be accepted from him.

The interpretation of the verse, then, according to what we mentioned from Mujahid and al-Suddi: Indeed, those who believed from this nation, and those who were Jews, and Christians, and Sabeans - whoever believed from the Jews, and Christians, and Sabeans in God and the Last Day - they will have their reward with their Lord, and no fear will there be concerning them, nor will they grieve.

What we have said about the first interpretation is more similar to the apparent meaning of the revelation. Because God, may He be glorified and praised, did not specify the reward for righteous deeds with faith for some of His creation over others, and the report of His saying: Whoever believes in God and the Last Day is about all that was mentioned at the beginning of the verse.

It contains eight issues:

First: The Almighty's statement: Indeed, those who believed meaning, those who believed in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Sufyan said: What is meant are the hypocrites. It is as if he said: Those who believed in the outward appearance of their affair, and for that reason he linked them with the Jews, Christians, and Sabians, then he explained the ruling on those who believed in God and the Last Day from among all of them.

Second: The Almighty's saying: And those who were Jews means they became Jews, and they were attributed to Judah, who was the eldest son of Jacob, peace be upon him. The Arabs changed the dhal to dal, because when a foreign word is Arabized, its pronunciation changes. It was said: They were called that because they repented from worshipping the calf. Had: repented. Al-Ha'id: the penitent. The poet said:

I am a man who is crazy about his love

Any repentant. In the Qur'an: Indeed, we have been guided to You meaning we have repented. The people are guided by the word Hawd and Hidayah if they repent. Ibn Arafah said: We have been guided to You meaning we have settled in accordance with your command. And Hawadah is calmness and truce. He said: And from this is the saying of God Almighty: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews. Abu al-Samal read: Hadawu with the opening of the d

Third: The Almighty's saying: And the Christians is a plural, singular: Christian. It was said: Christians, with the omission of the ya, and this is the saying of Sibawayh. The female is Nasrana, like Kundaman and Nedmana. It is indefinite and is known by the definite article. The poet said:

He turned away as he turned away from what is not permissible for him, a Christian cupbearer before Easter fasting

He described him as indefinite. Al-Khalil said: One of the Christians is Nasri, like Mahri and Mahari. Sibawayh recited as evidence for his statement:

You see him when the evening comes as a monotheist and he spends the morning with him while he is a Christian

And he recited:

Both of them fell down and bowed their heads as a fire that had not been broken prostrated itself.

It is said: prostrate if you lean. However, Nasran and Nasranah are only used with the nisba ya', because they said: a Christian man and a Christian woman. And Nasrahu means to make him a Christian. In the hadith:

His parents either make him a Jew or a Christian. And he, peace be upon him, said:

There is no one from this nation, Jew or Christian, who hears of me and does not believe in that with which I was sent, but he will be among the companions of the Fire. Plurals have been used in a way other than the singular, and the analogy is the Christians. Then it was said: They were named that because of a village called Nazareth, where Jesus, peace be upon him, used to reside, so he was attributed to it and it was said: Jesus the Nazarene. When his companions were attributed to him, they were called the Christians. This was said by Ibn Abbas and Qatadah. Al-Jawhari said: Nasran is a village in the Levant to which the Christians are attributed, and it is called Nazareth. It was said: They were named that because of their support of one another. The poet said:

When I saw the Nabataeans, I rolled up my izar from my knees.

I was their Christian neighbor

It was said: They were called that because of his saying: Who are my supporters for God? The disciples said: We are the supporters of God.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: And the Sabians is the plural of Sabean, and it was said: Sab, and that is why they differed in its hamza, and the majority hamzated it except Nafi'. So whoever hamzated it made it from the word saba't an-nujum if it rose, and saba't thaniyyat al-ghulam if it came out. And whoever did not hamzate it made it from saba yasbu if it inclined. So the Sabean in the language is the one who left and inclined from one religion to another, and that is why the Arabs used to say to someone who converted to Islam, he had become a Sabean. So the Sabians left the religion of the People of the Book.

Fifth: There is no disagreement that the Jews and Christians are People of the Book, and because of their Book it is permissible to marry their women and eat their food - as will be explained in Al-Ma'idah - and to impose the jizya on them, as will be explained in Surat Bara'ah, God willing. There is disagreement about the Sabians. Al-Suddi said: They are a group of the People of the Book, and so did Ishaq ibn Rahawayh. Ibn Al-Mundhir said: Ishaq said: There is nothing wrong with the sacrifices of the Sabians because they are a group of the People of the Book. Abu Hanifa said: There is nothing wrong with their sacrifices and marrying their women. Al-Khalil said: They are a people whose religion is similar to the religion of the Christians, except that their qiblah is towards the south. They claim that they follow the religion of Noah, peace be upon him. Mujahid, Al-Hasan, and Ibn Abi Nujayh said: They are a people whose religion is a mixture of Judaism and Zoroastrianism, and their sacrifices are not to be eaten. Ibn Abbas said: And their women are not to be married. Al-Hasan and Qatadah also said: They are a people who worship angels, pray towards the Qiblah, recite the Psalms, and perform the five daily prayers. Ziyad ibn Abi Sufyan saw them and wanted to remove the jizya from them when he learned that they worship angels. What has been concluded from their doctrine - according to what some of our scholars have mentioned - is that they are monotheists who believe in the influence of the stars and that they are effective. For this reason, Abu Saeed al-Istakhri al-Qadir Billah issued a fatwa declaring them infidels when he asked him about them.

Sixth: The Almighty's saying: Whoever believes means truthful. Min in His saying: Whoever believes is in the accusative case instead of those who. The fa in His saying they shall have their reward is included because of the ambiguity in who. "Their reward" is the subject and predicate in the position of the predicate of in. It would be better for who to be in the nominative case as the subject, and its meaning is the condition. Believed is in the subjunctive case as the condition, and the fa is the answer. Their reward is the predicate of who, and the entire sentence is the predicate of in, and the referent to those who is omitted, its meaning being whoever among them believes in God. In belief in God and the Last Day is included belief in the messengers, the books, and the resurrection.

Seventh: If someone says: Why is the pronoun plural in the Almighty's statement: For them is their reward, and that the word singular is not plural, but it would have been correct if he had said: For him is his reward. The answer is that whoever can refer to the singular, dual, and plural, so it is permissible for the pronoun to refer to the singular, dual, and plural. God Almighty said: And among them are those who listen to you in meaning. And He said: And among them are those who listen to you in wording. And the poet said:

Tell Salma about you if you show up and tell her to turn to those who stayed behind.

Al-Farazdaq said:

Come on, if you promise me you will not betray me, we will be like two wolves who accompany each other.

So it was carried on the meaning, and if it was carried on the wording, he would have said: he accompanies, and he stayed behind. And the Almighty said: And whoever obeys God and His Messenger, He will admit him to gardens so it was carried on the wording. Then He said: Immortal so it was carried on the meaning, and if he had taken the wording into consideration he would have said: Abiding therein. And if what comes after who is in accordance with the wording, then it is permissible to contradict after with the meaning as in this verse. And if what comes after it is in accordance with the meaning, then it is not permissible to contradict after with the wording, because confusion enters into the speech. We have already discussed the statement of the Almighty: And there shall be no fear concerning them, nor shall they grieve. And praise be to God.

Eighth: It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that his statement: Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews verse was abrogated by the statement of God Almighty: And whoever desires other than Islam as religion - never will it be accepted from him verse. Another said: It is not abrogated and it is for those who are steadfast in their faith from among the believers in the Prophet, peace be upon him.

When the Almighty explained the state of those who disobeyed His commands, committed His prohibitions, transgressed in doing what is not permitted, violated the sacred things, and brought down punishment upon them, the Almighty pointed out that whoever among the previous nations did good and obeyed, then he will have the best reward, and the same is the case until the Day of Resurrection, for everyone who followed the Messenger, the unlettered Prophet, then he will have eternal happiness and they will have no fear in what they will face, nor will they grieve over what they leave behind and leave behind, as the Almighty said: Unquestionably, for the allies of God there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve. And as the angels say to the believers when they are dying in His statement: "Indeed, those who say, 'Our Lord is God,' and then remain on a right course - the angels will descend upon them, [saying], 'Do not fear and do not grieve, but receive good tidings of Paradise, which you were promised.'" Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Umar ibn Abi Umar al-Adani told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: Salman, may God be pleased with him, said: I asked the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about the people of a religion I was with, and I mentioned their prayers and worship, so this was revealed: Indeed, those who believe and those who are Jews or Christians or Sabeans - those who believe in God and the Last Day - until the end of the verse. Al-Suddi said: "Indeed, those who believe and those who are Jews or Christians or Sabeans - those who believe in God and the Last Day and do righteousness - the verse was revealed about the companions of Salman Al-Farsi while he was talking to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he mentioned his companions and told him about them. He said, "They used to pray and fast and believe in you and testify that you will be sent as a prophet." When Salman finished praising them, the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to him, O Salman, they are from the people of the Fire. This was difficult for Salman, so God revealed this verse. The belief of the Jews was that whoever adhered to the Torah and the Sunnah of Moses, peace be upon him, until Jesus came. When he came, whoever adhered to the Torah and took the Sunnah of Moses and did not abandon it or follow Jesus was doomed. The belief of the Christians was that whoever adhered to the Gospel among them and the laws of Jesus was a believer accepted from him until Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, came. So whoever did not follow Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and did not abandon what he was upon of the Sunnah of Jesus and the Gospel was doomed. Ibn Abi Hatim said, and something similar to this was narrated from Saeed bin Jubair. I said, This does not contradict what Ali bin Abi Talha narrated from Ibn Abbas, Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - those who believed in God and the Last Day the verse. He said, then God revealed after that, And whoever desires other than Islam as religion - never will it be accepted from him, and he, in the Hereafter, will be among the losers. What Ibn Abbas said is information that no method or action will be accepted from anyone except what was in accordance with the law of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, after He sent him with what He sent him with. As for before that, everyone who followed the Messenger in his time was on guidance, a path, and salvation. So the Jews were the followers of Moses, peace be upon him, who used to judge by the Torah in their time. The Jews come from the word hawadah which means affection, or tahud which means repentance, as Moses, peace be upon him, said: Indeed, we have been guided to you meaning we have repented, so it is as if they were originally called that because of their repentance and affection for one another. It was also said: because they were related to Judah, the eldest son of Jacob. Abu Amr ibn al-Ala said: because they became Jews, meaning they moved when the Torah was read. When Jesus, peace be upon him, was sent, it was obligatory for the Children of Israel to follow him and submit to him. His companions and the people of his religion are the Christians, they were called that because they supported each other. They may also be called answers, as Jesus, peace be upon him, said: "Who are my supporters for God? The disciples said: We are the supporters of God." It was also said: they were called that because they settled in a land called Nazareth, as Qatada and Ibn Jurayj said, and it was also narrated from Ibn Abbas, and God knows best. And Christians is the plural of Nasran, like Nashawi is the plural of Nashwan, and Sakara is the plural of Sakran, and a woman is called Nasranah. The poet said:

Indeed, those who have believed and those who were Jews or Christians or Sabeans - whoever believed in God and the Last Day and did righteousness - will have their reward with their Lord, and there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve.

Christianity not deleted

When God sent Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, as the Seal of the Prophets and a Messenger to all of the children of Adam, they were obliged to believe what he told them. And obeying him in what he commanded, and refraining from what he forbade, and these are the true believers, and the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, was called believers because of the abundance of their faith, and the intensity of their conviction, and because they believe in all the past prophets and the coming unseen. As for the Sabians, there is a difference of opinion regarding them. Sufyan al-Thawri said, on the authority of Layth ibn Abi Salim, on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The Sabians are a people between the Magians, the Jews, and the Christians, and they have no religion. And Ibn Abi Nujayh narrated it likewise on his authority, and it was narrated on the authority of Ata' and Sa'id ibn Jubayr something similar to that. And Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, al-Suddi, Abu al-Sha'tha', Jabir ibn Zayd, al-Dahhak, and Ishaq ibn Rahawayh said: The Sabians are a group of the People of the Book who recite the Psalms, and for this reason Abu Hanifa and Ishaq said: There is nothing wrong with their sacrifices and their marriages. And Hisham said, on the authority of Mutraf: We were with al-Hakam ibn Utbah, and a man from the people of Basra told him, on the authority of al-Hasan, that he used to say about the Sabians: They are like the Magians, so he said: The verdict, did I not tell you that, and Abd al-Rahman bin Mahdi said on the authority of Muawiyah bin Abd al-Karim: I heard al-Hasan mention the Sabians and he said: They are a people who worship the angels, and Ibn Jarir said: Muhammad bin Abd al-A'la told us, al-Mu'tamir bin Sulayman told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Hasan, he said: Ziyad told that the Sabians pray towards the qiblah, and pray the five prayers, he said: So he wanted to remove the jizya from them, he said: Then he told after that they worship the angels, and Abu Ja'far al-Razi said: It has reached me that the Sabians are a people who worship the angels, and read the Psalms and pray towards the qiblah, and Sa'id bin Abi Arouba said the same on the authority of Qatada, and Ibn Abi Hatim said: Yunus bin Abd al-A'la told us, Ibn Wahb told us, Ibn Abi al-Zinad told me on the authority of his father, he said: The Sabians are a people near Iraq and they are in Kutha, and they believe in all the prophets and fast thirty days of every year, and pray towards Yemen every day five prayers, and Wahb bin Munabbih was asked about the Sabians and he said: The one who He knows God alone and has no law to follow and has not committed kufr. Abdullah bin Wahb said: Abdul Rahman bin Zaid said: The Sabians are people of a religion from the religions. They were in the island of Mosul. They say: There is no god but God. They have no work, no book, and no prophet except the saying: There is no god but God. He said: And they did not believe in a messenger, so for that reason the polytheists used to say to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions: These Sabians resemble them, meaning in saying: There is no god but God. Al-Khalil said: They are a people whose religion resembles the religion of the Christians except that their qiblah is towards the south. They claim that they follow the religion of Noah, peace be upon him. Al-Qurtubi narrated from Mujahid, Al-Hasan, and Ibn Nujayh that they are a people whose religion is mixed between the Jews and the Magians, and their slaughtered animals are not eaten and their women are not married. Al-Qurtubi said: What is obtained from their doctrine, as some scholars have mentioned, is that they are monotheists and believe in the influence of the stars and that they are effective. For this reason, Abu Saeed Al-Istakhri issued a fatwa declaring them kufr to Al-Qadir Billah when he asked him about them. Al-Razi chose that the Sabians A people who worship the planets in the sense that God made them a direction for worship and supplication, or in the sense that God delegated the management of the affairs of this world to them. He said: This statement is attributed to the Kashranis to whom Abraham, peace be upon him, came to refute them and invalidate their statement. The most apparent statement, and God knows best, is the statement of Mujahid and his followers, Wahb ibn Munabbih: that they are a people who do not follow the religion of the Jews, Christians, Magians, or polytheists. Rather, they remain on their natural disposition and have no established religion for them to follow or acquire. For this reason, the polytheists used to call those who converted to Islam a Sabian, meaning that he had left all the religions of the people of the earth at that time. Some scholars said: The Sabians are those to whom the call of a prophet did not reach, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

It was said that what is meant by those who believed are the hypocrites, as indicated by their being linked to the Jews, Christians, and Sabians: that is, they believed in appearance. It is better to say that what is meant are those who believed in the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and became among his followers, and it is as if God Almighty wanted to clarify that the state of this Islamic religion and the state of all other religions before it goes back to one thing, which is that whoever among them believed in God and the Last Day and did righteous deeds deserved what God mentioned of reward, and whoever misses out on that misses out on all good and reward, both small and great. What is meant by faith here is what the Messenger of God (peace be upon him) explained when Gabriel asked him about faith, so he said: That you believe in God, His angels, His books, His messengers, and destiny, both good and bad. This faith is only possessed by those who have entered the Islamic religion. Whoever does not believe in Muhammad (peace be upon him) or the Quran is not a believer, and whoever believes in them becomes a Muslim believer and will no longer be a Jew, Christian or Zoroastrian. His statement: 62- They became Jews means they became Jews. It was said that it is a reference to Judah, son of Jacob, with the voiced dhal, but the Arabs changed it to a silent dal. It was said that the meaning of They became Jews is that they repented for their repentance from worshipping the calf. From this is the statement of God the Almighty: Indeed, we have been guided to you meaning we have repented. It was said that its meaning is tranquility and peace. Al-Kashshaf said that its meaning is that it entered Judaism. As for the Christians, Sibawayh said: Its singular is Nasran and Nasranah, like Nadman and Nadmanah. He recited as evidence for that the saying of the poet:

You see him when he visits the evening, he is light-hearted and he has breakfast with him, and he is a Christian

The other said:

Both of them fell down and bowed their heads as a Christian woman who had not become a monotheist would bow down.

He said: But it is only used with the relative yaa, so it is said: a Christian man and a Christian woman. Al-Khalil said: One Christian is Nasri. Al-Jawhari said: Nasran is a village in the Levant to which Christians are attributed, and it is said: Nazareth, and based on this the yaa is for the relative. He said in Al-Kashshaf: The yaa is for emphasis like the one in Ahmari, they were called that because they supported Christ. The Sabians are the plural of Saby - and it was said: Sab. The reciters differed about it, so they all added a hamza to it except Nafi', so whoever added a hamza made it from Sab'at an-Nujum: if it rose, and Sab'at the young man's tooth: if it came out. And whoever did not add a hamza made it from Saba yasbu: if he inclined, and the Sabian in the language is the one who left and inclined from one religion to another, and for this reason the Arabs used to say to someone who converted to Islam, he had become a Sabian, and they called this group Sabians, because they left the religion of the Jews and Christians and worshipped the angels. And his saying: Whoever believes in God is in the accusative case instead of those who believed and what follows it. The meaning of belief has already been presented, and the predicate of in is his saying: For them is their reward. It is permissible for his saying: Whoever believes in God to be in the nominative case as a subject whose predicate is his saying: For them is their reward. Both of them are predicates of in. The pronoun is understood in the first sentence: that is, whoever among them believed. The fa entered into the predicate to include the subject with the meaning of a condition. The interpretation of the saying of God the Almighty: So there will be no fear upon them, nor will they grieve has already been presented. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Salman who said: I asked the Prophet (blessings and peace of God be upon him) about the people of a religion I was with, and I mentioned their prayers and worship, so Indeed, those who believed and those who were Jews was revealed. Al-Wahidi narrated something similar to that from Mujahid. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi in mentioning the reason in the manner of what preceded, and he narrated a long story. Abu Dawud narrated in Al-Nasikh wal-Mansukh, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: Indeed, those who have believed and those who are Jews he said: Then God revealed after this: And whoever desires other than Islam as religion - never will it be accepted from him, and he, in the Hereafter, will be among the losers. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ali who said: The Jews were called Jews because they said: Indeed, we have been guided to you. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Masoud who said: We know better where the Jews were called Jews from the words of Moses, peace be upon him: Indeed, we have been guided to you. Why were the Christians called Christians? From the words of Jesus, peace be upon him: Be supporters of God. Abu Al-Shaykh narrated something similar on his authority. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada: They were called Christians because of a village called Nazareth. Ibn Saad narrated in his Tabaqat and Ibn Jarir on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: The Christians were called Christians because the village of Jesus was called Nazareth. Abdul Razzaq, Abdul Bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid, who said: The Sabians are a sect between the Jews, Christians, and Zoroastrians, and they have no religion. Abdul Razzaq narrated on his authority, who said: Ibn Abbas said: He mentioned something similar. Other than this has been narrated in the interpretation of the Sabians.

62. Those who believed and those who were Jews meaning the Jews were called by this name because they said: Indeed, we have turned to You meaning we have inclined towards You. It was also said: because they were Jews, meaning they repented from worshipping the calf. It was also said: because they turned away from the religion of Islam and from the religion of Moses, peace be upon him. Abu Amr ibn al-Ala said: because they became Jews, meaning they moved when the Torah was read and they said: Indeed, the heavens and the earth moved when God gave the Torah to Moses. "And the Christians" were called by this name because the disciples said: "We are the supporters of God." Muqatil said: because they settled in a village called Nasira, because they sought refuge in Nasra, which was a village where Jesus, peace be upon him, settled.

"And the Sabians" The people of Medina read: "and the Sabians and the Sabians" without the hamza, and the rest with the hamza. Its origin is: exit. It is said: someone went out of religion to another religion. The stars went out of their place, and the camel's tusk went out. These were called by this name because they went out of one religion to another. Omar and Ibn Abbas said: They are a people from the People of the Book. Omar, may God be pleased with him, said: Their sacrifices are the sacrifices of the People of the Book. Ibn Abbas said: Their sacrifices are not permissible, nor is their marriage. Mujahid said: They are a tribe towards the Levant between the Jews and the Magians. Al-Kalbi said: They are a people between the Jews and the Christians who shave the middle of their heads and circumcise. Qatada said: A people who read the Psalms and worship the angels, and pray to the Kaaba and acknowledge God Almighty. They took something from every religion. Abdul Aziz bin Yahya said: They became extinct.

Whoever believes in God and the Last Day. If it is said: How can his saying Whoever believes in God be correct when it is mentioned at the beginning of the verse Indeed, those who believe? It is said: They differed regarding the ruling of the verse. Some of them said: He meant by his saying Indeed, those who believe the exact meaning. Then they differed regarding these believers. Some people said: They are those who believed before the mission and they are the seekers of religion like Habib al-Najjar, Quss ibn Sa'idah, Zayd ibn 'Amr ibn Nufayl, Waraqah ibn Nawfal, al-Bara' as-Sunni, Abu Dharr al-Ghifari, Salman al-Farsi, Buhayra the monk, and the delegation of the Negus. Some of them met the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and pledged allegiance to him, and some of them did not meet him. It was said: They are the believers from the past nations, and it was said: They are the believers from this nation and those who were Jews who were on the religion of Moses, peace be upon him, and did not change, and the Christians, who were on the religion of Jesus, peace be upon him, and did not change and died on that, they said: These two names were attached to them at the time of Moses and Jesus, peace be upon them, when they were on the truth, like Islam for the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the Sabians at the time of the rectitude of their matter whoever believed meaning whoever died among them while he was a believer because the reality of belief is in agreement, and it is possible that the waw is implied meaning: and whoever believed after you, O Muhammad, until the Day of Resurrection, and some of them said: Those mentioned with faith in the beginning of the verse are by way of metaphor and not reality, then they differed about them and some of them said: Those who believed in the past prophets and did not believe in you, and it was said: He meant by them the hypocrites who believed with their tongues but did not believe in their hearts, and the Jews and Christians who believed in Judaism and Christianity after the change and the Sabians are some types of infidels whoever believed in God and the Last Day from these types with the heart and tongue And he did righteous deeds, then they will have their reward with their Lord. It was mentioned in the plural form because man is suitable for one, two, plural, masculine and feminine. And there is no fear upon them in this world, nor will they grieve in the Hereafter.

entering into the predicate of if because it does not enter into the conditional, and it was rejected by the Almighty's saying: Indeed, those who have persecuted the believing men and believing women and then have not repented - for them is the punishment of Hell.

62- "Those who believed" in their tongues, meaning those who are religious in the religion of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, the sincere among them and the hypocrites, and it was said the hypocrites because they joined the ranks of the infidels. "And those who were Jews" became Jews, it is said Had and Tahud if he entered Judaism, and Jews: either an Arab from Had if he repented, they were called that because they repented from worshipping the calf, or an Arabized Judah as if they were called by the name of the eldest son of Jacob, peace be upon him. "And the Christians" is the plural of Nasran like Kandami and Nadman, and the Ya in Nasrani is for emphasis as in Ahmari, they were called that because they supported Christ, peace be upon him, or because they were with him in a village called Nasran or Nasira so they were called by its name, or from its name. "And the Sabians" are a people between the Christians and the Magians. It was said that the origin of their religion is the religion of Noah, peace be upon him. It was said that they are angel worshippers. It was said that they worshipped the planets, and if he was an Arab, then he was a Sabian if he deviated because they deviated from all other religions to their religion, or from truth to falsehood.

Whoever believes in God and the Last Day and does righteousness is whoever was in his religion before it was abrogated, believing in his heart in the beginning and the end, acting in accordance with the requirements of his law. It was said that whoever among these infidels believed with pure faith and entered Islam with a sincere entry: Then they will have their reward with their Lord who promised them for their faith and deeds. And there will be no fear concerning them, nor will they grieve when the infidels fear punishment, and the negligent grieve for wasting their lives and missing out on reward. Whoever is the subject of its predicate they will have their reward and the sentence is the predicate of if, or a substitute for the name of if and its predicate they will have their reward and the fa is to include the meaning of the conditional predicate, and Sibawayh prevented it from

Abu Jaafar said: The covenant, the mifaal, from the document, either by an oath, or a covenant, or other documents.

What he means by his saying: And when We took your covenant, is the covenant that God Almighty informed us that He took from them in His saying: And when We took a covenant from the Children of Israel, [saying], 'You shall not worship except God, and to parents, do good.' (al-Baqarah 2:83-85), the verses that he mentioned with it. And the reason for taking the covenant from them, according to what Ibn Zayd mentioned, was:

Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: When Moses returned from his Lord with the tablets, he said to his people, the Children of Israel: Verily, these tablets contain the Book of God, in it is His commands that He commanded you and His prohibitions that He prohibited you from. They said: Who will take it according to your word? No, by God, not until we see God clearly, until God looks down upon us and says: This is My Book, so take it! Why does He not speak to us as He spoke to you, O Moses, and say: This is My Book, so take it? He said: Then the wrath of God came, and a thunderbolt struck them and they all died. He said: Then God revived them after their death, and Moses said to them: Take the Book of God. They said: No. He said: What happened to you? They said: We died and then came back to life! He said: Take the Book of God. They said: No. He sent His angels who lifted up the mountain above them, and it was said to them: Do you recognize this? They said: Yes, this is the Mount! He said: Take the Book or else We will throw it upon you. He said: So they took it with a covenant, and he recited the words of God: And when

We took a covenant from the Children of Israel, [saying], 'You shall not worship except God, and to parents, do good.' until he reached: And God is not unaware of what you do. (al-Baqarah 2:83-85) He said: If they had taken it the first time, they would have taken it without a covenant.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And We raised the mountain above you.

Abu Ja'far said: As for Al-Tur, it is the mountain in the speech of the Arabs, and from it is the saying of Al-'Ajjaj:

He lowered his wings from the mountain, so the falcon passed by when the falcon broke

It was said that it is the name of a specific mountain. It was mentioned that it is the mountain on which God spoke to Moses.

It was said: Some mountains grow, but not others.

Mention of those who said: It is the mountain, whatever it may be: Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: Moses ordered his people to enter the gate in prostration and say: Hattah, and the gate was lowered for them so that they might prostrate, but they did not prostrate and entered on their backs, and they said: Hanthah. So the mountain rose above them, meaning: He brought out the base of the mountain from the ground and raised it above them like a canopy. At-Tur in Syriac means the mountain, intimidating or fearing. Abu Asim was not sure, so they entered in prostration in fear, and their eyes were on the mountain. It is the mountain to which his Lord revealed Himself.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: The mountain was raised above them like a cloud, and it was said to them: You must believe or they will fall upon you. So they believed. And the mountain in Syriac is al-Tur.

Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said, Yazid ibn Zari' told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And when We took your covenant and raised the Mount above you. He said: The Mount is the mountain, they were at its base, then it was raised above their heads, and He said: You must take my command, or I will throw it at you.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: And We raised the Mount above you, he said: The Mount is the mountain. God uprooted it and raised it above them, and said: Take what We have given you with strength, and they acknowledged that.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And We raised the mountain above you. He said: He raised the mountain

Ibn Wakee' told us, he said, my father told us, on the authority of Al-Nadr, on the authority of Ikrimah, he said: At-Tur is the mountain.

Musa told us, Amr ibn Hammad told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi: When God said to them: Enter the gate in prostration and say, Forgive us, but they refused to prostrate, God ordered the mountain to fall on them, and they looked at it and it had covered them, so they fell in prostration on one side and looked at the other side, so God had mercy on them and removed it from them. This is what He said: And when We raised the mountain above them as if it were a canopy al-A'raf 7:171, and His saying: And We raised the Mount above you.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: The mountain in Syriac is the mountain.

Others said: At-Tur is the name of the mountain on which God spoke to Moses. Those who said this were: Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Ibn Abbas said: At-Tur is the mountain on which the Torah was revealed, meaning to Moses, and the Children of Israel were below it. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: The mountain was raised over the Children of Israel, and He said: You must believe in it or it will fall upon you. That is what His statement means: As if it were a canopy (al-A'raf 7:171).

Others said: At-Tur, from the mountains, is what grows specifically. Mention of those who said that: I was told by Al-Munjab, he said, Bishr bin Amara told us, from Abu Rawq, from Ad-Dahhak, from Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: At-Tur, he said: At-Tur is from the mountains what grows, and what does not grow is not a Tur.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Take what We have given you with strength.

Abu Ja'far said: The Arabists differed in their interpretation of this. Some of the grammarians of Basra said: It is something that is sufficient in terms of the apparent meaning mentioned, so that it does not need to be mentioned. This is because the meaning of the statement is: And We raised the mountain above you, and said to you: Take what We have given you with strength, or else We will throw it upon you.

Some grammarians of Kufa said: Taking the covenant is a statement, so there is no need for the statement to imply a statement in it, so it would be two statements. However, everything that contradicts the statement from the statement that is in the meaning of the statement should be accompanied by an, as God Almighty said: Indeed, We sent Noah to his people, [saying], 'Warn your people.' (Nuh 71:1). He said: It is permissible to delete an.

The correct view in this regard is that every word spoken that conveys the intended meaning is sufficient.

What he means by his saying: Take what We have given you is what We have commanded you to do in the Torah.

The origin of giving is giving.

What he means by his saying: with strength, is to strive to do what He has commanded you to do and made obligatory upon you, as: I was told by Ibrahim bin Bashar, who said: Ibn Uyyaynah told us, who said: Abu Asim told us, who said: Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Take what We have given you with strength. He said: Do what is in it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Take what We have given you with strength, he said: with obedience.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Take what We have given you with strength. He said: Strength means seriousness, otherwise I will throw it upon you. He said: So they acknowledged that: that they take what they have been given with strength.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: with strength, meaning: with seriousness and diligence.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said, and I asked him about the statement of God, Take what We have given you with strength, he said: Take the book that Moses brought with truth and right.

The interpretation of the verse is: Take what We have imposed upon you in Our Book of obligations, accept it, and work diligently to perform it, without falling short or laziness. And that is the meaning of their taking it on forcefully, seriously.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And remember what is in it that you may become righteous.

Abu Ja'far said: It means: And remember what We have given you in Our Book of promise and severe threat, encouragement and intimidation, so recite it, consider it, and ponder it if you do that, so that you may fear and fear My punishment, by your insistence on your misguidance, so that you may come to My obedience, and desist from what you are doing of disobeying Me. Like:

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, he said, Ibn Ishaq told me, on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Perhaps you will become righteous, he said: You will desist from what you are upon.

And what God gave them is the Torah. As Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And remember what is in it, he says: Remember what is in the Torah.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:63

And [mention] when We took your covenant and raised the mount above you, [saying], "Take what We have given you with determination and remember what is in it that you may become righteous."

It was also narrated on the authority of Ammar bin Al-Hassan, who said: Abdullah bin Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding his statement: And remember what is in it, meaning: They were commanded to do what is in the Torah.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, I asked Ibn Zayd about the statement of God: And remember what is in it, he said: Do what is in it in obedience to God and sincerity. He said: And he said: Remember what is in it, do not forget it and do not neglect it.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And when We took your covenant and raised the Mount over you. This verse explains the meaning of the Almighty's saying: And when We lifted the mountain over them as if it were a canopy. Abu Ubaidah said: The meaning is that We shook it and extracted it from its place. He said: And everything that you uprooted and threw away, We uprooted it. It was also said: We uprooted it. Ibn al-A'rabi said: An-Natiq is the patcher, an-Natiq is the expander, and an-Natiq is the splitter. A woman who is Nataq and Muntaaq is one who has many children. Al-Qutbi said: It is derived from Nataq al-Saqqa', which means shaking it until the butter is extracted from it. He said: And His saying: And when We uprooted the mountain over them as if it were a canopy, he said: It was uprooted from its roots.

There is a difference of opinion about At-Tur. It was said that At-Tur is the name of the mountain on which God spoke to Moses, peace be upon him, and sent down the Torah to him, and not any other mountain. This was narrated by Ibn Jurayj on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Ad-Dahhak narrated on his authority that At-Tur is the mountain that produces growth, not the mountain that does not produce growth. Mujahid and Qatada said: Any mountain it was. However, Mujahid said: It is the name of every mountain in Syriac, and Abu Al-Aaliyah said the same. We have already discussed whether there are single, uninflected words in the Qur'an that are not from the speech of the Arabs in the introduction to the book. Praise be to God. Al-Bakri claimed that it was named after Tur, son of Ismail, peace be upon him. And God knows best.

Saying about the reason for raising the mountain

When Moses, peace be upon him, came to the Children of Israel from God with the tablets containing the Torah, he said to them: Take it and adhere to it. They said: No! Unless God speaks to us through it as He spoke to you. So they were stunned and then revived. He said to them: Take it. They said: No. So God commanded the angels to uproot a mountain from the mountains of Palestine, the length of a league by the same length, and that was their camp. He placed over them something like a canopy, and brought a sea behind them, and a fire in front of their faces, and it was said to them: Take it and you have a covenant that you will not waste it, or else the mountain will fall on you. So they prostrated in repentance to God. And they took the Torah with the covenant. At-Tabari said on the authority of some scholars: If they had taken it the first time, there would have been no covenant on them. And their prostration was on one side, because they were watching the mountain in fear. So when God had mercy on them, they said: There is no prostration better than a prostration that God accepts and has mercy on His servants with it, so they were commanded to prostrate on one side. Ibn Atiyah said: What is not correct other than that is that God Almighty created the time of their prostration with faith in their hearts, not that they believed reluctantly and their hearts were not reassured by that.

The Almighty said: Take meaning, We said, Take, but it was deleted. What We have given you We gave you. With strength meaning with diligence and effort, as stated by Ibn Abbas, Qatada, and Al-Suddi. It was also said: with intention and sincerity. Mujahid: Strength is working with what is in it. It was also said: with strength, by studying a lot. And remember what is in it meaning, ponder it and memorize its commands and threats, and do not forget it or waste it.

I said: This is what is meant by the books, working according to them, not reciting them with the tongue and chanting them, because that is rejecting them, according to what Al-Sha'bi and Ibn Uyaynah said, and their statement will come when God Almighty says: A party of those who were given the Scripture rejected it. Al-Nasa'i narrated on the authority of Abu Sa'id Al-Khudri that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The worst of people is a wicked man who reads the Qur'an but does not pay attention to anything in it.

The Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) explained that what is meant is action, as we have explained. Malik said: Someone may read the Qur'an who has no good in him. So what was required of those before us and what they took from us is required of us and is obligatory upon us. God the Most High said: And follow the best of what has been revealed to you from your Lord. So He commanded us to follow His Book and act in accordance with it, but we abandoned that, just as the Jews and Christians abandoned it, and the people of the books and the Qur'ans remained of no benefit, due to the prevalence of ignorance, the pursuit of leadership, and the following of whims. Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Jubayr ibn Nufayr, "On the authority of Abu al-Darda', who said: We were with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and he looked up to the sky and said: This is a time when knowledge will be stolen from the people until they will not be able to obtain anything from it. Ziyad ibn Labid al-Ansari said: How will it be stolen from us when we have recited the Qur'an? By God, we will recite it and teach it to our women and children. He said: May your mother lose you, Ziyad. I used to consider you one of the scholars of Madinah. This Torah and the Gospel are with the Jews and Christians, so what good will it do them?" And he mentioned the hadith, and it will come. Al-Nasa'i also narrated it on the authority of Jubayr ibn Nufayr on the authority of Awf ibn Malik al-Ashja'i through a sahih chain of transmission, and "that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to Ziyad: May your mother lose you, Ziyad. This Torah and the Gospel are with the Jews and Christians." In Al-Muwatta', it is narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Masoud that he said to a man: You live in a time when the scholars are many but the reciters are few. The boundaries of the Qur'an are memorized but its letters are forgotten. Few ask, many give. They lengthen the prayer and shorten the sermon. They start their actions before their desires. There will come a time upon the people when the scholars are few but the reciters are many. They memorize but shorten the prayer. They start their desires before their actions. These are texts that indicate what we have mentioned. Yahya said: I asked Ibn Nafi' about his statement: They start their desires before their actions. He said: He means: They follow their desires and abandon doing what was enjoined upon them. The meaning of his statement: Perhaps you will become righteous has been discussed previously, so there is no point in repeating it.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, reminding the Children of Israel of the covenants and agreements He took from them to believe in Him alone, with no partner, and to follow His messengers. God Almighty informed us that when He took the covenant from them, He raised the mountain above their heads so that they would acknowledge what they were promised, and take it with strength, determination, and compliance, as God Almighty said: "And when We raised the mountain above them as if it were a canopy, and they thought it was going to fall on them. Take what We have given you with strength, and remember what is in it that you may become righteous." So the mountain is the mountain, as He explained it in Al-A'raf, and Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Ata', Ikrimah, Al-Hasan, Ad-Dahhak, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, and more than one person stated this. This is clear, in a narration from Ibn Abbas, the mountain is what grows from the mountains, and what does not grow is not a mountain. In the hadith of the tribulations from Ibn Abbas, that when they refused to obey, the mountain was raised over them so that they would hear. Al-Suddi said: When they refused to prostrate, God ordered the mountain to fall on them, so they looked at it and it covered them, so they fell in prostration and prostrated. On one side and they looked at the other side, so God had mercy on them and removed it from them, and they said, By God, there is no prostration more beloved to God than the prostration with which He removed the torment from them, so they prostrated like that, and that is the saying of God the Most High: And We raised above you the Mount. Al-Hasan said in His saying, Take what We have given you with strength, meaning the Torah. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: with strength, meaning with obedience. Mujahid said with strength, by doing what is in it.

Qatada said, Take what We have given you with strength, strength means seriousness, otherwise I will throw it upon you. He said: So they acknowledged that they take what they were given with strength, and the meaning of His saying, otherwise I will throw it upon you, is I will drop it upon you, meaning the mountain. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Rabi' said: And remember what is in it, meaning: Read what is in the Torah and act upon it. God the Most High said, "Then you turned away after that. So had it not been for the grace of God," God the Most High says: Then after this great and confirmed covenant, you turned away from it and turned back and broke it. So had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy, meaning by His repentance to you and His sending the prophets and messengers to you, "you would have been among the The losers for breaking that covenant in this world and the hereafter.

Fath al-Qadir

His statement: 63- And when We took is in the accusative case with an implied factor, which is remember, as mentioned earlier more than once. The explanation of the covenant has already been mentioned, and what is meant is that He, glory be to Him, took a covenant from them to do what He legislated for them in the Torah and what is more general or more specific than that. And At-Tur is the name of the mountain on which God spoke to Moses, peace be upon him, and sent down the Torah to him in it. It has been said that it is the name of every mountain in Syriac. Many commentators have mentioned that when Moses brought the tablets to the Children of Israel from God, he said to them: Take them and hold on to them. They said: No, unless God speaks to us through them as He spoke to you. They were stunned and then revived. He said to them: Take them and hold on to them. They said: No. So God commanded the angels to uproot a mountain from the mountains of Palestine, the length of a league by the length of a league. And that was their camp. He placed over them something like a canopy, and brought a sea from behind them and a fire in front of them. And it was said to them: Take them and you have a covenant that you will not waste them, or else the mountain will fall on you. So they prostrated in repentance to God and took the Torah with the covenant. Ibn Jarir said, on the authority of some scholars: If they had taken them the first time, there would not have been a covenant on them. Ibn Atiyyah said: What is not correct other than that is that God Almighty invented faith at the time of their prostration, not that they believed unwillingly and their hearts were not at peace. This is a fallacious burden that he carried to preserve what he had presented of doctrinal principles that his heart had settled on like others, and every rational person knows that a reason for compulsion is stronger or more severe than this. We say: God forced them to believe, so they believed under compulsion, and the punishment was lifted from them because of this belief. It is similar to what is established in our Shari'ah about lifting the sword from whoever spoke the word of Islam while the sword was drawn and its bearer was shaking it over his head. It is established in the Sahih that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to someone who killed someone who spoke the word of Islam, apologizing for killing him by saying that he said it out of fear and not with proper intent: “Did you search his heart?” And he said: I was not commanded to search the hearts of people. And his saying: Take means: And we said to you, Take what We have given you with strength. Strength means seriousness and diligence, and what is meant by mentioning what is in it is that it be preserved with them so that they know it.

63. God the Almighty said: And when We took your covenant your covenant, O company of Jews and raised above you the Mount which is the mountain in Syriac according to some of them, and it is the saying of Mujahid. It was said: There is no language in the world except that it is in the Qur'an. The majority said: There is no language in the Qur'an other than the language of the Arabs, due to God the Almighty's saying: an Arabic Qur'an. Rather, this and similar things were an agreement between the two languages. Ibn Abbas said: God the Almighty ordered a mountain from the mountains of Palestine to be uprooted from its roots until it stood on their heads, and that is because God the Almighty sent down the Torah to Moses, peace be upon him, so Moses ordered his people to accept it and work by its rulings, but they refused to accept it because of the burdens and burdens that were in it, and it was a heavy law, so God the Almighty ordered Gabriel, peace be upon him, to uproot a mountain the size of their army, and it was a farsakh by a farsakh, so he raised it above their heads the height of a man like a canopy, and he said to them: If you do not accept the Torah, I will send this mountain upon you. Ata' said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both: God raised the Mount above their heads, and sent a fire before Their faces, and the salty sea came to them from behind them.

Take, that is, We said to them, take “what We have given you” We have given you “with strength” with diligence and effort and perseverance “and remember” and study “what is in it” and it was said: memorize it and act upon it that you may become righteous so that you may be saved from destruction in this world and torment in the Hereafter. If you accept, then fine, otherwise I will submit to this mountain and drown you in this sea and burn you with this fire. So when they saw that they had no escape from it, they accepted and prostrated and began to look at the mountain while prostrating, so it became a tradition for the Jews, and they would not prostrate except on the middle of their faces, and they would say: With this prostration the torment was lifted from us.

Mount above you until you were given the covenant. It was narrated that when Moses, peace be upon him, came to them with the Torah, they saw the difficult obligations in it, and they refused to accept it. So he ordered Gabriel, peace be upon him, to pull up the Mount and shade it over them until they accepted.

Take meaning: what We have given you of the Book with strength with seriousness and determination. And remember what is in it study it and do not forget it, or think about it, for it is a remembrance in the heart, or know it. That you may become righteous so that you may become righteous from sins, or hoping that you will be righteous. The Mu'tazila may consider it related to the omitted statement, meaning: We said: Take and remember, intending that you may become righteous.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying, Then you turned away is: Then you turned away. The word tafa'altum comes from their saying: Walani so-and-so turned his back on me if he turned his back on him and left him behind him. Then this is used for anyone who abandons an act of obedience that he was commanded to do and turns his face away. It is said: So-and-so turned away from obeying so-and-so, and turned away from continuing with him. From this is the saying of God, the Most High, But when He gave them of His bounty, they were stingy with it and turned away, averse (al-Tawbah 9:76). By this He means: They disobeyed what they had promised God by saying, If He gives us of His bounty, we will surely give in charity and be among the righteous (al-Tawbah 9:75), and they threw that behind their backs.

It is the custom of the Arabs to borrow a word and put it in place of its counterpart, as Abu Khurash al-Hudhali said:

Not as it used to be, O Umm Malik, but chains have surrounded necks.

The young man returned like an old man, saying nothing but the truth, and the critics were relieved.

What he means by his saying: chains have surrounded the necks is that Islam, in preventing us from doing what we used to do in the Age of Ignorance, which God has forbidden us in Islam, is like chains surrounding our necks, preventing the one who has them around his neck, with the shackle in his hand, from what he has tried to do.

There are more examples of this in the speech of the Arabs than can be counted. Likewise, His statement, Then you turned away after that, means that you abandoned working with what We took your covenant from you and your promises to work with it diligently and diligently, after your Lord gave you covenants to work with it and to do what He commanded you in your Book, so you threw it behind your backs. And what He, the Most High, meant by His statement, that, is all that came before it in the previous verse, I mean His statement, And when We took your covenant and raised the Mount above you.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying, Had it not been for the grace of God upon you, is that had God not graced you with repentance, after you broke the covenant that you had made when He raised the mountain above you, so that you would strive to obey Him, perform His obligations, do what He commanded you to do, and refrain from what He forbade you from in the Book that He gave you, and had He not bestowed upon you Islam and His mercy with which He had mercy upon you and pardoned you for the sin that you committed by returning to the obedience of your Lord, you would have been among the losers.

This, even though it was addressed to those of the People of the Book who were among the emigrants of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, during the days of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, it is only report about their ancestors, so the report was brought out and the one being informed about them was brought out in the manner we have explained previously, that a tribe of Arabs addresses another tribe when boasting or otherwise, with what the ancestors of the one being addressed did to the ancestors of the one being addressed, so it adds the action of the ancestors of the one being addressed to itself and says: We did to you and we did to you. We have mentioned some evidence for that from their poetry previously.

Some of them claimed that the address in these verses was made by adding the verb to those addressed by it, and the verb to others, because those addressed by that were taking care of those who had done that from the first Children of Israel, so God made them among them because of their taking care of them.

Some of them said: It was said thus because his listeners were knowledgeable, and even though the address was addressed to the living among the Children of Israel and the People of the Book, the meaning of that is only report of what God related of the report of their ancestors. So, with the listeners' knowledge of that, he dispensed with mentioning their ancestors specifically. An example of that is the saying of the poet:

If we were related, you would not have given birth to me as a mean person, and you would not have found it useful to acknowledge it.

He said: If we are related, and if it requires a future action, then he said: A vile woman did not give birth to me, so he informed about a past action. That is because the birth had passed and gone ahead. And he did that when he used it as evidence because the listener understood its meaning. So he made what we mentioned of God addressing the People of the Book who were among the emigrants of the Messenger of

Then you turned away after that. Had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy, you would have been among the losers.

God, may God bless him and grant him peace, during the days of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, by adding the actions of their ancestors to them similar to that.

The first one we mentioned is the one that is widely used in the speech and discourse of the Arabs.

Abu Al-Aaliyah used to say in his statement: Had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy, in what he mentioned to us, something similar to what we have said: Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Al-Nadr told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah: Had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy, he said: The grace of God is Islam, and His mercy is the Qur'an.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar, he said, Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', similarly.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: You would have been among the losers.

Abu Ja'far said: If it were not for God's grace and mercy upon you by saving you through your repentance from your sin and crime, you would always be the ones who deprive yourselves of their share, and would perish because of what you committed by breaking your covenant and disobeying His command and obedience.

We have previously explained the meaning of loss with evidence, which makes it unnecessary to repeat it here.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

And the Almighty's saying: Then you turned away The verb to turn away is a verb that means turning away from something with the body, then it was used in turning away from commands, religions and beliefs in a broad and metaphorical sense. And His saying: After that means after the proof, which is taking the covenant and raising the mountain. And His saying: Had it not been for the grace of God upon you grace is raised by the beginning according to Sibawayh and the predicate is omitted and cannot be made explicit, because the Arabs dispensed with making it explicit, except that when they wanted to make it explicit they would come with an, and when they came to it they would not delete the predicate. The meaning is had it not been for the grace of God He would have rescued you. And His mercy is in apposition to grace, meaning His kindness and respite. You would have been is the answer to If it had not been. Among the losers is the predicate of you were. And loss: deficiency, and it has been mentioned before. And it was said: His grace is acceptance of repentance, and His mercy is forgiveness. And grace: the increase over what is required. Fadh1: doing something that is not required. Ibn Faris said in Al-Mujmal: Fadh1 is increase and goodness, and ifdh1: kindness.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, reminding the Children of Israel of the covenants and agreements He took from them to believe in Him alone, with no partner, and to follow His messengers. God Almighty informed us that when He took the covenant from them, He raised the mountain above their heads so that they would acknowledge what they were promised, and take it with strength, determination, and compliance, as God Almighty said: "And when We raised the mountain above them as if it were a canopy, and they thought it was going to fall on them. Take what We have given you with strength, and remember what is in it that you may become righteous." So the mountain is the mountain, as He explained it in Al-A'raf, and Ibn Abbas, Mujahid, Ata', Ikrimah, Al-Hasan, Ad-Dahhak, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, and more than one person stated this. This is clear, in a narration from Ibn Abbas, the mountain is what grows from the mountains, and what does not grow is not a mountain. In the hadith of the tribulations from Ibn Abbas, that when they refused to obey, the mountain was raised over them so that they would hear. Al-Suddi said: When they refused to prostrate, God ordered the mountain to fall on them, so they looked at it and it covered them, so they fell in prostration and prostrated. On one side and they looked at the other side, so God had mercy on them and removed it from them, and they said, By God, there is no prostration more beloved to God than the prostration with which He removed the torment from them, so they prostrated like that, and that is the saying of God the Most High: And We raised above you the Mount. Al-Hasan said in His saying, Take what We have given you with strength, meaning the Torah. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: with strength, meaning with obedience. Mujahid said with strength, by doing what is in it. Qatada said, Take what We have given you with strength, strength means seriousness, otherwise I will throw it upon you. He said: So they acknowledged that they take what they were given with strength, and the meaning of His saying, otherwise I will throw it upon you, is I will drop it upon you, meaning the mountain. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Rabi' said: And remember what is in it, meaning: Read what is in the Torah and act upon it. God the Most High said, "Then you turned away after that. So had it not been for the grace of God," God the Most High says: Then after this great and confirmed covenant, you turned away from it and turned back and broke it. So had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy, meaning by His repentance to you and His sending the prophets and messengers to you, "you would have been among the The losers for breaking that covenant in this world and the hereafter.

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: Then 64- Then you turned away The root of turning away is turning away from something and turning away with the body, then it was used in turning away from matters, religions and beliefs in a broad and metaphorical way, and what is meant here is: their turning away from the covenant taken from them, and his saying: After that means after the proof to them and the intimidation with the most severe and greatest that the minds can permit and the intellects can appreciate, which is raising the mountain over their heads as if it were a canopy over them. And his saying: Had it not been for the grace of God upon you in that He overcame you with His kindness and mercy until you showed repentance, you would have lost. And grace is increase. Ibn Faris said in Al-Mujmal: Grace is increase and goodness, and favor is kindness. End. And loss is decrease, and its explanation has been presented.

64. Then you turned away you turned away after that after you accepted the Torah so had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy meaning by granting you respite and including and delaying the punishment from you you would have become "among the losers" of those who are deceived by the punishment and the loss of this world and the Hereafter. It was said: of those who are punished immediately because He had mercy on them by granting them respite.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

64- "Then you turned away after that" you turned away from fulfilling the covenant after taking it. "Had it not been for the grace of God upon you and His mercy" by guiding you to repentance, or by Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, calling you to the truth and guiding you to it. "You would have been among the losers" the deceived by immersion in sins, or by confusion and misguidance during a period of messengers. And if in the original, the thing is impossible because something else is impossible, so if it is entered upon "la" it indicates confirmation, which is the impossibility of something because something else is proven, and the noun that comes after it according to Sibawayh is a subject whose predicate must be deleted because the speech indicates it and the answer takes its place, and according to the Kufians it is the subject of a deleted verb.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:65

And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, "Be apes, despised."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:65

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And you certainly the oath lam you certainly knew you knew those among you who transgressed exceeded the limit on the Sabbath by fishing, and We had forbidden them from it, and they were the people of Aylah so We said to them, Be apes, despised banished, so they were and perished after three days.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: And you have certainly known, is that you have certainly known. Like you say: I have known your brother, but I did not know him, meaning I have known him, but I did not know him, as God, the Most High, said: And others besides them whom you do not know, God knows them (al-Anfal 8:60), meaning: You do not know them, God knows them.

And His saying: Those of you who transgressed on the Sabbath, meaning those who transgressed My limits, and committed what I forbade them from on the Sabbath, and disobeyed My command.

I have previously demonstrated that aggression is basically exceeding the limit in everything, which makes it unnecessary to repeat it in this place.

Abu Ja'far said: This verse and the verses that follow it, in which the Most High enumerated the Children of Israel who were among the Ansar at the time of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, whom He began mentioning at the beginning of this Surah, regarding their ancestors' breaking of the covenant and pledge of God that they used to conclude, and He warned those addressed by it that what happened to them due to their insistence on their disbelief, their persistence in denying the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their abandonment of following him and believing in what he brought them from his Lord, would happen to them, like what happened to their predecessors of transformation, shaking, and fainting, and what they could not bear of God's wrath and anger. Like that which: Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said, Uthman bin Sa'id narrated to us, he said, Bishr bin 'Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, meaning: And you have certainly known. And this is a warning to them against disobedience. He says: Beware lest what befell the Sabbath-breakers befall you, for they disobeyed Me, transgressed. He says: They dared on the Sabbath. He said: God did not send a prophet except that He commanded him to observe Friday, and informed him of its virtue and its greatness in the heavens and with the angels, and that the Hour will come on it. So whoever followed the prophets in the past, as the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, followed Muhammad, accepted Friday, and heard and obeyed, and recognized its virtue and adhered to it, as God, the Most High, commanded His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. And whoever did not do that, was in the position of those whom God mentioned in His Book, when He said: And you certainly knew those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' That is because the Jews said to Moses when he commanded them to observe Friday, and informed them of its virtue: O Moses, how can you command us to observe Friday and give it precedence over all other days, and the Sabbath is the best of all days, because God created the heavens and the earth and all sustenance in six days, and everything became obedient to Him on the Sabbath, and it was the last of the six? He said: And the Christians said the same to Jesus, son of Mary, when he commanded them to keep Friday. They said to him: How do you command us to keep Friday, while the first of the days is the best and the master of it, and the first is the best, and God is One, and the One is the first best? So God inspired Jesus: Leave them and Sunday, but let them do such and such on it. From what He commanded them to do. But they did not do it, so God Almighty related their stories in the Book about their disobedience. He said: And God said the same to Moses when the Jews said to him what they said about the Sabbath: Leave them and the Sabbath, and do not fish or anything else on it, and do not do anything as they said. He said: So when it was the Sabbath, the whales appeared on the water, and this is His saying: When their fish come to them on their Sabbath day, openly (al-A'raf 7:163), meaning: Appearing on the water, that is because of their disobedience to Moses. And if it was not the Sabbath, it became prey like any other day, and this is His saying: And on the day when they do not observe the Sabbath, they do not come to them (al-A'raf 7:163). So the whales did that as God willed. When they saw it like that, they coveted taking it and feared punishment. Some of them took it but it did not prevent them, and they feared the punishment that Moses had warned them of from God Almighty. When they saw that the punishment would not befall them, they returned and told each other that they had taken the fish and nothing had happened to them, so they multiplied in that and thought that what Moses had told them was false. This is the saying of God Almighty: And you certainly knew those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He says: To those who caught the fish, God transformed them into apes because of their disobedience. He says: If they did not live on earth for more than three days. He said: No transformed creature has ever lived for more than three days, and did not eat, drink or reproduce. God created apes, pigs and all of creation in the six days that God mentioned in His Book. So He transformed these people into apes, and He does the same with whomever He wills, as He wills, and He transforms them as He wills.

Ibn Hamid narrated, Salamah ibn al-Fadl narrated, Muhammad ibn Ishaq narrated, on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn, on the authority of Ikrimah, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, who said: Ibn Abbas said: God only imposed on the Children of Israel the day that He imposed on you for your festival, which is Friday. But they disobeyed and went to the Sabbath, which they glorified and abandoned what they were commanded to do. When they refused to adhere to the Sabbath, God tested them on it and forbade them what was permissible for them on other days. They were in a village between Ayla and al-Tur called Madyan. God forbade them on the Sabbath, hunting and eating whales. When the Sabbath came, they would come to them in a row to the shore of their sea, until the Sabbath was over, and they would go away. They did not see a small or large whale. When the Sabbath came, they were made beautiful to them in a row, until the Sabbath was over, and they went away. And they were like that, until when the time had passed and they were hungry for whales, a man of them took a whale secretly on the Sabbath, and pierced it with a thread, then sent it into the water, and fixed a stake for it on the shore and tied it up, then left it, until the next day, he came and took it, meaning: I did not take it on the Sabbath, then he went with it and ate it. Until when

It was another Saturday, he did the same thing, and the people found the smell of whales, so the people of the village said: By God, we have found the smell of whales, then they found the deed of that man. He said: So they did as he did, and ate secretly for a long time, and God did not hasten to punish them, until they hunted them openly and sold them in the markets. A group of them from the rest of the people said: Woe to you! Fear God! And they forbade them from what they were doing. Another group said that they did not eat whales, and did not forbid the people from what they were doing: Why do you preach to a people whom God is about to destroy or punish with a severe punishment? They said, An excuse before your Lord, because We were angry with their deeds, and perhaps they will fear God. (al-A'raf 7:164)

Ibn Abbas said: While they were like that, the rest of them became in their clubs and mosques, and they lost the people and could not see them. So some of them said to each other: The people have something wrong! Look what it is! So they went to look in their homes, and found them locked on them. They had entered at night and locked themselves in, as people lock themselves in. So they became monkeys in them, and they knew a man by his eye, and he was an ape, and a woman by her eye, and she was an ape, and a boy by his eye, and he was an ape. He said: Ibn Abbas said: Had it not been for God's mention that He saved those who were forbidden from evil, we would have said that He destroyed all of them. They said: It is the village about which God said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: And ask them about the village that was by the sea (al-A'raf 7:163).

Bishr told us, Yazid bin Zari' told us, Sa'id told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' The whales were made lawful for them, and the Sabbath was forbidden to them as a test from God, to know who would obey Him and who would disobey Him. So the people became three types: One type refrained and forbade disobedience, another type refrained from God's sanctity, and another type violated God's sanctity and returned to disobedience. So when they refused to do anything except transgress what they were forbidden from, God said to them, Be apes, despised. So they became howling apes with tails, after they had been men and women.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, he said: They were forbidden from hunting whales on the Sabbath, so they would set out for them on the Sabbath, and they were afflicted with that, so they transgressed and hunted them, so God made them into apes, despised.

Musa told me, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And you certainly knew those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: They were the people of Ayla, which was the town that was by the sea. When the whales were on the Sabbath, and God had forbidden the Jews to do anything on the Sabbath, not a single whale remained in the sea except that they would stick their trunks out of the water. Then when Sunday was the time of the bottom of the sea, nothing was seen of them until the Sabbath. That is why He said: "And ask them about the town that was by the sea, when they transgressed on the Sabbath. Their fish came to them on their Sabbath day openly, but on the day they did not observe the Sabbath, they did not come to them." (al-A'raf 7:163). Some of them desired fish, so a man would dig a hole and make a river for it to the sea. When the Sabbath came, the river would open, and the waves would come with the whales, hitting them until they threw them into the hole. The fish wanted to go out, but could not because of the lack of water in the river, so he stayed in it. When Sunday came, he caught it. The man began to grill the fish, and his neighbor smelled its smell, so he asked him and he told him, so he did as his neighbor did. When eating fish became widespread among them, their scholars said to them: Woe to you! You are only catching fish on Saturday, and it is not permissible for you! They said: We only caught it on Sunday when we caught it! The scholars said: No, but you caught it on the day you opened the water for it and it entered. They said: No! And they refused to stop. Some of those whom they forbade said to each other: Why do you preach to a people whom God is about to destroy or punish with a severe punishment? (al-A'raf 7:164), meaning: Why do you preach to them, when you preached to them and they did not obey you? Some of them said: An apology before your Lord, and perhaps they will fear God. (al-A'raf 7:164). When they refused, the Muslims said: By God, we will not live with you in one village. So they divided the village with a wall. The Muslims opened one door and the transgressors on the Sabbath opened another door, and David cursed them. So the Muslims went out from their door and the infidels from theirs. One day the Muslims went out and the infidels did not open their door. When they were slow to open their door, the Muslims climbed over the wall and saw that they were monkeys jumping on each other. So they opened it and they went into the land. That is what God Almighty said: But when they transgressed that which they were forbidden, We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' (al-A'raf 7:166). That is when He says: Those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus, the son of Mary. (al-Ma'idah 5:78), so they are the monkeys.

Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Those of you who transgressed on the Sabbath, We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: They were not transformed, rather it is a parable that God gave them, a parable that He gave them, like the donkey carrying books.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And you certainly knew those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: Their hearts were transformed, and they were not transformed into apes. Rather, it is a parable that God gave them, like the parable of a donkey carrying books. Abu Ja'far said: This statement that Mujahid said is a statement that contradicts the apparent meaning of what the Book of God indicates. That is because God informed in His Book that He made them into apes and pigs and worshipped false gods, just as He informed about them that they said to their Prophet, Show us God openly (An-Nisa': 153), and that God, the Most High, struck them with a stunner when they asked their Lord for that, and that they worshipped the calf, so He made their repentance to be killing themselves, and that they were commanded to enter the Holy Land, but they said to their Prophet, "Go, you and your Lord, and fight. Indeed, we are sitting right here" (al-Ma'idah 5:24), so He tested them with wandering. So it is the same for one who says: They were not transformed into monkeys, and He, the Most High, has informed us that He made monkeys and pigs out of them, and another who says: There was nothing of what God informed about the Children of Israel that they had of dissent against their prophets, and the punishments and penalties that God brought upon them. And whoever denies one of that and acknowledges another of it, he is asked for proof for his statement, and what he denies of that is opposed by what he acknowledged. Then he is asked to differentiate from a widespread report or a sound trace.

This is contrary to what Mujahid said, which is the saying of all the proofs that cannot be mistaken or lied about in what they transmitted, and they are agreed upon. And sufficient evidence of the corruption of a statement is their consensus on its error.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.'

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: So we said to them is: So we said to those who transgressed on the Sabbath, meaning on the Sabbath.

The root of the word Sabbath is calm and stillness in comfort and tranquility. That is why the sleeper is called Masboot sleeping because of his calm, stillness, and rest in his body, as God, the Most High, said: And We have made your sleep a rest (An-Naba': 9), meaning rest for your bodies. It is a noun derived from the saying: So-and-so slept on Saturday.

It has been said that it was called Sabbath because God, may He be glorified, finished creating all of His creation on Friday, the day before it.

His saying: Become despised apes, meaning: Become like that.

The disgraced is the banished and banished, just as the dog is disgraced. It is said of him: I disgraced him, I disgrace him, disgrace and humiliation, and he is disgraced, humiliation. He said: And it is said: I disgraced him, so he was disgraced and was disgraced. And from this is the saying of the rajaz poet:

Like a dog, if you tell him to go away, he will go away

Meaning: If you expel him, he will be expelled humiliated and submissive.

Likewise, the meaning of his saying: Be apes, despised, is: banished from goodness, humiliated and lowly, as Muhammad ibn Bashar told us, he said, Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his saying: Be apes, despised, he said: humiliated.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us, Abu Ahmad told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of a man, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told me, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: disgraced, he said: humiliated.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding his statement: Be apes, despised, meaning humiliated and subdued.

And it was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr bin Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Khasi'an, meaning humiliated.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And you certainly knew those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.'

It has seven issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath. "You have certainly known" means you have known their identities. It was also said: You have known their rulings. The difference between them is that knowledge is directed to the self of the named. And knowledge is directed to the conditions of the named. So if you say: I knew Zayd, what is meant is his person. And if you say: I knew Zayd, what is meant by it is knowledge of his conditions of virtue and deficiency. So according to the first, the verb takes one object, which is what Sibawayh said: You have certainly known means you have known. And according to the second, it takes two objects. Al-Akhfash narrated: And I have certainly known Zayd, although I did not know him. And in the revelation: You do not know them, God knows them. All of this means knowledge, so know. Those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath is the relative clause of those. And transgression, and it has been mentioned before.

Second: Al-Nasa'i narrated on the authority of Safwan bin Assal, who said:

A Jew said to his friend: Let us go to this prophet. His friend said to him: Do not say prophet if he heard you! He would have four eyes. So they came to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and asked him about nine clear signs. He said to them: Do not associate anything with God, do not steal, do not commit adultery, do not kill the soul that God has forbidden except by right, do not walk with an innocent person to the ruler, do not practice magic, do not consume usury, do not accuse a chaste woman, do not turn away on the day of battle, and you, the Jews in particular, must not transgress the Sabbath. So they kissed his hands and feet and said: We bear witness that you are a prophet. He said: What prevents you from following me?! They said: David prayed that there would always be a prophet among his descendants, and we fear that if we follow you, the Jews will kill us. Al-Tirmidhi narrated it and said: A good and authentic hadith. Its wording will come in Surat Subhan, God willing.

Third: On Saturday means on Saturday, and it is possible that he means on the day of Saturday. The first is the statement of Al-Hasan, that they took whales on it as a way of making it permissible. Ashhab bin Malik narrated: Ibn Ruman claimed that a man among them would take a thread and put a stake in it and throw it into the tail of the whale, and at the other end of the thread a peg and leave it like that until Sunday, then the people turned away when they saw that it was made not to be afflicted, until the hunting of whales increased and they walked with it in the markets, and the immoral people announced their hunting. Then a group arose and forbade and openly forbade and isolated themselves. It is said that those who forbade said: We will not live with you, so they divided the water skin by a wall. One day, those who forbade were sitting in their gatherings, and none of the aggressors came out. They said, The people have something to do with it. They went to the wall and looked, and saw that they were apes. They opened the door and entered upon them. The apes recognized their lineage from humans, but humans do not recognize their lineage from monkeys. So the apes would come to their human relatives, smell their clothes, and cry. He would say, Did we not forbid you? They would nod, Yes. Qatada said, "The young men became apes, and the old men became pigs. Only those who forbade were saved, and the rest of them perished." In Al-A'raf, there will be a statement by those who said that they were three groups. This is more correct than the statement by those who said that they did not split into two groups. And God knows best.

Saturday is taken from the word sabt which means to cut off. It was said that things were sabbathed on it and their creation was completed. It was also said that it is taken from the word sabut which means rest and relaxation.

Scholars differed about whether the transformed person can reproduce. There are two opinions. Al-Zajjaj said: Some people said that these monkeys may be from them. Judge Abu Bakr Al-Arabi chose this opinion. The majority said: The transformed person does not reproduce, and that monkeys, pigs, and others existed before that. Those whom God transformed perished and had no offspring left, because they were afflicted with wrath and punishment, so they had no resting place in this world after three days. Ibn Abbas said: No transformed person has ever lived more than three days, nor eaten, nor drunk, nor reproduced. Ibn Atiyyah said: It was narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and it is proven.

The transformed one does not reproduce, does not eat or drink, and does not live more than three days.

I said: This is the correct of the two opinions. As for what Ibn al-Arabi and others used as evidence for the correctness of the first opinion from his saying, may God bless him and grant him peace:

"A nation from the Children of Israel was lost. No one knows what it did. I see it as a mouse. Don't you see that when camel milk is placed for it, it does not drink it, but when sheep milk is placed for it, it drinks it?" Narrated by Abu Hurairah. Muslim also narrated the hadith of the lizard, on the authority of Abu Saeed and Jabir. Jabir said:

"A lizard was brought to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, but he refused to eat from it and said: 'I do not know, perhaps it is one of the horns that were transformed.' So ponder what follows. Ibn al-Arabi said: And in al-Bukhari on the authority of Amr ibn Maymun that he said:

"I saw during the pre-Islamic era a monkey that had committed adultery, so they stoned it, so I stoned it with them." It was recorded in some copies of Bukhari, but was omitted in others. It was recorded in the text of the hadith, had committed adultery, but this wording was omitted by some. Ibn al-Arabi said: If it is said: Is it as if the animals still had knowledge of the laws, so that they inherited them from their predecessors until the time of Amr? We say: Yes, that is how it was, because the Jews changed stoning, so God wanted to establish it among their transformed ones, so that it would be more effective as evidence against what they denied and changed, so that their books, rabbis, and transformed ones would bear witness against them, so that they would know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare, and He counts what they change and alter, and He establishes evidence against them from where they do not perceive, and He supports His Prophet, peace be upon him, while they are not supported.

I said: This is what he said about the rulings, and there is no proof in any of it. As for what he mentioned about the story of Amr, Al-Hamidi mentioned in the collection of the two Sahihs: Abu Masoud Al-Dimashqi narrated that Amr bin Maymun Al-Awdi has a story in the two Sahihs from the narration of Hisin from him, he said: I saw during the pre-Islamic era some monkeys, and a group of monkeys gathered around them and stoned them, so I stoned them with them. This is what Abu Masoud narrated, and he did not mention in which place Al-Bukhari included it in his book, so we searched for that and found it in some copies, not all of them, so it was mentioned in the book of the days of ignorance. And in the narration of Al-Nu'aymi from Al-Farbari there is nothing at all from this story about the monkeys, and perhaps it is one of the intrusions in Al-Bukhari's book. What Al-Bukhari said in Al-Tarikh Al-Kabir: Na'eem bin Hammad told me, Hisham told us from Abu Balj and Hisin from Amr bin Maymun, he said: I saw during the pre-Islamic era some monkeys, and a group of monkeys gathered around them and stoned them, so I stoned them with them. And it does not say that she committed adultery. If this narration is correct, then Al-Bukhari narrated it as evidence that Amr ibn Maymun lived during the pre-Islamic era and did not care about his assumptions that he assumed during the pre-Islamic era. Abu Omar mentioned in Al-Isti'ab that Amr ibn Maymun and that his kunya was Abu Abdullah, and he was counted among the great followers of Kufa. He is the one who saw stoning during the pre-Islamic era from monkeys, if that is correct, because his narrators are unknown. Al-Bukhari narrated it on the authority of Na'im on the authority of Hisham on the authority of Amr ibn Maymun Al-Awdi in an abbreviated form, who said: I saw monkeys committing adultery during the pre-Islamic era, so they stoned them - meaning the monkeys - so I stoned them with them. And Abbad ibn Al-Awwam narrated it on the authority of Hisham as Hisham narrated it in an abbreviated form. As for the story in its entirety, it revolves around Abd Al-Malik ibn Muslim on the authority of Isa ibn Hattan, and they are not among those who can be relied upon. According to the majority of scholars, this is reprehensible, attributing adultery to someone who is not accountable, and implementing the prescribed punishments on animals. If it were correct, then they would be from the jinn, because acts of worship are done by humans and jinn, not others. As for his saying, peace be upon him, in the hadith of Abu Hurairah: I do not see it as anything but a mouse, and about the monitor lizard: I do not know, perhaps it is one of the centuries that were transformed, and what was like it, it was only a suspicion and fear that the monitor lizard, the mouse, and others were among those that were transformed, and this was an intuition from him, peace be upon him, before it was revealed to him that God did not make offspring for the transformed, so when it was revealed to him, that fear was removed from him, and he knew that the monitor lizard and the mouse were not among those that were transformed, and at that time he informed us of his saying, peace be upon him, to the one who asked him about the monkeys and pigs.

Is it from what was transformed? He said: God did not destroy a people or punish a people and then make for them offspring, and the monkeys and pigs were there before that. This is a clear and correct text narrated by Abdullah bin Masoud, narrated by Muslim in the Book of Destiny. The texts confirmed that the monitor lizard ate in his presence and at his table and he did not deny it, so this indicates the correctness of what we mentioned. And God is our guide. It was narrated from Mujahid in the interpretation of this verse that their hearts were transformed, and their understandings were returned like the understandings of monkeys. No other commentator said this as far as I know. And God knows best.

God the Almighty said: So We said to them, 'Be apes.' Apes is the predicate of kana. "Disgraced" is an adjective. If you wish, you can make it a second predicate of kana, or a state of the pronoun in kuna. And its meaning is far away. It is said: I made him distant, "he was far away," or he was disgraced, meaning, I made him distant, so he was distant. God the Almighty said: The sight will return to you in a state of disgrace, meaning, far away. And His statement: Be disgraced therein, means, be distant with displeasure. Al-Kisa'i said: The man was disgraced, and I made him disgraceful. Khasi'u can mean someone who is humiliated and abject. It is said: Qam'u a man qaman, meaning he is the humiliated and abject. And qama'tuhu means I made him small and humiliated, so he is qami' on the pattern fa'il.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And you have certainly known, O group of Jews, what punishment was permissible for the people of the town that disobeyed the command of God and violated His covenant and agreement in what He took from them regarding the glorification of the Sabbath and carrying out His command, since it was permissible for them, so they tricked themselves into hunting whales on the Sabbath by placing for them snares, traps, and pools before the Sabbath. So when the Sabbath came, as was their custom in abundance, they clung to those traps and tricks, and they could not escape from them that day. So when night came, they seized them after the Sabbath had ended, and when they did that, God transformed them into the form of apes, which are most similar to humans in outward appearance, but are not truly human. So the actions and tricks of these people, since they were similar to the truth in appearance and contrary to it in essence, their punishment was of the same kind as their actions. This story is explained in detail in Surat Al-A'raf, where God Almighty says: "And ask them about the town that was by the sea, when they transgressed on the Sabbath, when their fish came to them on their Sabbath day, as is customary, and on a day when they did not observe the Sabbath. This is not how We will test them for what they used to do. The story in its entirety. Al-Suddi said: The people of this village are the people of Ayla, and so said Qatada, and we will quote the statements of the commentators there in detail, God willing, and He is trustworthy. And the Almighty's saying: So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abu Hudhayfah told us, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid. So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: Their hearts were transformed, and they were not transformed into apes. Rather, it is a parable that God struck: Like the example of a donkey carrying volumes. Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Al-Muthanna, on the authority of Abu Hudhayfah, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Umar Al-Bahili, on the authority of Abu Asim, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, and this is a good chain of transmission on the authority of Mujahid. A strange statement that contradicts the apparent meaning of the context in this place and elsewhere. God Almighty said: Say, 'Shall I inform you of those who are worse than that as a reward from God? Those whom God has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs.' And the slave of the tyrant "the verse, and Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas So We said to them, Be apes, despised, so God made them apes and pigs, so he claimed that the young men of the people became apes and the old women became pigs, and Shaiban Al-Nahwi said on the authority of Qatada So We said to them, Be apes, despised, so the people became howling apes with tails after they had been men and women, and Ata Al-Khurasani said: They were called, O people of the village, Be apes, despised, so those who forbade them would enter upon them and say, O so-and-so, did we not forbid you? They would say with their heads, Yes. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ali bin Al-Hussein told us, Abdullah bin Muhammad bin Rabi'ah told us in Al-Masiyyah, Muhammad bin Muslim told us, meaning Al-Ta'ifi, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Those who transgressed on the Sabbath were made into monkeys, then they perished, the transformation had no offspring, and Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: God transformed them into monkeys because of their disobedience. He says that they do not live on earth except for three days. He said: No transformed person has ever lived more than three days, nor did he eat or drink, nor did they reproduce. God created monkeys, pigs, and all of creation in the six days that God mentioned in His Book. So He transformed these people into the form of monkeys.

And thus He does with whomever He wills as He wills, and transforms them as He wills. Abu Ja'far said, on the authority of al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement, Be apes, despised, he said: He means humiliated and subdued. And something similar was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Qatadah, al-Rabi', and Abu Malik. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Dawud ibn Abi al-Husayn on the authority of 'Ikrimah, who said: Ibn 'Abbas said: God only imposed on the Children of Israel the day that He imposed on you in your festival, Friday, but they disobeyed it for the Sabbath, so they glorified it and abandoned what they were commanded to do. So when they refused to adhere to the Sabbath, God tested them on it, and forbade them what He had permitted them on other days. They were in a village between Aylah and al-Tur, called Madyan, so God forbade them on the Sabbath the hunting of whales. And they ate it, and when it was Saturday, they would come to them in a row to the shore of their sea, until when Saturday passed, they would go and they would not see a small or large whale, until when Saturday came, they would come in a row, until when Saturday passed, they would go and they were like that, until a long time passed and they were drawn to the whales. A man from among them took a whale secretly on Saturday, tied it with a thread, then sent it into the water and tied a peg to the shore and tied it up, then left it. When the next day came, he took it, meaning I did not take it on Saturday, so he went with it and ate it, until when it was the next Saturday, he did the same thing again, and the people smelled the whales, so the people of the village said: By God, we have smelled the whales, then they found out what that man had done, he said: So they did as he had done, and they did it secretly for a long time, and God did not hasten the punishment upon them until they hunted it openly and sold it in the markets, so a group of them from the people of the rest said: Woe to you, fear God and forbade them from what they were doing, so another group said: The whales did not eat, nor did they forbid the people from what they did, Why do you preach to a people whom God is about to destroy or punish with a severe punishment? They said, An excuse before your Lord, because of our displeasure with their actions, and perhaps they will fear God. Ibn Abbas said: While they were like that, the rest of them were in their clubs and mosques, and they missed the people and did not see them. He said: Some of them said to each other: The people have a matter, so look at what it is. So they went to look in their homes, and found them locked on them. They had entered them at night and locked them on themselves as people lock themselves on themselves, and they became monkeys in them, and they know a man by his eye and he is an ape, and a woman and she is an ape, and a boy by his eye and he is an ape. He said: Ibn Abbas said: Had it not been for what God mentioned that He saved those who forbade evil, God would have destroyed all of them. He said: It is the village about which God, the Most High, said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, And ask them about the village that was by the sea, the verse, and Ad-Dahhak narrated something similar to this from Ibn Abbas, and he said: Al-Suddi said in his saying, And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We

said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: They are the people of Ayla, which is the village that was by the sea. When it was the Sabbath, and God had forbidden the Jews to do anything on the Sabbath, there was no whale in the sea except that it came out until they stuck their trunks out of the water. When it was Sunday, the time of the bottom of the sea, nothing was seen of them until it was the Sabbath. This is what God Almighty said, "And ask them about the village that was by the sea, when they transgressed on the Sabbath. When their fish came to them on their Sabbath day as a law, and on the day they did not observe the Sabbath, they did not come to them." Some of them desired fish, so a man would dig a hole and make a river for it to the sea. When it was the Sabbath, the river would open and the waves would come with the whales, hitting them until they threw them into the hole. The whale wanted to come out but could not because of the small amount of water in the river, so it would stay in it. When it was Sunday, it would come and take it. The man would grill the fish, and his neighbor would smell its smell, so he would ask him. He told him, and he did as his neighbor did until eating fish became widespread among them. Their scholars said to them: Woe to you! You only fish on the Sabbath, and it is not permissible for you. They said: We only caught it on Sunday when we caught it. The jurists said: No, but you caught it on the day you opened the water for it and it entered. He said: And they were overcome by not desisting. Some of those who forbade them said to each other: Why do you preach to a people whom God will destroy or punish with a severe punishment? He said: Why did you preach to them when you preached to them and they did not obey you? Some of them said: An apology to your Lord, and perhaps they will fear God. When they refused, the Muslims said: By God, we will not live with you in one village. So they divided the village with a wall, and the Muslims opened a door and the transgressors on the Sabbath opened a door, and David, peace be upon him, cursed them. So the Muslims went out from their door, and the infidels from their door. So the Muslims went out one day and the infidels did not open their door. When they were slow to approach them, the Muslims climbed over the wall and saw that they were monkeys jumping on each other. So they opened up to them and they went into the land, and that is the saying of God the Most High: But when they transgressed that which they were forbidden, We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' That is when He says, Those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus, the son of Mary. The verse: They are the apes I said The purpose of this context about these imams is to clarify the opposite of what Mujahid, may God have mercy on him, went to, that their transformation was only moral and not formal, but the correct thing is that it is moral and formal, and God knows best. And the saying of God the Most High: So We made it an example. Some of them said: The pronoun in So We made it an example refers to the apes, and it was said to the whales, and it was said to the punishment, and it was said to the village, as Ibn Jarir narrated, and the correct thing is that the pronoun refers to the village, meaning that God made this village, and what is meant is its people, because of their transgression on their Sabbath, an example. That is, We punished them with a punishment and made it an example, as God said about Pharaoh, So God seized him with the example of the Hereafter and the first. And the saying of God the Most High: For what was before it and what was behind it, meaning of the villages, he said: Ibn Abbas: Meaning, We made it, with the punishment We imposed on it, a lesson for the surrounding towns, as God Almighty said: And We have certainly destroyed the towns around you, and We have repeated the signs that perhaps they will return. From this is the saying of God Almighty: Have they not seen that We come to the land, reducing it from its borders? The verse, according to one of the sayings, is in place, as Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, for the towns before it and the towns behind it, so what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it of the towns. And Saeed ibn Jubayr said the same: for what is before it and what is behind it, he said: whoever is present with it from the people on that day. And it was narrated on the authority of Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, Qatadah and Atiyah al-Awfi: We made it a warning to those before it, he said: what came before it of the past regarding the Sabbath. And Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' and Atiyah said: and what came after it for the people who remained after them, the Children of Israel, to do like their work. And these people used to say: what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it in time. And this is correct with respect to those who come after them from the people, that the people of that town will be a lesson for them. As for those who... The people who came before them, so how can this statement be interpreted as a lesson for those who came before them? Perhaps no one would say this after imagining it, so it is clear that what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it in place, which is the villages around it, as Ibn Abbas and Saeed bin Jubair said, and God knows best. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, So We made it a warning to those before it and those after it, meaning a punishment for their sins. Ibn Abi Hatim said: It was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Al-Farra' and Ibn Atiyah, for what is before it of the sins of the people and what is behind it, for those who do after it like those sins. Al-Razi narrated three sayings: The first: What is meant by what is before it and what is behind it, is the villages that preceded it with what they have of knowledge of its report of the previous books and what comes after it. The second: What is meant by that is the villages and nations that are present with it. The third: That the Almighty made it a punishment for all that they committed before and after this act, and this is the saying of Al-Hasan I said and the most correct of the sayings is what is meant by what is before it and what is behind it, from the villages in its presence, to inform them of its report and what happened to it, as the Almighty said: And We have destroyed the villages around you verse, and the Almighty said: And those who disbelieve will continue to be struck by what they have done verse, and the Almighty said: Do they not see that We come to the land, reducing it from its borders? So He made them a lesson and a punishment for those in their time, and an admonition for those who come after them with the continuous report from them, and for this reason He said: And an admonition for the righteous. And the Almighty's saying: And an admonition for the righteous Muhammad bin Ishaq said, on the authority of Dawud bin Al-Hussain, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And an admonition for the righteous those after them until the Day of Resurrection, and Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: And an admonition for the righteous after them, so they fear the vengeance of God and beware of it, and Al-Suddi and Atiyah Al-Awfi said: And an admonition for the righteous. He said, "The nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'I said,' what is meant by admonition here is the deterrent, that is, we made the severity and punishment that we made permissible for these people in return for what they committed of God's prohibitions and the tricks they used, so let the righteous beware of what they did lest what befell them befall them, as Imam Abu Abdullah bin Battah said: Ahmad bin Muhammad bin Muslim told us, Al-Hasan bin Muhammad bin Al-Sabah Al-Za'farani told us, Yazid bin Harun told us, Muhammad bin Umar told us, on the authority of Abu Salamah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah: that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not commit what the Jews committed, so that you make permissible God's prohibitions by the slightest trick." This is a good chain of transmission, and this Ahmad bin Muhammad bin Muslim, and the trustworthy Hafiz Abu Bakr Al-Baghdadi, and the rest of his men are well-known according to the criteria of the Sahih, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

65- And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, Be apes, despised. Sabbath in the original language means to cut off, because things were completed on it and work was stopped. It was said that it is taken from the Sabbath, which is rest and ease. Al-Kashshaf said: Sabbath is the source of the Jews' Sabbath: if they glorified the Sabbath, it ended. A group of commentators mentioned that the Jews split into two groups: One group transgressed on the Sabbath: that is, they went beyond what God had commanded them to do in terms of work on it, so they caught the fish that God had forbidden them to catch on it. The other group split into two groups: One group declared the prohibition openly and isolated themselves, and another group did not agree with the transgressors or fish with them, but they sat with them and did not declare the prohibition openly or isolate themselves from them, so God transformed them all and only the first group was saved. This is one of the trials with which God tested those who were excessively arrogant and defied their prophets. They continued to show in every place their foolishness, foolishness and stubbornness, a type of oppression and a type of affectation. The whales were on the Sabbath, as God the Almighty described in His saying: "When their fish came to them on their Sabbath day as a law, but on a day when they did not observe the Sabbath, they did not come to them. Thus do We test them." So they devised a plan to catch them, and they dug holes and cut canals, so the whales would enter them on the Sabbath and they would catch them on Sunday. However, they did not benefit from this false plan. The loser is the one who is banished. It is said: I banished him, so he was banished, and he was banished and he was banished: I sent him away, so he was far away. From this is the saying of God the Almighty: The sight will return to you in a state of disgrace, meaning far away. And His saying: Be humiliated therein, meaning distance yourselves from the distance of wrath. The loser can mean the one who is humiliated. What is meant here is: Be between the fate of the forms of monkeys, while being expelled and humiliated. Monkeys is the report of the universe. And humiliated is another report. It was said: It is an attribute of monkeys, but the first is more apparent.

65. The Almighty said: "And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath" meaning they crossed the limit. The root of the word Sabbath is to cut off. It was said that the Sabbath was named that because God Almighty cut off creation on it, and it was said that the Jews were ordered to cut off work on it. The story is that they were in the time of David, peace be upon him, in a land called Ayla. God forbade them from fishing on the Sabbath. So when the Sabbath came, there was no whale left in the sea except that they gathered there until they stuck their trunks out of the water for safety, so that the water could not be seen due to their large number. Then when the Sabbath passed, they drowned and the sea dried up, so that nothing of them could be seen. That is what the Almighty said: "When their fish came to them on their Sabbath day, as a rule, and on the day they did not observe the Sabbath, they did not come to them" 163-Al-A'raf.

Then Satan whispered to them and said: You were only forbidden from taking it on the Sabbath. So men dug basins around the sea and opened rivers from them to it. When it was Friday evening, they opened those rivers, and the waves brought the whales to the basins, and they were unable to get out because of their great depth and little water. When it was Sunday, they took them. It was said: They used to drive the whales to the basins on the Sabbath and not take them, then they took them on the Sunday. It was said: They used to set up traps and people on the Friday and take them out on the Sunday. They did that for a time and no punishment was inflicted on them, so they dared to commit the sin and said: We do not see the Sabbath except that it has been made permissible for us. So they took and ate and salted and sold and bought and their wealth increased. When they did that, the people of the village, who were about seventy thousand, became three classes: a class that held back and forbade, a class that held back and did not forbid, and a class that violated the sanctity. The forbidding ones were twelve thousand. When the criminals refused to accept their advice, they said: By

God, no. They lived in one village, so they divided the village with a wall and crossed that for two years, so David, peace be upon him, cursed them, and God became angry with them for their insistence on disobedience. One day, the forbidding ones went out of their door, and none of the criminals went out, and they did not open their door. When they were slow, they climbed over the wall on them, and behold, they were all monkeys with tails, cooperating. Qatada said: The young men became monkeys and the old men became pigs, and they remained for three days, then they perished, and the transformation did not remain for three days, and they did not reproduce.

God Almighty said: So We said to them, 'Be apes,' a command to transform and create. Despised, banished and expelled. It was said: There is an inversion of the verb, meaning, be despised apes, and that is why He did not say despised. Despised means expelled and banished. It is intransitive and transitive. It is said: I despised him, despised, so he was despised, like: I returned him, returning, returning.

65- "And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath. The lam is an oath, and the Sabbath is the source of your saying, The Jews observed the Sabbath" if you glorified the Sabbath, and its origin is the cutting off. They were ordered to set it aside for worship, so some of them transgressed on it in the time of David, peace be upon him, and they occupied themselves with fishing, and that is because they lived in a village on the coast called Ayla, and if it was the Sabbath, there was not a whale left in the sea except that it came there and stuck out its trunk, and when it passed, it dispersed, so they dug basins and opened canals to it, and the whales would enter them on the Sabbath and they would catch them on Sunday. "So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised,' combining the image of apes with despised, meaning smallness and expulsion. Mujahid said that their images were not transformed, but their hearts. So they were likened to apes as they were likened to a donkey in the Almighty's saying: "Like a donkey carrying volumes." His saying, Be, is not a command, since they have no power over it. Rather, what is meant by it is the speed of their becoming, and that they became like that as He intended for them. It was read apes with a fatha on the qaf and a kasra on the ra', and despised without a hamza.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:66

So We made it a deterrent for those before it and those after it and an admonition for the righteous.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

So We made it that is, that punishment as a deterrent a lesson preventing them from committing what they did for those before it and those after it that is, the nations in its time or after it and an admonition for those who fear God and they were singled out for mention because they are the ones who benefit, unlike others.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of the ha' and the alif in His statement: So We made it, and what do they refer to? Two sayings were narrated on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas regarding it: One of them is what Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said, 'Uthman ibn Sa'id narrated to us, he said, Bishr ibn 'Amara narrated to us, he said, Abu Rawq narrated to us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: So We made it, so We made that punishment, which is the transformation, a punishment.

The ha and the alif in his saying: So we made it according to Ibn Abbas's statement are a metaphor for transformation, and it is an action of those whom God transformed.

The meaning of the statement according to this interpretation is: So We said to them: Be apes, despised, so they became apes, transformed. So We made it, so We made Our punishment and their transformation, a deterrent to those before it and those after it and an admonition to the righteous. The other statement from the two statements of Ibn Abbas, what Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: So We made it, meaning the whales.

According to this statement, the ha and the alif are from the mention of whales, and they were not mentioned. But since there was an indication in the report, he used a metaphor for mentioning them. The indication for that is his statement: And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath.

Others said: So we made the village whose people transgressed on the Sabbath. So the ha and the alif in these are a metaphor for the village of the people who were transformed.

Others said: The meaning of this is that we made the monkeys who were transformed a punishment for those before them and those after them, so they made the ha' and the alif a metaphor for the monkeys.

Others said: So We made it, meaning: So We made the nation that transgressed on the Sabbath an example.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: as a punishment.

And punishment is a noun derived from the saying: So-and-so punished so-and-so severely. The root of punishment is punishment, as Adi bin Zaid Al-Abbadi said:

The misguided one is not displeased with what the servant can bear, nor is there any denial in his punishment.

And similar to what we said about that, the report was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr bin Amara told us, he said, Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: A punishment means: a punishment.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told me, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', regarding his statement: So We made it a punishment, meaning a punishment.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: For what is before it and what is behind it.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of that. Some of them said what Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said: Uthman bin Sa'id narrated to us, he said: Bishr bin 'Amara narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: When it was before it means: so that those who came after them would beware of My punishment. And what was behind it means: those who had remained with them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': For what was before it and what was behind it, for what was left for them of sins, and what was behind it, meaning a lesson for those of the people who remained.

Others said: Ibn Hamid told me, he said, Salamah told us, he said, Ibn Ishaq told me, on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn, on the authority of Ikrimah, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, he said, Ibn Abbas said: So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it, meaning of the villages.

Others said: Bishr ibn Muadh narrated to us, he said: Yazid narrated to us, he said: Saeed narrated to us, on the authority of Qatada, God said: So We made it a deterrent for those before it of the sins of the people and those after it, meaning for the whales that they had killed.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: for what is before it, of its sins, and what is behind it, of the whales.

Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God, the Most High: For what was before it, what happened of their sins until they were destroyed by it. Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: As a punishment for what was before it and what came after it, he said: Before it, what happened of their sins, and what came after it, their sins by which they were destroyed.

So We made it a deterrent for those before it and those after it and an admonition for the righteous.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly, except that he said: And what was behind it, their sin for which they were destroyed.

Others said: Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it. He said: As for what was before it, it is what came before of their deeds, and what came after it, it is whoever came after them from the nations, that they would disobey and God would do the same to them.

Others said: Ibn Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, his statement: So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it, meaning the whales, So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it, of the sins that they committed before the whales, and what they committed after the whales. So that is what He said: what was before it and what was after it.

Abu Ja'far said: The most appropriate of these interpretations for the interpretation of the verse is what Ad-Dahhak narrated from Ibn `Abbas. This is because we have described that the ha' and alif in His statement, So We made it a deterrent, are more appropriate for it to be from the mention of the punishment and the transformation that the people were transformed into, than for it to be from the mention of something else. This is because God, the Most High, warns His creation of His wrath and power, thereby frightening them. And in His, the Most High, clarifying with His statement, a deterrent, that He meant by it the punishment that He inflicted upon the people, what is known that He meant by His statement, So We made it a deterrent for those before it and those after it, so We made Our punishment that We inflicted upon them a punishment for those before it and those after it, without any other meanings. And since the ha' and alif are more appropriate for it to be from the mention of the transformation and the punishment, are more appropriate for it to be from the mention of something else? Likewise, the pronoun in his saying: for what was before it and what was behind it from the ha' and the alif: it is more appropriate that it be from the mention of the ha' and the alif that are in his saying: So we made it, than it is from the mention of something else.

The interpretation of the statement, since the matter was as we described: So We said to them, Be apes, despised. So We made Our punishment for them a punishment for what came before it of their previous sins, by Our transforming them and Our punishment for them and for what came after Our punishment for them of similar sins: that a worker would act upon it, and they would be transformed like what they were transformed, and that what happened to them would happen, as a warning from God, the Most High, to His servants: that they would do from His sins like what the transformed ones did, and they would be punished with their punishment.

As for the one who said in his interpretation of that: So We made it, meaning the whales, as a punishment for the sins of the people before the whales and for their sins after them, then this is further from the conclusion. That is because the whales were not mentioned, so it is said: So We made it. If someone thinks that this is permissible even if the whales were not mentioned because the Arabs used a euphemism for the name and it was not mentioned, then even if that is the case, it is not permissible to leave the concept from the apparent meaning of the Book and what is understood by it apparent in the address and revelation for an inner meaning that is not indicated by the apparent meaning of the revelation, nor is there any transmitted report from the Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, nor is there any widespread consensus in it as evidence.

As for the interpretation of those who interpreted that: what is before it of the villages and what is behind it, then one should look at the interpretation of those who interpreted that: what is before the whales and what is behind them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And an admonition.

And the sermon, is a noun derived from the saying: I preached to the man, I preached to him, if I reminded him.

The interpretation of the verse: So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it and a reminder to the righteous, so that they may learn from it, take heed, and remember by it, as:

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr bin Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And an admonition meaning: And a reminder and a lesson for the righteous.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: for the righteous.

As for the righteous, they are those who fear God by performing His obligations and avoiding His sins, as Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr bin Amara told us, he said, Abu Rawq told us, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And an admonition for the righteous, meaning: for the believers who fear polytheism and act in obedience to Me.

So the Most High made the punishment that He imposed on those who transgressed on the Sabbath a lesson for the righteous in particular, and a warning for the believers, not for the disbelievers, until the Day of Resurrection, like what Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, he said, Ibn Ishaq told me, on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn, on the authority of Ikrimah, the freed slave of Ibn Abbas, on the authority of Abdullah ibn Abbas, regarding His statement: And a lesson for the righteous, until the Day of Resurrection.

Bishr ibn Muadh told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: And an admonition for the righteous, meaning: after them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, similarly.

Musa told us, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: As for an admonition for the righteous, they are the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi': And an admonition for the righteous, he said: So it was an admonition for the righteous in particular.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hasan told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, regarding his statement: And an admonition for the righteous, meaning for those who come after them.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: So We made it a deterrent to those before it and those after it and an admonition to the righteous.

God the Almighty said: So We made it a deterrent is in the accusative case as the second object. There are many sayings about what is made a deterrent. It was said: the punishment. It was said: the village, since the meaning of the speech requires it. It was said: the nation that was transformed. It was said: the whales, and there is some distance in it. Deterrence and punishment. Deterrence and deterrence are chains. Chains are called chains because they are used to deter, i.e., prevent. The heavy bridle is called nakal and nakal, because the animal is prevented by it. Nakal from the matter is yankal, and nakal yankal if he refuses. And the punishment is to strike the enemies with a punishment that deters them from behind, i.e., makes them cowardly. Al-Azhari said: The punishment is the penalty. Ibn Duraid: The thing that is used to deter a person, he said:

Throw a stick at their necks

His saying: What was before it Ibn Abbas and Al-Suddi said: What was before the transformation was what came before it of the sins of the people. And what was behind it for those who commit similar sins after it. Al-Farra' said: The transformation was made a punishment for what had passed of sins, and for what would be done after it, so that they would fear transformation because of their sins. Ibn Atiyyah said: This is a good statement, and the two pronouns refer to punishment. Al-Hakam narrated on the authority of Mujahid on the authority of Ibn Abbas: for those who were present with them and for those who come after them. An-Nahhas chose it, and he said: It is more similar to the meaning, and God knows best. Ibn Abbas also said: What was before it and what was behind it of the villages. Qatada said: What was before it and what was behind it of their sins, and what was behind it of hunting whales.

The Almighty's saying: And an admonition for the righteous is in apposition to punishment, and its weight is maf'ala from it'aaz and insajdah. Admonition means intimidation. Admonition is the noun. Al-Khalil said: Admonition is reminding of goodness in what softens the heart. Al-Mawardi said: He singled out the righteous even though it was an admonition for the worldly people because they are unique in it, and not the obstinate disbelievers. Ibn Atiyyah said: The wording includes every righteous person from every nation. Al-Zajjaj said: And an admonition for the righteous for the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, lest they violate the sacred things of God Almighty that He forbade them from, lest what happened to the Sabbath-breakers happened to them when they violated God's sacred things on their Sabbath.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And you have certainly known, O group of Jews, what punishment was permissible for the people of the town that disobeyed the command of God and violated His covenant and agreement in what He took from them regarding the glorification of the Sabbath and carrying out His command, since it was permissible for them, so they tricked themselves into hunting whales on the Sabbath by placing for them snares, traps, and pools before the Sabbath. So when the Sabbath came, as was their custom in abundance, they clung to those traps and tricks, and they could not escape from them that day. So when night came, they seized them after the Sabbath had ended, and when they did that, God transformed them into the form of apes, which are most similar to humans in outward appearance, but are not truly human. So the actions and tricks of these people, since they were similar to the truth in appearance and contrary to it in essence, their punishment was of the same kind as their actions. This story is explained in detail in Surat Al-A'raf, where God Almighty says: "And ask them about the town that was by the sea, when they transgressed on the Sabbath, when their fish came to them on their Sabbath day, as is customary, and on a day when they did not observe the Sabbath. This is not how We will test them for what they used to do. The story in its entirety. Al-Suddi said: The people of this village are the people of Ayla, and so said Qatada, and we will quote the statements of the commentators there in detail, God willing, and He is trustworthy. And the Almighty's saying: So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Abu Hudhayfah told us, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid. So We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: Their hearts were transformed, and they were not transformed into apes. Rather, it is a parable that God struck: Like the example of a donkey carrying volumes. Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Al-Muthanna, on the authority of Abu Hudhayfah, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Umar Al-Bahili, on the authority of Abu Asim, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, and this is a good chain of transmission on the authority of Mujahid. A strange statement that contradicts the apparent meaning of the context in this place and elsewhere. God Almighty said: Say, 'Shall I inform you of those who are worse than that as a reward from God? Those whom God has cursed and with whom He became angry and made of them apes and pigs.' And the slave of the tyrant "the verse, and Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas So We said to them, Be apes, despised, so God made them apes and pigs, so he claimed that the young men of the people became apes and the old women became pigs, and Shaiban Al-Nahwi said on the authority of Qatada So We said to them, Be apes, despised, so the people became howling apes with tails after they had been men and women, and Ata Al-Khurasani said: They were called, O people of the village, Be apes, despised, so those who forbade them would enter upon them and say, O so-and-so, did we not forbid you? They would say with their heads, Yes. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ali bin Al-Hussein told us, Abdullah bin Muhammad bin Rabi'ah told us in Al-Masiyyah, Muhammad bin Muslim told us, meaning Al-Ta'ifi, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Those who transgressed on the Sabbath were made into monkeys, then they perished, the transformation had no offspring, and Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: God transformed them into monkeys because of their disobedience. He says that they do not live on earth except for three days. He said: No transformed person has ever lived more than three days, nor did he eat or drink, nor did they reproduce. God created monkeys, pigs, and all of creation in the six days that God mentioned in His Book. So He transformed these people into the form of monkeys. And thus He does with whomever He wills as He wills, and transforms them as He wills. Abu Ja'far said, on the authority of al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu al-'Aliyah, regarding His statement, Be apes, despised, he said: He means humiliated and subdued. And something similar was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Qatadah, al-Rabi', and Abu Malik. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Dawud ibn Abi al-Husayn on the authority of 'Ikrimah, who said: Ibn 'Abbas said: God only imposed on the Children of Israel the day that He imposed on you in your festival, Friday, but they disobeyed it for the Sabbath, so they glorified it and abandoned what they were commanded to do. So when they refused to adhere to the Sabbath, God tested them on it, and forbade them what He had permitted them on other days. They were in a village between Aylah and al-Tur, called Madyan, so God forbade them on the Sabbath the hunting of whales. And they ate it, and when it was Saturday, they would come to them in a row to the shore of their sea, until when Saturday passed, they would go and they would not see a small or large whale, until when Saturday came, they would come in a row, until when Saturday passed, they would go and they were like that, until a long time passed and they were drawn to the whales. A man from among them took a whale secretly on Saturday, tied it with a thread, then sent it into the water and tied a peg to the shore and tied it up, then left it. When the next day came, he took it, meaning I did not take it on Saturday, so he went with it and ate it, until when it was the next Saturday, he did the same thing again, and the people smelled the whales, so the people of the village said: By God, we have smelled the whales, then they found out what that man had done, he said: So they did as he had done, and they did it secretly for a long time, and God did not hasten the punishment upon them until they hunted it openly and sold it in the markets, so a group of them from the people of the rest said: Woe to you, fear God and forbade them from what they were doing, so another group said: The whales did not eat, nor did they forbid the people from what they did, Why do you preach to a people whom God is about to destroy or punish with a severe punishment? They said, An excuse before your Lord, because of our displeasure with their actions, and perhaps they will fear God. Ibn Abbas said: While they were like that, the rest of them were in their clubs and mosques, and they missed the people and did not see them. He said: Some of them said to each other: The people have a matter, so look at what it is. So they went to look in their homes, and found them locked on them. They had entered them at night and locked them on themselves as people lock themselves on themselves, and they became monkeys in them, and they know a man by his eye and he is an ape, and a woman and she is an ape, and a boy by his eye and he is an ape. He said: Ibn Abbas said: Had it not been for what God mentioned that He saved those who forbade evil, God would have destroyed all of them. He said: It is the village about which God, the Most High, said to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, And ask them about the village that was by the sea, the verse, and Ad-Dahhak narrated something similar to this from Ibn Abbas, and he said: Al-Suddi said in his saying, And you have certainly known those among you who transgressed on the Sabbath, so We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' He said: They are the people of Ayla, which is the village that was by the sea. When it was the Sabbath, and God had forbidden the Jews to do anything on the Sabbath, there was no whale in the sea except that it came out until they stuck their trunks out of the water. When it was Sunday, the time of the bottom of the sea, nothing was seen of them until it was the Sabbath. This is what God Almighty said, "And ask them about the village that was by the sea, when they transgressed on the Sabbath. When their fish came to them on their Sabbath day as a law, and on the day they did not observe the Sabbath, they did not come to them." Some of them desired fish, so a man would dig a hole and make a river for it to the sea. When it was the Sabbath, the river would open and the waves would come with the whales, hitting them until they threw them into the hole. The whale wanted to come out but could not because of the small amount of water in the river, so it would stay in it. When it was Sunday, it would come and take it. The man would grill the fish, and his neighbor would smell its smell, so he would ask him. He told him, and he did as his neighbor did until eating fish became widespread among them. Their scholars said to them: Woe to you! You only fish on the Sabbath, and it is not permissible for you. They said: We only caught it on Sunday when we caught it. The jurists said: No, but you caught it on the day you opened the water for it and it entered. He said: And they were overcome by not desisting. Some of those who forbade them said to each other: Why do you preach to a people whom God will destroy or punish with a severe punishment? He said: Why did you preach to them when you preached to them and they did not obey you? Some of them said: An apology to your Lord, and perhaps they will fear God. When they refused, the Muslims said: By God, we will not live with you in one village. So they divided the village with a wall, and the Muslims opened a door and the transgressors on the Sabbath opened a door, and David, peace be upon him, cursed them. So the Muslims went out from their door, and the infidels from their door. So the Muslims went out one day and the infidels did not open their door. When they were slow to approach them, the Muslims climbed over the wall and saw that they were monkeys jumping on each other. So they opened up to them and they went into the land, and that is the saying of God the Most High: But when they transgressed that which they were forbidden, We said to them, 'Be apes, despised.' That is when He says, Those who disbelieved among the Children of Israel were cursed by the tongue of David and Jesus, the son of Mary. The verse: They are the apes I said The purpose of this context about these imams is to clarify the opposite of what Mujahid, may God have mercy on him, went to, that their transformation was only moral and not formal, but the correct thing is that it is moral and formal, and God knows best. And the saying of God the Most High: So We made it an example. Some of them said: The pronoun in So We made it an example refers to the apes, and it was said to the whales, and it was said to the punishment, and it was said to the village, as Ibn Jarir narrated, and the correct thing is that the pronoun refers to the village, meaning that God made this village, and what is meant is its people, because of their transgression on their Sabbath, an example. That is, We punished them with a punishment and made it an example, as God said about Pharaoh, So God seized him with the example of the Hereafter and the first. And the saying of God the Most High: For what was before it and what was behind it, meaning of the villages, he said: Ibn Abbas: Meaning, We made it, with the punishment We imposed on it, a lesson for the surrounding towns, as God Almighty said: And We have certainly destroyed the towns around you, and We have repeated the signs that perhaps they will return. From this is the saying of God Almighty: Have they not seen that We come to the land, reducing it from its borders? The verse, according to one of the sayings, is in place, as Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Dawud ibn al-Husayn on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, for the towns before it and the towns behind it, so what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it of the towns. And Saeed ibn Jubayr said the same: for what is before it and what is behind it, he said: whoever is present with it from the people on that day. And it was narrated on the authority of Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, Qatadah and Atiyah al-Awfi: We made it a warning to those before it, he said: what came before it of the past regarding the Sabbath. And Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' and Atiyah said: and what came after it for the people who remained after them, the Children of Israel, to do like their work. And these people used to say: what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it in time. And this is correct with respect to those who come after them from the people, that the people of that town will be a lesson for them. As for those who... The people who came before them, so how can this statement be interpreted as a lesson for those who came before them? Perhaps no one would say this after imagining it, so it is clear that what is meant is what is before it and what is behind it in place, which is the villages around it, as Ibn Abbas and Saeed bin Jubair said, and God knows best. Abu Jaafar Al-Razi said, on the authority of Al-Rabi' bin Anas, on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, So We made it a warning to those before it and those after it, meaning a punishment for their sins. Ibn Abi Hatim said: It was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Al-Suddi, Al-Farra' and Ibn Atiyah, for what is before it of the sins of the people and what is behind it, for those who do after it like those sins. Al-Razi narrated three sayings: The first: What is meant by what is before it and what is behind it, is the villages that preceded it with what they have of knowledge of its report of the previous books and what comes after it. The second: What is meant by that is the villages and nations that are present with it. The third: That the Almighty made it a punishment for all that they committed before and after this act, and this is the saying of Al-Hasan I said and the most correct of the sayings is what is meant by what is before it and what is behind it, from the villages in its presence, to inform them of its report and what happened to it, as the Almighty said: And We have destroyed the villages around you verse, and the Almighty said: And those who disbelieve will continue to be struck by what they have done verse, and the Almighty said: Do they not see that We come to the land, reducing it from its borders? So He made them a lesson and a punishment for those in their time, and an admonition for those who come after them with the continuous report from them, and for this reason He said: And an admonition for the righteous. And the Almighty's saying: And an admonition for the righteous Muhammad bin Ishaq said, on the authority of Dawud bin Al-Hussain, on the authority of Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And an admonition for the righteous those after them until the Day of Resurrection, and Al-Hasan and Qatadah said: And an admonition for the righteous after them, so they fear the vengeance of God and beware of it, and Al-Suddi and Atiyah Al-Awfi said: And an admonition for the righteous. He said, "The nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'I said,' what is meant by admonition here is the deterrent, that is, we made the severity and punishment that we made permissible for these people in return for what they committed of God's prohibitions and the tricks they used, so let the righteous beware of what they did lest what befell them befell them, as Imam Abu Abdullah bin Battah said: Ahmad bin Muhammad bin Muslim told us, Al-Hasan bin Muhammad bin Al-Sabah Al-Za'farani told us, Yazid bin Harun told us, Muhammad bin Umar told us, on the authority of Abu Salamah, on the authority of Abu Hurairah: that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Do not commit what the Jews committed, so that you make permissible God's prohibitions by the slightest trick." This is a good chain of transmission, and this Ahmad bin Muhammad bin Muslim, and the trustworthy Hafiz Abu Bakr Al-Baghdadi, and the rest of his men are well-known according to the criteria of the Sahih, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

There is a difference of opinion regarding the reference of the pronoun in His statement: 66- So We made it and in His statement: For what was before it and what was behind it, so it was said: the punishment, and it was said: the nation, and it was said: the village, and it was said: the monkeys, and it was said: the whales, and the first is more apparent. And punishment: deterrence and punishment, and punishment: the fetter because it prevents its owner, and it is said: for the bridle of the animal Nakl because it prevents it, and the sermon is taken from admonition and deterrence, and sermon: intimidation. Al-Khalil said: sermon is reminding of good. Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Abbas, who said: At-Tur is the mountain on which the Torah was revealed, and the Children of Israel were below it. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar from Qatada. Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Mardawayh narrated from Ibn Abbas, who said: At-Tur is what grows from the mountains, and what does not grow is not At-Tur. Ibn Jarir narrated from him regarding his statement: Take what We have given you with strength, he said: That is, be serious. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: And remember what is in it, he said: Read what is in the Torah and act upon it. Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Jarir narrated from Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: That you may become righteous, he said: That you may desist from what you are upon. Ibn Jarir narrated from him, he said: And you have certainly known, meaning you have recognized, that they transgressed, meaning: they dared to fish on the Sabbath, so God transformed them into apes because of their disobedience. No Messiah has ever lived more than three days, and he did not eat or drink or reproduce. Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated from him, he said: Apes and pigs are from the descendants of those who were transformed. Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated from Al-Hasan, he said: That lineage was cut off. Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated from Mujahid, he said: Their hearts were transformed, but they were not transformed into apes, but it is an example that God gave them, like His statement: Like a donkey carrying volumes. And Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding the verse, he said: The whales were made lawful for them and forbidden for them on the Sabbath, so that He might know who would obey Him and who would disobey Him. So there were three types among them. And he mentioned something similar to what we have presented from the commentators. And Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The youth of the people became monkeys, and the old men became pigs. And Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding His statement, disgraced, he said: humiliated. And Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated on his authority regarding His statement, disgraced, he said: humiliated. And Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid something similar. And Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, So We made it a deterrent to those before it of the towns, and to those after it of the towns, and an admonition to the righteous who come after them until the Day of Resurrection. And Ibn Jarir narrated on his authority, So We made it, meaning the whales, a deterrent to those before it and to those after it of the sins that they committed before and after. Ibn Jarir narrated on his authority: So We made it he said: We made that punishment, which is the transformation, a deterrent a punishment for what came before it he said: so that those who came after them would beware of My punishment and what came after it he said: for those who were with them and an admonition he said: a reminder and a lesson for the righteous.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

66. So We made it meaning We made their punishment by transformation a deterrent meaning a punishment and a lesson. Deterrent is the name for every punishment that the observer is deterred from doing for which the punishment was made a recompense. From this comes the refusal to swear an oath, which is abstention. Its origin is from nakl/which is a shackle, and its plural is ankalān. "For what was before it" Qatadah said: He meant what was before it, meaning what preceded of sins, meaning We made that punishment a recompense for what came before of their sins before their prohibition from taking game. And what came after it means what was present of the sins for which they were committed, which is disobedience by taking whales. Abu Al-Aaliyah and Al-Rabi' said: A punishment for what had passed of their sins and a lesson for those who come after them to follow their example. The second ma means who. It was said: We made it meaning We made the village of the Sabbath-breakers a lesson for what was before it, meaning the villages that were built at the time. And what came after it means what will happen of villages after that so that they may learn a lesson. It was said: There is an advancement and a delay in it, its meaning: So We made it and what came after it, meaning what was prepared for them of torment in the Hereafter. As a punishment and recompense for what came before it, meaning for their previous sins in their aggression on the Sabbath. And an admonition for the righteous: for the believers from the nation of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, so that they do not do as they did.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

66- So We made it meaning the transformation, or the punishment. A warning a lesson that warns the one who takes heed, meaning it prevents him. And from this comes the word naki for shackles. For what was before it and what was behind it for the nations before it and after it, as their condition was mentioned in the books of the ancients, and their story became famous among the others, or for their contemporaries and those after them, or for the villages present at it and those far away from it, or for the people of that village and those around it, or because of what preceded it of their sins and what came after them. And an admonition for the righteous from their people, or for every righteous person who heard it.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:67

And when Moses said to his people, "Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow," they said, "Do you take us in mockery?" He said, "I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:67

And when Moses said to his people, "Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow," they said, "Do you take us in mockery?" He said, "I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And mention when Moses said to his people when someone had been killed for them and their killer was unknown, and they asked him to call upon God to reveal it to them, so he called upon Him (Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said, Do you take us in mockery?) mocking us, as you respond to us with such a thing? He said, I seek refuge I refrain from being among the ignorant the mockers.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja`far said: This verse is one of the ways in which God rebuked the Children of Israel who were addressed, regarding their early people's breach of the covenant that God took from them to obey His prophets. He said to them: And remember also those who broke My covenant, When Moses said to his people and his people were the Children of Israel, when they disputed the murder that had been committed among them, "God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said, 'Do you make fun of us?'"

Mockery is playing and mocking, as the rajaz poet said:

Umm Taisalah mocked me and said: I see him destitute and he has nothing.

He means by his saying: I have mocked, ridiculed and played.

It is not appropriate for any of God's prophets to be mocking or joking in what they told of God's command or prohibition. So they thought that Moses was mocking or joking when he told them about God's command to slaughter the cow when they were arguing about who was killed. They could not have thought that of God's prophet when he was telling them that God was the one who ordered them to slaughter the cow.

The letter fa was omitted from his statement: Do you take us in mockery? which is an answer, because the speech before it did not require it, and it was good to remain silent on his statement: Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow. Therefore, it was permissible to omit the fa from his statement: Do you take us in mockery? just as it was permissible and good to omit it from the statement of God the Almighty: "He said: So what is the matter with you, O messengers? They said: Indeed, we have been sent."

(al-Hijr 15:57-58/al-Dhariyat 51:31-32). He did not say: So they said: Indeed, we have been sent. If it had been said: So they said, it would also have been good and permissible. If it had been in one word, the fa would not have been omitted from it. This is because if you say: I stood up and did such and such, you would not say: I stood up and did such and such, because it is a conjunction, not a question that you stop at.

Moses informed them when they said what they said that the one who reports on the authority of God, may He be glorified, with mockery and ridicule is one of the ignorant. He cleared himself of what they thought of him, saying: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant, meaning: among the fools who narrate lies and falsehoods on the authority of God.

The reason why Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow was:

Muhammad ibn Abd al-A'la narrated to us, saying: Al-Mu'tamir ibn Sulayman narrated to us, saying: I heard Ayoub, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah, saying: There was a man among the Children of Israel who was barren or sterile. He said: His guardian killed him, then carried him and threw him in a tribe other than his own. He said: Evil arose among them because of him until they took up arms. He said: The people of understanding said: Are you fighting while the Messenger of God is among you? He said: So they went to the Prophet of God. He said: Slaughter a cow. They said: Are you making fun of us? He said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. They said: Let your Lord explain to us what it is. He said: He says that it is a cow, until His saying: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do it. He said: So he was struck, and he informed them of his killer. He said: The cow was not taken except for its weight in gold. He said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have sufficed for them. So the killer did not inherit after that.

Al-Muthanna told me, Adam told us, Abu Ja`far told me, on the authority of Al-Rabi`, on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding the statement of God: God commands you to slaughter a cow. He said: There was a man from the Children of Israel, and he was rich and had no children. He had a relative who was his heir, so he killed him to inherit from him, then he threw him on the middle of the road, and he came to Moses and said to him: My relative was killed and a great matter has come to me, and I cannot find anyone who can explain to me who killed him except you, O Prophet of God. Moses called out to the al-Nas 114: I call upon God, whoever has knowledge of this, explain it to us. But they did not have his knowledge. So the killer turned to Moses and said: You are the Prophet of God, so ask your Lord to explain it to us. So he asked his Lord, and God revealed to him: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They were amazed and said, Do you take us in mockery? He said, I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. They said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what she is. He said, He says that she is a cow neither old nor virgin, but between that and half-old. They said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her color is. He said, He says that she is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers. They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what she is. Indeed, cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be guided." He said, He says that she is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigating the tillage. He said, Nor working in the tillage. "Without any defects. They said, Now you have brought the truth." So they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do so. He said: If the people, when they were ordered to slaughter a cow, had shown off a cow and slaughtered it, it would have been that one, but they were too hard on themselves, so God was too hard on them. If the people had not made an exception and said: And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided, they would never have been guided to it. It reached us that they did not find the cow that was described to them except with an old woman who had orphans, and she was their guardian. When she knew that they would not pay zakat to them except her, she doubled the price for them. So they came to Moses and told him that they did not find this cow described to them except with so-and-so, and that she had asked them for many times its price. Moses said to them: God has made it easy for you, but you have been too hard on yourselves. So they gave her her consent and her judgment. So they did, and they bought it and slaughtered it. Moses ordered them to take a bone from it and strike the slain man with it. So they did, and his soul returned to him, and he named his killer for them, then he returned dead as he was. So they seized his killer, and he was the one who had come to Moses and complained to him, so God killed him for the worst of his deeds.

Musa told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow,' he said: There was a man from the Children of Israel who had much wealth, and he had a daughter, and he had a nephew who was in need. So his nephew proposed to him for his daughter, but he refused to marry her to him. The young man became angry and said, By God, I will kill my uncle, and I will take his wealth, and I will marry his daughter to him, and I will eat his blood money. So the young man came to him, and merchants had come from the tribes of the Children of Israel, and he said, Uncle, go with me and take some of the merchandise of these people, so that I may gain some of it, for if they see you with me, they will give me some. So the uncle went out with the young man at night, and when the old man reached that tribe, the young man killed him, then returned to his family. When morning came, he came as if he was looking for his uncle, as if he did not know where he was, but he did not find him. So he went towards him, and there he saw that tribe gathered around him, so he seized them and said, You have killed my uncle, so pay me his blood money. And he began to cry and throw dirt on his head and cry: Oh, my blind man! So he brought them to Moses, who ruled that they should pay blood money. They said to him: O Messenger of God, call upon your Lord for us so that He may make clear to him who committed the crime, so that the perpetrator of the crime may be taken. By God, his blood money is easy for us, but we are ashamed to reproach him. That is when God Almighty says: And when you killed a person and disputed over it, and God was to bring out that which you were concealing. Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said: We ask you about the slain person and who killed him, and you say: Slaughter a cow! Are you mocking us? Moses said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. Ibn Abbas said: If they had intercepted a cow and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were harsh and obstinate toward Moses, so God was harsh with them and they said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. He said: He says that it is a cow neither old nor virgin, but half-baked between that. The old cow is the one that does not give birth, and the virgin is the one that has only given birth to one child, and the half-baked is the one that is half-baked between that, the one that has given birth and whose child has been born. Then do as you are commanded. They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what its color is. He said: He says that it is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers. He said: It astonishes the observers. They said: "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be guided." He said: He says that it is a cow that is neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the crops, sound, without any blemish on it. They said: Now you have come with the truth. So they sought it but could not find it.

There was a man from the Children of Israel, who was one of the most dutiful people to his father. A man passed by him with pearls to sell. His father was sleeping with the key under his head. The man said to him: Will you buy this pearl from me for seventy thousand? The young man said to him: Stay here until my father wakes up. So he took it for eighty thousand! The other said to him: Wake up your father and it will be yours for sixty thousand. The merchant kept reducing the amount until it reached thirty thousand. The other increased it, on condition that he waited until his father woke up, until it reached one hundred thousand. When he increased it, he said: No, by God, I will never buy it from you for anything. He refused to wake his father, so God compensated him for that pearl by giving him that cow. The Children of Israel passed by him looking for the cow, and they saw the cow with him. They asked him to sell it to them, a cow for a cow, but he refused. They gave him two, but he refused. They increased it until it reached ten, but he refused. They said: By God, we will not leave you until we take it from you. So they took him to Moses and said: O Prophet of God, we found the cow with this man and he refused to give it to us even though we had given him the price. Moses said to him: Give them your cow. He said: O Messenger of God, I have more right to my money. He said: You have spoken the truth. He said to the al-Nas 114: Please your companion. So they gave him its weight in gold but he refused. So they doubled what they had given him its weight until they gave him ten times its weight. He sold it to them and took its price. He said: Slaughter it. So they slaughtered it. He said: Strike him with part of it. So they struck him with the piece of flesh between the shoulders, and he came back to life. They asked him: Who killed you? He said: My nephew. He said: I will kill him, take his money, and marry his daughter. So they

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and they all mentioned that the one who killed the slain man whose case they disputed with Moses was the brother of the slain man, and some of them mentioned that it was his nephew, and some of them said: Rather, they were a group of heirs who were impatient for his life. However, they all agreed that Moses only ordered them to slaughter the cow for the sake of the slain man, since they referred to him for judgment regarding God's command to them to do so, and they said to him: What is the slaughter of a cow?

Explain to us our dispute in which we have disputed with you about killing someone who was killed, and you claim that one of us is the killer! Are you mocking us? As Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: A slain man from the Children of Israel was killed and thrown among one of the tribes. The people of that slain man came to that tribe and said: By God, you have killed our companion. They said: No, by God. So they came to Moses and said: This is our slain man among them, and by God they killed him! They said: No, by God, O Prophet of God, he was thrown among us! Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said: Are you mocking us? And he recited the words of God Almighty: Do you take us in mockery? They said: We come to you and mention our slain man and the situation we are in, and you mock us? Moses said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant.

Al-Qasim narrated to us, he said, Al-Husayn narrated to us, he said, Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid and Hajjaj, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b Al-Qurazi and Muhammad ibn Qays: When the relatives of the slain man and those who claimed that they had killed their companion

Moses came to him and told him their story, God inspired him to slaughter a cow. Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said, Do you take us in mockery? He said, I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. They said, What is the cow and the slain man? He said, "I say to you: 'God commands you to slaughter a cow,' and you say, 'Do you take us in mockery?'"

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty's saying: And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow.' There are four issues in it:

First: The Almighty's saying: God commands you. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Amr that he read: commands you with sukoon, and deleted the damma from the ra because of its heaviness. Abu al-Abbas al-Mubarrad said: This is not permissible because the ra is a letter of inflection, but what is correct on the authority of Abu Amr is that he used to steal the movement. That you slaughter is in the accusative case with commands you, meaning that you slaughter. Cow is in the accusative case with that you slaughter. The meaning of slaughter has already been mentioned, so there is no point in repeating it.

Second: The Almighty's saying: God commands you to slaughter a cow is presented in the recitation, and His saying: You have killed a soul is presented in meaning over everything He began with regarding the cow. It is possible that His saying: You have killed is presented in the revelation, and the command to slaughter is presented later. It is possible that the order of its revelation is according to its recitation, so it is as if God commanded them to slaughter the cow until they slaughtered it, then what happened of the killing happened, so they were commanded to strike him with some of it, and and when you killed is presented in meaning over the first statement according to what we mentioned, because the waw does not require order. Its counterpart in the revelation is in the story of Noah after mentioning the flood and its end in His saying: Until, when Our command came and the oven overflowed, We said, 'Load onto it of every kind two' until His saying: 'Except a few. So He mentioned the destruction of those who perished from it, then He followed it up with His saying: And He said, 'Embark therein, in the name of God is its course and its anchorage.' The mention of riding came later in the speech, and it is known that their riding was before the destruction. Likewise, the Almighty said: Praise be to God, who has sent down to His servant the Book and has not made therein any crookedness. The meaning is: He sent down to His servant the straight Book and has not made therein any crookedness. There are many examples of this in the Qur'an.

Third: There is no disagreement among scholars that slaughtering is more appropriate for sheep, and slaughtering is more appropriate for camels, and choosing is for cows. It was said that slaughtering is more appropriate, because it is what God mentioned, and because the place of slaughter is close to the place of slaughter. Ibn al-Mundhir said: I do not know of anyone who forbade eating what was slaughtered from what is slaughtered, or what was slaughtered from what is slaughtered. Malik disliked that. A person may dislike something but not forbid it. The rulings on slaughtering and the slaughterer and their conditions will come in Surat al-Ma'idah when God says: Except what you slaughter, in full, God willing. Al-Mawardi said: They were only commanded - and God knows best - to slaughter a cow and not another, because it is of the same type as the calf they worshipped, so that what they saw of its glorification would be insignificant to them, and so that their response would reveal what was in their souls of its worship. This meaning is a reason for slaughtering a cow, and not a reason for the questioner's answer, but the meaning is that the one killed would come back to life by killing a living person, so his ability to invent things from their opposites would be more apparent.

Fourth: The Almighty's saying: Cow. The cow is the name for the female, and the bull is the name for the male, like a female camel and a camel, and a woman and a man. It was said: The cow is the singular of the cow, the female and the male are the same. Its origin is from your saying: he split his belly, meaning he ripped it open, so the cow splits the ground by plowing and plowing it. From this is the word al-Baqir for Abu Ja'far Muhammad ibn Ali Zayn al-Abidin, because he split the knowledge open and recognized its origin, meaning he split it. Al-Baqira is a garment that is torn and a woman throws it around her neck without a sleeve. In the hadith of Ibn Abbas regarding the hoopoe, it split the ground. Shammār said: Baqar looked at the place of water, and saw the water under the ground. Al-Azhari said: Al-Baqar is the name of the species and its plural is Baqir. Ibn Arafah said: It is said Baqir and Baqir and Baqur. Ikrimah and Ibn Ya'mar read al-Baqir. Al-Thawri is the singular of the bulls. Al-Thawri is the master of men. Al-Thawri is a piece of cottage cheese. Al-Thawri is the grass. Al-Thawri is a mountain. Thawri: an Arab tribe. In the hadith:

The time for the evening prayer is until the twilight has spread. It is said: it spread across the horizon. In the hadith:

Whoever wants knowledge, let him recite the Qur'an. Shammār said: Reviving the Qur'an is reading it and discussing it with scholars.

God the Almighty says: "They said: 'Do you take us in mockery?'" This is their answer to Moses, peace be upon him, when he said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. That is because they found a dead man among them - it was said that his name was Amil - and they were confused about his killer, and a dispute arose between them, so they said: We will fight while the Messenger of God is among us. So they came to him and asked him for clarification - and this was before the revelation of the oath in the Torah, so they asked Moses to call upon God - so Moses, peace be upon him, asked his Lord and He commanded them to slaughter a cow. So when they heard that from Moses and there was no apparent answer to what they asked him about and referred to him for judgment, they said: Do you take us in mockery? Mocking means playing and mocking, and it has been mentioned before. Al-Jahdary read Aytakhdhna with the letter ya, meaning some of them said that to each other, so Moses, peace be upon him, answered them by saying: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant, because deviating from the answer of the questioner seeking guidance to mockery is ignorance, so he, peace be upon him, sought refuge from it, because it is a characteristic that is not found in the prophets. Ignorance is the opposite of knowledge. So he sought refuge from ignorance, just as they were ignorant in their saying: Do you take us in mockery? to someone who tells them about God the Most High. The apparent meaning of this statement indicates the corruption of the belief of the one who said it. The faith of someone who said to a prophet whose miracle had become apparent, and said: God commands you to do such-and-such, "Do you take us in mockery?" is not valid. If someone said that today about some of the sayings of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he would have to be declared an unbeliever. Some people believed that this was due to their nature being wrong, rude, and disobedient, similar to what the one who said to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when dividing the spoils of Hunayn said:

This is a division that is not intended for the sake of God. And as the other said to him: Be fair, O Muhammad. In all of this is clear evidence of the ugliness of ignorance and that it corrupts religion.

God the Almighty said: "they mocked" is a second object, and it is permissible to soften the hamza and make it between the waw and the hamza. Hafs made it an open waw, because it is an open hamza preceded by a damma, so it is used as a substitute, like his saying: "the fools, but" and it is permissible to delete the damma from the zay as you delete it from 'uddh, so you say: hazwan, as the people of Kufa read, and likewise "and no one was comparable to him". Al-Akhfash narrated from 'Isa bin 'Umar: that every noun with three letters and the first letter is a damma, there are two languages for it: softening and emphasis, like 'usr and yusr and haz'. Similar to it is what is from the plural on fa'l like katab, rusul and rusul, 'aun and 'aun. As for God the Almighty's saying: "and they made for Him a portion of His servants", it is not like haz' and kufa', because it is on fa'l from the root, as will come in its place, God willing.

Question: The verse is evidence that mocking the religion of God, the religion of Muslims, and those who should be glorified is forbidden, and that this is ignorance and its doer deserves the threat. Joking is not the same as mockery. Don't you see that the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) used to joke, as did the Imams after him? Ibn Khuwayz Mandad said: It has reached us that a man went to Ubaydullah ibn al-Hasan, who was the judge of Kufa, and Ubaydullah joked with him, saying: Is this garment of yours made of sheep's wool or ram's wool? He said to him: Do not be ignorant, O judge! Ubaydullah said to him: Where did you find joking in ignorance? He recited this verse to him, and Ubaydullah turned away from him, because he saw that he was ignorant and did not know whether joking was the same as mockery, and neither was the same as the other.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:67

And when Moses said to his people, "Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow," they said, "Do you take us in mockery?" He said, "I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant."

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says: And remember, O Children of Israel, My favor upon you in breaking your custom regarding the cow, and clarifying who the killer was because of it, and God bringing the murdered man back to life, and His mention of who among them killed him.

Mention the story

He said: Ibn Abi Hatim: Al-Hasan bin Muhammad bin Al-Sabah told us, Yazid bin Harun told us, Hisham bin Hassan told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sirin, on the authority of Ubaidah Al-Salmāni, who said: There was a man from the Children of Israel who was sterile and had no children. He had a lot of money, and his nephew was his heir. He killed him, then carried him at night and placed him at the door of one of them. Then in the morning he claimed him until they armed themselves and rode on one another. Then those of them who had reason and foresight said: Why are you killing one another, while the Messenger of God is among you? So they came to Moses, peace be upon him, and mentioned that to him. He said, God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said, Do you make fun of us? He said, I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. He said, "If they had not objected, the smallest cow would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so he was strict with them until they reached the cow that they were commanded to slaughter. They found it with a man who had no other cow. He said, "By God, I will not decrease it by a hide full of gold." So they took it with a hide full of gold, slaughtered it, and struck him with some of it. Then he stood up. They said, Who killed you? He said, This - for his nephew. Then he died, and he was not given anything from his money, so the killer did not inherit after that. Ibn Jarir narrated it from the hadith of Ayoub, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah, in a similar manner, and God knows best. And Abd bin Hamid narrated it in his interpretation: Yazid bin Harun informed us of it, and Adam bin Abi Iyas narrated it in his interpretation, on the authority of Abu Ja'far, who is Al-Razi, on the authority of Hisham bin Hassan, and Adam bin Abi Iyas said in his interpretation: Abu Ja'far Al-Razi informed us on the authority of Al-Rabi' on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah regarding the statement of God the Most High: Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow, he said: There was a man from the Children of Israel, and he was rich, and he had no children, and he had a relative, and he was his heir, so he killed him to inherit from him, then he threw him on the middle of the road, and he came to Moses, peace be upon him, and said to him: My relative was killed and I am facing a grave matter, and I cannot find anyone to explain to me who killed him except you, O Prophet of God. He said: So Moses called out to the people, and said: I call upon whoever has knowledge of this to explain it to us, but they had no knowledge, so the killer turned to Moses, peace be upon him, and said to him: You are the Prophet of God, so ask your Lord to explain it to us, so he asked his Lord, and God revealed: "Indeed, God He commands you to slaughter a cow. They were amazed at that and said: "Do you make fun of us?" He said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. He said: He says that it is a cow that is neither old nor virgin, but between that. They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what its color is. He said: He says that it is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers. They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. The cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be guided. He said, He says that she is a cow that is not trained, plowing the earth nor irrigating the crops, and is free from defects, with no blemish on her, meaning, she is not trained, plowing the earth nor irrigating the crops, meaning, she does not work in the crops. She is sound, meaning, free from defects, without a blemish on her, meaning, there is no whiteness on her. They said, Now you have come with the truth. So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly going to do it. He said, "If the people, when they were ordered to slaughter a cow, had reviewed a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have been that one. However, they were hard on themselves, so God was hard on them. If the people had not made an exception and said, 'Indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been guided to it." It reached us that they did not find the cow that was described to them except with an old woman, and with her were orphans, and she was their guardian. When she knew that no one else would pay them zakat, she doubled the price for them. They came to Moses and told him that they did not find this description except with so-and-so, and that she had asked for double the price. Moses said, Indeed, God has made it easy for you. So you were hard on yourselves, so give it its consent and its judgment. So they did and bought it and slaughtered it, and Moses, peace be upon him, ordered them to take a bone from it and strike the slain man, so they did, and his soul returned to him, and he named his killer for them, then he returned dead as he was, so his killer was taken, and he was the one who came to Moses, peace be upon him, and complained to him, so God killed him for the worst of his deeds, and Muhammad bin Jarir said: Muhammad bin Saeed told me, my father told me, my uncle told me, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, in his statement regarding the cow, that an old man from the Children of Israel at the time of Moses, peace be upon him, was very wealthy, and his brother's sons were poor and had no money, and the old man had no children, and his brother's sons were his heirs, so they said, If only our uncle had died so we could inherit his money. And when he was patient with them that their uncle would not die, Satan came to them and said to them: Would you like to kill your uncle and inherit his money, and make the people of the city that you are not in pay his blood money? That is because they were Two cities were in one of them, and if the slain person was killed and thrown between the two cities, the distance between the slain person and the two villages was measured, and whichever was closer to him, the blood money was paid. And when Satan tempted them to do that, and he insisted that their uncle should not die, they went to him and killed him, then they went and threw him at the gate of the city they were not in. When the people of the city woke up, the sons of my brother the Sheikh came and said: Our uncle was killed at the gate of your city, so by God you will pay us the blood money for our uncle. The people of the city said: We swear by God that we did not kill him, nor did we know who killed him, nor did we open the gate of our city since it was closed until morning. And they went to Moses, peace be upon him, and when they came to him, the sons of my brother the Sheikh said: Our uncle, we found him killed at the gate of their city. And the people of the city said: We swear by God that we did not kill him, nor did we open the gate of the city since it was closed until morning. And Gabriel came with the command of the All-Hearing, All-Knowing to Moses, peace be upon him, and said: Say to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow, so they struck him with part of it. And al-Suddi said: "And when he said: Moses said to his al-Nas 114: "God commands you to slaughter a cow." He said: There was a man from the Children of Israel who had a lot of money. He had a daughter and a nephew who was in need. His nephew proposed to him for his daughter, but he refused to marry her. The young man became angry and said: By God, I will kill my uncle and take his money, and I will marry his daughter to him, and I will take his blood money. The young man came to him when merchants from one of the tribes of the Children of Israel had arrived. He said: "Uncle, go with me and take some of the merchandise of these people so that I may gain some of it. If they see you with me, they will give me some." The uncle went out with the young man at night. When the old man reached that tribe, the young man killed him, then returned to his family. When morning came, he came as if he was looking for his uncle, as if he did not know where he was, but he did not find him. He went towards him, and found that tribe gathered around him. He seized them and said: You have killed my uncle, so pay me his blood money. He began to cry and throw dirt on his head and call out, Oh, my blind man! He brought them to Moses, who ruled that they should pay the blood money. They said to him: O Messenger of God. Pray to your Lord for us so that He may make clear to us who is its owner, so that the owner of the case may be taken, for by God, his blood money is easy for us, but we are ashamed to reproach him, for that is when God Almighty says: And when you killed a person and disputed over it, and God will bring out that which you were concealing. Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said: We ask you about the slain man and about the one who killed him, and you say slaughter a cow. Are you mocking us? He said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant. Ibn Abbas said: If they had objected to a cow and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were harsh and obstinate toward Moses, so God was harsh with them, and they said: Pray to your Lord for us to make clear to us what it is. He said: He says that it is a cow that is neither old nor virgin, but between that. The old cow is the one that has not given birth, and the virgin is the one that has given birth only to one child, and the half-old is the one between that, which has given birth and her child has been born. So do as you are commanded. They said: Pray to your Lord for us to make clear to us what its color is. He said: He says that it is a cow that is neither old nor virgin, but between that. A yellow cow, bright in color." He said: Its color is pure. "Delighting the observers." He said: It astonishes the observers. They said: "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be guided." He said: He says that it is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor to irrigate the crops, sound, without any spot on it. They said: Now you have brought the truth. So they sought it but could not find it. There was a man from the Children of Israel who was one of the most pious people to his father. A man passed by him with pearls to sell, and his father was sleeping under his head with the key. The man said to him: Will you buy these pearls from me for seventy thousand? The young man said to him: Stay where you are until my father wakes up, and I will take it from you for eighty thousand. The other said: Wake up your father and it will be yours for sixty thousand. So the merchant kept reducing it for him until it reached thirty thousand. The other increased it by waiting for his father until he wakes up until it reached one hundred thousand. When he insisted on it, he said: By God, I will never buy it from you for anything. He refused to wake his father, so God compensated him for that pearl by giving him that cow. The Children of Israel passed by him looking for the cow, and they saw the cow with him, so they asked him to sell it to them, a cow for a cow, but he refused. So they gave him two, but he refused. So they increased it until it reached ten. They said: By God, we will not leave you until we take it from you. So they went with him to Moses, peace be upon him, and they said: O Prophet of God, we found it with this man and he refused to give it to us, although we gave him a price. Moses said to him: Give them your cow. He said: O Messenger of God, I have more right to my money. He said: You have spoken the truth. He said to the al-Nas 114: Please your companion. So they gave him its weight in gold, but he refused. So they doubled it for him until they gave him ten times its weight in gold. So he sold it to them and took its price. They slaughtered it. He said: Hit him with part of it. So they hit him with the piece of flesh between the shoulders, and he lived. They asked him: Who killed you? He said to them: My nephew. He said: I will kill him, take his money, and marry his daughter to him. So they took the boy and killed him. Sanid said: Hajjaj, he is the son of Muhammad, told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid and Hajjaj, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi and Muhammad ibn Qays - the hadith of some of them was included in the hadith of others - they said: When a tribe of the Children of Israel saw the great evil of the people, they built a city and isolated themselves from the evil of the people. When evening came, they did not leave anyone of them outside without bringing him in. When morning came, their leader would stand up and look and look out. If he did not see anything, he would conquer the city. They remained with the people until evening came. He said: There was a man from the Children of Israel who had a lot of money, and he had no heir other than his brother.

And when Moses said to his people, "Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow," they said, "Do you take us in mockery?" He said, "I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant."

His life was long, so he killed him to inherit him. Then he carried him and placed him at the gate of the city. Then he and his companions hid in a place. He said: The leader of the city looked out and looked, but he did not see anything, so he opened the door. When he saw the dead man, he closed the door. The brother of the dead man and his companions called out to him: It is impossible that you killed him and then closed the door. When Moses saw the killing of the Children of Israel, whenever he saw The slain man was among the people, so he took them and there was almost a fight between the brother of the slain man and the people of the city until the two groups put on their weapons and then they stopped each other. They came to Moses and mentioned their situation to him. They said: O Moses, these people killed a man and then closed the door. The people of the city said: O Messenger of God, you know that we avoid evil and we built a city as you saw, avoiding the evil of the people. By God, we did not kill or know of a killer. So God Almighty revealed to him that they should slaughter a cow, so Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. These contexts from Ubaidah, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Suddi and others, there is some difference in them, and it appears that they were taken from the books of the Children of Israel, and they are among those that are permissible to transmit, but they are neither true nor false, so for this reason they are not relied upon except for what agrees with the truth according to us, and God knows best.

Fath al-Qadir

It was said: The story of the slaughter of the cow mentioned here is presented in the recitation and delayed in meaning after the Almighty's saying: And when you killed a soul. It is possible that His saying: You killed was presented in the revelation, and the command to slaughter was delayed, and it is possible that the order of its revelation was according to its recitation, so it is as if God ordered them to slaughter the cow until they slaughtered it, then the order of killing occurred and they were ordered to strike him with some of it, this is on the assumption or the waw requires order, and it has been established in the science of Arabic that it is for the sake of gathering without order or accompaniment, and the full discussion will come in the story of the killing, and the cow is a name for the female, and it is said: for the male bull, and it was said: it is applied to them both, and its origin is from the cow which is the split because it splits the ground for plowing, Al-Azhari said: The cow is a generic name, and its plural is Baqir: And Ikrimah and Yahya bin Ya'mar read Indeed, the cows look alike to us and His saying: 67- in jest here: play and mockery, and its explanation has been presented. The ignorant do this because it is a kind of foolishness that rational people do not do. That is why Moses answered them by seeking refuge in God Almighty from ignorance.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

67. The Almighty said: And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow.' The cow is the female of the cow. It is said that it is derived from the word baqar, which means to split. It was named thus because it splits the ground for plowing.

The story is that there was a rich man among the Children of Israel who had a poor cousin who had no heir but him. When his death was long over him, he killed him to inherit him, and carried him to another village and threw him in their courtyard. Then he began to seek revenge and brought people to Moses claiming that he had killed them. Moses asked them, but they denied it, and the matter of the slain man was unclear to Moses. Al-Kalbi said: This was before the revelation of the oath in the Torah, so they asked Moses to call upon God to clarify for them through his supplication, so God commanded them to slaughter a cow. Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow. They said: Do you make fun of us? We ask you about the matter of the slain man and you command us to slaughter a cow!! They said that because of the apparent distance between the two matters, and they did not know what the wisdom was in it. Hamza read Hazwa and Kafa with a light pronunciation, and the others read it with a heavy pronunciation, and by leaving out the hamza Hafs said Moses said I seek refuge in God I abstain from God "that I am among the ignorant" meaning among those who mock the believers. It was said: among the ignorant with the answer not in accordance with the question because the answer not in accordance with the question is ignorance. So when the people knew that slaughtering the cow was a decree from God Almighty, they described it, and if they had gone to the lowest cow and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were harsh on themselves, so God was harsh on them, and there was wisdom behind it, and that is because there was a righteous man among the Children of Israel who had a young son and a calf, and he brought it to a thicket and said: O God, I entrust this calf to You for my son until it grows up, and the man died and the calf became weak in the thicket, and it used to flee from everyone who saw it. So when the son grew up, he was dutiful to his mother, and he used to divide the night into three thirds, praying one third and sleeping. One third, and he sits at his mother's head one third, and when morning comes he sets out and collects firewood on his back and brings it to the market and sells it for whatever God wills, then he gives one third of it in charity, eats one third of it, and gives his mother one third. His mother said to him one day: Your father left you a heifer that God entrusted to him in such-and-such a thicket, so go and call upon the God of Abraham, Ishmael, and Isaac to return it to you, and its sign is that when you look at it, you imagine that it is a ray of the sun coming out of its skin. It was called the golden one because of its beauty and yellowness. The young man came to the thicket and saw it grazing, so he shouted at it and said: I command by the God of Abraham, Ishmael, Isaac, and Jacob that you come to me. So it came running until it stood in front of him, so he took hold of its neck and led it. The cow spoke with the permission of God Almighty and said: O young man who is dutiful to your mother, ride me, for that is easier for you. The young man said: My mother did not order me to do that, but she said: Take it by the neck. The cow said: By the God of the Children of Israel, if you had ridden me, you would never have been able to do it. So go, for if you ordered the mountain to move from his origin and he goes with you to do something to be dutiful to your mother, so the young man went with her to his mother and she said to him: You are poor and have no money and it is difficult for you to collect firewood during the day and to stand in prayer at night, so go and sell this cow, he said: How much should I sell it for? She said: For three dinars and do not sell without consulting me, and the price of the cow at that time was three dinars, so he went with her to the market, so God sent an angel to show His creation His power and to test the young man how dutiful he was to his mother, and God was All-Knowing of him, so the angel said to him: How much do you sell this cow for? He said: For three dinars, and I stipulate that you obtain my mother's consent. The king said: You have six dinars, and do not consult your mother. The young man said: Even if you gave me its weight in gold, I would not take it except with my mother's consent. So return it to his mother and tell her the price. She said: Go back and sell it for six dinars with my consent. So he went with it to the market and came to the king and said: Did you consult your mother? The young man said: She ordered me not to reduce it to less than six, on condition that I consult her. The king said: Then I will give you twelve, on condition that you do not consult her. The young man refused, so he went back to his mother and told her. She said: The one who comes to you is an angel in the form of a human being to test you. So when he comes to you, say to him: Do you order us to sell this cow or not? So he did and the king said to him: Go to your mother and tell her to hold on to this cow, for Moses, son of Imran, peace be upon him, is buying it from you for a man who will be killed among the Children of Israel. Do not sell it except for a full load of dinars. So they held on to it, and God Almighty decreed that the Children of Israel should slaughter that very cow. They continued to ask Moses to describe that cow to them until he described that cow to them, as a reward for his righteousness to his mother, out of His grace and mercy. So that is:

slaughter a cow and strike him with part of it so that he would live and inform about his killer. "They said, 'Do you take us in mockery?'" That is, a place of mockery, or his family and mockery of us, or mockery itself due to the extreme mockery, rejecting what he said and belittling him. Hamza and Ismail from Nafi' read with sukoon, Hafs from Asim with dammah and changing the hamza to waw. He said, I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant, because mockery in such a case is ignorance and foolishness. He denied what he was accused of in the manner of proof, and he presented it in the form of a reiteration to make it seem horrific.

67- "And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow.'" The beginning of this story is the Almighty's saying: "And when you killed a person and disputed over it." It was only released from him and presented before him because it was independent of another type of their faults, which is mocking the command and investigating the question and not rushing to comply. His story is that there was a wealthy old man among them, and his nephews killed his son in greed for his inheritance, and they threw him at the gate of the city, then they came demanding his blood, so God commanded them to

Surat al-Baqarah 2:68

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is." He said, "Indeed, He says, 'It is a cow neither old nor young, but between the two. So do what you are commanded.'"

Surat al-Baqarah 2:68

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is." He said, "Indeed, He says, 'It is a cow neither old nor young, but between the two. So do what you are commanded.'"

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

So when they knew that he had decided, they said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Moses said, "He says, 'It is a cow neither old nor young, but between that and the age mentioned. So do what you are commanded.'"

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: Those who were told, God commands you to slaughter a cow, said after they had learned and it was settled among them that what Moses, peace be upon him, had commanded them to do was by God's command to slaughter a cow, which was a serious and legitimate matter. Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, so they asked Moses to ask his Lord for them what God had already sufficed for them by saying to them, Slaughter a cow. Because He, the Most High, commanded them to slaughter a cow from among the cows, any cow they wanted to slaughter, without restricting that to one type or category over another, so they said, with the rudeness of their morals, the coarseness of their natures, the badness of their understanding, and the burden of what God had relieved them of, out of their stubbornness towards the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as: Muhammad ibn Sa'd told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, he said: When Moses said to them: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant, they said to him, being stubborn: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is.

When they, out of ignorance, took the trouble to search for the description of the cow they had been commanded to slaughter, out of their stubbornness towards their prophet Moses, peace be upon him, after they had shown him bad thoughts about him regarding what he had told them about God, the Most High, by saying: Do you take us in mockery? God Almighty punished them by limiting the slaughter of the cows they had been commanded to slaughter to one type of them and not another. So God, the Most High, said to them when they asked Him, saying: What is it? What is its description? What is its ornament? Describe it to us so that we may know it. He said: It is a cow, neither old nor young.

What He, the Most High, means by His saying: Not old, is not old and decrepit. It is said: The cow has become old, meaning: it has become old. And from that is the saying of the poet:

Oh God, whoever has a grudge against me, make him menstruate like a menstruating woman.

He means by his saying: imposing, old. He describes an old grudge. And from it is the saying of another:

She has a glass and a soft, smooth uvula like the churning water that the churner has removed.

And the interpreters said the same as what we said about the interpretation of faridh. Mention of those who said that: Ali bin Saeed Al-Kindi told me, he said, Abdul Salam bin Harb told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid: La faridh, he said: La Kabira.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Ibn Atiyah told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas or on the authority of Ikrimah, Sharik was not sure: not obligatory, he said: the major sin.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his saying: Not a farid, the farid is the old woman.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Not a large, decrepit woman, meaning: It is not a large, decrepit woman.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, he said, Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata' Al-Khurasani, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: No Faridh means old age.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: The great burden.

Ahmad bin Ishaq Al-Ahwazi told us, he said, Abu Ahmad Al-Zubayri told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: No imposing, he said: the major sin.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Not old, meaning: not old.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

Bishr told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: Al-Farid is the old woman.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar said, Qatada said: The old woman who is farid is the one who is neither old nor virgin, but a woman in between.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Al-Farid is the old woman who does not give birth.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: The farid is the major sin.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: nor a virgin.

Abu Jaafar said: The firstborn of female animals and human beings is the one that has not been opened by a male, and the firstborn is broken. The word fa'ala and ya yaf'ul have not been heard from it. As for the firstborn with the firstborn open, it is the young camel.

Rather, what He, the Most High, meant by His saying, nor a virgin, is neither a young girl who has not given birth, as Ali bin Saeed Al-Kindi told me, he said, Abd Al-Salam bin Harb told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid: nor a virgin, is a young girl.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: The virgin is the young girl.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Al-Hasan bin Atiyah told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Ibn Abbas or Ikrimah, he was uncertain: nor a virgin, he said: the young girl.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hasan told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata' Al-Khurasani, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: nor a virgin, the young girl.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Abu Sufyan told me, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Qatada: nor a virgin, nor a young girl.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: nor a virgin, nor a weak young girl.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: nor a virgin, meaning: nor a young girl.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Regarding the virgin, she did not give birth to more than one child.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Awan.

Abu Jaafar said: The half-old woman is the one who has given birth, one after the other, and is not a description of the virgin. It is said of it: she has been given birth, if she has become like that.

The meaning of the statement is that he is saying: It is a cow that is neither mature nor virgin, but between the two. And it is not permissible for between the two to be anything but a subject, because his saying between the two is a euphemism for mature and virgin, so it is not permissible for it to precede them. From this is the saying of Al-Akhtal:

There are no crowded women in Mecca, and there are no helpers or virgins in Yathrib.

Its plural is 'awn. It is said: a woman of 'awn, from the women of 'awn. And from this is the saying of Tamim bin Muqbil:

And a funeral like dolls, her tears flowing, she did not suffer from life as a virgin or a helper

And a cow with a weak back and a cow with a weak back. He said: And perhaps the Arabs said: with a weak back like messengers, seeking thereby the difference between the plural of awan from cows, and the plural of 'ana from donkeys. And it is said: This is a war with a weak back, if it was a war in which fighting took place time after time. This is similar to the woman who gave birth to one child after another. And it is also said: A need with a weak back, if it was fulfilled time after time.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, that Ibn Zayd recited to him:

Sitting at the doors, students need something, one of the things, or something tomorrow

Abu Jaafar said: The verse is by Al-Farazdaq.

And in a similar manner to what we have said about that, the people of interpretation interpreted it. Mention of those who said that: Ali bin Saeed Al-Kindi told us, Abd Al-Salam bin Harb told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid: Awan between that, in the middle, she gave birth to one or two wombs.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: Awan, he said: The Awan is the half-spinster.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: The 'Awan is the half.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Ibn Atiyah told us, he said, Sharik told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas or Ikrimah, Sharik was not sure Awan, he said: Between that.

Al-Munjab narrated that Bishr narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Al-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awan, he said: between the young and the old, and it is the strongest of the cows and beasts, and the best of the beasts.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hasan told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, he said, Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata' Al-Khurasani, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awan, he said: half.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: 'Awan means half.

And I narrated on the authority of Ammar, on the

Surat al-Baqarah 2:68

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is." He said, "Indeed, He says, 'It is a cow neither old nor young, but between the two. So do what you are commanded.'" authority of Ibn Abi Jaafar, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', the same.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, Yazid bin Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Al-Awan is half of that.

Ahmad bin Ishaq told us, Abu Ahmad al-Zubayri told us, Sharik told us, on the authority of Khasif, on the authority of Mujahid: Awan is the one that produces something, on the condition that it is the one that has produced one or two calves.

Musa told us, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Al-Awan is the half that is between that, the one who has given birth and her child has been born.

Yunus told me, he said Ibn Wahb told us, he said Ibn Zayd said: The old woman is between that, she is neither a virgin nor an old woman.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Between that.

Abu Jaafar said: What he meant by his saying between that is between the virgin and the old woman, as:

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Between that, meaning between the virgin and the old woman.

If someone says: You know that between is only suitable for two or more things, so how is it said: between that, when that is the same in wording?

It was said: It is only valid even though it is one, because that means two, and the Arabs combine in that and that two things and two meanings of verbs, as the speaker says: I think your brother is standing, and Amr and your father were, then he says: That was, and I think that. So he combines with that and that the noun and the predicate, which were necessary for think and was from them.

The meaning of the statement is: He said that he says that it is a cow that is neither old and decrepit, nor young and has not given birth, but rather a half-decrepit cow that has given birth, one after the other, between decrepitude and youth. So that combines the meaning of decrepitude and youth for what we have described. If instead of the words faridh and bikr were the names of two persons, it would not have combined them. That is because that does not lead to the names of two persons. And it is not permissible for someone who says: I was between Zaid and Amr, to say: I was between that. That only occurs with the names of actions, not the names of persons.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So do what you are commanded.

Abu Jaafar said: God Almighty says to them: Do what I command you to do, and you will achieve your needs and requests from me. And slaughter the cow that I commanded you to slaughter, and by your obedience to me by slaughtering it, you will attain knowledge of the killer of your slain one.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: They said, 'Call upon your Lord for us.' This is a sign of their stubbornness and lack of obedience. If they had obeyed the command and slaughtered any cow, the intended purpose would have been achieved. However, they were harsh on themselves, so God was harsh on them. This was stated by Ibn Abbas, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and others. Al-Hasan Al-Basri narrated something similar from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. The language of Banu Amir is Call upon, as mentioned earlier. Yabeen is in the subjunctive mood as a response to the command. Ma hiyya is the subject and predicate. The essence of something is its reality and its essence.

God the Almighty said: "He said: 'He says that it is a cow neither old nor a virgin, but between that.'" This is evidence of the permissibility of abrogation before the time of the action, because when he ordered a cow, he required any cow it was, but when he added the description, the first ruling was abrogated by another, as if he had said: In thirty camels, a young female camel, then he abrogated it by a one-year-old female camel or a one-year-old female camel. Likewise here, when he specified the description, this became an abrogation of the previous ruling. Farid is the old one. It has become old, meaning it has become old. And something old is called farid. The rajaz poet said:

My temples are gray, my head is white, and there are men on it

It means pyramidal, and another said:

By your life, you have given your neighbor a duty that you would not bear against a man.

That is, in the past, and another said:

Oh God, whoever has a grudge against me, make him menstruate like a menstruating woman.

Any old one. And not faridh is raised as an attribute of a cow. Nor bikr is an appositive. It was said: not faridh is the predicate of an implied subject, meaning neither is she faridh, nor is she submissive, nor does she irrigate the field, nor is she Muslim, so inform him. It was said: the faridh is the one who has given birth to many wombs, so her stomach is spacious for that, because the meaning of faridh in the language is wide, some of the later scholars said. And the virgin: the young one who has not become pregnant. Al-Qutbi narrated that it is the one who gave birth. And the virgin: the first of the children, he said:

Oh, Bakr Bakrin, oh, you who stole my heart, you have become to me like an arm to a shoulder

Al-Bakr also among female animals and humans: what the stallion has not conquered, and the Baa is broken. And with its opening, the young camel. Al-Awan: the half that has given birth to a pregnancy or two pregnancy, and it is the strongest and best of the cows, unlike horses. The poet said describing a mare:

A dark-coloured, not very strong, nor a dull-coloured, bay-coloured

Akhshaf horse: if the blemish rises from its belly to its side. Mujahid said: Awan among cows is the one that has given birth time after time. And the linguists narrated it. And it is said: Awan is the tall palm tree and it is, as they claim, a Yemeni language. And Harb Awan: if there was a war of Bakr before it, Zuhair said:

If a fierce, harmful war breaks out, its fangs will tear people apart.

That is, she is neither young nor old, that is, she is weak. Its plural is 'awn, with a damma on the 'aym and a sukoon on the waw. It is also heard with a damma on the waw, like rusul. It was mentioned previously. Al-Farra' narrated that 'awnat 'awwainan is derived from 'awwan.

The Almighty's saying: So do what you are commanded is a renewal of the command, an emphasis and a warning against being stubborn, so they did not leave it. This indicates that the requirement of the command is obligation, as the jurists say, and this is correct according to what is mentioned in the principles of jurisprudence, and that the command is immediate, which is also the doctrine of most jurists. The correctness of this is indicated by the fact that the Almighty deemed them short when they did not hasten to do what they were commanded to do, so He said: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do it. It was said: No, but rather to be lenient, because He did not rebuke them for delaying and reviewing the address. This was said by Ibn Khuwayz Mandad.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty told us about the stubbornness of the Children of Israel and their many questions to their Messenger, so when they were difficult for themselves, God was difficult for them. If they had slaughtered any cow, it would have been enough for them, as Ibn Abbas, Ubaydah, and more than one person said, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them, so they said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, meaning what this cow is and what its description is. Ibn Jarir said, Abu Kurayb told us, Thammam bin Ali told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Minhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them - a sound chain of transmission - and it was narrated by more than one person on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and so said Ubaydah, Al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and more than one person. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them. Ibn Jurayj said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "They were only commanded to take the smallest cow, but when they were severe, may God be severe on them, and by God, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them." He said: He says that it is a cow, neither old nor young, meaning neither old nor young, which has not yet been mated by a stallion, as Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Atiyah al-Awfi, Ata' al-Khurasani, Wahb ibn Munabbih, al-Dahhak, al-Hasan and Qatadah said. Ibn Abbas also said it, and al-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awwan is between that, meaning half between old and young, and it is the strongest of the beasts and cows, and the best of them. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak. Al-Suddi said: Awwan is the half that is between that, which has given birth and its offspring has been born. Hisham said, on the authority of Juwaybir, on the authority of Kathir ibn Ziyad, on the authority of al-Hasan, regarding the cow: It was a wild cow. Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Whoever wears a yellow sandal will not cease to be happy as long as he wears it, and that is the saying of God Almighty: It pleases the observers. And so on. Mujahid and Wahb ibn Munabbih said: It was yellow. On the authority of Ibn Umar: It was yellow in the hoof. On the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr: It was yellow in the horn and the hoof. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Nasr ibn Ali told us, Nuh ibn Qays told us, Abu Raja' told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding the words of God Almighty: A yellow cow, bright in color, he said: black, intensely black. This is strange, and the first is correct. That is why he emphasized its yellowness by saying: Bright in color. Atiyah Al-Awfi said: Bright in color, almost black from its yellowness. Saeed ibn Jubayr said: Bright in color, he said: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: clear. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Faqi'a lunha means: almost black from its yellowness. Saeed bin Jubayr said, Faqi'a lunha means: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: intense yellowness, almost white from its yellowness. As-Suddi said, pleasing to the observers means: astonishing to the observers. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Wahb bin Munabbih said: If you look at her skin, you imagine that the sun's rays are coming out of her skin. In the Torah, it says that she was red, so perhaps this is a mistake in the translation, or as the first said: that she was intense yellow tending towards redness and blackness, and God knows best. And the Almighty's saying: Indeed, the cows are alike to us meaning because of their large number, so He distinguished for us this cow and described it and solved it for us and indeed, if God wills if He makes it clear to us we will be guided to it. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Yahya al-Awadi al-Sufi told us, Abu Saeed Ahmad ibn Dawud al-Haddad told us, Surur ibn al-Mughirah al-Wasiti ibn

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is." He said, "Indeed, He says, 'It is a cow neither old nor young, but between the two. So do what you are commanded.'"

Akhi Mansur ibn Zadhan told us, on the authority of Ibad ibn Mansur, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Abu Rafi', on the authority of Abu Hurayrah: He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Had it not been that the Children of Israel said, 'And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been given anything. And had they intercepted a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them." This is a strange hadith from this aspect, and the best case is that it is from the words of Abu Hurayrah, as was mentioned previously by al-Suddi, and God knows best. "He said: He says that she is a cow that is not trained to plow the earth or irrigate the crops" meaning that she is not trained for plowing nor prepared for irrigating the irrigated area, but It is honorable, good, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, Muslim, he says, there is no defect in it, and Abu al-Aaliyah and al-Rabi' said the same, and Mujahid said: Muslim from the defect, and Ata' al-Khurasani said, Muslim in its limbs and creation, there is no defect in it, Mujahid said: neither white nor black, and Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi', al-Hasan and Qatadah said, there is no white in it, and Ata' al-Khurasani said: there is no defect in it, he said its color is one, pure, and something similar was narrated on the authority of Atiyyah al-Awfi, Wahb ibn Munabbih and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, and al-Suddi said: there is no defect in it of white, black or red, and all of these sayings are close in meaning, and some of them claimed that the meaning of that is the saying of God Almighty: It is a cow that is not subservient, it is not tamed by work, then he resumed and said: tills the earth, meaning it is worked on by plowing, but it does not irrigate the crops, and this is weak because he interpreted the subservient that has not been tamed by work as meaning it does not till the earth nor irrigate the crops, as al-Qurtubi and others decided: They said, now you have come with the truth, he said Qatadah: Now you have explained to us, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, and before that, by God, the truth had come to them, So they slaughtered it, but they were almost not going to do it. Ad-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They were almost not going to do it, and that was not what they wanted, because they wanted not to slaughter it, meaning that with this explanation, these questions, answers, and clarification, they did not slaughter it except after great effort, and in this there is blame on them, because their only aim was to be stubborn, so for this reason they were almost not going to slaughter it. Muhammad ibn Ka'b and Muhammad ibn Qays said: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so because of its high price. There is a problem with this, because the high price was not proven except by the transmission of the Children of Israel, as mentioned earlier in the story of Abu al-'Aliyah and al-Suddi. Al-'Awfi narrated it from Ibn 'Abbas. 'Ubaydah, Mujahid, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Abu al-'Aliyah, and 'Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said: They bought it for a lot of money, and there is a difference of opinion about it. Then other things have been said about its price, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn 'Uyaynah informed us, Muhammad ibn Suqah informed me from 'Ikrimah, he said: Its price was only three dinars. This is a good chain of transmission from 'Ikrimah, and it appears that he transmitted it from the People of the Book as well. Ibn Jarir said, and others said: They were not about to do that for fear of disgrace if God found out who killed the one they disputed about, and he did not support it from anyone. Then he chose that the correct view in this is that they were not about to do that because of its high price and the disgrace. There is a problem with this, but rather the correct view, and God knows best, is what was mentioned earlier from the narration of al-Dahhak from Ibn 'Abbas, as we have explained it. And God is the source of success.

Question This verse was used as evidence to limit the characteristics of this cow until they were specified or restricted after being released on the validity of the sale of a salam in an animal, as is the doctrine of Malik, Al-Awza'i, Al-Layth, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and the majority of scholars, past and present, based on what was proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: A woman should not describe a woman to her husband as if he is looking at her. And as the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, described the camels of blood money in accidental killing, and likened intentional killing to the characteristics mentioned in the hadith. Abu Hanifa, Al-Thawri and the Kufians said: The sale of a salam in an animal is not valid because its conditions are not regulated, and something similar was reported on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, Hudhayfah ibn Al-Yaman, Abd Al-Rahman ibn Samurah and others.

Fath al-Qadir

And His saying: 68- They said, 'Call upon your Lord for us.' This is a type of their usual stubbornness, as they used to follow these paths in most of what God commanded them to do. If they had left the stubbornness and the forced questions, it would have been sufficient for them to slaughter a cow from the cows, but they were strict, so God was strict with them, as will be explained. And al-Farid: is the old one, and its meaning in the language is broad. It was said in al-Kashshaf: It is as if it was called al-Farid because it imposed its age: that is, it cut it off and reached its end. And something old is called al-Farid, and from it the saying of the rajaz poet:

Oh God, whoever has a grudge against me, give him a humiliation like a menstruating woman.

That is, old. It was said that al-Farid is the one who has given birth to many wombs, so her belly expands. Al-Bakr is the young one who has not become pregnant. It is used in female animals and human beings for what the stallion has not yet opened. It is also used for the first of the children. From this, the rajaz poet said:

Oh Bakr Bakrin, oh hard-hearted one, you have become to me like an arm to an shoulder

The Awan: is the one who is between the ages of the Farid and the Bakr, and she is the one who has given birth once or twice, and it is said: she is the one who has given birth once after once, and the reference in his saying: between that is to the Farid and the Bakr, and although they are feminine, they are referred to by what is for the masculine according to the interpretation of the mentioned, as if he said: between that mentioned, and it is permissible to enter the requirement for two things because the mentioned is multiple. And his saying: Then do is a renewal of the command, and an emphasis on it, and a deterrent to them from being stubborn, but that did not benefit them nor did it work on them, rather they returned to their nature, and returned to their cunning and continued in their usual habit.

from the same section of the cow that is not specific, then it became specific to their question, and it requires abrogation before the action, because the specification nullifies the choice established by the text and the truth is that they are both permissible, and the second opinion is supported by the apparent wording and what was narrated from him, peace and blessings be upon him: If they had slaughtered any cow they wanted, it would have sufficed for them, but they were hard on themselves, so God was hard on them. And his rebuking them for persisting and warning them to review by saying: So do what you are commanded means what you are commanded in the sense of their saying: I commanded you to do good, so do what I was commanded to do, or in the sense of what you are commanded to do.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

68. The Almighty said: "They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is" meaning what its characteristics are "Moses said: He says" meaning that God Almighty says It is a cow neither old nor young meaning neither old nor young, and the old one is the one who does not give birth, it is said from it: she gave birth, she gives birth, and the virgin is the young girl who has never given birth, and the ha was deleted from them to be specific to females like the menstruating woman Awan in the middle of the middle between that meaning between the years, it is said that the woman has been helped by help: if she is over thirty, Al-Akhfash said (the Awan: the one who has never given birth, and it was said:) the Awan is the one who has given birth repeatedly and its plural is Awn So do what you are commanded of slaughtering the cow and do not ask too many questions.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

68- They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is' meaning its condition and description. It would have been right for them to say, What kind of cow is it? or How is it? because what is often used to ask about the type. However, when they saw that what they were commanded to do was in a state in which nothing of its type was found, they treated it as if it were something whose reality they did not know and had not seen anything like it. He said, 'He says that it is a cow, neither old nor young.' It is said that a cow is made up of two types of cows, from the word fard, which means to cut off, as if its age was made up. The construction of al-bakar is for the first, from al-bakra and al-bakarah.

Awan is half. He said: Soft between Abkar and Awan.

Between that means between what was mentioned of the farid and the virgin, and therefore between was added to it, because it is only added to multiple, and the return of these metaphors and the application of those attributes to a cow indicates that what is meant by it is specific, and it requires delaying the explanation from the time of the address, and whoever denies that claimed that what is meant by it is a cow

Surat al-Baqarah 2:69

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her color is." He said, "Indeed, He says that she is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:69

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her color is." He said, "Indeed, He says that she is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

(They said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her color is. He said, He says that she is a yellow cow, bright in color. Deep yellow, pleasing to the observers with her beauty, meaning that she pleases them.)

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of this is: The people of Moses said to Moses: Call upon your Lord to show us what its color is? That is, the color of the cow that you ordered us to slaughter. This is also another act of obstinacy on their part after the first, and the effort to ask for what they had refrained from the second time and the last question. This is because they were not restricted the second time when it was said to them after their question about the permissibility of the cow that they were ordered to slaughter, so they refused to do anything other than what they had refrained from asking about its description, so they were restricted to one type and not the other types, as a punishment from God to them for their question that they asked their Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, out of their obstinacy towards him. Then He did not restrict them to one color of it and not another, so they refused to do anything other than what they were not able to do, so they said out of obstinacy towards their Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, as Ibn Abbas mentioned: Call upon your Lord to show us what its color is, so they were told as a punishment for them: It is a bright yellow cow, its color pleases the observers. They were restricted to one colour, not another. This means that the cow that I ordered you to slaughter was bright yellow in colour.

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of his statement, He makes clear to us what its color is, is what color is it? That is why color is in the nominative case, because it is the subject of what. And the reason why what is not in the accusative case is because the root of any and what is a dispersed interrogative plural. The speaker says: Explain to us, is this cow black or yellow? So since his statement, He makes clear to us, could not be used for a dispersed interrogative, it could not be used for any, because it is the dispersed plural. And likewise, everything that is similar to it, the action in it is the same, in what and any.

The people of interpretation differed about the meaning of his statement: yellow. Some of them said:

It means: intense black. Those who said that among them mentioned: Abu Masoud Ismail bin Masoud Al-Jahdary told me, he said: Nuh bin Qais told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sayf, on the authority of Al-Hasan: Yellow, its color is bright, he said: intense black.

Abu Zaydah Zakariya bin Yahya bin Abi Zaydah and Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, they said, Muslim bin Ibrahim told us, he said, Nuh bin Qais told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Saif Abi Raja, on the authority of Al-Hasan, similarly. And others said: The meaning of that is: yellow horns and hoofs. Mention of those who said that:

Hisham bin Yunus Al-Nahshali told me, he said, Hafs bin Ghiyath told us, on the authority of Ash'ath, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding his statement: Yellow, bright in color, he said: Yellow horns and hoofs.

Yaqub bin Ibrahim told me, Hisham told me, Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Katheer bin Ziyad, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding his statement: Yellow, bright in color, he said: It was wild.

Yaqub told me, he said, Marwan bin Muawiyah told us, on the authority of Ibrahim, on the authority of Abu Hafs, on the authority of Mughra or on the authority of a man, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubair: A yellow cow, its color is bright. He said: Yellow horns and hoofs. Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: It is yellow.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Ad-Dahhak bin Muxhallad told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: It is a yellow cow, its color is bright. He said: If they had taken a yellow cow, it would have sufficed for them.

Abu Ja'far said: I think that the one who said in his statement: yellow, meaning black, went with their saying in describing black camels: These are yellow camels, and this is a yellow she-camel, meaning black. And this was said about camels because their blackness tends toward yellowness, and from this is the saying of the poet:

These are my horses from him and these are my riders, they are zero, their children are like raisins

He means by his saying: They are yellow, they are black. If this is how camels are described, then it is not how cows are described.

Although the Arabs do not describe blackness as bubbling, but rather they describe blackness when they describe it as intense, such as halookh and the like, so you say: He is pitch black, "hanak," and halakook, and black as a strange black and dark-skinned, and you do not say: He is striking black, but rather you say: He is striking yellow. Describing it as bubbling is clear evidence of the opposite of the interpretation that interpreted his statement, She is a striking yellow cow, by the one who interpreted it as meaning black, intensely black.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: its color is bright.

Abu Jaafar said: It means: its color is pure. And the qaf'u' in yellowness is similar to the nasoo' in whiteness, which is its intensity and clarity, as: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, he said: Qatada said: Faqi'a lunha means its color is pure.

Al-Muthanna told me: Adam told us: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Her color is bright, meaning her color is clear.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

Musa told us, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Faqi' he said: its color is clear.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Its color is bright yellow, intense yellow, almost turning white from its yellowness. Abu Jaafar said: I see it as white!

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding his statement: its color is bright, he said: its color is intensely yellow.

It is said: His color is bright, he is bright, as the poet said:

I carried the roses on him until I left him humiliated, soaking the dirt and his color was bright

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: It pleases the observers.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying, delights the observers, is that this cow delights the observers with its beautiful creation, appearance, and form, as Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Sa'id told us, on the authority of Qatada: delights the observers, meaning it delights the observers.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ismail bin Abdul Karim told us, he said, Abdul Samad bin Maqal told me, that he heard Wahba say: It pleases the onlookers, if you look at it, it seems to you that the sun's rays are coming out of its skin.

Musa told us, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: It pleases the observers, he said: It astonishes the observers.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her color is.' What is an interrogative as its subject, and its color is the predicate. It is permissible to make its color the subject of makes clear, and what is redundant. Color is one of the colors, and it is a form like black, white, and red. Color is the type. So-and-so is changeable: if he does not stick to one character and one state. He said:

Every day you change color differently, you are more beautiful

The color of unripe dates is colored: if the signs of ripeness appear in them. The color: the date palm, which is a type of palm tree. Al-Akhfash said: It is a group, and its singular is Layna.

His saying: Yellow: The majority of commentators say that it was yellow in color, from the well-known yellowness. Makki said on the authority of some of them: Even the horn and the hoof. Al-Hasan and Ibn Jubayr said: It was yellow in the horn and the hoof only. Al-Hasan also said that yellow means black. The poet said:

These are my horses from him and these are my riders, their young ones are as yellow as raisins

I said: The first is more correct because it is the apparent one, and this is anomalous and is only used metaphorically for camels. God Almighty said: As if they were yellow camels, because the blackness of camels is yellow. If he had meant blackness, he would not have emphasized it with faqra', and that is a description specific to yellowness, and blackness is not described by that. The Arabs say: Aswad thalak wa halakuk wa halakuk, "Dujuji" and Gharib, "Ahmar qani'", Abyad naaseh, "Lahaq wa lahaq wa yaqq", Akhdar nadir, and Azaar faqaa'an, this is what the language transmitters from the Arabs stated. Al-Kisa'i said: It is said that its color faqa'a yafqa'an if its yellowness is clear. Faqa' is a bad condition. The calamities of time. He made a sound with his fingers, and from this is the hadith of Ibn Abbas: He forbade faqa'a in prayer, which is the fiq'ah, which is the pinching of the fingers until they fall apart. Yellow is not declined in definite or indefinite nouns, because it contains the feminine alif, which is its constant, so it differs from the ha', because whatever contains the ha' is declined indefinite nouns, like Fatima and Aisha.

God the Almighty said: Bright in color meaning pure in color, with no color other than the color of its skin. Delighting to the observers Wahb said: It is as if the sun's rays are coming out of its skin. For this reason Ibn Abbas said: The yellow color pleases the soul. He specifically mentioned wearing yellow sandals, as narrated by Al-Naqqash. Ali ibn Abi Talib, may God be pleased with him, said: Whoever wears yellow sandals will have less worry, because God the Almighty says: Yellow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers, as narrated by Al-Tha'labi. Ibn Al-Zubayr and Muhammad ibn Abi Katheer forbade wearing black sandals, because they are worrying. The meaning of please is astonishment. Abu Al-Aaliyah said its meaning is in its appearance and appearance, so it has two characteristics, and God knows best.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty told us about the stubbornness of the Children of Israel and their many questions to their Messenger, so when they were difficult for themselves, God was difficult for them. If they had slaughtered any cow, it would have been enough for them, as Ibn Abbas, Ubaydah, and more than one person said, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them, so they said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, meaning what this cow is and what its description is. Ibn Jarir said, Abu Kurayb told us, Thammam bin Ali told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Minhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them - a sound chain of transmission - and it was narrated by more than one person on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and so said Ubaydah, Al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and more than one person. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them. Ibn Jurayj said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "They were only commanded to take the smallest cow, but when they were severe, may God be severe on them, and by God, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them." He said: He says that it is a cow, neither old nor young, meaning neither old nor young, which has not yet been mated by a stallion, as Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Atiyah al-Awfi, Ata' al-Khurasani, Wahb ibn Munabbih, al-Dahhak, al-Hasan and Qatadah said. Ibn Abbas also said it, and al-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awwan is between that, meaning half between old and young, and it is the strongest of the beasts and cows, and the best of them. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' bin Anas, Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak. Al-Suddi said: Awwan is the half that is between that, which has given birth and its offspring has been born. Hisham said, on the authority of Juwaybir, on the authority of Kathir ibn Ziyad, on the authority of al-Hasan, regarding the cow: It was a wild cow. Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Whoever wears a yellow sandal will not cease to be happy as long as he wears it, and that is the saying of God Almighty: It pleases the observers. And so on. Mujahid and Wahb ibn Munabbih said: It was yellow. On the authority of Ibn Umar: It was yellow in the hoof. On the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr: It was yellow in the horn and the hoof. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Nasr ibn Ali told us, Nuh ibn Qays told us, Abu Raja' told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding the words of God Almighty: A yellow cow, bright in color, he said: black, intensely black. This is strange, and the first is correct. That is why he emphasized its yellowness by saying: Bright in color. Atiyah Al-Awfi said: Bright in color, almost black from its yellowness. Saeed ibn Jubayr said: Bright in color, he said: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: clear. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Faqi'a lunha means: almost black from its yellowness. Saeed bin Jubair said, Faqi'a lunha means: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: intense yellowness, almost white from its yellowness. As-Suddi said, pleasing to the observers means: astonishing to the observers. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Wahb bin Munabbih said: If you look at her skin, you imagine that the sun's rays are coming out of her skin. In the Torah, it says that she was red, so perhaps this is a mistake in the translation, or as the first said: that she was intense yellow tending towards redness and blackness, and God knows best. And the Almighty's saying: Indeed, the cows are alike to us meaning because of their large number, so He distinguished for us this cow and described it and solved it for us and indeed, if God wills if He makes it clear to us we will be guided to it. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Yahya al-Awdi al-Sufi told us, Abu Saeed Ahmad ibn Dawud al-Haddad told us, Surur ibn al-Mughirah al-Wasiti ibn Akhi Mansur ibn Zadhan told us, on the authority of Ibad ibn Mansur, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Abu Rafi', on the authority of Abu Hurayrah: He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Had it not been that the Children of Israel said, 'And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been given anything. And had they intercepted a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them." This is a strange hadith from this aspect, and the best case is that it is from the words of Abu Hurayrah, as was mentioned previously by al-Suddi, and God knows best. "He said: He says that she is a cow that is not trained to plow the earth or irrigate the crops" meaning that she is not trained for plowing nor prepared for irrigating the irrigated area, but it is honorable, good, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, Muslim, he says, there is no defect in it, and Abu al-Aaliyah and al-Rabi' said the same, and Mujahid said: Muslim from the defect, and Ata' al-Khurasani said, Muslim in its limbs and creation, there is no defect in it, Mujahid said: neither white nor black, and Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi', al-Hasan and Qatadah said, there is no white in it, and Ata' al-Khurasani said: there is no defect in it, he said its color is one, pure, and something similar was narrated on the authority of Atiyah al-Awfi, Wahb ibn Munabbih and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, and al-Suddi said: there is no defect in it of white, black or red, and all of these sayings are close in meaning, and some of them claimed that the meaning of that is the saying of God Almighty: It is a cow that is not subservient, it is not tamed by work, then he resumed and said: tills the earth, meaning it is worked on by plowing, but it does not irrigate the crops, and this is weak because he interpreted the subservient that has not been tamed by work as meaning it does not till the earth nor irrigate the crops, as al-Qurtubi and others decided: They said, now you have come with the truth, he said Qatadah: Now you have explained to us, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, and before that, by God, the truth had come to them, So they slaughtered it, but they were almost not going to do it. Ad-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They were almost not going to do it, and that was not what they wanted, because they wanted not to slaughter it, meaning that with this explanation, these questions, answers, and clarification, they did not slaughter it except after great effort, and in this there is blame on them, because their only aim was to be stubborn, so for this reason they were almost not going to slaughter it. Muhammad ibn Ka'b and Muhammad ibn Qays said: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so because of its high price. There is a problem with this, because the high price was not proven except by the transmission of the Children of Israel, as mentioned earlier in the story of Abu al-'Aliyah and al-Suddi. Al-'Awfi narrated it from Ibn 'Abbas. 'Ubaydah, Mujahid, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Abu al-'Aliyah, and 'Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said: They bought it for a lot of money, and there is a difference of opinion about it. Then other things have been said about its price, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn 'Uyaynah informed us, Muhammad ibn Suqah informed me from 'Ikrimah, he said: Its price was only three dinars. This is a good chain of transmission from 'Ikrimah, and it appears that he transmitted it from the People of the Book as well. Ibn Jarir said, and others said: They were not about to do that for fear of disgrace if God found out who killed the one they disputed about, and he did not support it from anyone. Then he chose that the correct view in this is that they were not about to do that because of its high price and the disgrace. There is a problem with this, but rather the correct view, and God knows best, is what was mentioned earlier from the narration of al-Dahhak from Ibn 'Abbas, as we have explained it. And God is the source of success.

Question This verse was used as evidence to limit the characteristics of this cow until they were specified or restricted after being released on the validity of the sale of a salam in an animal, as is the doctrine of Malik, Al-Awza'i, Al-Layth, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and the majority of scholars, past and present, based on what was proven in the two Sahih's on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: A woman should not describe a woman to her husband as if he is looking at her. And as the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, described the camels of blood money in accidental killing, and likened intentional killing to the characteristics mentioned in the hadith. Abu Hanifa, Al-Thawri and the Kufians said: The sale of a salam in an animal is not valid because its conditions are not regulated, and something similar was reported on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, Hudhayfah ibn Al-Yaman, Abd Al-Rahman ibn Samurah and others.

69- So they said, 'Call upon your Lord for us.' The color is one of the colors, and the majority of commentators agree that they were all yellow. Some of them said: Even its horn and hoof. Al-Hasan and Saeed bin Jubair said: It was only yellow in its horn and hoof, which is contrary to what appears. What is meant by yellowness here is the known yellowness. It was narrated from Al-Hasan that yellowness means black, and this is one of the innovations and objections of commentaries. I wonder how it is true that the black color, which is the ugliest of colors, pleases the onlookers, and how it is correct to describe it as blurry which everyone who knows the Arabic language knows does not apply to black in any way, as they say in describing black: ḥalak, ḥalak, dawjī, and gharīb. Al-Kisa'i said: It is said: Its color blurred if its yellowness is pure. He said in Al-Kashshaf: Blurry is the most intense and purest of yellowness. The meaning of pleases the onlookers is that it brings them joy when they look at it, admiring it and appreciating its color. Wahb said: It was as if the sun's rays were coming out of her skin.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

69. "They said: 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her colour is.' He said: 'He says: She is a yellow cow, bright in colour.'" Ibn Abbas said: Deep yellow. Qatada said: Clear. Al-Hasan said: Yellow is the blood. The first is more correct because it is not said: bright black, but rather: bright yellow, pitch black, blood red, fresh green, and white speckled for emphasis. Delighting the beholders: they are amazed by her beauty and the clarity of her colour.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

69-They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what her colour is.' He said, 'He says that she is a yellow cow, bright in colour.' Bright yellow is the brightness of yellow, and that is why it is emphasized. It is said, yellow, just as it is said, black in pitch. In its attribution to colour, which is a yellow attribute due to its association with it, there is an emphasis, as if it were said, very yellow, very yellow. And according to al-Hasan, it is black, very black. And that is how the Almighty's statement, yellow camels, was interpreted. Al-A'sha said:

These are my horses from him and these are my riders, their young ones are like raisins

Perhaps he used the word yellow to refer to blackness because it is one of its precursors, or because the blackness of camels is topped with yellowness and has a look in it, because yellowness in this sense is not confirmed by the bursting pleasing the beholders meaning it pleases them, and pleasure is originally a delight in the heart when obtaining benefit, or anticipating it from the secret.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:70

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, the cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be [rightly] guided."

Surat al-Baqarah 2:70

They said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, the cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be [rightly] guided."

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

(They said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Whether it is a sheep or a cow, The cows, that is, its species described as mentioned, are too similar to us due to their large number, so we were not guided to the intended meaning. And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided to it. And in the hadith, If they had not made an exception, it would not have been made clear to them until the end of time.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Jaafar said: What he meant by his saying: They said is that the people of Moses who were ordered to slaughter the cow said to Moses.

So he left out mentioning Moses, and mentioned the one who mentioned him, being content with what the apparent meaning of the speech indicated. That is because the meaning of the speech is that they said to him: Call upon your Lord. So he did not mention to him what we described.

And the saying: He makes clear to us what it is, is a report from God about the people, and a third of them is ignorant. That is because if they had slaughtered any of the cows that were easy to be called cows, it would have been sufficient for them, and nothing else would have been required of them, because they had not commanded them to have one characteristic rather than another. So when they asked to explain what its characteristic was, He explained to them that it was one of the teeth, unlike the other teeth. So they were told: It is a young animal between the weaned, the young, and the udder. So when its age was explained to them, if they had slaughtered the lowest cow with the age that was explained to them, it would have been sufficient for them, because they had not stopped it with anything other than the age that was specified for them, nor had they restricted it to one color rather than another. So when they refused to have it known to them except by its characteristics, explained by its boundaries that differentiate it from the rest of the beasts of the earth, and they made it difficult for themselves, God made it difficult for him by their many questions to their Prophet and their fabrications about him.

Therefore, our Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to his nation: "Leave me as I have left you, for those who came before you were destroyed because of their excessive questioning and disagreement with their prophets. So if I command you to do something, then do it, and if I forbid you from doing something, then refrain from it as much as you can."

Abu Ja'far said: But when the people increased their harm and oppression towards their Prophet Moses, peace be upon him, God increased their punishment and severity, as Abu Kurayb told us, he said, 'Uthman ibn 'Ali told us, on the authority of al-A'mash, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn 'Amr, on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, he said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been sufficient for them, but they were severe, so God was severe upon them.

Muhammad bin Abdul A'la told us, he said, Al-Mu'tamir told us, he said, I heard Ayoub, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sirin, on the authority of Ubaidah, he said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have sufficed for them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Ayoub.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Hisham bin Hassan, all of them, on the authority of Ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah al-Salmi, he said: They asked and were strict, so he was strict with them.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Ibn Uyyaynah told us, on the authority of Amr bin Dinar, on the authority of Ikrimah, he said: If the Children of Israel had taken a cow, it would have sufficed for them. And if it were not for their saying: And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided, they would not have found it.

Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow,' if they had taken a cow that was not there, it would have sufficed for them. They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is.' He said, 'Indeed, He says that it is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the fields.' He said: If they had taken a cow of this description, it would have sufficed for them. They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is.' He said, 'Indeed, He says that it is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the fields.' The verse.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, in a similar manner, and he added to it: But they were strict, so He was strict with them.

Al-Qasim told me, Al-Husayn told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, Mujahid said: If they had taken any cow, it would have sufficed for them. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have sufficed them. Ibn Jurayj said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: They were only commanded to take the smallest cow, but when they were hard on themselves, God was hard on them. By God, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: If the people, when they were commanded to slaughter a cow, had reviewed a cow and slaughtered it, it would have been that cow, but they were too hard on themselves, so God was too hard on them. And if the people had not made an exception and said, And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided, they would never have been guided to it.

Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: It was mentioned to us that the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to say: "The people were only commanded to sacrifice the lowest cow, but when they were too hard on themselves, God made it too hard on them. By the One in Whose Hand is the soul of Muhammad, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them."

Musa told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: in a report he mentioned, on the authority of Abu Malik, and on the authority of Abu Salih, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: If they had intercepted a cow and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were harsh and obstinate toward Musa, so God was harsh with them.

Abu Kuraib told us, Abu Bakr bin Ayyash said, Ibn Abbas said: If the people had looked for the lowest cow, meaning the Children of Israel, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so it was strict with them, so they bought it with its hide full of dinars.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: If they had taken a cow as God had commanded them, that would have been enough for them, but the affliction is in these matters, so they said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, so He was strict with them, and said, He says that it is a cow neither old nor young, but between that, so they said, Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what its color is, so he said, He says that it is a yellow cow, bright in color, pleasing to the observers, he said, and He was strict with them more than the first, so he recited until he reached: Muslim, without blemish, but they refused again and said, "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, cows seem alike to us, and indeed, if God wills, we will be guided." So He was strict with them, and He said, He says that it is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the crops, Muslim, without blemish in it, he said, so they were forced to take a cow whose description was not known other than it, and it was yellow, with neither black nor white in it.

Abu Ja'far said: These statements that we have mentioned from those we have mentioned from the Companions, the Followers, and those who came after them, from their saying that if the Children of Israel had taken the smallest cow and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them, is the clearest evidence that the people saw that the ruling of God, in what He commanded and forbade in His Book and on the tongue of His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, was on the apparent generality, without the hidden specificity, unless some of what the apparent revelation generalized was specified by a Book from God or the Messenger of God? And that the revelation or the Messenger, if it specified some of what the apparent revelation generalized by a ruling contrary to what the apparent indicated, then what is specified from that is outside the ruling of the verse that specifically generalized that type, and the rest of the rulings of the verse are on the generality? As we have explained in our book, The Message, from the subtle statement on the explanation of the principles of rulings in our statement on generality and specificity, and the agreement of their statement on that with our statement and their doctrine with our doctrine, and their error in the statement of those who say specificity in rulings, and their testimony to the corruption of the statement of the one who said: The ruling of the verse that came is the coming of generality on generality, unless some of what the verse included is specified from it. If some of it is specified, then the ruling of the verse then is specific in what is specified from it, and the rest of that is general.

That is because all of those we mentioned earlier who criticized the Children of Israel for asking their Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about the description of the cow they were commanded to slaughter, its age and its adornment, saw that they were mistaken in asking the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, Moses, and that if they had reviewed the lowest type of cow when they were commanded to slaughter it with his saying: God commands you to slaughter a cow, and slaughtered it, they would have fulfilled what was required of them from God's command in that regard, and obeyed the truth, since the people were not limited to one type of cow rather than another, and one age rather than another.

They saw, however, that when they asked Moses about its age and he told them about it, and limited them to one age rather than another and one type rather than another, and singled out from all the types of cows one type of it, they were in their question to him in the second question, after what he singled out for them from the types of cows, in error similar to what they were in error in their question to him in the first question.

They also saw that in the third issue they were on the same path as they were on the first and second, and that what was necessary for them in the first case was to use the apparent meaning of the command and slaughter any animal they wanted that was called a cow.

They also saw that what was necessary for them in the second case was to use the apparent meaning of the command and slaughter any animal they wanted that was called a cow that was neither old nor young. They did not see that their ruling, since some cows were designated for them and not others in the second case, was transferred from what was necessary for them in the first case, from using the apparent meaning of the command to the specificity.

The consensus of all of them on what we have narrated from them regarding that, along with the narration we have narrated from the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in agreement with their statement, is clear evidence of the correctness of our statement regarding generality and specificity, and that the rulings of God, may He be glorified and exalted, in the verses of His Book regarding what He has commanded and prohibited are general, unless He specifies something that must be submitted to. And that if He specifies something from it, then the specific ruling of it is outside the ruling of the apparent general verse, and the rest of the ruling of the verse is based on its apparent generality, and it supports the truth of what we have said regarding that, and is a just witness to the corruption of the statement of whoever contradicts our statement regarding it.

Some of those who were extremely ignorant and confused claimed that the people only asked Moses what they asked after God had commanded them to slaughter a cow, because they thought that they had been commanded to slaughter a specific cow that was specifically designated for that purpose, just as Moses' staff was specifically designated for its meaning, so they asked him to make it permissible for them so that they would know it.

If the ignorant had pondered what he said, what he found difficult to say would have been easy for him. That is because he considered it too great for the people to ask their prophet what they asked him out of their strictness in their religion, then he added to them something even greater than what he found strange that they were doing. He claimed that they thought it permissible for God to impose an obligation on them and worship them with an act of worship, then not explain to them what He imposed on them and worshipped them with, until they asked Him to explain that to them! So he attributed to God Almighty what is not permissible to attribute to Him, and he attributed to the people ignorance that which the insane do not attribute to! So he claimed that they were asking their Lord to impose obligations on them, so we seek refuge in God from confusion, and we ask Him for success and guidance. As for his saying: The cows seem alike to us, "the cow" is copulation of a cow.

Some of them read: Al-Baqir, and even though this is permissible in speech, it occurs in the speech and poetry of the Arabs, as Maymun bin Qais said:

What is his fault that Baqir refused the water? He refused the water only to strike them.

As Umayya said:

They drive the emaciated ones of the plain to the mountain, fearing that they will perish.

It is not permissible to read it, because it contradicts the reading that came with the argument, transmitted by those who are not permitted to transmit it unanimously, with errors, forgetfulness, and lies.

As for the interpretation of his saying: It became similar to us, he means: it was confusing to us. And the reading differs in its recitation. Some of them would recite it: It became similar to us, with a light shin and a fat-ha on the ha', on the example of tafa'ala, and the verb would be mentioned, even if the cows were a group. Because it is the custom of the Arabs to make the masculine of every plural verb whose singular is with the ha', and its plural by dropping the ha' and making it feminine, as God Almighty said in its counterpart in the masculine: As if they were trunks of palm trees uprooted.

(al-Qamar 54:20) So he mentioned the hollowed-out one, which is an attribute of the palm tree, to make the word palm tree masculine. And he said in another place: As if they were hollow trunks of palm trees (al-Haqqah 69:7), so he made the hollow one, which is an attribute of the palm tree, in the sense of the palm tree. Because even though it is in the masculine singular form as we described before, it is the plural of a palm tree.

Some of them would recite it: The cows look alike to us, with emphasis on the shin and a damma on the ha', thus feminizing the verb in the sense of feminizing the cows, as he said: empty palm trunks. And at the beginning of tashabah, a ta' would be added to indicate its feminization, then the second ta' would be assimilated into the shin of tashabah because its articulation point is close to the articulation point of the shin, so it would become a stressed shin, and the ha' would be raised due to the future tense and being free from the jussive and nasab.

Some of them would recite: The cows look alike to us, and it would be pronounced as if it were a report from a male, because of what we mentioned about the reason for the reading of the one who read that as tashabah with the lightening and the accusative of the ha', except that he would raise it with the ya' that he creates at the beginning of tashabah, which comes with the meaning of the future, and the ta' would be assimilated into the shin as the reader did in tashabah with the ta' and the shaddah.

Abu Ja'far said: The correct reading in this regard according to us is: Indeed, the cows are similar to us, with a light shin, tashabah and a fat-ha on its ha', meaning I interact, due to the consensus of the authoritative reciters on the correctness of this, and their rejection of other readings. The authoritative is not to be objected to by the statement of those who allow for forgetfulness, negligence, and error in what has been transmitted.

As for his saying, And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided, they meant: And indeed, if God wills, He will make clear to us what was confusing and ambiguous to us regarding the matter of the cow that we were commanded to slaughter. The meaning of their being guided in this context is: He will make clear to them, that is, what they were obliged to slaughter from among the other types of cows.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: Indeed, the cows are alike to us. They asked a fourth question, and did not comply with the order after the explanation. And the cows were mentioned because it means the plural, and therefore He said: Indeed, the cows are alike to us, so He mentioned it because of the masculine wording of the cows. Qatrib said: The plural of the cow is baqir, baqur, and baqar. Al-Asma'i said: baqir is the plural of baqira, and he said: And the plural of baqur is baqura, as narrated by an-Nahhas. Al-Zajaj said: The meaning is that the type of cows. Al-Hasan, according to what an-Nahhas mentioned, and al-A'raj, according to what a-Tha'labi mentioned indeed, the cows are alike read with a ta' and a stressed shin, making it a future verb and feminizing it. The original is tatashabah, then the ta' was assimilated into the shin. Mujahid read tashabah like their reading, except without an alif. In the Mushaf of Abi it is tashabaht with a stressed shin. Abu Hatim said: This is harsh, because the ta' in this chapter is not assimilated except in the present tense. Yahya bin Ya'mar read Indeed Al-Baqir is similar making it a future verb, and he mentioned the cows and assimilated it. It is permissible that Al-Baqar is similar to us by softening the sheen and adding the ha', and Al-Tha'labi narrated it from Al-Hasan. An-Nahhas: It is not permissible to resemble it by softening the sheen and the ya', but it is permissible with the ta' because the original is tatashabiha and it was deleted due to the meeting of the two ta's. Al-Baqar, Al-Baqir, Al-Baqur and Al-Baqir are languages that mean the same thing, and the Arabs make it masculine and feminine, and the meanings of the readings in tatashabiha go back to that. It was said: They said: Indeed the cows are similar to us because the faces of cows are similar, and from this is the hadith of Hudhayfah bin Al-Yaman from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he mentioned.

Our trials will come like pieces of the night, like the faces of cows. He means that they will resemble each other. And the faces of cows are similar, and that is why the Children of Israel said: The cows look alike to us.

The Almighty's saying: And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided is an exception from them, and in their exception in this last question there is repentance - what - and submission, and evidence of regret for agreeing to the command. It was narrated from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said:

If they had not made an exception, they would never have been guided to it. The meaning of the statement is And indeed, we are guided, God willing. So it was presented before mentioning guidance out of interest to it. Willing is in the place of a conditional imperative, and its answer according to Sibawayh is the sentence if and what it did to it. According to Abu al-Abbas al-Mubarrad, it is omitted.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty told us about the stubbornness of the Children of Israel and their many questions to their Messenger, so when they were difficult for themselves, God was difficult for them. If they had slaughtered any cow, it would have been enough for them, as Ibn Abbas, Ubaydah, and more than one person said, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them, so they said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, meaning what this cow is and what its description is. Ibn Jarir said, Abu Kurayb told us, Thammam bin Ali told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Minhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them - a sound chain of transmission - and it was narrated by more than one person on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and so said Ubaydah, Al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and more than one person. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them. Ibn Jurayj said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "They were only commanded to take the smallest cow, but when they were severe, may God be severe on them, and by God, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them." He said: He says that it is a cow, neither old nor young, meaning neither old nor young, which has not yet been mated by a stallion, as Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Atiyah al-Awfi, Ata' al-Khurasani, Wahb ibn Munabbih, al-Dahhak, al-Hasan and Qatadah said. Ibn Abbas also said it, and al-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awwan is between that, meaning half between old and young, and it is the strongest of the beasts and cows, and the best of them. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak. Al-Suddi said: Awwan is the half that is between that, which has given birth and its offspring has been born. Hisham said, on the authority of Juwaybir, on the authority of Kathir ibn Ziyad, on the authority of al-Hasan, regarding the cow: It was a wild cow. Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Whoever wears a yellow sandal will not cease to be happy as long as he wears it, and that is the saying of God Almighty: It pleases the observers. And so on. Mujahid and Wahb ibn Munabbih said: It was yellow. On the authority of Ibn Umar: It was yellow in the hoof. On the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr: It was yellow in the horn and the hoof. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Nasr ibn Ali told us, Nuh ibn Qays told us, Abu Raja' told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding the words of God Almighty: A yellow cow, bright in color, he said: black, intensely black. This is strange, and the first is correct. That is why he emphasized its yellowness by saying: Bright in color. Atiyah Al-Awfi said: Bright in color, almost black from its yellowness. Saeed ibn Jubayr said: Bright in color, he said: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: clear. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Faqi'a lunha means: almost black from its yellowness. Saeed bin Jubair said, Faqi'a lunha means: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: intense yellowness, almost white from its yellowness. As-Suddi said, pleasing to the observers means: astonishing to the observers. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Wahb bin Munabbih said: If you look at her skin, you imagine that the sun's rays are coming out of her skin. In the Torah, it says that she was red, so perhaps this is a mistake in the translation, or as the first said: that she was intense yellow tending towards redness and blackness, and God knows best. And the Almighty's saying: Indeed, the cows are alike to us meaning because of their large number, so He distinguished for us this cow and described it and solved it for us and indeed, if God wills if He makes it clear to us we will be guided to it. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Yahya al-Awadi al-Sufi told us, Abu Saeed Ahmad ibn Dawud al-Haddad told us, Surur ibn al-Mughirah al-Wasiti ibn Akhi Mansur ibn Zadhan told us, on the authority of Ibad ibn Mansur, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Abu Rafi', on the authority of Abu Hurayrah: He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Had it not been that the Children of Israel said, 'And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been given anything. And had they intercepted a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them." This is a strange hadith from this aspect, and the best case is that it is from the words of Abu Hurayrah, as was mentioned previously by al-Suddi, and God knows best. "He said: He says that she is a cow that is not trained to plow the earth or irrigate the crops" meaning that she is not trained for plowing nor prepared for irrigating the irrigated area, but It is honorable, good, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, Muslim, he says, there is no defect in it, and Abu al-Aaliyah and al-Rabi' said the same, and Mujahid said: Muslim from the defect, and Ata' al-Khurasani said, Muslim in its limbs and creation, there is no defect in it, Mujahid said: neither white nor black, and Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi', al-Hasan and Qatadah said, there is no white in it, and Ata' al-Khurasani said: there is no defect in it, he said its color is one, pure, and something similar was narrated on the authority of Atiyyah al-Awfi, Wahb ibn Munabbih and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, and al-Suddi said: there is no defect in it of white, black or red, and all of these sayings are close in meaning, and some of them claimed that the meaning of that is the saying of God Almighty: It is a cow that is not subservient, it is not tamed by work, then he resumed and said: tills the earth, meaning it is worked on by plowing, but it does not irrigate the crops, and this is weak because he interpreted the subservient that has not been tamed by work as meaning it does not till the earth nor irrigate the crops, as al-Qurtubi and others decided: They said, now you have come with the truth, he said Qatada: Now you have explained to us, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, and before that, by God, the truth had come to them, So they slaughtered it, but they were almost not going to do it. Ad-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They were almost not going to do it, and that was not what they wanted, because they wanted not to slaughter it, meaning that with this explanation, these questions, answers, and clarification, they did not slaughter it except after great effort, and in this there is blame on them, because their only aim was to be stubborn, so for this reason they were almost not going to slaughter it. Muhammad ibn Ka'b and Muhammad ibn Qays said: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so because of its high price. There is a problem with this, because the high price was not proven except by the transmission of the Children of Israel, as mentioned earlier in the story of Abu al-'Aliyah and al-Suddi. Al-'Awfi narrated it from Ibn 'Abbas. 'Ubaydah, Mujahid, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Abu al-'Aliyah, and 'Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said: They bought it for a lot of money, and there is a difference of opinion about it. Then other things have been said about its price, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn 'Uyaynah informed us, Muhammad ibn Suqah informed me from 'Ikrimah, he said: Its price was only three dinars. This is a good chain of transmission from 'Ikrimah, and it appears that he transmitted it from the People of the Book as well. Ibn Jarir said, and others said: They were not about to do that for fear of disgrace if God found out who killed the one they disputed about, and he did not support it from anyone. Then he chose that the correct view in this is that they were not about to do that because of its high price and the disgrace. There is a problem with this, but rather the correct view, and God knows best, is what was mentioned earlier from the narration of al-Dahhak from Ibn 'Abbas, as we have explained it. And God is the source of success.

Question This verse was used as evidence to limit the characteristics of this cow until they were specified or restricted after being released on the validity of the sale of a salam in an animal, as is the doctrine of Malik, Al-Awza'i, Al-Layth, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and the majority of scholars, past and present, based on what was proven in the two Sahihis on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: A woman should not describe a woman to her husband as if he is looking at her. And as the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, described the camels of blood money in accidental killing, and likened intentional killing to the characteristics mentioned in the hadith. Abu Hanifa, Al-Thawri and the Kufians said: The sale of a salam in an animal is not valid because its conditions are not regulated, and something similar was reported on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, Hudhayfah ibn Al-Yaman, Abd Al-Rahman ibn Samurah and others.

Fath al-Qadir

Then they did not abandon their misguidance nor were they frightened by their foolishness and ignorance, but rather they returned to their stubbornness, so He said: 70- "Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is. Indeed, the cows are alike to us." That is, the cow species is alike to them due to the large number of bright yellow spots that are characteristic of it, and they promised themselves that they would be guided to what He had guided them to and comply with what they were commanded to do.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

70. "They said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is: 'Asaa'imah or 'Amalah.' Indeed, the cows look alike to us." He did not say look alike to remind us of the word cows as in the Almighty's saying: trunks of hollowed-out palm trees 20-Al-Qamar. Al-Zajaj said: That is, the type of cows looks alike, that is, its matter is confused and ambiguous to us, so we cannot find guidance to it. And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided to its description. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: By God if they had not made an exception, it would not have been made clear to them until the end of time.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

70- They said, 'Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is.' This is a repetition of the first question and an additional exploration. His saying, Indeed, the cows are similar to us, is an apology for it, meaning that the cows described as having a yellowish color are many, so they were confusing to us. It was read, Indeed, the cow-eater, which is a name for a group of cows, cows, and cow-eared cows. It is similar and similar with the letter ya and the letter ta, and it is similar and similar with the letter "ya ... The Mu'tazila and the Karamiyya are on the occurrence of the will, and I respond that the suspension is based on the attachment.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:71

He said, 'He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tilth, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:71

He said, "He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tilth, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

He said, "He says that she is a cow that is not submissive," not tamed by work, (that plows the earth turns it over for cultivation, and the sentence is a description of submissive included in the prohibition, and does not irrigate the tilled land, the land prepared for cultivation, safe from defects and traces of work, without any blemish in color in her other than her color. (They said, "Now you have brought the truth," she spoke the complete statement, so they sought her and found her with the young man who was dutiful to his mother, so they bought her with her musk full of gold, (and they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do so), because of her high price. In the hadith: "If they had slaughtered any cow, it would have sufficed them, but they were hard on themselves, so God was hard on them."

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The interpretation of that is: Moses said: God says that the cow that I commanded you to slaughter is a cow that is not submissive. What he means by his saying: "not submissive" is that it has not been tamed by work. So the meaning of the verse is: it is a cow that has not been tamed by the stirring of the earth with its hooves, nor has water been sprinkled on it to irrigate the crops. Just as it is said of an animal that has been tamed by riding or work: a submissive animal, clearly submissive, with a kasra on the dhal. And it is said of someone like him from the sons of Adam: a man who is submissive between submissiveness and humiliation.

Bishr told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, his saying: It is a cow that is not subservient, meaning: difficult, not subdued by work, that plows the earth but does not irrigate the tilth.

Musa told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: It is a cow that is not trained to plow the ground, meaning: a cow that is not trained to be planted on, and does not irrigate the crops.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: It is a cow that is not submissive, meaning that work has not tamed it. It plows the earth means: it is not submissive so that it plows the earth.

"And do not irrigate the field," meaning: Do not work in the field.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi': It is a cow that is not submissive, meaning: work has not humiliated it. It tills the earth, meaning: it tills the earth with its hooves. And it does not irrigate the crops, meaning: it does not work in the crops.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, Al-A'raj said, Mujahid said, his statement: Neither submissive to plow the earth nor to irrigate the crops, meaning: It is not submissive so that it does that.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Abu Sufyan told us, on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Qatada: It is not submissive, plowing the earth or irrigating the crops.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying, stirs the earth, is turning the earth over for cultivation. It is said, He stirred the earth, stirred it up, meaning he turned it over for planting. And God, the Most High, described it with this description because it was said to be wild. Ya'qub ibn Ibrahim told me, he said, Hisham told us, he said, Juwaybir told us, on the authority of Kathir ibn Ziyad, on the authority of al-Hasan, he said: It was wild.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Muslim woman.

Abu Jaafar said: The meaning of Muslimah is the active participle of salama. It is said: She was safe, she is safe, so she is a Muslim.

Then the people of interpretation differed about the meaning from which she was saved, so God described her as safe from it. Mujahid said what: Muhammad bin Amr told us, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh,

On the authority of Mujahid: Muslim woman, he says: Muslim woman without any blemish, and without any blemish in her, neither white nor black.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Hussein told us, he said, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Mujahid said, Muslimah, he said: Muslimah from the Shiyah, without any blemish in her, there is no whiteness in her nor blackness.

Others said: Free from faults. Those who said that: Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: Free from faults, meaning free from faults.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Muslim, he said: There is no defect in her.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Muslimah, meaning: free from faults.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, Ibn Abbas said, his saying: Muslim, there is no defect in her.

Abu Ja'far said: What Ibn 'Abbas, Abu 'Aliyah and those who said similar words in interpreting this have said is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse than what Mujahid said. Because if her being free of all other colors other than the color of her skin, then his saying, Muslim would have been sufficient instead of his saying, No blemish in her. And his saying, No blemish in her, makes it clear that the meaning of his saying, Muslim, is not the meaning of his saying, No blemish in her. Since this is the case, the meaning of the statement is that he is saying that she is a cow that has not been tamed by stirring up the earth and turning it over for plowing, nor by the rain falling on it for the farmer, and she is, in addition, healthy and free from defects.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: There is nothing wrong with it.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: There is no blemish in it, is that there is no color in it that differs from the color of its skin. Its origin is from the word washi which means improving the defects in a garment with different types of colors of its warp and weft. It is said from this: I decorated the garment, so I decorated it with washi and washi. And from this it is said that the one who informs the ruler or someone else about a man is a washi, because he lies about him to him, and improving his lie with falsehoods. It is said from this: I informed about him to the ruler with a slander. And from this is the saying of Ka'b ibn Zuhair:

The informers are seeking her side and saying: You, O son of Abi Salma, are to be killed.

And the informers are the plural of informant, meaning that they say falsehoods and tell him that if he catches up with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he will kill him.

Some Arabists have claimed that "washi means mark". This has no meaning, unless he meant by that the improvement of the garment with marks. Because it is known that the one who says: "I marked so-and-so to so-and-so" cannot be mistaken for saying: "I made a mark for him with him".

It was said: There is no blemish in it, and it is from washayt, because when the waw was dropped from the beginning of it, it was replaced by the ha at the end of it. Just as it was said: I weighed him a weight and a year and promised him a number and paid him blood money. And similar to what we said about the meaning of his statement: There is no blemish in it, the people of interpretation said: Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: There is no blemish in it, meaning there is no whiteness in it.

Al-Hasan told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, similarly.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: There is no whiteness in it, meaning: there is no whiteness in it.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: There is no whiteness in it, meaning there is no whiteness or blackness in it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Ibn Idris told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Atiyah: There is no blemish in it, he said: Its color is one, there is nothing in it except its color.

Musa told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us on the authority of Al-Suddi: There is no blemish in it, of whiteness, blackness, or redness.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: There is no blemish in it, it is yellow, there is no white or black in it.

Narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi': There is no whiteness in it, meaning: there is no whiteness in it.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They said, 'Now you have brought the truth.'

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of His statement: They said, 'Now you have brought the truth.' Some of them said: The meaning of this is: Now you have made the truth clear to us, so we have understood it and known which cow you meant. Among those who said this is Qatada: Bishr bin Mu'adh told us, he said: Yazid told us, he said: Sa'id told us, on the authority of Qatada: They said, 'Now you have brought the truth.' That is, now you have made it clear to us.

Some of them said: This is report from God, the Most High, about the people that they attributed to the Prophet of God, Moses, peace be upon him, that he did not bring them the truth in the matter of the cow before that. Among those who narrated from him the meaning of this statement is Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd: Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: They were forced to have a cow whose description they did not know other than it, and it was yellow with no black or white in it, so they said: This is the cow of so-and-so: Now you have come with the truth, and before that, by God, he had come to them with the truth.

He said, 'He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tilth, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

Abu Ja'far said: The most correct of the two interpretations in our view of His statement, They said, 'Now you have brought the truth,' is the statement of Qatada. Its interpretation is: Now you have made clear to us the truth regarding the matter of cows, so we know that it is obligatory for us to slaughter them. Because God, the Most High, has informed us that they obeyed Him and slaughtered them, after what they said, despite the difficulty of slaughtering them and the burden of their matter, so He said: So they slaughtered them, but they were not about to do it. Even though they said, Now you have made clear to us the truth, it was a nonsense of speech, and they made a mistake and were ignorant of the matter. This is because the Prophet of God, Moses, peace be upon him, was explaining to them in every matter they asked him, and those who rejected him regarding the matter of cows responded to the truth. Rather, it is said: Now you have made the truth clear to us, to someone who had not made it clear before that. As for someone whose entire statement regarding what he made clear about God Almighty was true and clear, it is not permissible to say to him, regarding some of what he made clear about God in His commands and prohibitions, and what he conveyed to His servants of His obligations that He made obligatory upon them, Now you have come with the truth, as if he had not brought them the truth before that!

Some of the Salaf claimed that the people had abandoned their religion and disbelieved because they said to Moses: Now you have come with the truth. They claimed that they denied that Moses had brought them the truth regarding the matter of the cow before that, and that this was their doing and their saying was disbelief.

What he said about that is not what he said to us, because they submitted to obedience by slaughtering it, even if what they said to Moses was due to their ignorance and a mistake of theirs.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do it.

Abu Ja'far said: What he meant by his saying: So they slaughtered it, is that the people of Moses slaughtered the cow that God described to them and commanded them to slaughter.

What he means by his saying: And they almost did not do it, is that they almost stopped slaughtering it and abandoned God's obligation on them to do so.

Then the people of interpretation differed about the reason why they almost neglected the duty of God upon them, in slaughtering what He commanded them to slaughter. Some of them said: That reason was the high price of the cow that they were commanded to slaughter, and its description was shown to them. Those who said that mentioned: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abdul-Razzaq told us, he said: Abu Ma'shar Al-Madani told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ka'b Al-Qurazi, regarding His statement: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so, he said: Because of its high price.

Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Ubaid Al-Hilali told us, he said, Abdul Aziz bin Al-Khattab told us, he said, Abu Ma'shar told us, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ka'b Al-Qurazi: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so, he said: because of its great value.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Al-Husayn told us, he said, Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid and Hajjaj, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ka'b Al-Qurazi and Muhammad ibn Qays, in a long hadith. He mentioned that the hadith of some of them was included in the hadith of some of his saying: So they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do it, because of the great price. They took her for a full bag of gold from the money of the one killed, so it was equal, there was no surplus in it, so they slaughtered her.

It was narrated on the authority of Al-Munjab, who said: Bishr bin Ammarah narrated to us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And they slaughtered it, but they were almost not going to do it. He said: They were almost not going to do it, and what they wanted did not happen, because they wanted not to slaughter it. And everything in the Qur'an that says almost or almost or if does not happen. It is like His statement: I was almost going to hide it (Ta-Ha 20:20).

Others said: They almost did not do that for fear of scandal, if God revealed the killer of the man they had disputed about before Moses.

Abu Ja'far said: The correct interpretation, according to us, is that the people almost did not do what God commanded them to do, which was to slaughter the cow, for two reasons: One of them was its high price, in addition to what was mentioned to us about its small danger and low value. The other was their fear of great disgrace for themselves, by God's making His Prophet Moses, may God's prayers be upon him, and his followers victorious over his killer.

As for its high price, we have been told about it in various ways: Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: They bought it for ten times its weight in gold, then its owner sold it to them and took its price.

Muhammad bin Abdul A'la told us: Al-Mu'tamir bin Sulayman told us: I heard Ayoub, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah, who said: They bought it for its hides full of dinars.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: The cow belonged to a man who was dutiful to his mother, so God blessed him by making that cow his, so he sold it for its hide full of gold.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, he said, Khalid bin Yazid told me, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: They gave its owner a bag full of gold, so he sold it to them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Ismail bin Abdul Karim told us, he said, Abdul Samad bin Maqal told me, that he heard Wahba say: They bought it from him on the condition that they would fill its hide with dinars for him, then they slaughtered it and took the cow's hide and filled it with dinars, then they gave it to him.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: They found it with a man who claimed that he would never sell it for money. So they kept at him until they made him pay for it by peeling off its musk and filling it with dinars for him. He agreed to that, so he gave it to them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: They did not find her except with an old woman, and she asked them for many times her price, so Moses said to them: Give her her consent and her judgment, so they did, and they bought her and slaughtered her.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, he said: Ayoub said, on the authority of Ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah, he said: They did not find this cow except with one man, so he sold it for its weight in gold or a bag full of gold, and they slaughtered it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Hisham bin Hassan, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah al-Salmi, he said: They found the cow with a man, and he said: I will not sell it except for its hide filled with gold. So they bought it for its hide filled with gold.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: They kept increasing its owner until they filled its musk, which is its skin, with gold.

As for the smallness of its danger and the smallness of its value, Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abdul-Razzaq told us, he said, Ibn Uyaynah told us, he said, Muhammad bin Suqah told me, on the authority of Ikrimah, he said: Its price was only three dinars.

As for what we said about their fear of disgrace for themselves, Wahb ibn Munabbih used to say: When the people passed by the slaughter of a cow, they only said to Moses: Do you make fun of us? because they knew that they would be disgraced if it was slaughtered, so they refrained from slaughtering it.

I narrated this on the authority of Ismail bin Abdul Karim, on the authority of Abdul Samad bin Maqal, on the authority of Wahb bin Munabbih.

Ibn Abbas used to say: After God brought the dead back to life and informed them of his killer, the people denied killing him and said: By God, we did not kill him, after they saw the sign and the truth.

Muhammad bin Saad told me that, he said, my father told me that, my uncle told me that, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: "He said: He says that she is a cow that is not subservient. The majority of scholars read not subservient in the nominative case as an attribute of cow." Al-Akhfash said: "not subservient" is its description and it is not permissible to put it in the accusative case. Abu Abd al-Rahman al-Sulami read "not subservient" in the accusative case as a negation and the predicate is implied. It is permissible to say "not subservient, not subservient, not subservient, not subservient. The meaning of not subservient" is that work has not tamed her. It is said: a cow that is subservient, clearly subservient with a kasra on the dhal. And a man that is subservient, clearly subservient with a dhamma on the dhal. That is, she is a tough, untrained cow that has not been tamed by work.

God the Almighty said: tills the earth Tills is in the nominative case as an attribute of the cow, meaning it is a cow that is not tame and excites. Al-Hasan said: That cow was wild, and that is why God the Almighty described it as not tilling the earth nor irrigating the crops, meaning it is not used to irrigate the crops nor is it watered. Stopping here is good. He said: tills is a new verb, and the meaning is to make it plough, and that it was ploughing but not irrigating. Stopping on this interpretation is not submissive. The first statement is more correct for two reasons: First: What Al-Nahhas mentioned on the authority of Ali bin Sulayman that he said: It is not permissible for Tills to be a new sentence, because after it is nor irrigate the crops, so if it were a new sentence, he would not have combined the waw and la. Second: If it was tilling the earth, then stirring would have tamed it, and God the Almighty has denied its humiliation by saying not submissive.

I said: It is possible that it stirs the earth in a way that is not work, with joy and activity, as Imru' al-Qais said:

He ploughs and scatters his soil and stirs it up like a quintet of summer squash.

So, arising is a new sentence, and do not water is conjoined to it, so consider it. Arising the earth means moving and searching it, and from this comes the hadith:

Raise the Qur'an, for it is the knowledge of the first and the last. In another narration: Whoever wants knowledge, let him raise the Qur'an, as has been mentioned previously. In the revelation: And they raised the earth, meaning they turned it over for cultivation. And cultivation is what is plowed and planted. And it will come.

Question: This verse is the clearest evidence that animals are limited to their attributes. If they are defined by an attribute and limited by it, then it is permissible to sell them in salam. Malik and his companions, Al-Awza'i, Al-Layth, and Al-Shafi'i said the same. The same applies to everything that is defined by an attribute, because God Almighty described the cow in His Book with a description that takes the place of specification. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:71

He said, 'He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tilth, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

A woman should not describe another woman to her husband as if he is looking at her. Narrated by Muslim. So the Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) made description take the place of seeing, and he (peace and blessings of God be upon him) made the blood money for an accident the responsibility of the one who imposed it on him as a debt to be paid for a period of time, and he did not make it due for settlement. This refutes the statement of the Kufians Abu Hanifa and his companions, al-Thawri and al-Hasan ibn Salih, who said: Salam is not permissible in animals. It was narrated from Ibn Mas'ud, Hudhayfah and Abd al-Rahman ibn Samurah, because the true description of an animal, such as walking and movement, cannot be determined, and all of that increases its price and raises its value. The ruling on salam and its conditions will come at the end of the surah in the verse on debt, God willing.

The Almighty said: Muslim meaning she is Muslim. It may also be a description, meaning that she is a cow free from lameness and other defects, as stated by Qatada and Abu Al-Aaliyah. It is not said: Muslim from work, because God has denied work from her. Al-Hasan said: It means sound in her limbs, with no trace of work in her.

God the Almighty said: There is no blemish in it meaning there is no color in it that differs from most of its color, and it is entirely yellow, neither white nor red nor black, as He said: its color is bright. The root of shaha is washi, the waw was deleted as it was deleted from yashi, and the root is yushi, and its equivalent is zana, udda, and sila. Shiyyah is taken from washa of a garment if it is woven in two different colors. A turban is turbaned: on its face and legs there is blackness. Ibn Arafah said: turban is the color. And it is not said to someone who slanders: washa, until he changes the speech and colors it, making it different types and embellishing it as he wishes. Washi: abundance. Banu so-and-so washed: they became many. It is said: a piebald horse, a ram that came out, a spotted billy goat, a speckled raven, and a ash-yih bull. All of that has the meaning of balqa, this is what the linguists have stated.

These descriptions of the cow are because they were strict, so God was strict with them. The religion of God is easy, and delving into the questioning of the prophets and other scholars is reprehensible. We ask God for wellness. Narrations were narrated in the stories of this cow, the summary of which is: A man from the Children of Israel had a son, and he had a heifer, so he sent it into the thicket and said: O God, I entrust this heifer to You for this boy. The man died, and when the boy grew up, his mother - who was dutiful to her - said to him: Your father entrusted a heifer to God for you, so go and take it. So he went, and when the cow saw him, it came to him until he took hold of its horns - and it was wild - and he began to lead it towards a nation. The Children of Israel met him and found a cow in the condition they were ordered to, so they bargained with him, but he was harsh with them. Its value, according to what was narrated from Ikrimah, was three dinars. So they brought it to Moses, peace be upon him, and said: This man has been harsh with us. So he said to them: Please him in his kingdom, so they bought it from him for its weight once, as Ubaydah said. Al-Suddi: Its weight is ten times. It was said: Its musk is full of dinars. Makki mentioned: This cow came down from the sky and was not from the cows of the earth. And God knows best.

God the Almighty said: They said, 'Now you have brought the truth.' That is, you have made the truth clear. Qatada said this. Al-Akhfash narrated: They said, Now cutting off the alif of connection, as one says, O God. He narrated another interpretation: They said, Because with the waw attached. Similar to it is the reading of the people of Medina and Abu Amr 'Ad-Lawli. The Kufians read They said now with a hamza. The reading of the people of Medina is He said because with a light hamza and the waw deleted due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. Al-Zajaj said: Now is built on the fatha because it differs from all other words that contain the alif and lam, because the alif and lam were added for something other than a covenant. You say, You are here until now, so the meaning is until this time. So it was built as this was built, and the nun was opened due to the meeting of two quiescent letters. It is an expression for what is between the past and the future.

The Almighty said: And they were about to do it. Sibawayh permitted: almost did it, as a likening to may. The beginning of the surah was mentioned earlier. This is a statement about their discouragement in slaughtering it and their lack of haste in obeying God's command. Al-Qurazi Muhammad ibn Ka'b said: Because of its high price. It was also said: For fear of disgrace to themselves in knowing who among them was the killer, as Wahb ibn Munabbih said.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty told us about the stubbornness of the Children of Israel and their many questions to their Messenger, so when they were difficult for themselves, God was difficult for them. If they had slaughtered any cow, it would have been enough for them, as Ibn Abbas, Ubaydah, and more than one person said, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them, so they said: Call upon your Lord to make clear to us what it is, meaning what this cow is and what its description is. Ibn Jarir said, Abu Kurayb told us, Thammam bin Ali told us, on the authority of Al-A'mash, on the authority of Al-Minhal bin Amr, on the authority of Saeed bin Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them, but they were difficult, so He was difficult for them - a sound chain of transmission - and it was narrated by more than one person on the authority of Ibn Abbas, and so said Ubaydah, Al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and more than one person. Ibn Jurayj said: Ata' told me: If they had taken the smallest cow, it would have been enough for them. Ibn Jurayj said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "They were only commanded to take the smallest cow, but when they were severe, may God be severe on them, and by God, if they had not made an exception, the end of eternity would not have been made clear to them." He said: He says that it is a cow, neither old nor young, meaning neither old nor young, which has not yet been mated by a stallion, as Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Suddi, Mujahid, Ikrimah, Atiyah al-Awfi, Ata' al-Khurasani, Wahb ibn Munabbih, al-Dahhak, al-Hasan and Qatadah said. Ibn Abbas also said it, and al-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Awwan is between that, meaning half between old and young, and it is the strongest of the beasts and cows, and the best of them. Something similar was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah, Mujahid, Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi' ibn Anas, Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak. Al-Suddi said: Awwan is the half that is between that, which has given birth and its offspring has been born. Hisham said, on the authority of Juwaybir, on the authority of Kathir ibn Ziyad, on the authority of al-Hasan, regarding the cow: It was a wild cow. Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Ata', on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Whoever wears a yellow sandal will not cease to be happy as long as he wears it, and that is the saying of God Almighty: It pleases the observers. And so on. Mujahid and Wahb ibn Munabbih said: It was yellow. On the authority of Ibn Umar: It was yellow in the hoof. On the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr: It was yellow in the horn and the hoof. Ibn Abi Hatim said: My father told us, Nasr ibn Ali told us, Nuh ibn Qays told us, Abu Raja' told us, on the authority of Al-Hasan, regarding the words of God Almighty: A yellow cow, bright in color, he said: black, intensely black. This is strange, and the first is correct. That is why he emphasized its yellowness by saying: Bright in color. Atiyah Al-Awfi said: Bright in color, almost black from its yellowness. Saeed ibn Jubayr said: Bright in color, he said: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: clear. Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas, Faqi'a lunha means: almost black from its yellowness. Saeed bin Jubair said, Faqi'a lunha means: clear in color. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah, Ar-Rabi' bin Anas, As-Suddi, Al-Hasan and Qatadah, something similar. Sharik said on the authority of Muammar, on the authority of Ibn Umar, Faqi'a lunha means: intense yellowness, almost white from its yellowness. As-Suddi said, pleasing to the observers means: astonishing to the observers. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatadah and Ar-Rabi' bin Anas said the same. Wahb bin Munabbih said: If you look at her skin, you imagine that the sun's rays are coming out of her skin. In the

Torah, it says that she was red, so perhaps this is a mistake in the translation, or as the first said: that she was intense yellow tending towards redness and blackness, and God knows best. And the Almighty's saying: Indeed, the cows are alike to us meaning because of their large number, so He distinguished for us this cow and described it and solved it for us and indeed, if God wills if He makes it clear to us we will be guided to it. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Yahya al-Awdi al-Sufi told us, Abu Saeed Ahmad ibn Dawud al-Haddad told us, Surur ibn al-Mughirah al-Wasiti ibn Akhi Mansur ibn Zadhan told us, on the authority of Ibad ibn Mansur, on the authority of al-Hasan, on the authority of Abu Rafi', on the authority of Abu Hurayrah: He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Had it not been that the Children of Israel said, 'And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been given anything. And had they intercepted a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them." This is a strange hadith from this aspect, and the best case is that it is from the words of Abu Hurayrah, as was mentioned previously by al-Suddi, and God knows best. "He said: He says that she is a cow that is not trained to plow the earth or irrigate the crops" meaning that she is not trained for plowing nor prepared for irrigating the irrigated area, but it is honorable, good, and Abd al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah, Muslim, he says, there is no defect in it, and Abu al-Aaliyah and al-Rabi' said the same, and Mujahid said: Muslim from the defect, and Ata' al-Khurasani said, Muslim in its limbs and creation, there is no defect in it, Mujahid said: neither white nor black, and Abu al-Aaliyah, al-Rabi', al-Hasan and Qatadah said, there is no white in it, and Ata' al-Khurasani said: there is no defect in it, he said its color is one, pure, and something similar was narrated on the authority of Atiyah al-Awfi, Wahb ibn Munabbih and Ismail ibn Abi Khalid, and al-Suddi said: there is no defect in it of white, black or red, and all of these sayings are close in meaning, and some of them claimed that the meaning of that is the saying of God Almighty: It is a cow that is not subservient, it is not tamed by work, then he resumed and said: tills the earth, meaning it is worked on by plowing, but it does not irrigate the crops, and this is weak because he interpreted the subservient that has not been tamed by work as meaning it does not till the earth nor irrigate the crops, as al-Qurtubi and others decided: They said, now you have come with the truth, he said Qatadah: Now you have explained to us, and Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, and before that, by God, the truth had come to them, So they slaughtered it, but they were almost not going to do it. Ad-Dahhak said, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They were almost not going to do it, and that was not what they wanted, because they wanted not to slaughter it, meaning that with this explanation, these questions, answers, and clarification, they did not slaughter it except after great effort, and in this there is blame on them, because their only aim was to be stubborn, so for this reason they were almost not going to slaughter it. Muhammad ibn Ka'b and Muhammad ibn Qays said: So they slaughtered it, but they were not about to do so because of its high price. There is a problem with this, because the high price was not proven except by the transmission of the Children of Israel, as mentioned earlier in the story of Abu al-'Aliyah and al-Suddi. Al-'Awfi narrated it from Ibn 'Abbas. 'Ubaydah, Mujahid, Wahb ibn Munabbih, Abu al-'Aliyah, and 'Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said: They bought it for a lot of money, and there is a difference of opinion about it. Then other things have been said about its price, and 'Abd al-Razzaq said: Ibn 'Uyaynah informed us, Muhammad ibn Suqah informed me from 'Ikrimah, he said: Its price was only three dinars. This is a good chain of transmission from 'Ikrimah, and it appears that he transmitted it from the People of the Book as well. Ibn Jarir said, and others said: They were not about to do that for fear of disgrace if God found out who killed the one they disputed about, and he did not support it from anyone. Then he chose that the correct view in this is that they were not about to do that because of its high price and the disgrace. There is a problem with this, but rather the correct view, and God knows best, is what was mentioned earlier from the narration of al-Dahhak from Ibn 'Abbas, as we have explained it. And God is the source of success.

He said, 'He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tilth, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

Question This verse was used as evidence to limit the characteristics of this cow until they were specified or restricted after being released on the validity of the sale of a salam in an animal, as is the doctrine of Malik, Al-Awza'i, Al-Layth, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and the majority of scholars, past and present, based on what was proven in the two Sahihs on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: A woman should not describe a woman to her husband as if he is looking at her. And as the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, described the camels of blood money in accidental killing, and likened intentional killing to the characteristics mentioned in the hadith. Abu Hanifa, Al-Thawri and the Kufians said: The sale of a salam in an animal is not valid because its conditions are not regulated, and something similar was reported on the authority of Ibn Mas'ud, Hudhayfah ibn Al-Yaman, Abd Al-Rahman ibn Samurah and others.

Fath al-Qadir

And the submissive: that which has not been tamed by work: that is, it is not tamed by work nor trained by it. And his saying: 71- "tathers" is in the nominative case as an attribute of the cow: that is, it is a cow that is not tamed and aroused, and likewise his saying: "nor does it water the tillage" is in the nominative case because it is a description of it: that is, it is not one of the camels that are driven to water the crops, and the other negation letter is an emphasis of the first: that is, it is a cow that is not tamed by plowing or by sprinkling, and for this reason Al-Hasan said: The cow was wild. And some people said: His saying: taathers is a renewed verb. And the meaning: is to make plowing and sprinkling obligatory for it. And the first is more likely, because if it were aroused and aroused, it would be tamed and trained, and God has denied that about it, and his saying: "Muslim" is in the nominative case because it is one of the descriptions of the cow, and it is permissible for it to be in the nominative case as a predicate of a deleted subject: that is, it is Muslim. The sentence is in the nominative case as an adjective. Muslim is the one who has no defect. It was also said: Muslim from work, but this is weak because God, the Almighty, has denied this about her. Establishing is better than emphasizing, and providing information is better than repeating. The root of the word shiyah is washyah and the waw was deleted as it was deleted from yashi. Its root is yushi. Similar to it are al-zanah, "al-'iddah," and al-sila. It is taken from washa of a garment: if it is woven in two different colors. A bull with black embroidered on its face and legs. What is meant is that this cow is pure yellow, with no shine of another color on its body. When they heard these descriptions, after which there is no doubt, and no suspicion arises in the listener, and no partnership is possible in any way, they stopped their misguidance, and woke up from their slumber and realized the extent to which their obstinacy had caused them to be oppressed. They said, 'Now you have come with the truth,' meaning, you have explained the description to us and made clear to us the truth that we must stop at. So they obtained that cow described with those descriptions. So they slaughtered it, and they complied with the command that was easy, but they made it difficult, and it was broad, but they made it difficult. But they were not about to do it, what they were commanded to do because of their hesitation, obstinacy, and lack of initiative. That was a presumption of improbability, and a place to come with an expression that indicates their hesitation. It was said that they were not about to do it because of not finding a cow described with these descriptions, and it was said because of its high price, and it was said because of fear of the matter of the one killed being exposed, and the first is more likely. A group of commentators and scholars of the principles of jurisprudence have used this verse as evidence for the permissibility of abrogation before the possibility of action.

This is not correct in my opinion for both reasons: First: These additional descriptions due to the repetition of the question are a restriction of what was commanded, not abrogation, and there is a great distance between the two, as is established in the science of Usul. Second: Even if we were to accept that this is a restriction and not abrogation, there would be no evidence for what they said. For after the first command they could have slaughtered a cow from the cows, and likewise after the description of it combining the description of having a yellow eye and a yellow discharge, there is no evidence that this dialogue between them and Moses, peace be upon him, occurred in one moment. Rather, it appears that they were colluding in these stubborn questions, and they were discussing their opinions among themselves about them, then they would present them, and the least of all is the possibility that invalidates the evidence.

Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn Abi Hatim, and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in his Sunan on the authority of Ubaidah Al-Salmi, who said: There was a man from the Children of Israel who was sterile and had no children. He had a lot of money, and his nephew was his heir. He killed him, then carried him at night and placed him at the door of one of them. Then in the morning he claimed him against them until they armed themselves and rode towards one another. The wise man among them said: Why are some of you killing each other while the Messenger of God is among you? So they went to Moses and mentioned that to him. He said: God commands you to slaughter a cow (al-Anbiya' 3:10). If they had not objected, the smallest cow would have sufficed for them. However, they were strict, so he was strict with them until they reached the cow that they were ordered to slaughter. They found it with a man who had no other cow. He said: By God, I will not decrease its hide from a full load of gold. So they took it with a full load of gold from its hide, slaughtered it, and struck him with some of it. Then he stood up and they said: Who killed you? He said: This is for his nephew, then he died, so he was not given anything from his money, and the killer did not inherit after him. Ibn Abi Al-Dunya narrated in the book of Man Ashaas Ba'd Al-Mawt on the authority of Ibn Abbas that the slain man was found between two villages, and that the cow belonged to a man who was dutiful to his father, so they bought it for its weight in gold. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar to that on his authority, but he did not mention what was mentioned above regarding the cow. Various stories have been narrated about this, but not much benefit is related to them. Al-Bazzar narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: If the Children of Israel had taken the smallest cow, it would have sufficed for them, or it would have sufficed for them. Ibn Abi Hatim and Ibn Mardawayh narrated on the authority of Abu Hurairah who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Had the Children of Israel not said: 'And indeed, if God wills, we will be guided,' they would never have been given anything. If they had intercepted a cow from the cows and slaughtered it, it would have sufficed for them, but they were strict, so God was strict with them." Al-Faryabi, Sa'id bin Mansur, and Ibn Al-Mundhir narrated something similar on the authority of Ikrimah, conveying it to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. Ibn Jarir narrated it on the authority of Qatadah, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet. These three are mursals. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated something similar to it on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated through various chains of transmission on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Farid means old, and Bakar al-Khawaja means young, and Awan is half old. A similar chain of transmission was narrated on the authority of Mujahid. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: Awan between that, he said: Between young and old, and she is the strongest and most beautiful. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim also narrated on his authority, regarding his statement: Yellow, bright in color, he said: Intense yellowness that almost turns white from its yellowness. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Umar, regarding his statement: Yellow, he said: Yellow hooves. Bright in color, he said: Clear. Abd al-Razzaq, Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah, who said: Bright in color, meaning clear. It pleases the observers, meaning it astonishes. Saeed bin Mansour, Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Hasan regarding his statement: Yellow, bright in color, he said: Black, intense black. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: Not submissive, meaning work has not humiliated her. Nor does she till the earth, meaning she is not submissive so she tills the earth. Nor does she irrigate the tillage, meaning she is not submissive so she does not work in the tillage. Safe, he said: From defects. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar from Mujahid. He said: No blemish on her, neither white nor black. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas: Safe, without defect. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah: "They said: Now you have come with the truth," they said: Now you have made it clear to us. So they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do so. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Muhammad bin Ka'b regarding his statement: Nor were they about to do so, because of the high price of her.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

71. "He said, 'He says that she is a cow that is not submissive' tamed by work. It is said: a man who is submissive, clearly, and a docile animal whose submissiveness is clearly evident. 'plows the earth' turns it over for cultivation 'nor irrigates the crops' meaning it is not an irrigator. 'Muslim' free from defects. 'with no blemish in her' no color other than the color of all of her hide. 'Ata' said: there is no blemish in her. Mujahid said: there is no whiteness in her nor blackness in her. 'They said: Now you have come with the truth' meaning with the complete and comprehensive explanation in which there is no doubt. They sought her but did not find her description perfect except with the young man, so they bought her with a full load of gold, 'so they slaughtered her, but they were not about to do so' because of the high price of her. Muhammad ibn Ka'b said: and they were not about to find her with all of her descriptions combined. It was said: 'and they were not about to do so' because of the intensity of their confusion and disagreement about her.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

71- He said, 'He says that she is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor water the tillage' meaning that she was not trained to plow the earth or water the tillage, and not trained is an attribute of a cow meaning not trained, and the second la is added to emphasize the first and the two verbs are attributes of trained as if it was said: not trained to plow and water, and not trained is read with the fat-ha meaning where she is,

Surat al-Baqarah 2:71

He said, 'He says, 'It is a cow neither trained to plow the earth nor irrigate the tith, sound, without blemish on her.' They said, 'Now you have come with the truth.' So they slaughtered her, but they were hardly able to do so.

like you say I passed by a man who is neither stingy nor cowardly, meaning where he is, and she drinks from whom I drink. Muslim May God Almighty save her from defects, or her people from work, or her color is pure, from salma lahu kada if it is pure for him. No stain in her has no color in her that differs from the color of her skin, and it is originally a source, and shaw is a stain if its color is mixed with another color. They said, 'Now you have come with the truth' meaning with the truth of the description of the cow and you have confirmed it for us, and now is read with the extension for the question, and lan by deleting the hamza and dropping its movement on the peace. They slaughtered it is an abbreviation, and the meaning is: So they obtained the described cow and slaughtered it. And they were not about to do it because of their long and frequent reconsiderations, or for fear of scandal if the killer appeared, or because of its high price. It was narrated that a righteous old man among them had a calf, so he brought it to the thicket and said: O God, I entrust you with my son until he grows up, so it grew up and was alone with those qualities, so they bargained for it from the orphan and his mother until they bought it with a bag full of gold, and the cow was at that time three dinars. Almost is one of the verbs of approximation, and it was placed for the proximity of the report to obtain, so if negation is added to it, it is said that its meaning is affirmation absolutely. It was said that it is past tense, and the correct view is that it is like all other verbs, and his statement: And they were not about to do it does not contradict his statement They slaughtered it because of the difference in their times, since the meaning is that they were not about to do it until their questions ended, and their excuses were cut off, so they did it like someone forced to take refuge in an action.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:72

And when you killed a person and disputed over it, and God was to bring out what you were concealing.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when you killed a person and disputed over it in it is the assimilation of the dal into the ta', meaning you quarrelled and pushed each other over it, and God is the bringer out the manifestation of what you were concealing of its matter, and this is an objection and it is the beginning of the story.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What he meant by his saying, may his praise be exalted: And when you killed a soul, is, And remember, O Children of Israel, when you killed a soul. The soul that they killed is the soul whose story we mentioned in the interpretation of his saying: And when Moses said to his people, 'Indeed, God commands you to slaughter a cow.'

His saying: So you argued about it, means: So you differed and disputed. And it is So you argued about it on the pattern of tafa'alam, from dar'. And dar' is crooked, and from it is the saying of Abu al-Najm al-'Ijli:

Fear of the tyrants if they are a bridge that eats the shield and removes the one who is contemptible

Meaning: crooked and difficult. And from this is the saying of Ru'bah ibn al-'Ajaj:

I realized it in front of every teacher by pushing away all arrogance from me

And from it is the hadith that: Abu Kurayb narrated to us, he said, Mus'ab bin Al-Muqaddam narrated to us, on the authority of Israel, on the authority of Ibrahim bin Al-Muhajir, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Al-Sa'ib, he said: "Uthman and Zuhair, the sons of Umayyah, came to me and asked permission for me to see the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I know him better than you. Were you not my partner in the Age of Ignorance? I said: Yes, may my father and mother be sacrificed for you. What an excellent partner you were, you did not argue or hide."

He means by his saying do not be evasive, do not contradict your companion and partner, do not dispute with him, and do not consult with him.

The root of the word fadara'tum is fatadara'tum, but the ta' is close to the point of articulation of the dal, because the point of articulation of the ta' is at the tip of the tongue and the bases of the lips, and the point of articulation of the dal is at the tip of the tongue and the edges of the two incisors, so the ta' was assimilated into the dal, making it a double dal, as the poet said:

She takes over the bed if he takes her waist, sweet-tasting, if he follows the kiss

He means: If the two letters are consecutive, then one of the two ta's is assimilated into the other. So when the ta' was assimilated into the dhal and became a dal like it, it was quiescent, so they brought an alif to connect the speech with it, and that is if there was something before it, because assimilation does not happen unless there is something before it, and from this is the saying of God, the Most High: Until when they have all overtaken therein (al-A'raf 7:38). It is tadarakū, but the ta' in it was assimilated into the dal, so it became a double dal, and an alif was put in it because it was connected to speech before it to ensure the assimilation. And if there was nothing before that to continue it and it was started with, it is said: tadarakū, and tathāqālū, so they showed the assimilation. It has also been said: idarakū and idāra'ū.

It has been said that the meaning of his statement: So you disputed over it is that you pushed each other about it. It is from the saying of the speaker: I warded off this matter from me, and from the saying of God: And He averts the punishment from her (al-Nur 24:8), meaning He repels the punishment from her. This statement is close in meaning to the first statement, because the people only pushed each other about killing someone, so each group of them denied that he was the killer, as we have previously explained in what has passed in this book of ours. And similar to what we said about the meaning of his statement: So you disputed over it, the people of interpretation said: Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told me, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: So you disputed over it, he said: You differed about it.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj: And when you killed a person and disputed over it, some of them said: You killed him. The others said: You killed him.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And you disputed over it, he said: You differed, which is dispute, they disputed over it. He said: These said: You killed him, and those said: No.

Their dispute over the soul they had killed was as follows: Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: The owner of the cow was a man from the Children of Israel, a man killed him and threw him at the door of other people, then the relatives of the murdered man came and claimed his blood money from them, but they denied it or pretended to deny it. Abu Asim was not sure.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly, except that he said: So they claimed his blood money from them, but they denied it and he did not doubt it.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:72

And when you killed a person and disputed over it, and God was to bring out what you were concealing.

Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: There was a man killed among the Children of Israel. Each tribe of them accused another tribe of him, until the evil between them became so great that they took their case to the Prophet of God, may God bless him and grant him peace. Then God revealed to Moses: Slaughter a cow and strike him with part of it. He told us that his guardian who was seeking revenge for his blood was the one who killed him, because of an inheritance that was between them.

Ibn Saad told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding the cow. That is because an old man from the Children of Israel at the time of Moses was very wealthy, and his brother's sons were poor and had no money. The old man had no children, and his brother's sons were his heirs. They said, If only our uncle had died so we could inherit his money! And when they begged them not to let their uncle die, Satan came to them and said, Would you like to kill your uncle, inherit his money, and pay the blood money to the people of the city that you are not in? That was because they were two cities, and they were in one of them. So if a man was killed and thrown between the two cities, the distance between the man and the two cities was measured, and whichever was closer to him was the one who paid the blood money. And when Satan suggested that to them, and begged them not to let their uncle die, they went to him and killed him, then they threw him at the gate of the city that they were not in. When the people of the city woke up, the sons of my brother the Sheikh came and said: Our uncle was killed at the gate of your city. By God, you must pay us the blood money for our uncle. The people of the city said: We swear by God that we did not kill him, nor do we know who killed him, nor did we open the gate of our city since it was closed until morning. They went to Moses, and when they came, the sons of my brother the Sheikh said: We found our uncle killed at the gate of their city. The people of the city said: We swear by God that we did not kill him, nor did we open the gate of the city since we closed it until morning. Gabriel came with the command of our Lord, the All-Hearing, the All-Knowing, to Moses and said: Tell them: God commands you to slaughter a cow and strike him with part of it.

Al-Qasim narrated to us, he said, Husayn narrated to us, he said, Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid and Hajjaj, on the authority of Abu Ma'shar, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ka'b al-Qurazi and Muhammad ibn Qays, some of them hadiths were included in the hadith of others. They said: When a tribe of the Children of Israel saw the great evil of the people, they built a city and isolated themselves from the evil of the people. When evening came, they would not leave anyone of them outside without bringing him in. When morning came, their leader would stand and look and peer out. If he did not see anything, he would conquer the city. They remained with the people until evening.

There was a man from the Children of Israel who had a lot of wealth, but he had no heir except his nephew. His life was long, so he killed him to inherit him. Then he carried him and placed him at the gate of the city, then he and his companions hid in a place. He said: The leader of the city peered out at the gate of the city, looked but did not see anything. So he opened the door, and when he saw the slain man, he closed the door. The nephew of the slain man and his companions called out to him: No way! You killed him and then you close the door? When Moses saw many of his companions, the Children of Israel, being killed, whenever he saw a dead person among the people, he would seize them. There was almost a fight between the brother of the dead man and the people of the city, until both sides put on their weapons and then held back from each other. They came to Moses and told him about their situation, saying: O Messenger of God, these people killed a man and then closed the door. The people of the city said: O Messenger of God, you know that we avoid evil, and we built a city as you have seen, avoiding the evil of people. We did not kill or know of a killer. Then God revealed to him: They should slaughter a cow, so Moses said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Hisham bin Hassan, on the authority of Muhammad bin Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah, who said: There was a barren man among the Children of Israel who had a lot of money, and his nephew killed him.

He blew it up and threw it at the door of other people. Then they came in the morning and he claimed it against them, until these and those armed themselves and wanted to fight. The wise among them said: Are you going to fight while God's Prophet is among you? So they held back until they came to Moses and told him the story. He ordered them to slaughter a cow and hit him with part of it. They said: Are you making fun of us? He said: I seek refuge in God from being among the ignorant.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: A slain man from the Children of Israel was thrown among one of the tribes. The people of that tribe came to that tribe and said: By God, you have killed our companion. They said: No, by God. So they came to Moses and said: This is our slain man among them, and by God, they killed him. They said: No, by God, O Prophet of God, he was thrown among us. Moses, peace be upon him, said to them: God commands you to slaughter a cow.

Abu Ja'far said: Their disagreement, dispute, and quarrel among themselves regarding the matter of the murdered man whose matter we mentioned, according to what we have narrated from our scholars of interpretation, was the aversion that God, the Most High, said about their humiliation and the remnants of their children: So you disputed about it, and God will bring out what you were concealing.

The statement in the interpretation of his saying: And God will bring out what you were concealing.

Abu Jaafar said: What he meant by his saying: And God will bring out what you were concealing, is that God will reveal what you were concealing of the killing of the person you killed, then you disputed about it.

The meaning of bringing forth in this context is to make it apparent and public to those from whom it is hidden, and to inform them of it, as God Almighty said: That they should not prostrate to God, who brings forth what is hidden in the heavens and the earth (al-Naml 27:27), meaning by that: He makes it apparent and brings it forth from its hiding place after it has been hidden.

What they were concealing, but He brought it out, is the killing of the murderer by the murdered person. When the murderer concealed that, and those who knew about it and supported him in that, until God revealed him and brought him out, he announced his matter to those who did not know his matter.

And the Most High meant by His saying: You conceal, that you conceal and hide, as Muhammad ibn Amr told us, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: And God will bring out what you were concealing, he said: You hide.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shibl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: What you were concealing, what you were absent.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty says: And when you killed a person and disputed over it. This statement comes before the beginning of the story, the meaning being: And when you killed a person and disputed over it: Moses said: God commands you to do such and such. This is like his saying: Praise be to God, who has sent down to His servant the Book and has not made it crooked. That is, He sent down to His servant the straight Book and has not made it crooked. There are many examples like this, and we have explained them at the beginning of the story.

There are two opinions about the reason for his killing: One of them: because of his beautiful daughter whom he wanted to marry her cousin, but his uncle prevented him, so he killed him and carried him from his village to another village and threw him there. It was also said: he threw him between two villages. The second: he killed him to claim his inheritance, because he was poor and some of the tribes claimed that he had been killed. Ikrimah said: The Children of Israel had a mosque with twelve doors, each of which had people who entered through it. They found a dead man in one of the tribes, so some claimed against others, and those claimed against others, then they came to Moses to argue with him, so he said: God commands you to slaughter a cow verse. The meaning of adara'tum is that you differed and disputed, as Mujahid said. Its original form is tadara'tum then the ta was assimilated into the dal. It is not permissible to begin with an assimilation because it is silent, so the alif of connection was added. And God brings out is both a subject and a predicate. You were not is in the accusative case with the place of articulation, and the tanween may be deleted for the addition. You conceal is a sentence in the place of the predicate of was, and the antecedent is deleted, the meaning is you conceal it.

According to the opinion that he killed him to claim his inheritance, the intentional killer has not inherited from that time on, as stated by Ubaidah al-Salmani. Ibn Abbas said: This man killed his uncle to inherit from him. Ibn Atiyyah said: Our law came with something similar. Malik, may God have mercy on him, narrated in his Muwatta' that the story of Ahiya ibn al-Jalah regarding his uncle was the reason why the killer did not inherit, then Islam confirmed that as was confirmed by many of the pre-Islamic eras. There is no disagreement among the scholars that the intentional killer does not inherit from the blood money or from the money, except for a group that deviated from the majority, all of them are people of innovation. The accidental killer inherits from the money but does not inherit from the blood money according to Malik, al-Awza'i, Abu Thawr and al-Shafi'i, because he is not accused of killing him to inherit from him and take his money. Sufyan al-Thawri, Abu Hanifah and his companions, and al-Shafi'i in another opinion of his, said: The intentional or accidental killer does not inherit anything from the money or from the blood money. This is the opinion of Shuraih, Tawus, al-Sha'bi and al-Nakha'i. Al-Sha'bi narrated it on the authority of Umar, Ali, and Zaid. They said: The intentional or accidental killer does not inherit anything. Both opinions were narrated on the authority of Mujahid. A group of Basrans said: The accidental killer inherits from the blood money and the money together. This was narrated by Abu Umar. Malik's opinion is more correct, as will be explained in the verse on inheritance, God willing.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Bukhari said: And you disputed over it means you differed. And this is what Mujahid said. He said in what Ibn Abi Hatim narrated, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hudhayfah, on the authority of Shibl, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, that he said in the words of God the Almighty: And when you killed a person and disputed over it means you differed. And Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak said: you argued over it. And Ibn Jurayj said: And when you killed a person and disputed over it some of them said: you killed him, and others said: rather you killed him. And this is what Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said. And God will bring out what you were concealing Mujahid said: what you conceal. And Ibn Hatim said: Amr ibn Muslim al-Basri told us, Muhammad ibn al-Tufayl al-Abdi told us, Sadaqah ibn Rustum told us, I heard al-Musayyab ibn Rafi' say: No man did a good deed in seven houses except that God revealed it, and no man did a bad deed in seven houses except that God revealed it. And the confirmation of that is in the words of God:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:72

And when you killed a person and disputed over it, and God was to bring out what you were concealing.

“And God will bring out what you were concealing. So We said, ‘Strike him with part of it.’” This part, that is, any part of the body of this cow, is the miracle that is achieved by it, and the breach of the norm is happening by it, and it was specified in the matter itself. If there was any benefit in specifying it for us in the matter of religion or the world, God Almighty would have made it clear to us, but He made it ambiguous and it did not come through a sound chain of transmission from one whose explanation is infallible. So we make it ambiguous as God made it ambiguous. For this reason, Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Sinan told us, Affan ibn Muslim told us, Abd al-Wahid ibn Ziyad told us, al-A'mash told us, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Amr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The owners of the cow of the Children of Israel sought it for forty years until they found it with a man among his cows, and it was a cow that pleased him. He said: So they kept offering it to him, but he refused until they gave him a full bag of dinars, so they slaughtered it and struck him - meaning the slain man - with a part of it, and he stood up with blood gushing from his veins. They said to him, Who killed you? He said: So-and-so killed me. And this is what Al-Hasan and Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: That he struck with some of it. And in a narration on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he struck with the bone next to the cartilage. And Abd Al-Razzaq said: Ma'mar informed us, he said: Ayoub on the authority of Ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaidah: They struck the murdered man with some of her flesh. Ma'mar said: Qatadah said: They struck him with the flesh of her thigh and he came back to life, so he said: So-and-so killed me. And Wakee' bin Al-Jarrah said in his interpretation: Al-Nadr bin Arabi told us on the authority of Ikrimah, So we said, strike him with some of it, so he struck with her thigh, so he stood up and said: So-and-so killed me. Ibn Abi Hatim said: And something similar to that was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Qatadah, and Ikrimah. Al-Suddi said: They struck him with the piece of bone between the shoulders, and he came back to life. They asked him, and he said: My nephew killed me. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Moses, peace be upon him, ordered them to take a bone from its bones and strike the dead man with it, so they did so his soul returned to him, and he named his killer for them, then he returned dead as he was. Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: They struck him with some of its limbs, and it was said: with its tongue, and it was said: with the tailbone. The Almighty said: Thus does God bring the dead to life, meaning they struck him and he came back to life. The Almighty drew attention to His power and His bringing the dead back to life through what they witnessed of the dead man's condition. The Almighty made that action an argument for them on the Day of Resurrection, and a separation from what was between them of dispute and stubbornness. God Almighty mentioned in this Surah what He created of bringing the dead back to life in five places: Then We raised you up after your death. This is the story, and the story of those who left their homes, and they were thousands, for fear of death, and the story of the one who passed by a village while it was desolate on its roofs, and the story of Abraham. Peace be upon him and the four birds, and the Almighty pointed out by reviving the earth after its death the return of bodies after they have become dust, as Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi said: Shu'bah told us, Ya'la ibn Ata' told me, he said I heard Wakee' ibn 'Adas narrating on the authority of Abu Razeen al-Uqayli, may God be pleased with him, “He said: I said, O Messenger of God, how does God revive the dead? He said: Have you not passed by a barren valley, then passed by it green? He said: Yes. He said: This is how the resurrection is, or he said: This is how God revives the dead.” And the witness to this is the Almighty's saying: “And a sign for them is the dead earth. We have given it life and produced from it grain, from which they eat. And We placed therein gardens of palm trees and grapevines and caused springs to gush forth therein, that they may eat of its fruit - and their hands have not made it. So will they not be grateful?”

Question The evidence for the school of Imam Malik that the statement of the wounded person: So-and-so killed me is a stain is this story, because when the victim was revived he was asked who killed him, and he said: So-and-so killed me, and that was accepted from him, because he would not tell anything except the truth at that time, and he would not be accused in this case, and they preferred that based on the hadith of Anas that a Jew killed a slave girl on her clothes, and crushed her head between two stones, and it was said: Who did this to you, so-and-so? So-and-so? Until they mentioned the Jew, and she nodded her head, so the Jew was seized and kept on at him until he confessed, so the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, ordered that his head be crushed between two stones, and according to Malik, if there is a stain, the heirs of the victim swear an oath, and the majority disagreed with that, and did not consider the statement of the victim in that regard a stain.

Fath al-Qadir

We have already mentioned what we mentioned in the story of the cow slaughter, so the meaning of the statement is 72- When you killed a person and disputed over it, and God will bring out what you were concealing. So Moses said to his al-Nas 114: God commands you to slaughter a cow, to the end of the story, and after that So We said, ‘Strike him with part of it,’ the verse. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: Know that the occurrence of the killing must have preceded the Almighty's command to slaughter. As for the information about the occurrence of that killing, and that the slain person must be struck with some of that cow, it must not precede the information about the story of the cow. The statement of those who say: This story must precede the first in recitation is wrong, because this story in itself must precede the first in existence. As for precedence in mention, it is not obligatory because sometimes the mention of the reason precedes the mention of the ruling, and other times the opposite. It is as if when that incident happened to them, God ordered them to slaughter the cow, so when they slaughtered it, He said: And when you killed a soul before, and the killing was attributed to them because the killer was one of them. The root of idara'tum is tadara'tum, then the ta' was assimilated into the dal, and since beginning with the assimilated silent letter is not permissible, they added the alif of connection. The meaning of idara'tum is: you differed and disputed, because the disputants repel each other: that is, they repel each other, and the meaning of mukhraj is manifest: that is, what you concealed. There is a matter of killing between you, so God will make it apparent to His servants and explain it to them. This sentence is an interjection between the parts of the speech: that is, you argued about it, so we said.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

72. The Almighty said: And when you killed a person This is the beginning of the story, even though it was recited later. The name of the one killed was Amil. So you disputed over it Its original form is You disputed, so the ta' was assimilated into the dal and the alif was inserted, like His saying: You were burdened, Ibn Abbas and Mujahid said: Its meaning is So you differed. Al-Rabi' bin Anas said: You disputed, meaning some of you resorted to others from the word dara' which means repelling, so each one would defend himself. And God will bring out, meaning He will reveal what you were concealing, for the murderer was concealing the murder.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

72- And when you killed a person addressing everyone because the killing was present among them then you disputed over it you argued about it, as the two disputants push each other, or you pushed each other by throwing each one of them who killed him to his companion, and its original form is tadara'atum so the ta was assimilated into the dal and the hamzat al-wasl was brought for it and God will bring out what you were concealing its manifestation is inevitable, and I use the verb manifest because it is a narration of the future just as I use spread out his arms because it is a narration of a past state.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:73

So We said, "Strike him with part of it." Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:73

So We said, "Strike him with part of it." Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

So We said, Strike him meaning the murdered person (with some of it so he struck her tongue or her tailbone and she came back to life and said: So-and-so killed me and so-and-so to his cousins and he died and they were deprived of the inheritance and were killed. God Almighty said: Thus the revival God brings the dead to life and shows you His signs the evidence of His power that you may understand reflect and learn that the One who is able to revive one soul is able to revive many souls and you will believe.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, meant by His statement: So We said, is that We said to the people of Moses who were arguing about the slain man whose matter we had previously described: Strike the slain man. The ha in His statement: strike him, is who mentioned the slain man? With some of it, meaning: with some of the cow that God had commanded them to slaughter, so they slaughtered it.

Then the scholars differed about the part of the cow that the victim was struck with, and which part of it that was.

Some of them said: He struck the dead cow with the thigh. Those who said that: Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: He struck the cow with the thigh, so it rose alive and said: So-and-so killed me. Then it returned to its death.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: He was struck with the thigh of the cow, then he mentioned something similar.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Jabir bin Nuh told us, on the authority of Al-Nadr bin Arabi, on the authority of Ikrimah: So we said, 'Strike him with part of it.' He said: With her thigh. So when he was struck with it, he came back to life and said: So-and-so killed me. Then he returned to his normal state.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Khalid bin Yazid, on the authority of Mujahid, he said: A man struck her thigh, so she got up alive and said, So-and-so killed me. Then he returned to his death.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, he said: Ayoub said, on the authority of Ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaydah: They struck the murdered man with some of his flesh. Muammar said, on the authority of Qatada: They struck him with the flesh of the thigh, and he came back to life. He said: So-and-so killed me.

Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, who said: It was mentioned to us that they struck him on her thigh, then God revived him and he informed about his killer who killed him, and he spoke and then died.

Others said: What he struck him with from it is the piece between the shoulders. Those who said that: Musa told me, he said: Amr told us, he said: Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: "So we said: Strike him with some of it." So they struck him with the piece between the shoulders and he lived. They asked him: Who killed you? He said to them: My nephew. Others said: What they were ordered to strike him with from it was a bone from its bones. Those who said that: Al-Muthanna told me, he said: Adam told us, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: Musa ordered them to take a bone from it and strike the slain man with it. So they did, and his soul returned to him, and he named his killer for them, then he returned dead as he was. So his killer was taken, and he was the one who came to Musa and complained to him, so God killed him for the worst of his deeds.

Others said: Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said: Ibn Wahb told us, he said: Ibn Zayd said: They hit the dead man with some of their spears and he was sitting. They said: Who killed you? He said: My nephew. He said: He killed him and threw him on that hill, he wanted to take his blood money.

Abu Ja'far said: The correct interpretation of his statement, So We said, 'Strike him with part of it,' according to us is that God, the Most High, commanded them to strike the slain man with part of the cow so that the one who was struck would come back to life. There is no indication in the verse, nor in any report that can provide evidence, as to which part of it the people were commanded to strike the slain man with. It is possible that what they were commanded to strike him with was the thigh, and it is possible that it was the tail, the shoulder cartilage, and other parts of it. Ignorance of which part they struck the slain man with does not harm, nor does knowledge of it benefit, while acknowledging that the people struck the slain man with part of the cow after slaughtering it, and God brought him back to life.

Abu Jaafar said: If someone were to say: What was the meaning of the command to strike the dead man with some of it? It would be said: So that he would come back to life and inform the Prophet of God, Moses, peace be upon him, and those who disputed about him who killed him.

If he said: Where is the report that God Almighty ordered them to do that for that reason?

It was said: He left that out, being content with the indication of what was mentioned of the speech indicating it, such as what we mentioned of similar examples of that previously. The meaning of the speech: So we said, Strike him with some of it so that he may come back to life, so they struck him and he came back to life, as the Most High said: (Strike the sea with your staff, and it will part (Ash-Shu'ara': 63)), and the meaning: So he struck and it parted, is indicated by His statement: Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: Thus does God bring the dead to life.

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, Thus does God bring the dead to life, is an address from God to His believing servants, and an argument from Him against the polytheists who denied the resurrection, and He commanded them to consider what He, may He be glorified, did in bringing back to life the slain man of the Children of Israel after his death in this world. So He, may He be glorified and exalted, said to them: O you who deny the resurrection after death, consider My bringing back to life this slain man after his death, for just as I brought him back to life in this world, so I will bring the dead back to life after their death, and I will resurrect them on the Day of Resurrection.

The Almighty used this as evidence against the polytheists of the Arabs, who were an illiterate people who had no book, because those who knew this knowledge from the Children of Israel were among them, and these verses were revealed about them. So the Almighty informed them of this, so that they would learn about the knowledge of those who came before them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And He shows you His signs that you may understand.

Abu Ja'far said: He, the Most High, means: And God shows you, O disbelievers who deny Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and what he brought from God of His signs. And His signs: His signs and proofs indicating his prophethood, so that you may understand and comprehend that he is truthful and honest, so that you may believe in him and follow him.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said, Then We said, 'Strike him with part of it.' It was said: With the tongue because it is the instrument of speech. It was also said: With the coccyx, because it is the organ of human creation. It was also said: With the thigh. It was also said: With one of its bones, and the severed part is one of its limbs. So when he was struck with it, he came back to life and informed about his killer, then he returned dead as he was.

Question: Malik may God have mercy on him based his argument in the narration of Ibn Wahb and Ibn al-Qasim on the validity of the statement of the qassamah by the statement of the murdered person: My blood is with so-and-so, or so-and-so killed me. Al-Shafi'i and the majority of scholars forbade it, saying: It is correct, because the statement of the murdered person: My blood is with so-and-so, or so-and-so killed me, is a statement that may be true or false. There is no dispute that the blood of the defendant is inviolable and forbidden to be made permissible except with certainty, and there is no certainty with possibility, so the statement of the murdered person: My blood is with so-and-so is invalid. As for the murdered man of the Children of Israel, it was a miracle, and God informed that He would revive him, and that includes informing of his murderer with certainty that is not subject to possibility, so they differed. Ibn al-Arabi said: The miracle was in bringing him back to life, so when he came back to life, his speech was like the speech of all people in acceptance and rejection. This is a subtle branch of knowledge that only Malik realized, and there is nothing in the Qur'an that states that if he informs, charity is obligatory, so perhaps He ordered them to conduct the qassamah with him. Al-Bukhari, Al-Shafi'i and a group of scholars rejected this and said: How can his statement be accepted regarding blood when his statement regarding a dirham is not accepted?

Question: Scholars differed regarding the ruling on qasama. It was narrated from Salim, Abu Qilabah, Omar bin Abdul Aziz and Al-Hakam bin Utaybah that they hesitated in ruling on it. Al-Bukhari tended towards this, because he mentioned the hadith on qasama in the wrong place. The majority said: The ruling on qasama is proven from the Prophet, peace and blessings be upon him. Then they differed regarding how to rule on it. A group said: The claimants begin with faith. If they swear, they are entitled to it. If they refuse, the defendants swear fifty oaths and are acquitted. This is the opinion of the people of Medina, Al-Layth, Al-Shafi'i, Ahmad and Abu Thawr. It is implied by the hadith of Huwaysa and Muhaysa, which was narrated by Imams Malik and others. A group went to the view that the defendants begin with faith, so they swear and are acquitted. This was narrated from Omar bin Al-Khattab, Al-Sha'bi and Al-Nakha'i. Al-Thawri and the Kufians said the same. They cited as evidence the hadith of Sa'id bin Ubayd from Bashir bin Yasar, which states: The defendants, who are the Jews, begin with faith. And what Abu Dawud narrated on the authority of Al-Zuhri on the authority of Abu Salamah bin Abd Al-Rahman on the authority of men from the Ansar, "that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to the Jews and began with them: 'Can fifty men among you swear?' They refused, so he said to the Ansar: 'You deserve it.' They said: 'We swear in secret, O Messenger of God!' So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, made it blood money on the Jews, because he was found among them." And his saying, peace be upon him:

But the oath is on the defendant. So they appointed. They said: This is the established principle in lawsuits, the wisdom of which the Shari'ah has drawn attention to in the words of the Prophet, peace be upon him:

If people were to give what they claim, then people would claim the blood and money of other people, but the oath is on the defendant. The people of the first article responded to them and said:

So We said, "Strike him with part of it." Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

Hadith of Saeed bin Ubaid about the Jews being excommunicated, according to the people of Hadith. It was included by Al-Nasa'i, who said: Saeed was not followed in this narration, as far as I know. He attributed the hadith of Bashir to Sahl.

The Prophet (peace be upon him) began with the claimants Yahya bin Saeed, Ibn Uyaynah, Hammad bin Zaid, Abdul Wahhab Al-Thaqafi, Isa bin Hammad, and Bishr bin Al-Mufaddal. These are seven. Although Malik sent it, a group of hadith scholars connected it, and it is more authentic than the hadith of Saeed bin Ubaid. Abu Muhammad Al-Asili said: It is not permissible to object to the hadith of a group with a single report, even though Saeed bin Ubaid said in his hadith: The Messenger of God (peace be upon him) paid blood money for him with one hundred camels from the charity camels. Charity is not given as blood money, nor is it used to reconcile on behalf of those who are not entitled to it. The hadith of Abu Dawud is mursal, so it does not contradict the connected authentic hadiths. They responded to the request for the origin by saying that this ruling is an origin in itself due to the sanctity of blood. Ibn Al-Mundhir said: It has been proven that "the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, made the burden of proof on the plaintiff and the oath on the defendant," and the ruling based on the apparent meaning of that must be made, unless God, in His Book or on the tongue of His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, specifies a ruling on something, in which case it is excluded from the whole of this report. Among what the Book indicates is that the slanderer is obligated to receive the punishment of the slandered if he does not have four witnesses to testify to the truth of what the slandered person has accused him of. He specified that the punishment is dropped for the one who slanders his wife if he bears witness to four testimonies. Among what the Sunnah specified is the ruling of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, on the oath. Ibn Jurayj narrated on the authority of Ata' on the authority of Abu Hurayrah that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

The burden of proof is on the one who claims and the oath is on the one who denies, except in the case of an oath. Narrated by Al-Daraqutni. Malik provided sufficient evidence for this issue in his Muwatta', so ponder it there.

Question: They also differed about the obligation of retaliation by oath, so a group made retaliation obligatory by it, and this is the opinion of Malik, Al-Layth, Ahmad, and Abu Thawr, "because of what he, peace be upon him, said to Huwaysa, Muhaysa, and Abd al-Rahman:

"Do you swear and deserve the blood of your companion?" Abu Dawood narrated on the authority of Amr bin Shuaib on the authority of his father on the authority of his grandfather.

"The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, killed a man from Banu Nadr ibn Malik by qasama." Al-Daraqutni said: The version of Amr ibn Shu'ayb on the authority of his father on the authority of his grandfather is authentic. Likewise, Abu Umar ibn Abd al-Barr authenticated the hadith of Amr ibn Shu'ayb and used it as evidence. Al-Bukhari said: I saw Ali ibn al-Madini, Ahmad ibn Hanbal, al-Hamidi, and Ishaq ibn Rahawayh using it as evidence. Al-Daraqutni said in al-Sunan. A group said: There is no retaliation by qasama, but rather blood money is required. This was narrated on the authority of Umar and Ibn Abbas, and it is the opinion of al-Nakha'i and al-Hasan. It was also the opinion of al-Thawri, the Kufians, al-Shafi'i, and Ishaq. They used as evidence what Malik narrated on the authority of Ibn Abi Laila ibn Abdullah on the authority of Sahl ibn Abi Hathma on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, saying to the Ansar:

Either they pay your companion's blood money or they declare war on you. They said: This indicates blood money, not retaliation. They said: The meaning of his saying, peace be upon him: And you deserve the blood of your companion is the blood money for the blood of your slain man, because the Jews are not their companions, and whoever deserves the blood money for his companion has deserved his blood, because blood money may be taken in the case of premeditated murder, in which case that would be a deserved blood money.

Question: What requires the oath is the inevitable stain. The stain is an indication that makes it more likely that the one claiming the murder is telling the truth, such as the testimony of a single just person regarding seeing the murder, or seeing the murdered person wallowing in his own blood, and the accused is close to him or has traces of the murder on him. There is disagreement about stain and what is said about it. Malik said: It is the murdered person saying, My blood is with so-and-so. The just witness is stained. This is what Ibn al-Qasim narrated from him. Ashhab narrated from Malik that he swears with an unjust witness and with a woman. Ibn Wahb narrated that the testimony of women is stained. Muhammad mentioned from Ibn al-Qasim that the testimony of two women is stained, but not the testimony of one woman. Judge Abu Bakr ibn al-Arabi said: There is much disagreement about stained, the well-known school of thought is that it is the just witness. Muhammad said: I prefer it. Ibn al-Qasim and Ibn Abd al-Hakam adopted it. It was narrated from Abd al-Malik ibn Marwan: If the wounded or beaten person says, My blood is with so-and-so and he dies, then the oath is valid. Malik and al-Layth ibn Sa'd said the same. Malik argued that the slain man of the Children of Israel said: So-and-so killed me. Al-Shafi'i said: The witness who is slandered is the just one, or he can bring evidence even if they are not just. Al-Thawri and the Kufians made the blood money obligatory in the presence of the slain man alone, and they dispensed with considering the statement of the slain man and the witness. They said: If a slain man is found in a neighborhood of people and there is evidence of him, the people of that neighborhood swear that they did not kill him and his blood money is theirs. If there is no evidence of him, then the aqila is not responsible for anything unless the evidence is established against one person. Sufyan said: This is one of the things that we have agreed upon, and it is a weak statement in which they disagreed with the people of knowledge, and they have no predecessors in it. It is contrary to the Qur'an and Sunnah, and because it obligates the aqila to pay money without evidence established against them or admission from them. Malik and Al-Shafi'i held that if a slain man is found in a neighborhood of people, he is slandered, and the closest person to the house is not to be held accountable for it, because the slain man may be killed and then thrown at the door of people to be slandered with him, so he is not to be held accountable for such a thing until the reasons that they stipulated for the obligation of the blood money are present. Omar bin Abdul Aziz said: This is something in which judgment is delayed until God judges it on the Day of Resurrection.

Question: Al-Qasim bin Mas'adah said: I said to Sana'i: Malik does not say that the oath is valid except with a defect, so why did you mention the hadith of the oath and there is no defect in it? Al-Nasa'i said: Malik considered the enmity that was between them and the Children of Israel to be like a defect, and he considered the defect or the statement of the dead person to be like enmity. Ibn Abi Zayd said: The origin of this is in the story of the Children of Israel when God revived the one who was struck by a piece of the cow and he said: So-and-so killed me, and that the enmity is a defect. Al-Shafi'i said: We do not see the statement of the killed person as a defect, as mentioned above. Al-Shafi'i said: If there is clear enmity between one group and another group, such as the enmity that was between the Ansar and the Jews, and a dead person is found in one of the two groups and no one else is associated with them, then the oath is valid in it.

Question: They differed regarding the murdered person who is found in the neighborhood whose owners have rented it out. The people of opinion said: It is on the people of the plan and nothing is on the residents. If they sell their homes and then a murdered person is found, then the blood money is on the buyer and nothing is on the residents. If the owners of the homes are absent and they have rented their homes, then the blood money is on the owners of the absent homes and nothing is on the residents among whom the murdered person was found.

Then Yaqub returned from among them from this statement and said: The blood money is on the inhabitants of the houses. He narrated this statement from Ibn Abi Laila, and he argued that the people of Khaybar were workers and residents who worked and the murdered man was found among them. Al-Thawri said: We say: It is on the people of the origin, meaning the people of the houses. Ahmad said: The statement is the statement of Ibn Abi Laila regarding the blood money, not the blood money. Al-Shafi'i said: All of that is the same, and there is no blood money or retaliation except with evidence that is established, or what necessitates the blood money, so the guardians divide.

Ibn al-Mundhir said: This is more correct.

Issue: In the case of qasama, less than fifty oaths are to be sworn, based on the saying of the Prophet (peace be upon him) in the hadith of Huwaysa and Muhaysah: Fifty of you shall swear by one of them. If the beneficiaries are fifty, each one of them shall swear one oath. If they are less than that or one of them refuses to be pardoned, the oaths shall be returned to them according to their number. In the case of premeditated murder, less than two men shall not swear. Neither the men nor the women shall swear. The guardians and those whom the guardians seek help from the agnates shall swear fifty oaths. This is the view of Malik, al-Layth, al-Thawri, al-Awza'i, Ahmad and Dawud. Mutraf narrated from Malik that no one shall swear with the defendant, and they themselves shall swear—as if they were one or more—fifty oaths by which they acquit themselves. This is the view of al-Shafi'i. Al-Shafi'i said: Only an heir shall swear, whether the killing was premeditated or accidental. No one shall swear on property and be entitled to it except the one who owns it for himself or the one to whom God has given it from the heirs. The heirs shall divide according to the proportion of their inheritance. Abu Thawr said the same and Ibn al-Mundhir chose it, and it is correct, because the one who does not sue him has no reason for him to swear an oath. Then the purpose of these oaths is to be innocent of the claim, and the one who does not sue him is innocent. Malik said about a mistake: One man or woman swears in it, and whenever fifty oaths are completed by one or more, the one who swore is entitled to his inheritance, and the one who refuses does not deserve anything. If the one who was absent comes, he swears from the oaths that he would have been required to swear if he had been present according to his inheritance. This is the famous saying of Malik, and it was narrated from him that he does not see an oath in a mistake.

The completion of the issues of blood money, its branches and its rulings is mentioned in the books of jurisprudence and controversy. What we have mentioned is sufficient, and God is the Grantor of success.

Question: In this story of the cow is evidence that the law of those before us is the law for us, and groups of theologians and some of the jurists have said this, and Al-Karkhi chose it and Ibn Bakir, the judge from our scholars, stated it, and Judge Abu Muhammad Abdul Wahhab said: It is what is required by the principles of Malik and his disputes in his books, and Al-Shafi'i inclined towards it, and he said: So follow their guidance as will come, God willing.

God Almighty says: Thus does God bring the dead to life. That is, just as He brought this one to life after his death, so does God bring to life everyone who dies. The kaf is in the accusative case because it describes a deleted source. And He shows you His signs that is, His signs and His power. That you may understand. So that you may understand. This has already been mentioned. That is, that you may refrain from disobeying Him. I restrained myself from such-and-such means I prevented it from it. The strongholds are fortresses.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:73

So We said, "Strike him with part of it." Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

Al-Bukhari said: And you disputed over it means you differed. And this is what Mujahid said. He said in what Ibn Abi Hatim narrated, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Abu Hudhayfah, on the authority of Shibl, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, that he said in the words of God the Almighty: And when you killed a person and disputed over it means you differed. And Ata' al-Khurasani and al-Dahhak said: you argued over it. And Ibn Jurayj said: And when you killed a person and disputed over it some of them said: you killed him, and others said: rather you killed him. And this is what Abd al-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said. And God will bring out what you were concealing Mujahid said: what you conceal. And Ibn Hatim said: Amr ibn Muslim al-Basri told us, Muhammad ibn al-Tufayl al-Abdi told us, Sadaqah ibn Rustum told us, I heard al-Musayyab ibn Rafi' say: No man did a good deed in seven houses except that God revealed it, and no man did a bad deed in seven houses except that God revealed it. And the confirmation of that is in the words of God: "And God will bring out what you were concealing. So We said, 'Strike him with part of it.'" This part, that is, any part of the body of this cow, is the miracle that is achieved by it, and the breach of the norm is happening by it, and it was specified in the matter itself. If there was any benefit in specifying it for us in the matter of religion or the world, God Almighty would have made it clear to us, but He made it ambiguous and it did not come through a sound chain of transmission from one whose explanation is infallible. So we make it ambiguous as God made it ambiguous. For this reason, Ibn Abi Hatim said: Ahmad ibn Sinan told us, Affan ibn Muslim told us, Abd al-Wahid ibn Ziyad told us, al-A'mash told us, on the authority of al-Munhal ibn Amr, on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The owners of the cow of the Children of Israel sought it for forty years until they found it with a man among his cows, and it was a cow that pleased him. He said: So they kept offering it to him, but he refused until they gave him a full bag of dinars, so they slaughtered it and struck him - meaning the slain man - with a part of it, and he stood up with blood gushing from his veins. They said to him, Who killed you? He said: So-and-so killed me. And this is what Al-Hasan and Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: That he struck with some of it. And in a narration on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he struck with the bone next to the cartilage. And Abd Al-Razzaq said: Ma'mar informed us, he said: Ayoub on the authority of Ibn Sirin, on the authority of Ubaidah: They struck the murdered man with some of her flesh. Ma'mar said: Qatadah said: They struck him with the flesh of her thigh and he came back to life, so he said: So-and-so killed me. And Wakee' bin Al-Jarrah said in his interpretation: Al-Nadr bin Arabi told us on the authority of Ikrimah, So we said, strike him with some of it, so he struck with her thigh, so he stood up and said: So-and-so killed me.

Ibn Abi Hatim said: And something similar to that was narrated on the authority of Mujahid, Qatadah, and Ikrimah. Al-Suddi said: They struck him with the piece of bone between the shoulders, and he came back to life. They asked him, and he said: My nephew killed me. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Moses, peace be upon him, ordered them to take a bone from its bones and strike the dead man with it, so they did so his soul returned to him, and he named his killer for them, then he returned dead as he was. Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: They struck him with some of its limbs, and it was said: with its tongue, and it was said: with the tailbone. The Almighty said: Thus does God bring the dead to life, meaning they struck him and he came back to life. The Almighty drew attention to His power and His bringing the dead back to life through what they witnessed of the dead man's condition. The Almighty made that action an argument for them on the Day of Resurrection, and a separation from what was between them of dispute and stubbornness. God Almighty mentioned in this Surah what He created of bringing the dead back to life in five places: Then We raised you up after your death. This is the story, and the story of those who left their homes, and they were thousands, for fear of death, and the story of the one who passed by a village while it was desolate on its roofs, and the story of Abraham. Peace be upon him and the four birds, and the Almighty pointed out by reviving the earth after its death the return of bodies after they have become dust, as Abu Dawud al-Tayalisi said: Shu'bah told us, Ya'la ibn Ata' told me, he said I heard Wakee' ibn Adas narrating on the authority of Abu Razeen al-Uqayli, may God be pleased with him, "He said: I said, O Messenger of God, how does God revive the dead? He said: Have you not passed by a barren valley, then passed by it green? He said: Yes. He said: This is how the resurrection is, or he said: This is how God revives the dead." And the witness to this is the Almighty's saying: "And a sign for them is the dead earth. We have given it life and produced from it grain, from which they eat. And We placed therein gardens of palm trees and grapevines and caused springs to gush forth therein, that they may eat of its fruit - and their hands have not made it. So will they not be grateful?"

Question The evidence for the school of Imam Malik that the statement of the wounded person: So-and-so killed me is a stain is this story, because when the victim was revived he was asked who killed him, and he said: So-and-so killed me, and that was accepted from him, because he would not tell anything except the truth at that time, and he would not be accused in this case, and they preferred that based on the hadith of Anas that a Jew killed a slave girl on her clothes, and crushed her head between two stones, and it was said: Who did this to you, so-and-so? So-and-so? Until they mentioned the Jew, and she nodded her head, so the Jew was seized and kept on at him until he confessed, so the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, ordered that his head be crushed between two stones, and according to Malik, if there is a stain, the heirs of the victim swear an oath, and the majority disagreed with that, and did not consider the statement of the victim in that regard a stain.

Fath al-Qadir

There is a difference of opinion regarding the identification of some of what they were ordered to strike the dead man with, and there is no need for that with what it entails of speaking without knowledge. It is sufficient for us to say: God ordered them to strike him with some of it, so whichever of them they struck with, they did what they were ordered to do, and anything more than that is superfluous knowledge if there is no proof for it. His statement 73-: Thus does God bring the dead to life. There is an omission in the speech, and the meaning is So We said, Strike him with some of it. So God brought him to life. Thus does God bring the dead to life, meaning a revival like this revival. And He shows you His signs, meaning His signs and evidence indicating the perfection of His power. This may be addressed to those who attended the story, and it may be addressed to those who were present when the Qur'an was revealed.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

73. "So we said, 'Strike him' meaning the slain man 'with part of it' meaning with part of the cow. They differed about some of that. Ibn 'Abbas, may God be pleased with him, and most of the commentators said: They struck him with the bone next to the cartilage, which is the site of death. Mujahid and Sa'id ibn Jubayr said: With the coccyx because it is the first thing to be created and the last to wear out, and creation rides on it. Ad-Dahhak said: With its tongue. Al-Husayn ibn al-Fadl said: This is more indicative of it because it is the instrument of speech. Al-Kalbi and 'Ikrimah said: With its right thigh. It was said: With a part of it, not its eye. So they did that, and the slain man rose to life by the permission of God Almighty, and his jugular veins, meaning the veins of the neck, were gushing with blood and he said, 'So-and-so killed me.' Then he fell and died on the spot, so his killer was deprived of the inheritance. In al-Naba 78: (A killer did not inherit after the owner of the cow) and in it is an implication, meaning: So he struck him and he was brought back to life. "Thus does God bring the dead back to life" as He brought 'Amil back to life. And He shows you His signs that you may understand it was said: that you prevent yourselves from sins.

As for the ruling on this issue in Islam: If a dead person is found in a place and his killer is not known, then if there is taint on a person - and taint is: that the heart is convinced that the claimant is telling the truth, such as a group of people gathered in a house or desert and then dispersed from a dead person and it is convinced in the heart that the killer is among them, or a dead person is found in a neighborhood or village and they are all enemies of the dead person and no one else mixes with them, so it is convinced in the heart that they killed him - and the guardian claims against some of them, the claimant swears fifty oaths against the one he is claiming against, and if the guardians are a group, the oaths are distributed among them, then after they swear they take the blood money from the defendant's clan if they claim accidental killing, and if they claim deliberate killing, then from his money, and there is no retaliation according to the majority opinion, and some of them went to the necessity of retaliation, which is the opinion of Omar bin Abdul Aziz and Malik and Ahmad said the same. If there is no taint on the defendant, then the word of the defendant is taken with his oath, then does he swear one oath or fifty oaths? There are two opinions: One of them is a single oath as in all other claims, and the second he swears fifty oaths to make the matter of blood more serious. According to Abu Hanifa, may God be pleased with him: There is no rule for the stain [and it does not increase with the oath of the plaintiff]. He said: If a dead person is found in a neighborhood, the imam chooses fifty righteous men from its people and makes them swear that they did not kill him and do not know his killer, then he takes the blood money from its residents. The evidence that the beginning is with the oath of the plaintiff when there is stain:

[What Abdul Wahhab bin Muhammad Al-Khatib told us, I am Abdul Aziz bin Ahmad Al-Khalal, I am Abu Al-Abbas Muhammad bin Yaqub Al-Asamm, I am Al-Rabi', I am Al-Shafi'i, I am Abdul Wahhab bin Abdul Majeed Al-Thaqafi, on the authority of Yahya bin Saeed, on the authority of Bashir bin Yasar] on the authority of Sahl bin Abi Hathmah "that Abdullah bin Sahl and Muhaisah bin Masoud went out to Khaybar for their needs, and Abdullah bin Sahl was killed. So he and Abdul Rahman / the brother of the slain man and Huwaisa bin Masoud went to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and mentioned to him the killing of Abdullah bin Sahl. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: You swear fifty oaths and you deserve the blood of your companion or your killer. They said: O Messenger of God, we did not witness or attend. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: So the Jews will acquit you with fifty oaths. They said: O Messenger of God, how do we accept the oaths of a people of infidels? So the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, decided to pay his blood money on his own." [In another version, he claimed that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, paid his blood money on his own.] Bashir bin Yasar said: Sahl said: You kicked me. The obligation of those obligations is in a place of rest for us. In another narration: A red camel from those obligations ran me in a place of rest for us. Narrated by Muslim on the authority of Muhammad ibn al-Muthanna on the authority of Abd al-Wahhab.

The evidence from the hadith: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, began with the oaths of the claimants to strengthen their side with the taint, which is that Abdullah bin Sahl was found killed in Khaybar, and the enmity was apparent between the Ansar and the people of Khaybar, and it was overwhelming in the heart that they had killed him, and the oath is always an argument for the one whose side is strong, and in the absence of taint, the side of the defendant is strengthened in that the original is the innocence of his conscience and the word is taken with his oath.

So We said, "Strike him with part of it." Thus does God bring the dead to life and show you His signs that you may understand.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

73- So we said, 'Strike him' is in apposition to 'you turned' and what is between them is an interjection, and the pronoun refers to the self and the masculine is based on the interpretation of the person or the slain person with some of it meaning some of it was and it was said: with her smallest. And it was said: with her tongue. And it was said: with her right thigh. And it was said: with the ear. And it was said: with wonder. Thus does God bring the dead to life indicates what was omitted, which is: so they struck him and he came to life, and the address is to those who were present during the life of the slain person, or the revelation of the verse. And He will show you His signs His evidence of the perfection of His power. That you may understand so that your mind may be complete and you may know that He who is able to revive a soul is able to revive all souls, or you may work on His case. Perhaps God Almighty did not revive him from the beginning and stipulated what He stipulated for it because it involves drawing closer to God, fulfilling one's duty, benefiting the orphan, reminding one of the blessings of trust and compassion for one's children, and that it is the right of the seeker to offer a devotion, and the seeker of devotion should seek the best and exaggerate its price, as it was narrated on the authority of Omar, may God be pleased with him, that he sacrificed a purebred camel that he bought for three hundred dinars. And that the one who truly affects is God Almighty, and the causes are signs that have no effect, and that whoever wants to know his most hostile enemy who seeks to kill him with real death, the way is for him to slaughter his own cow, which is the monthly strength when the evil of youth has left it, and the weakness of old age has not overtaken it, and it was admirable and pleasant to look at, not humiliated in seeking the world, and free from its filth and no mark of its ugliness such that its effect reaches his soul, so he lives a good life, and expresses what reveals the situation, and what is between the mind and imagination of evasion and conflict is removed.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:74

Then your hearts hardened after that, so they are like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are some that split open so water issues from them, and indeed, among them are some that fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Then your hearts hardened O Jews, they were hardened from accepting the truth after that mentioned of the revival of the slain man and the verses before it so they are like stones in hardness or harder than them and indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are those from which water issues in which the ta' in the original is assimilated into the shin and from them water comes out, and indeed, among them are those which descend from high to low for fear of God and your hearts are not affected nor softened nor humbled and God is not unaware of what you do but He only delays you for your time and in a reading with the ta'taniyya and in it is a shift from the address

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: He meant by that the infidels of the Children of Israel, and they are, as he mentioned, the sons of the brother of the murdered man. So he said to them: Then your hearts hardened, meaning they became dry, rough, and dark, as the rajaz poet said:

I was cruel and my self was cruel

It is said that qasa, asa, and ataa have the same meaning, which is to say, rough, coarse, and hard. It is said: His heart became hard, it becomes hard, qaswa, qasawat, and qasaa.

And what he means by his saying: after that, is after he revived the one killed for them whom they disputed about killing, so he informed them of his killer, and the reason for which he killed him, as we have described before according to what came in the traces and reports, and God Almighty distinguished in His report between those who were right and those who were wrong. And the hardness of their hearts with which God described them was that, as far as we have been informed, they denied that they had killed the one killed whom God had revived, so he informed the Children of Israel that they had killed him, after he informed them of that, and after his second death, as:

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: When the slain man was struck with part of it - meaning part of the cow - he sat up alive. It was said to him: Who killed you? He said: My brother's sons killed me. Then he died, and his brother's sons said when he died: By God, we did not kill him. So they denied the truth after they saw him. Then God said: Then your hearts hardened after that - meaning my brother's sons, the old man - and became like stones or even harder.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: Then your hearts hardened after that, meaning: after God showed them the resurrection of the dead, and after He showed them the matter of the murdered man, so they were like stones or even harder.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They are like stones or even harder.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: So it is is: your hearts. He says: Then your hearts became hardened after you saw the truth and understood it and recognized it from submitting to it and acknowledging the obligation of God's right over you, so your hearts are like stones in hardness, dryness, roughness and severity, or even harder, meaning: their hearts are harder than stones in submitting to the obligation of God's right over them and acknowledging the necessary rights of His for them.

If someone asks: What is the meaning of his saying: It is like stones or even harder? And or according to the Arabs only comes in speech to mean doubt, and God Almighty, may He be glorified, does not allow doubt in His report?

It was said: This is not in the way you imagined, that it is a doubt from God, may He be glorified, in what He informed us about, but rather it is report from Him about their hard hearts, that they are with His servants who are their owners, who denied the truth after they saw the great signs of God, like stones in hardness or harder than stones, with them and with those who knew their situation.

A group of Arab scholars have said various things about this. Some of them said: God Almighty intended by His saying they are like stones or even harder, and similar reports that come with or, such as His saying And We sent him to a hundred thousand or more 37:147 and His saying And either we or you are upon right guidance or in manifest error 34:124, to make the one addressed vague, for he knows which one it was. They said: Similar to this is the saying of the one who says: I ate a date or a fresh date, and he knows which one he ate, but he made it vague for the one addressed, as Abu al-Aswad al-Du'ali said:

I love Muhammad very much, Abbas, Hamza and the guardian

If their love is right, I will follow it, and I am not mistaken if it is wrong.

They said: There is no doubt that Abu Al-Aswad had no doubt that the love of the one he named was guidance, but he was vague about who he addressed with it. It was mentioned about Abu Al-Aswad that when he said these verses, it was said to him: Do you have doubts? He said: No, by God. Then he cited the words of God Almighty: And either we or you are upon guidance or in manifest error (Saba': 24), and he said: Or was he doubting who told this about the guide from the misguidance?

Then your hearts hardened after that, so they are like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are some that split open so water issues from them, and indeed, among them are some that fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do.

Some of them said: This is like the saying of the one who says: I have fed you nothing but sweet or sour, and he fed him both types. They said: The one who said that did not doubt that he fed his companion both sweet and sour, but he wanted to inform him about what he fed him, that it did not go beyond these two types. They said: Likewise his saying: They are like stones or even harder, its meaning is: Their hearts do not come out of either of these two examples, either they are like stones in hardness, or they are harder than them. The meaning of that according to this interpretation is: Some of them are like stones in hardness, and some of them are harder than stones.

Some of them said: Or in his saying: Or more severe, means, and more severe, as the Blessed and Most High said: And do not obey among them a sinner or an ingrate (al-Insan 76:24), meaning: and an ingrate, and as Jarir ibn Atiyah said:

He attained the caliphate or it was a destiny for him as his Lord gave Moses according to destiny.

Meaning: He attained the caliphate, and it was a destiny for him, as Al-Nabigha said:

She said: Why don't you bring this bathroom to our bathroom or half of it?

He wants: and half of it.

Others said, or in this place it means rather, so their interpretation was: it is like stones, but even harder, as God Almighty said: And We sent him to a hundred thousand or more (al-Saffat 37:147), meaning: rather they are more.

Others said: This means that they are like stones, or even harder for you.

Abu Ja'far said: Each of these sayings that we have mentioned has a face and an explanation in the speech of the Arabs. However, the most amazing saying to me in this regard is what we said first, then the saying that we mentioned from those who explained it to mean: So it has aspects in hardness: Either it is like stones, or it is harder, on the interpretation that some of them are like stones, and some of them are harder. Because or, even if it is used in places where waw is used, so that its meaning and the meaning of waw are confused, due to the similarity of their meanings in some of those places, its origin is to come with the meaning of one of the two. So directing it to its origin, we did not find a way to that, which is more amazing to me than removing it from its origin and its known meaning.

Abu Jaafar said: As for the nominative case in his saying: or more severe, it is from two aspects:

One of them: that it is in apposition to the meaning of the letter kaf in his saying: like stones, because its meaning is raising. This is because its meaning is the meaning of like, so its interpretation is: it is like stones or harder than stones.

The other aspect: that it is raised, meaning that it is repeated, not upon it. So the interpretation of that is: it is like stones, or it is harder than stones.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His statement, And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers gush forth is that among the stones are those from which water gushes forth, from which rivers are formed. So He dispensed with mentioning the rivers instead of mentioning the water. Rather, He mentioned and said from it because of the word what.

Explosion is the action of the verb to burst forth, which means to burst forth from its source. Any liquid that flows forth from its place or location has burst forth, whether it is water, blood, pus, or something else. From this is the saying of Omar bin Luja:

When I went to Jarir, his stomach refused to let anything but burst.

Meaning: Except for an exit and a flow.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And among them are those that split open and water issues from them.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His statement: And among them are those that split, is that among the stones are those that split. And to split them means to crack them. It is: when they split, but the ta' was assimilated into the shin so it became a doubled shin.

His saying: And water comes out of it, means that it is a gushing spring and flowing rivers.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And among them are those which fall down for fear of God.

Abu Ja'far said: By that, may His praise be glorified, He means: And indeed, among the stones are those that descend, meaning that they fall from the top of the mountain to the ground and the slope out of fear and awe of God. We have already demonstrated the meaning of descending in what has happened, so there is no need to repeat it in this place.

Abu Jaafar said: These lams were inserted into ma to emphasize the report.

God, the Most High, described the stones as He described them, that some of them burst with rivers, some of them crack with water, and some of them descend from fear of God, after He made them an example for the hearts of those of the Children of Israel whose hearts He spoke of as hard, as an excuse from Him, the Most High, for them, but not for those of the Children of Israel whose hearts He spoke of as hard, since they were in the manner that God described them with, of denying His messengers and rejecting His signs, after He showed them signs and lessons, and they witnessed the wonders of evidence and arguments, along with what He, the Most High, gave them of sound minds, and bestowed upon them of sound souls that He did not give to stones and mud. Then, with that, there are some of them that burst with rivers, some of them that crack with water, and some of them that descend from fear of God. So God, the Most High, informed us that there are stones that are softer than their hearts because of the truth to which they are called, as:

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq. And the people of interpretation said something similar to what we said in the interpretation of that. Mention of those who said that:

Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God, the Most High: "Then your hearts hardened after that, so they became like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and among them are those which split open and water issues from them, and among them are those which fall down for fear of God." He said: Every stone from which water bursts forth, or splits open to release water, or falls from the top of a mountain, is from fear of God, the Most High, the Most High. The Qur'an was revealed with that.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Bishr bin Muadh told me, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: They are like stones or even harder. Then he excused the stones but did not excuse the wretched son of Adam. He said: And among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and among them are those that split open and water issues from them, and among them are those that fall down for fear of God.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, similarly.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: Then God excused the stones and said: And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are those that split asunder and water issues from them.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, that he said about it: Every stone from which water gushed forth, or cracked with water, or fell from a mountain, was out of fear of God. The Qur'an was revealed about it.

Abu Jaafar said: Then the people of interpretation differed regarding the meaning of the falling of the stones out of fear of God.

Some of them said: The descent of what descended from it is out of fear of God, and its shadows are shaded.

Others said: That mountain was leveled when his Lord appeared to him.

Some of them said: This was and will be from Him, because God Almighty gave some stones knowledge and understanding, so they understood the obedience of God and obeyed Him.

Like what was narrated about the trunk that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to lean on when he gave a sermon, and when he turned away from it, it moaned.

And as it was narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said: A stone used to greet me in the pre-Islamic era, and I recognize it now.

Others said: Rather, his saying: He descends out of fear of God is like his saying: A wall about to collapse (al-Kahf 18:77), and he has no intention. They said: Rather, what is meant by that is that from the greatness of God's command, he sees as if he is descending in humility, out of the humiliation of fear of God, as Zayd al-Khayl said:

By collecting the falcons in its chambers, you will see the most of them prostrating to the hooves.

As Suwaid bin Abi Kahil said, describing an enemy of his:

Prostrating, the nostril does not raise it, the eyes are humbled, the listener is deaf

He wants to be humiliated.

As Jarir bin Atiyah said:

When the report of the Messenger came, the city's walls and the mountains were shaken.

Others said: The meaning of his saying: It descends out of fear of God is: It causes fear for someone other than Him, by indicating His Creator, just as it was said: A trading camel, if its nobility and elegance call people to desire it, just as Jarir ibn Atiyah said:

And a one-eyed man from Nabhan, but during the day he is blind, but at night he sees

So he made the description of night and day, and he meant by that his companion Al-Nabhani whom he satirized, because in them was what he described him with.

These statements, although they are not far from the meaning of what the verse can bear in terms of interpretation, the interpretation of the people of interpretation from the scholars of the early generations of the nation is contrary to them, so we do not consider it permissible to divert the interpretation of the verse to a meaning from it.

We have previously demonstrated the meaning of fear, which is dread and dread, so we disliked repeating that in this place.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's

Surat al-Baqarah 2:74

Then your hearts hardened after that, so they are like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are some that split open so water issues from them, and indeed, among them are some that fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do.

saying: And God is not unaware of what you do.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his statement: And God is not unaware of what you do, is that God is not unaware, O group of those who deny His signs, and who deny the prophethood of His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and who attribute falsehoods to Him from among the Children of Israel and the Jewish rabbis, of what you do of your evil deeds and your vile actions, but He is keeping count of them against you, so He will reward you for them in the Hereafter, or punish you for them in this world.

The origin of neglecting something is to leave it out of forgetfulness or negligence.

So God Almighty informed them that He is not unaware of their evil actions, nor is He negligent about them, but rather He is their guardian and protector.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "Then your hearts hardened after that, so they became like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and among them are those which split open and water issues from them, and among them are those which fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do."

God the Almighty said: Then your hearts hardened after that. Hardness means rigidity, severity and dryness. It is an expression for being devoid of repentance and submission to the signs of God the Almighty. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Qatada and others said: What is meant are the hearts of all the Children of Israel. Ibn Abbas said: What is meant are the hearts of the heirs of the murdered man, because when he came back to life and was informed of his murderer and returned to his death, they denied his murder and said: He lied, after they saw this great sign. They were never more blind of heart, nor more denial of their Prophet than they were at that time, but God's judgment was carried out by killing him. Al-Tirmidhi narrated on the authority of Abdullah bin Omar that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

Do not speak too much without mentioning God, for speaking too much without mentioning God hardens the heart, and the people farthest from God are those with hard hearts. In Musnad al-Bazzar, on the authority of Anas, he said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said:

"Four things are a source of misery: a dull eye, a hard heart, long hopes, and greed for this world."

The Almighty said: So they are like stones or even harder. Or it was said that it has the meaning of and, as He said: A sinner or an ungrateful one. "An excuse or a vow." And the poet said:

He attained the caliphate or it was his destiny

Any and it was. It was said: It means rather, as God Almighty said: And We sent him to a hundred thousand or more meaning rather they are more. And the poet said:

You looked like the sun's horn in the brilliance of the morning, and its image or you are more beautiful in the eye

No, but you. It was said: Its meaning is to make the addressee vague, and from this is the saying of Abu Al-Aswad Al-Du'ali:

I love Muhammad very much, and Abbas, and Hamza, and Ali

If their love is right, I will follow it, and I am not mistaken if it is wrong.

Abu Al-Aswad did not doubt that their love was apparent guidance, but he intended to be vague. It was said to Abu Al-Aswad when he said that: Do you have doubts? He said: No, then he cited as evidence the words of God Almighty: And either we or you are upon right guidance or in manifest error. And he said: Or was he doubting who told this? It was said: Its meaning is choice, that is, they likened them to stones that strike, or to something harder than stones that strike. This is like the saying of someone: Sit with Al-Hasan or Ibn Sirin, and learn jurisprudence or hadith or grammar. It was said: Rather, it is in its category of doubt, and its meaning with you, O addressees, and in your view, is that if you saw its hardness, you would doubt: Is it like stones or harder than stones? This meaning has been said about the words of God Almighty: Up to a hundred thousand or more. A group said: God Almighty only meant that among them are those whose hearts are like stones, and among them are those whose hearts are harder than stones. So the meaning is: They are two groups.

The Almighty said: or more severe. More severe is in the nominative case in apposition to the position of the kaf in His statement, like stones, because the meaning is: they are like stones or more severe. It is permissible to say or more severe in apposition to stones.

"Harshness" is in the accusative case as a specification. Abu Haywah read harshness, and the meaning is the same.

God the Almighty said: And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are those that split asunder and water issues from them. The meaning of bursting forth has already been mentioned. The root of bursting is bursting, with the ta' assimilated into the sheen. This refers to springs that have not grown large enough to become rivers, or to stones that crack even if no water flows. Ibn Masraf read yanshaq with a noon, and he read lama yatafujar lama yatafujar with a shaddah on lama in both places. This is an incorrect reading. Malik ibn Dinar read yanfajar with a noon and a kasrah on the jim. Qatada said: He excused the stones, but did not excuse the wretched of the children of Adam. Abu Hatim said: It is permissible to say lama tafujar with a ta', but it is not permissible to say lama tafujar with a ta', because if he said tafujar, he would feminize it by feminizing the rivers, and this does not happen in tashquq. An-Nahhas said: What he denied is permissible based on the meaning, because the meaning is: Indeed, among them are stones that crack, and as for yatafujar, it is based on the word ma. The crack is one of the cracks, so it is originally a source. You say: In the hand of so-and-so and his feet are cracks, and do not say: shaqāq, rather, the crack is a disease that affects animals, and it is a crack that affects their ankles and may rise to their shoulders, on the authority of Ya'qub. The crack: the morning. And what is in his saying: When it bursts forth is in the accusative case, because it is the name of in and the lam is for emphasis. From it is on the word what, and it is permissible from it on the meaning, And from it is what is cracked and water comes out of it. Qatada read in in both places, lightened from the heavy.

God the Almighty says: And indeed, among them are those that descend for fear of God. He says that among the stones are those that are more beneficial than your hearts, because water comes out of them and they fall. Mujahid said: No stone falls from the top of a mountain, nor does a river gush forth from a rock, nor does water come out of it, except for fear of God. The Noble Qur'an revealed this. And something similar was narrated by Ibn Jurayj. Some of the theologians said about His statement: And indeed, among them are those that descend for fear of God. The hail descending from the clouds. It was said: The word descend is a metaphor, because since the stones are considered by their creation, and are humbled by looking at them, the humility of the one looking at them was attributed to them, as the Arabs said: A merchant's camel, meaning it prompts whoever sees it to buy it. At-Tabari narrated from a group that fear for the stones is borrowed, just as will was borrowed for the wall in His statement: It wants to collapse, and as Zayd al-Khayl said:

When the report of Al-Zubayr came, the city walls and the mountains were humbled.

Ibn Bahr mentioned that the pronoun in the Almighty's saying: And among them refers to the hearts, not to the stones, meaning among the hearts because of what they submit to out of fear of God.

I said: Everything that has been said is possible due to the wording, and the first is correct, because it is not impossible for some inanimate objects to be given knowledge and thus rational, like the one who...

It was narrated about the tree trunk that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, used to lean on when he gave a sermon. When he turned away from it, he went crazy. It was confirmed that he said:

A stone used to greet me in the pre-Islamic era, and I recognize it now. And "It was narrated that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Thabeer said to me: Come down, for I fear that they will kill you on my back and God will punish me." So Hira' called out to him: Come to me, O Messenger of God. And in the revelation: Indeed, We offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains (al-Baqarah 2:14). And he said: If We had sent down this Qur'an upon a mountain, you would have seen it humbled and coming apart from fear of God (al-Baqarah 2:14). Meaning, humility and submission, and more clarification of this will come in Surat Subhan, God willing.

God the Almighty says: And God is not unaware of what you do. Ghafil is in the accusative case in the dialect of the people of Hijaz, and in the nominative case in the dialect of Tamim. The ya is for emphasis. Of what you do means of your deeds, so that He does not leave anything small or great without counting it against you. So whoever does an atom's weight of good will see it, and whoever does an atom's weight of evil will see it. "Ma" does not need a pronoun unless it is made in the sense of who, in which case the pronoun is deleted due to the length of the noun, meaning of what you do. Ibn Kathir read ya'malun with the ya, and the addressee in this case is Muhammad, peace be upon him.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God Almighty says, rebuking and reprimanding the Children of Israel for what they witnessed of God Almighty's signs and His bringing the dead back to life: Then your hearts hardened after that, all of it, for they are like stones that never soften. That is why God forbade the believers from such a state, saying: "Has not the time come for those who have believed that their hearts should humble themselves at the remembrance of God and what has come down of the truth and not be like those who were given the Scripture before, and a long period passed over them and their hearts hardened, and many of them are wicked." Al-Awfi said in his interpretation on the authority of Ibn Abbas: When the murdered man was struck with part of the cow, he sat up, as if he had never been alive. Then it was said to him: Who killed you? He said: My brother's sons killed me, then he died. When God took him, his brother's sons said: By God, we did not kill him. They denied the truth after they saw him. God said: Then your hearts hardened after that, meaning the sons of my brother the Sheikh, so they are like stones or even harder. So the hearts of the Children of Israel became hard with the passage of time, far from admonition after what they saw of the signs and miracles. They are in their hardness like stones that cannot be softened, or harder than stones. For there are stones from which springs gush forth with flowing rivers, and some of them crack and water comes out of them even if they are not flowing, and some of them fall from the top of the mountain out of fear of God, and in them there is an understanding of that according to it, as He said: "The seven heavens and the earth and whoever is in them glorify Him. And there is not a thing but glorifies Him with praise, but you do not understand their glorification. Indeed, He is Forbearing and Forgiving.” Ibn Abi Nujayh said on the authority of Mujahid: He used to say: Every stone from which water gushes forth, or cracks to produce water, or falls from the top of a mountain out of fear of God, the Qur’an was revealed with that. Muhammad ibn Ishaq told me Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, “And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are those which split asunder and water issues from them, and indeed, among them are those which fall down for fear of God.” That is, indeed, among the stones are those which are softer than your hearts regarding what you are called to of the truth.

Then your hearts hardened after that, so they are like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are some that split open so water issues from them, and indeed, among them are some that fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do.

And God is not unaware of what you do. Abu Ali al-Jayyani said in his interpretation, And indeed, among them are those which fall down for fear of God. This is the falling of hail from the clouds. Al-Qadi al-Baqillani said, This is a far-fetched interpretation. Al-Razi followed him in rejecting it, and it is as he said, for this is a departure from the wording without evidence, and God knows best. Ibn Abi Hatim said, “My father told us, Hisham ibn Ammar told us, al-Hakam ibn Hisham al-Thaqafi told us, Yahya ibn Abi Talib told me, meaning Yahya ibn Ya’qub, regarding the words of God, “And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth,” he said, Excessive weeping, “And indeed, among them are those which split asunder and water issues from them,” he said, Little weeping, “And indeed, among them are those which fall down for fear of God,” he said, Weeping of the heart without tears. The eye, and some of them claimed that this is a metaphor, which is attributing humility to stones as the will was attributed to the wall in His statement: It wants to collapse. Al-Razi, Al-Qurtubi, and other imams said: There is no need for this, because God Almighty creates this attribute in it as in His statement: Indeed, We offered the Trust to the heavens and the earth and the mountains, and they declined to bear it and feared it. And He said: The seven heavens and the earth and whoever is in them glorify Him. And He said: And the star and the tree prostrate. “Have they not seen what God has created of things, seeking shade under its shade?” They said, ‘We have come in obedience.’ “If We had sent down this Qur’an upon a mountain,” And they said to their skins, ‘Why did you bear witness against us?’ They said, ‘God has made us speak.’ And in the Sahih: This is a mountain that loves us and we love it. And like the groaning of the trunk, its report is transmitted, and in Sahih Muslim: I know a stone in Mecca that used to greet me before I was sent, I know it now. And in the description of the Black Stone: It bears witness for whomever Receive it on the Day of Resurrection, and other things with the same meaning. Al-Qurtubi reported a saying that it is for choice, i.e. for example, this, this, and this, like sitting with Al-Hasan or Ibn Sirin. Al-Razi reported it in his interpretation and added another saying: It is for ambiguity with respect to the addressee, like the saying of the speaker: I ate bread or dates, and he knows which one he ate. Another said: It is in the meaning of the saying of the speaker: Eat sweet or sour, i.e. it does not go beyond one of them, i.e. and your hearts have become like stones or harder than them, they do not go beyond one of these two things, and God knows best.

Note Arabic scholars differed regarding the meaning of the Almighty’s statement: So they are like stones or even harder, after agreeing on the impossibility of it being for doubt. Some of them said: Or here means and, meaning: So they are like stones or even harder, like the Almighty’s statement: And do not obey any sinner or ungrateful among them, “as an excuse or a vow,” and as Al-Nabigha Al-Dhubyani said:

She said: Why don’t you bring this bathroom to our bathroom or half of it?

You want half of it, Ibn Jarir said, and Jarir bin Atiyah said:

He attained the caliphate or it was a destiny for him as his Lord gave Moses according to destiny.

Ibn Jarir said: It means that he attained the caliphate and it was a status for him. Others said: Or here it means rather, so its meaning is: it is like stones, or even harder. And like His saying: When a party of them feared the people as they feared God or even harder, “And We sent him to a hundred thousand or more,” So he was two bow lengths away or even nearer. Others said: The meaning of that is: It is like stones or even harder, according to you. Ibn Jarir narrated it. Others said: What is meant by that is to make the addressee vague, as Abu al-Aswad said:

I love Muhammad very much, Abbas, Hamza and the guardian

If their love is right, then I am right, and I am not wrong if it is wrong.

Ibn Jarir said: They said: There is no doubt that Abu Al-Aswad had no doubt that loving the one he named is right guidance, but he was vague about who he was addressing. He said: It was mentioned about Abu Al-Aswad that when he said these verses, it was said to him: Do you have doubts? He said: No, by God. Then he cited the words of God Almighty: And either we or you are upon right guidance or in manifest error. He said: Or was he doubting who told him this, who among them is the guide and who is the astray? Some of them said: The meaning of that is that your hearts do not go beyond one of these two examples, either they are like stones in hardness, or they are harder than them in hardness. Ibn Jarir said: The meaning of this interpretation is that some of them are like stones in hardness, and some of them are harder than stones. Ibn Jarir preferred it with the guidance of others I said: This last statement remains similar to the saying of God Almighty: Their example is like the example of one who kindled a fire with His saying: Or like a rainstorm from the sky and His saying: And those who disbelieve - their deeds are like a mirage in a lowland with His saying: Or like darkneses in a deep sea the verse, meaning that some of them are like this, and some of them are like that, and God knows best.

Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr bin Mardawayh said: Muhammad bin Ahmad bin Ibrahim told us, Muhammad bin Ayoub told us, Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Abi Al-Thalj told us, Ali bin Hafs told us, Ibrahim bin Abdullah bin Hatib told us, on the authority of Abdullah bin Dinar, on the authority of Ibn Umar: that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Do not speak too much without mentioning God, for speaking too much without mentioning God hardens the heart, and the people farthest from God are the hard hearts. Narrated by Al-Tirmidhi in the Book of Asceticism from his collection on the authority of Muhammad bin Abdullah bin Abi Al-Thalj, the companion of Imam Ahmad, narrated it, and from another source on the authority of Ibrahim bin Abdullah bin Al-Harith bin Hattab, and he said: It is strange and we do not know it except from the hadith of Ibrahim. Al-Bazzar narrated on the authority of Anas, with a chain of transmission traceable to the Prophet, "Four things are from misery: a dull eye, a hard heart, long hope, and greed for the world."

Fath al-Qadir

And cruelty: hardness and dryness, and it is an expression of its emptiness of repentance and submission to the signs of God with the presence of what requires the opposite of this cruelty from the revival of the slain, his speaking and his designation of his killer, and the reference in His saying: 74- after that to what came before from the signs that require the softness and tenderness of hearts. It was said: or in His saying: or more cruel has the meaning of the and as in His Almighty saying: sinful or ungrateful and it was said: it has the meaning of rather, and on the basis that or on its origin or in the meaning of the and, so the conjunction with His saying: like stones means these hearts are like stones or they are harder than them, so liken them to whichever of the two matters you wish, for you are correct in this likening. Al-Razi answered in his interpretation about the occurrence of aw here, even though it is for hesitation: That is, it is not appropriate for the Knower of the Unseen in eight ways. Rather, he reached the comparative with ashd even though it is correct to say wa aqsa min al-hijar and harsher than stones, because it is more obvious and indicative of extreme harshness, as he said in Al-Kashshaf. Al-A'mash read aw aqda with the accusative of the dal, as if he was conjoining it with al-hijar stones, so ashd would be in the genitive case with the fatha. And his statement: And indeed, among the stones to the end, he said in Al-Kashshaf: It is a statement of the superiority of their hearts over stones in the severity of harshness and a confirmation of his statement or harsher in harshness. End. And in it, the coming of the statement with waw is not known or familiar, and it is better to make what comes after waw a tail or a state. Explosion: opening, and its explanation has been mentioned previously. The root of yashquq is yatashuq to open, the ta' was assimilated into the shin, and Al-A'mash read yatashuq according to the original. Ibn Masraf read it as yanshaq with a noon, and shuq is one of the shuqq, and it is lengthwise or widthwise, unlike tefajr, which is the opening from one place with the expansion of the breach. What is meant is that water comes out of the stones from the places of tefajr and shuqq, and some stones descend, meaning they descend from the place they are in to a lower place from the fear of God that enters them and settles in them. It was said that the descent is a metaphor for their humility and the modesty that is in them in submission to God Almighty, so it is like His Almighty saying: If We had sent down this Qur'an upon a mountain, you would have seen it humbled and coming apart from fear of God. Ibn Jarir narrated from a group that the fear of the stones is borrowed just as the will is borrowed for the wall, and as the poet said:

When the report of Al-Zubayr came, the city walls and the mountains were humbled.

Al-Jahiz mentioned that the pronoun in his saying: And among them refers to the hearts, not to the stones, and this is incorrect, because the purpose of the context of this speech is to state that the hearts of these people have reached a level of hardness and extreme dryness that causes them to not accept the truth and not be affected by sermons, to a place that stones have not reached, which are the hardest and most solid of bodies, because they return to a type of softness, which is their bursting forth with water and their cracking by it and their acceptance of what fear of God requires of humility and submission, unlike those hearts. And in his saying: And God is not unaware of what you do, there is a threat and a severe warning that is not hidden, because if God Almighty knows what they do and is aware of it and is not unaware of it, then He would be lying in wait to punish them.

Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding his statement: And when you killed a person and disputed over it, he said: you differed over it. And God will bring out that which you concealed, he said: what you concealed. Ibn Abi Hatim and Al-Bayhaqi narrated in Shu'ab Al-Iman on the authority of Al-Musayyab bin Rafi' who said: No man did a good deed in seven houses except that God revealed it, and no man did a bad deed in seven houses except that God revealed it. And the confirmation of that is in the Book of God: And God will bring out that which you concealed. Ahmad and Al-Hakim narrated and authenticated it on the authority of Abu Sa'd who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: If a man did a deed in a solid rock that had no door or window, his deed would be revealed to the people, whatever it was. Al-Bayhaqi narrated on the authority of Uthman who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Whoever has a good or bad secret, God will reveal a cloak over it by which he is known. Al-Bayhaqi also narrated it in a similar manner on the authority of Uthman who said: The suspended version is more authentic. Abu Al-Shaykh and Al-Bayhaqi narrated a long hadith on the authority of Anas with this meaning, meaning: God will clothe every worker with his work until people talk about it and increase it, even if his work is inside a house up to seventy houses with an iron door on each house. Its chain of transmission is weak. Ibn Adi also narrated from the hadith of Anas with a chain of transmission on

Then your hearts hardened after that, so they are like stones or even harder. And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and indeed, among them are some that split open so water issues from them, and indeed, among them are some that fall down for fear of God. And God is not unaware of what you do.

the authority of the Prophet: God will return to every person the garment of his work. A group of the Companions and Followers have words that convey this meaning. Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: So We said, 'Strike him with part of it,' he said: He struck him with the bone next to the cartilage. Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatadah that they struck him with her thigh. Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Ikrimah. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated something similar on the authority of Mujahid. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi that he said: He struck him with the piece of flesh between the shoulders. Abd bin Hamid and Abu Al-Shaykh in Al-Azmah narrated on the authority of Wahb bin Munabbih a long story about the cow and its owner. There is no need to elaborate on it, and he has already completed it in Al-Durr Al-Manthur. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatadah regarding his statement: Then your hearts hardened after that, he said: After God showed them the resurrection of the dead and after He showed them the matter of the slain man, so they are like stones or even harder. Then God excused the stones but did not excuse the wretched of the children of Adam, so He said: And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth, to the end of the verse. Ibn Ishaq, Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: That is, among the stones are those that are softer than your hearts regarding the truth to which you are called. Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: Indeed, a stone falls to the ground, and if a group of people were to gather around it, they would not be able to do so, and indeed it falls down for fear of God.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

74. The Almighty's saying: Then your hearts hardened became dry and withered. Dryness of the heart means the departure of mercy and gentleness from it. It was also said: it became rough, and it was also said: it turned black. After that after the evidence appeared. Al-Kalbi said: They said after that: We did not kill him, so they were never blind of heart nor more severe in denying their Prophet than they were at that time. It that is, in harshness and severity is like stones or harder. It was said: Or in the meaning of rather. It was said: In the meaning of and, like the Almighty's saying: A hundred thousand or more 147-Saffat, meaning: Rather, they increase or increase. He did not liken it to iron, although it is harder than stones, because iron is susceptible to flexibility, as it is flexible with fire, and it was flexible for David, peace be upon him, and stones never become flexible. Then He preferred stones to the hard heart, saying: And indeed, among the stones are those from which rivers burst forth. It was said: He meant by that all stones, and it was said: He meant by that the stone that Moses used to strike for the tribes. And indeed, among them are those that split open and water issues from them. He meant by that springs other than rivers. And indeed, among them are those that descend descend from the top of the mountain to its bottom out of fear of God. And your hearts do not soften nor are they humble, O group of Jews. If it is said: An inanimate object that does not understand, then how can it fear? It was said: God makes him understand and inspires him, so he fears Him through His inspiration.

The doctrine of the Sunnis and the community is that God Almighty created knowledge in inanimate objects and all animals other than the mind, and no one else knows about it. They have prayer, glorification, and fear, as He, the Most High, said: There is not a thing but glorifies Him with praise 44-Al-Isra', and He said: And the birds with wings outspread, each has learned its prayer and glorification 41-An-Nur, and He said: Have you not seen that to God prostrates whoever is in the heavens and whoever is on the earth and the sun and the moon 18-Al-Hajj, the verse. So the believer must believe in Him and entrust his knowledge to God Almighty, glory be to Him, and it is narrated that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, was on Thabeer and the infidels were seeking him, so the mountain said: Get down from me, for I fear that you will be seized and God will punish me for that, so Mount Hira' said to it: To me, O Messenger of God)).

Imam Abu Ali al-Husayn ibn Muhammad al-Qadi told us, on the authority of Sayyid Abu al-Hasan Muhammad ibn al-Husayn al-Alawi, on the authority of Ahmad ibn Muhammad ibn Abd al-Wahhab al-Naysaburi, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ismail al-Sayegh, on the authority of Yahya ibn Abi Bakr, on the authority of Ibrahim ibn Tahman, on the authority of Samak ibn Harb, on the authority of Jabir ibn Samurah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I know a stone in Mecca that used to greet me before I was sent as a prophet, and I know it now. [This is an authentic hadith narrated by Muslim on the authority of Abu Bakr ibn Abi Shaybah, on the authority of Yahya ibn Abi Bakr, and it is authentically reported on the authority of Anas that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, climbed Uhud and said: This is a mountain that loves us and we love it. It was narrated on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, prayed the dawn prayer with us, then he turned his face to the people and said: While a man was leading a cow, it became tired, so he mounted it and struck it, and it said: We were not created for this, but rather we were created to plow the land. The people said: Glory be to God, a cow that speaks!? The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: I believe in it, Abu Bakr and I. Umar and what are they then? He said: "While a man was with his sheep, a wolf attacked one of them. Its owner caught up with it and took it away. The wolf said: Who will be with it on the Day of Resurrection? That is, the Day of Resurrection, the day when there will be no shepherd for it except me. The people said: Glory be to God, a wolf speaks? He said: I believe in it, Abu Bakr and Umar, and what are they then?" It was authentically reported on the authority of Abu Hurairah who said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, was on Hira', and Abu Bakr, Umar, Uthman, Ali, Talhah and Az-Zubayr, and the rock moved. The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: 'Be still.' That is, be still. There is none upon you except a prophet, a friend or a martyr." Authenticated by Muslim.

I am Ahmad bin Abdullah Al-Salihi, I am A [or Saeed Yahya bin Ahmad bin Ali Al-Sanea, I am Abu Al-Hasan Ali bin Ishaq bin Hisham Al-Razi, I am Muhammad bin Ayoub bin Daris Al-Bajali Al-Razi, I am Muhammad bin Al-Sabah, on the authority of Al-Walid bin Abi Thawr, on the authority of Al-Suddi, on the authority of Ibad bin Abi Yazid], on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talib, may God be pleased with him, who said: "We were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in Mecca, and we went out in its outskirts, outside Mecca, between the mountains and trees, and he did not pass a tree or a mountain without saying, 'Peace be upon you, O Messenger of God.'"

I am Abu al-Hasan Abd al-Wahhab ibn Muhammad al-Khatib. I am Abd al-Aziz ibn Ahmad al-Khalal. I am Abu al-Abbas al-Asamm. I am al-Rabi', I am al-Shafi'i. I am Abd al-Majid ibn Abd al-Aziz. On the authority of Ibn Jurayj, Abu al-Zubayr informed me that he heard Jabir ibn Abd God, may God be pleased with him, say: "Whenever the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, would deliver a sermon, he would lean against the trunk of a palm tree from among the pillars of the mosque. When the pulpit was made for him and he stood on it, that pillar shook and moaned like the moaning of a camel, so that the people of the mosque heard it, until the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came down and embraced it, and it calmed down."

Mujahid said: No stone descends from a high place to a low place except out of fear of God. What we have said is supported by the words of God Almighty: "If We had sent down this Qur'an upon a mountain, you would have seen it humbled and coming apart from fear of God. And these examples We present to the people that perhaps they will give thought."

21-Al-Hashr.

The Almighty's saying, And God is not unaware Basaha of what you do is a threat and a warning. It was said: He will not leave the punishment for what you do, but rather He will reward you for it. Ibn Kathir read ya'ma' with a ya and the others with a ta.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

74- Then your hearts hardened Hardness is an expression for coarseness with hardness, as in stone. The hardness of the heart is like the refusal to consider, and then the exclusion of hardness after that means reviving the dead, or all of the verses that were mentioned, for they are among those that require the heart to be soft. It is like stones in its hardness or harder than them, and the meaning is that it is like stones in hardness or more than them, or that it is like them, or like what is harder than them in hardness, such as iron, so the added word was deleted and the added word was put in its place, and this is supported by the reading of Al-Hasan in the accusative case in apposition to stones, and he did not say harder because of the exaggeration in harder, and the indication of the intensity of the two hardnesses and the inclusion of the preferred addition and or for choice, or for hesitation meaning: whoever knows its condition likens it to stones or to what is harder than it.

And indeed, among the stones are some from which rivers burst forth, and among them are some that split open and water issues from them, and among them are some that fall down for fear of God. This is an explanation of the preference, and the meaning is that stones are affected and reacted to. Among them are some that split open and water springs forth from them, and rivers burst forth from them, and among them are some that fall down from the top of the mountain in submission to what God the Most High wills for them. The hearts of these people are not affected or reacted to His command. Bursting open means opening up widely and abundantly, and fear is a metaphor for submission. In was read as the lightened version of the heavy one, and it requires the lam that distinguishes it from in the negative, and yahbūt is with the dammah.

And God is not unaware of what you do. This is a warning for that. Ibn Kathir, Nafi', Ya'qub, Khalaf, and Abu Bakr read it with a dammah on the letter ya and with what follows it, and the rest read it with a ta'.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:75

Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had understood it while they were knowing?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:75

Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had understood it while they were knowing?

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

Do you then covet O believers that they will believe in you meaning the Jews while there was a party a group of them their rabbis who would hear the word of God in the Torah then distort it change it after they had understood it understood it while they knew that they were fabricators. The hamza is for denial, meaning do not feed them, for they have a history of disbelief.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying: Do you then hope, O companions of Muhammad, is: Do you hope, O group of believers in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and those who believe in what he brought to you from God, that the Jews of the Children of Israel will believe in you?

What he means by his saying: that they believe in you is that they believe in what your Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, Muhammad brought to you from your Lord, as:

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, on the authority of Ibn Abi Ja'far, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', regarding his statement: Do you hope that they will believe in you? meaning the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, that they will believe in you, he said: Do you hope that the Jews will believe in you?

Bishr told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: Do you hope that they will believe you? the verse, he said: They are the Jews.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And there was a group of them.

Abu Ja'far said: As for the group, it is a plural, like the sect, and it has no singular form. It is a verbal noun from the root tafarraqa, and the group was named after it, just as the group was named hizb, from tahazzib, and the like. From this is the saying of A'sha of Banu Tha'labah:

I did well, so when I feared that they would split into two groups, some of them ascending and some of them descending

He means by his saying: from them, from the Children of Israel. God made those who were at the time of Moses and after them from the Children of Israel from the Jews about whom God said to the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Do you then hope that they will believe in you? because they were their fathers and ancestors, so He made them from them, since they were their clans, their descendants, and their ancestors, just as a man today remembers a man, and he has followed the method and way of the one who remembers, and was from his people and his clan, so he says: So-and-so was from us, meaning that he was from the people of his way and doctrine, or from his people and his clan. So too is his saying: And there was a group of them.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They hear the word of God, then they distort it after they have understood it, while they know.

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed about those whom God meant by His saying: And a party of them used to hear the word of God and then distort it after they had understood it, while they knew. Some of them said what:

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had understood it while they knew? So those who distort it and those who conceal it are the scholars among them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, something similar.

Musa told me, he said, Amr bin Hammad told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: Do you hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the word of God and then distort it after they had understood it? He said: It is the Torah, they distorted it.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said about His statement, They hear the Word of God, then they distort it, he said: The Torah that He sent down to them, they distort it, they make what is lawful in it unlawful, and what is unlawful in it lawful, and what is true in it falsehood, and what is falsehood in it true. If the one who is truthful comes to them with a bribe, they bring out for him the Book of God, and if the one who is false comes to them with a bribe, they bring out that Book for him, so he is truthful in it. And if someone comes to them asking them for something in which there is no truth, no bribe, and nothing, they command him to do what is true. So He said to them, Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason? (al-Baqarah 2:44).

Others said about this:

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar ibn al-Hasan, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far told us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', regarding his statement: And a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had understood it, while they knew. So they used to hear from that as the people of prophecy hear, then they would distort it after they had understood it, while they knew.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, regarding his statement: And a party of them used to hear the word of God the verse, he said: His statement: They used to hear the word of God does not mean they used to hear the Torah. All of them had heard it, but they were the ones who asked Moses to see their Lord, and the thunderbolt struck them therein.

Ibn Humayd narrated that Salamah narrated on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq that he said: It has reached me that some of the people of knowledge said to Moses: O Moses, we have been prevented from seeing God, the Almighty, so let us hear His words when He speaks to you. Moses asked his Lord for that, and He said: Yes, so command them to purify themselves, and to purify their clothes, and to fast. So they did. Then He took them out until He came to the Mount. When the clouds covered them, Moses, peace be upon him, commanded them to prostrate, so they prostrated, and his Lord spoke to them and they heard His words, commanding them and forbidding them, until they understood what they heard. Then He turned with them to the Children of Israel. When they came to them, a group of them changed what He had commanded them to do, and they said when Moses said to the Children of Israel: God has commanded you to do such and such, that group whom God mentioned said: He only said such and such contrary to what God, the Almighty, had said to them. They are the ones whom God meant for His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Abu Ja'far said: The first of the two interpretations mentioned in the verse, and the most similar to what is indicated by the apparent meaning of the recitation, is what Al-Rabi' bin Anas said, and what Ibn Ishaq narrated from some of the people of knowledge: that God Almighty mentioned it only meant by that those who heard His speech from the Children of Israel, Moses hearing it from Him, then He distorted and changed it, after he heard it, knew it, and understood it. This is because God, the Most High, only informed that the distortion was from a group of them who were listening to the words of God Almighty, out of God's awe of what they were doing of falsehood, after the proof and evidence had been confirmed against them, and as a sign from Him, the Most High, to His believing servants, cutting off their hopes of the remnants of their descendants believing in what Muhammad had brought them of truth, light, and guidance. So He said to them: How can you hope that these Jews will believe you, when you only tell them what you tell them of report from God Almighty about the unseen that they did not witness or witness, and some of them used to hear from God His words, His commands, and His prohibitions, then they would change it, distort it, and deny it? Those who are among you, the remnants of their offspring, are more likely to deny the truth that you have brought them, even though they do not hear it from God, but rather they hear it from you. They are also more likely to distort what is in their books about the description and attributes of your Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to change it, even though they know it. They deny it and belie their predecessors, who received the speech of God from God, may His praise be glorified, then distorted it after they had understood it and learned it, deliberately distorting it.

If the interpretation of the verse was as stated by those who claimed that he meant by his saying: they hear the word of God that they hear the Torah, then the mention of his saying: they hear the word of God would not have had an understood meaning. Because that was heard by those who distorted it and those who did not distort it. So the specificity of those who distorted it, that they heard the word of God, if the interpretation was as stated by those we mentioned, and not others who heard that as they heard it, has no meaning.

If someone thinks that it is only appropriate to say this because of His saying distort it, then he has overlooked the correct aspect of that. That is because if that were the case, then it would have been said: Do you hope that they will believe you when a group of them used to distort the words of God after they had understood them, and they knew? But He, may He be glorified, informed about a special group of the Jews, who were given from their direct hearing of the words of God what no one was given except the prophets and messengers, then they changed and distorted what they heard of that. That is why He described them with what He described them with, because of the specialness with which He singled out this group whom He mentioned in His Book, may He be glorified.

What he means by his saying, Then they distort it, is then they change its meaning and interpretation and alter it. Its origin is from the deviation of something from its direction, which is its inclination from it to something else. So his saying, They distort it, means they incline it from its direction and meaning, which is its meaning, to something else. So God, the Most High, informed us that they did what they did of that, knowing the interpretation of what they distorted, and that it was contrary to what they distorted it to. So He said, They distort it after they understood it, meaning: after they understood its interpretation, and they know, meaning: they know that in their distortion of what they distorted of that they are falsifiers and liars.

This is a statement from God, the Most High, about their slander and their enmity towards Him and His Messenger Moses, peace be upon him, and that what remains of them is their enmity towards God and His Messenger Muhammad, peace be upon him, out of malice and envy, similar to what their predecessors were like in the time of Moses, peace be upon him.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the word of God and then distort it after they had understood it while they knew?

There are four issues:

First: The Almighty's saying, Do you then hope that they will believe in you? This is a question that contains a sense of denial, as if He made them despair of the belief of this group of Jews, meaning that if they disbelieved, then they had a precedent in that. The address is to the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. This is because the Ansar were keen on the conversion of the Jews to Islam due to the alliance and neighbourhood that existed between them. It was said that the address is to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, specifically, on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Meaning, do not be sad about their denial of you, and inform him that they are among the evil people who have passed away. And that is in the accusative case, meaning that they will believe, it is in the accusative case because of that, and that is why the nun was deleted from it.

It is said: He coveted it with greed and greed - lightened - it is greed, on the weight of fa'l. And someone else made him covet it. And it is said in astonishment: The man coveted - with a damma on the meem - meaning he became very greedy. Greed is the provisions of the soldiers. It is said: The prince ordered them to have their greed, meaning their provisions. And a woman who is greedy: she covets but is not able.

The second: The Almighty's saying: And there was a party of them. The party is a collective noun with no singular form, and its plural in the smallest number is afarqahu, and in the largest number it is afarqa'. They hear is in the accusative case as the predicate of kana. It is possible that the predicate is from them, and they hear is an adjective for a party, and there is some distance in that. The speech of God is the reading of the group. Al-A'mash read God spoke as the plural of word. Sibawayh said: And know that some people from Rabi'ah say from them with a kasra on the ha' following the secret of the meem, and the dwelling was not a strong barrier for them. The speech of God is the object of they hear. What is meant are the seventy whom Moses, peace be upon him, chose, so they heard the speech of God but did not obey His command, and they distorted the statement in their informing their people. This is the saying of al-Rabi' and Ibn Ishaq, and there is weakness in this saying. Whoever says that the seventy heard what Moses heard has made a mistake, and has taken away the virtue of Moses and his being singled out for speaking. Al-Suddi and others said: They could not bear to hear it, and their minds were confused and they wanted Moses to hear it and repeat it to them. When they finished and left, a group of them changed what they had heard of the words of God on the tongue of their prophet Moses, peace be upon him, as God Almighty said: And if any of the polytheists seeks your protection, then grant him protection so that he may hear the words of God.

If it is said: Al-Kalbi narrated on the authority of Abu Salih on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The people of Moses asked Moses to ask his Lord to let them hear his words, so they heard a voice like the voice of a hyena: I am God, there is none but I, the Living, the Eternal. I brought you out of Egypt with a high hand and a strong arm.

I said: This is a false hadith that is not authentic. It was narrated by Ibn Marwan on the authority of Al-Kalbi, and both of them are weak and cannot be used as evidence. Rather, speech is something that was given to Moses specifically from among all the children of Adam. If he also spoke to his people so that they could hear his speech, then what is Moses' superiority over them? He said, and His statement is the truth: I have chosen you over mankind with My messages and My speech. This is clear.

Third: People differed about how Moses knew the speech of God, as he had not heard His speech before that. Some of them said: He heard speech that was not letters and sounds, and in which there was no interruption or breath, so then he knew that it was not the speech of evil, but rather the speech of the Lord of the Worlds. Others said: When he heard speech from no direction, and the speech of humans is heard from one of the six directions, he knew that it was not the speech of humans. It was said: His entire body became ears until he heard that speech with them, so he knew that it was the speech of God. It was said about it: The miracle indicated that what he heard was the speech of God, and that is because it was said to him: Throw down your staff, so he threw it and it became a snake, so that was a sign to him of the truth of the situation, and that the one who was saying to him: I am your Lord is God Almighty. It was said: He had concealed something in his soul that only the Knower of the Unseen can comprehend, so God Almighty informed him in His address with that pronoun, so he knew that the one who was addressing him was God Almighty. In Surat Al-Qasas, the meaning of the Almighty's saying will be explained: He was called from the right side of the valley in the blessed spot from the tree, God willing.

Fourth: The Almighty's statement: Then they distort it. Mujahid and Al-Suddi said: They are the Jewish scholars who distort the Torah, making what is forbidden permissible and what is permissible forbidden, following their whims. After they have understood it, meaning they have come to know it and learned it. This is a rebuke to them, meaning that these Jews had done evil and stubborn deeds in the past, and these people are following that tradition, so how can you hope for their faith?!

This statement also indicates that the one who knows the truth but is stubborn about it is far from guidance, because he knew the promise and the threat, but that did not stop him from his stubbornness.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: Do you then hope O believers that they will believe in you meaning that they will submit to you in obedience, this misguided group of Jews whose fathers witnessed the clear signs that they witnessed, then their hearts hardened after that: And indeed a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it meaning they interpreted it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they contradicted it with insight while they knew that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. This situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then they would distort it meaning they would interpret it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they would contradict it with insight while they knew that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. And this situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and they would not believe in it God" and not his saying: They all hear the Torah, they have all heard it, but they are the ones who asked Moses to see their Lord, and the thunderbolt struck them there. Muhammad bin Ishaq said, according to what some scholars told me: They said to Moses: O Moses, we have been prevented from seeing our Lord, the Most High, so let us hear His words when He speaks to you. Moses asked his Lord, the Most High, for that, and He said: Yes, command them to purify themselves and purify their clothes and fast. Then he went out with them until they came to the mountain. When the clouds covered them, Moses commanded them to prostrate, so they prostrated, and his Lord spoke to them, so they heard His words, commanding them and forbidding them until they understood what they heard. Then he turned with them to the Children of Israel. When they came to them, a group of them distorted what He had commanded them to do, and they said: When Moses said to the Children of Israel: God has commanded you to do such and such, that group whom God mentioned said: He only said such and such in opposition to what God Almighty said to them. They are the ones whom God meant for His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: And a group of them used to hear the words of God and then distort them. He said: It is the Torah, they distorted it. What Al-Suddi mentioned is more general than what he mentioned. Ibn Abbas and Ibn Ishaq, even though Ibn Jarir chose it for the apparent context, because it does not necessarily follow from hearing the speech of God that it is from him as Moses, son of Imran, heard it, and God the Most High said: And if any of the polytheists seeks your protection, grant him protection so that he may hear the speech of God meaning conveyed to him, and for this reason Qatada said in his statement: Then they distort it after they have understood it while they know he said: They are the Jews who used to hear the speech of God then they distort it after they had understood and comprehended it, and Mujahid said: Those who distort it and those who conceal it are the scholars among them, and Abu Al-Aaliyah said: They deliberately took what God revealed in their book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and distorted it from its places, and Al-Suddi said: And they know meaning that they sinned, and Ibn Wahb said: Ibn Zayd said in his statement: They hear the speech of God then they distort it he said: The Torah that God revealed to them they distort it, they make what is permissible in it forbidden and what is forbidden in it permissible, and what is truth in it falsehood and what is falsehood in it truth, when the truth comes to them With a bribe, they brought out for him the Book of God. And if the one who is false comes to them with a bribe, they bring out for him that Book, and he is right in it. And if someone comes to them asking them for something in which there is no truth, no bribe, and nothing, they command him to do what is right. So God said to them: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

God the Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another (al-Baqarah 2:17). Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told us on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, and on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning that your companion Muhammad is the Messenger of God, but he is specifically for you. And when they are alone with one another, they say, Do not tell the Arabs about this, for you used to seek victory over them through it, and he was one of them. So God revealed: "And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you tell them what God has disclosed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord?" (al-Baqarah 2:17). You know that he has taken a covenant from you to follow him. And he is telling them that he is the Prophet whom we were waiting for and find in our Book. Deny him and do not acknowledge him. God the Almighty says: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means the hypocrites from among the Jews. When they met the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would say: We believe. As-Suddi said: These are some of the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites. This is what Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, Qatadah, and more than one of the predecessors and successors said, until Abd ar-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, as narrated by Ibn Wahb on his authority: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: No one should enter the city of Madinah except a believer. Their leaders from among the people of disbelief and hypocrisy said: Go and say: We believe, and disbelieve when you return to us. So they would come to Madinah early in the morning and return to them after the afternoon prayer. And he recited the words of God the Most High: "And a party of the People of the Scripture said, 'Believe in that which was revealed to those who believed at the beginning of the day and disbelieve at its end that perhaps they will return.' " They used to say when they entered the city: We are Muslims, so that they would know the report of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his command. But when they returned, they returned to disbelief. But when God informed His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, He cut that off from them, so they would not enter. The believers used to think that they were believers, so they would say: Did God not tell you such and such? They would say: Yes. So when they returned to their people, meaning the leaders, they would say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? The verse. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? meaning what was revealed to you in your book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abd Al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? He said: They used to say: There will be a prophet. So some of them were alone with each other, and they said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? Another statement on what is meant. In the opening, Ibn Jurayj said: Al-Qasim bin Abi Bazza told me on the authority of Mujahid regarding the words of God Almighty: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you? He said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood on the day of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of apes and pigs, and O worshippers of false gods. They said: Who informed Muhammad of this matter? This statement came from none but you. Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you in the ruling of God for the conquest so that they would have an argument against you. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid: This was when he sent Ali to them and they harmed Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? These were people from the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites, so they would tell the believing Arabs about what they were tortured with, so some of them said to one another: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they would say: We are more beloved to God than you, and more honorable to God than you. Ata' Al-Khurasani said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you meaning what He has decreed for you and against you. Al-Hasan

Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had understood it while they were knowing?

Al-Basri said: When these Jews met those who believed, they would say: We believe. And when they were alone with one another, some of them would say: Do not tell the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to you from what is in your book, lest they argue with you about it before your Lord and defeat you. And the words of God the Almighty: {Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?} Abu Al-Aaliyah said: It means what they concealed of their disbelief in Muhammad and their denial of him, although they found it written down with them. And Qatadah said the same. Al-Hasan said: {God knows what they conceal.} He said: What they concealed was that when they turned away from the companions of Muhammad and were alone with one another, they forbade any of them from telling the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to them from what is in their book, fearing that the companions of Muhammad would argue with them about what is in their book with their Lord. {And what they declare.} That is when they said to the companions of Muhammad: And we believe. This is what Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' and Qatadah said.

Fath al-Qadir

75- His saying: Do you then covet? This question has a meaning of denial, as if he has made them despair of the faith of this group of Jews. The address is to the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, or to him and them. They will believe for you means for your sake, or to include the meaning of believe in the meaning of respond: that is, do you hope that they will respond to you? The group is a collective noun that has no singular form. The word of God means the Torah. It was said that they heard God's address to Moses when He spoke to him. Based on this, the group is the seventy whom Moses chose. Al-A'mash read the word of God. What is meant by distortion is that they deliberately took what they heard from the Torah and made what was permissible forbidden or something similar that agreed with their whims, such as distorting the description of the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and dropping the punishments for their nobles, or they heard the words of God to Moses and added to them and subtracted from them. This is a statement about their insistence on disbelief and a denial of those who hope for their faith while their condition is this: that is, they have predecessors who distorted the words of God and changed His laws, and they are following their example and taking their path. The meaning of His statement, after they had understood it is after they had understood it with their minds, while they knew that what they did was a distortion that contradicted what God had commanded them to do, which was to convey His laws as they were. So they fell into sin knowingly, and that is more severe in their punishment and more evident in their misguidance.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

75. The Almighty's saying, Do you then hope? Do you hope? He means: Muhammad and his companions that they will believe in you the Jews will believe you in what you tell them and a group of them used to hear the word of God meaning the Torah then they would distort it changing the rulings in it after they had understood it they knew it as they changed the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the verse of stoning while they knew that they were liars. This is the saying of Mujahid, Qatadah, Ikrimah, As-Suddi and a group. Ibn Abbas and Muqatil said: It was revealed about the seventy whom Moses chose for the appointment with his Lord, and that is because when they returned - after hearing the word of God - to their people, the people returned to their saying, and as for the truthful ones among them, they performed as they heard, and a group of them said: We heard God say at the end of His speech, if you are able to do so, then do so, and if you wish, then do not do so, so this is their distortion while they know that it is the truth.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

75- Do you then covet the address is to his Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the believers that they will believe in you that they will believe you, or believe for the sake of your call. He means the Jews. And there was a group of them a group of their ancestors who heard the word of God meaning the Torah. Then they distorted it such as the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and the verse of stoning. Or its interpretation, so they interpreted it as they wished. And it was said that these are from the seventy chosen ones who heard the word of God Almighty when He spoke to Moses, peace be upon him, at the mountain, then they said we heard God Almighty say at the end of it: If you are able to do these things then do so, and if you wish then do not do so. After they have understood it meaning they understood it with their minds and there was no longer any doubt in it. And they know that they are slanderers and falsifiers. The meaning of the verse is that the rabbis and leaders of these people were in this state, so what do you think of their base and ignorant ones? And if they disbelieved and distorted, then they had a precedent in that.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:76

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you relate to them what God has revealed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?"

Surat al-Baqarah 2:76

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you relate to them what God has revealed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?"

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And when they meet that is, the hypocrites of the Jews (those who believe, they say, We believe that Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, is a prophet and he is the one given glad tidings in our Book. (And when they are alone) they return to one another they say) that is, their leaders who were not hypocrites to those who were hypocrites Do you speak to them that is, the believers of what God has revealed to you that is, what He made known to you in the Torah of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord in the Hereafter and establish against you the proof for abandoning following him despite your knowledge of his truthfulness Do you not understand? that they will argue with you if you speak to them, so be aware.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

The Almighty said: And when they meet the verse Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid who said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood on the day of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of the apes and O brothers of the pigs and O worshippers of the tyrant. They said: Who informed Muhammad of this? This one came from none but you. You tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may have an argument against you. So the verse was revealed. And it was narrated on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: When they met those who believed, they said: We believe that your companion is the Messenger of God, but he is specifically for you. And when some of them were alone with one another, they said: Does he tell the Arabs this? You used to seek victory through him against them. So he was one of them. So God revealed: And when they meet the verse. And it was narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi who said: It was revealed about some of the Jews who believed then became hypocrites and they used to come to the believers from the Arabs with what they had told them. So some of them said to one another: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they may say: We are more beloved to God than you and more honorable to God than you.

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: As for His statement: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' it is report from God, the Most High, about those who the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, despaired of their belief from the Jews of the Children of Israel, a group of whom used to hear the words of God and then distort them after they had understood them, and they were the ones who, when they met those who believed in God and His Messenger Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, We believe. What this means is that when they met those who believed in God and in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought from God, they said, We believe, meaning we believed in Muhammad and in what you believed in, and we acknowledged that. God the Almighty told us about them that they had the same morals as the hypocrites and followed their path, as Muhammad ibn Sa'd told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of his grandfather, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, his saying: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another, they say, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?' That is because a group of Jews used to say, when they met Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, We believe, and when they were alone with one another, they said, Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' He meant the hypocrites among the Jews. When they met the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they said, We believe.

Another interpretation of this was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, which is what Ibn Hamid told us. He said: Salamah ibn al-Fadl told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning: in your companion, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, but he is specifically for you.

Musa told us, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' the verse. He said: These are people from the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: And when some of them are alone with others, they say, 'Do you tell them what God has disclosed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?'

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his statement: And when some of them are alone with one another is: When some of these Jews, whose characteristics God described, are alone with some of them, and they are in a place where there is no one else but them, they will say meaning: Some of them will say to one another: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you?

Then the people of interpretation differed in their interpretation of His statement: With what God has revealed to you. Some of them said: Abu Kurayb told us, he said: Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: "And when some of them are alone with others, they say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?" meaning: What God has commanded you to do. The others say: We only mock them and laugh.

Others said: Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning, in your companion the Messenger of God, but he is only for you. And when some of them are alone with each other, they say, Do not tell the Arabs about this, for you used to seek victory over them through him, and he was one of them. So God revealed: "And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with each other, they say, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord?'" That is, do you acknowledge that he is a prophet, and you know that a covenant was taken from him to follow you, and he tells them that he is the prophet we were waiting for and we find him in our book? Deny him and do not acknowledge him for them. God says, Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told me, he said: Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you? meaning what God revealed to you in your book about the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Bishr ibn Muadh told us, he said, Yazid ibn Zari' told us, on the authority of Saeed, on the authority of Qatada: They said, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?' That is, what God has bestowed upon you in your book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, for if you do that, they will use it as evidence against you. Do you not understand?

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you, so that they may use it as evidence against you.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told me, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, he said, Qatada said: You tell them about what God has revealed to you, meaning: about what God revealed to you about the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his description.

Others said about that: Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: With what God has revealed to you, that they may argue with you about it before your Lord. He said: The statement of the Jews of Banu Qurayzah, when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, insulted them by saying that they were brothers of apes and pigs, they said: Who told you? This was when he sent them knowledge and they harmed Muhammad, so he said: O brothers of apes and pigs.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly, except that he said: This, when Ali ibn Abi Talib, may God be pleased with him, sent to them and they harmed the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, he said: Go away, you brothers of the apes and pigs.

Al-Qasim narrated to us, he said, Al-Husayn narrated to me, he said, Hajjaj narrated to me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, he said, Al-Qasim bin Abi Bazza informed me, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding his statement: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you? He said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood on the day of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of the apes, O brothers of the pigs, O worshippers of false gods. They said: Who informed Muhammad of this? This came from none other than you! Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you is what God has decreed, for the conquest, so that they would have an argument against you. Ibn Jurayj said, on the authority of Mujahid: This was when he sent them knowledge and they harmed Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace.

Others said: Musa told me, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi: They said, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you' of the punishment 'so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord?' These were people from among the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites, so they were telling the believing Arabs about what they had been punished with. So some of them said to one another: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they may say, 'We are more beloved to God than you, and more honorable to God than you?'"

Others said: Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: And when some of them are alone with others, they say, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord?' He said: When they were asked about something, they would say, Do you not know such and such in the Torah? They said, Yes! He said: And they were Jews, and their leaders to whom they referred would say to them, Why do you inform them of what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? Do you not understand? He said: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said, No one shall enter the city of Medina except a believer. Their leaders from among the disbelievers and hypocrites said, Go and say, 'We believe,' and disbelieve when you return. He said: So they would come to Medina early in the morning, and return to them after the afternoon prayer. And he recited the statement of God, the Most High, And a party of the People of the Scripture said, 'Believe in that which has been revealed to those who believe at the beginning of the day and disbelieve at its end that perhaps they will return.' 3:72. And they would say when they entered Medina, We are Muslims. So that they would know the report of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his command, and if they returned, they would return to disbelief. So when God informed His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, about them, He cut that off from them, so they would not enter. And the believers who were with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, thought that they were believers, so they would say to them: Did not God tell you such and such? They would say: Yes! So when they returned to their people, meaning the leaders, they would say: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you?

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you relate to them what God has revealed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?"

The root of the word fath in Arabic is: victory, judgment, and ruling. It is said: O God, open between me and so-and-so, meaning, judge between me and him. And from this is the saying of the poet:

Shall I not send a messenger to Banu Asam that I am independent of your conquest?

Abu Ja'far said: The judge is called al-Fattah. And from this is the saying of God Almighty: Our Lord, judge between us and our people in truth, for You are the best of judges. (al-A'raf 7:89) meaning: Judge between us and them.

If the meaning of the conquest is as we have described, it becomes clear that the meaning of His statement, They said, 'Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord?' is: Do you tell them what God has ruled upon you and decreed concerning you? Among His rulings, may He be glorified, over them is what He took from them as a covenant of belief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought in the Torah. Among His rulings concerning them is that He made apes and pigs from among them, and other than that of His rulings and decrees concerning them. All of that was for the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and for those who believed in him, an argument against the disbelievers among the Jews who acknowledged the ruling of the Torah and other than that of His rulings and decrees.

If that is the case, then what I think is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse is the statement of the one who said: The meaning of that is: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you of sending Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, to His creation? Because God, may His praise be exalted, only related in the beginning of this verse the report of their saying to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to his companions: We believe in what Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, brought? So what is more appropriate for its end is that it be similar to the report of what was started at the beginning.

If that is the case, then it is necessary that their blame was among themselves, regarding what they had shown to the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and his companions, by saying to them: We believe in Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) and what he brought. And they said that because they found that in their books, and they informed the companions of the Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) about that. So their blame was among themselves when they were alone because of what they were telling them about what was an argument for the Muslims against them before their Lord. That is because they were informing them about the existence of the description of Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) in their books, and they disbelieved in it. And the victory that God granted to the Muslims over the Jews, and His judgment upon them for them in their book, was that they should believe in Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) when he was sent, but when he was sent they disbelieved in him, despite their knowledge of his prophethood.

Abu Ja'far said: His statement, Do you not reason? is report from God, the Most High, about the Jews who blamed their brothers for what they told the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, about what God had revealed to them. They said to them: "Do you not understand, O people, and reason? Your informing the companions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, of what is in your books that he is a prophet sent, is an argument for them against you before your Lord, with which they can argue against you?" That is: Do not do that, and do not say to them what you said, and do not tell them what you told them about that. So He, the Most High, said: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: "And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' But when they are alone with one another, they say, 'Do you tell them what God has disclosed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?'"

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: Do you then hope O believers that they will believe in you meaning that they will submit to you in obedience, this misguided group of Jews whose fathers witnessed the clear signs that they witnessed, then their hearts hardened after that: And indeed a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it meaning they interpreted it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they contradicted it with insight while they knew that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. This situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then they would distort it meaning they would interpret it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they would contradict it with insight while they knew that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. And this situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages.

Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and they would not believe in it God" and not his saying: They all hear the Torah, they have all heard it, but they are the ones who asked Moses to see their Lord, and the thunderbolt struck them there. Muhammad bin Ishaq said, according to what some scholars told me: They said to Moses: O Moses, we have been prevented from seeing our Lord, the Most High, so let us hear His words when He speaks to you. Moses asked his Lord, the Most High, for that, and He said: Yes, command them to purify themselves and purify their clothes and fast. Then he went out with them until they came to the mountain. When the clouds covered them, Moses commanded them to prostrate, so they prostrated, and his Lord spoke to them, so they heard His words, commanding them and forbidding them until they understood what they heard. Then he turned with them to the Children of Israel. When they came to them, a group of them distorted what He had commanded them to do, and they said: When Moses said to the Children of Israel: God has commanded you to do such and such, that group whom God mentioned said: He only said such and such in opposition to what God Almighty said to them. They are the ones whom God meant for His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: And a group of them used to hear the words of God and then distort them. He said: It is the Torah, they distorted it. What Al-Suddi mentioned is more general than what he mentioned. Ibn Abbas and Ibn Ishaq, even though Ibn Jarir chose it for the apparent context, because it does not necessarily follow from hearing the speech of God that it is from him as Moses, son of Imran, heard it, and God the Most High said: And if any of the polytheists seeks your protection, grant him protection so that he may hear the speech of God meaning conveyed to him, and for this reason Qatada said in his statement: Then they distort it after they have understood it while they know he said: They are the Jews who used to hear the speech of God then they distort it after they had understood and comprehended it, and Mujahid said: Those who distort it and those who conceal it are the scholars among them, and Abu Al-Aaliyah said: They deliberately took what God revealed in their book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and distorted it from its places, and Al-Suddi said: And they know meaning that they sinned, and Ibn Wahb said: Ibn Zayd said in his statement: They hear the speech of God then they distort it he said: The Torah that God revealed to them they distort it, they make what is permissible in it forbidden and what is forbidden in it permissible, and what is truth in it falsehood and what is falsehood in it truth, when the truth comes to them With a bribe, they brought out for him the Book of God. And if the one who is false comes to them with a bribe, they bring out for him that Book, and he is right in it. And if someone comes to them asking them for something in which there is no truth, no bribe, and nothing, they command him to do what is right. So God said to them: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

God the Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another (al-Baqarah 2:17). Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told us on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, and on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning that your companion Muhammad is the Messenger of God, but he is specifically for you. And when they are alone with one another, they say, Do not tell the Arabs about this, for you used to seek victory over them through it, and he was one of them. So God revealed: "And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you tell them what God has disclosed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord?" (al-Baqarah 2:17). You know that he has taken a covenant from you to follow him. And he is telling them that he is the Prophet whom we were waiting for and find in our Book. Deny him and do not acknowledge him. God the Almighty says: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means the hypocrites from among the Jews. When they met the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would say: We believe. As-Suddi said: These are some of the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites. This is what Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, Qatadah, and more than one of the predecessors and successors said, until Abd ar-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, as narrated by Ibn Wahb on his authority: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: No one should enter the city of Madinah except a believer. Their leaders from among the people of disbelief and hypocrisy said: Go and say: We believe, and disbelieve when you return to us. So they would come to Madinah early in the morning and return to them after the afternoon prayer. And he recited the words of God the Most High: "And a party of the People of the Scripture said, 'Believe in that which was revealed to those who believed at the beginning of the day and disbelieve at its end that perhaps they will return.'"

And when they meet those who believe, they say, "We believe"; but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you relate to them what God has revealed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord? Then will you not reason?"

They used to say when they entered the city: We are Muslims, so that they would know the report of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his command. But when they returned, they returned to disbelief. But when God informed His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, He cut that off from them, so they would not enter. The believers used to think that they were believers, so they would say: Did God not tell you such and such? They would say: Yes. So when they returned to their people, meaning the leaders, they would say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? The verse.

Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? meaning what was revealed to you in your book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abd Al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? He said: They used to say: There will be a prophet. So some of them were alone with each other, and they said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? Another statement on what is meant. In the opening, Ibn Jurayj said: Al-Qasim bin Abi Bazza told me on the authority of Mujahid regarding the words of God Almighty: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you? He said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood on the day of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of apes and pigs, and O worshippers of false gods. They said: Who informed Muhammad of this matter? This statement came from none but you. Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you in the ruling of God for the conquest so that they would have an argument against you. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid: This was when he sent Ali to them and they harmed Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? These were people from the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites, so they would tell the believing Arabs about what they were tortured with, so some of them said to one another: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they would say: We are more beloved to God than you, and more honorable to God than you. Ata' Al-Khurasani said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you meaning what He has decreed for you and against you. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: When these Jews met those who believed, they would say: We believe. And when they were alone with one another, some of them would say: Do not tell the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to you from what is in your book, lest they argue with you about it before your Lord and defeat you. And the words of God the Almighty: {Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?} Abu Al-Aaliyah said: It means what they concealed of their disbelief in Muhammad and their denial of him, although they found it written down with them. And Qatadah said the same. Al-Hasan said: {God knows what they conceal.} He said: What they concealed was that when they turned away from the companions of Muhammad and were alone with one another, they forbade any of them from telling the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to them from what is in their book, fearing that the companions of Muhammad would argue with them about what is in their book with their Lord. {And what they declare.} That is when they said to the companions of Muhammad: And we believe. This is what Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' and Qatadah said.

Fath al-Qadir

76- And when they meet those who believe meaning that the hypocrites, when they meet those who believe, "they say, 'We believe'. But when they are alone with one another" meaning when those who are not hypocrites are alone with the hypocrites, they say to them, reproaching them, Do you tell them of what God has revealed to you? meaning what He has decreed upon you of punishment? This is because some of the Jews converted to Islam and then became hypocrites, so they would tell the believing Arabs of what their fathers were tortured with. It was said that what is meant is what God revealed to them in the Torah of the description of Muhammad, and the meaning of alone has already been mentioned. Al-Fath among the Arabs means: judgment and ruling. Al-Fattah is the judge in the language of Yemen. Al-Fath means victory. From this is the saying of God the Almighty: They seek victory against those who disbelieve and His saying: If you seek victory, victory has already come to you. And from the first: "Then He will judge between us with the truth. He is the Opener, the Knowing." That is, the judges. Al-Fath means the difference between two things. Al-Muhajibah means presenting an argument, that is, do not tell them what God has judged against you of punishment, lest that be an argument for them against you and they say: We are more honorable to God than you and more deserving of good than Him. Argument means straight speech. I argued with so-and-so and I argued with him, that is, I defeated him with an argument. Do you not understand? What harm will there be to you from this talk that you are doing to them?

Tafsir al-Baghawi

76. And when they meet those who believe Ibn Abbas, Al-Hasan and Qatada said: meaning the hypocrites of the Jews who believed with their tongues when they meet the sincere believers "they say: We believe" as you believe and when they are alone they return to one another - Ka'b bin Al-Ashraf, Ka'b bin Asad, Wahb bin Yahudah and other leaders of the Jews - to their situation on that "they say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you" what God has told you in your book: that Muhammad is the truth and his word is true. And Al-Fattah is the judge.

Al-Kisa'i said: "With what God has made clear to you [of knowledge of the description and attributes of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace]. Al-Waqidi said: "With what God has revealed to you." Similar to it is: We opened for them blessings from the heaven 44-Al-An'am, meaning We revealed. Abu Ubaidah said: With what God has bestowed upon you and given you, so that they may argue with you so that they may dispute with you, meaning the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, argue with your saying upon you, saying that you have acknowledged that he is a true prophet in your book, then you do not follow him!!" That is because they said to the people of Medina when he consulted them about following Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Believe in him, for he is the truth. Then some of them said to one another: Are you telling them what God has revealed to you so that they may have an argument against you before your Lord in this world and the Hereafter? It was said that they informed the believers of the punishment with which God had punished them for their crimes, so some of them said to one another: Are you telling them what God has revealed to you of punishment so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord, so that they may see the honor for themselves over you before God? Mujahid said: It is the saying of the Jews of Banu Qurayzah. Some of them said to one another] when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: O brothers of apes and pigs, so they said: Who informed Muhammad of this? This came from none other than you. Do you not understand?

and His ruling, and it was said when mentioning your Lord, or in the presence of the Messenger of your Lord. It was said: With your Lord on the Day of Resurrection, and there is a consideration in this, since concealment does not prevent it. Do you not understand? is either from the completion of the words of the blamers, and its meaning is: Do you not understand that they argue with you about it and argue with you, or it is a speech from God Almighty to the believers connected to His saying: Do you then hope? The meaning is: Do you not understand their condition and that you have no hope in their faith?

Tafsir al-Baidawi

76- And when they meet those who believe, meaning their hypocrites, they say, 'We believe,' that you are on the truth, and that your Messenger is the one given glad tidings in the Torah. And when they are alone with one another, they say, meaning those who are not hypocrites among them, blaming those who are hypocrites, Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you? of what was explained to you in the Torah of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, or those who were hypocrites to their descendants, showing their stubbornness in Judaism, and preventing them from revealing what they found in their book, so they are hypocrites to both groups. So the question on the first is a rebuke, and on the second is a denial and prohibition, that they may argue with you about it before your Lord, so that they may argue with you about what your Lord has revealed in His book. They made their argument with the Book of God and His ruling an argument before Him, just as it is said before God, and what is meant by it is that it came in His Book

Surat al-Baqarah 2:77

Do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:77

Do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

God Almighty said: Do they not know the question is for confirmation and the waw that comes before it is for conjunction that God knows what they conceal and what they declare and among them what they hide and what they reveal of that and other things, so they refrain from that

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? Do these blaming Jews not know that their brothers from their religion, for when they meet those who believe, they say: We believe, and for informing the believers of what is in their books about the description of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his mission, saying to them: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? that God knows what they conceal, so they hide it from the believers in their private moments of disbelief, and their blaming each other for revealing what they revealed to the Messenger of God and to the believers in him of the acknowledgment of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and for saying to them: We believe, and forbidding each other from informing the believers of what God has revealed to the believers and decreed for them in their books, about the truth of the prophethood of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, his description and his mission, and what they declare, so they reveal it to Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to his believing companions when they meet them, from Their saying to them: We believe in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and in what he brought, is hypocrisy and deception of God, His Messenger, and the believers, as Bishr told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: Do they not know that God knows what they conceal, of their disbelief and denial of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, when they are alone with one another, and what they declare, when they meet the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and say: We believe, in order to please them with that.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? Meaning: what they concealed of their disbelief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their denial of him while they found it written down with them, and what they declare. Meaning: what they declared when they said to the believers: We believe.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

The Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe.' This is about the hypocrites. The root of laqa is laqiwu, and it has been mentioned before. And when they are alone with one another the verse is about the Jews, because some of them converted to Islam and then became hypocrites, so they used to tell the believing Arabs about what their fathers were punished with, so the Jews said to them: Do you tell them about what God has revealed to you? meaning the punishment that God has decreed upon you, so that you may say, We are more honorable to God than you, according to Ibn Abbas and al-Suddi. It was also said:

"When Ali was fighting Qurayzah on the day of Khaybar, he heard the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, being cursed. He turned to him and said: 'O Messenger of God, do not go to them.' He approached him and said: 'I think you heard my cursing from them. If they saw me, they would stop.' He got up to go to them, but when they saw him, they stopped. He said to them: 'You have broken the covenant, O brothers of apes and pigs. May God disgrace you and bring down His vengeance upon you.' They said: 'You were not ignorant, O Muhammad, so do not act ignorantly towards us. Who told you this? This report came from us only!'" It was narrated on the authority of al-Ma'na on the authority of Mujahid.

God the Almighty said: And when he is alone. The root of khala is khalu, the waw was changed to alif because of its movement and the openness of what preceded it. The meaning of khala was presented at the beginning of the surah. The meaning of fatha is ruling. Fath among the Arabs means judgment and ruling, and from this is the saying of God the Almighty: Our Lord, judge between us and our people in truth, and You are the best of judges. That is, the judge. Al-Fattah is the judge in the language of Yemen. It is said: Between me and you is the Fattah. This was said because he supports the oppressed against the oppressor. Fath means victory, and from this is His saying: They seek victory against those who disbelieve, and His saying: If you seek victory, victory has already come to you. It can mean the difference between two things.

God the Almighty said: to argue with you is in the accusative case with the lam of ki, or if you wish, with the omission of an, and the sign of the accusative is the deletion of the nun. Yunus said: Some Arabs open the lam of ki. Al-Akhfash said: Because the opening is the original. Khalaf al-Ahmar said: It is the language of Bani al-Anbar. The meaning of to argue with you is to taunt you and say, We are more honorable to God than you. It was also said: The meaning is to argue with you with your words, saying, You disbelieved in him after you knew his truthfulness. It was also said that a Jewish man would meet his Muslim friend and say to him: Hold fast to the religion of Muhammad, for he is truly a prophet. "With your Lord" was said in the afterlife, what he said: "Then on the Day of Resurrection, you will dispute before your Lord." It was also said: When mentioning your Lord. It was also said: "With" means in, i.e. to argue with you about your Lord, so that they will be more deserving of it than you because the argument has become clear to you. This was narrated from al-Hasan. Argument is straight speech in general, and from that is the path of the road. I argued with someone and defeated him, meaning I defeated him with an argument. From this comes the hadith:

So Adam made the pilgrimage to Moses. Do you not understand? It was said: It is from the statement of the followers. It was said: It is an address from God Almighty to the believers, meaning: Do you not understand that the Children of Israel do not believe while they are in these conditions? Then He rebuked them with a recitation that is recited, saying: Or do they not know? The verse. It is a question that means rebuke and reprimand. The majority read they know with a ya, and Ibn Muhayyin with a ta, addressing the believers. What they concealed was their disbelief, and what they declared their denial of.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says: "Do you then hope O believers that they will believe in you" meaning that they will submit to you in obedience, this misguided group of Jews whose fathers witnessed the clear signs that they witnessed, then their hearts hardened after that: "And indeed a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then distort it meaning they interpreted it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they contradicted it with insight while they knew" that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. This situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: "So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages." Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: "Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and then they would distort it meaning they would interpret it in a way other than its interpretation after they had understood it meaning they understood it clearly, and despite this they would contradict it with insight while they knew" that they were mistaken in what they went to in distorting and interpreting it. And this situation is similar to the Almighty's saying: "So because they broke their covenant, We cursed them and made their hearts hard; they distort words from their [proper] usages." Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, that he said: Then God the Almighty said to His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and to those believers with him, making them despair of them: "Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God and they would not believe in it" God" and not his saying: They all hear the Torah, they have all heard it, but they are the ones who asked Moses to see their Lord, and the thunderbolt struck them there. Muhammad bin Ishaq said, according to what some scholars told me: They said to Moses: O Moses, we have been prevented from seeing our Lord, the Most High, so let us hear His words when He speaks to you. Moses asked his Lord, the Most High, for that, and He said: Yes, command them to purify themselves and purify their clothes and fast. Then he went out with them until they came to the mountain. When the clouds covered them, Moses commanded them to prostrate, so they prostrated, and his Lord spoke to them, so they heard His words, commanding them and forbidding them until they understood what they heard. Then he turned with them to the Children of Israel. When they came to them, a group of them distorted what He had commanded them to do, and they said: When Moses said to the Children of Israel: God has commanded you to do such and such, that group whom God mentioned said: He only said such and such in opposition to what God Almighty said to them. They are the ones whom God meant for His Messenger, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: And a group of them used to hear the words of God and then distort them. He said: It is the Torah, they distorted it. What Al-Suddi mentioned is more general than what he mentioned. Ibn Abbas and Ibn Ishaq, even though Ibn Jarir chose it for the apparent context, because it does not necessarily follow from hearing the speech of God that it is from him as Moses, son of Imran, heard it, and God the Most High said: And if any of the polytheists seeks your protection, grant him protection so that he may hear the speech of God meaning conveyed to him, and for this reason Qatada said in his statement: Then they distort it after they have understood it while they know he said: They are the Jews who used to hear the speech of God then they distort it after they had understood and comprehended it, and Mujahid said: Those who distort it and those who conceal it are the scholars among them, and Abu Al-Aaliyah said: They deliberately took what God revealed in their book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and distorted it from its places, and Al-Suddi said: And they know meaning that they sinned, and Ibn Wahb said: Ibn Zayd said in his statement: They hear the speech of God then they distort it he said: The Torah that God revealed to them they distort it, they make what is permissible in it forbidden and what is forbidden in it permissible, and what is truth in it falsehood and what is falsehood in it truth, when the truth comes to them With a bribe, they brought out for him the Book of God. And if the one who is false comes to them with a bribe, they bring out for him that Book, and he is right in it. And if someone comes to them asking them for something in which there is no truth, no bribe, and nothing, they command him to do what is right. So God said to them: Do you enjoin righteousness upon the people and forget yourselves while you recite the Scripture? Then will you not reason?

Do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?

God the Almighty said: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another (al-Baqarah 2:17). Muhammad ibn Ishaq said: Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told us on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr, and on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning that your companion Muhammad is the Messenger of God, but he is specifically for you. And when they are alone with one another, they say, Do not tell the Arabs about this, for you used to seek victory over them through it, and he was one of them. So God revealed: "And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' but when they are alone with one another, they say, "Do you tell them what God has disclosed to you so that they may dispute with you about it before your Lord?" (al-Baqarah 2:17). You know that he has taken a covenant from you to follow him. And he is telling them that he is the Prophet whom we were waiting for and find in our Book. Deny him and do not acknowledge him. God the Almighty says: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: He means the hypocrites from among the Jews. When they met the companions of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, they would say: We believe. As-Suddi said: These are some of the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites. This is what Ar-Rabi' ibn Anas, Qatadah, and more than one of the predecessors and successors said, until Abd ar-Rahman ibn Zayd ibn Aslam said, as narrated by Ibn Wahb on his authority: The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: No one should enter the city of Madinah except a believer. Their leaders from among the people of disbelief and hypocrisy said: Go and say: We believe, and disbelieve when you return to us. So they would come to Madinah early in the morning and return to them after the afternoon prayer. And he recited the words of God the Most High: "And a party of the People of the Scripture said, 'Believe in that which was revealed to those who believed at the beginning of the day and disbelieve at its end that perhaps they will return.' " They used to say when they entered the city: We are Muslims, so that they would know the report of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his command. But when they returned, they returned to disbelief. But when God informed His Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, He cut that off from them, so they would not enter. The believers used to think that they were believers, so they would say: Did God not tell you such and such? They would say: Yes. So when they returned to their people, meaning the leaders, they would say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? The verse. Abu Al-Aaliyah said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? meaning what was revealed to you in your book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Abd Al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? He said: They used to say: There will be a prophet. So some of them were alone with each other, and they said: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?

Another statement on what is meant. In the opening, Ibn Jurayj said: Al-Qasim bin Abi Bazza told me on the authority of Mujahid regarding the words of God Almighty: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you? He said: The Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood on the day of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of apes and pigs, and O worshippers of false gods. They said: Who informed Muhammad of this matter? This statement came from none but you. Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you in the ruling of God for the conquest so that they would have an argument against you. Ibn Jurayj said on the authority of Mujahid: This was when he sent Ali to them and they harmed Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. Al-Suddi said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they may argue with you about it before your Lord? These were people from the Jews who believed and then became hypocrites, so they would tell the believing Arabs about what they were tortured with, so some of them said to one another: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you of the punishment so that they would say: We are more beloved to God than you, and more honorable to God than you. Ata' Al-Khurasani said: Do you speak to them of what God has revealed to you meaning what He has decreed for you and against you. Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: When these Jews met those who believed, they would say: We believe. And when they were alone with one another, some of them would say: Do not tell the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to you from what is in your book, lest they argue with you about it before your Lord and defeat you. And the words of God the Almighty: {Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare?} Abu Al-Aaliyah said: It means what they concealed of their disbelief in Muhammad and their denial of him, although they found it written down with them. And Qatadah said the same. Al-Hasan said: {God knows what they conceal.} He said: What they concealed was that when they turned away from the companions of Muhammad and were alone with one another, they forbade any of them from telling the companions of Muhammad what God has revealed to them from what is in their book, fearing that the companions of Muhammad would argue with them about what is in their book with their Lord. {And what they declare.} That is when they said to the companions of Muhammad: And we believe. This is what Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' and Qatadah said.

Fath al-Qadir

Then God Almighty rebuked them 77- Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? of all types of secrets and types of declaration, including their concealment of disbelief and their declaration of faith.

Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: Then God said to His Prophet and the believers with him, making them despair of them: Do you then hope that they will believe in you while a party of them used to hear the Word of God?

His statement they heard the Torah does not mean that all of them had heard it, but they were those who asked Moses to see their Lord and the thunderbolt struck them during it. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding His statement: Do you then hope that they will believe in you? He said: They are the Jews who used to hear the Word of God and then distort it after they had heard it and understood it. Abd bin Hamid and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Mujahid regarding His statement: Do you then hope that they will believe in you? He said: Those who distort it and those who write it are the scholars among them, and those who threw the Book of God behind their backs are all Jews. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi regarding His statement: they heard the Word of God He said: They are the Torah, they distorted it. Ibn Ishaq and Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas regarding his statement: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' meaning in your companion, the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, but he is specifically for you. But when they are alone with one another, they say, Do not tell the Arabs about this, for you used to seek victory over them through him, and he was one of them. So that they may argue with you about it before your Lord, meaning, you acknowledge that he is a prophet, and you know that he has taken a covenant from you to follow him, and he is telling them that he is the prophet they were waiting for, and we find in our Book that you should deny him and do not acknowledge him. Ibn Jarir narrated on his authority that this verse is about the hypocrites among the Jews, and his statement: by what God has opened for you means by what He has honored you with. Ibn Jarir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Al-Suddi, who said: This verse was revealed about some Jews who believed and then became hypocrites, and they used to tell the believing Arabs about the punishment with which they were punished, so some of them said to one another: Do you tell them about the punishment that God has opened for you so that you may say, We are more beloved to God than you and more honored in the sight of God than you. Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ibn Zayd that the reason for the revelation of the verse was that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: No one shall enter the city of Medina except a believer. The Jews would pretend to believe, then enter and return to their people with report, and the believers would say to them: Did God not say such and such in the Torah? They would say: Yes. When they returned to their people, they would say: Do you tell them what God has revealed to you? The verse. Abd bin Hamid, Ibn Jarir, Ibn al-Mundhir and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Mujahid that the reason for the revelation of the verse was that the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, stood up to the people of Qurayzah under their fortresses and said: O brothers of apes and pigs, and O worshippers of false gods. They said: "Who informed Muhammad of this matter? This matter came from none but you. "Do you tell them what God has revealed to you?" That is, what God has ruled so that they may have an argument against you. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ikrimah that the reason for the revelation of the verse was: "A Jewish woman committed an immoral act. so they came to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, seeking his judgment, hoping for a concession. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, called their scholar, Ibn Suriya, and said to him: Judge. He said: So they carried him on a donkey and made him face the tail of the donkey. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Did you judge by the judgment of God? He said: No, but our women were beautiful, and our men were quick with them, so we changed the judgment. And about this the verse was revealed: 'And when some of them are alone with others'." And Abd bin Hamid narrated on the authority of Qatada regarding his statement: And when they meet those who believe, they say, 'We believe,' he said: They are the Jews, and when they met those who believed, they said, We believe, so they treated them in that way so that they would be pleased with them. And when they were alone with one another, they forbade one another from speaking about what God revealed to them and made clear to them in His Book about the matter of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his description and prophethood, and they said: If you do that, they will use that as an argument against you before your Lord. Do you not understand? Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? He said: What they declare of their affairs and words when they meet those who believe, and what they conceal when they are alone with one another of their disbelief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their denial of him, while they find it written down with them. And Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Abu Al-Aaliyah regarding his statement: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal and what they declare? He means their disbelief in Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and their denial, and what they declare when they said to the believers, We believe. A group of the Salaf said something similar to this.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

77. God Almighty said: Or do they not know that God knows what they conceal they hide and what they declare they reveal, meaning the Jews.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

77- "Or do they not know" meaning these hypocrites, or the blamers, or both, or them and the distorters. "That God knows what they conceal and what they declare" and among them is their concealing their disbelief and declaring their faith, concealing what God has revealed to them and revealing something else, and distorting words from their places and meanings.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:78

And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, and they do nothing but assume.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:78

And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, and they do nothing but assume.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And among them meaning the Jews are ignorant common people who do not know the Book the Torah except but wishes lies that they received from their leaders and adopted them and what they in denying the prophethood of the Prophet and other things that they invent except that they assume an assumption and they have no knowledge

Tafsir al-Suyuti

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, meant by His saying: And among them are the unlettered ones, is that among these are the Jews whose stories God related in these verses, and the companions of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, despaired of their belief, so He said to them: Do you hope that they will believe in you, while a group of them used to hear the words of God, then they would distort them after they had understood them, and when they met you they would say: We believe, as:

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And among them are the illiterate, meaning: among the Jews.

And he narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Jaafar narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Al-Rabi', similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: And among them are the illiterate, he said: People from the Jews.

Abu Jaafar said: He means by illiterates those who neither write nor read.

Including the saying of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: "We are an illiterate nation. We neither write nor calculate."

It is said of him: an illiterate man among the illiterate, as: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Suwaid bin Nasr told me, he said, Ibn Al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Mansur, on the authority of Ibrahim: And among them are illiterate people who do not know the Book, he said: Among them are those who do not know how to write.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn

Zayd said regarding his statement: And among them are unlettered people, he said: Unlettered people who do not read the Book from among the Jews.

It was narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas that there is a statement contrary to this statement, which is: Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And among them are illiterates, he said: The illiterates are a people who did not believe in a messenger sent by God, nor in a book revealed by God, so they wrote a book with their own hands, then they said to a group of ignorant, base al-Nas 114: This is from God. And he said: It has been reported that they write with their own hands, then he called them illiterates, because of their denial of the books of God and His messengers.

This interpretation is contrary to what is known from the widespread speech of the Arabs. That is because the illiterate among the Arabs is the one who does not write.

Abu Ja'far said: I think that the illiterate person was called my mother? This is attributed to him because he does not write to his mother, because writing was for men and not for women. So the man who does not write or handwrite is attributed to his mother in his ignorance of writing, not to his father, as we mentioned from the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, when he said: Indeed, we are an unlettered nation; we do not write nor do we calculate. And as he said: It is He who has sent among the unlettered a Messenger from themselves, reciting to them His verses and purifying them and teaching them the Book and wisdom. (Al-Jumu'ah: 2). So if the meaning of the unlettered in the speech of the Arabs is what we have described, then what is more appropriate for the interpretation of the verse is what Al-Nakha'i said, that the meaning of his saying: And among them are unlettered is: And among them are those who do not know how to write.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking.

Abu Ja'far said: What he means by his saying: They do not know the Book, is that they do not know what is in the Book that God revealed, nor do they know what God has deposited in it of His limits, rulings, and obligations, like the state of animals, like the one who: Al-Hasan bin Yahya told me, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his saying: And among them are unlettered ones who do not know the Book except wishful thinking, they are only like animals, they do not know anything.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, Yazid told us, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: They do not know the Book, meaning: They do not know the Book and do not know what is in it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said,

Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: They do not know the Book, they do not know what is in it.

Ibn Humayd told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They do not know the Book, he said: They do not know what is in it. Yunus told us, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said: They do not know the Book, they do not know anything, they do not read the Torah. It is not to be memorized, it is read like this. So if one of them does not write, he will not be able to read.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: They do not know the Book, he said: They do not know the Book that God revealed.

Abu Jaafar said: What he meant by the book is the Torah, and that is why the definite article was included in it, because he meant by it a specific well-known book.

Its meaning: And among them is a group who do not write, and do not know what is in the book that you have known, which is with them and they claim it and claim to acknowledge it of the rulings of God and His obligations, and what is in it of His limits that He has made clear in it. Or the people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of His statement, except wishful thinking, so some of them said what: Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, on the authority of Bishr bin Ammarah, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: except wishful thinking, he says: except a statement that they say with their mouths as a lie.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking: except lies.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Others said: Bishr ibn Muadh told us, Yazid ibn Zari' told us, Sa'id told us, on the authority of Qatada: Except for wishes, meaning: They wish from God what they do not have.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada: Except for wishful thinking, meaning: they wish falsehood from God and what is not theirs.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Saleh told us, on the authority of Muawiyah bin Saleh, on the authority of Ali bin Abi Talha, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking, meaning: except for hadiths.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Husayn told us, Hajjaj told me, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid: And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, he said: People from among the Jews who did not know anything of the Scripture, and they used to speak based on conjecture other than what was in the Book of God, saying: It is from the Book. Wishful thinking that they wished for.

Al-Muthanna told us, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: Except for wishes, they wish from God what they do not have.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said regarding His statement: except wishful thinking, he said: They wished and said: We are from the People of the Book, but they are not from them.

Abu Ja'far said: The most correct and most correct of what we have narrated in the interpretation of His statement, except wishful thinking, is what Ibn 'Abbas said, as narrated by Ad-Dahhak, and the statement of Mujahid: The illiterate people whom God described in this verse do not understand anything of the Book that God revealed to Moses, but they fabricate lies and tell falsehoods, falsely and deceitfully.

Wishing in this context means fabricating, making up, and fabricating a lie. It is said: I wished for such-and-such, if you fabricated it and made it up. From this is the report narrated on the authority of Uthman ibn Affan, may God be pleased with him: I did not sing nor did I wish, meaning by his saying: I did not wish, I did not fabricate falsehood, nor did I invent lies and slander.

What indicates the correctness of what we have said about this and that it is more deserving of the interpretation of His statement: except wishful thinking than other statements is the statement of God, the Most High: They only conjecture. So God, the Most High, informed us about them that they wished for what they wished of lies, out of conjecture and not certainty. If that meant that they recited it, they would not have been conjecturing, and likewise if it meant that they desired it. Because the one who recites, if he ponders it, will know it. And the one who recites a book that he has read, even if he has not pondered it by not pondering it, does not deserve to be said: He is conjecturing what he recites, unless he is doubtful about what he recites itself, not knowing whether it is true or false. And the people who used to recite the Torah during the time of our Prophet Muhammad, peace and blessings of God be upon him, from the Jews, as far as we have been informed, did not doubt that the Torah was from God. Likewise, the one who wishes, who is in the meaning of the one who desires, it is not permissible to say: He is conjecturing in his wish. Because wishing is from the wisher, if he wishes for what he has already found, then it is not permissible to say: He is doubtful, about what he knows. Because knowledge and doubt are two meanings, each of which negates the other, and it is not permissible for them to come together in one place, and the wisher, in his state of wishing, his wish is present, so it is not permissible to say: He thinks his wish is present.

It was said: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking, and wishful thinking is not a type of

And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, and they do nothing but assume.

the Book, as our Lord, may He be glorified and exalted, said: They have no knowledge of it except the following of assumption (An-Nisa': 157), and assumption is separate from knowledge. And as He said: And no one has with Him any favor for which he will be rewarded * Except seeking the countenance of his Lord, the Most High (al-Layl 92:19-20), and as the poet said:

There is no reproach between me and Qais other than stabbing the kidneys and striking the necks

As the genius of Banu Dhubyan said:

I took an oath that was not dualistic, and I had no knowledge except good opinion of the owner

There are similar examples of what we have mentioned, and the book would be too long to list them all.

The word illa excludes what comes after it from the meaning of what came before it and from its description, even if each of them is not of the form of the other or of its type. Some Arabists call this a disconnected exception, because the speech that comes after illa is disconnected from the meaning of what came before it. This is how it is in every place where it is good to replace illa but lakun, so that the meaning of the second is known to be disconnected from the meaning of the first. Don't you see that if you say: And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, then you want to replace illa but delete illa, you will find the speech to be correct in meaning, correct and in it is illa? That is if you say: And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking. Meaning: But they wish. Likewise His statement: They have no knowledge of it except the following of assumption. (An-Nisa': 157), but the following of assumption means: But they follow assumption. And so is all this type of speech as we have described.

It has been mentioned that some of the reciters read: except for wishes in a lightened form. Those who lightened it pointed to something like their plural of al-Miftah as Mafatih and al-Qarqur as Qaraqir. And when the plural ya was deleted, the original ya was lightened, I mean from al-Amani, just as they pluralized al-Athfiyah as Athafi in a lightened form, as Zuhair bin Abi Salma said:

My hearths are burning in a cauldron of a wedding, and my vision is like the trunk of a basin that has not been broken.

As for the one who made Amani heavy, he stressed its yaa, and he directed that to something like their plural of al-miftah is mafatih, and al-qarqur is qarqir, and al-zunbur is zanabir, so the yaa of fa'aalil and its lam came together, and they are both ya an, so one of them was assimilated into the other, so they became one stressed yaa.

As for the reading that I do not permit any other reading for a reader in this regard, it is the emphasis on the Ya of Al-Amani, due to the consensus of the readers that it is the reading that the predecessors used to read, and this is widespread among them, and its authenticity and the anomaly of the reader in making it light are not denied, as the evidence is unanimous in that. And sufficient evidence of the error of the reader of this in making it light is their consensus on his error.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: They only conjecture.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, the Most High, means by His saying: And they only assume, and they are not, as He, the Most High, said: Their messengers said to them, 'We are only human beings like you' (Ibrahim 14:11), meaning by that: We are only human beings like you.

The meaning of his saying: except they think, is that they doubt and do not know its truth and correctness.

And the suspicion in this place is doubt.

The meaning of the verse: And among them are those who do not write or inscribe, and do not know the Book of God, nor do they know what is in it, except by guessing and falsely attributing falsehood to God, thinking that they are right in their guessing and false attribution.

God the Most High described them as being in their conjecture, thinking that they were right, but they were wrong, because they had heard from their leaders and rabbis things that they thought were from the Book of God, but they were not from the Book of God. So God the Most High described them as abandoning belief in what they were certain was from God, which Muhammad (peace and blessings of God be upon him) brought, and following what they were doubtful about, and in reality they were suspicious of, what their leaders, leaders and rabbis had told them, out of stubbornness towards God and His Messenger, and disobeying the command of God, and being deceived by God's respite for them. And similar to what we said in the interpretation of His statement: And they only conjecture, the interpreters from the Salaf said about it: Muhammad ibn Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, he said, Isa told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid: And they only conjecture, that is, they lie.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Qasim told us, he said, Hajjaj told us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Ibn Ishaq, he said, Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me, on the authority of Ikrimah, or on the authority of Saeed ibn Jubayr, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking, and they do nothing but conjecture, meaning they do not know and do not understand what is in it, and they deny your prophethood based on conjecture.

Bishr told us, he said, Yazid told us, he said, Saeed told us, on the authority of Qatada: They only assume, he said: They assume assumptions that are not true.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: They assume false assumptions.

It was narrated on the authority of Ammar, who said: Ibn Abi Ja'far narrated to us, on the authority of his father, on the authority of al-Rabi', similarly.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

God Almighty says: And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking, and they do nothing but conjecture.

There are four issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And among them are the unlettered ones, meaning among the Jews. It was said: Among the Jews and the hypocrites are the unlettered ones, meaning those who neither write nor read, and the singular of them is illiterate, attributed to the illiterate nation that is, based on the birth of their mothers, they did not learn to write or read, and from this is his saying, peace be upon him:

We are an illiterate nation; we neither write nor calculate. The hadith. They were called illiterate because they did not believe in the Mother of the Book, on the authority of Ibn Abbas. Abu Ubaidah said: They were called illiterate because the Book was revealed to them, as if they were attributed to the Mother of the Book, so it was as if he said: And among them are the People of the Book who do not know the Book. Ikrimah and Ad-Dahhak: They are the Arab Christians. It was said: They are a people from the People of the Book, whose Book was lifted because of sins they committed, so they became illiterate. Ali, may God be pleased with him: They are the Magians.

I said: The first statement is more apparent, and God knows best.

The second: The Almighty's saying: They do not know the Scripture except in wishful thinking. "Except" here means but, so it is an interrupted exception, like the Almighty's saying: They have no knowledge of it except the following of assumption. And Al-Nabigha said:

I took an oath that was not dualistic or knowledgeable except for a good opinion of the owner

Abu Ja'far, Shaiba and Al-A'raj read except for āmānī with a light ya', deleting one of the two ya's for the sake of lightness. Abu Hatim said: Everything that comes in this manner and its singular is doubled, so you have the option of double or lightening it, such as athāfī, aghānī, āmānī, and the like. Al-Akhfash said: This is like what is said in the plural of miftah: mafātih and mafātih, and it is the plural ya'. Al-Nahhas said:

Deletion is more common in weak words, as the poet said:

Does the delivery return or does the blindness reveal the three stoves and the barren drawings?

Wishes is the plural of wish, which means recitation. Its root is amnawiyah, with the weight of af'ulah, then the waw was assimilated into the ya' and the nun was broken because of the ya', so it became amniyyah. From this is the saying of God Almighty: Except when he recites, Satan casts into his wish, meaning when he recites, Satan casts into his recitation. Ka'b ibn Malik said:

Wish for the Book of God the first night and the last night he will find the dove of destiny

Another said:

The Book of God was wished for on the last night, as David wished for the Psalms on the messengers.

Wishes also mean lies, such as the saying of Uthman may God be pleased with him: I have not wished for anything since I converted to Islam, meaning I have not lied. And the saying of some Arabs to Ibn Dab while he was narrating: Is this something you saw or something you wished for? meaning you made it up. Ibn Abbas and Mujahid interpreted wishes in the verse with this meaning. Wishes are also what a person wishes and desires. Qatada said: Except for wishes, meaning that they wish from God what they do not have. It was said: Wishes are estimation. It is said: He wished for him, meaning he estimated it. Al-Jawhari said this, and Ibn Bahr narrated it, and he recited the words of the poet:

Do not feel safe even if you spend the night in a sanctuary until you find what God has promised you.

That is, the destined one is destined for you.

Third: The Almighty's statement: And they only assume. "In" means what the negative, as the Almighty said: The disbelievers are only in delusion. "And they assume" means they lie and invent things, because they have no knowledge of the truth of what they recite, but rather they are imitating their rabbis in what they recite.

Abu Bakr al-Anbari said: Ahmad ibn Yahya al-Nahwi told us that the Arabs make conjecture knowledge, doubt, and falsehood. He said: If the evidence of knowledge is established and is more than the evidence of doubt, then conjecture is certainty. If the evidence of certainty and the evidence of doubt are equal, then conjecture is doubt. If the evidence of doubt exceeds the evidence of certainty, then conjecture is falsehood. God Almighty said: They only conjecture, meaning they only lie.

Fourth: Our scholars, may God have mercy on them, said: God the Almighty described their rabbis as those who change and distort, so He said, and His statement is true: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands Al-An'am 4:17. That is because when the matter became obsolete among them, and the subjects of their scholars became bad, and they turned to the world out of greed and covetousness, they sought things that would turn people's faces towards them, so they innovated in their law and changed it, and they attached that to the Torah, and they said to their fools: This is from God, so that they would accept it from them and their leadership would be confirmed and they would gain the debris and filth of the world through it. Among the innovations they innovated was that they said: We have no right to the illiterate people, and they are the Arabs, meaning whatever we take from their money is permissible for us. Among the innovations they innovated was that they said: No sin will harm us, for we are His beloved and His children, God is exalted above that! It was in the Torah, O my rabbis and O sons of my messengers, but they changed it and wrote, O my beloved ones and O my sons. Then God revealed their denial: And the Jews and the Christians say, 'We are the sons of God and His beloved.' Say, 'Then why does He punish you for your sins?' They said, 'God will not punish us, and if He punishes us, it will be for forty days, the same as the days of the calf. Then God revealed: And they say, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days.' Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God?' Ibn Muqsim said: He means monotheism, as evidenced by the words of God, Except for he who has taken a covenant from the Most Merciful, meaning there is no god but God. "So God will not break His covenant. Or do you say about God that which you do not know?" Then He denied them and said, "Yes, whoever earns evil and his sin encompasses him - those are the companions of the Fire; they will abide therein eternally. But those who believe and do righteous deeds - those are the companions of Paradise; they will abide therein eternally." So God made it clear that eternity in the Fire and Paradise is according to disbelief and belief, not according to what they said.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And among them are the unlettered ones meaning among the People of the Book, as Mujahid said, and the unlettered ones are the plural of ummi, which is the man who does not know how to write, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi', Qatadah, Ibrahim Al-Nakha'i and others said, and it is apparent in the words of God the Almighty They do not know the Book meaning they do not know what is in it. This is why in the descriptions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: that he is the unlettered one because he did not know how to write, as God the Almighty said: "And you did not recite before it any Book, nor did you inscribe it with your right hand. Then the falsifiers would have had doubts" and the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, we are an unlettered nation. We do not write nor do we calculate the month like this and this and this" the hadith, meaning that we do not need a book or calculation in our worship and its timings, and God the Almighty said: It is He who sent among the unlettered ones a Messenger from among themselves and Ibn Jarir said: The Arabs attributed the men who did not write or inscribe to their mothers because of their ignorance of the Book, not their fathers. He said: It has been narrated from Ibn Abbas may God be pleased with them both: A statement contrary to this, which is what Abu Kurayb narrated to us: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, from Bishr bin Ammarah, from Abu Rawq, from Ad-Dahhak, from Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: And among them are illiterates. The illiterates said: A people who did not believe in a Messenger sent by God, nor in a Book revealed by God, so they wrote a book with their own hands, then they said to a group of ignorant, base people, This is from God. He said: It has been reported that they write with their own hands, then He called them illiterates because of their denial of the Books of God and His Messengers. Then Ibn Jarir said: This interpretation is an interpretation contrary to what is known from the widespread speech of the Arabs among them, and that is that the illiterate among the Arabs is the one who does not write. I said: Then there is a question about the authenticity of this from Ibn Abbas with this chain of transmission, then God knows best. And the words of God the Almighty: Except wishful thinking, Ibn Abi Talhah said from Ibn Abbas: Except wishful thinking of hadiths. Ad-Dahhak said from Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: Except a statement they say with their mouths that is a lie. Mujahid said: Except a lie: Sanid said on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except wishful thinking. He said: Some of the Jews did not know anything about the Scripture, and they used to speak based on conjecture other than what was in the Scripture of God and they would say that it is from the Scripture, wishful thinking that they wished for. And on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri, something similar was said. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' and Qatadah said: Except wishful thinking that they wished for from God what they did not have. And Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: Except wishful thinking, he said: They wished and said: We are from the People of the Scripture and they are not from them. Ibn Jarir said: What is more correct is the statement of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas. And Mujahid said: The unlettered people whom God described as not understanding anything from the Scripture that God revealed to Moses, but they fabricate lies and fabricate falsehoods falsely and falsely. And wishing in this context is creating and fabricating lies, and from it is the report narrated on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, may God be pleased with him: I did not sing nor wish, meaning I did not fabricate falsehood nor... He fabricated a lie. It was said that what is meant by his saying except for wishes with emphasis and also with emphasis is: that is, except for recitation. Based on this, it is an interrupted exception. They cited as evidence for that the saying of God Almighty: Except when he desires, Satan casts into his desire Al-Baqarah 2:17. And Ka'b ibn Malik, the poet, said:

Wish for the Book of God the first night and the last night he will find the dove of destiny

Another said:

The Book of God was wished for on the last night.

David wished for the Book on the messengers.

Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking, and they only conjecture, meaning they do not know what is in it, and they find your prophethood based on conjecture. Mujahid said, And they only conjecture, they lie. Qatada, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and Al-Rabi' said: They conjecture about God untruthfully. God the Almighty said, So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price, the verse. These are another type of Jews. They are the ones who call to misguidance through falsehood and lying about God and consuming people's wealth unjustly. Woe means destruction and devastation, and it is a well-known word in the language. Sufyan Ath-Thawri said on the authority of Ziyad bin Fayyad: I heard Abu Ayyad say: Woe is pus at the bottom of Hell. Ata bin Yasar said: Woe is a valley in Hell, if mountains were to move in it, they would crumble. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told us, Ibn Wahb told us, Amr ibn al-Harith told me, on the authority of Daraj, on the authority of Abu al-Haytham, on the authority of Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Woe is a valley in Hell into which the disbeliever falls for forty autumns before reaching its bottom. Al-Tirmidhi narrated it on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Hamid, on the authority of al-Hasan ibn Musa, on the authority of Ibn Lahi'ah, on the authority of Daraj, and he said: This hadith is strange, we do not know it except from the hadith of Ibn Lahi'ah. I said Ibn Lahi'ah was not the only one who narrated it, as you see, but the problem is with those who came after him. This hadith with this chain of transmission is marfu' and munkar, and God knows best. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Muthanna told us, Ibrahim bin Abdul Salam told us, Saleh Al-Qushayri told us, Ali bin Jarir told us, on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah, on the authority of Abdul Hamid bin Jaafar, on the authority of Kinanah Al-Adawi, on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. He said: Woe is a mountain in the Fire. This is what was revealed about the Jews, because they distorted the Torah, added to it what they liked, erased from it what they hated, and erased the name of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Torah. For this reason, God became angry with them, so He lifted some of the Torah and said, So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. This is also very strange. On the authority of Ibn Abbas: Woe is the hardship of torment. Al-Khalil bin Ahmad said: Woe is the intensity of evil. Sibawayh said: Woe to the one who falls into destruction, and woe to the one who is on the verge of it. Al-Asma'i said: Woe is grief, and woe is mercy. Someone else said: Woe is sadness. Al-Khalil said: And in the meaning of woe is: Woe. And woe, waih, waik, and waih. Some of them differentiated between them. Some grammarians said: It is permissible to begin with it when it is indefinite because it has the meaning of supplication. Some of them permitted its accusative meaning: I impose woe upon them I said, but no one read it that way. And on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, Woe to those who write the Book with their own hands. He said: They are the rabbis of the Jews. And Saeed said the same on the authority of Qatadah: They are the Jews. And Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Alqamah: I asked Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, about the Almighty's saying: Woe to those who write the Book with their own hands. He said: It was revealed about the polytheists and the People of the Book. And al-Suddi said: There were some Jews who wrote a book from themselves and sold it to the Arabs and told them that it was from God, so they would take a small price for it. And al-Zuhri said: Ubayd God ibn Abdullah informed me on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: O group of Muslims, how do you ask the People of the Book about something, while the Book of God that He revealed to His Prophet is the most recent report of God. You read it fresh and untouched, and God Almighty has told you that... The People of the Book have changed and altered the Book of God, and they wrote the Book with their own hands and said: It is from God, in order to exchange it for a small price. Does not the knowledge that has come to you prevent you from questioning them? By God, we have never seen anyone of them ask you about what was revealed to you? Narrated by Al-Bukhari through various chains of narration on the authority of Al-Zuhri. Al-Hasan bin Abi Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: The small price is the entire world. God the Almighty said: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. That is, woe to them for what they have written with their own hands of lies, slander, and fabrications, and woe to them for what they have eaten of unlawful wealth, as Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both. So woe to them means: The punishment is upon them for what they have written with their own hands of that lie, and woe to them for what they have earned, meaning what they eat of the common people and others.

Fath al-Qadir

His saying: 78- And among them means among the Jews. And the illiterate is attributed to the illiterate nation that is, according to its origin of birth from its mothers, did not learn to write and does not know how to read what is written. From this is the hadith: We are an illiterate nation, we do not write nor do we calculate. Abu Ubaidah said: They were only called illiterate because the Book was revealed to them, as if they were attributed to the Mother of the Book, so it is as if he said: And among them are the People of the Book. And it was said that they are the Magians, and it was said: Other than that, and the most likely is the first. The meaning of: They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking is that they have no knowledge of it except what they are upon of the wishful thinking that they desire and comfort themselves with. Wishful thinking is the plural of wishful thinking, which is what a person desires for himself. So these people have no knowledge of the Book, which is the Torah, because of what they are upon of being forgiven for what they claim for themselves of righteous deeds, or because of what they have of righteous predecessors in their belief. And it was said: Wishful thinking is lies, as will come from Ibn Abbas. And from it is the saying of Uthman ibn Affan: I have not wished since I converted to Islam: meaning I have not lied, Al-Qurtubi narrated it from him in his interpretation. And it was said that wishes are recitation, and from it is the saying of the Most High: Except when he wishes, Satan casts into his wish meaning when he recites, Satan casts into his recitation, meaning they have no knowledge except mere recitation without understanding and contemplation. And from it is the saying of Ka'b ibn Malik:

Wish for the Book of God the first night and the last night he will find the dove of destiny

Another said:

The Book of God was wished for on the last night. David wished for the Psalms on the messengers.

It was said that wishes mean estimation. Al-Jawhari said: It is said from me to him, meaning estimated, and from this comes the saying of the poet:

Do not feel safe even if you spend the night in a sanctuary until you find what God has promised you.

That is, He decrees for you what is decreed. Al-Kashshaf said: The derivation is from mana if it is decreed, because the one who wishes decrees in himself and what he wishes is permissible, and so is the fabricator and the reader decrees that the word such and such will come after such and such. And in His statement: And they only conjecture is a negative: that is, what they are, and conjecture is the prevailing hesitation between the two sides of a belief that is not firm, thus in the dictionary, that is, they only hesitate without firmness or certainty. It was said: Conjecture here means lying, and it was said: it is merely intuition. When God the Almighty mentioned the people of knowledge among them that they are not working, but rather they distort the words of God after they have understood it and they know, He mentioned the people of ignorance among them that they speak based on wishes and rely on conjecture, which they do not stand on anything other than it from their imitation and they do not obtain anything other than it.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

78. And the Almighty's saying: And among them are illiterate people, meaning that among the Jews are illiterate people who do not know how to read and write. The plural of ummi is attributed to the mother, as if he remained as he was separated from the mother, not learning to write or read.

[It was narrated on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, that he said, "We are an illiterate nation. We do not write or calculate."] It was said: It is attributed to the mother of villages, which is Mecca. They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking. Abu Ja'far read: Wishful thinking with a light ya'. All of the Qur'an has deleted one of the two ya's for the sake of lightening, and the reading of the general public is with a shaddah. It is the plural of wishful thinking, which is recitation. God Almighty said: Except when he makes a wish, Satan casts into his wish 52-Al-Haji, meaning in his recitation. Abu Ubaidah said: [Except its recitation and reading] from memory, they do not recite it from a book. It was said: They learn it by memory and reading, but they do not know its meaning. Ibn Abbas said: It means they do not know the meanings of the Book. Mujahid and Qatada said: Except for lies and falsehood. Al-Farra' said: Wishes are fabricated hadiths. Uthman, may God be pleased with him, said: I have not wished since I converted to Islam (i.e. I have not lied). He meant by it the things that their scholars wrote from themselves and then added them to God Almighty, such as changing the description of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and other things. Al-Hasan and Abu Al-Aaliyah said: It is from wishing, and they are their false wishes that they wished for from God Almighty, such as their saying: None will enter Paradise except he who is a Jew or a Christian 111-Al-Baqarah and their saying: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days 80-Al-Baqarah and their saying: We are the sons of God and His beloved 18-Al-Ma'idah. Based on this, except has the meaning of but, i.e. they do not know the Book, but they wish for things that will happen to them. And they and they only think and they only think, a thought and imagination, not certainty. Qatada and Al-Rabi' said it. Mujahid said: They lie.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

78- And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture ignorant people who do not know how to write, so they read the Torah and verify what is in it. Or the Torah except for wishes an intermittent exception. Wishes: the plural of wish, and it is originally what a person estimates in his soul of a wish if he is able, and therefore it is used to refer to lies and to what he wishes for and what he reads, and the meaning is but they believe lies that they took by imitation from the distorters or empty promises. They heard them from them that no one will enter Paradise except those who are Jews, and that the Fire will not touch them except for a few days. And it was said except for what they read, a reading devoid of knowledge of the meaning and contemplation of it from His saying:

He wished for the Book of God on the first night. David wished for the Psalms on the messengers.

It is not appropriate to describe them as illiterate. They only assume. They are only a people who assume and have no knowledge. Assumption may be applied in place of knowledge to every opinion and belief that is not conclusive, even if its owner is certain of it: such as the belief of an imitator or someone who deviates from the truth due to doubt.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:79

So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, "This is from God," in order to exchange it for a small price. So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:79

So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, "This is from God," in order to exchange it for a small price. So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

So woe severe torment for those who write the Scripture with their own hands that is, inventing it themselves and then say, This is from God, in order to exchange it for a small price of this world. They are the Jews who changed the description of the Prophet in the Torah and the verse of stoning and others and wrote it contrary to what was revealed. So woe to them for what their hands have written of inventing it and woe to them for what they earn of bribes, the plural of bribe.

Tafsir al-Suyuti

The Almighty said: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands. Al-Nasa'i narrated on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: This verse was revealed about the People of the Scripture. Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: It was revealed about the Jewish rabbis who found the description of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, written in the Torah: Black-eyed, medium build, curly hair, handsome face. They erased it out of envy and malice and said: We find him tall, blue-eyed, with straight hair.

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: The people of interpretation differed in the interpretation of His statement: So woe. Some of them said what: Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman bin Sa'id told us, on the authority of Bishr bin `Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: So woe, he says: So the punishment is upon them.

Others said: Ibn Bashir told us, he said, Ibn Mahdi told us, he said, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ziyad ibn Fayyad, he said: I heard Abu Ayyad say: Woe is what flows from pus at the bottom of Hell.

Bishr bin Abaan Al-Hattab told us, he said, Waki' told us, on the authority of Sufyan, on the authority of Ziyad bin Fayyad, on the authority of Abu Ayyad, regarding his statement: So woe, he said: A cistern at the bottom of Hell, in which their pus flows.

Ali bin Sahl al-Ramli told us, Zaid bin Abi al-Zarqa told us, Sufyan told us, on the authority of Ziyad bin Fayyad, on the authority of Abu Ayyad, who said: Woe is a valley of pus in Hell.

Ibn Hamid told us, he said, Mihran told us, on the authority of Shuqaiq, he said: Woe, what pus flows at the bottom of Hell.

Others said: Al-Muthanna told us, he said: Ibrahim bin Abdul Salam bin Saleh Al-Tastari told us, he said: Ali bin Jarir told us, on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah, on the authority of Abdul Hamid bin Jaafar, on the authority of Kinanah Al-Adawi, on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Woe is a mountain in Hell.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Amr ibn al-Harith told me, on the authority of Diraj, on the authority of Abu al-Haytham, on the authority of Abu Saeed, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Woe is a valley in Hell, into which the unbeliever falls for forty autumns before he reaches its bottom.

Abu Ja'far said: The meaning of the verse, according to what was narrated from the one whose interpretation I mentioned, is: Woe. The punishment, which is drinking the pus of the people of Hell at the bottom of Hell, is for the Jews who write falsehood with their hands, then say: This is from God.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: For those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price.

Abu Ja'far said: He means by that those who distorted the Book of God from the Jews of the Children of Israel, and wrote a book according to their interpretations, contrary to what God revealed to His Prophet Moses, peace be upon him, then sold it to people who had no knowledge of it, nor of what was in the Torah, ignorant of what was in the Books of God in order to seek a lowly worldly gain. So God said to them: So woe to them for what their hands have written, and woe to them for what they earn, as Moses told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi: (So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price, he said: There were some Jews who wrote a book from themselves, selling it to the Arabs, and telling them that it was from God, in order to exchange it for a small price.

Abu Kuraib told us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed told us, he said, Bishr bin Amara told us, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, he said: The illiterate are a people who did not believe in a messenger sent by God, nor in a book revealed by God, so they wrote a book with their own hands, then they said to a group of ignorant, base al-Nas 114: This is from God, to exchange it for a small price. He said: A worldly commodity.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: For those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' he said: These are the ones who knew that it was from God, but they distorted it.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly, except that he said: Then they distort it.

Bishr bin Muadh told us, he said, Yazid told us, on the authority of Qatada: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands the verse, and they are the Jews.

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said, Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said, Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' he said: There were people from the Children of Israel who wrote a book with their own hands, in order to devour people, and they said, 'This is from God,' but it is not from God.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, regarding his statement: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price. He said: They deliberately took what God revealed in their book of the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and distorted it from its proper places, seeking thereby worldly gain. So he said: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Al-Muthanna bin Ibrahim told me, Ibrahim bin Abdul Salam told us, Ali bin Jarir told us, on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah, on the authority of Abdul Hamid bin Jaafar, on the authority of Kinanah Al-Adawi, on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. Woe is a mountain in the Fire, and it is what was revealed about the Jews, because they distorted the Torah, and added to it what they liked, and erased from it what they hated, and erased the name of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Torah. For this reason, God became angry with them, so He lifted up part of the Torah and said: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Saeed bin Abi Ayyoub told me, on the authority of Muhammad bin Ajlan, on the authority of Zaid bin Aslam, on the authority of Ata bin Yasar, he said: Woe, a valley in Hell, if the mountains were to be moved through it, they would melt from the intensity of its heat.

Abu Ja'far said: If someone were to say to us: What is the meaning of his saying: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands? Can writing be done without the hand, such that those addressed by this address needed to tell about these people whose story he narrated that they wrote the Scripture with their own hands?

It was said to him: The book is from the sons of Adam, even if it is from them by hand, because the book may be attributed to someone other than its writer and the one who is in charge of drawing its script, so it is said: So-and-so wrote to so-and-so about such-and-such, even if the one who is in charge of writing it by hand is not the one to whom the book is attributed, if the writer wrote it at the command of the one to whom the book is attributed. So our Lord informed His believing servants by His saying: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands, that the rabbis of the Jews write lies and slander against God with their own hands, knowingly and deliberately lying about God, then they attribute it to being from God and in the Book of God, lying about God and fabricating against Him. So He, the Most High, denied by His saying: They write the Scripture with their own hands, that the one who is in charge of writing that is some of their ignorant ones at the command of their scholars and rabbis. This is similar to the saying of the speaker: So-and-so sold me his eye for such-and-such, so-and-so bought himself for such-and-such. What is meant by including the soul and the eye in that is to remove any confusion from the listener, that the one in charge of selling or buying that is not the one to whom the matter is described, and to make the reality of the action obligatory for the one being told about. So too is his saying: So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands.

The statement in the interpretation of the Almighty's saying: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Abu Ja'far said: What He, may His praise be exalted, meant by His statement: So woe to them for what their hands have written, is that the torment in the valley of the pus of the people of Hell at the bottom of Hell is for them, meaning: for those who wrote the book, the matter of which we have described, from the Jews of the Children of Israel, distorted, then they said: This is from God, seeking a worldly gain of which few of them would buy it.

And His statement: From what their hands have written, meaning: from what their hands have written of that, and woe to them also from what they earn, meaning: from what they do of sins, and what they commit of crimes, and what they earn from what is forbidden, with their book that they write with their hands contrary to what God has revealed, then they eat its price, and they have sold it to those who sold it from them on the grounds that it is from the Book of God, as: Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah: And woe to them from what they earn, meaning: from sin.

Abu Kuraib narrated to us, he said, Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, on the authority of Bishr bin Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: So woe to them, meaning: So the punishment is upon them. He said: He says: Who wrote with their own hands that lie, And woe to them for what they earn, meaning: What they eat from the lowly and others. Abu Jaafar said: The root of earning is work. So every worker does work, by directly doing what he does, and by suffering professionally, so he earns what he does, as Labid bin Rabi'ah said:

So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, "This is from God," in order to exchange it for a small price. So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

For Maafar Qahd, he quarreled, his body was covered with waste, and his food was not safe

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

It has five issues:

First: His saying: Woe. There is a difference of opinion about what woe is. Uthman bin Affan narrated on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace:

It is a mountain of fire. Narrated by Abu Saeed Al-Khudri.

Woe is a valley in Hell between two men, into which the afflicted person falls for forty autumns. It was narrated on the authority of Sufyan and Ata bin Yasar: That the woe in this verse is a valley flowing in the courtyard of Hell from the pus of the people of Hell. It was also said: A cistern in Hell. Al-Zahrawi narrated on the authority of others: It is one of the gates of Hell. Ibn Abbas said: Woe is the hardship of torment. Al-Khalil said: Woe is the intensity of evil. Al-Asma'i: Woe is grief, and woe is mercy. Sibawayh: Woe to he who has fallen into destruction, and woe is a warning to he who is on the verge of destruction. Ibn Arafah: Woe is sadness. It is said: A man calls out for woe, and this is only said when he is sad and distressed, and from this is His statement: So woe to those who write the Book with their own hands. It was said: Its origin is destruction, and everyone who falls into destruction calls out for woe, and from this is His statement, the Most High: Oh, woe to us! What is this Book? It is woe and misery, and they are destruction, and the plural is woes. He said:

Woe to him if he lives without Umm Hashim

He also said:

And the calamities said to you that you are my mantle

Woe is raised by the beginning, and it is permissible to begin with it even if it is indefinite because it has the meaning of supplication. Al-Akhfash said: The accusative case is permissible with an implied verb, meaning may God impose woe upon them. Al-Farra' said: The origin of woe is woe, meaning sorrow, as you say: Woe to so-and-so, meaning sorrow for him, so the Arabs connected it with lam and estimated it from it and parsed it. The best thing for it if it is separated from the addition is the nominative case, because it requires occurrence. The accusative case is correct with the meaning of supplication, as we mentioned.

Al-Khalil said: "Only waih, waiwais, waih, waik, wail, and waiba have been heard with its construction, and all of them are close in meaning. Some people have differentiated between them, and they are verbal nouns from which the Arabs did not pronounce a verb." Al-Jarmi said: "Among the nouns that are in the accusative case are wailah, waiyah, waiyah, and waiysa. If the lam is inserted, they are raised, so qatal means wailah, waih lahu."

Second: God Almighty says: For those who write. Writing is well-known.

The first person to write with a pen was Idris, peace be upon him. This was mentioned in the hadith of Abu Dharr, narrated by Al-Ajurri and others. It has been said that Adam, peace be upon him, was given writing, so it became an inheritance for his children.

Third: The Almighty's statement, in their hands, is an emphasis, for He knows that writing can only be done by hand. It is like His statement, nor a bird that flies with its wings, and His statement, they say with their mouths. It was said: The benefit of in their hands is a clarification of their crime and proof of their public declaration, for the one who undertakes the action is more severe in its occurrence than the one who does not undertake it, even if it is his opinion. Ibn al-Sarraj said: in their hands is a metaphor for them being of their own accord without it being revealed to them, even if it is not actually in the books in their hands.

Fourth: In this verse and the one before it there is a warning against changing, altering, and adding to the Sharia. Whoever changes, alters, or innovates in the religion of God something that is not part of it and is not permissible in it is included under this severe threat and painful punishment. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, warned his nation when he knew what would happen at the end of time, saying:

Behold, those before you from the People of the Book split into seventy-two sects, and this nation will split into seventy-three sects, all of them in the Fire except one. The hadith, and it will come. So he warned them not to introduce into the religion on their own anything contrary to the Book of God or His Sunnah or the Sunnah of his Companions, thereby leading people astray. What he warned against has happened and has become widespread, increased and well-known. So to God we belong and to Him we shall return.

Fifth: The Almighty's saying: To exchange it for a small price. God the Almighty described what they take as little, either because it is perishable and not permanent, or because it is forbidden, because there is no blessing in what is forbidden and it does not increase with God. Ibn Ishaq and Al-Kalbi said: The description of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, in their book was that he was of medium build and dark skin, so they made him a tall, straight-chested man, and they said to their companions and followers: Look at the description of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who will be sent at the end of time, and this description does not resemble him. The rabbis and scholars had leadership and earnings, so they feared that if they made it clear, their food and leadership would be lost, so they changed it.

Then God Almighty said: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. It was said that it was from food. It was said that it was from sins. And he repeated the woe to make their actions more severe.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

God the Almighty says: And among them are the unlettered ones meaning among the People of the Book, as Mujahid said, and the unlettered ones are the plural of ummi, which is the man who does not know how to write, Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi', Qatadah, Ibrahim Al-Nakha'i and others said, and it is apparent in the words of God the Almighty They do not know the Book meaning they do not know what is in it. This is why in the descriptions of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace: that he is the unlettered one because he did not know how to write, as God the Almighty said: "And you did not recite before it any Book, nor did you inscribe it with your right hand. Then the falsifiers would have had doubts" and the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: "Indeed, we are an unlettered nation. We do not write nor do we calculate the month like this and this and this" the hadith, meaning that we do not need a book or calculation in our worship and its timings, and God the Almighty said: It is He who sent among the unlettered ones a Messenger from among themselves and Ibn Jarir said: The Arabs attributed the men who did not write or inscribe to their mothers because of their ignorance of the Book, not their fathers. He said: It has been narrated from Ibn Abbas (may God be pleased with them both): A statement contrary to this, which is what Abu Kurayb narrated to us: Uthman bin Saeed narrated to us, from Bishr bin Ammarah, from Abu Rawq, from Ad-Dahhak, from Ibn Abbas, regarding the words of God the Almighty: And among them are illiterates. The illiterates said: A people who did not believe in a Messenger sent by God, nor in a Book revealed by God, so they wrote a book with their own hands, then they said to a group of ignorant, base people, This is from God. He said: It has been reported that they write with their own hands, then He called them illiterates because of their denial of the Books of God and His Messengers. Then Ibn Jarir said: This interpretation is an interpretation contrary to what is known from the widespread speech of the Arabs among them, and that is that the illiterate among the Arabs is the one who does not write. I said: Then there is a question about the authenticity of this from Ibn Abbas with this chain of transmission, and God knows best. And the words of God the Almighty: Except wishful thinking, Ibn Abi Talhah said from Ibn Abbas: Except wishful thinking of hadiths. Ad-Dahhak said from Ibn Abbas regarding the words of God the Almighty: Except a statement they say with their mouths that is a lie. Mujahid said: Except a lie: Sanid said on the authority of Hajjaj, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, on the authority of Mujahid, And among them are unlettered people who do not know the Scripture except wishful thinking. He said: Some of the Jews did not know anything about the Scripture, and they used to speak based on conjecture other than what was in the Scripture of God and they would say that it is from the Scripture, wishful thinking that they wished for. And on the authority of Al-Hasan Al-Basri, something similar was said. Abu Al-Aaliyah, Al-Rabi' and Qatadah said: Except wishful thinking that they wished for from God what they did not have. And Abd Al-Rahman bin Zaid bin Aslam said: Except wishful thinking, he said: They wished and said: We are from the People of the Scripture and they are not from them. Ibn Jarir said: What is more correct is the statement of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas. And Mujahid said: The unlettered people whom God described as not understanding anything from the Scripture that God revealed to Moses, but they fabricate lies and fabricate falsehoods falsely and falsely. And wishing in this context is creating and fabricating lies, and from it is the report narrated on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, may God be pleased with him: I did not sing nor wish, meaning I did not fabricate falsehood nor... He fabricated a lie. It was said that what is meant by his saying except for wishes with emphasis and also with emphasis is: that is, except for recitation. Based on this, it is an interrupted exception. They cited as evidence for that the saying of God Almighty: Except when he desires, Satan casts into his desire Al-Baqarah 2:17. And Ka'b ibn Malik, the poet, said:

Wish for the Book of God the first night and the last night he will find the dove of destiny

Another said:

The Book of God was wished for on the last night. David wished for the Book on the messengers.

Muhammad bin Ishaq said: Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad told me on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed bin Jubair, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, They do not know the Book except in wishful thinking, and they only conjecture, meaning they do not know what is in it, and they find your prophethood based on conjecture. Mujahid said, And they only conjecture, they lie. Qatada, Abu Al-Aaliyah, and Al-Rabi' said: They conjecture about God untruthfully. God the Almighty said, So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price, the verse. These are another type of Jews. They are the ones who call to misguidance through falsehood and lying about God and consuming people's wealth unjustly. Woe means destruction and devastation, and it is a well-known word in the language. Sufyan Ath-Thawri said on the authority of Ziyad bin Fayyad: I heard Abu Ayyad say: Woe is pus at the bottom of Hell. Ata bin Yasar said: Woe is a valley in Hell, if mountains were to move in it, they would crumble. Ibn Abi Hatim said: Yunus ibn Abd al-A'la told us, Ibn Wahb told us, Amr ibn al-Harith told me, on the authority of Daraj, on the authority of Abu al-Haytham, on the authority of Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: Woe is a valley in Hell into which the disbeliever falls for forty autumns before reaching its bottom. Al-Tirmidhi narrated it on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Hamid, on the authority of al-Hasan ibn

So woe to those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, "This is from God," in order to exchange it for a small price. So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn.

Musa, on the authority of Ibn Lahi'ah, on the authority of Daraj, and he said: This hadith is strange, we do not know it except from the hadith of Ibn Lahi'ah. I said Ibn Lahi'ah was not the only one who narrated it, as you see, but the problem is with those who came after him. This hadith with this chain of transmission is marfu' and munkar, and God knows best. Ibn Jarir said: Al-Muthanna told us, Ibrahim bin Abdul Salam told us, Saleh Al-Qushayri told us, Ali bin Jarir told us, on the authority of Hammad bin Salamah, on the authority of Abdul Hamid bin Jaafar, on the authority of Kinanah Al-Adawi, on the authority of Uthman bin Affan, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. He said: Woe is a mountain in the Fire. This is what was revealed about the Jews, because they distorted the Torah, added to it what they liked, erased from it what they hated, and erased the name of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, from the Torah. For this reason, God became angry with them, so He lifted some of the Torah and said, So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. This is also very strange. On the authority of Ibn Abbas: Woe is the hardship of torment. Al-Khalil bin Ahmad said: Woe is the intensity of evil. Sibawayh said: Woe to the one who falls into destruction, and woe to the one who is on the verge of it. Al-Asma'i said: Woe is grief, and woe is mercy. Someone else said: Woe is sadness. Al-Khalil said: And in the meaning of woe is: Woe. And woe, waih, waik, and waih. Some of them differentiated between them. Some grammarians said: It is permissible to begin with it when it is indefinite because it has the meaning of supplication. Some of them permitted its accusative meaning: I impose woe upon them I said, but no one read it that way. And on the authority of Ikrimah on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both, Woe to those who write the Book with their own hands. He said: They are the rabbis of the Jews. And Saeed said the same on the authority of Qatadah: They are the Jews. And Sufyan al-Thawri said on the authority of Abd al-Rahman ibn Alqamah: I asked Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with him, about the Almighty's saying: Woe to those who write the Book with their own hands. He said: It was revealed about the polytheists and the People of the Book. And al-Suddi said: There were some Jews who wrote a book from themselves and sold it to the Arabs and told them that it was from God, so they would take a small price for it. And al-Zuhri said: Ubayd God ibn Abdullah informed me on the authority of Ibn Abbas that he said: O group of Muslims, how do you ask the People of the Book about something, while the Book of God that He revealed to His Prophet is the most recent report of God. You read it fresh and untouched, and God Almighty has told you that... The People of the Book have changed and altered the Book of God, and they wrote the Book with their own hands and said: It is from God, in order to exchange it for a small price. Does not the knowledge that has come to you prevent you from questioning them? By God, we have never seen anyone of them ask you about what was revealed to you? Narrated by Al-Bukhari through various chains of narration on the authority of Al-Zuhri. Al-Hasan bin Abi Al-Hasan Al-Basri said: The small price is the entire world. God the Almighty said: So woe to them for what their hands have written and woe to them for what they earn. That is, woe to them for what they have written with their own hands of lies, slander, and fabrications, and woe to them for what they have eaten of unlawful wealth, as Ad-Dahhak said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, may God be pleased with them both. So woe to them means: The punishment is upon them for what they have written with their own hands of that lie, and woe to them for what they have earned, meaning what they eat of the common people and others.

Fath al-Qadir

Woe: destruction. Al-Farra' said: The origin of woe is wai: meaning sadness, as you say wai li so-and-so: meaning sadness for him, so the Arabs connected it with lam. Al-Khalil said: We did not hear on its construction except waih, wais, waih, waik, and waib, and all of them are close in meaning, and some people differentiated between them and they are sources whose verbs the Arabs did not pronounce, and it is permissible to begin with it even if it is indefinite because it has the meaning of a supplication. Writing is well-known, and what is meant is that they write the distorted book and do not clarify or deny it to its doer. His statement: 79- with their hands is an emphasis because writing can only be done by hand, so it is like his statement: nor a bird that flies with its wings and his statement: they say with their mouths, and Ibn Siraj said: It is a metaphor that it is from their own initiative without it being revealed to them. And in it is that it has been indicated that it is from their own initiative by his statement: they write the book so attributing the writing to them indicates that. And purchasing: is substitution, and we have already discussed it, and it was described as little because it is fleeting and there is no reward in it, or because it is forbidden and no blessing comes from it. So these scribes were not satisfied with distorting or writing that distortion until they proclaimed in gatherings that it was from God, so that through these repeated sins they could achieve this meager purpose and insignificant compensation. And His saying: from what they earn It was said: from bribes and the like, and it was said: from sins, and the woe was repeated to make them more severe and magnify their action and tear down their veils.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

79. The Almighty's saying: Woe. Al-Zajjaj said: Woe is a word said by everyone who is in a state of ruin. It was said: It is the invocation of the unbelievers upon themselves with woe and destruction. Ibn Abbas said:

Severe torment. Saeed bin Al-Musayyab said: Woe is a valley in Hell. If the mountains of the world were to be driven through it, they would melt from the intensity of its heat.

Abu Bakr Muhammad ibn Abdullah ibn Abi Tobah told us, Tahir Muhammad ibn Ahmad ibn al-Harith told us, Abu al-Hasan Muhammad ibn Yaqub al-Kisa'i told us, Abdullah ibn Mahmud told us, Abu Ishaq Ibrahim ibn Abdullah al-Khalal told us, Abdullah ibn al-Mubarak told us, on the authority of Rashdin ibn Sa'd [on the authority of Amr ibn al-Harith, who narrated on the authority of Abu al-Samh on the authority of Abu al-Haitham] on the authority of Abu Sa'id al-Khudri, may God be pleased with him, on the authority of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, who said: "Woe is a valley in Hell into which the disbeliever falls for forty autumns before reaching its bottom, and as-Sajd is a mountain of fire into which he climbs for seventy autumns and then falls, and it is like that."

For those who write the Scripture with their own hands and then say, 'This is from God,' in order to exchange it for a small price. This is because the Jewish rabbis feared that their livelihood would be lost and their leadership would be removed when the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina, so they devised a plan to prevent the Jews from believing in him. They took his description in the Torah, which was: handsome face, handsome hair, black eyes, medium build. They changed it and wrote in its place: tall, blue-eyed. When their lower class asked them about his description, they would read what they had written and find it to be contrary to his description, so they would deny it and reject it. God Almighty said, So woe to them for what their hands have written, meaning what they wrote themselves, inventing to change the description of Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace. And woe to them for what they earn, of food and it is said: of sins.

Tafsir al-Baidawi

79- Woe means regret and perish. And whoever said that it is a valley or a mountain in Hell, its meaning is that there is a place in it for whoever is destined for woe, and perhaps he called it that metaphorically. It is originally a source with no verb, but it is permissible to begin with it as an indefinite noun because it is a supplication. For those who write the Book means the distorters, and perhaps he meant by that what they wrote of false interpretations. With their hands is an emphasis like saying: I wrote it with my right hand, Then they say, 'This is from God' in order to exchange it for a small price in order to obtain with it a worldly gain, for even if it is made small in comparison to what they deserved of eternal punishment. Woe to them for what their hands have written meaning the distorters. And woe to them for what they earn meaning bribes.

Surat al-Baqarah 2:80

And they say, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days. Say, Have you taken a covenant from God - God will never fail in His covenant - or are you saying about God what you do not know?

Surat al-Baqarah 2:80

And they say, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days. Say, Have you taken a covenant from God - God will never fail in His covenant - or are you saying about God what you do not know?

Tafsir al-Jalalayn

And they said when the Prophet promised them the Fire The Fire will not touch us it will befall us except for a few days forty days, the period of their fathers' worship of the calf [and it was said four days], then it will go away Say to them, O Muhammad Have you taken the hamzat al-wasl was deleted from it, dispensing with the hamzat al-istifham a covenant with God a pledge from Him regarding that God will never break His covenant with it, no or rather do you say about God what you do not know

Tafsir al-Suyuti

The Almighty said: And they said, The Fire will not touch us. The verse. Al-Tabarani in Al-Kabeer, Ibn Jarir, and Ibn Abi Hatim narrated on the authority of Ibn Ishaq on the authority of Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad on the authority of Ikrimah or Saeed ibn Jubayr on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Messenger of God arrived in Medina while the Jews were saying that the duration of the world is only seven thousand years, and that people are only tormented for every thousand years of the days of

The world is one day in the fire of the days of the Hereafter, but it is only seven days, then the torment stops. So God revealed about that, and they said, The Fire will not touch us, until His saying, Therein we will abide eternally.

Ibn Jarir narrated on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas that the Jews said: We will not enter Hell except as a recompense for the days in which we worshipped the calf, forty nights. When they have passed, the torment will be cut off from us. So the verse was revealed. And he narrated on the authority of Ikrimah and others.

Tafsir al-Tabari

Abu Ja'far said: By His statement, And they said, he means the Jews. He says: And the Jews said, The Fire will not touch us, meaning: Our bodies will not encounter the Fire and we will not enter it, except for a few days. And it was said numbered, even though their number was not specified in the revelation, because God, the Most High, informed us of that, and they know the number of days that they are allotted for their stay in the Fire. For this reason, He left out mentioning the number of those days, and called them numbered, for what we have described.

Then the people of interpretation differed regarding the number of days that the Jews had specified, saying what God had informed us about them. Some of them said what Abu Kurayb told us, he said, Uthman ibn Sa'id told us, on the authority of Bishr ibn 'Amara, on the authority of Abu Rawq, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas: And they said, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days.' That was said by the enemies of God, the Jews. They said, "God will not let us enter the Fire except to fulfill the oath, the days in which we killed the calf: forty days. So when those days have passed, the punishment and the oath will be cut off from us."

Al-Hasan bin Yahya told us, he said: Abd al-Razzaq told us, he said: Muammar told us, on the authority of Qatada, regarding his statement: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days, they said: A few days because of what we did with the calf.

Musa told us, Amr told us, Asbat told us, on the authority of al-Suddi: And they said, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days.' He said: The Jews said: God will cause us to enter the Fire and we will remain in it for forty nights, until the Fire has consumed our sins and cleansed us, then a caller will call out: Bring out every circumcised person from the children of Israel. For that is what we were commanded to be circumcised. They said: Then they will not leave anyone from us in the Fire without bringing him out.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Al-Rabi', on the authority of Abu Al-'Aliyah, he said: The Jews said: Our Lord rebuked us for our affair, so He swore to punish us for forty nights, then bring us out. So God denied them.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said: The Jews said: We will not enter Hell except to fulfill the oath, the number of days in which we worshipped the calf.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, regarding his statement: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days, the verse. Ibn Abbas said: It was mentioned that the Jews found written in the Torah that the distance between the two ends of Hell is a journey of forty years, until they reach the tree of Zaqqum growing at the bottom of Hell. Ibn Abbas used to say: Hell is Saqar, and in it is the tree of Zaqqum. The enemies of God claimed that when the number of days that they found in their book is over, what they mean by that is the journey that ends at the bottom of Hell. They said: When the number is over, the term will end, so there will be no punishment, and Hell will go away and be destroyed. That is what His statement: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days, means the term. Ibn Abbas said: When they stormed through the gate of Hell, they walked in the punishment until they reached the tree of Zaqqum on the last day of the numbered days. The keepers of Saqar said to them: You claimed that the Fire will not touch you except for a few days! The number is empty, and you are in eternity! So he took them ascending in hell, exhausting them.

Muhammad bin Saad told me, he said, my father told me, he said, my uncle told me, he said, my father told me, on the authority of his father, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: And they said, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days,' except for forty nights.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Ishaq told us, he said, Hafs bin Umar told us, on the authority of Al-Hakam bin Abaan, on the authority of Ikrimah, he said: "The Jews argued with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they said: We will not enter the Fire except for forty nights, and another people will succeed us in it, meaning Muhammad and his companions. So the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said with his hand on their heads: Rather, you will abide therein forever, and no one will succeed you in it." Then God, may His praise be exalted, revealed: "And they say: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days."

Al-Qasim narrated to us, Al-Husayn narrated to us, Hajjaj narrated to us, on the authority of Ibn Jurayj, who said: Al-Hakam bin Abaan informed me, on the authority of Ikrimah, who said: The Jews gathered one day to argue with the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace. They said: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days, and they named forty days, then people will replace us or join us in it. They pointed to the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: You have lied. Rather, you will abide in it forever, we will not join you or replace you in it, God willing, ever.

Yunus bin Abdul A'la told me, he said, Ali bin Ma'bad told us, on the authority of Abu Mu'awiyah, on the authority of Juwaybir, on the authority of Ad-Dahhak, regarding his statement: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days, he said: The Jews said: We will not be tormented in the Fire on the Day of Resurrection except for forty days, the amount of time we worshipped the calf.

Yunus told me, he said, Ibn Wahb told us, he said, Ibn Zayd said, my father told me that the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: "I ask you by God and by the Torah that God sent down to Moses on the day of Mount Sinai, who are the people of Hell whom God sent down in the Torah? They said: Their Lord was angry with them, so we will remain in the Fire for forty nights, then we will come out and you will replace us in it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: You have lied, by God, we will never replace you in it." So the Qur'an was revealed confirming the words of the Prophet, may God bless him and grant him peace, and refuting them: And they say, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days.' Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God?' until His saying: They will abide therein eternally.

Others said about this: Abu Kurayb told us, Yunus bin Bakir told us, Ibn Ishaq told us, Muhammad bin Abi Muhammad, the client of Zayd bin Thabit, told me, Saeed bin Jubair, or Ikrimah, told me, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, who said: The Jews used to say: The duration of this world is only seven thousand years, and God will only punish people on the Day of Resurrection for every thousand years of this world, one day of the days of the Hereafter, and they are seven days. So God revealed about this from their saying: And they say, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days' (al-Baqarah 2:170).

Ibn Humayd told us, he said, Salamah told us, on the authority of Muhammad ibn Ishaq, he said, Muhammad ibn Abi Muhammad told me, on the authority of Sa'id ibn Jubayr, or 'Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn 'Abbas, he said: "The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, came to Medina, and the Jews were saying: The duration of this world is only seven thousand years, and people are only tormented in the Fire for every thousand years of this world, one day in the Fire from the days of the Hereafter, so it is only seven days, then the torment will stop." So God Almighty revealed regarding that from their saying: The Fire will not touch us the verse.

Muhammad bin Amr told me, he said, Abu Asim told us, on the authority of Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, regarding the statement of God: They said, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days,' he said: She used to say: The world is only seven thousand years, and we are only tormented for one day for every thousand years.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly, except that he said: The Jews used to say: The world is only... and the rest of the hadith is similar.

Al-Qasim told us, Al-Hussein told us, Hajjaj told me, Ibn Jurayj said, Mujahid said: And they said, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days of time. And they named the number of seven thousand years, and out of every thousand years a day. The Jews say this.

Say: Have you taken a covenant from God - God will never break His covenant - or do you say about God what you do not know?

Abu Ja'far said: When the Jews said what they said, saying: The Fire shall not touch us except for a few days, as we have explained of the interpretation of that, God said to His Prophet Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace: Say, O Muhammad, to the company of Jews: Have you taken a covenant from God? Have you taken a covenant from God with what you say, for God does not break His covenant, nor does He change His promise and His contract, or are you saying falsehood about God out of ignorance and boldness toward Him? As Muhammad ibn 'Amr told us, he said, Abu 'Asim told us, on the authority of 'Isa, on the authority of Ibn Abi Najeh, on the authority of Mujahid: "Say: Have you taken a covenant from God?" That is, a confirmation from God that it is as you say.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Abu Hudhayfah told us, he said, Shabl told us, on the authority of Ibn Abi Nujayh, on the authority of Mujahid, similarly.

Al-Muthanna told me, he said, Adam told us, he said, Abu Ja'far told us, on the authority of Qatada, he said:

Surat al-Baqarah 2:80

And they say, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days. Say, Have you taken a covenant from God - God will never fail in His covenant - or are you saying about God what you do not know?

The Jews said: We will not enter the Fire except for the fulfillment of the oath, the number of days during which we worshipped the calf. So God said: Have you taken a covenant from God about what you are saying? Do you have any proof or evidence for this? God will not break His covenant, so produce your proof and evidence. Or are you saying about God what you do not know?

Abu Kuraib narrated that Uthman ibn Saeed narrated on the authority of Bishr ibn Amara on the authority of Abu Rawq on the authority of Ad-Dahhak on the authority of Ibn Abbas who said: When the Jews said what they said, God, the Most High, said to Muhammad, "Say: 'Have you taken a covenant from God?'" He said: Have you stored up a covenant with God? He said: Did you say, 'There is no god but God,' and did not associate anything with Him or disbelieve in Him? So if you said it, then hope for it, and if you did not say it, then why do you say about God what you do not know? They said: "If you had said, 'There is no god but God,' and did not associate anything with Him, and then died on that, then it would have been a treasure with Me for you, and I would not have broken My promise to you: that I will reward you for it."

Musa bin Harun told me, he said, Amr told us, he said, Asbat told us, on the authority of Al-Suddi, he said: When the Jews said what they said, God Almighty said: Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God? But God will never break His covenant.' And He said in another place: And what they used to invent deceived them in their religion (Al Imran 3:24), then He told the report and said: Yes, whoever earns evil.

Abu Ja'far said: These statements that we have narrated from Ibn 'Abbas, Mujahid and Qatadah are similar to what we said in the interpretation of His statement: "Say: Have you taken a covenant from God?" Because among the covenants that God has given His servants is that whoever believes in Him and obeys His command, He will save him from His Fire on the Day of Resurrection. And among the covenants that He has given them is the acknowledgment that there is no god but God. And likewise among the covenants that He has made with them is that whoever comes to God on the Day of Resurrection with an argument will have salvation from the Fire, and He will save him from it. And all of that, even if the wording of those who said it differs, the meanings are in agreement, based on what we have said about it. And God knows best.

Tafsir al-Qurtubi

There are three issues:

The first: The Almighty's saying: And they said, meaning the Jews, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days. There is disagreement about the reason for its revelation. It was said:

The Prophet (peace and blessings of God be upon him) said to the Jews: Who are the people of Hell? They said: We are, then you will succeed us. He said: You have lied, you know that we will not succeed you. So this verse was revealed, as Ibn Zayd said. Ikrimah said on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The Messenger of God (peace and blessings of God be upon him) came to Medina and the Jews were saying: This world is only seven thousand years, and people are only tormented in Hell for every thousand years of this world, one day in Hell from the days of the Hereafter, but it is only seven days. So God revealed the verse, and this is the saying of Mujahid. A group said: The Jews said that in the Torah it says that Hell is a journey of forty years, and that they will cut off a year every day until they complete it and Hell goes away. Ad-Dahhak narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas. On the authority of Ibn Abbas: The Jews claimed that they found written in the Torah that the distance between the two ends of Hell is a journey of forty years until they reach the tree of Zaqqum. They said: We are only tormented until we reach the tree of Zaqqum, and Hell goes away and is destroyed. On the authority of Ibn Abbas and Qatada: The Jews said that God swore that He would put them in Hell for forty days, the number of days for which they worshipped the calf, but God denied them, as mentioned above.

Second: In this verse there is a response to Abu Hanifa and his companions, as they cited as evidence the saying of peace be upon him:

Leave the prayer during the days of your menstrual cycle. The duration of menstruation is what is called the days of menstruation, and the minimum is three, in which there are eleven. They said that what is less than three is called one day or two days, and what is more than ten is called eleven days, and it is not called days, but rather it is called days from three to ten. God Almighty said: Then fast three days during the Hajj, "Enjoy yourselves in your homes for three days," He subjected them to seven nights and eight days in succession.

It is said to them: God Almighty said about fasting: A numbered number of days, meaning the entire month, and He said: The Fire will not touch us except for a numbered number of days, meaning forty days. Also, if the days are added to an incident, it is not intended to specify a number, but rather it is said: the days of your walking, your travel, and your stay, even if it is thirty or twenty or whatever number you want, and perhaps He meant what was customary for it, and the custom is six or seven, so the statement was excluded from it, and God knows best.

Third: The Almighty's saying: "Say: Have you taken" The discussion of took has already been presented, so there is no point in repeating it, a covenant with God meaning, have you done a good deed in advance, then believed and obeyed, and thus deserved to be released from the Fire! Or did you know that through His revelation that He entrusted to you? God will not fail in His covenant, or do you say about God that which you do not know? A rebuke and rebuke.

Tafsir Ibn Kathir

The Almighty says, informing about the Jews in what they transmitted and claimed for themselves that the Fire will not touch them except for a few days, then they will be saved from it, so God responded to them with His Almighty saying, Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God?' That is, if a covenant has been made, then He will not break His covenant, but this is what happened and it did not happen, and for this reason He brought the word umm which means rather, that is, rather you say about God what you do not know of lies and slander against Him. Muhammad ibn Ishaq said on the authority of Saif ibn Sulayman, on the authority of Mujahid, on the authority of Ibn Abbas: The Jews used to say that this world is seven thousand years, and we are only tormented for every thousand years for a day in the Fire, and it is only seven numbered days, so God Almighty revealed, And they say, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days,' to His saying, abiding eternally. Then he narrated it on the authority of Muhammad, on the authority of Saeed or Ikrimah, on the authority of Ibn Abbas, in a similar manner. Al-Awfi said on the authority of Ibn Abbas, And they say, 'The Fire will not touch us except for a few days.' The Jews said: The Fire will not touch us except for forty nights, and another added, and it is a period of time. Their worship of the calf, and Al-Qurtubi narrated it on the authority of Ibn Abbas and Qatadah, and Ad-Dahhak said: Ibn Abbas said: The Jews claimed that they found written in the Torah that the distance between the two ends of Hell is a journey of forty years until they reach the tree of Zaqqum, which grows at the bottom of Hell, and the enemies of God said: We will only be tormented until we reach the tree of Zaqqum and Hell will go away, and that is what God Almighty said: "And they said: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days." And Abd Al-Razzaq said on the authority of Muammar on the authority of Qatadah: "And they said: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days," meaning the days in which we worshipped the calf. And Ikrimah said: The Jews argued with the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, and they said: We will not enter Hell except for forty nights, and another people will succeed us in it, meaning Muhammad, may God bless him and grant him peace, and his companions, may God be pleased with them, so the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said with his hand on their heads: Rather, you will abide eternally, and no one will succeed you in it. So God Almighty revealed: "And they said: The Fire will not touch us except for a few days," and he said: Al-Hafiz Abu Bakr bin Mardawayh, may God have mercy on him: Abd al-Rahman bin Ja'far told us, Muhammad bin Muhammad bin Sakhr told us, Abu Abd al-Rahman al-Muqri told us, Laith bin Sa'd told us, Sa'id bin Abi Sa'id told me, on the authority of Abu Hurayrah, who said: When Khaybar was conquered, a poisoned sheep was presented to the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, as a gift. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said: Gather for me whoever is here from the Jews. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: Who is your father? They said: So-and-so. He said: You have lied, your father is so-and-so. They said: You have spoken the truth and have done your duty. Then he said to them: Will you tell the truth about something if I ask you about it? They said: Yes, O Abu al-Qasim, and if we lie to you, you will know our lie as you knew it about our father. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: Who are the people of Hell? They said: We will be in it for a short while, then you will replace us in it. The Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: Go away, by God, we will never replace you in it. Then the Messenger of God, may God bless him and grant him peace, said to them: Will you tell the truth about something if I ask you about it? They said: Yes, O Abu Al-Qasim. He said: Did you put poison in this sheep? They said: Yes. He said: What made you do that? They said: If you are a liar, we wanted to get rid of you, and if you are a prophet, it will not harm you. It was narrated by Imam Ahmad, Al-Bukhari and Al-Nasa'i from the hadith of Al-Layth bin Sa'd in a similar manner.

Fath al-Qadir

80- And they said meaning the Jews The Fire will not touch us the verse. There is disagreement about the reason for the revelation of the verse as will be explained. What is meant by His statement: "Say: Have you taken a covenant from God?" is to denounce them for their false claim that the Fire will not touch them except for a few days: meaning you did not have a covenant with God regarding this, nor did you advance righteous deeds that would confirm this claim so that it would be necessary to fulfill it and not break the covenant: meaning if you took a covenant from God, God will not break His covenant. Or do you say about God what you do not know? It was said in Al-Kashaf: Or is it equivalent in the sense of which of the two matters is true, because knowledge is established regarding the existence of one of them, and it is permissible for it to be discontinuous. This is a severe rebuke to them. Al-Razi said in his interpretation: The covenant in this case is like a promise, and He called His report a covenant because its report is more emphatic than the emphatic covenants.

Tafsir al-Baghawi

80. And they said meaning the Jews The Fire will not touch us [The Fire will not touch us] except for a few days a predetermined amount, then the torment will be removed from us and will be followed by bliss. They differed regarding this verse. Ibn Abbas and Mujahid said: The Jews used to say: This world is seven thousand years, and we are only tormented for one day for every thousand years, then the torment will stop after seven days. Qatada and Ata' said: They meant the forty days in which their fathers worshipped the calf. Al-Hasan and Al-Aliyah said: The Jews said: Our Lord has rebuked us for something, so He swore to torment us for forty days, and the Fire will not touch us except for forty days, as a fulfillment of the oath. So God Almighty said, in refutation of them: Say O

Surat al-Baqarah 2:80

And they say, The Fire will not touch us except for a few days. Say, Have you taken a covenant from God - God will never fail in His covenant - or are you saying about God what you do not know?

Muhammad, Have you taken a covenant with God an interrogative alif that entered into the alif of connection, with God "? He has confirmed that He will not punish you except for this period. God will not fail in His covenant and His promise. Ibn Masoud said: A covenant of monotheism, indicated by the Almighty's saying: Except for he who has taken a covenant with the Most Merciful 87-Maryam. Meaning: saying: There is no god but God. Or do you say about God that which you do not know? Then he said:

Tafsir al-Baidawi

80-"And they said, 'The Fire will not touch us.' Touch is the contact of something with the skin such that the senses are affected by it, and touching is like seeking it, and that is why it is said, 'I touch it but do not find it.' Except for a few days. Limited and few. It was narrated that some of them said, 'We will be punished for the number of days of worshipping the calf, forty days.' Some of them said, 'The duration of this world is seven thousand years, and we will only be punished for every thousand years with one day.' Say, 'Have you taken a covenant from God?' A report or a promise of what you claim. Ibn Kathir and Hafs read it with the dhal pronounced. The rest read it with its assimilation. God will not fail in His covenant. The answer to an implied condition, meaning: If you take a covenant from God, then God will not fail in His covenant. This is evidence that failure in His report is impossible.

Or do you say about God that which you do not know? Or is equivalent to the interrogative hamza, meaning which of the two matters is true, as a confirmation of the knowledge that one of them will occur, or is disconnected, meaning: Rather, do you say, as a confirmation and rebuke.
